Young Killer Apprehended May Take After Ten Persons Slain Education Aid Lead

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Lincoln receded from shock and terror today after assurance that a mad slayer, who had snuffed out ten lives, was behind bars. But troubled officials fear more bodies could be found as they have been found at intervals since Monday.

law officers had arrived and he gave up after a short chase. The victims slain in a 48-hour gave up after a short chase. Gov. Victor Anderson ordered the National Guard mobilized. Guardsmen started patrolling the city and prepared for a house-to-house search to root out the killer.

Governor Denounces KKK Blames Klan For Disorder

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Luther Hodges vigorously denounced the Ku Klux Klan in a strongly worded statement today and said that on the Klan rests squarely the responsibility for the Maxton incident in which klansmen were aroused in a hall of gunfire by the governor's order.

Klan leaders "have turned out to be religious imposters with criminal records." He added that many of these leaders "were convinced and interested only in what money they can extort from gullible citizens or the publicity they can gain for themselves for a time."

Report Effort To Slay Chou En-Lai

LONDON (AP) — The Manchester Guardian today reported three U. S.-educated Chinese students tried to assassinate Red Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai last July 28. The Guardian said it obtained the information from a young Chinese, now in England, who was in China at the time and was associated indirectly with the assassination attempt.

Indications Are That Senate May Carry The Ball On President's Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indications mounted today that the Senate may take the lead this year in trying to pass a federal aid to education program. In the last two years the House has carried the ball on President Eisenhower's school construction bills while the Senate worked on other legislation.

Baghdad Powers Wind Up Session

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — The Baghdad Pact powers said today "Communist imperialism" is increasing its efforts to dominate the prized oil-producing Middle East. In a communique winding up a meeting of ministers, the allies and a U. S. team led by Secretary of State Dulles asserted that the Soviet Union is directing these attempts by exploiting the fear of war economic distress and regional tension.

Asks Extending Trade Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today asked Congress for a five-year extension of the reciprocal trade program with increased power for him to negotiate tariff cuts. He said it is essential to America's vital national interests.

All-Italian Menu To Be Served At Moose Club Sunday Night

After having spent a week visiting around Paris, the touring "Gourmets" of the Greenville Moose Lodge flew to Rome, "The Eternal City," and will be treated to an all-Italian menu Sunday, February 2, from 5:30-7 p.m.

T. S. J. Casoli will be in charge of the event. The menu for the day includes pizza pie, Rigatoni with meat balls and Pomodoro Pe-lati Sauce, Ravioli, Chicken Cacciatore and Italian cheeses and sausages.

The central item of the buffet will be a large attractive Antipasto (salad), including among other things, peppers, spring onions, celery, tomatoes, lettuce, anchovies, carrots, cucumbers, sardines, radishes and greens.

A film on Italy and cartoon comedies for the children will be featured of the evening's entertainment. The display material from the Italian Embassy in Washington, D. C. will include a large Italian flag, flown at the Embassy, along with many pictorial and pamphlet displays of Italian culture and scenes.

One of the most popular features of these Sunday night "visits" has been the free brochure distributed to each guest. These printed sheets include the menu and several of the foreign recipes that the food was prepared by. It also includes movie and musical information on the country being visited.

The second page of the brochure contains a thumbnail sketch of the geographic and economic information on the country being featured. These items are proving to be of great interest to the children of school age and several are making complete collection of them. They are prepared for these Sunday buffets by Col. E. J. Maloney, USAF, of East Carolina College staff. Although brief, they are quite complete and include a great deal of information that he has gained through personal observations, having lived or visited in many of the countries now being "visited" by the local club.

Moose members are urged to bring friends and neighbors as well as prospective members and their families to these buffets.

Club Has Family Night Program

A "Family Night" program was given the Greenville Music Club by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wilson when the club met Monday evening at the Music Hall on the East Carolina College campus.

Mrs. Wilson introduced the program and spoke on the many values of music in the home and its influence. Appearing on the program were Dr. Stanley Walter, trumpet solo, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Bodkin; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dan-felt, flute and piano; Carolyn Cuthbert and Mrs. K. Cuthbert, cello and piano; Carolyn Cuthbert, piano solo.

