Venezuela's Dictator-President Ousted After Brief Popular Uprising

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — President Marcos Perez Jimenez fled from Venezuela today, but new bloodshed marred the wild public jubilation which followed the dictator's downfall.

The government radio network appealed repeatedly for the crowds to return to work and clear the streets. A number of this lineup was announced for the new governing junta: Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal, president; air force Col. Abel Romero Villate, army Col. Roberto Casanova, guard Col. Carlos Luis Arague and Col. Pedro Jose Quevedo for the military institutes.

(The State Department in Washington said it had no reports of any injuries to the 40,000 Americans in Venezuela. American investments in the oil and other industries there total more than three billion dollars.)

formed a vocal opposition group throughout the dictator's rule, turned out in ever larger numbers to protest against the government. The final act in the dictator's downfall began with a general strike Tuesday—a traditional Latin-American way of forcing out an unpopular regime.

The junta at once began restoring some of the liberties the dictator suppressed. In addition to freedom for all political prisoners it ordered all officers who took part in the short-lived New Year's revolt restored to their ranks. Punishments against them were canceled.

As the first ballot box was being opened, Interior Minister Lanza announced that Perez Jimenez's re-election was "overwhelming."

Air force units at Maracay revolted before dawn on New Year's day and sent jet fighters into sweeps over the capital. Some army units joined the revolt. But the government had heard of the plot in advance and disrupted the rebels' plans by arresting their top leaders. Most of the army stayed with Perez Jimenez, and the uprising collapsed the next day.

Young Rocket-Maker Is Ready To Try Again, If He's Allowed

By JIMMY ELLIS Reflector Staff Writer Seven weeks ago, at Cape Canaveral, Florida, a Vanguard rocket blew up on its launching pad. No one was hurt, but American prestige suffered badly.

When the rocket exploded, pieces of it were scattered around Gardner's yard. He recovered all of them except the nose cone and a small portion of the exhaust section. Gardner was struck by two of the pieces despite the fact that he was standing an estimated 20 feet from the launching site and that the rocket was set to go off at an angle in the opposite direction.

He doesn't know, however, when he will start to work on his second rocket. The science class he was making the rocket for requires that the projects "work" when they are turned in to the teacher in February.

The fact that it exploded was not as surprising to Gardner as the fact that the rocket got off the ground in the first place. "I didn't expect it to move," he said. "I had tried once before, earlier Monday night, to fire it and the fuse didn't ignite the powder. It went up about 15 feet, at an angle, and then just blew up. "It sounded like two pieces of dynamite blowing up and it shook the windows in the house."

Gardner's plans for his next rocket include ideas for a stronger casing and an electrical fuse. He has enough materials left from his first venture to make a new batch of firing powder.

He doesn't know whether his mother will let him make another one. "I'll do it, though, if she lets me. Otherwise, I'll have to look for something else."

Car Turns Over, Woman Injured

A 22-year-old Negro woman sustained serious back and neck injuries when the automobile in which she was riding turned over on the Statesburg Rd. early last night.

She was identified as Lealia Harris of Greenville Rt. 2. According to reports this morning she is still on the critical list and is undergoing treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Wilkes was said to be the driver of the automobile involved in the mishap. Following an investigation, Williams charged him with reckless driving and driving on the wrong side of the road.

Took It On Chin At Examination

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Lonnie Clarence Gordon, 22, of Gastonia took it on the chin during his preinduction physical examination.

Gordon fainted while standing in line and broke his jaw in two places when he hit the floor.

The Selective Service Board is paying Gordon's medical bills and will foot a second physical exam for Gordon — when he's well.

Warned Against Making Headlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — House members were cautioned today against trying to make headlines as they weighed a 400-million-dollar submarine-building amendment to the $1,410,000,000 emergency defense bill.

The pending bill, among other things, would finance construction of three nuclear submarines capable of carrying the 1,500-mile range Polaris ballistic missile.

This advice against voting more money than the House Appropriations Committee recommended came from Rep. Mahon (D-Tex), chairman of a subcommittee that drafted the bill.

Shearer, of Shelbyville, Ind., addressed about 270 Jaycees here for a district meeting. "We must be willing to solve our problems in our communities," he said, "or someone else will step in to solve them."

One TV Station Plans Begin Using 'Subliminal Perception'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Let's suppose now, that in a couple of months some strapping young chap springs from his chair in front of the TV, grabs his coat and streaks down town to join the Army—without knowing why. Well, some people might say it was a simple case of subliminal perception.

This hard-to-pronounce combination is actually nothing more than a somewhat creepy device for sneaking things into your head without your conscious knowledge.

Arnold said his station won't spring the thing on its viewers without giving them a chance to duck. "Before we put it on," he said, "we'll say: 'We're about to transmit a subliminal message.'"

Curtis Explains Mental Illness At AAUW Meet

In explanation of the work of the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic, Paul Curtis, social worker for the institution, showed the American Association of University Women Monday evening a film on causes of mental illness in children and the means of treatment used by the workers in a clinic.

After his introduction to the group by Mrs. David Proctor, chairman of the Social Studies Committee of the AAUW, Curtis prefaced the showing of the film by pointing out the seriousness of the problem of mental health in America today.

"Research shows," he declared, "that around 53 percent of all hospital beds are occupied by patients suffering some form of mental illness; and that takes no account of the thousands not hospitalized who are needing help in this respect."

Pointing out that much mental illness in adult life stems from childhood experiences, perhaps not even remembered by the adult, he said that this shows the need to prevent emotional twists in children.

A mental health clinic, he said, deals primarily with preventive work with children or adults seemingly about to develop mental illness. One third of the patients seen in the clinic here are children.

Such a clinic employs three types of workers, he said—the social workers to investigate the environment in relation to the patient; the clinical psychologist, to test the patient himself; and the psychiatrist, to put these two findings together and determine how to set to work to help the patient.

Curtis has had experience in many types of work with mental health, having served on the faculty of medicine in the department of psychiatry at the University of Maryland as well as worked in guidance centers, the "out-patient" psychiatric department of Dakota State Hospital, and other mental health clinics.

Preceding the program, a business meeting was conducted by the president, Dr. Elizabeth Utterback.

At the social hour, hostesses were Miss Bessie McNeil, Miss Louise Williams, Mrs. D. S. Spain Jr., and Miss Emma Hooper, Miss Lucile Turner, and Miss Lois Grigsby.

30 Years Ago Today

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Stokes Jr. were hosts at a delightful buffet last evening. The Stokes home on East Ninth Street was lovely with decorations carrying out a red and green color scheme. A silver basket of red roses and low candle holders with red candles formed the centerpiece for the dining table. Mrs. H. Dall Laughinghouse served salad and creamed chicken. Mrs. J. H. Blount passed sandwiches and Mrs. Malcolm Thompson poured coffee. After supper bride was enjoyed. Mrs. James Picklen was winner of the high score prize for ladies, an antique lamp. Dr. Malcolm Thompson, making high score for the men, was awarded a novelty ash tray. The table prizes were attractive Valentines. An ice course was served following the games.

Members Continue Gastronomic Trip; To Visit France Sunday

Having had a pleasant "visit" to Holland and the Lowland countries, members of the Moose Lodge board a train, speed through Belgium, change trains at Antwerp, and take one of the little French tourist trains for a slow trip through the French countryside. They will arrive in Paris for the Sunday buffet of French foods.

The menu includes: LA DAUBE (Braised Beef), LA ROUELLE DE VEAU A LA COCOTTE AUX CEPES FARGIS (Fillet of Veal, stewed with mushrooms), LES ROUSSETTES (Corn Fritters), LES PETITS POIS (Peas), Celery and Potato Salad, LES MADELEINES (Sponge Cake), LE CLAFOUTIS LIMOUSIN (Fruit Tart), French Bread, Beverages, and French Lemon Ice Cream. There will also be several items of American food on the buffet.

