Murder Does Its Homework

By CORNELL WOOLRICH

CHAPTER FIVE

How long she'd been asleep she could not tell, but it must have been well after midnight when something roused her. She didn't know exactly what it was at first; then as she sat up and put her feet to the floor, she identified it as a strong vibration coming from some place below. As though two heavy bodies were thrashing about in a struggle down there.

She quickly put something on and went out to listen in the hall. A chair went over with a vicious crack. A table jarred. She could hear an occasional worded grunt. But she was already on her way down by that time, all further thought of concealment thrown to the winds.

Mason and his son were locked in a grim, heaving struggle that floundered from one end of the kitchen to the other, dislodging everything in its path. Mrs. Mason was a paralyzed onlooker, holding a lighted lamp back beyond danger of upsetting, and ineffectually whimpering: "Don't! Don't! Ed! Let each other be now!"

"Hold the door open, quick, Ma! I've got him!" Mason gasped just as Miss Prince arrived on the scene.

The woman edged over sideways along the wall and flung the door back. Mason catapulted his adversary out into the night. Then he snatched up a chicken lying in a pool of blood over in a corner, sent that after him, streaking a line of red droplets across the floor. "Thief! drunkard!" he shouted, shaking a fist at the sprawling figure outside. "Now you come back when you sober up, and I'll let you in!" He slammed the door, shot the bolt home. "Clean up that mess, Ma," he ordered gruffly. "That's one thing I won't do, is a chicken-stealing drunkard in my house!" He strode past the open-mouthed teacher without seeming to see her, and stamped up the stairs.

"He's very strict about that," Mrs. Mason whispered. "Ed don't mean no harm, but he helps himself to things that don't belong to him when he gets likkered up." She sloshed water into a bucket, reached for a scrubbing brush, sank wearily to her knees, and began to scour ruddy circles of chicken blood on the floor. "I just got through doin' this floor with my eye after the last time," she mumbled.

Miss Prince found her voice at last. It was still a very small, shaky one. "Has—has this happened before?"

"Every so often," she admitted. "Last time he run off with the O'Briens' Ford, drove it all the way out here just like it belonged to him. Mr. Mason had to sneak it back where he took it from, at that hour of the night."

An odor of singeing felt suddenly assailed the teacher's nostrils. She looked, discovered a felt hat, evidently the unmanageable Ed's, fallen through the open scuttle-hole of the wood-burning stove onto the stillwarm ashes below. She drew it up and beat it against the back of a chair.

There was a slight rustle from the doorway and Johnny was standing there in his nightgown, sleepily rubbing one eye. "I had another of those dreams, Ma," he complained. "I dreamed the whole house was shaking and—"

"You go back to bed, hear?" his mother said sharply. "And don't go writin' no more compositions about it in school, neither!" She fanned out her skirt, trying to screen the crimson vestiges on the floor from him. "Another of them wood-yarmins got into the house, and your Pa and your Uncle Ed had to kill it, that's all!"

Miss Prince turned and slunk up the stairs, with a peculiar feeling, the feeling of one who has made a complete fool of herself. She slammed the door of her room behind her with—for her—unusual asperity. She went over to the window and stood looking out. Far down the highway she could make out the dwindling figure of Ed Mason in the moonlight, steering a lurching, drunken course back toward town.

"Appearances!" she said bitterly. "Appearances!" she said bitterly. She always seemed to meet Kendall just when she didn't want to. He appeared at her elbow next morning just as she alighted from the bus in town. "How're things going? Get onto anything yet?" She made a move to brush by him without answering.

"I haven't received anything definite yet on any of those inquiries I sent out," he went on. "You won't, either. You can forget the whole thing! All right, laugh, you are entitled to it! You were right and I was wrong."

"You mean you don't think—" "I mean I practically saw the same thing the boy did, with my own eyes, last night and it was just a family row! I've made a fool out of myself and gone to a lot of trouble, for nothing."

"What're you going to do?" "I'm going to pack my things and leave."

"Don't take it too hard—" he tried to console her. She stalked off. At least, she had to admit to herself, he'd been decent enough not to say, "I told you so," and laugh right in her face.

Mrs. Mason was alone in the kitchen again when Miss Prince returned that afternoon to get her things together. There hadn't been time before school in the morning. The woman looked at her questioningly, but the teacher didn't say anything about her imminent departure. Time enough to announce it when she came down again.

In her room she picked up the dress she'd had on the afternoon before and started to fold it over. Something caught her eye. There was a stain, a blotch, that she hadn't noticed until now. She looked at it more closely, as though unable to account for it. Then she remembered sitting down on the stump for a moment, just before hearing the boys' cries of distress. "No more appearances!" she warned herself, and tossed the dress into the open bag.

She picked up the batch of school papers lying on the table to follow suit with them. There was that composition of Johnny's that had started all the trouble. She started to reread it. She was standing up at first. Before she had finished she was seated once more. She turned and looked over at the dress she had just put away. There she got up and took it out again.

There was a timid knock on the door and Mrs. Mason looked in at her. "I thought maybe you'd like me to help you get your things together," she faltered.

Miss Prince eyed her coolly. "I didn't say anything about leaving. What gave you that idea? I'm staying in town, at least, for a little while longer."

The woman's hand started out toward her, in a pained gesture of warning. She seemed about to say something. Then she quickly closed the door.

Miss Prince's main worry was to get down the venerable stairs without causing them to creak and betray her. The house lay steep in midnight silence. She knew that Mason and his son were inveterate snorers when asleep—she had heard them at other times, even downstairs when they dozed after meals. Tonight she could not hear them.

She didn't use the flashlight she had brought with her, for fear of attracting attention while still within the house. The real need for that would be later, out in the woods. The stairs accomplished without mishap, it was an easy matter to slip the bolt on the back door and leave without much noise. There was a full moon out, but whether it would be much help where she was going, she doubted.

She stole around to the back of the rickety tool-house and retrieved the long-poled pitchfork she had concealed there earlier in the evening. Its tines were bent, and with a little manipulation, it might serve as a sort of grappling hook if—if there was anything for it to hook onto. A button was all she needed, a rotting piece of suiting. Evidence. Until she had that, she couldn't go to Kendall, and she had to keep on working alone. Not after what she had admitted to him that morning.

She struck out across the silver-dappled fields. The trees closed around her finally, a maw of impenetrable blackness after the moonlight, and she brought her flashlight into play, following its wan direction fender in and out among the looming, ghostly trunks.

The bed of quicksand loomed whitely even in the dark. There was something sinister about it, like a vast evil eye lying there in wait. The coating of water refracted the shine of her light to her cast the beam downward. She discovered her teeth chattering and clamped them shut. She looked around for something to balance her light, finally nestled it in a bush so that the interlaced twigs supported it. She shifted a little farther along the bank and poised the pitchfork like someone about to spear fish.

She lunged out and downward with it. The soft feel of the trench-grooves sank into the mud. She was transferred repugnantly along the pole to her hands. That was all she had time to notice. She didn't even see it sink in.

A leathery hand was pressed to the lower half of her face, a thick anaconda-like arm twined about her waist from behind, and the light winked out. Her wrists were caught together as they flew up from the pitchfork-pole, and held helplessly.

"Got her, Ed?" a quiet voice said. "Got her," a second voice answered.

A death trap is sprung, exploding a frightened lad's dream into a nightmare in Monday's concluding episode, exclusively in The Daily Reflector.

Worry

It is worse than many a disease. It can make you old before your time. It can even kill you. And before it does, it can destroy all your happiness. We know all that . . . why then, do we worry? We worry because we have too many fears for our shallow supply of faith. A man or woman needs faith enough to brush aside his fears. God is ready to give you all the faith you need. But you'll never get it worrying all week . . . In Church next Sunday, you can renew and strengthen your faith. In so doing, you will be able to face life unafraid.