Kenneth Wilson, solo, accompanied by Mrs. Wilson; Kenneth Wilson, violin; Mrs. Wilson, violin; Barbara Wilson, piano and voice; and Wilson, voice; and Barbara Wilson, pantomime of selections from "The King and I."

Dr. Walter, president, presided at the business meeting during which reports on the Grass Roots Opera performances were given as well as recommendations for future appearances here.

The club was invited to participate in planning its part in the program for the Fine Arts Festival to be held in Greenville later this spring.

Class Changes Sunday School Time To 9:45

Members of the Lydia Wooten Class of Jarvis Memorial Church voted to change the Sunday school time to 9:45 a.m. when they met Monday night at the Alumnae House on East Carolina campus.

Other business discussed by the group concerned devotionals for February, moving of the classroom, and the need of a teacher. They voted to leave the drapes in the present classroom.

Mrs. J. L. Simmons, class president, presided throughout the meeting.

Miss McGee gave the devotional, using quotations taken from sermons by Dr. Charles Allen, leading Methodist minister of Atlanta, Ga. She read from the Book of Job and in closing left the members with the thought "Acquaint thyself with God and find peace."

Mrs. T. F. Smau gave the treasurer's report and dues were collected.

Mrs. Simmons closed the meeting with a prayer by John Wesley. During the social period Miss McGee conducted a thought provoking concert.

The hostess, Miss Eunice McGee, assisted by Mrs. J. F. Merrill, Mrs. H. A. Hendrix and Miss Mabel Greene, served coffee with cherry tarts and whipped cream to carry out the Valentine motif to the 23 members present.

Friends Of The Big Top Cheer Retired Circusana Custodian

By WILLIAM BURCH LEE SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Confidante of clowns and friend of scholars is Vivienne Mars, for 15 years ringmaster of the world's most famous collection of Circusana.

Recently retired, Mrs. Mars served as librarian of the renowned Harry Hertzberg Circus Collection in the San Antonio Public Library. She helped assemble the collection, and was its first and only librarian, taking personal pride in the thousands of items of circus lore and personal interest in the personalities of the big top. Says she:

"It's been just wonderful. I've met many of the great people of the circus."

"We've had a very limited budget with which to buy articles for our collection. But the circus people have been wonderful to us. They've given us scores of items when they found out we couldn't pay for them."

"And I guess the biggest thrill was on opening day. Not the opening day for the public. But the opening day when Ringland Brothers and Barnum and Bailey were in town. The way they wandered around the collection and the wonderful manner in which they spoke of Mr. Hertzberg—well I suppose that was the biggest day for me and the collection."

Now that she is devoting her time being a housewife and amateur artist, Mrs. Mars still receives many visitors of circus fame and discusses with them the good old days. She recalls the people who came from all over the world to see the collection, and the many letters received daily.

The collection was founded by Harry Hertzberg, a circus fan who spent his life assembling circus mementoes, and who willed his collection to the San Antonio Library on his death in 1940.

Two new wings were constructed to house the collection, which was opened to the public Nov. 12, 1942, with Mrs. Mars in charge. Dedication ceremonies were timed to coincide with the San Antonio appearance of Ringland Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Circus—and the entire personnel showed up for the big event.

Does she miss the excitement of her long service to circus lore? "Well, yes," says Mrs. Mars, "but not as much as I expected to, because I find my friends from the circus still remember me, and their letters and visits keep life always interesting."

KIPPER SANDWICH PLATE

Ingredients: 2 tablespoons mayonnaise-type salad dressing, 1-4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 teaspoons finely grated onion (pulp and juice), 2 tablespoons minced green olives, 4 slices bread, 1 can (3 1-4 ounces) kipper snacks, 1/2 cup (1-8 pound) grated cheddar cheese, paprika, 4 small or medium-sized tomatoes, salt, pepper, dried crushed basil, butter or margarine.