A film on life in Paris and the country life of the French farmer will be shown. The display material was furnished through the courtesy of the French Government Tourist Office, 610 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y.

The Moose Tour has attracted the attention of one of the largest Tour Agencies in New York City, and they have offered to provide a "free" tour for one of the members. Following the gastronomic tour provided, of course, that 18 other members agree to sign up for an air tour of Europe! When the group leaves France, they will head south for sunny Italy and have an all-Italian menu, as well as the services of an Italian chef to prepare and supervise the serving.

The buffet is served from 5:30-7:00 p.m. every Sunday, and members, families and friends of the Moose are invited to attend.

Tryon Palace Story Told Book Lovers

AYDEN—The Book Lovers' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. J. L. Jenkins.

The president, Mrs. G. G. Dixon, presided over the business session. She welcomed two guests, Mrs. Sadie Lofton of Beaufort and Mrs. P. R. Taylor.

Mrs. Dixon gave a paper on the Restoration of Tryon Palace. She took members back to the time when the place was first built and told how the people of the state disliked Governor Tryon because he was taxing them so heavily in order to build his palace.

A little girl of New Bern, who was later Mrs. Maude Moore Latham of Greensboro, dreamed during her childhood that perhaps someday she might see the historic building rise nobly again on its foundations.

It was through her efforts and handsome gifts, with the help of others, among whom was Miss Gertrude Carraway of New Bern, that the building is nearing its completion. Mrs. Latham gave a handsome collection of antique furnishings, valued at $125,000, on January 1950.

So great was her interest in the project that following her death on April 8, 1951, it was learned that in addition to the trust funds, one being $100,000 in 1944 and the other $150,000 in 1945, she had bequeathed her estate, then valued at $1,250,000 to the Tryon Palace Commission to assure the complete restoration.

Mrs. Dixon gave a complete description of the building and said it would be open to the public soon.

The hostess, Mrs. Jenkins, served a sweet course with coffee.

Mrs. McCormick Wins High Score

AYDEN—At her home on Terrace Drive Wednesday night, Mrs. Leslie Stocks entertained for her club members.

At the end of play Mrs. Bonnie Ruth McCormick was given a cutlery set for high, while a salt and pepper set was given Mrs. Jack Collins as runnerup. Low, a wallet was given Mrs. Wilbur Dunn.

The hostess served a salad plate with coffee.

Dr. Steelman Addresses League

Dr. Lela Steelman spoke on the United States and its Alliances at the general meeting of the League of Women Voters Wednesday night at the Y Hut. A film strip gave visual emphasis to her informative speech.

George Washington first started America's tradition against involvement in peace-time alliances and the policy continued through the 19th century. The country was busy settling the land all the way to the Pacific and had an isolation policy. Now, however, the United States has entered into alliances with 42 nations, and includes every continent except Africa.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization has its own army of five million, and states that if one of the 15 member nations is attacked, it is the same as if all 15 nations were attacked.

There is no army involved in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and that treaty is not as binding as NATO. Eight Pacific and Asian nations are members.

The United States does not belong to the Baghdad Pact, but backs the member nations with arms and economic aid. Four-fifths of Europe's oil comes from the Middle East.

Under the Eisenhower Doctrine the United States will send troops to aid any country attacked by Communists and also provides economic aid.

Twenty countries of South America and the United States are joined in the Rio Pact. America also has military ties with other countries.

The 12 nations led by Russia make up the Communist bloc. They have a manpower count of 900,000,000, one-third of mankind. The West and its allies have 700,000,000 people.

Following the general meeting, members of the Education Study Committee met at the home of Mrs. Ralph Brimley to set up a procedure for the study.

Woman's Club Hears Review

AYDEN—A review of the book, "No Wings in the Manse," was presented at the January meeting of the Pine Arts Department of the Ayden Woman's Club by Mrs. J. B. Spillman of Greenville.

The purpose of the contest is to promote a greater interest in art among the school children of Ayden. Ribbons will be awarded for first, second, and third best pictures in each grade. A medal will be awarded for the best picture in the exhibit.

Refreshments were served after the business session by the hostess, Mrs. Tom Babington, and co-hostesses, Mrs. Jim Abernathy, Mrs. T. G. Worthington, Mrs. Hubert Worthington and Mrs. Robert Booth.

Famed Fashion Designer Follows Sun To Miami

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

A fashion designer must know the locale of her designs, says Frances Sider, a transplanted New Yorker now turning out sun-and-surf styles in Miami.

For some 20 years, Mrs. Sider designed bathing suits and beach wear in a skyscraper office spang in the middle of the New York garment district. When she looked out the window she saw other office buildings of concrete and steel, and far below the teeming, crowded canyons where trucks, taxis and people fought for space.

She was the first fashion designer to be granted a patent on the construction of a bathing suit — her famous "sunbody," which provided an inner foundation.

Then one day Mrs. Sider grew tired of the scenery outside her office window and said, "The heck with it!" She packed up and departed for Florida with her young daughter, Pam, spent several years soaking up sunshine and atmosphere and then went back to her designing, in a bright, modern Miami salon where she can look out the window and see palm trees and tropical skies.

"It makes all the difference," says this veteran designer, "to live where your clothes are worn. I've discovered the reasons for making swim suits in light, bright colors, for designing beach coats that protect you from sand and

sun. "I've found why girls like a skirt they can slip on over a bathing suit to make a sun dress, and I've learned what colors are most flattering to a sun-tanned skin. You can understand the theory of these things in New York, but you have to be on the spot to get the real feeling of what you're doing."

Church Women Began Study

"The Nature and Mission of the Church" is the study topic for the Women of Presbyterian Churches this year.

On Monday night the first in a series of such programs was conducted by Mrs. Wesley Harvey, program chairman for the year.

After Mrs. Harvey defined the Church as God's creation, several members presented Biblical references as to the history and background of the church.

A helpful discussion on "Our Responsibility in the Local Church" was directed by the leader.

Mrs. J. Howard Moye, president, opened the meeting with prayer and presided over the business session.

Jo Anne Jefferson Celebrates At Party

FOUNTAIN—Miss Jo Anne Jefferson celebrated her seventh birthday on Thursday afternoon with a party given her by her mother, Mrs. William W. Jefferson, and her aunt, Mrs. J. L. Doster, in the Fellowship Hall of the Fountain Presbyterian Church.

Upon the arrival of her friends, the honoree greeted them at the door. Games were played, after which they were seated around a banquet table centered with a birthday cake decorated in pink and white and topped with "Happy Birthday to Jo Anne" and seven candies.

Each place was marked with a decorated plate, napkin, a miniature pink swan holding peanuts and a colorful hat which each one donned. After Jo Anne cut the first slice, Mrs. Lyman Eason and Mrs. R. L. Peele assisted the hostesses in serving the cake and ice cream.

After the refreshments, the honoree opened her many gifts. The favors for the guests were horns.

Among the approximately 35 guests were Jo Anne's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Logue Corbett of Macesfield, and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Jefferson of Fountain.

Jimenez Ruled Venezuela Nearly 10 Years As A 'Benevolent' Dictator

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Plump, bearded Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez ruled oil-rich Venezuela and its six million people from behind the scenes and as benevolent dictator for nearly 10 years.

Though he seldom made big headlines — he rarely made speeches and never resorted to bombast — he had big ambitions to make Venezuela the leading economic nation of Latin America.

