JUDGE PARKER AND ROBE... New Sight In Pitt's Old Court Room.

Court Room Sees First Black Robe

Pitt County's old court room got a new look yesterday. Judge Joseph W. Parker, here for a two weeks term of Superior Court, wore his black robe as he presided over the court's business in the opening session. He is the first of the state's Superior Court judges to use a robe here. While it was an unusual sight in Pitt County, use of the robe is getting to be old stuff to Judge Parker. He completed a two weeks term of court in New Bern last week and wore the outfit while presiding there. "I was a little self-conscious the first day I had to use it, but the situation in New Bern helped me," he said. The term there was held in the Federal Court Room and federal judges have been wearing robes for many years. "The folks in Craven County are accustomed to judges in robes and their attitude helped me become accustomed to using it. I have no objections to it, although I anticipate having to get a lighter robe for use during the summer months, and I believe it is fulfilling the purpose for which it was put into use." The state's Superior Court judges, including Judge Parker, voted last fall to begin using black robes on January 1 in an effort to increase the dignity of Superior Court proceedings. Only one judge, Judge Susie Sharp of Reidsville, has expressed any objections to the idea thus far, but she has been wearing the robe in Superior Court sessions in Wayne County. Judge Parker's use of the robe affected only the appearance of the court room in yesterday's sessions. Procedures and other business details were the same, except for first use of some new court room rules for attorneys.

Found Dead In A Vacant House

James W. Parker, 65-year-old Negro man, missing from his step-son's home since Saturday morning, was found dead in a vacant house on W. Third St. early last night. Following investigation Pitt Coroner Griffin H. Rouse ruled the elderly man died from exposure. Parker apparently froze to death, he said. He was reportedly found around 7 p.m. by his step-son, Alexander Lovett, of 512 McKinley Ave. Lovett told police officers and Rouse that he had not seen his step-father since Saturday morning and decided to go looking for him when he did not come home Sunday morning or yesterday. Parker was discovered in the middle room of the house lying on his back. The coroner did not specify the time of death but did rule the man died from exposure. He said there was no evidence of foul play. No inquest will be held. Lovett said his step-father had been drinking rather heavily lately, Rouse said. Officers found a quantity of non-tax paid whiskey in a jar in the room where Parker was found. According to Lovett, Parker had rented the house and was planning to move into it soon.

Hold Pair For School Break-In

Two local Negroes were arrested last night by City Detectives in connection with the larceny of a sizable quantity of food from the Greenville Junior High School cafeteria over the weekend. Arrested were Cleveland Taft, 25, of 304 First St. and Walter R. Taft, 45, of 110 N. Evans St. Both were charged with breaking and entering and larceny and placed under a $500 bond each. Neither had posted bond this morning and they are in City Jail awaiting trial in City Court. Detectives reportedly found a quantity of food in both men's home answering the description of that stolen from the local school's cafeteria. According to earlier reports between 10 and 12 pounds of hamburger, five or six pounds of side meat, a sizable amount of butter, and three or four dozen eggs were taken. Entrance to the cafeteria was gained through a rear window, which was broken out, investigating officers said. No other damage was reported.

Emergency Air Force And Missile Funds Voted By Appropriation Committee

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House Appropriations Committee today voted an emergency $1,410,000,000 fund to speed missile programs and give more punch to the Air Force retaliatory power. This is 40 million more than President Eisenhower requested two weeks ago. The addition is all for the Army, to bolster its missile programs. A last-minute revision doubled the proposed increase by allotting 20 million for the Pershing project, aimed to develop a solid-fuel successor to the Army's 200-mile range Redstone. Of the total, 144 million is new cash and 150 million is authority to transfer funds already available. The 40 million dollar increase is in the transfer funds.

The House will consider the committee's action tomorrow and there are indications of a strong drive to boost this sum. The new $141 grif 56 The new money will be made available to the Defense Department immediately to finance space age weapons programs which are developing faster than anticipated. In a report written by Rep. Mahon (D-Tex.), chairman of a subcommittee that drafted the measure, the committee said "our military strength as of today, in the over-all, is superior to that of the U.S.S.R." although in the critical areas of space satellites and ballistic missiles generally behind Russia. In those vital areas, the committee added, "We cannot afford to be in second place."

The peace and a retaliatory weapon of great magnitude. Actually, it added, the Polaris becomes an intercontinental missile when used by submarines that can come within firing range of an enemy's shore. There are no new funds in the bill directly for the Army. Eisenhower asked for no Army money except $133,500,000, allotted to the Air Force, to reimburse the Army for work on the Jupiter missile. That transfer was approved and the committee directed the Army to use an additional 40 million through transfer of other funds to speed its LaCrosse, Little John, Pershing and Sergeant missiles. Eisenhower had not requested this transfer for acceleration of the army's so-called "second generation" missile program.

Order Top Kluxer To Surrender

LUMBERTON, N. C. (AP)—A South Carolina Ku Klux Klan leader was ordered to surrender today on a charge of inciting a riot between Klansmen and Indians. Sheriff Malcolm McLeod said that if the Rev. James Cole, 33, of Marion, S. C., did not meet the deadline, he would begin legal proceedings for his arrest in South Carolina. Cole describes himself as head of the Klan in both Carolinas. A Robeson County jury—composed of three Indians, two Negroes and 13 white men—indicted Cole and Klansman James Garland Martin of Reidsville, N.C. yesterday on charges of inciting riot. In addition, the grand jury cited others of the KKK "unknown to the state."

Today's superiority of the United States over Russia, the committee said, is due to the striking power of the Strategic Air Command, whose long-range bombers now are a deterrent to aggression but would not continue to be against an aggressor equipped with a substantial stockpile of operational missiles. The Air Force share of the new funds in the emergency bill is 910 million dollars, earmarked for dispersal of the fleet of nuclear-bomb planes, construction of new facilities to warn of approaching enemy planes, and development of the Atlas, Thor, and Jupiter ballistic missiles. The money will provide also for construction of intermediate-range ballistic missile platforms and facilities for an operational intercontinental ballistic missile squadron at Cooke Air Force Base in California, and for two overseas IRBM squadrons. The Navy is allotted 350 million dollars in new cash, of which 296 million is for construction of three atomic submarines capable of firing the Polaris ballistic missile. The committee described the missile-losing subs as a major deterrent to any nation that threatens

The committee approved the President's request that he be allowed to use 10 million dollars of available funds for the new Advanced Research Projects Agency. It also granted his request for permission to transfer an additional 100 million from other funds into the emergency defense fund for unforeseeable and promising research work. The committee said it expected some of the 100 million to be used to step up the Titan missile and the antimissile missile programs. The committee described the emergency measure as a bill to "buy time" and emphasized that none of the funds represent restoration of amounts previously denied by Congress. "Rapid development in recent years of modern weapons," it said, "has made this country and our friends and potential enemies much more vulnerable to sudden and destructive attack. We live in an age of ever increasing danger. The committee feels that decisions must be made promptly. The present requests are conservative in relation to the need in the critical areas to which the supplemental appropriation is directed."

State Bank Sees Its Biggest Year

Stockholders of State Bank and Trust Company were told at their 27th annual meeting this morning that operating net income of the bank for 1957 was the highest in the history of the bank. The annual meeting of the bank's stockholders was held at 10 o'clock this morning at the City Hall with B. E. Sugg, president. President J. T. Marston Jr. reported that gross earnings and expenses both rose during the year. A larger volume of loans together with higher interest rates on investments in U.S. government bonds brought about a material increase in gross income, he said. Gross income of the bank rose to an all-time high. Although expenses of the bank also rose, Marston said, as a result of increased salaries and higher operating costs including a substantial increase in interest paid savings depositors, operating income of the bank was at a record level. Net earnings for the year after income taxes were the highest in the bank's history, amounting to $45,969.11 ($45.97 per share) compared to $41,501.59 ($41.50 per share) reported for the year 1956. After establishing reserves, reported net income for 1957 increased to $35.44 per share from the $34.30 per share reported for 1956. Dividends of $16. per share were paid on the bank's 1,000 shares of capital stock, making a total of $224,000 paid in dividends since the bank's organization in 1931. Reflecting the past year's decrease in agricultural income, Marston said, deposits declined from the 1956 high of $6,225,000 to $5,996,000 at the end of 1957. "We are gratified by the substantial and continuing increase in the number of accounts served which leaves us with a sound foundation for further growth with any improvement in our economy," Marston told stockholders. "An improvement can and will be forthcoming through the energies and foresight of our people who have successfully overcome adversities before." Stockholders unanimously re-elected the bank's board of directors consisting of: A. R. Barrett, M. K. Blount, W. S. Bost, John T. Marston Jr., Reynolds May, Dr. K. B. Pace, B. E. Sugg, H. W. Wooten, J. B. Webb Jr. and W. W. Wooten. Immediately following the stockholders' meeting, the board of directors met and elected the following officers: John T. Marston Jr., president; M. K. Blount, vice president; John R. Hardy, vice president; V. M. Forrest, cashier; Margaret E. Purvis, assistant cashier; and William A. Ross Jr., assistant cashier.