The Church for All . . . All for the Church

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of a character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should support the Church: (1) For the sake of his own soul. (2) For the sake of his community and nation. (3) Which needs his moral and material support. (4) To go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Weekend Gab Sessions Quickly Change To Cram Sessions

By MARTHA PIERCE Reflector Teen Writer How do you study for exams? For the Junius H. Rose students, separated by only two days from exams, there is little time left to find the answer. Tips on how to study have been given to the students by nearly all of the teachers. They seem to agree that a systematic review of all the subject matter that has been covered so far is the best method. "There is no easy way to study for exams," one teacher commented. The usual "gab" sessions that take place each weekend will be turned into "cram" sessions. Some students are working on the theory that two heads are better than one; or "What I don't understand, maybe you do." These exams will represent half-a-year's work, or for some students, half-a-year's play with his much at stake, a mental block from trying to cram too much into "old man brain" in too short a time could be disastrous. Who can study without food? Some J. H. R. students declare that for every ounce of "food for the brain" there must be an ounce of "food for the stomach" consumed. H'm Spirits Phantom fans were in high spirits last night as the team fought against the top-seated team in the conference. Following the lead of the cheerleaders, the crowd in the stands gave enthusiastic support to the players throughout the game. The Phantoms seem to be breaking all predictions. Again last night they were rated six points under the Jacksonville Cardinals, but they led by about 16 points for most of the game, and ended by winning. During the half-time the junior varsity cheerleaders carried a sheet around to collect money for the March of Dimes. Saw Big Show Carolyn Craft, Hazel Corey and Darlene Phillips journeyed to Raleigh the night of January 9 to the Rock and Roll show at the Memorial Auditorium. Although these girls were very sleepy the next day, they had a wonderful time seeing some of the top recording stars in the country. They were accompanied by Carolyn's uncle and aunt. Testing Several students went to New Bern and Wilson last Saturday to take the College Board Entrance Examinations. Mickey Averette, Bob Blibro, Don Wilkerson, and Dick Evans took the test in New Bern. Sandra Phillips went to Wilson for testing. Coming Event On January 31 the annual Monogram-Faculty basketball game will be played in the high school gym. The game will begin at 9 a.m. Proceeds from the game will be used to buy coats for senior Monogram members. Drive To Continue The annual drive for the March of Dimes in the high school will begin after exams next Thursday. The Future Nurses Club campaigned for the March of Dimes last Saturday from 9:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. Anne Parkinson collected the most money of all the girls in the club. She turned in $23.

Ushers were Melvin Norris, brother of the bride, and Ford Lawson, brother of the bridegroom. A program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Anna Montgomery, organist, and Sidney Caraway, soloist. The couple entered the church together. The bride wore a dress of open blue lace with matching hat and shoes, white lace gloves and a single strand of pearls. She carried a white prayer book, topped with a purple orchid. For traveling, the bride wore a pink wool suit with brown accessories and the orchid lifted from her prayer book. After a wedding trip the couple will be at home in Indianapolis, Ind., where the bridegroom is currently employed. Cake Cutting A cake cutting was given by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Loran Norris and Mrs. Myrtle Norris Braxton at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Norris on E. Fourth Street Monday night, January 13. Guests were greeted at the door by Herman Norris and Loran Norris. Artistic arrangements of red and pink roses were used in the living and dining rooms. On the dining table was an arrangement of pink carnations. After the couple cut the first slice, Mrs. Braxton served the three-tier wedding cake and Miss Ann Norris, niece of the bride, poured lime punch. Nuts, mints and cheese straws were also served. For the occasion, the bride-elect wore an ice blue crepe sheath with a corsage of white carnations.

Peale's Book Reviewed

Mrs. J. Brantley Speight reviewed the book "Stay Alive All of Your Life" by Norman Vincent Peale for the Sappho Book Club at its meeting Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Stanley Hathaway on Library Street. Mrs. Speight began by giving a brief account of the life of the author whose books have helped so many to live a more abundant life. "Every church Peale has served has grown from a small number to a large, strong, happy church of a magnificent fellowship," explained Mrs. Speight. "Stay Alive All of Your Life" is Peale's latest book. It tends to stimulate a power within oneself and encourages one to live a life of action," related Mrs. Speight. "The first thing the author asks one to do is to turn to God," she said, "and, second, believe in yourself, in people and in life itself with a sincere desire to serve God and mankind." It was pointed out to the group that many people are walking aimlessly around today only partly alive because they have never learned the art of living. To read this book and get benefits one must be searching for thought patterns and life patterns that will enrich their lives, they were told. On the arrival of the guests, the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Myra Hathaway, and Mrs. Dalton Valwright, served a desert course with coffee. Mrs. Aubrey Taylor, president presided over a brief business meeting after which the hostess introduced her-guest speaker. Guests for the afternoon were

Art Saved From Communists

By JANE EADS WASHINGTON—A rare and exciting collection of Korean art, being shown for the first time outside the Far East, will give Americans who see it a chance to get acquainted with a field with which they are mostly unfamiliar. The exhibition of masterpieces of Korean art from 200 B. C. to about 1900, now drawing enthusiastic throngs to the National Gallery of Art, was sent to this country as an "expression of gratitude to the American nation by the Korean people." After Jan. 12 the collection will be taken to other cities across the country and to the Honolulu Art Academy, after which it will be returned to Korea. It was organized with the cooperation of the State Department, the Rockefeller Foundation, and the American-Korea Foundation. Dr. Chwon Kim, director of the National Museum of Korea at Seoul, who accompanied the exhibit, says most of the 187 objects, including superb examples of the celebrated celadon (pale green) ceramic-ware, "came to light" only within the last 50 years. "So extensive has been the destruction of art in Korea's past," explains John Walker, director of the National Gallery, "that if it were not for excavations of the 20th Century, little would be known of her great artistic history and no such exhibition as the present one would be possible." "Even then," exclaims Dr. Kim, "almost all of our treasures were lost to the Communists. They even took most of the items we have here now to the north and almost succeeded to the last minute in making off with them." "They had been packing many items in boxes ready to be moved," he went on. "Some of our employees delayed the packing, delayed getting in trucks to move them, until the time when the Communists could stay no longer. With the help of Americans in Korea, we moved them through the dark back into our museum. Otherwise they'd still be in the hands of the Communists, or destroyed." Dr. Kim, who studied at the Universities of Munich and Ghent and was in this country in 1948 on a Rockefeller Foundation grant, says most Americans in Korea during the war saw only one side of his country—"poverty, desolation, long lines of refugees." "We are very happy that we can bring the cultural side to them here," he said. AW, SHUCKS! HOLLYWOOD — Two pretty models sold kisses from a booth at Hollywood Blvd. and Vine St. for one dollar per. Proceeds went to the March of Dimes. The kisses were made of chocolate. For a mixed grill main course use halved tomatoes and mushroom caps with fish steaks or filets; add mushrooms the last five minutes of broiling time.

There Is A 'Point Of No Return'

Will the United States ever reach the point-of-no-return in deficit spending for government operations? If that day should come, what will follow?

President Eisenhower and his economic advisers have concluded that a small amount of deficit spending during the coming fiscal year will be wiser for the nation than the levying of additional taxes to assure a balanced budget during fiscal 1959.

The reason for the anticipated deficit during the coming fiscal year, is the increase expenditures for missile and space vehicle development. The nation's defense budget has been appreciably increased to meet the threat of advancements by Russia during the past year. Something approaching a crash program is being designed to enable the United States to regain scientific superiority threatened by Russia's surprising accomplishments.

Government leaders are determined we shall not be second to any other nation in this or any other field of development. Their feeling is shared by the American people who are willing to foot any reasonable bills to achieve the goal.

As we move once more into the all-too-familiar era of deficit government spending, we should remember that this nation's strength, military and otherwise, has its base in our economic strength. The vigorous American economy has been the goose which has laid the golden eggs of advancement and accomplishment. Weakened appreciably, the weakness will be reflected in our military preparedness now or in the future.

America should keep in mind that Communism, for all its territorial gains in the past decade, has not increased its holdings by military conquest. It has held to that which it has by military strength, to be sure; but initial conquests of Russia have come not through armed might, but by taking advantage of the economic weakness of its neighbors.

In one country after another, Communism has gained its death hold in a time of economic chaos. It has economic conditions to gain control of that which it acquiring the military strength necessary for our unwanted.

There are emergencies such as the one now at hand in which spending appears the only answer to acquiring the military strength necessary for our national security. Yet, what will we have accomplished if we build a super military force only to find that by doing so we have spent ourselves into bankruptcy?

Our vigorous national economy so far has withstood the severe strain of government spending on a colossal scale. But will be able to stand up indefinitely under such a strain?

Trademarks In Today's Affairs

By ELMER ROESSNER

The public may be confused between "Air-Flite" snow skis and "Aqua Flite" water skis, but should be able to distinguish between "Roma" and "Romeo" ties.

That's a pair of distinctions by the United States Patent Office, cited by the United States Trademark Association in its review of 1957 trademark matters.

It found 17, 234 new trademarks were granted, compared with 20,759 in 1956. That doesn't reflect a drop in business; the Patent Office simply worked off a big backlog in 1956.

As usual, there were many conflicts, some settled by the courts and some by the Patent Office. One case involved Santa Claus, though not as a defendant. The plaintiff established an entertainment center for children. He called it "Santa's Workshop." Down the road operators of a game-animal display changed the name to "Santa's Friendly Animals" and later to "St. Nick's Animals," using a large Santa Claus figure. The courts held that this had diverted business from Santa's Workshop, and gave the plaintiff $35,000 in damages.

CONFUSION FOUND

The association reported that courts found confusion between the following marks: "4-Way" and "7-Way" cold remedies; "Dole" fruits, vegetables and juices, and "Dole" cherries and olives; "Safeway" supermarkets and a "Safeway" furniture store; "Beefeater" gin and a "Beefeater" restaurant; and "Fancy Free" ladies' underwear and "Fancy Free" ladies' outerwear.