As the 43-year-old leader of a nation with important iron mines and the world's second richest oil fields, he made great progress toward his objective. Believing Western-style democracy bred chaos and disorder, he tried to follow a Portuguese-style dictatorship.

But he apparently overreached himself when he had himself overwhelmingly re-elected to a new five-year term as president last Dec. 15 in a yes-or-no plebiscite. There was no opponent on the ballot.

With a revolver on his desk, Laureano Vallenilla Lanz, the interior minister, announced the "overwhelming" election to newsmen as a television receiver in the room beamed the opening of the first ballot box.

Perez Jimenez was somewhat of a youthful prodigy. He was chief of staff at 31, the key man in a military junta ruling the country at 34 and president at 38. He had the appearance more of a slightly pompous businessman than a dictator. Because of near-sightedness he wore large black-rimmed glasses.

The son of a country school-teacher, he entered the army and was trained for two years in Peruvian military schools. As a captain he was active in plotting against the long dictatorship of Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez and his successors.

A bloody revolution, which was supported by the leftist Democratic Action party, overthrew President Gen. Isaias Medina Angarita Oct. 18, 1945.

The military leaders turned the government over to the Democratic Action party, led by Romulo Betancourt, and the novelist Romulo Gallegos became president.

But the military became dissatisfied with the softness of the regime toward what they called unruly labor elements. Gallegos was overthrown in a coup Feb. 15, 1948.

Perez Jimenez became defense minister and the backbone of the ruling junta. Lt. Col. Carlos Delgado Chalbaud, nominal president of the junta, was assassinated Nov. 13, 1950, as the upshot of rivalry with Perez Jimenez over who would be the constitutionally elected president.

Perez Jimenez stepped into his shoes and was confirmed as president by the Constituent Assembly in April 1953.

The nation made rapid strides in prosperity on the basis of an oil boom since 1950. Gross national production rose to nearly six billion dollars, almost double. Oil production almost doubled, rising to 2,700,000 barrels a day. Iron ore mining, mostly by the United States Steel Corp. mines at Cerro Bolivar, increased by a third to 15 million tons.

Skyscrapers and hotels multiplied in Caracas. New capital from the United States and other countries flowed in. About 40,000 Americans, mostly employees of large corporations investing in new enterprises, flocked into the country.

But along with the new factories, stores, roads, bridges, push apartments and a few schools were shanty towns outside Caracas and other cities.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Rafael Arias Blanco in a pastoral letter accused the administration of ignoring the maldistribution of wealth, neglecting education, suppressing labor, showing unconcern toward unemployment and torturing political opponents.

Most laborers were paid only about $3 a day. Student disorders in February 1956 followed a strike protesting midyear examination under a new education law.

Younger officers grew dissatisfied with their lot, feeling they had little chance for advancement over the older men surrounding Perez Jimenez. Air force units, in which young officers are numerous, revolted Jan. 1 and bombed and machine-gunned parts of the capital.

Lacking central direction, the revolt fizzled the first day.

Trouble with the Roman Catholic Church developed after five priests, including the acting editor of the hierarchy's newspaper, were arrested on the heels of the revolt. The priests were released after a Cabinet shakeup Friday.

Perez Jimenez married the former Flor Chalbaud and had four daughters. Formerly very dignified, in recent years he had shown signs of unbending. He interrupted his long hours of hard work occasionally for garden parties, auto races, holidays at the seashore, baseball games and attendance at such events as the Caracas appearance of the touring couples of the Folies Bergere.

Inventory Shows A Larger Theft

WINTERVILLE—Authorities are continuing their investigation of the break-in at the A. G. Cox Manufacturing Company here over the past weekend.

A second inventory has revealed that $555.85 in cash and checks was taken from the firm's safe along with a number of other valuable papers and documents. On Monday it was reported that $420 was missing.

Winterville Police Chief D. C. Martin said this morning, "We are continuing our investigation but have not come up with anything that can be pinned down."

"There's one thing we are sure of and that is the party or parties involved in the theft were only after money."

The theft was discovered early Monday morning by an employee who told Police he did not notice anything wrong when he walked past the building, located in downtown Winterville, Sunday afternoon. Martin said it was possible that the break-in occurred late Sunday night or early Monday morning.

Entrance was gained into the building through a rear door. Vernon Cox, operator of the firm, said the safe was on day lock when he left Saturday. Authorities said the outside door of the large safe could have been opened without any trouble. The lock on the money compartment was forced.

The Golden Scalp

By PAUL W. FAIRMAN

Cory Dane's heart was with the red men, but his people were white and he and his friend, the Duke, had witnessed the fates of families in wagon trains which had entered lands of the hostile Sioux. They try in vain to warn away one led by Luke Stafford. Instead, Luke's daughter, a girl with golden hair, induces Cory to accompany the train westward — into what both Cory and the Duke know to be certain disaster. Squire Davis is the first casualty.

CHAPTER THREE

The holiday mood of the pilgrims had vanished like a mist at sunrise. There was a heavy, sombre atmosphere permeating the length of the train. The death of Davis had jarred them loose from their rosy dreams.

One of their party had been torn and mutilated by phantoms — by nonexistent fiends in a matter of seconds. They had seen nothing nor had they heard anything — yet death sat grinning on their trail.

As the sun passed over them and slid down the sky, the narrow valley widened, and by camp-time, they were in relatively flat country with the vanguard of the Rockies looming eight days to the west.

The Duke, riding beside, Dane said, "Lucky it ain't Pawnees we're dealing with. Pawnees would have cut us to pieces in that narrow gorge."

Dane agreed with a nod of his head. He and the Duke knew Indians as accountants know figures. The different tribes had individual likes and dislikes relative to both war and peace. The Pawnees were raiders — never fighters. They struck at the helpless and vanished like puffs of smoke. They had not the stomach for combat as did their terrible cousin, the Apache. Backed against a wall, a Pawnee would cringe, while an Apache brave, for all his cruelty and ferocity, would die by his own hand.

But of all the tribes, Dane thought the Sioux to be most worthy of respect. They were a proud nation and they fought in the open, giving no quarter and asking none.

Dane swung his pony over toward the wagon train and pulled up beside the tight-faced Stafford. "Better make it a close circle tonight," he said. "They'll probably strike early in the morning."

Stafford's nerves were raw. An ex-blacksmith from Illinois, he had been chosen leader because of his popularity and great amiable bulk. He'd appreciated the honor, but was only now realizing the grim responsibility with which he'd also been vested.

"Great God!" Stafford yelled. "Where are they? What kind of skulkin' swine are they to fight like this? Why don't they come out in the open like men?"

"They will," Dane said, quietly. "I'm going to do a little looking around. I'll be back."

Dane and the Duke rode off to the north side by side. They traveled in silence, moving toward a low ridge some five miles away.

Arriving at their destination they threaded a way between jagged lava faults until they reached a place where the ridge began losing form. Now they traveled with caution. Soon they stopped.

Below them stretched a wide, flat plain full of color, brilliance and activity.

"They haven't moved a foot," the Duke observed.

Dane stared down at the scene. There was little change from the time he and the Duke had last seen it. Thousands of naked Indians in clusters; ponies on leathers or milling in the natural enclosures where the plain joined the lava ridges encircling it. Splashes of bright color on gauzy war bonnets. And an almost complete lack of living accommodations.

None of the signs of permanent habitation were here. No tepees save one, a large brilliantly colored dome in which Black Eagle would be seated — stern-visaged.

Even now, Dane thought, the great Sioux warrior might be listening to the reports of his scouts; might be learning that, at last, the wagon train was in the open, waiting to feel the savage brunt of fire arrow and tomahawk.

But another factor indicated that the news was already in. There was a certain restlessness in the vast picture — an atmosphere sensed by the experienced Dane rather than seen. The braves, he decided, were even now aware of what the following dawn would bring.