Greensboro Bank Robbed

GREENSBORO (AP)—A bandit held up the Summit Ave. branch of the Bank of Greensboro today and escaped with an undetermined amount of cash. The armed man, alone, leveled a pistol and collected the money in a brown paper bag at 1 p.m. Bank employees described the man as white, about 45 years old, five feet nine inches with a scar on his face. They said he roared away in a green automobile in the direction of the Greensboro central business district. Police and Highway Patrolmen threw up roadblocks throughout the area. The robbed driving bank is in the Summit Shopping Center.

STATESVILLE, N. C. (AP)—Statesville citizens vote today on a bond issue that could mean a million-dollar improvement to water and sewage facilities here. At issue is a $750,000 bond issue. The federal government has offered to furnish $227,000 for the improvements if the bond issue passes. About three-fourths of the money would be used to expand and improve the sewage disposal plant, with $220,000 earmarked for new water facilities.

Pitt Farm Bureau Wants No Price Support Change

Pitt Farm Bureau members went on record last night as wanting tobacco support prices to remain at 90 per cent of parity. The action was taken at the annual meeting of the Farm Bureau held in the court house. Members attending also approved a motion instructing the Farm Bureau's resolutions committee to present a resolution at the State convention asking that the tobacco program remain as it now is. Both motions were passed unanimously by the approximately 100 Farm Bureau members present last night. Alonza Edwards, North Carolina Farm Bureau's new executive vice president, urged greater diversification of crops to offset the loss of income caused by tobacco cuts. "North Carolinians consumed $1,300,000,000 in food last year," Edwards told the group. "The farm income for the state was a little over $900,000,000. Edwards lashed out at the President's recently unveiled farm program for 1958. "You were expecting 90 percent support for tobacco," he told the Farm Bureau members. "We all felt the same until the message last Thursday by our esteemed president. He called for 60 to 80 percent cent support prices on commodities including tobacco. "We needn't fool ourselves. What goes on up there affects each and every one of us," Edwards declared. He noted that one of the statements by the president was that farm income was up in 1957. "Now you check your pocketbook and see if your income was up in 1957," he told the farmers. "Check every farmer in America and see if farm income was up in 1957." Some farmers made more during the year but cost were up also, he said. Edwards said the tobacco program has been realistic through the years. "We've cut some years when it hurt to cut," he said. "Stabilization Corporation has been worth millions and millions and millions of dollars to us in the last few years." However, stocks of tobacco have been accumulated. "Realistically we are in better condition today than we were a year ago," Edwards declared. "We are in better shape because of reduced stocks and we have a better variety of grades to bargain with."

However, the outlook on the domestic front is that less tobacco will be used per cigarette in years to come, Edwards indicated. The use of processed leaf and filters have cut into tobacco usage per cigarette. Even the flip top box reduces the size of cigarettes and cuts tobacco usage. The cigarettes which 100 pounds of tobacco made a few years ago can now be made with 75 pounds. "In a few years 68 pounds will make the same number of cigarettes," he declared. "We need to think of growing something besides tobacco," he continued. "We have good land, good soil and as good people as you'll find anywhere. You might say, 'Well, I can't produce anything else.' We farm people have got to the place where we don't want to use our hands too much. That's plain talk but it's true." Labor saving devices such as tractors have reduced the time the farmer has to work each day, he said. Finally Edwards urged the group to make use of its farm organization. "What has it done for you?" he asked. "It has put dollars and dollars and dollars in your pocket. More than you can ever pay back. "We're all on one boat, riding together. We have to work together or we'll sink individually." Edwards was introduced by Haywood Dail. Pitt Farm Bureau President George D. Cox, who presided over the meeting, introduced a number of guests including Randolph Eagles, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau. Eagles told the group that "walking in a Farm Bureau meeting here I always feel a little bit different because Farm Bureau was organized right here in this town." He paid tribute to J. E. Winslow as first president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau. "It always made me feel good that I could follow behind a man like Mr. Winslow," he declared. Cox appointed Alec Allen chairman of the Farm Bureau Resolutions Committee. Serving on the committee will be Alton Moore and Barrett Sumrell. The committee will draw up resolutions to be presented at the State Farm Bureau convention. Farm Bureau members unanimously approved the slate of new directors which was presented by Nominating Committee Chairman Barrett Sumrell. The new directors, who will serve two-year terms, are: Freddie McGibbon, Ayden; David Jones, Farmville; Leighton Blount, Jr., Bethel; Vernon Cox, Winterville; J. Elbert Mills, Grimesland; Provert Lassiter, Greenville; Julian Worthington, Winterville; Mrs. James Allen, Greenville; Atlas Wooten, Falkland. Also approved were the voting delegates to the State Convention. With delegates first and alternates second, they are: F. D. Turnage, Rural Dids, Fountain; Milton May, J. J. Worthington, Winterville; Mrs. Mildred Jones, LeRoy; Bethel; Charles Quinerly, Farmville; Leighton Blount, Jr., Clayton House, Bethel; Hubert Simmons, R. W. Tripp, Grimesland; Charles A. Forbes, William Francis Tyson, Stokes; Robert Little, Grover Manning, Grimesland; Mrs. Mattie Hardee, Alton Gardner, Swift Creek. C. T. Jackson, Brown Hodges, Grifton; Harry Jarvis, Darrell Jackson, Ayden; Ralph Tucker, Provert Lassiter, Greenville; Jarvis Allen, Mark Smith, Jr., Arthur; Lloyd Fornes, Jr., James Smith, Chico; Atlas Wooten, Ralph Stokes, Falkland; M. G. Lewis, Edgar Warren, Belvoir. Vacancy will be filled by J. Brantley Speight.

Nation's Security Claim Challenged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Top Senate Democrats challenged today President Eisenhower's contention that the nation's security has been "markedly strengthened" during his five years in office. The Democrats also struck back at the assertion by Sherman Adams, chief presidential assistant, that their party has been "politicking with national defense." Defense matters receiver, Adams and other administration officials addressed a series of Republican rallies throughout the nation last night. Eisenhower's speech in Chicago was part of a half-hour program carried by radio and television on a national network. Chairman Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee said Eisenhower told only part of the story in claiming that the nation's defenses have been bolstered under Republican rule. "Of course," Russell said, "we have got the B52 bomber and the B58 on its way during the period in which Eisenhower has been President. We have strengthened ourselves, but all defense is a relative matter. "In the last five years the Russians have made much faster gains than we have. We have definitely lost ground in relative strength in those five years and we must get on about the business of making it up." Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.), a member of the preparedness committee investigating the missile and satellite programs, said the Eisenhower administration has "fallen in its imperative responsibility" to keep the United States well ahead of Russia. "Comparatively speaking, we are considerably less secure than when Eisenhower took office," he said. In a separate interview, Sen. Mansfield of Montana, the assistant Democratic leader, agreed with Russell and Kefauver in saying the Democrats are trying to keep politics out of consideration of the defense program. Eisenhower said the objective of security and a just peace "is not a partisan or political matter." But in Minneapolis, Adams accused the Democrats of playing politics with national defense in an effort to unify a party he said was divided, and said they "ought to be called strictly to account by the American people for using this subject as party glue."

Blackburn Report Urges Promoting Electricity Use

(Last of a series on the Blackburn Report concerning Greenville Utilities operations.) By ALVIN TAYLOR, Reflector City Editor Greenville Utilities must learn to promote the use of electricity, Consulting Engineer L.A. Blackburn says. "Without exception, we believe that we are justified in saying that so far as any records are concerned publicly owned city utilities do not exert as much promotional effort as privately owned utilities," Blackburn said in his report to the commissioners. "We are sure that you will agree that the amount of money spent by the Greenville Utilities for the promotion of the use of electricity is at a minimum and your growth in kilowatt hour sales has been due not to your effort but primarily to the sale of electrical devices, by national advertising and by promotional work of local merchants. "We have many times advocated to the commission that they spend a certain amount of money each year promoting the use of electricity in home appliances." Blackburn said he was not advocating that the city go into the sale of appliances. "The merchants, on the other hand, will benefit in sales by any promotion that you adopt for the sale of current-consuming devices that will be installed on your lines. "We are not sure how much sales could be increased for appliances but we do know that there are still many homes that need more labor-saving devices in the form of electrical appliances to lessen the burden of the housekeeper.

"When you go through homes today that are being built by so-called speculative builders in houses costing $20,000 or more, the kitchen is elaborately furnished with most of the devices that are available to reduce drudgeries of the housewife, and there is a striking example in the number of older homes that have had major projects involving the rearranging and rebuilding of the kitchen facilities. "Most people who own homes are aware of these labor-saving devices and in many cases it takes very little selling effort to convince them of just how valuable such devices are from a standpoint of time consuming operations, which are reduced to a minimum. It is our opinion that you can invest in promotional advertising for the use of electricity that will pay good returns in increased usage." The consulting engineer had the following recommendations: 1. With each mailing of bills, enclose a short story or picture of household electrical appliances and now they make living electrically easier. 2. Television and radio with spot announcements that would follow a popular program will reach many customers. 3. National associations of electrical supply companies have a great deal of material that would help such a program. The whole program should be directed by an experienced organization on a budget basis. Such an organization would first advise on what size budget the Utilities could afford and forecast the possible benefits to be gained from such expenditures. A program without being a plan would produce negligible results. "What we are trying to say is, go at the job in the right way or leave it alone," Blackburn said. Blackburn also had something to say about adjusting of domestic schedules for electric service in excess of five to 10 KW demand. "A demand charge is such a controversial cost for service and one which few industrial users want to understand and probably none of your high demand domestic consumers would understand that it is much better, in our opinion, to include this charge in the adjustment of your residential schedule," he said. If an adjustment were made, a customer of five or 10 KW demand would never be penalized for the minimum charge except when the house is vacant, Blackburn said.