The Patent Office found these marks, among others, confusing and refused to register one of each pair:

"Surf'n Sand" bathing suits, blouses, shirts, shorts and robes and "Surf and Shore" knitted sportswear; "Specktkleer" glasses cleanser and polisher and "Specto-Kleer" coating for polished surfaces; "Look" magazine and "Look" face cream, bar soap and liquid detergent; "Three M" tapes, adhesives, and compounds, and "MM" roadway joint sealing compound; "Wild Root" hair preparations and "Magic Root" preparations for treatment of hair, calluses and tired feet, and "Jubilee" fresh eggs and "Jubilee" cheese spread.

DIVERGENT VIEWS

The Patent Office held that "Red Panther" and "Black Panther," both for insecticides, would be confusing. On the other hand, the courts held that there was no confusion between "Black Leaf" and "Green Leaf," both used for fruit and vegetable sprays.

And rightly so. He, along with countless numbers of students with initiative, has been instrumental in the movement to obtain national social fraternities at the ECC campus.

"Royal Knight" men's clothing and "Royal Lancer" men's suits; "Princess Pat" perfume and cosmetics and "Love-Pat" pressed powder make-up; "Glow" hair dressing and "Glo-Ray" hair dressing; "Simlac" liquid milk food for infants and "Sanalac" milk products, and "Dolamin" over-the-counter analgesic and "Dolamin" prescription analgesic.

The courts also found no confusion between "Curvallure" brassieres and "A'Lure" brassieres; the "Pump Room" restaurant in Chicago and "Orsatti's Pump Room" restaurant in Philadelphia, or between "Healthmaster," "Dreammaster" and "Restmaster" used by one mattress manufacturer and "Sleepmaster" used by another.

In many cases, the question of whether there was confusion depended more on the lettering and artwork than on the design itself. Two different words in similar design and with similar artwork may look alike, whereas two close words, each in unique design, may not.

However, a layman may have difficulty in understanding the decision of a court that "Playgirl" and "Playgirl" were confusingly similar for magazines.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

POUNDER WITH ANXIETY We are not only living in the greatest age humanity has ever known; we are also living in one of the most bewildering ages.

Physically and scientifically we are advancing at a rate that almost defies measurement. Morally we are going backward with an acceleration that few people realize. Morals in many fields are better than they once were. We have a deeper appreciation of social responsibility than ever before. Business is, on the whole, more honest than in many previous generations if, for no other reason, than the fact there are restrictions and regulations which keep the business man's feet pretty consistently on the straight and narrow.

But look at drug addiction. Observe the mountain consumption of liquor. Ask the young people what goes on as the result of adjournment of those social customs which in past ages have done a pretty good job keeping the rank and file fairly decent. Ponder the mountain divorce rate. There is nothing spectacular about these circumstances. We have come to the place where we take them as part of our national life. But these things are doing us more injury than a devastating bomb attack.

With the nation and world going ahead physically and regressing morally a situation of appalling seriousness is created.

Case For Social Frats

Mike Katsias, President of the Delta Sigma Rho, a local fraternity on the campus of East Carolina College, is a firm believer in social fraternities.

And rightly so. He, along with countless numbers of students with initiative, has been instrumental in the movement to obtain national social fraternities at the ECC campus. Very possibly in the near future their efforts will be rewarded.

For years individual groups have expressed a desire to establish social fraternities at ECC. Their efforts were never rewarded for one reason or another. After years of growing, the college apparently has finally become of fraternal age. From all indications it appears that social clubs are being imported.

Katsias dropped in for a few minutes yesterday, in light of recent developments, to give me a few views on social fraternities. Our conversation left no doubt in my mind. The boys want national affiliation. "We are not going into this thing with our eyes closed," he related. "All of us know there are going to be obstacles to overcome and are going to do our best to cope with them, with the aid of those who have already proven their value to the movement."

He explained that much help has been received from professors on campus, outstanding local citizens and college officials. President John Messick, in a speech Thursday night went on record for social fraternities, stating they could well be a valuable asset to the college.

Katsias was quick to note that local social frats have been active since being organized at East Carolina. The projects he listed were all good and reflected the work of a group and not an individual. According to his visitor the various fraternal groups are planning to continue their vigorous efforts.

Efforts to disprove the idea of many who feel that social fraternities do nothing but drink and create headaches for college officials.

"We feel our fraternities will do much to bring out the better qualities of its members," Katsias said.

"I have seen the good and bad of close-knit organization and have weighed the two against each other. In my opinion the assets greatly outnumber the liabilities."

Katsias does not feel fraternities with national affiliation will destroy the friendly atmosphere that the campus enjoys at the present time.

Speaking about rivalry he stated, "There is no doubt in my mind that there will be a certain amount among the fraternities. I do not feel qualified to speak for the others, but I sincerely feel that the rivalry will be on a friendly basis."

The native Virginian, who calls East Carolina College home for nine months out of the year, feels that social fraternities are a necessary piece of furniture in his house. There are many boys who feel as strongly about this as he does.

They believe their way is the shortest route toward a more wholesome campus life.

Other Editors Saying --- Courts And New Rules

(Greensboro Daily News)

The Daily News can't get worked up over the new rules, including the black-robing of jurists, which have been adopted for Superior Courts over North Carolina.

After all these rules were formulated and promulgated by the judges themselves. So far as we have seen or heard, there's nothing absolutely mandatory about them. If the judges wish to wear robes, that's O.K. by us; if they do not, that's equally acceptable.

Whether wearing robes will increase the dignity of the court and win greater public respect is a matter of opinion; there must be general agreement that robes do not a court make, that knowledge of the law, judicial temperament and the tone of the courtroom revert to the individual judges and the manner in which they conduct themselves on the bench and mete out justice.

In all the emphasis upon judicial robes, other new rules have been largely overlooked. The test for them rests, however, in their application with reason and understanding. Talk, unnecessary noise and needless walking about the courtroom, especially around or about the bench, should not be tolerated. There will be times, however, when persons attending court may have to leave. What will happen if someone raises his hand, in schoolroom fashion, and asks to be excused? What about a reporter who has to get out with his story and meet a deadline?

It has been our observation that lawyers, moving around the railed-off front of the courtroom with great freedom, have been among the worst disturbers of courtroom peace. The public will be justifiably critical if it is held to strict accountability under the new non-leave and don't-move-about rules if lawyers, as part of the court, are allowed undue freedom. Here again the court itself has the responsibility to interpret and apply the rules.

One court, we note via the public prints, has advised lawyers that "business attire is appropriate. Sportswear is not." Clarification will be needed there. What constitutes sportswear? Certainly shorts and clothes which are loud enough, say in the California and Florida outdoor mode, to distract attention from the court and the serious business at hand, should be in the proscribed category. But conservative slacks and odd or sports coats, which are increasingly in vogue, should not be.

However good or bad the new rules are, we are confident that North Carolina's judicial system will survive them and continue to depend upon the quality of the judges themselves for respect and prestige in the public eye.

Gridder With One Leg

By ROBERT L. MOORE
DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Big, bruising Dick Mead merely chuckles when he hears of a football player missing a game because of a twisted ankle or a sore shoulder.

And Dick has a pretty good reason to laugh, too. He played guard the past season for Denver's South High School with an artificial leg. Mead, a 235-pound 6-foot-4 bundle of human dynamite, lost his right leg three years ago in a ski accident on snowbound Berthoud Pass.

Until the accident, Mead had never played football. "But coach kept talking to me about how big I was," Mead says. "I'd hurt so many guys just horsing around, I decided I'd just try football."

Mead reported to Coach Leon Diner during his junior year in 1954. However, the stump of Dick's leg caused him so much pain he couldn't continue and he became manager of South's football, basketball and baseball teams.

When the 1957 season arrived Mead was determined to play football. He saw action in 27 of South's 36 quarters, specializing in defense and holding the ball for extra point placements.

Mead's leg didn't bother him in the least. In fact, he said he "worried about hurting someone else more than I worried about getting my leg hurt."

Dick's greatest football thrills were "knocking down" an opposing would-be tackler, enabling teammate end Bill Foster to make a sensational punt return, and blocking an extra point attempt.

The punt incident came in South's 35-0 victory over Denver North. "I really hit that guy hard," Dick says. "He was coming down the sideline and ready to tackle Bill. I didn't try to block the tackler. I just ran through him."

The would-be tackler had to leave the game.

Mead's blocking of an extra point came in South's 14-12 triumph over Denver West.

Did opposing players and coaches take advantage of Mead's handicap? "No," Mead says. "Most rival players knew about it, too. I appeared with players from other Denver schools on a TV show at the start of the season, and they asked me about my leg during the show."

"On opposing coach said it wasn't so far around Mead, we didn't even try to run in his direction."

Coach Diner says Mead "is the strongest boy I've seen in 12 years of coaching. Dick did a good job on defense playing right on the opposing center's nose. Playing there, he didn't have to move around too much."

"He was a great inspiration to the rest of the squad. The boys didn't complain about little injuries when they thought about Mead's leg."