The Duke's pony stirred nervously. "We could move on," the little scout said, wistfully. "We could slide out of here and put a lot of distance behind us by morning."

Dane nodded. "Good idea."

"What?"

"If you'd hike right now."

"Oh," the Duke replied, sadly.

"Well, let's be getting back." Back at the wagon camp, Dane drew Stafford aside.

"No cattle in the circle tonight," he said. It was strange how he'd assumed command by directing the actions of Stafford. And even stranger how the big leader took the commands almost without question. This time, however, he was doubtful.

"But our oxen," he said. "We can't move without them."

"There'll be fire and gun-shots and screaming before we move on," Dane said. "With Sioux on one side and a herd of stampeding oxen on the other, we'd sure be through. Drive them out a half mile and leave them."

There was surprisingly little grumbling at this order. Nor were there many objections to Dane's demand for fires out after dusk.

Gradually, night deepened. For a time there was a sickle-moon. Then clouds came to bring complete blackness.

Dane selected a spot beneath the Stafford wagon. Here he stretched out his blanket and laid his guns carefully within reach. The Duke was further on around the arc of the circle, similarly bedded down.

For a time Dane sat cross-legged, staring out into the darkness. In a way he resented the urge that held him in this death trap. What good, he asked himself, was knowledge, years of experience, if you came at last into a slaughter pen with a mob of saddle-pated pilgrims. He was aware, the while, of a form moving toward him from within the wagon circle. Then a hand touched his arm and a voice said:

"It's self-sacrificing of you and your partner to stay with us."

It was the soft voice of Patience Stafford and there was a senseless trembling inside Dane's chest.

"It's all right," he said, gruffly. "We like it here."

"Those beasts," she said with sudden heat. "I wish every murdering savage was dead and underground!"

The fluttering inside Dane stopped instantly.

"You're wrong, Miss Stafford. They aren't bad people. Not bad at all."

He heard her sharp intake of breath.

"Why how can you say that? You saw how they murdered poor Squire Davis!"

"Yes, I saw that. And I've seen a lot more in my lifetime. But most of the Indian's brutality was learned from the white man. I saw Davis, but I've also seen Indians squaws torn and mutilated beyond description. I've seen red men mowed down in cold blood even when they came in friendship. It never occurred to an Indian to break his work until he saw it done by the white man. It was beyond his code to torture and slaughter indiscriminately until the white man taught him how."

"Why you're — you're little better than —"

"The white man came here as an invader," Dane went on. "For that reason alone, he deserved no mercy from the Indian, and yet the Indian made treaties with the white man, openly deeding him vast stretches of land to which, from the Indian's point of view, he had no right. Then the white man broke those treaties and cut Indians to pieces at every opportunity.

Patience Stafford had drawn back slightly, but she remained silent.

"There are a few thousand Indians waiting to kill us in the morning. They hate us — certainly. They feel about us exactly the way we'd feel about an invader into our land."

"You sound like — an Indian yourself," she accused.

"I lived with them when I was a child. I think I know them as well as any white man could. I have great respect for them."

"Then why are you here? Why aren't you out there with them, waiting to kill us?"

There was a minute of silence before Dane replied.

"That was a decision I made a long time ago," he said. "When I got old enough to reason, I knew that a man had to be all one thing or all another. He couldn't be half and half — so I'm here because I'm a white man and I cling to my own people. I'm helping my own people take a land to which they have no moral right. But they're my people and that's that."

His voice turned suddenly brusque.

"Why don't you go about your business? Why don't you go to bed? You may not have another chance for a long time."

Without a word, Patience Stafford faded back into the thick darkness and was gone. Dane sat motionless for a while. Then he stretched out on his blanket, his eyes open and staring upward toward the floor of the big Conestoga. After long hours, he fell into a hair-trigger sleep.

The attack came with the first fingers of dawn. It began with a sound like that of an approaching herd of thousands of hoofbeats pounding the hard prairie. Thunder — broadening and deepening. Then came the storm — a rain of hissing arrows — timed to the chilling war-cry of the Sioux.

The naked herd moved in from the north, swerved, and formed an outer circle around the beleaguered wagons — a whirling ring of fury and flying death. There were a few rifles among the attackers, but their main weapon was the short-bow, from which came the monotonous spat — spat — spat of feathered death.

Dane crouched inside one wheel of the big wagon. From here he sent out a methodical stream of lead — each pellet knocking a shadow from atop a larger shadow. He was a machine, a thing without nerves. He could have been shooting hides out of a herd of buffalo.

Now he crawled from beneath the wagon and sought the leader, Stafford. He found the man crouched beside a wagon pouring shots into the Sioux.

"Put five men on the wet sacks," Dane yelled. "We got to beat our fires!"

As he spoke a burning arrow fantailed in and burrowed its stone jerked it away and the shaft snapped. He stamped out the fire and pushed Stafford back from his post.

"Get going," Dane said, sharply.

Swiftly, Dane judged the progress of the battle. He gave his attention to the south half of the circle. The Duke was covering the north half.

There was discordant screaming now. Quick shrieks of agony told Dane that death was visiting from all sides. The wet-sack squad was doing a good job, lashing out fires as quickly as they started. But, in so doing, the men exposed themselves and soon others would have to take up the task.

WITH A BANG

DOVER, Ohio (AP)—When the City Council president, Earl E. Mathias, cast his first deciding vote in about five years recently, he did it with a bang.

Someone had fastened some caps to his gavel.

The hull of the frigate Constitution, otherwise known as "Old Ironsides," was made from a live oak taken from St. Simon's Island, Ga.

Sputnik-Age Programs Tried As Experiment

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — New Sputnik-age programs designed to advance gifted students as fast as possible are being tried here— including one combining high school and college at the same time.

Twenty-five exceptional high school seniors will be assigned, in the new semester beginning Feb. 3, to a college freshman course at Glendale College in a major academic subject for their first period. The subject will be mathematics, science, English, history or psychology.

Then the standout seniors, already selected for the pilot program, will return to Glendale and Hoover high schools for a full day's work at senior high level.

"They'll receive college credit and will be treated in every way as college freshmen," said Dr. James H. Williams, superintendent of Glendale's public schools.

If the program proves successful, Dr. Williams said, it will be enlarged to include all students capable of participating in it.

The experiment is only one of several pilot projects by which this district like others, a spokesman said, is "trying to respond to the present urgency, the need for scientists and trained leaders especially in academic subjects."

In another experiment in elementary schools, the more capable learners are brought together in one classroom for perhaps three periods a week. There they do research or project study that is advanced for their age.

At junior and senior high school levels whole classes in algebra, science and English are made up of exceptionally apt pupils. They do more advanced assignments than their fellows in regular classes.

Red Cross first aid kits and auto-identification markers were issued last night to seven members of the Greenville Rescue Squad by the Pitt County Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The presentation, made by Chapter Chairman James S. Ficklen Jr., went to members of the Rescue Squad who hold valid advanced first aid certificates or instructor's certificates in first aid from the Red Cross. The 16-unit first aid kit will be carried in the Rescue Squad members' automobiles which will be identified by the special markers Ficklen also presented.

Rescue Squad members who received the first aid kits and markers last night were Dr. Sam H. White II, Rescue Squad captain, Stuart Savage, Roy Hardee, Craven Hughes, Graham Quinn, Claude Christopher, and Lyman Nethercutt. They will form a Red Cross

Mobile First Aid Unit in cooperation with the Rescue Squad. Several members of the Rescue Squad did not receive their kits during the regular presentation period. Shortly before Ficklen was to hand out the equipment, a call came in for the Rescue Squad and those who were attending the meeting went out on the call.