Club To Recognize Teacher With Oscar

The Greenville Women's Club is sponsoring the awarding of an Oscar to the most outstanding teacher in the Greenville public schools for the year 1957-58.

The Federation of Women's Clubs recognize that teachers hold the key to tomorrow and even though it is true that education actually begins in the home, at the knees of the parents, the teachers in our schools are the molders of character and welders of democracy to this country.

Through the cooperation of J. H. Rose, school superintendent, entry blanks for this contest have been handed teachers in the Greenville public schools for completion.

The awards committee chairman will receive these completed forms which are to be returned to Rose this week, in order that the committee may make deadline for the completion of awards data.

This local Oscar is only the beginning of teacher recognition. The winning teacher will compete for district, state, and national Oscars. At the General Federation WELLSTON, Ohio (AP)—They have turned the old city hall here into a "rock 'n' roll" recreation center for teen-agers.

When the city offices were moved last year into new quarters, the Wellston Rotary Club bought the building and renamed it "Teen Town."

Teen-agers joined rotary members in redecorating the place. Today, the youngsters dance to "rock 'n' roll" in what was once the mayor's courtroom. The police station is now a confectionary and reading room. The counter where prisoners were booked now serves as a snack bar.

And the jail—that's now a game room, minus the cells, of course.

Cheese fits into every part of a meal—as a tangy appetizer, the main dish, in vegetable sauces, salads or as dessert.

A Good Education

Where could one go to find a better or more varied education than in Extension work? Home Agent Florence Sherrill, Macon County, reported that foreign visitors from Yugoslavia, who visited in the county recently, saw evidence of Extension education among rural families.

The group visited in homes where no automobiles were owned, yet the children had college educations. This proved to be a surprise to those who did not know the rural people's sense of value. Mrs. Sherrill said that both the visitors and those they visited felt that their time together helped promote good international relations.

Efforts To Arouse Interest

A new contest, now underway in Chowan County, has been designed to arouse more interest in local 4-H clubs, according to reports from Mildred Morris, home demonstration agent.

Miss Morris explains that a score card was set up in December by the agents and county 4-H council members, in which points will be given for various projects of clubs, attendance, participation of members in various events, and individual project work.

So much enthusiasm has already been shown that council members feel that the contest will be a success. A group of adult leaders and council members will determine the winning club, based on reports and scrapbooks submitted from each club. The winning club will be presented an engraved plaque later in the year.

Kitchen Improvement

Mrs. Jimmie Williams, Waynesville Homemakers Home Demonstration Club, has just completed a kitchen improvement project, according to Home Agent Mary Cornwell.

Mrs. Williams has increased the size of her kitchen and furnished it completely with new cabinets and appliances. Through the study of the Heart Kitchen, Mrs. Williams has helped others in her community with ideas of how to conserve energy in kitchen tasks.

Miss Cornwell indicates that Mrs. Williams' kitchen is a good result demonstration to the others in her community.

The kitchen and adjoining utility room is only one of the many projects the Williams have. They hope eventually to finish their overall home improvement to their old home. They plan to remodel it from attic to basement.

Window Treatment

Several families in Mitchell County have been interested in window treatment. Mary Margaret Deyton, home agent, reports that three families have built new homes and one has remodeled. All have wanted help on draperies and other kinds of window treatment. "It wasn't easy to find a suitable material for the windows in our family room," said Mrs. Cline Ellis. "But I just kept looking and when I found the piece I'm using, I knew it was right."

It was suggested that Mrs. Ellis work from the rich colors in the drapery material to develop a color scheme to brighten up the cherry paneled walls of the family room, explains Mrs. Deyton.

New From Old

A sixth grade 4-H club member in Perquimans County, Sandra Morgan, Rt. 1, Belyidere, has been working very hard on her 4-H craft project, according to reports from Assistant Home Agent Paige L. Underwood.

Sandra has collected old garments and scraps from alteration departments and local dry cleaners so she can make a new braided rug. She plans to make it three by four feet.

Mrs. Underwood says that Sandra has been particularly interested in the methods of cutting strips, joining bias lengths, braiding, sewing the braids together and selecting a pleasing color scheme.

Lively Play To Be Presented

The lively play, which pokes fun at officialdom through the U. S. Army's Plan B to rehabilitate the Okinawans and centers interest on the frailties, the inconsistencies, and the lovable qualities of human beings, will be presented in three performances at 8 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium January 23-25.

Jerry Rockwood of New York City, professional actor, in the role of Sakini, will appear with a cast of student actors and actresses from the college. The production is sponsored by the College Entertainment Committee.

PRODUCING A PLAY . . . such as "Teahouse of the August Moon" enlists the skill and talent of many people who work backstage. Shown here in preliminary work for the production of John Patrick's comedy by the East Carolina Playhouse are Jane Berryman, Greenville sophomore, with the help of Kenneth West of Wilson, making a cricket cage, used in the play as a symbol of good luck among Tobiki villagers—that is, if the owner can catch his own cricket. Mrs. Jackson Urges Members To 'Have 1958 Destination In View'

"Let's have a 1958 destination in view," stated Mrs. Charles Jackson as she gave a New Year's devotional at the January Red Oak Home Demonstration Club meeting.

Mrs. Jackson read the 121st Psalm and then compared the year 1958 to "a wonderful trip which each club member has to look forward to with the Heavenly Father serving as guide."

Mrs. Lois Freeman, assistant Home agent, gave a demonstration on the importance of "Home Business Centers." Slides and illustrative materials were shown.

Mrs. James Allen gave a report on the Rural Progress Program and a committee was named to work on this project, namely: Mrs. H. L. Tyson, Mrs. James Allen,

Mrs. Thurston Wynn and Mrs. Milton May.

Mrs. Thurston Wynn gave a number of helpful suggestions on laundering and Mrs. James Allen displayed a winter dress she had made. New trends in home furnishings were discussed briefly by Mrs. Milton May.

The club decided to entertain their husbands in February at a covered dish supper. A demonstration will be given by the Farm and Home Agents on "Home-Grounds Beautification."

Mrs. J. T. Manning Jr., president, welcomed Mrs. Will Baldrée as a guest and Mrs. Robert Allen and Mrs. Carl Crawford as new members. The 19 members present remembered their sick members as they prayed the Club Collect.

30 Years Ago Today

Again Pitt County has been dealt a blow by the State Highway Commission in the form of announcement that Mr. Frank Page instructed that there be no walkway and provision for lighting on the new bridge being built here, despite the fact that Pitt County Highway Commission is in possession of a letter from the State Commission which clearly states that a walkway and lighting standards had been included. To build the bridge without a walkway is to endanger the lives of hundreds of persons who have to cross daily on foot and such a thing should not be permitted.

Fresh Incentive For Communities

If North Carolina needed an additional incentive to intensify its industrial development efforts, the Employment Security Commission has afforded that incentive.

According to the ESC headquarters in Raleigh, unemployment in the state during the first quarter of this year may pass the peak set back in the period of March through June of 1954. It predicts that more than 55,000 to 60,000 persons in the state will be drawing unemployment claims by the end of the first quarter of this year.

In spite of optimistic reports from the ESC about the employment picture in subsequent quarters of 1958, this one announcement should be sufficient to send Chambers of Commerce and other development organizations scurrying to greater activity to attract new industry and create new jobs. After all, there will be a first quarter of 1959 in which the same seasonal declines may cause unemployment to shoot up as it has now. The creation of new jobs within a community during the next 12 months can be a major factor in off-setting any seasonal decline that may come about in the first quarter of next year.

So far as new plants and expanded industrial operations are concerned, North Carolina has made satisfactory progress in the past few years. Throughout the state many new jobs have been created and the per capita income of the state is beginning to edge upward. It is apparent, however, that a few months of higher-than normal unemployment could more than off-set gains in personal income achieved by additional jobs that have been provided.

In addition to creating new jobs to raise their per capita income, many North Carolina communities are faced with the problem of creating new jobs to replace those which have vanished because of lay-offs.

The situation calls for redoubled efforts on the part of those responsible for industrial development.

Polio On Its Way Out, If Vaccine Is Used

There are two important conclusions which may be drawn from the report of the State Board of Health which shows a striking decrease in paralytic polio in North Carolina during 1957.

1. As a disease which threatens the lives and limbs of a large segment of our population, polio is on the way out. It need not be a threat in the future to the health and happiness of our people.

2. The number of cases of paralytic polio suffered by North Carolinians in the future may be directly controlled by the percentage of the population which takes advantage of the vaccine that has proved so effective in preventing the disease.