Mead "was out" one artificial leg high jumping, playing golf and skiing. He played all of his football with the "worn out" limb. Dick shot 36 holes of golf on a Sunday two days after he first started walking on his artificial leg.

A senior, Mead is president of the South High School Ski Club of 650 members. He plans to major in chemical engineering at the University of Denver through his father, Dr. Robert S. Mead, is director of scholarships.

He says he'll play no college football "because I want to concentrate on chemical engineering." Mead has another problem, though. He's trying to figure out a way to waterproof an artificial leg so that he can go water skiing.

Russia's Neighbors Worry Less

By CONSTANTINE BROWN

WASHINGTON — The fear of Russia's power is in inverse proportion to the proximity of its borders. Nations farthest from the Soviet Union are more afraid of the Red might than those actually within range of the Communist mass of men and weapons. This may be due to the fact that countries near the Soviet and Chinese borders enjoy less of the economic blessings of the West and its comforts of life. They have only one thing that is really precious to them and worth fighting and dying for — their freedom.

The nations farther away, restive under the threat of intercontinental and intermediate range ballistic missiles, fear for their beautiful monuments and their comforts and are lulling themselves to believe that the freedom for which they have fought so bravely over the centuries can coexist with communism.

The Soviet's threatening note to Turkey, for instance, warning her that the establishment of missile bases on her territory would open her to instant retaliation, was answered with a politely scornful message from Ankara which said in effect: "Mind your own business." But the more veiled threats sent in the Bulgarian letters to leaders in the Western alliance caused the right reaction, from the Kremlin's viewpoint.

At the December NATO conference and since, the question of solid defense planning was shoved into the background in favor of a situation most of our allies in Europe considered more momentous: the immediate preparations for a summit meeting with the Russians and whoever else they want to shake hands with some time next summer.

Our pleas to provide the Western part of NATO with the latest military devices to be available by the end of this year have received the usual polite brushoff. "We accept your offers in principle," we were told, "but let's put first things first." And in the eyes of these allies the first thing is the acceptance of that miracle-producing pink pill good for the cure of all world ailments — a summit conference with the Russians, as a first step toward coexistence, Moscow style.

Our diplomats know that the frame of mind of most of the West is such these days that they will grasp Russia's and China's hands without looking for what may be concealed in them. The feeling of our allies across the Atlantic is that if America has the temerity to fight for the principles of the free world arms in hand, they will "sit this one out" and reap all possible benefits from the struggle between giants.

Western Europe, which was somewhat concerned over America's attitude at the Paris conference last month, now feels reassured. We have swallowed with sufficient good grace the summit conference bait given us at the Palais de Chaillot and we have digested it. Now, while we still insist on "preliminaries" before jumping into the appeasement lake, they have no doubt that we will take the plunge in their company.

Our allies in the Far East are alarmed at the prospects of summit talks, which necessarily would involve settlements in that area. But they happen to be what a vociferous intellectual minority in this country describes as jingoists. The free Chinese in Formosa, the Vietnamese and the South Koreans feel strongly that a summit conference will eventually spell their doom. They frequently are described as jingoists because they have stated repeatedly that they would rather die with arms in hand than submit to the Communist tyranny.

The administration is highly sympathetic to the stand of these people, who despite their trials and tribulations, despite the fact that they spend more than 50 per cent of their meager resources on the upkeep of their armed forces, and despite the fact that they are, far more than our European allies, in the first line of fire, insist that any settlement of world problems must be in keeping with the spirit and letter of the almost forgotten United Nations.

Our Far East friends are begging us for weapons — the same type of weapons we are trying to thrust into the hands of our European allies with so little success. To our admonitions not to provoke the enemy by word or deed, they say they are willing to take the consequences by themselves. Chang Kai-shek has been appealing to us to allow him to go over with the forces available to him now (more than half a million well-trained and equipped men.) We say no, because, we insist, it may trigger a war. The 7th Fleet continues to perform the mission ordered by President Truman in 1950 — to keep the Reds out of Formosa and the Nationalists out of their homeland.

The ROK armies are still provided with World War II weapons we rushed over from this country and Japan soon after the aggression from the north.

There is fear among some policy makers in the Pentagon and in the National Security Council that modernizing the equipment might encourage President Rhee to force the unity of Korea "prematurely and by unorthodox methods."

Three Games Taken From EC By Forfeit GHS Beats Cards

League Says ECC Used Ineligible Ballplayer

The biggest bombshell to hit the North State Conference in some years exploded here yesterday when East Carolina College was notified by the Conference commissioner that three of its games were taken away due to the appearance of an ineligible player in the Buc lineup.

The forfeited games—all three of which ECC won by large scores—were against Catawba 86-64, High Point 79-66, and Guilford 92-69. The loss of those games knocked East Carolina out of a first place tie with Lenoir Rhyne and changed the Pirates' conference record from 6-1 to 3-4.

On the basis of findings by High Point's Dr. H. C. Hinshaw, the Conference commissioner notified ECC officials yesterday by letter that the games were declared forfeited.

The announcement came on the eve of the ECC-Lenoir Rhyne basketball tilt at Hickory (tonight) which was expected to decide which of the two teams would grab the league title. Coach Howard Porter of the Bucs could not be notified for a statement.

Athletic Director N. M. Jorgensen of East Carolina stated this morning, however, that the ruling is definitely in effect as of yesterday. "Whether we do anything about it is questionable," he said.

"Right now, we're just pacing time." He said that nothing would be done, at any rate, until Coach Porter returns to Greenville and "some things can be cleared up."

East Carolina has the right to protest the decision. Craig Reid, a 5-9, 155-pound transfer from Rocky Mount—the player in question—has not been with the team since before Christmas. Jorgensen said today that "the boy apparently developed some kind of ailment and dropped off the squad a long time ago."

Reid played at Lenoir Junior College last year and averaged 17 points per game. His team won the junior college tournament. At ECC, however, he was a third-team reserve player and saw only late and limited action in three games that ECC had already won by huge margins. He failed to score in any of the three games.

Hinsaw's report to the conference stated that Reid failed to graduate from Lenoir before entering East Carolina last September. Dr. Jorgensen has been quoted as saying that an "awareness to some degree" that there was a question about Reid's status existed last fall.

Coach Porter had Reid obtain a letter indicating he had graduated from Junior College before he was permitted to play in the fall. Jorgensen said Reid was not aware of any scholastic deficiency, apparently, he added.

"I'm sure there was nothing deliberate," Jorgensen said.

Big Letdown

The dropping of the three games is a big letdown for the Pirates, who are ranked eighth in the nation in scoring and were good choices to take the loop championship this season. They are currently—last, before the recent ruling—riding the crest of a 9-1 overall season's record.

Tonight's game, tabbed earlier as the most important tilt of the year in the North State league, has been reduced to just another game for the Bucs—who are now completely out of the running for the title.

Earlier in the season, Lenoir

Dodgers Have Finally Found A Real Home

By CHARLES MAHER. LOS ANGELES (AP) — Well, they finally ran off the last reel of the biggest cliffhanger produced hereabouts since "The Perils of Pauline." The surprise ending shows Walter O'Malley scaling the precipitous walls of the Coliseum, followed by a lot of men in baseball suits.

The relieving finale to the often-muddled drama was made possible yesterday when the commission that runs the Coliseum decided, at last, to let the Los Angeles Dodgers play there in 1958 and 1959.

It was an ending that few could have visualized a week or so back. It looked then as though the Dodgers were doomed to confinement in Wrigley Field, which would have become the second smallest park in the major leagues.

Instead, it is just possible they will open next April 18 before the largest crowd ever to watch a baseball game. They have 101,000 seats to play with, and would beat the record if they could come within 16,000 or so of filling them. The record is 84,587 for an American League doubleheader in Cleveland Sept. 12, 1954.

Perhaps the man most responsible for the Coliseum deal is O'Malley. When he tried to leave the Coliseum offices he ran into a locked door.

"Here I've been trying to get in for months," he said, "and now I can't get out."

Formal negotiations started only a few days ago, but the compromise deal was actually months in the making.

Briefly, the deal provides that the Dodgers will guarantee to come up with $200,000 rent a year. All the money the Coliseum takes in from concessions will be credited to the Dodgers' rental account and the Dodgers will keep anything over $200,000.

For nine games only—the nine to be played after the opening series—the Dodgers will pay a flat 10 per cent rental fee and will not share in concession profits. This was a compromise provision made for the Coliseum's football tenants—the University of Southern California, UCLA and the Los Angeles Rams. They have been paying a straight 10 per cent rent.

Most, however, is 1932 when I hit 58 home runs to fall two shy of equaling Babe Ruth's home run record for a single season. I remember that year very well, too. That's because I always felt I should have had more than 60 home runs. I know two of my home runs went down the drain because rain halted the games before they went five innings. And remember, they had a screen in right field in Sportsman's Park. St. Louis that year which wasn't there when the Babe hit his 60 in 1927. Someone checked the figures and discovered that I hit a dozen balls against that screen, which would have been home runs if it weren't there."