Paris (AP)—A two-day National Assembly debate on foreign affairs ended last night with a 343-224 vote of confidence in Premier Felix Gaillard's government.

The endorsement of Gaillard's foreign policies came after both the Premier and Foreign Minister Christian Pineau told Parliament France must arm with ballistic missiles able to strike Soviet bases.

Referring to Soviet warnings to Western European nations not to permit U.S. missile bases, Gaillard asked: "Why should those in the other camp who possess these missiles already, and who doubtless have them already installed, forbid us to possess them ourselves?"

Pineau said no agreement has been reached by France on a U.S. offer to install intermediate range missiles in NATO nations. Before the government would agree to admit the missiles, he said, France would insist on a veto over their use.

UAW Convention Ready To Vote On Profit-Sharing

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers' special convention on bargaining strategy was ready to vote today on Walter P. Reuther's profit-sharing plan for the auto industry.

The UAW president appeared confident that he had ample strength among the 3,000 delegates to win approval of the plan. It would give auto workers a one-quarter slice of a company's profits over 10 per cent on net capital before taxes.

In an hourlong opening debate on the plan, the red-haired labor chief bristled at a delegate's suggestion that it "appears we're serving as a rubber stamp."

Reuther announced that General Motors President Harlow H. Curtice had rejected the union's invitation to address the convention on what he believed should be its bargaining goals this spring.

The delegates listened politely as Reuther's administrative assistant, Jack Conway, read Curtice's letter. Curtice urged the convention to "adopt a (wage) program tailored to the economic facts of life" instead of demanding a share of profits.

Curtice said, "I can make our position clear without a personal appearance."

He renewed a proposal he made last fall that the present three-year contracts, which run out around June 1, be extended for two years. He said this would mean an increase in the basic wage rates of 6 cents an hour or 2 1/2 per cent of wage rates, whichever is greater, on May 29 and a like increase a year later, or a total increase in basic wages of at least 12 cents an hour over a two-year period.

Earlier, in keynoting the convention, Reuther said, "Mr. Curtice was the first to reply rejecting our proposal. He said it was foreign to the free enterprise system. . . . He said it would undermine confidence. I think it will spread confidence by giving people employment and purchasing power."

Reuther retorted, "We only told you our thinking. The companies rejected our thinking. We could have been criticized justly if we had not given you time to think it over."

Sell His Horses For Board Bill

NEWTON, N.C. (AP)—A sheriff's auction has disposed of 10 horses and nine colts, owned by former House Speaker Larry I. Moore of Wilson, to satisfy a two-year-old board bill for the animals.

Papers reporting the sale were filed in the sheriff's office here yesterday.

The animals, which included 15 Tennessee Walking Horses (five of them colts) and four American saddle bred colts, brought $2,670 at the auction. The sale followed legal action by Ernest J. Love and Charlie Little Jr. seeking a board bill which they said totaled $3,464.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

The North State Conference Commissioner C. R. Hinshaw announced last week that East Carolina College had been forced to give up three conference victories by forfeit, due to the fact that the school used an ineligible player.

Today, East Carolina issued a statement indicating the school's stand on the ruling.

Athletic Director N. M. Jorgensen stated this morning that "We feel that the Commissioner has taken no legal action thus far. Our contention is that the Commissioner did not proceed by the rules and bylaws of the conference constitution in this matter, and, therefore, has taken no legal action."

Hinshaw Was Wrong

Hinshaw, of High Point College, who is the acting North State Commissioner, failed to follow the procedure laid down by the constitution in presenting his facts concerning the case. Nor did he follow the correct procedure in handing down the drastic ruling that ECC would lose three games.

The Conference rules state clearly that whenever any party finds authentic evidence which indicates that a school is using or has used an ineligible player, the party must submit a written statement with evidence to the Conference and that the Conference must, in turn, submit a copy of that evidence to the school in question. An investigation is then to be conducted.

Hinshaw failed to do either. It was he who came up with the "evidence." He did not present his evidence in written form to the Conference and he didn't inform East Carolina of his findings. The school's first knowledge of the incident came in a letter from Hinshaw which stated that the three games had already been taken away.

Up To Hinshaw, Now

Coach Porter stated today that "our position is that the action taken thus far is illegal, null and void, and that unless the Commissioner carries his alleged findings through the proper channels, there is no case."

Porter dispatched a letter to Hinshaw last week, stating this to be ECC's policy in the situation. No further action has been taken by the Commissioner as yet. "We've done all we can do," Jorgensen said. "We have stated that we did not deliberately use an ineligible ballplayer, that, according to all our records the boy (Craig Reid) was eligible. We feel that the Commissioner was not just in the way he handled the thing."

And so it's up to Commissioner Hinshaw, now. Should Hinshaw take no further action—either to start the whole thing over again through proper channels, or to make a public correction—ECC will probably carry it to the Conference Committee when the league meets later this year.

As things stand now, East Carolina has been charged and has lost three games—officially, as far as the league is concerned. The Bucs are now occupying a fifth-place tie with Guilford with a 3-6 record. The ruling issued by Hinshaw last week knocked ECC off the top of the league (they had a 6-1 mark). Since that time, they have dropped two more loop games.

Not Much Of A Case

Outside observations indicate that Hinshaw would not have much of a case should he decide to carry his "findings" through proper channels and dig the whole mess up again. The NAIA found that ECC was not guilty of breaking eligibility rules as far as the NAIA organization was concerned. And a letter from Louisville Junior College (Reid transferred from there—without completing his graduation requirements—according to Hinshaw) indicates that Reid could play for ECC.

Another Mims-Boyd Bout Is Considered

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The stage was set today for a rematch between Holly Mims, veteran Washington scrapper, and Bobby Boyd, lanky puncher from Chicago, to decide which of these two mediocre middleweights is the better.

Mims and Boyd fought to a draw in the Auditorium Arena last night. Promoter Chris Dundee said later, "I'd love to rematch them."

Neither fighter was badly damaged in the 10-round scrap. Boyd hit the canvas in the middle of the eighth round after a solid right to the chin.

SC Has Surprising Play From Vets, Newcomers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS One of the major factors in the topsy-turvy Southern Conference basketball race—behind league champion West Virginia, that is—has been the surprising performance of a number of veterans and newcomers.

In most cases, the play of the newcomers has been on the pleasant and encouraging side. Some veterans, too, have come through in surprising fashion and some have been disappointing.

Even West Virginia, the nation's No. 1 team with 13 straight victories, has had its pleasant surprises. The Mountaineers have gotten their customarily good performance from veterans Lloyd Sharrar and Bob Smith.

But West Virginia has gotten much improved play from a couple of other veterans—Don Vincent, whose average is up six points a game from last year, and Joey Gardner, who has boosted his average five points a game—and a scintillating job from sophomore Jerry West, leading the team with a 16.8-point average in his first season of varsity competition.

The Citadel's all-veteran team—five sophomores and a junior—has performed up to last year's standards for the most part (Junior Teddy Weeks is down, but sophomores Art Musselman and Ray Graves are up) and has gotten a lift from freshman Dick Jones, averaging five points a game.

Two of George Washington's junior veterans, Gene Garilla and Bill Telasky, are about a point ahead of last year's average, but the Colonials' big gainers are junior Howard McDonald and sophomore Howard Bash, up five points each, and sophomore Ralph Kuze, averaging five points in his first year with the varsity.

Davidson has gotten its usual solid performance from veterans Semi Mintz and Dave Hollinsworth, though Mintz is four points under last year's average, and has picked up 10.4 points per game from freshman Bill Shinn and a four-point boost in his average by senior Sonny Ferguson.