In spite of the great strides made in getting people in the most susceptible age groups vaccinated against polio, there remain literally thousands who have not taken advantage of the vaccine. The fact that we have the vaccine and it is effective means very little unless it is put to use.

Because of the use of the vaccine, the number of paralytic polio cases in North Carolina in 1957 dropped to less than a third of the number the year before. There were reported in North Carolina last year approximately 25 per cent as many cases of paralytic polio as the average for the past five years.

This striking drop in the number of cases of the dreaded disease must be attributed to use which has been made of the vaccine. We must not rest in the fight against the disease until all of our citizens who should be immunized against polio have received the preventive vaccine.

Efficiency For Postal Deficit

By ELMER ROESSNER
Boosting postage rates 67 per cent is a blithe way of increasing postal revenues.

It won't end the deficit. President Eisenhower conceded that in asking Congress to raise rates on out-of-town letters to a nickel and local letters to 4 cents.

In fact, by discouraging correspondence, it might make the deficit as cumbersome as before.

But another kind of approach might cure the deficit or, at least, improve our rather sloppy postal service.

That's to go modern. APPLYING EFFICIENCY
Senator Olin D. Johnston (D-S.C.), chairman of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee, has written a bill to permit the government to borrow $2 billion to modernize the Post Office Department. He noted that Maurice H. Stans, deputy Postmaster General, concedes that the postal service is "archaic and antiquated."

Edmund Cyrol, Chicago management consultant, says that application of modern business methods would reduce costs 20 per cent, wiping out the current deficit.

He suggests adopting four standard-size envelopes, with tab-card edges, which could be automatically sorted, and management studies to uncover other economies.

OTHER IDEAS
Here are other economies, suggested by other authorities or thought up by your correspondent:

Adopt standard correspondence cards with no other address than punched edges or magnetic code, on which most of the nation's business correspondence could be carried.

Devise postal meters that would apply magnetic coding as well as postage; then provide scanning machines that would automatically post mail with insufficient postage.

Adopt a few standard, modular sizes for parcels to simplify and economize on handling and let private shippers struggle with odd-size cartons. This might make parcel post profitable.

Motorize carriers with something like gasoline golf buggies, thereby replacing human labor with machines — the essence of automation.

Make all other postal operations as automatic as possible. IMPROVING MANAGEMENT

Public Forum

TO THE EDITOR:

I am taking the means of a letter to express to you and each member of your staff the appreciation of the Highway Patrol in Pitt County for the fine cooperation given us during the year 1957.

The publicity you have given highway safety with your editorials and news articles from time to time has been a great help to us in informing the public of the serious situation that exists with the traffic problem in Greenville and in Pitt County. Many times during 1957 I contacted you and members of your staff and requested that publicity be given in the interest of highway safety, and in one instance you gave us a full page spread, which we greatly appreciated. I am satisfied that if all editors of news papers in other counties and sections of this state were as interested in highway safety as you are, I believe we would be able to have a better reduction in traffic accidents in 1958.

Last year in Pitt County we had a reduction in accidents, personal injuries and had seven (7) less fatalities. We are making an all-out effort to reduce accidents and the death toll in Pitt County and with the continued cooperation of your paper, which I am sure we will have, it will be of great value to us in this effort.

If we can be of assistance to you at any time, do not hesitate to call on us.

Sincerely,
Carl E. Whitefield

City And County Data

The Chamber of Commerce has received a Census Bureau publication entitled "County and City Data Book" and a new release describes it as "of interest to civic minded persons and others interested in the relative merits of American Counties and cities."

"The County and City Data Book makes it easy for readers to find current information about population, family incomes, number of homes, marriages, bank deposits, retail stores, factories, tenant farms and many other items of interest," according to the news release.

To drum up interest in the book, the news release furnishes a list of 12 fields and it asks which of the North Carolina counties leads in each.

"Correct answers to the quiz may be found in the "County and City Data Book" at the Greenville Chamber of Commerce," the release says.

Luckily we have obtained the answers to the quiz so there's no need to rush right down and see the book — not for these particular questions, at least.

Below are the various fields and the answers follow, but don't peek.

1. Sales of farm products.
2. Retail trade.
3. Wholesale Trade.
4. Percent of factory employees.
5. Percent of population increase, 1940-1950.
6. Percent of home owners.
7. Number of farms.
8. Number of farms with more than 1,000 acres.
9. Number of farms under 10 acres.
10. Average farm value.
11. Manufacturing.
12. Increase in farm family level-of-living.

All set for the answers? Number 1 — sales of farm products is none other than good old Pitt County, according to the book.

Farm products sales come to $31 million annually in this county. Second highest is Robeson County with sales coming to $30 million.

2. Retail trade honors go to Guilford with $267 million; second is Mecklenburg with $264 million.

3. Wholesale trade, Mecklenburg, $328 million in second place, Guilford with $154 million.

4. Percent of population employed in factories, Gaston with 38.6 percent followed by Cabarrus with 36.6 percent.

5. Percent of population increase, 1940-1950. Onslow 134.4 percent; in second place Orange, 49.3 percent.

6. Percent of home owners, Avery, 79.6 percent, Brunswick is second with 77.7 percent.

7. Number of farms, Robeson, 8,037 and Johnston second with 7,822.

8. Farms with more than 1,000 acres, Halifax, 30 and Northampton second with 24.

9. Farms with less than 10 acres, Buncombe, 1,128 and Person second with 948.

10. Average farm value, Greene, $13,790 Mecklenburg in second place with $13,769.

11. Manufacturing, Forsyth, $304 million and Guilford second with $169 million.

12. Increase in farm family level-of-living, 1940-1952. Haywood, 31 to 110 and Hertford second with 37 to 113.

of our own N. C. delegation. The foreign aid and trade program is as important as the military expenditure. Russia is recognizing the advantage of economic offensive the Reds are now waging in an admission of the benefits we have gained through such programs.

But our plans need remodeling. They are said to be bogged down in red tape. And many other faults certainly exist. But this is no time to cut the foreign aid and trade programs. Russia's Khrushchev says "We declare war upon you in the peaceful field of trade and production. We are relentless in this. We will prove the superiority of our system." And Russia is making friends and influencing the peoples of the uncommitted countries. Her programs are completed on time, and the interest rate is lower than we charge.

Russia is offering a realistic program that appeals. She is taking big surpluses of raw materials in exchange for loans or for goods. She is helping with heavy equipment to develop industry and she is concentrating on the so called neutrals.

North Carolina's representatives have always taken a forward look, and been the leaders in the international economic programs. It is hoped they will make every effort to see that the money is wisely spent. But this is not the time to curb foreign aid and trade.

President Eisenhower should fight for his program, and we hope North Carolina's congressmen will back him up. For in the long run foreign aid and trade programs will pay bigger dividends than investments in military hardware.

of British sentiment, which were shared in by 30 other newspapermen from 13 countries on this around-the-world, good-will flight sponsored by Gantias, the only aviation line with a complete, closed and global circuit, here in how Western Europe and Asia look at the United States vis-a-vis Russia today.

From long and serious talks with officialdom here and with fairly representative Britishers, ranging from Cabinet members to taxi drivers, and hotel employees, they seem to me to exhibit the same courage and calm that they displayed after Dunkirk and in the 1940 blitzkrieg, whose ruinous results may still be seen in unreconstructed sections of London Town.

Again, contrary to foreign dispatches published in the United States, the British are not disturbed or disillusioned by our suffering from a "technological Pearl Harbor," as Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri measures our Sputnik defeat. It is easy for Americans to forget that Britain has survived many Pearl Harbors.

From official conferences at Whitehall and a fairly good poll of us discovered in World Wars I and II, are a delightful crew of polite roughnecks. They remind me of Texans who have just found $10,000,000 worth of oil in their backyard.

Having submitted these qualifications as the basis of this analysis of the free and neutral (India is included) world attitude toward the United States and the Eisenhower Administration today, here is what I find:

NO VICTOR WOULD GAIN FROM ATOMIC WAR They expect no global war to be launched by Russian aggression. They think that Khrushchev and Bulganin, far more than Stalin and Molotov, recognize that nobody can win in an atomic and hydrogenic war. Even the victor would pre-empt a worthless world.

Every foreign spokesman we have met, including the Pope, emphasized this point, which is a restraining factor not present in 1914 and 1939 or in 1941 on the "day that will live long in infamy." The most prosperous nation in Europe today, ironically, is Western Germany. Yet the ugly, semi-Gothic Cathedral at Cologne is not fully reconstructed, and the famous, feudal castles along the Rhine from Bonn to Cologne are selling or renting for a dime a dozen.

DISAGREE WITH DULLES To return to the main theme — war and peace — West Europeans want to talk with Russia, and they have real belief that a livable agreement, although not perfect or copper-riveted, can be achieved through such negotiations. They disagree completely with the standoffish attitude of Secretary John Foster Dulles.

I do not like to report the disrepute in which our Secretary of State is held throughout the world, but I base it on talks with foreign diplomats and with more than 30 newspapermen from important world capitals.

Incidentally, my bunk-mate on this Qantas Super-Constellation is Mahomet Zaher, who represents the Associated Press at Karachi, Pakistan. Across the aisle sits a big, beef eating, 200-pound Australian, who is the Parliamentary correspondent at Canberra, Australia's capital, for the Melbourne Age.