Foxx's 534 lifetime home runs rank second only to Ruth's total. Foxx said his biggest thrill came in the fifth game of the 1930 World Series against the St. Louis Cardinals. Playing with the Philadelphia Athletics then, Foxx struck out the first time he faced Burleigh Grimes, the Cardinals' spitball ace. "In the eighth inning, with score 0-0 and Mickey Cochrane on first, I leaned into a curve ball and drove it clear out of the park," Foxx said. "We won 2-0. Later, Grimes told me he had thrown only two curve balls all game, both to me."

"I threw just one curve too many," he said.

Foxx was 16 years old when he joined the Athletics in 1925. He said he received $2,000 his first year. In 1930, he signed a three-year contract for $50,000.

Foxx won the triple crown in 1933, winning the batting, home runs and runs batted in titles.

Two Conference Races In Balance

By ED WILKS. The Associated Press. A couple of conference races figures to get the kids off the street tonight in college basketball.

In the Southeastern, ambitious Tennessee, a newcomer to The Associated Press rankings this week, goes for broke against Kentucky, the No. 9 team nationally. Both are unbeaten in SEC play, with Kentucky 11-3 over-all and Tennessee, ranked 13th, 10-1.

In the Missouri Valley, where only St. Louis remains unbeaten, the Billikens put up or shut up against Cincinnati and Oscar Robertson at St. Louis. The Bulls, unranked, took the lead with a 71-70 victory over 10th-ranked Bradley Wednesday, and things should be even tougher against the Bearcats and Oscar, the nation's leading major college scorer.

Cincinnati is ranked fifth with an 11-2 record. Bradley plays Drake in another Mo-Valley game tonight.

Only three other members of the top 10 are in action, with top-ranked and unbeaten West Virginia taking it easy. Kansas State (No. 2) plays Oklahoma, and Kansas (No. 3) meets Missouri in a pair of Big Eight contests while North Carolina (No. 6) plays Clemson in an afternoon match in the Atlantic Coast Conference. North Carolina, the NCAA champ, has lost two straight.

The collegians, shelving play for the next two weeks because of classroom examinations, had only a light schedule last night.

Wyoming took the Skyline lead by defeating Utah State 71-70, while Brigham Young knocked off Colorado State U. 90-80.

Texas A&M's control ball defeated Southern Methodist 44-36 in the Southwest. Louisiana took a 69-63 SEC victory over Tulane.

Princeton took second place in the Ivy League with a 74-50 victory over Columbia. Penn defeated Cornell 77-60.

Georgetown (DC) upset LaSalle 64-62, and in the Pacific Coast Conference, UCLA and California moved into a second place tie as UCLA dumped Southern Cal to fourth with a 52-51 victory and California beat Stanford 60-45.

Idaho defeated Washington State 85-67.

Jimmy Foxx Starting Anew

By JOE REICHLER. NEW YORK (AP)—Jimmy Foxx, in his own words, "is beginning life anew" at the age of 30, but the Hall of Famer still carries cherished memories of his glorious past on the baseball diamond.

Brought here to appear on a nation-wide television show after it had been revealed he was broke and destitute despite his earnings of a million dollar baseball quarter, Foxx recalled some of his batting exploits when he was riding herd on the American League pitchers.

"I had some pretty good years in baseball," the former home run and batting king said. "But I think my best year was 1932, when I drove in 175 runs, hit 50 home runs and led the league with a .349 batting average."

"The year everyone remembers

Three games in the Pitt County basketball conference last night changed the standings drastically, pushing Ayden (a dark horse) into the lead in the boys bracket and stepping up Farmville and Stokes-Factolus in the girls division.

At present, Ayden paces the boys with a 7-2 record and Grimesland still ahead of the field in the girls division—has a 7-1 mark.

Last night's big games saw Farmville pave the way for Ayden by dumping Belvoir-Falkland, 50-48, in the boys game. It was an overtime victory. The Farmville girls also won theirs, 70-67.

Ayden, taking care of its own, grabbed a 57-41 boys victory from Grimesland. The Grimesland girls, of course, won theirs by a lopsided 57-28 score.

Stokes-Factolus girls held onto their high position by defeating Winterville, 67-52. The Winterville boys won their game, 50-32.

Johnson Isn't Impressed With Lopsided Victory

By BOB POWELL. SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Light heavyweight Harold Johnson appeared unimpressed with his one-sided victory over Bert Whitehurst of Baltimore here last night.

The smooth-swinging ring veteran of 11 years was a unanimous victory, despite giving away 20 pounds. Whitehurst weighed in at 196.

"He's a tough man to fight," the Philadelphian said in his dressing room. "It wasn't his weight that bothered me, but his style."

Whitehurst fought from a crouch. Johnson indicated he would like to meet Syracuse's newest heavyweight find, Mike DeJohn, but the latter declined comment.

Judge Harold McGrath scored it 7-1 in favor of Johnson and Judge Richard Albino called it 7-2-1 for Johnson. Referee Joe Palmer saw it 6-3-1 and The Associated Press gave it to Johnson on a 5-3-2 decision.

A crowd of 1,007 paid $1,832 to see the rematch. Johnson had defeated Whitehurst on a split decision two years ago.

It was the victor's 57th triumph in 65 fights and Whitehurst's 12th setback against 24 victories and two draws.

G-Men Take Easy 65-51 Victory Over Visitors

Greenville high school's varsity basketballers turned in their finest performance of the season here last night, routing the previously-first place Jacksonville Cardinals and taking over first place in the Northeastern Conference.

The win was the third in a row for the G-Men, against only one loss. It knocked the Cards off the top of the loop, giving them a 2-2 mark, and gives Greenville a tie with New Bern for that key position.

Coach Bo Farley's Phantoms, rated six-point underdogs to the visiting Cardinals, opened the game in a frenzy and chucked up a quick 8-2 lead and pushed it to 16-9 by the end of the first period. Dick Evans and John Wesley Hudson, who were Greenville's high scorers with 16 each, paced the Phantoms in that first period, along with Walker Allen and Steve Noble.

In the second period, the G-Men pulled even further ahead, posting a lead of 33-13 at one point. Greenville, shooting with surprising accuracy and working their plays smoothly, had little trouble with the shorter Jacksonville club. Francis Nunn, Noble, Mack Roebuck, and Albert Crawford did the biggest share of rebounding and kept the Cards in a hole throughout the half.

As the buzzer ended the first half of play, Greenville had a 35-15 lead and the game appeared to be heading toward a real rout.

Cards Improve

In the third quarter, the Cardinals came back with a more balanced attack, racking up 22 points, while Greenville managed to sink only 16. Led by Rico Cohen, a rotund little guard, and Norwood Crawford, the visitors hacked away at the Green lead, cutting it to 14 points.

With a completely new unit on the court, the Phantoms began to have trouble holding on to the ball and their scoring was not as effective. During this time, Farley had a unit composed of Don Wilkerson, Mack Roebuck, Albert Crawford, Bob Bilbro, and Bobby Edwards on the court. He also used Billy Cox and various members of the starting five at will.

In the final period, both clubs scored 14 points. The Phantoms managed to hit a brief scoring streak, good enough to assure them of a clean victory. Actually, the Cards never threatened.

In that final period, Hudson and Allen did most of the Phant scoring and Cohen was still the big man for the Cards. He threw in 10 of Jacksonville's 14 in that quarter and was high for the game with 19 points.

When it was over, the Phants had a 65-51 win and a hold on the league's top position.

Other Games

Other games around the league found New Bern downing Kinston, 66-60, to grab the other half of the top position, along with Greenville; Roanoke Rapids held onto a second-place tie with the Cards by dumping Elizabeth City, 60-46.

Washington had an open date and still remains 2-2 in conference. They are in third place.

Greenville's scheduled tilt with Kinston there, Tuesday, has been postponed to February 21, due to heavy exam schedules at Kinston this week. Greenville's next game will pit them against New Bern, January 24, at New Bern.

Exchange Club Honors Newell

The Greenville Exchange Club at its weekly supper meeting last night awarded a diamond "past secretary's pin" to Secretary J. R. (Chick) Newell for his five years of faithful service. President Fred Forbes presided.

Dr. Walter Pott, who has enrolled more new members in the club than any other member, made the award. Past Presidents of the Exchange Club, R. S. Moyer, Jake Hadley, Ed Parkinson, Jack Wallace and Howard Moyer, praised Newell's faithful service.

Membership Committee Chairman Sweeney Moyer and Bob Lee and Hoyt Narron reported on the committee's activities.

President Forbes appointed Tommy Morris and John Hassell to serve on the Chamber of Commerce Newcomers Party Committee.

Exchangeite John Behr, an active scout and program chairman, spoke briefly and showed a film depicting the activities of the Explorers. He announced that a Boy Scout Camporee will be held in Greenville next May and 3,000 or more Boy Scouts are expected to attend.

The club's Board of Control met briefly after the regular meeting and made additional plans for the National Crime Prevention Week, which the Exchange Club will sponsor next April.