Virginia Tech's success is directly the result of three freshmen—Bob Ayersman (19.6), Earl Gilbert (13.7) and Chris Smith (13.2)—who have pushed Gobler veterans into the background.

Only freshman Terry Litchfield (4.2) has cracked Richmond's veteran squad, but Terry Willis is up four points over last year and Phil Morris has added six to offset a slump by sophomore ace Butch Lambotte, down three.

William and Mary's improvement is the result of freshmen Jeff Cohen (12.9) and Bev Vaughn (11.3) and the surprising showing of junior Roy Lange, who's averaging 20.9 points per game this year compared with 8.8 last season.

Another big surprise has been Virginia Military Institute's Lee Southare, averaging 15.2 points this season compared with 3.9 last year. The Keydets also are getting improved scoring from juniors Ralph Lawson and Chuck Cotton and senior Chuck MacLeod, as well as sophomore Roy Quinn.

The loss of three stars from last year, including high scorer Lee Marshall, has hurt Washington and Lee. Dom Flora is his usual brilliant self and Frank Hoss has topped his average almost six points a game, but the Generals haven't uncovered anybody to take up the slack except senior Dave Nichols, averaging 10.1 points a game after a season's layoff.

Sophomore Tom Conard has topped his average for Furman from 2.3 points per game last year to a hefty 17 this season, but the Purple Paladins aren't getting last year's point production from Dick Wright, Steve Ross and Byron Pinson, all of whom are down at least four points a contest.

A good crowd is expected to attend the contest, which is being played to raise money for a junior high library. The PTA is sponsoring the game.

Coach Milton Reece's locals have met and defeated six opponents, including several Class AAA ball clubs. They have lost one game to Kingston.

Half-time ceremonies are slated for tomorrow night's game, which include presentation of new uniforms to the club by a local organization. There is expected to be a band and other entertainment on hand.

Reece's starting lineup tomorrow night will include Jimmy Jenkins, Alan McArthur, Benny Caraway, Billy Neal James, and Kenny Joyner. The game will begin at 7:30.

Jackets Hope They Lost In Time To Win

By ED WILKS

It might sound screwy, but maybe Georgia Tech has lost just in time to win in college basketball. Could be the 80-72 upset by Auburn last night was just what Tech needed before taking on Kentucky and Tennessee, running 1-2 in the Southeastern Conference, this weekend.

The defeat didn't hurt the Yellow jackets (10-6). It was a non-conference game. But it should have ploughed under any signs of complacency that may have cropped up after four consecutive victories.

There already had been some talk Tech might be ready to a giant upset. Vanderbilt Coach Bob Polk, beaten 81-60 by Tech last Saturday, was so impressed he figured Tech could beat Tennessee Saturday and then take Kentucky Monday.

That double kill would hoist Tech from third (4-2) to second in SEC play. Kentucky is the leader at 5-0 with Tennessee second at 3-1.

The upset came on a light night that also saw St. Bonaventure defeat Niagara 69-66 and Duquesne whip Toledo 67-54.

A great floor game and a 30-point scoring touch by Jimmy Lee paid off for Auburn, now 6-6.

Rex Frederick, Auburn's high scorer tied it 45-all with a free throw and seconds later gave Auburn the lead for keeps with a field goal just before he fouled out.

Terry Randall kept Tech in the game until the closing minutes. He was high for the Engineers with 20 points. Soph Dave Denton, who has sparked Tech's surge since regaining his eligibility, scored 19.

The schedule — marking time during mid-term examinations — picks up a bit tonight. The feature game is Wichita at Bradley in a Missouri Valley Conference game. Wichita is the leader at 3-0 with Bradley, ranked 10th nationally, third at 6-1.

Jim DeMaret Is Leading Field

By BOB MYERS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Three-time winner Jimmy DeMaret headed a select field of 42 professionals into the first round of the $15,000 Thunderbird Invitational golf tournament today, marking his first appearance on the 1958 winter circuit.

Sir James, the Texan from Houston who heads a staff of pros at Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., has been ailing of late and missed the opening events this year.

But there was nothing ailing for the last two years when Jimmy won the top money in successive appearances here.

Last year he had to dispose of Mike Souchak and Ken Venturi in an 18-hole playoff, which he did with a 68 to their respective 75 and 76.

In 1953, when the Thunderbird was a 54-hole tournament, Jimmy let fly an eagle two on the 18th hole to beat out a birdie scored by his old pal from Texas, Ben Hogan.

The tournament site is the exclusive Thunderbird Country Club, par 36-35-71 and 6,680 yards. Several invited pros, including 1957 Masters champion Doug Ford, Art Wall Jr., Down Finsterwald and Arnold Palmer, passed the Thunderbird to play in Panama.

But on the scene were such shotmakers as U.S. Open champion Dick Mayer, PGA champion Lionel Hebert and his brother, Jay; Billy Casper, winner of the recent Bing Crosby tournament, and Frank Stranahan, who captured the $35,000 Los Angeles Open three weeks ago.

Wilkinson Will Speak At ACC Award Jamboree

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Awards to the Atlantic Coast Conference player and coach of the year will be honored here tonight at the fifth annual football jamboree of the Greenville Touchdown Club.

Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson will address the gathering of about 525 coaches, sports writers and football fans.

Trophies and other awards as coach and player of the year go to Coach Earle Edwards and halfback Dick Christy, both of North Carolina State.

Fullback Hal McElhaney of Duke, winner of the Jacobs Blocking Trophy, is unable to attend the jamboree. The trophy will be presented in his behalf to his teammate, Eddie Rushton. The Triple-A high school awards for coach, back and linemen of the year will be presented respectively to Coach Charles Stuart of Dreher, halfback Jimmy Hardwick of Florence and center Jack Veronee of North Carlestown.

Loop-Leading Bears Are Picked To Topple G-Men

Greenville high school's cagers, free now from examinations, will have an edge in height and in depth tomorrow night at New Bern. The Phants' 16-man squad includes nine seasoned veterans who see constant action. The starting unit includes four boys over six feet tall. Farley is expected to start with 6-3 Steve Noble at center, 6-4 Peanut Nunn and 6-3 Dick Evans at forwards, 5-11 Wesley Hudson at one guard and 6-0 Walker Allen at the other.

Game time tomorrow night will start at 8:00. A jayvee contest is slated for 6:30. Should Greenville upset the Bears, it will put the Phantoms in front with a 4-1 mark and drop the Bears a notch with a 4-2. A Greenville loss would drop them into the second half of the league standings.

Greenville's game with Kingston, scheduled for last Tuesday night, was postponed due to the exams. They have a 3-1 mark. Coach J. F. Hockaday's New Bern club will be rated definite favorites tomorrow night on the Bear home court. They are picked eight-points better than the Phants.

Small, Strong The Bears have a small, experienced and strong ball club this season. They were picked by pre-season polls as one of the three top clubs in the league and have thus far looked better than either Greenville or Washington, the other two pre-season picks.

Hockaday's crew had disposed of Jacksonville, Roanoke Rapids, Elizabeth City, and Kinston. They only loss thus far has come at the hands of Washington.

Greenville's three victories were over Jacksonville, Roanoke Rapids, and Elizabeth City. They, too, lost to Washington. The clubs are very similar in record and the game is expected to be a close one tomorrow night. The home court advantage is expected to make the difference.

Hockaday's starting unit is expected to include three experienced veterans and two newcomers. A pair of All-Conference guards, Robert Gillikin and Jon Burwell, make up the spark-plug unit of the team. Burwell is currently the high point man, averaging close to 25 points against conference opponents. Jean Earl Worthington, a forward, is the other veteran on the club. The newcomers are forward Richard Toler and 6-5 center Aubrey Smith.