Method: Mix mayonnaise, Worcestershire sauce, grated onion and olives. Toast bread lightly; spread mixture over one side of each slice. Lift kippers from can to free of oil; break into pieces and arrange on toast. Sprinkle with grated cheese, then paprika. Broil slowly until cheese melts and topping is browned—3 to 5 minutes. Meantime halve tomatoes, sprinkle with salt, pepper and basil; dot with butter and broil so they will be ready when the sandwiches are. Makes 4 small servings.

Entertain At Bridge

GRIFTON—Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Batey entertained at bridge on Saturday evening at their home on Pitt Street.

Three tables were arranged for bridge in the living room where a color note of red and white was carried out in decorations and table appointments. During the games candy and snacks were served and as cards were laid aside a congealed salad, finger sandwiches, and coffee were served.

High scores were awarded Mr. and Mrs. Bill Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Barnes and the traveling prize to Mrs. B. F. McLaurin.

Pitt County Camellia Society Organizes

A group of nineteen interested camellia growers met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Barnhill and organized the Pitt County Camellia Society.

Barnhill led an informal discussion on the advantages and purposes of this society. The camellia growers present decided that the purposes of the society would be to study all phases of growing camellias and to share the experiences and knowledge of each individual with the entire group.

The fourth Monday at 4 p.m. from October through March was selected as the tentative date and time for the meetings. Membership in the Pitt County Camellia Society is open to anyone in Pitt County who is interested in camellias and all who are present at the February meeting will be listed as charter members.

The following slate of officers was elected for the remainder of this year: President, J. T. Barnhill, Greenville; vice president, R. LeRoy Rollins, Farmville; and secretary-treasurer, Mrs. F. P. Hendrix, Greenville.

The next meeting will be at 4 p.m. February 24 at the Barnhill home in Lakewood Pines.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Smith from Fountain will have charge of the program and Barnhill will demonstrate grafting. Everyone who is interested in camellias is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Bridal Couple Feted At Coffee

GRIFTON—Mr. and Mrs. James Hudson entertained on Sunday afternoon at an informal coffee hour at their home on Ivy Drive to honor Miss Tamra Holliday and G. W. Poole Jr. of Kingston, bridal couple of February 15.

Guests were received by the hosts and presented to the honored guests. In the dining room the table was covered with a lace cloth and held a centerpiece of garnet mums and Pittsperum in a crystal bowl flanked by tall white candles in silver holders.

Mrs. Leonard Seymour and Mrs. G. E. Haupt Jr. of Kingston poured coffee and guests served themselves to dainty party sandwiches, cake and nuts.

A gift of china was presented to the guests of honor by the hosts. During the calling hour 20 close friends were received.

MAKE FOOD RICH

If you add 4 tablespoons of dry milk to each cup of fluid milk, you make the food about twice as rich in milk value as it is when fluid milk alone is used.

EVENING SNACK

Lots of apples and just enough crust!

Cheese and Crackers

Deep Dish Apple Pie Beverage

DEEP DISH APPLE PIE

Ingredients: 5 good-sized yellow Delicious apples, grated rind and juice of 1/2 lemon, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon cinnamon, 1-4 teaspoon ginger, 1-3 cup currants (crisped in hot water and drained), rich pastry for a 1-crust pie.

Method: Pare and core apples; slice thin; mix with lemon rind and juice. Mix sugar, cinnamon, ginger and currants together; mix with apples. Turn into round heat-resistant glass cake dish (8 1-4 inches across inside and 1 3-4 inches deep). Roll pastry to fit, making slits in it, and flute securely across rim of dish. Bake in very hot (450 degrees) oven about 10 minutes; turn heat to moderate (375 degrees) and bake about 30 minutes longer or until apples are tender and pastry is lightly browned. If pastry edges get too brown before pie is done, place 1 1/2-inch strip of aluminum foil around it. Best served hot.

A Dream Come True
Mr. and Mrs. Albin Buckner, Bull Creek community in Madison County, are finally seeing their dream come true.

According to Mrs. Marie H. Buckner, assistant home demonstration agent, they have had a new home as their goal for several years. Now as a result of careful management and planning, it has become a reality. They plan to move into their new home sometime in the near future.

The home is a clear example of the careful planning which the Buckner family has followed. The floor plan was "discovered" several years ago, but as time passed and they studied it more carefully, changes were made to fit their individual needs.