Blackburn said statistics show the national population growth by 1970 will be 26 per cent.

"Whether Greenville will be low or above this national increase in population will be determined by the activities of your chamber of commerce, your civic organizations and the ability of Greenville to attract industry to the area you serve," he said.

"Population growth in the community means more houses and expanding population means new real estate developments, more commerce, and with the favorable tax situation and labor available which is comparatively good, there should be much to attract industry to your community."

Blackburn said it is now estimated that 1.6 million new homes per year throughout the United States will be inadequate.

Rural population is moving to urban centers creating a housing problem and the destruction of homes by highway problems and demolition of obsolete homes for more modern houses with more electrical appliances will add further to the demand on the electric utilities.

"It is further estimated that the KWH per gainfully employed person in industry in 1970 will increase by approximately two times the amount consumed in 1956," he said.

"In other words, the KWH consumption for machinery and other electrical devices will average nearly 18 KWH per man hour in 1970 compared to nine KWH in 1957.

Are the forecasts dependable? Blackburn said that reviews of forecasts for the past five or six years have shown them to be more on the low side than the high side.

"Greenville is no longer dependent upon installed generating capacity to take care of its growth, with your interconnection with the power companies and their responsibility to supply you with the capacity that you need whenever you need it at no additional capital outlay so far as you are concerned, or an amount that would be negligible as compared to the benefits derived from the growth."

Argue 'Low Bid' Based On Speed, Not Costs

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP)—If your bid for building a school cafeteria is bigger than your competitors', but you contract to do it in much less time than they, then you are the low bidder, says the Davidson County Board of Education.

The board is defendant in a legal action, argued here yesterday, brought by the Anderson Construction Co. of Dunn and Mrs. Edith M. Plummer, a taxpayer.

The complainants said the board was wrong in awarding cafeteria construction contracts to Wilson Construction Co. of Statesville, which bid $370,000 for work at West Davidson High School and $29,000 for work at Pilot School. The school board acknowledged that Anderson bid $369,400 for the West Davidson project and $28,400 for Pilot. But, said the board, Wilson's time limit was 210 days at West Davidson, Anderson's 270; and Wilson promised to do the Pilot job in 90 days compared with Anderson's 200. This, argued the board, made Wilson low bidder.

Judge L. Richardson Preyer of Superior Court promised a ruling by Jan. 27.

Wilson has completed about 40 per cent of the work at Pilot and about 20 per cent of the West Davidson project.

Avoided Train, Ran School Bus In Ditch

PERRY, Ark. (AP)—The driver of a school bus loaded with 35 boy and girl basketball players made an agonizing split-second choice at a rail crossing here last night and sent his vehicle hurtling down a 16-foot embankment rather than hit a speeding train.

Miraculously, only five youngsters and a coach were injured—none seriously.

Driver Charlie Upton told officers his lights picked out the shapes of freight cars moving across the highway while his vehicle was still some distance from the road-rail crossing.

He tried to slow down and stop but his brakes failed.

Then he swung the wheel and the bus plunged off the highway and down the embankment. The vehicle struck the stanchions of a railroad trestle but did not overturn.

As terrified girls screamed around him, Upton got the door open and the students poured out. All of the injured were able to leave the bus without aid.

Upton was badly shaken but unhurt, Sheriff Lloyd Rankin said.

The boys and girls, members of basketball teams at the high school in Guy, Ark., were on their way home after playing against high school teams at nearby Perryville.

Ambulances took the injured students and coach Coy Glover Jr., 26, to a hospital in Morrilton, Ark., a few miles from the wreck scene.

Glover was hospitalized along with Rhoda Thorne, 15; Linda Hartwick, 15; and Carolyn Hall, 17; Aulton Mode, 17; Seth 14. Attendees said all had suffered concussions except the 11-year-old girl, who sustained a mild concussion.

The road-rail crossing is near the junction of state highways 9 and 10 at Perry.

A dispatcher for Rock Island Lines at Little Rock said the train involved was a local freight on a run between Little Rock and Booneville, Ark.

The accident occurred about 11 p.m.

Kiwanian Claude Ward had a birthday and donated a dime for each year of his age to a club fund. Guests of the club included Superior Court Judge W. J. (Dick) Bundy and a past president of the Kiwanis Club and Mayor Eugene West.

President McGlohon announced that Past Lt.-Gov. John T. Barnhill is the new president of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

City's Building Boom Rolled Merrily Along

OLD REFLECTOR BUILDING MAKES WAY FOR NEW MAIN ST. STORE. . . old two-story structure converted to modern building.

City Is Seeing Growth

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Crop cuts came and economic conditions across the nation worsened during 1957 but the building boom, locally at least, rolled merrily along.

New construction for which permits were issued within the city limits set a new record during 1957, according to the annual report issued by Building Inspector J. W. Wilson.

Total new construction for the year came to $3,565,099, Wilson reported. That proved to be far ahead of the previous high year, 1955 when totals for the year reached $2,720,000.

The 1957 figure included a whopping $1,364,717 structure in the new 500-man dormitory which is now under construction on the new portion of the East Carolina College campus.

There were a goodly number of new homes on which construction was begun during 1957, although the number was not a record breaker.

Permits were issued for construction of 140 dwellings during the year, 14 of which are apartments.

Commercial and other buildings also held up well in 1957 with 32 such structures authorized by the building inspector. Included were two churches, a recreation building and the men's dormitory at the college.

Record Year 1950

The record year for new homes was 1950 when permits were issued for construction of 229 dwellings. Highest year for commercial and other structures was 1947 when 44 such buildings were authorized.

Since 1946 there have been 1,489 new dwellings authorized by city building inspectors and there have been 316 authorizations for commercial and other structures.

Actually the official figures do not tell the full story concerning construction in the greater Greenville area.

Many houses were built in areas that were later annexed as a part of the city. They were not counted in the official totals because permits were not required for their construction.

In addition many other houses were constructed in areas such as Lakewood Pines which are still beyond the city limits.