Ankle Troubles

BOSTON (AP)—Ted Williams and two doctors have quashed reports that the 39-year-old Boston Red Sox slugger's baseball career is endangered by broken ankle bones.

Williams told Boston sports writers by phone from his Florida home yesterday that he sprained the ankle on a fishing trip in Labrador last fall. He flatly denied any bones were broken.

A report in the Boston Traveler had said his future baseball status was "in jeopardy" because of two small broken bones in his right ankle.

Choice Narrowed For Remedy By Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reluctance of Supreme Court justices to serve on any commission to determine presidential disability apparently has narrowed the field of possible congressional action on this issue. Chief Justice Warren expressed the court's views in a letter to Rep. Keating (R-NY) yesterday. A Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing on disability proposals was postponed until tomorrow while members reassess the situation. House Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts said that substantial agreement on a House bill had been reached at a conference he held with Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex) and Rep. Celler (D-NY). He gave no details. Keating, who had advocated a commission with Supreme Court representation, said he won't press for any such provision. Other proposals have suggested that the Cabinet, congressional leaders, and combinations of various officials groups be authorized to decide whether a president is incapable of performing his duties. Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) announced he will offer a proposed constitutional amendment to authorize Congress to determine by resolution when a president is disabled. The Constitution provides that the vice president shall assume presidential duties if the President is unable to perform them, but it makes no provision for determining when a president is disabled. Warren said the justices agreed they ought not to serve on a commission which would determine presidential disability. "It has been the belief of all of us that because of the separation of powers in our government, the nature of the judicial process, the possibility of a controversy of this character coming to the court, and the danger of disqualification which might result in lack of a quorum, it would be inadvisable for any member of the court to serve on such a commission," Warren said.

British Scientists Score Atom Advances At Harwell

By NORMAN MOSS
 HARWELL, England (U.A.P.)—A bleak, windy oostime air base nestling in the hills outside this village is now Britain's atomic energy research establishment, where scientists are making vital advances in understanding and using the atom.

The latest of these experiments is aimed at harnessing for peace the immense power of the hydrogen bomb. An announcement of a victory in this respect is expected sometime today.

Harwell is a working community of scientists run the way scientists want it run. Its atmosphere, despite barbed wire and guards, is that of an intellectually high-powered campus.

In 1945, the British government decided on a crash program to give this country peaceful atomic power and its own atom bomb. But scientists, many of them pulled out of cloistered university lives for war work, were not enthusiastic.

Some top ones insisted they would come only if the center were run by one of their number, Sir John Cockcroft, and not by a government official as a civil service department.

Cockcroft, a honey, mild-mannered physicist and Nobel Prize winner who helped build the first atom bomb, is a representative of a new type of man the postwar years have thrown up: A brilliant scientist and an able administrator, who knows his way around the invisible world of the atom and the high circles of government.

He took over Harwell from the R.A.F. in 1946, and now the field has a staff of 6,000. It is organized into divisions, each with its own field of study, ranging from nuclear piles to medically useful isotopes, from fundamental research to atomic safety. The work is all research: Britain's atomic electricity and atomic weapons are produced elsewhere.

In one of Harwell's white brick laboratories, a team of scientists led by an Australian, a Canadian and an Englishman are believed to have carried out an experiment that resulted in the fusion of two atoms of processed hydrogen into one atom. This released a microscopic amount of energy. But this microscopic amount may be of world-shaking significance.

The Harwell experiment, if it proves successful, as expected, will be the first time hydrogen energy has been tapped on a non-explosive scale. Though H-power for industry may still be 10 years of work away, this would be a major breakthrough.

The Australian who led the team working on this is Dr. Peter Thonemann, a tall, bespectacled Melbourne man who lives with his wife and three children at nearby Oxford.

The Canadian is Dr. William Thompson, a 35-year-old Belfast-born British Columbian who came to Harwell from Canada's atomic research station at Chalk River, Ontario.

The Englishman is the oldest of the three at 47, Dr. Donald Fry, who came to Harwell in the mud and kerosene fire days of 1946, and helped devise Britain's uranium atom power stations.

Invited to tour Harwell—55 miles from London—with a party of newspapermen a while ago, I was surprised to find that I was not security checked. And surprised again when I found that one of the party was a Russian newsman operating out of Moscow. I said as much to a Harwell official.

"We don't class visitors as good or bad security risks," he said. "Secrets we don't show to anyone. The rest, and that's most of it, we show to visitors. We just watch you while you're here to make sure you don't go where you're not taken."

Sen. Johnson Frequently Gets Senate To Do 'The Impossible'

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — Lyndon B. Johnson, the most powerful man in the Senate and one of the best political operators to appear in Washington in years, has one thing in common with President Eisenhower, and one basic difference. Both men, going out of their way to avoid personal attacks on others, provide others with a minimum of ammunition for use against them. Johnson is about as free of criticism as Eisenhower was until the Sputniks went up. But where Johnson, a Texan and leader of the Senate Democrats since 1953, pays amazing attention to detail, Eisenhower leaves the detail work to his staff. Johnson is a self-conscious man who loves praise. He's also an egotistical man. His ability to keep both those facets of his character from public view and out of political maneuverings is a tribute to his ability as an operator. He's no fiery zealot. He's a compromiser. In a place of such intense differences of opinion as the Senate, compromise is a practical political necessity.

Three things probably account for Johnson's ability to get the Senate to do what sometimes seems the impossible:

1. That attention to detail. He does his homework thoroughly. Just two examples: knowing where every senator is; knowing day by day the progress or fate of every important bill still tied up in a committee.

2. He pays attention to his fellow senators of both parties. It's this writer's guess that every senator in the place is indebted to him in some way, for a favor or special consideration.

For example: helping push through a measure in which some individual senator is particularly interested or, in the case of Democrats, helping a man get a committee seat he particularly wants.

3. A determination to get along with Democrats and Republicans alike in order to get the maximum action out of the Senate as a whole. That explains, perhaps only in part, why he spends so little time criticizing Republicans. In short, he runs the Senate like a business—insofar as that's possible.

Johnson's remarkable achievement so far was in getting the Senate last year to approve a civil rights bill which his fellow Southerners intensely disliked and in getting them to let it get through without a filibuster.

Two things made this performance significant: It was the first civil rights bill passed in this century; and Johnson, by his behind-the-scenes manipulations, took the play away from the Republicans who started the civil rights bill rolling.

Johnson has had a heart attack and says he doesn't want to be president. But he's certain to get some consideration at the Democratic convention in 1960.

Ovation For Callas By Her Chicago Audience

By BERNARD GAVZER
CHICAGO (AP) — If Maria Meneghini-Callas had any echo in her ear of the fiasco attending her Rome Opera appearance, it vanished last night in a thunderous 10-minute ovation that set the Civic Opera House vibrating with shouts of "Bravo!"

The concert sponsored by the Alliance Francaise brought her back to the scene of her first American triumph and also marked her first appearance since the Rome revolt Jan. 2.

At times, the audience appeared unable to wait for her to conclude an aria before beginning an outpouring of adoration. There were no catcalls and whistles such as she received at Rome.

In the Rome Opera, singing the title role in Bellini's "Norma," the audience reaction caused her to quit after the first act. She claimed she was ill. Critics said she lost her voice and then her temper.

But last night, the 34-year-old diva seemed beyond annoyance. Strikingly gowned in black velvet, a stole wrapped around her shoulders, she presented a stunning picture as she stood before the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

At the concert's end, a huge bouquet of long-stemmed roses was placed in her arms. Then a second bouquet of lilies. And finally, a third bouquet of pink roses, which was set at her feet.