The Buckners now feel that when they have moved into their new home, they will discover a new and happier way of life.

Eye For Business
Mrs. Robert Hardie, home demonstration club member in Columbus County, has certainly proved that she has an eye for good business and economy. Home Agent Earline Gibson reports that Mrs. Hardie made use of her good management when she had a sofa upholstered recently.

It seems that Mrs. Hardie couldn't bear to let the old upholstery material go to waste, so she had it cleaned and with Miss Gibson's help, they managed to get enough good sturdy material to slip-cover a chair. Mrs. Hardie's eye for economy had paid off, since she realized that there was lots of good wear left in the old material.

It Proved Costly
Mrs. Lutrell Butler, Snowhill community, Sampson County, says that "learning my lesson proved costly."

According to Evangeline D. Vann, Negro assistant home agent, Mrs. Butler had good intentions of using her new freezer to improve her family food conservation program and thereby cut down on her food costs.

But it didn't work out as she had planned. Instead, she let her friends and neighbors influence her against good freezing habits. Because she failed to blanch and chill her vegetables according to recommended methods, the foods she froze were a complete loss.

As a result, Mrs. Butler had to buy more food. With nine people to feed, this indeed proved the most costly mistake possible, because she figures that it cost her family about $1,000 in additional food bills, plus the time and energy she and her daughters had spent preparing the food for the freezer in the first place.

Mrs. Butler says she has really learned her lesson and now that she has learned how important it is to properly process and package food for the freezer, she's eager to encourage others to keep from making the same mistake.

Month's Topic
The Home Business Center was the topic at the Pitt County Home Demonstration meetings this month. The home agents were pleased with the enthusiasm and interest shown by the women as many are making plans to have a business center in their homes.

Nearly all of the clubs voted to enter the Third Pitt County Progress Program. This program started January 1 and will continue until December 31.

New members welcomed to the home demonstration club in the county are as follows:
Sweet Gum Grove—Mrs. Betty Martin and Mrs. Earl Butler, Red Banks—Mrs. Larry Tucker, Mrs. C. G. Paramore, and Mrs. O. L. Howard, Renston-Nobles—Mrs. L. A. Davis, Mt. Pleasant—Mrs. Bureley Clark, Stokes—Mrs. J. G. Copeland.

Used Ingenuity
One home demonstration club member in Henderson County really used her ingenuity recently when she changed the treatment of an old window into an entirely different one—at no expense.

According to Justine Rozler, assistant home agent, Mrs. Roland Jones, of Edinville, solved her problem the easy way. When her ruffled curtains in the bedroom began to show some wear and the sun had weakened the fibers in some spots, she took them down and made them into new curtains.

By turning the panels sideways, and using only the strongest portions, she put two rows of stitching in a heading and hung them as cafe curtains on the lower part of the window. The old ruffled heading now serves as a valance.

"Not only am I getting more wear from curtains that I might have thrown away," declares Mrs. Jones, "but also the windows have a newer, more attractive appearance."

Good Reports
Stanly County Home Demonstration Agent Elizabeth Watson reports that she is still hearing favorable comments about a demonstration she gave three months ago in the clubs on "Modern Methods of Dressmaking."

Mrs. Stancel Lambert, Ridgecrest, said recently to Miss Watson, "Look at my blouse I made after the demonstration last month. These are the best sleeves I've ever put in, and I straightened and pre-shrunk the material like you said. I've found it really makes a difference."

Mrs. M. D. Elliott, New London, called Miss Watson to say, "I just wanted to tell you that the meeting on clothing methods was the best I ever heard—it has helped me so much."

Mrs. Frank Bureson, Badin, remarked, "I tried the stay-stitching and measuring the seam allowance while sewing just like you showed us. Recently when I made a dress for my daughter-in-law, the pieces all fitted together so beautifully, and I found that it was much more fun to sew than before."

Dior's Prodigy Gets Applause From New Blimpish Sack Styles

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS 28—Paris today really has a new Christian Dior. Applause and superlatives rocketed to the throne he inherited as he presented a new sack line that is practically blimpish in proportions.