Darby Still 'Alive'

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — A great leader never quite dies altogether. He lives in a spirit he kindled among those who followed him.

So it is that, in a very real way, William Orlando Darby, founder of the American Rangers in World War II, is still very much alive, although he died two days before that war closed.

"Even after all these years we can't think of him as dead," said Charles Contrera, who served as driver-interpreter for the brilliant young West Pointer from Fort Smith, Ark., whose career was ended at 34 by a German artillery shell on the Italian front.

"To us he was almost like a god. To the men he seemed superhuman. He was wounded three times, but we never really believed he could be killed — he had been through so much."

Hollywood recently "discovered" Col. Darby, an officer many believed was destined to be Army chief of staff, and Warner Brothers has told part of his story in a notable film of battle action called "Darby's Rangers."

Contrera was one of a number of former Rangers who attended a preview of the picture here the other night. Now 38, Contrera is an upholsterer by trade. He and his wife, Lucille, have bought a home and are hoping to adopt a baby.

He rarely fights the war anymore — "except sometimes at night in his sleep," said his wife — but when he does think of it, his thoughts turn always to Col. Darby.

Charlie was one of the first to volunteer when Darby was given the assignment of creating an elite spearhead force for the Army, a force comparable to the U. S. Marines, but smaller.

Contrera landed with the Rangers in Africa, but it wasn't until after the group had stormed the beaches of Sicily that he came to know Darby well.

"He wanted a driver who could also act as an interpreter," Contrera recalled, "and when I told him I could speak a couple of Italian dialects he said, 'Get behind the wheel. Let's go.'"

"I didn't know what that would mean to me — or I might have kept my mouth shut. We lived on the front line. We were in tight squeezes all the time."

"The Colonel liked to do his own reconnoitering for his night attacks. When we couldn't go any further by jeep, we'd climb aboard donkeys. And when we got to places in the hills where even the donkeys balked, we'd jump off and go on by foot."

Contrera remembers later in Italy how, day after day, he had to speed his jeep across a 75-yard open area of road swept by machine-gun fire.

"The Colonel got a kick out of timing the enemy fire and beating it," he said. "We could see the bullets kicking up dust behind us, but nothing ever bothered him. And, somehow, I felt safe with him."

Only one time did Darby ever lose his composure. That was at Cisterna, on the Anzio beachhead, when a German division surrounded and largely destroyed two battalions of Rangers as he was trying to break through to their resupply.

"Don't give up. Infiltrate back," Darby kept pleading into the field phone. "Don't give up! Don't give up! Don't give up!"

"When he was told the men couldn't infiltrate back because they were trapped," said Contrera, "the Colonel put his head down on his arm and cried for several moments. He broke down. He had always put the safety of his men first, and he couldn't think of the thought of what was happening to them."

"But none of us ever blamed him. It wasn't his fault."

The last time Contrera ever saw Darby was when the Colonel came to Camp Butler in North Carolina.

"He never made a speech to us — just talked to us one by one, or in small groups. He was very sad."

"I have never before or since, looked up to a man as I did to him," said Contrera. "After his death they made him a brigadier general, and that was nice of them. He was all soldier."

Good Entertainment In 'Fledermaus' Offering

By GEORGE E. FERRY
A Strauss operetta is good entertainment anyway you look at it, and the Grass Roots Opera's presentation of "Die Fledermaus" last evening was as entertaining as any of their past productions here, if not more so.

It was an excellent vehicle for this company which wisely stays clear of Grand Opera in its strictest styles. It contained stinging melodies, a clever though not confusing plot, and a generous sprinkling of humor—a necessity for provincial opera presentations. Some notable improvements were seen last evening over previous performances here. There was a consistent integration throughout; the singers and the accompanist blended into a whole much more so than in the past, and this I am sure is to be credited to Frederick Popper. Not once did the singers look toward the director; they knew their roles well, and did not need to be cued invisibly.

Leads—High Calibre
The vocal quality of the leads seemed to be of higher calibre than before. Two singers stood out commendably over the rest of the cast, but this is as it should be, for they were the two leading sopranos.

Ariene Saunders, as Rosalinda, possesses a warm lyric voice; Jeanette Scovotti, as Adele, a clear but never piercing coloratura voice; and the two of them were quite obviously the operatic stars of the performance.

Hayden Blanchard, as Alfred, has a tenor voice of considerable possibilities, but in the role he played he did not have a chance to show what he could do, except for the few snatches of Verdi and other grand opera which were tossed into the score. His quality is principally lyric, its general effect marred only by a slight nasality in the upper register. As time progresses and he overcomes this as well as the breaks between the registers, he should turn out some commendable singing. Fred Patrick, who did the Dr. Falke role, has a pleasing baritone, but last night he sounded tired; I should like to hear him without this detrimental aspect.

The leads were as capable historically as they were vocally. Miss Saunders made the most of her flirtatious characteristics, was a good Hungarian in Act II, and showed believable infatuation in Act III. Miss Scovotti grasped the essence of a maid on a fling and played it well without overplaying it. Fred Patrick more than made up for the huskiness of his voice by turning in one of the most convincing pieces of acting of the evening. He was gallant, shrewd and calculating.

Several Musical Highlights
Musically, there were several highlights: the duet between Rosalinda and Adele, the trio of Rosalinda, Adele and Eisenstein, and the trio, all from Act I; Adele's laughing song, the Czar-das, and the Champagne Song from Act II; and finally the trio and finale from the last act. All ensemble work was consistently good.

Linguistically, I saw no flaws. The diction was understandable even to the last row of the theatre. The clever translation by Ruth and Thomas Martin was a great improvement over the one used before the advent of this one, for it is witty, clever, and perfectly singable in English, whereas some translations are not only ludicrous, but difficult for the singers.

The costumes were much improved over past years, especially the feminine attire throughout, and Margaret Carney should certainly be complimented for this. The sets, if far from elaborate, were unique, especially the one for the first act.

Obviously there were drawbacks. For a really authentic production of this opera a chorus is a necessity, but working on the limited budget this company has it is far wiser to spend funds on better leads, and eliminate extras, even if sometimes they might add to the general effect.

The lack of orchestra didn't bother me, for I'd rather hear a really capable pianist do the job well, than to hear an orchestra, which this company might have scurried together, fight their way through the score.

This state is the only one in the nation to have an opera company of this kind, even with its shortcomings; this in itself is commendable, if only because it gives valuable experience to aspiring singers. But, and I think more important, it brings opera—one of the highest forms of musical art—to people who might forever remain ignorant of the pleasures of hearing it.

Dog Vaccination Clinic Series Begins Feb. 3

Pitt County's annual series of dog vaccination clinics will begin February 3, the Pitt County Health Department announced today.

The rabies control program this year will mark first use of a "chick embryo vaccine" which requires dog vaccinations every three years instead of annually. The vaccine will be administered, as in the past, by veterinarians cooperating with the Health Department and Health Department personnel.

Vaccination fees at the public clinics will be $1 per dog. Vaccination tags will be issued to dogs which receive the new vaccine.

The public clinics are scheduled to be held Monday through Saturday throughout the month of February. Each week's schedule will be listed in The Daily Reflector.

Coach Reece And His Starting Unit

READYING FOR GAME... McArthur, James, Jenkins, Joyner and Carraway.

Junior High To Play Benefit Friday Night

Greenville's once-defeated Junior high school basketball team, under Coach Milton Reece, will stage a benefit game here Friday night against Washington, at 7:30 in Junius Rose Gymnasium.

The eighth graders under Reece have compiled a 6-1 record against Class AAA and AA teams during the first half of the season and have dropped such teams as Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, and New Bern.

Friday night's contest is being sponsored by the PTA of the Junior High, and the purpose is to raise money to buy books to begin a junior high library.

A big halftime ceremony is to be held at the game, featuring the presentation of new uniforms to the team. A band and several prominent Greenville speakers are expected to be present.

This year marks the first time that Greenville Junior High has had a team. Coach Reece, who is seeing his first season here, has guided the club to an excellent season. The only loss came last week against Kinston there. It was a 32-28 defeat.

Expected to start for the Junior G-Men will be Kenneth Joyner, Jimmy Jenkins, Alan McArthur, Benny Carraway, and Billy Neal James. Other members of the team who are expected to see action will be Krohrie Andressen, Ed Smoot, Elbert Felton, J. G. Proctor, Lew Ward, Roger Collins, Richard Taft, Burney Morris, and Russell Fields.

An interesting note is the fact that Coach Reece's club has the best performance record of any Greenville school system team. The Junior high outfit—like the ninth graders, the junior varsity, and the Greenville high school varsity—has competed against both Class AAA and AA opponents, and has racked up a far better mark than any of the other local teams.

A ninth grade game is scheduled to take place shortly before the main event Friday night. The Junior high-Washington tilt will begin at 7:30.

Advance tickets may be purchased at the Junior high school. In advance, the adult tickets will cost ninety cents and student tickets are twenty cents. At the gate, they will be $1.00, and twenty-five cents, respectively.