Taking leave of the crowd of 3,750, she was met in the wings by her husband, multimillionaire Italian manufacturer Giovanni Battista Meneghini.

To a newsman who confronted her, she bubbled: "What can I say? I am so very happy. There is no more to say."

The critics' reactions were mixed. "This was Callas at her crest," wrote Claudia Cassidy, Chicago Tribune.

"At half-voice, there was the ravishing sound of yore . . . but when — in Verdi arias from 'Macbeth' and 'Nabucco' — she had to be a dramatic soprano, the voice got pushed beyond beauty and steadiness," wrote Roger Determer, Chicago American.

Abandon Search For One Plane
HONOLULU (AP) — Search for seven men aboard a crashed Military Air Transport Service plane was abandoned last night, but the Navy continued to look for possible survivors of a vanished weather plane off Guam.

Faint radio distress signals spurred the search for 10 Air Force men aboard the weather reconnaissance plane that disappeared Jan. 15 while entering the eye of a typhoon.

The radio signals, heard again yesterday, could have come from a hand-cranked transmitter on a raft.

Search for the seven aboard the MATS plane that crashed about 275 miles southwest of Hawaii was called off after a half-ton of airplane debris was returned to Pearl Harbor. Much of it had burned.

Karloff Is Back In A Laboratory Again

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The laboratory looked familiar, but the monsters were different. And — what's this? — Boris Karloff was playing the mad doctor.

"What they have done with these pictures is typical of Hollywood thinking. They have exploited them over and over again until the pictures mean nothing."

As any student of the chiller movie knows, Karloff was the Christopher Columbus among monsters. He was the original in the 1931 trailblazer "Frankenstein," in which Colin Clive played the title role. (Don't fall into the common error of calling the monster Frankenstein; that was the name of its creator.)

BONN (AP) — Some of Germany's leading scientists who left the country before and after World War II may soon return home. University posts likely will be available to several.

Now it's Karloff playing the title role in the futuristic "Frankenstein 1970," so named to avoid confusion with the umpteenth other Frankenstein. The actor was playing a scarred victim of Nazi concentration camps. He limped around his lab with fiendish glee as he experimented with his home-made monster.

The question came up at a committee meeting of Germany's Atomic Energy Commission, attended by leading scientists, including Nobel Prize winners Otto Hahn and Werner Heisenberg.

"Lift your left arm," commanded Karloff, and the monster did so. It was a large one (played by 6-foot-9 Mike Lane) and swathed in bandages so it looked like a mummy. Karloff also played the Mummy in his day, but that is neither here nor there.

Official sources said the committee members know of several emigrants inclined to return home if they get adequate positions.

When the scene was over, Karloff resumed his identity as the urbane, English-born actor and straddled in dignity to lunch in the studio commissary, where he had cold cuts. He sighed over his fate in motion pictures.

These scientists would be welcomed warmly. Since 1933, Germany has lost hundreds of first-class scientists who fled Nazi persecution.

"Even though I have played all kinds of roles in television and on the stage," he said, "the producers here can think of me only in terms of so-called horror pictures. Mind you, an actor is lucky to be typed, but you would think that they'd realize I can do something else."

After the war, other scientists were either forced to work in Russia or got jobs in Western countries.

"I wouldn't think of playing a monster again. The monster was an interesting character at first. But then they reduced him to nothing but a stupid brute. No actor wants to play a stupid character."

West German universities must look abroad today to fill many of their scientific chairs, especially in nuclear physics.

This is due not only to emigration. Germany was banned from nuclear research during the first postwar decade, and the young German scientist generation is not advanced enough to hold responsible university posts.

Many emigrated scientists, among them a number of Jews, have returned to Germany since the war. Most, however, are now working in the fields of philosophy, history, sociology and the like.

Prominent men in rocket research, such as Vernher von Braun, Hermann Oberth and Walter Dornberger live in the United States. Others have still not returned from Russia.

Only a few of the rocket elite are left.

Fire, Explosion Strikes Big, Crowded Apartment

CHICAGO (U) — A fire and explosion spread havoc through a crowded South Side apartment building early today. In the frenzy to escape, many children were dropped from windows of the four-story building.

One infant was dead and at least six other children unaccounted for. One man also was missing. At least 21 were injured. None were children.

"The babies were falling like rain drops," said Jack McMillan, 31, Negro, who rushed to the scene where he said he caught five children dropped from windows. He fractured a thumb while catching one child.

Fire officials said there were 150 occupants in the building's 27 apartments.

Cause of the blast was not determined immediately but authorities said there apparently was an explosion between the explosion and accidental sale of a gasoline-mixture as fuel oil.

Edward Brenneck, 16th Battalion fire chief, said he thought he had a tornado on his hands when he first saw the fire. He said his men took at least 12 persons down fire ladders.

Witnesses said the explosion "just shook the whole block" in the Negro neighborhood of Bill Powell, 37, Negro, said he saw the explosion burst out on the first floor of the building.

"Seconds later the whole building went up in flames. The people inside didn't have a chance," he said.

Ten of the injured admitted to South Side hospitals were children.

Bystanders helped bring building residents to safety, catching children dropped from upper floor windows by their parents.

Bloxam Speaks In Winterville

WINTERVILLE—Greenville City Manager Leonard P. Bloxam spoke to the Winterville Merchants Association Tuesday night.

Bloxam spoke on the subject, "How to Attract New Industry to Pitt County."

According to the speaker, who is Chairman of the Pitt County Industrial Committee, any new industry should tie in with the agriculture of this area. The speaker emphasized that no community should resort to a give-away program to secure new industry. Bloxam stated he felt worthwhile businesses do not expect financial favors but do want the good will and assistance of the community.

During the course of his speech, Bloxam noted that markets and processing plants are greatly needed in and around Pitt County. He also outlined possible methods of obtaining this industry.

New officers elected and installed at this meeting were: H. D. Weaver, president; Cecil Worthington, vice-president; Raymond Cox, secretary and treasurer; and W. A. Worthington, director. Other directors of the Association are Vernon Cox and Linwood Rouse.

The meal at the dinner meeting was served by the ladies of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church.

Rules 3 Deaths To Natural Cause

A three-month-old Negro baby, found dead this morning, apparently died from pneumonia, Pitt Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said.

Rouse identified the child as Phyllis Rogers, daughter of Joseph and Joyce Rogers, Negro tenant farmers of Greenville Rt. 1. The parents said their baby had been sick for several days.

The child was found dead in bed between 6 and 7 a.m. by her mother.

Shortly after lunch yesterday afternoon, William Skipper, 63-year-old Negro, of 111 N. Evans St., was found unconscious on Greene St. Rouse said the elderly man was pronounced dead on arrival at Pitt Memorial Hospital a few minutes after he was discovered lying on the edge of a sidewalk.

Skipper apparently died of a heart attack, the Coroner reported.

Rouse was also called out yesterday morning to investigate the death of a five-month-old Negro baby.

The child, whose name was not given, was found dead in bed at the home of its grandparents, George Howard and his wife of Robersonville Rt. 2. Death by natural causes was ruled.

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers has existed for 61 years. It sponsored hot school lunches and traffic safety programs.

Property damage ran over $1,000 in a three-car chain collision at the intersection of N. Greene St. and Mumford Rd. yesterday afternoon, Police estimated.

Following an investigation by City Police, George H. Hardy, 63, 1008 Chestnut St., was cited for failure to keep a proper lookout.

Not Quite So Chilly Tonight

The Tar Heel had a frost night last night, but tonight it won't be quite so cold. And there's a chance of rain in the Western area by morning. This would be the third rain in 10 days. A spreading eastward of the rain is expected throughout tomorrow. Low temperatures tonight likely will range from 28 to 35 degrees.