Yves calls it the "trapeze line," and he launched himself as boldly as the daring young man on the flying trapeze.

His new silhouette falls flat from bosom to waist, and thereafter is puffy as a cloud. Dress-in this shape look so much like barrel coats that it's hard to tell them apart.

Dior's young prodigy has brought off the miracle of a collection that looks as if it were designed by the late master's own hand and is at the same time almost revolutionary in its newness.

The applause came right from the beginning, continued through the collection with occasional wild outbreaks, and wound up with "bravos."

Before the first model, an announcement was made that "this collection and following ones will be presented in permanent tribute to Mr. Dior." The housekeeper of the Dior family sitting in the second row, whispered happily, "Christian Dior will be eternally here."

The big difference in the new Saint-Laurent sack is that fullness falls right to the hem—which barely covers the knee in all the short models. It might be called the sack with the bosom. Often the only fitting discernible at all is on the bust.

"We have been talking about hogs and hominy for the last year or so," said members of the Board of Agriculture today. "We know that the raising of hogs is one of the greatest assets many of our most prosperous communities of the nation could have and we are doing everything possible to interest Pitt County people in encouraging the raising. If you are a farmer and desire to do something to increase your revenue, why not try the plan of raising hogs and poultry. Growers of other sections have found the venture advantageous and it stands to reason this section should."

"No, ma'am," he answered, "but I heard there was a woman judge in these parts and I also heard she was pretty nice."

Judge Madge Taggart smiled. "Suspended sentence," she said. "I'll show you that women are really susceptible to flattery."

The frank rejoinder from the bench has become a trademark of Judge Taggart, the first woman ever elected to city court in Buffalo, a city of over half a million.

"I suppose I'll get in trouble for it someday," she says. "I try to be honest and impartial; but some things, well, they just strike me a certain way and I say what I think. They don't affect my decisions, though."

The attendants at city court are quick to express their respect and admiration for her. They say she handles cases with painstaking thoroughness. When the occasion arises, she speaks her mind.

For example—a man who pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding said he was chasing a man who owed him $15.

"Now that's a foolish way to get your money," said Judge Taggart. "You're going to lose it now. Twenty-five dollars fine."

Another defendant asked for leniency on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. Judge Taggart scolded:

"You're not a man; you're a cry-baby. Here you are at the age of 32 and you can't take care of your family. You're healthy, aren't you. It wouldn't be because you drink too much, would it?"

The attractive Judge has only one complaint: "Every day I take home a headful of other people's troubles."

Does it bother her? "Sure, it affects me. If it didn't affect me, I probably shouldn't be on the bench. Hearing case after case—muggings, robberies, fights, domestic quarrels—I'd go crazy if I couldn't look back and see where a little understanding helped straighten someone out."

"That's what makes it all worth while—being able to help someone who's in trouble."

Judge Taggart first sat on the city court bench in July, 1952, when she was appointed to fill a vacancy. She had been a clerk in city court for 11 years and an assistant district attorney for nine years. She was graduated from the University of Buffalo Law School in 1920.

She lost a close election for the seat in November, 1952, and was appointed to fill another vacancy two months later. In 1953 she won 102,000 to 79,000 in an election in which her Republican party lost control of the majority and common council.

Three Hostesses Surprise Honoree At Stork Shower

GRIFTON—Mrs. Don Casey, Mrs. Conrad Hart and Mrs. George Gardner Sugg entertained at a surprise stork shower for Mrs. Howard Holcomb on Thursday night at the home of Mrs. Casey on East Queen Street.

In the living room, where four tables were placed for the games, planters and other seasonal decorations were used.

The prizes for high scores went to Mrs. Edwin Reeves and Mrs. W. E. Rabeber. The consolation went to Mrs. Sam Nelson.

Mrs. Holcomb was given an array of gifts from the assembled guests who included the above and Mesdames Becky Worthington, G. L. Tucker, David Parker, Roger Johnson, George Fuller, Denver Sasser, Milton Hart, Paul Bradley, Edward Hart and Mrs. Craven Hughes of Greenville.

A date and orange cake with whipped cream and coffee was served.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)—The Youngstown police department is wondering who started that rumor about women being the gentler sex.