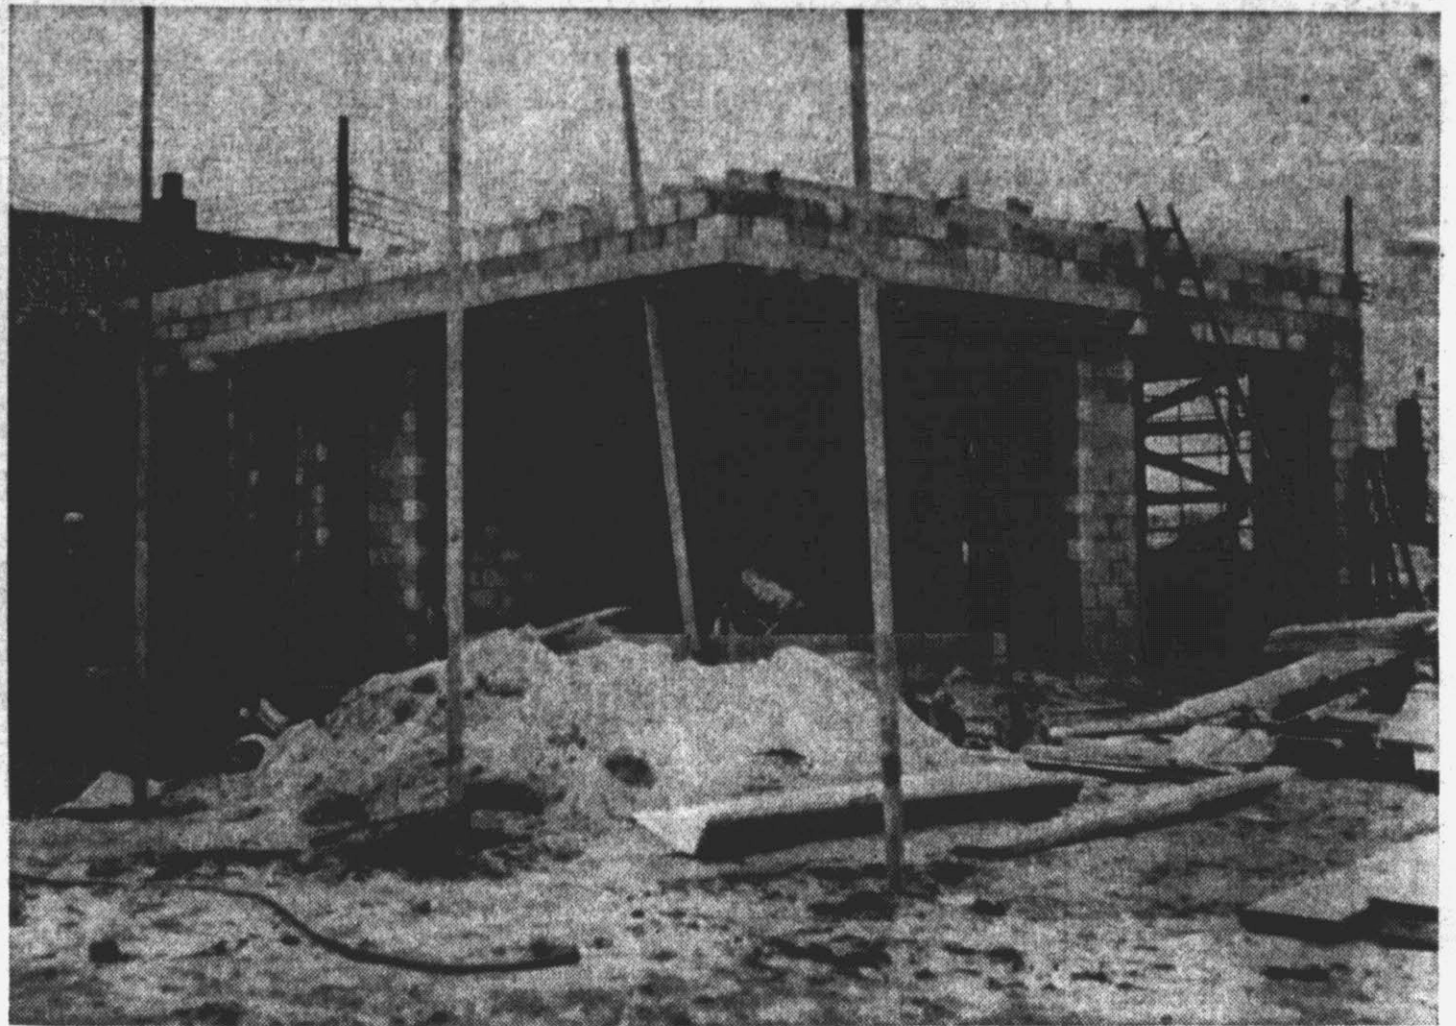

The same is true of commercial buildings. One entire commercial area, Colonial Heights Shopping center, was built beyond the city limits and thus permits were not required.

Buildings constructed at the college, public school buildings and other public buildings were not included in the totals until 1957.

There is other construction which does not show up in the official new construction figures each year. That is alterations. At times renovations are more costly than the construction of many of the new buildings which show up in the building report.

One such job is nearing completion at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church where the sanctuary has been more than doubled at a cost in excess of $200,000.

Sight Is Returned To Medicine Man

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A white medicine man has given a Navajo medicine man sight again. Friday the eye surgeon, Dr. Arthur Gray, flew Hasteen Bikini back to his beloved Monument Valley in southeast Utah.

"I will like flying if we go swift as the eagle," Bikini said of his first plane ride. The Navajo with bandana-covered braided hair says he is 87.

Dr. Gray encountered the blind medicine man last September when the surgeon landed his four-place plane on a tiny airstrip in Monument Valley to visit an old class mate from the College of Medical Evangelists in Los Angeles.

The classmate was supervising a Seventh-Day medical mission. A nurse told the surgeon about Bikini, who had helped to build the mission.

Dr. Gray recalled last night: "I went to see him with an interpreter and he told me: 'I am still strong. I have good hands and legs. But I must use a granddaughter for my eyes. If you give me eyes I can work.'" told the Lions Club about Bikini. The club brought the blind man here by train and financed his hospitalization. Left behind were his wife, seven children and 13 grandchildren.

Back in Inglewood, Dr. Gray

Two weeks ago the surgeon removed one of Bikini's eyes and took a cataract from the other.

Dr. Gray told a reporter: "He should be able to conduct his medicine man duties."

And what are they? Through an interpreter, Bikini explained he believes in both the Christian religion and the tribal religion in which God's creations, like sun, moon and stars, are worshipped.

He treats sick Indians with herbs and incantations. Sometimes he calls the mission supervisor for white man's medicine. Bikini commented: "White man medicine better than Indian medicine. But white man food not so good."

Deadlier Naval Torpedo Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy disclosed today it is working on a deadlier replacement for one of two torpedoes described only this week as the "new and latest" among its antisubmarine weapons.

Confronted by reports of growing Russian undersea might, the Navy has been pushing development of a new family of antisubmarine devices featuring better guidance, speed and range.

The naval ordnance plant at Forest Park, Ill., is taking the lead in this work, particularly in developing a replacement for the Mark 32 acoustichoming torpedo which has the capability of being released from a surface vessel without complex and bulky launching gear.

The Navy said a sufficient number of Mark 32s have been produced for training and combat use and it is no longer in production.

Details of the Mark 32 were reported Wednesday in the same Navy release that described another weapon, the Mark 43 torpedo, as "a submersible guided missile," capable of searching to great depths for enemy targets.

The Mark 43 torpedo, which can be launched from aircraft as well as surface vessels, is still in production. Both the Mark 32 and Mark 43 are already included in fleet armaments.

Language Found To Be Weapon For Propaganda

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the U.S. Information Agency reports the English language is so potent a weapon in the East-West propaganda war that the Soviet Union is using it to peddle Marxist doctrine.

George V. Allen, USIA director, said that because of the great interest in other countries his agency is planning to increase its English language broadcasts and to expand its classes abroad in that tongue.

In a speech prepared for the Washington chapter of the American Society for Public Administration, Allen said he recently had an astonishing report that Soviet officials in the Middle East were finding interest in English so great that they themselves have begun to teach English to Egyptians and other Arabs.

"They interlard a good deal of Marxism along with the grammar, of course," he said.

Allen said some USIA posts have had the novel experience of being approached through third parties with requests for help in setting up English language programs which the Soviet Union is sponsoring.

He said a truckload of USIA books was hijacked with considerable evidence later that the books were being used in one of these programs.

which he did not identify. Allen in the Middle East country said English teachers made known their need for new reading material.

"Immediately came an offer from Moscow of a shipment of simplified versions of Lenin's works in English," Allen said. "The offer was rejected."

He said the local USIA post was able to fill the need and although not as a gift, the price was made as low as possible.

Mr. Elliott is one of the most outstanding laymen of the Christian Churches in North Carolina, has been for several years the chairman of the North Carolina Christian Missionary Society, a Christian lawyer and judge and for several years has been the Mayor of Kinston. He will have a message that every layman ought to hear.

At the service Sunday morning the choir will sing Dett's arrangement of the old Negro spiritual, "Steal Away," and the pastor will preach on the theme "How Christian Is Our Culture?" The Sunday school begins at 9:45 and the youth meetings are held in the evening at five and six o'clock.

DICK TRACY

THE DRIVER APPARENTLY LOST CONTROL AND SMASHED INTO THAT LIGHT POLE. HE NEVER KNEW WHAT HIT HIM.

DEBRIS AND STUFF ALL OVER! WHAT A MESS.

WHO WAS HE, JIM?

DON'T KNOW YET. I'M WAITING FOR A LICENSE CHECK NOW.

BETTER CALL FOR A TRUCK TO PICK UP THIS DEBRIS.

HE MUST HAVE BEEN MOVING! NEVER SAW STUFF FLY SO FAR FROM A CAR WRECK—BUT WE'VE GOT IT ALL.

DID YOU SAY "ALL" OFFICER?? NOT SO! A SQUARE CARDBOARD CONTAINER HANGS IN THE LIMBS OF THAT ADJOINING HEDGE, AND SO FAR HAS GONE UNNOTICED—

—IT JUST HANGS THERE.

AND MINUTES LATER AT HEADQUARTERS—

HEY, TRACY, REMEMBER NITRO SHORTY? HE WAS JUST KILLED IN A CAR CRASH!

NITRO SHORTY?

YES, WASN'T NITRO A SUSPECT IN THAT FAMOUS MILLION-DOLLAR STEAMSHIP LINE ROBBERY A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO?

YOU'RE RIGHT, SAM, AND SO WAS THIS BIRD JUNIOR SKETCHED.

THAT MILLION BUCKS WAS NEVER RECOVERED. DOESN'T THIS BEGIN TO SHAPE INTO SOME KIND OF A PICTURE?

JEEPERS—CREEPERS! I BELIEVE IT DOES, LIZZ!

CERTAINLY.

AND IN PANTSY'S APARTMENT.

DIG IMMEDIATELY NORTH OF THE BOULDER. THE MONEY IS BURIED SIX FEET DOWN IN A REDWOOD BOX.

SHUT IT OFF!

ONE RECORD IS NO GOOD, I TELL YOU, WITHOUT THE OTHER TWO.

IT'S POSSIBLE SOME PERSONS MIGHT FALL INTO POSSESSION OF THE OTHER TWO RECORDS AND NOT EVEN KNOW WHAT THEY HAD.

YES, PANTSY, WE'VE GOT TO FIND THOSE OTHER TWO!

BIG BEN BOLT

AUNT MARTHA DIDN'T TELL ME WHAT WAS UPSETTING HER—BUT SHE'S NOT THE TYPE TO GET EXCITED OVER TRIFLES!