W. Virginia Has Firm Lead On First Position

Bradley, Terps Run Into Upsets; Carolina In 12th

By DON WEISS The Associated Press If West Virginia's top-ranked Mountaineers and seven companions in the Associated Press' new weekly top 10 of college basketball are grateful today to be involved in mid-term exams, it's little wonder.

Last night was a night for giant-killers. Sixth-ranked Maryland and 10th-ranked Bradley learned the hard way—Maryland as it was bounced out of the Atlantic Coast Conference leadership by North Carolina State, 57-48, and Bradley in a shocking 58-55 loss to unseeded Portland.

The eight others, and most of the nation's major clubs, are out of competition at least until Saturday while they concentrate on examinations.

West Virginia was again a rousing winner in the AP poll with 925 points to 728 for runner-up Kansas.

The second 10 had its hazards last night, too, with 15th-rated Michigan State, the Big 10 favorite, solidly whipped by Wisconsin 66-52.

North Carolina State, creating a tie with North Carolina for the lead in the ACC, threw a zone defense against Maryland that limited the Terps to only six field goals in the second half.

Jim Armstrong and Dick Jolley combined for 40 points in Portland's upset of Bradley, losing its third in 13 games.

The standings with points on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis (first place votes in parentheses): 1. West Virginia (71).....925 2. Kansas (7).....728 3. Kansas State (2).....638 4. Cincinnati (7).....593 5. San Francisco (2).....533 6. Maryland (3).....340 7. Oklahoma State (2).....336 8. North Carolina (1).....297 9. Kentucky.....272 10. Bradley.....155

After last week's games were all in and totaled up, the standings showed the Phantoms and New Bern atop of the heap with 3-1 marks. Jacksonville and Roanoke Rapids in second (3-2), Washington third (2-2), Kinston fourth (2-3), Elizabeth City (0-5).

Coach Bo Farley's G-Men took their place at the head of the league with last Friday night's whopping 65-51 over a favored Jacksonville quintet. New Bern earned the tie with a 66-60 victory over Kinston.

Farley's club played its best game of the season against the Cards last Friday. He used the starting quintet of Walker Allen and Wesley Hudson at guards, Steve Noble at center, Peanut Nunn and Dick Evans at forwards. He substituted freely however, and got good performances from Albert Crawford, Don Wilkerson, Bob Bilbro, Billy Cox, Mack Roebuck, and Bobby Edwards. The latter unit played just about the same amount of time as his starting unit.

Overall thus far this season, the Phantoms have racked up six victories against four losses. Three of the four losses were non-loop games against AAA opponents. The other, their only Northeastern loss, was a close one to Washington, which was protested due to a disputed decision.

Game time at New Bern's gymnasium Friday night will be 8:00. Coach Bud Phillips' junior varsity will battle the Baby Bruins at 6:30 in the preliminary.

Citadel Is Good At Home, Bad On Road

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Coach Norman Sloan of The Citadel was saying last week that the only reliable way of predicting Southern Conference basketball results this season was to pick the home team every time.

Sloan may have been speaking from hard experience, for his young Cadets have won every one of their six home games while posting a less-than-handsome 4-6 record on the road. But, generally speaking, his formula for would-be prophets wasn't far wrong.

Thus far in the campaign, conference teams have won 37 of 48 games on their home floors, a winning percentage of .711.

Away from home the record is 25 victories in 79 starts, a woeful .316 average.

All-winning West Virginia, naturally, has the best record of any of the conference's 10 clubs. The Mountaineers have won eight games at home and five on the road without a defeat.

Other conference teams especially tough on their home courts over the first half of the season were The Citadel with a 6-0 record before the home folks; Davidson, 4-1; George Washington, 4-1; and William and Mary, 3-1. Furman, with a 1-5 record for the season, has played just one game on its home floor and won it.

Other home court records are Richmond, 5-3; VMI, 3-2; Virginia Tech, 1-1; Washington and Lee, 2-2.

Recent results indicate, however, that Sloan's rule-of-thumb for predicting conference results may not work much longer. In four of the last five games played by conference teams the visitors have won.

Three of the victories by road teams came last Saturday night when The Citadel whipped Davidson, Virginia Tech downed William and Mary and George Washington defeated Richmond.

VMI was the only Saturday casualty, getting beaten on a trip to Navy. But the Keydets traveled to Randolph-Macon last night and came out a winner, 68-52.

VMI hit 46 per cent of its shots and put five players in double figures against the Yellow Jackets while upping its record to 4-7 for the season. Chuck Cotton, Roy Quinn and Lee Southard each had 14 points while Ralph Lawson has 13 and Chuck MacLeod added 11.

It was the last game until Saturday for a conference team.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The West hopes to run all the time and keep a favored East team off balance in the annual National Basketball Assn. All-Star game tonight at the St. Louis Arena.

That is the plan of Alex Hannum, coach of the West. He admits the East team, coached by his bitter rival, Red Auerbach of Boston, holds an edge in size, experience and scoring power.

Auerbach will have three members of his own Boston Celtics on the starting East five chosen by sportswriters and broadcasters.

One is 6-foot-10 Bill Russell, the tallest man on either squad and the NBA's top rebounder and shot-blocker. Hannum's answer may be 6-foot-9, 250-pound Larry Foust of Minneapolis, who wasn't named to the starting five. Hannum said he's impressed with Foust's defensive jobs against Russell this season.

The other East starters are Bob Cousy and Bill Sharman of Boston, Willie Naulls of New York and Dolph Schayes of Syracuse.

In the West's starting lineup will be Hannum's own Bob Pettit and Slater Martin of the St. Louis Hawks, Maurice Stokes of Cincinnati, Dick Garmaker of Minneapolis, and George Yardley of Detroit, the NBA's current top scorer with a 27.7 average.

The East starters average an even 100 points a game, the West starters are averaging 97.8. The other five East squadmen have a combined 90.6 average compared to 80.3 for the other West players.

The East has won five of the seven previous games.

Before the Spanish introduced the horse to the Indians on the western plains had only two domesticated animals — the turkey and the dog.

State Tumbles Terps From Top Of ACC Ranks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS North Carolina State, 12th ranked nationally, defeated sixth-ranked Maryland 57-48 last night and tumbled the Terps from No. 1 to No. 3 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball standings.

However, Maryland has no cause to complain over its ACC fortunes. It was State's 58-57 overtime victory over North Carolina last week that put the Terps on top of the conference.

The game, the only one on last night's ACC schedule, left State and North Carolina tied for the ACC lead, each with 5-2 records. Maryland's conference record is 4-2.

The conference has the entire week to contemplate the state of basketball warfare as mid-term examinations leave a blank schedule until Saturday.

State used only five players in the Maryland victory and played the same deliberate, control-type basketball it used to whip North Carolina.

Maryland had a 31-27 halftime lead, but midway in the second period State's Don Gallagher hit two field goals, breaking a 39-39 tie and sending the Wolfpack into the lead it never relinquished.

State Coach Everett Case's zone defense held the Terps to only six field goals in 30 attempts in the last half.

Bob MacGillivray topped State's scoring with 19 points, followed by Whitey Bell with 13 and John Richter with 11. Richter also grabbed 18 rebounds.

Tom Young was Maryland's leading scorer with 12 points. In other action involving North Carolina teams last night, Western Carolina defeated East Carolina 91-85 in a North State Conference game. North Carolina A&T defeated Winston-Salem Teachers 63-54, and Bluefield (W.Va.) State defeated Johnson C. Smith 81-73.

Catamounts Control Backboards To Win

CULLOWHEE — A fired-up Western Carolina, jumping on the bandwagon with both feet, kicked

East Carolina a notch further down in the North State Conference standings last night with a 92-85 triumph over the Bucs.

The WCC win secured third place for the Catamounts with a 5-2 mark, and booted the Pirates down to a tie with Guilford; ECC and Guilford now have 3-6 conference marks.

Including the three forfeited games taken away from East Carolina by League Commissioner C. R. Hinchshaw last week, last night's loss was ECC's fifth in a row. They lost Saturday night to Lenoir Rhyne.

The Catamounts, not an overly tall team, managed to shade the Bucs on the backboards last night throughout the game and strike up an early lead which they maintained from start to finish.

Harris Pryor, 6-2 WCC guard, grabbed the game's high scoring honors by throwing in 24 points. Center Randall Shields collected 24 rebounds and forward Swede Frauson picked up 18 to completely leave the Bucs out in the cold, so far as rebounds were concerned.

Dave Jones had 19 points, Shields 15 and Frauson 16 to add to the Western Carolina total. Four of the five Cat starters hit for double scoring figures.

Charlie Adams, playing a reserve guard position for the Pirates, notched 22 points to take top honors for the visitors. Jessell Curry, who has maintained a 17-point average throughout the year, was held to only 14. He sank his first field goal with just 14 minutes remaining in the game. Harold Ingram, senior captain, notched 14.

Western Carolina held a 46-37 lead at halftime.

East Carolina takes a breather for the next 11 days and will not play again until January 31, when the Catamounts journey to Greenville for a return match.

Currently sitting on top of the Northeastern Conference basketball standings—in a 3-1 deadlock with New Bern—Greenville high school takes a break this week for exams.

The Kinston-Greenville tilt originally scheduled for tonight at Kinston, has been postponed until January 31 so that both schools can complete examinations without interference.

Friday night, however, the Phantoms invade New Bern for a showdown clash with the Bears. The game will determine, for the hour at least, who reigns supreme over the crazy mixed-up Northeastern loop.

After last week's games were all in and totaled up, the standings showed the Phantoms and New Bern atop of the heap with 3-1 marks. Jacksonville and Roanoke Rapids in second (3-2), Washington third (2-2), Kinston fourth (2-3), Elizabeth City (0-5).

Coach Bo Farley's G-Men took their place at the head of the league with last Friday night's whopping 65-51 over a favored Jacksonville quintet. New Bern earned the tie with a 66-60 victory over Kinston.

Farley's club played its best game of the season against the Cards last Friday. He used the starting quintet of Walker Allen and Wesley Hudson at guards, Steve Noble at center, Peanut Nunn and Dick Evans at forwards. He substituted freely however, and got good performances from Albert Crawford, Don Wilkerson, Bob Bilbro, Billy Cox, Mack Roebuck, and Bobby Edwards. The latter unit played just about the same amount of time as his starting unit.

Overall thus far this season, the Phantoms have racked up six victories against four losses. Three of the four losses were non-loop games against AAA opponents. The other, their only Northeastern loss, was a close one to Washington, which was protested due to a disputed decision.

Game time at New Bern's gymnasium Friday night will be 8:00. Coach Bud Phillips' junior varsity will battle the Baby Bruins at 6:30 in the preliminary.

Mistake, Punch Moves Webb To Top Of Picture

SAN FRANCISCO — Spider take and a right-hand smash have moved Spider Webb toward the top of the middleweight boxing picture today.

Aggressive Rory Calhoun, the muscular 160-pounder from White Plains, N.Y., made the mistake and Webb took full advantage of it to whip home—stunningly-timed punch that produced a fourth round knockout.

Calhoun had knocked down the 158½ pound Chicagoan for counts of 9 in both the first and second rounds of their Cow Palace battle. Then came a more even third and the decisive fourth.

Webb, a 10-6 underdog, said the first round knockdown was the first of his professional career he started in 1953 after winning the NCAAA championship the previous two years at Idaho State.

The knockout was the first suffered by the 23-year-old Calhoun, who went into the fight with a 32-2-1 record—one of those setbacks coming at the hands of Webb via a decision in 1956.

It was the 14th time Webb had stopped an opponent and sent his record to 24-2.

Until 1736, New Jersey had a separate assembly, but its chief executive was the governor of New York.

Mother-Daughter And Father-Son Event Set

By ANNE HARRIS
Belvoir-Falkland Reporter

A combined Mother-Daughter and Father-Son Banquet has been scheduled for the Belvoir-Falkland FFA and FFA chapters for February 28. This was decided as such at the January FFA meeting in the home economics cottage. Various committees have been appointed to plan the banquet, including those for inviting, decorating, program, and food. Among their other business was the election of Margaret May as the new club reporter.

The FFA members are also sponsoring a Valentine Dance February 15. Beta Club members met for a brief business meeting on last Thursday. Plans were discussed for attending the Beta District Convention in Williamston on February 14 and the State Beta Convention in Raleigh on March 14-15. They also planned the monthly meeting for January 27 at the high school.

The Gum Swamp Ladies' Aid of the Belvoir community is sponsoring a fried chicken supper on January 31 in the high school lunchroom.

Wintry Snow Storm On Its Way Across Nation

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Storm warnings were posted early today for areas in the path of an eastward moving rain and snow storm that already had clobbered a vast Central Plains area with a 5 to 12 inches snowfall. The Weather Bureau warned that heavy snows were likely for portions of lower Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas.

At the leading edge of the storm rains spread eastward across the Appalachians to the Atlantic Coast.

The Northeast was earmarked for worsening weather with the onslaught of a rain and sleet mixture early in the day. This was to be followed by light snow. Weather Bureau forecasters said.

A low pressure area over southern Texas shifted into the lower Mississippi Valley.

Bad weather also was reported in the Pacific Northwest where scattered showers or snow flurries were predominant features. Rains in the forefront of the Central Plains storm spread eastward through the Ohio Valley and across the Gulf States to the south Atlantic coast. At Miami, the Weather Bureau posted small craft warnings in the Atlantic Ocean from Cape Hatteras, N.C., through the Florida Straits and in the Gulf of Mexico from St. Marks through The Keys.

A check of temperatures and weather conditions at representative cities early today showed: Boston 23 and cloudy, New York City 33 and cloudy, Washington 33 and partly cloudy, Atlanta 42 and rain, Miami 69 and rain, Dallas 34 and cloudy, St. Louis 37 and rain, Detroit 32 and cloudy, Minneapolis 16 and snow, Des Moines 20 and cloudy, Seattle 41 and cloudy, San Francisco 48 and clear, Los Angeles 55 and partly cloudy, Phoenix 41 and clear.

Huge Seaplane Passes Its Test

BALTIMORE (AP)—Martin Co.'s remodeled jet-engined SeaMaster passed its first flight test yesterday.

The huge seaplane capable of flying 600 miles an hour was tried out in the air for an hour, 55 minutes under observation of the Navy.

The first two experimental models of the plane designed for long range reconnaissance and mine laying blew up. The trouble was blamed on the tail. Five more models are to be tested. Martin then will make 18 production types.

Case Of Missing Pig Is Solved

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP)—The case of Mr. and Mrs. William White's missing pig was closed today.

The Whites, who live in a rural section near this central Pennsylvania town, bought the 115-pound pig, on the hoof, last week. They put the porker in a burlap bag and stowed him in the trunk of their car. On their way home, they hit a bump in the road.

The trunk lid popped up, the pig popped out. Luckily for the Whites, a passerby saw the mishap and rounded up the scampering swine. By tracing the White's license number, state police arranged to have the pig returned.

The Golden Scalp

By PAUL W. FAIRMAN

CHAPTER ONE

"It'll be a stubborn outfit to lick," the Duke said. "Otherwise they wouldn't be heading for Bigfoot Pass. They were warned to swing south back at the fort."

"You're probably right," Cory Dane replied. "But all scalps are alike to the Sioux — stubborn or otherwise."

The two men pulled up their horses and watched the string of tiny, crawling objects far below them.

Cory Dane was a lean young man with perpetually squinted blue eyes and thick, sand-colored hair. He was in sharp contrast to the Duke, a spindling little wisp of an oldster who looked anything but royal.

However, there was a Gallic fragility in the Duke's small features, identifying him as of French ancestry. For this vague reason, he had acquired his title. His real name was unknown.

Dane, on the other hand, was obviously a native product. He had been born in a Shoshone tepee of a white mother after a wagon train had been swept to destruction in the rapids of the upper Missouri. The Shoshone had been benefactors rather than captors. They had managed to fish three survivors from the mad Missouri, shaking their heads while at the assuinity of the attempted crossing. When Dane's mother had died, in the infant's sixth month, a stone-faced squaw had taken Dane in and given him a strip of aged buffalo meat to gnaw.

This should have killed him, but it didn't. Instead he waxed fat and happy among his stolid foster people.

Six dreary summers passed before the men of a cavalry column yanked the bewildered child from the clutches of the "ignorant" savages and placed him with God-fearing people at the eastern edge of the great plains.

At seventeen Dane had fished the extinction of the buffalo by several thousand units. In his eighteenth year, during a scouting turn for the army, he killed a single marauding Apache after which, for some strange reason, he bent his head toward the dust of the prairie, and wept.

Thus he became a man.

Now, uncounted years having passed, he sat astride his horse high on the east shoulder of Blackhead Butte, and watched a wagon train creep slowly toward massacre and destruction.

"We better go down," he said, briefly.

The entire train had finally come in sight, a crawling snake of some fifty vehicles. It found an easy path along the narrow valley floor. An easy path but a deadly one.

As the two scouts approached, the specks turned from ants to bugs and finally into wagons. Cory Dane could tell, now, that it was a head-up outfit. The wagons were in good repair, the canvas snowy and free from rents. The open fat and shiny.

As the scouts pounded across the hard flats at the foot of the incline, the lead wagon drew to a halt. Gradually the inertia extended itself to the far rear, and the whole train was motionless.

A group of horsemen had congregated near the lead wagon. They waited in a milling dust until Dane and the Duke had pulled up.

Dane raised his right hand high in greeting.

"Oregon?" he called out. A great bearded man on a sweating sorrel seemed to be in command.

"Over the backbone anyhow," he said. "We may split later on."

Some of the horses milled about, generating unrest in the others.

"Just came over ourselves. I'm Cory Dane. This is the Duke. We might hand you a little advice."

Dane spoke casually, and waited. Giving out unwanted advice could be a terrific waste of time.

The big leader lifted a hat off a head of bushy hair.

"I'm Luke Stafford. Duly elected high muck-amuck of this pilgrimage. Suppose you want to tell us 'bout warrin' Sioux?"

"We could do that," the Duke answered. "But maybe you wouldn't want to listen."

The flashing of the sun upon something pulled Dane's eyes toward the lead wagon. The "something" proved to be a girl's hair.