LOOK, AUNT MARTHA—YOU WON'T TAKE KINDLY TO THIS, BUT—

IF YOU'RE GOING TO SUGGEST THE SERVANTS MIGHT BE GUILTY, I'VE THOUGHT OF THAT POSSIBILITY TOO. BUT I'M SURE THEY'RE QUITE INNOCENT!

AT FIRST I THOUGHT I HAD MISPLACED THE SILVER, BUT THEN, ONE AFTER ANOTHER, MY MOST VALUABLE PIECES DISAPPEARED!

AH—BEN, MY BOY—MIGHT I HAVE A WORD WITH YOU — IN PRIVATE?

OF COURSE, UNCLE THADDEUS!

NATURALLY, BEN, I TRUST THAT YOU WILL KEEP THIS OUR PRIVATE SECRET. YOU SEE, I AM WELL AWARE OF WHO IS TAKING THE FAMILY SILVER!

YOU ARE!! WHO, UNCLE THADDEUS?

I AM!

TO BE CONTINUED.

DO I HAVE TO WEAR A COSTUME TO THE PARTY, DEAR?

OH, ALL RIGHT. WHAT'S THE ADDRESS OF THE COSTUME SHOP?

I'LL GO GET ONE LATER.

SAY, CAPTAIN... IS THAT THE NEW UNIFORM YOU'RE WEARING?

YES, THIS IS THE FIELD UNIFORM. THEY HAVE OTHER STYLES FOR PARADES, PARTIES, ETC....

GEE, WHERE CAN I GET ONE?

ONLY ONE PLACE IN TOWN STOCKS THEM. THE ADDRESS IS ON MY DESK THERE.

THIS MUST BE THE PLACE. IT'S THE ADDRESS I GOT OFF HIS DESK.

COSTUMES

YES, SIR, WE HAVE A LARGE SELECTION FOR ALL OCCASIONS.

THIS WILL SURE BE A BIG IMPROVEMENT OVER THE DRAB OLD UNIFORMS WE USED TO WEAR!

BUT, SIR... YOU SAID... HE SAID... ON SECOND THOUGHT, KEEP IT ON... IT'S VERY APPROPRIATE.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Two publications which we think every responsible citizen ought to take a look at have just come off the press. "An Epitaph for Dixie" is a short book by Harry S. Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette, out of Little Rock, Ark. It is a courageous and candid appraisal of the problems now facing the South — including segregation — and it is, according to N. Y. Times reviewer Hodding Carter, a masterpiece of the nature of the change that now is taking place in our region. Here is an expression of hope, quoted from Mr. Ashmore's book:

"I can only hope that . . . somehow we in the South can carry over traces of the old qualities of humor and grace that once distinguished most of us, proud or humble, black or white. If so, Dixie's epitaph can read simply: R.I.P."

The other piece we recommend is an article in the current — January — Atlantic, called "Race and the Schools," by Agnes E. Meyer, an admirably sensible and restrained account of the truth behind the desegregation movement, both in the North and South. The author has some very interesting, and sometimes startling things to say about what is happening in the public schools because of the race situation — for example, that in New York some extremists are more intent on having a diversity of races in the schools than they are in having schools at all. The main point she tries to make is that moderation — "deliberate speed" — not radical and sudden change, is the only sensible way to approach a problem that is going to be many, many years in the solving . . .

Early in 1861, Quincy Scott, eighteen, saw the confederate sympathizers in Denver forming to join the Confederate General Sterling Price in Missouri. The boy followed the column to its camp on Cherry Creek and signed the muster. As he said farewell to his sweetheart, Rhoda Bennett, she cried and hung around his neck a gold locket which bore her initials on one side and on the other a conventional heart.

That was the amulet whose talismanic properties are the crux of Hal Borland's story.

Some of Quincy's companions mocked the boy for wearing a girl's locket while the old mountain man, Jake Starling, respected it as his "medicine," whose strength was shown when it apparently saved Quincy from an attack by a rattlesnake. Its power was clearly proven when Quincy and three companions were scouting and thus were saved, when a Union force slaughtered the Rebel column. The four, with Quincy as Captain, because of the power of his "medicine," finally reached Missouri and joined up with General Price. They were, after much delay, thrown into the battle of Wilson's Creek. Only Quincy and old Starling came out alive and they immediately left for home.

This story of a seldom viewed side of the Civil War, showing as it does some incidents of the war in the west is recommended to anyone interested in adventure, young and old alike.

Finds Dedicated Doctors In Far Off Countries

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — "They're a dedicated people, a strange and wonderful breed of man. They'd never come home and work down at the corner. By comparison they make you yourself feel like a pretty shabby person."

A man named Lou Hazam was talking. The "strange and wonderful breed" he was discussing is American physicians — both missionaries and others — whom he met in obscure places on a fabulous round-the-world trip with a TV camera crew.

The television audience can meet some of these physicians and view their extraordinary work next Thursday night when March of Medicine presents "M.D. International" on NBC-TV.

With David Lowe, the producer-director of the program, and five technicians, Hazam visited Korea, Hong Kong, Burma, Nepal, Lebanon, Ethiopia and India on an 81-day, 34,000-mile expedition.

Hazam, a writer who lives in Silver Springs, Md., wrote and filmed in the Belgian Congo the excellent "Monganga" program for March of Medicine last year.

Believe that American doctors are our greatest unofficial ambassadors abroad," he says. "To hundreds of thousands of people in far parts of the world the word 'American' means only one thing: a little man working in a little hospital who saves lives and brings health to the sick."

Not all these ambassadors are men, of course. Hazam recalled a small hospital operated by the Maryknoll sisters in Pusan, Korea — "five or ten pristine little angels who run a clinic that is said to have the longest waiting line in the world." The gates of the clinic open at 8 a.m., but the line of patients begins to form about midnight.

'Snow Capital' Feels Slighted

HOUGHTON, Mich. (AP)—Houghton has had only a little more than five feet of snow this winter and long-time residents say that isn't right.

Normally Houghton, which sticks out into Lake Superior, reigns as the snow capital of the North. Normal snowfall to this date is 75 inches. Total so far is only 63 inches.

In the winter of 1950-51 Houghton recorded more than 23½ feet.

Claims 'Duped By The Devil'

NETTLEHAM, England (AP) — The nettled vicar of Nettleham reported today he has been duped by the devil.

The vicar, the Rev. George Herrington, is strongly opposed to gambling. He protested recently when a parishioner donated one pound—$2.80—to the church restoration fund, specifying that it must be used to buy a chance in a government bond lottery.

The vicar finally relented, feeling sure the number wouldn't come up anyway. But it did, and the church restoration fund is 50 pounds—$140—richer.

"I think the Devil must have been at work and confounded me," complained the vicar. "But naturally I'll take the money—we need it for repairs to our 13th century church."

STEEL FRAMING COMPLETED ON MAIN PRODUCTION BUILDING . . . At Multi-Million Dollar Flakeboard Plant at Farmville.

FARMVILLE — Construction of American Cyanamid Corporation's Flakeboard plant here has become a story of mud and the struggle against it.

The multi-million plant, originally slated to begin operations during the first quarter of 1958, is now scheduled to be fired-up on an experimental basis on May 1. Whether limited production will begin even on that date will depend largely on the weather.

Site of the plant, a 100-acre site adjacent to the southwest limits of the Town of Farmville, is a vast quagmire. Unusually heavy winter rains, which have come with a disheartening regularity for engineers on the project, have caused revision of plans and construction approaches "at least ten times."

stallation of sheet steel covering. The fourth building, one which houses three dryers, is ready for placement of structural steel.

Rosch and other engineers on the project figure that with the buildings covered they can complete the mammoth back-filling process which has delayed work thus far. The process, which is normally a matter of dumping dirt into the area framed by the foundation, has been complicated by fall and winter rains which have rendered dirt on the site unfit for use as back-fill and required contractors to go outside the plant for their material.

Accomplishments marked up thus far by construction crews, in addition to the work on the buildings, includes installation of the three dryers, one 100 feet by ten feet, a second 80 feet by nine feet, and a third 70 feet by eight feet. The largest dryer weighs more than 100,000 pounds and the three of them represent the biggest single items of equipment that will go into the plant.

pressure tests became of the soggy ground.

"Right now," Rosch says, "we feel that placement of siding and roofs on the four buildings in the production area is the key to our progress. We've been unable to successfully drain the flat terrain but we feel if we can put the foundation areas under a covering we'll be able to move ahead."

Original cost estimates for the project were in excess of $5,000,000 but they will run more than that because of delays, Rosch said. Robert H. Finmix Company of Gastonia holds the general construction contract for the project which was launched in September.

Outsize electrical work is also slated to be done next week and the superstructure of the boiler house will be covered as soon as weather permits the work. The boiler installation is 60 per cent completed, but insulating materials can't be placed in wet or damp weather.

A 40-foot high coal silo for the boiler house was completed last week and all water lines, which will supply water for the production units and fire protection, have been installed. Work with the water lines, and there are more than 5,000 feet of them, isn't complete yet, however, because construction personnel haven't been able to put them into full.