The girl wore a bonnet that had been pushed back off the golden mass of braids bound around her head. She had climbed from the interior of the wagon and was now following the proceedings with marked interest from the front seat. She had a freshness about her, a clearness of eye and complexion, that filled Dane with uneasiness and made him turn his gaze away.

"It's right neighborly of you to be concerned 'bout our welfare and don't think we ain't grateful, but we got all the gossip 'bout the Sioux back at the fort."

Dane became aware of the fact that this last was being explained by the leader, Stafford. He gave the man his undivided attention.

"We talked it all over amongst us and then we took a vote. Majority rules, you know. We decided the talk was a mite over-exaggerated and we'd cut off two weeks and a lot of sunburn by usin' the direct route."

"Ah, democracy — she is wonderful," muttered the Duke, under his breath. "Maybe the Sioux — they take a vote too?"

"You're wrong about the talk being exaggerated," Dane said. "We passed some wagons this morning early — what was left of them."

"Uh-huh," the Duke added. "Them Sioux devils overlooked a spade, so we dug nine graves. Took us most of the morning."

"Probably an unprepared outfit," Stafford said, easily. "We got seventy-five good men in this train and all well armed. I don't think any red brothers'll be hankerin' for a taste of our lead."

"I'm afraid you don't quite understand," Dane pursued. "It isn't just a pocketful of marauders we're talking about. It's a nation at war. Four thousand braves under Black Eagle and every one of them yearning for a white scalp. This outfit here? They'd just ride it down."

A second member of the wagon group spoke up. He was a lean, scholarly looking man with a clean shaven face. A cynical smile. "Sometimes I think you — ah — natives like to make things difficult for us newcomers. Would you rather we stayed back East?"

Dane flushed slightly and shrugged, but the Duke spoke up.

"You got us in the wrong slot, Mister. But you're right about the natives wanting to make it difficult, only they go farther than that. They intend to make it downright impossible." The Duke turned to Dane. "Let's get going, son." He whirled his spotted pony. "And luck to you pilgrims. You'll need it."

Dane frowned and held his gaze on Stafford.

"Let me put it again," he said. "And straight. You've got a train-load of women and children. And you're heading flush into four thousand Sioux bowstrings."

"With all our guns loaded," Stafford came back.

The girl's voice cut in clearly. "Maybe you two men would like to stay with us for protection. I'm sure you'd be welcome."

Dane brought his gaze full upon her. He felt no uneasiness now. There was a minute of silence. Then Dane said, "Maybe we would, ma'am. Maybe we'd like to do just that."

"You're crazy, son," the Duke snapped. "We just spent two days swinging around the damn Sioux. What for we want to ride right back into the middle of them?"

Twenty minutes later the Duke was still grumbling. Nonetheless, he'd gone through with the about-face and was riding back in the direction he'd come. He posted himself left fore of the train and rode glumly back toward the trouble he and Dane had spent two days in circumventing.

"Maybe," he observed, "this is as good a year to die as any."

Dane rode ahead of the lead wagon with Stafford and the smooth-faced man. The sun was hot and the going was flat and clear.

"This is Squire Davis," Stafford said. "He'll teach a school we'll set up for our young uns. We got a wagon load of bloks."

"Let's hope your young ones live to read them," Dane said. After that they rode in silence.

Tomorrow: Score one for the Sioux in a deadly game of hide and seek. "The Golden Scalp" continues in The Daily Reflector.

Let 'em eat cake!
Did you ever wish you could have a picture of a child's birthday party that would record everything—the candlelit cake, the puffed cheeks as the candles are blown out, the icing-smeared faces? Well believe me, it's easy with a modern movie outfit. Take one Brownie Movie Camera (priced at just $29.95), add on a Brownie Two-Lamp Movie Light ($5.45), and you can follow cake crumbs and your little people all over the place without any effort.
Stand on a chair to get the party table full of gleaming faces, catch the kids in their games, take close-ups or groups. Wherever you aim your camera, the light follows automatically. And, by following the exposure recommendations printed right on the light bar, it's almost impossible to make a mistake.
A Brownie Movie Camera, or any Kodak Movie Camera for that matter, is perfect for this. An exceptionally good value, though, is the Brownie Turret Model. It has three lenses, built in, for taking regular movies, wide-angle views (handy in a small room) and two-times magnified telephoto shots. The price of this camera is only $84.75. Add the two-lamp movie light and you'll have a jim-dandy movie outfit. Come see us.

Heart Disease Symposium Here

Plans have been completed for a symposium on heart disease, to be presented here January 28 by the Coastal Plains Heart Association and the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society.

The symposium will be held at East Carolina College and will include an evening session open to the general public. Speakers will be four nationally known specialists in heart diseases from medical schools at the University of North Carolina, Duke University and Harvard University.

In an afternoon closed session for physicians and dentists only, Dr. Samuel A. Levine, clinical professor of medicine at Harvard University Medical School, will discuss "Some Puzzling Points Concerning Coronary Artery Disease." He will be followed on the program by Dr. Ernest Craigie, Chief of Cardiology in the UNC School of Medicine, who will discuss "Treatment of Shock in Myocardial Infarction"; and Dr. W. C. Sealy, professor of Thoracic surgery at Duke, who will discuss "A Method of Open Heart Surgery." Dr. John B. Hickham, professor of medicine at Duke, will serve as moderator for the symposium, fourth of its kind to be sponsored by the Coastal Plains Heart Association.

The evening session, to be held in Wright Auditorium on the ECC campus, will feature Dr. Levine's discussion of "Fact and Fancy About Heart Disease." Dr. Craigie's discussion of "Can Anything Be Done To Prevent Heart Disease," and Dr. Sealy's discussion of "What Surgery Can Do For Heart Disease." Dr. Hickham will moderate the evening session which will include a period for questions from the floor.

Dr. Edwin W. Monroe of Greenville is chairman of arrangements for the symposium.

Eastern North Carolina Wants More Telephones

---But---With Inadequate Earnings---Our Hands Would Be Tied

We want to meet the need for additional and improved telephone service throughout eastern North Carolina. But if our earnings are inadequate—our hands are tied.

Our costs are 1958 inflationary costs. Our rates are based on costs and investment in 1952.

To raise our earnings to a reasonable level amounts to only a few pennies a day per main telephone.

WALL STREET — Aircrafts moved a bit higher in an irregular stock market early this afternoon. Trading was moderate. Gains of fractions to around a point and losses in about the same range were shown by pivotal stocks. Rails resumed their decline from last week's spectacular advance. New York Central paced the retreat, down a point following news of its limited dividend. The market was uncertain following yesterday's failure to pierce the barrier of the November high, an important resistance point to upward progress. A drop in steel production and news that U.S. Steel would lay off another 1,500 to 2,000 workers contributed to the drab economic news. The market was mixed all morning. After an active opening the pace moderated but it picked up a bit near mid-day as the aircrafts and some other stocks improved. American Telephone and Royal Dutch, now selling ex-rights to new corporate issues, showed slight gains. Meanwhile, the rights were actively traded and at about the same as yesterday's closing prices. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 20 cents to $160.80 with the industrials up 40 cents, the rails down $1.10 and the utilities down 20 cents.

Jehovah's Witnesses Plan Circuit Meeting

A spokesman announced today that Jehovah's Witnesses are making plans to attend a three-day circuit convention at the National Guard Armory in Rocky Mount on Jan. 24-26. Willis Manning, presiding minister of the local congregation of the Witnesses, stated that about 40 delegates from the congregation here are expected to attend. Upwards of 500 ministers and their families are expected to attend the seminar from some 20 congregations in Eastern North Carolina. The program will consist of demonstrations, panel discussions, sermons and a public Bible discourse. The theme of the event is "Qualified to Teach." Two local men have been appointed as speakers in the convention program during the weekend. Manning will conduct a 30 minute service Sunday morning using the theme, "Qualified Ministers Teach Publicly." Manning, too, will act as music director for the convention. Larry Mazingo, assistant minister of the local congregation, will head a 15 minute demonstration on the program Friday evening. His part is entitled, "Qualified Teacher in Action." Mazingo also has been appointed to head the advertising department for the event. C. E. Manning, local minister and business man in Pitt county, was appointed as head of the literature department. He pointed out that upwards of 10,000 pieces of Bible literature is expected to be distributed to the public in and around the assembly city. The highlight of the convention is slated for Sunday, Jan. 26 at 3 p.m. when L. E. Reusch will give a public discourse on "What Are the Prospects For Lasting Peace?" Pitt Sanitarian Elected Head Of District Group

E. L. Kilpatrick, senior sanitarian at the Pitt County Health Department, has been elected president of the Northeastern Sanitarians Section. His election to the top office of the 25-county group came Friday at a business meeting of sanitarians in Rocky Mount. He is the second of Pitt County's senior sanitarians to head the group, following W. M. Pate who is a past president. Following the business session, Kilpatrick, Pate and Pitt's assistant sanitarian, L. D. Batts, attended a study course on radiation. The course, presented by the North Carolina State Board of Health and the U. S. Public Health Service, included discussions of radiation detection, detective devices and sources of radiation. Particular emphasis was placed on discovery of radiation in food and water supplies as well as in the air and in industrial wastes.