When they tried to book Mrs. Queenie Williams, 34, for illegal possession of a knife, she floored two officers, tore the shirt off a third and sent a fourth to the hospital for treatment of deep cuts and possible internal injuries.

treatment is as natural looking as the curly locks some girls are blessed with at birth.

This new look in beauty hasn't stopped at the chinline. It goes right to the fingertips where the iridescent polishes have become more popular and the pink pearl shade, the exact color of the fingernail but with a pearly sheen, gives the nails a new lift. If it is worn on the toes this summer they may easily compete in the sands with the most sparkling sea shells.

We have satiny, tinted makeup concoctions that may be smoothed over the body to live up to the natural skin tone, and better compliment sleeveless, strapless dresses and bathing suits.

The trend is so definitely to natural beauty, encouraged by these new preparations now available, that we should be seeing even more exciting discoveries in the world of glamor.

No Beards, Except For Birthdays

Over Greensboro-way we hear tell mustaches and beards are beginning to sprout in preparation for the city's 150th birthday in May.

The Brotherhood of the Brush always seems to flourish at such civic celebrations; but when the party's over . . . or when the clock strikes midnight . . . what happens to the brave adornments?

Van Dykes, muttonchops, goatees and the twirly-type upper lip ornaments abruptly disappear. Months of laborious culture are discarded with abandon and overnight a community regains its mid-Twentieth Century atmosphere.

The full beard which lent dignity and authority to yesterday's patriarchs is similarly short-lived.

We don't know whether it's a good thing or not. An unkempt, befoiled, scraggly-looking facial brush can lose friends and influence people. Contrariwise, a luxuriant, neatly-trimmed, carefully cultivated beard can . . . well, it looks better; anyhow.

For some reason, society is inclined to scoff when an adventurous male daringly experiments with the non-shaving habit for three days. He is barely beginning to visualize what might be (or might-have-been) when the rug is jerked out from under his daydream by hooting laughter, snide comments and jeering asides.

Civic anniversary celebrations are the only opportunities open to would-be beard growers to sprout their stuff. At such times only words of encouragement are heard on all sides, and small boys dreamily look forward to their turn, while big boys downheartedly survey their own fuzz.

Some few well-known Americans, like Gabby Hayes, Mitch Miller and Skitch Henderson, wear beards. There was a time when just about everybody . . . who was anybody . . . was well-behiskered. We are not aware if any degree of research has been undertaken on the Decline and Fall of the American Beard, but that field would appear to hold considerable promise for a graduate student's thesis.

Beards such as worn by Robert E. Lee, Charles Evans Hughes, Walt Whitman or Henry Longfellow, all required a certain amount of detailed attention. In the mad whirl of today's society, who among us can afford to spend an hour a day combing, curling, trimming, shampooing and plucking the hair on their face?

So much concentration on hirsute beauty would necessarily distract attention from bread-winning, household chores, entertainment and pastimes. Alas, it's easier by far to shave and shave and shave.

We'd hate to think the American male's strength of character in the beard-growing realm has been undermined by scoffers and envious souls whose whiskery sprouts are few and far between. Far better to credit the change in taste to the hurrying times.

Neighbors Will Also Share Wilson's Gain

Announcement that Swift and Co. is building a $3 millions-plus plant in Wilson is good news for all eastern North Carolina.

True, any community would longingly eye the prospect of having a plant employing over a hundred local people in their own area; but the impact of this meat packing industry's new investment should be felt in many counties.

Opening of the plant will provide a basis upon which farmers may step even further into the livestock field. It signifies one more crack in the ramparts of tobacco as the one big money crop for farmers. There are fringe benefits, too; such as allied industries, expanding business activity and greater employment.

And, as has been said many times before, each and every new industry that settles in the Coastal Plains draws attention of other prospective enterprises.

This coming market adds one more facet to the desired agricultural and economic stability, not only to Wilson County but to its neighbors as well.

Establishment of this industry in Wilson is just cause for rejoicing in that city and by their neighbors, too.

Oddities In The Business News

By ELMER ROESSNER
Here is another roundup of strange and curious items in the wonderland of American business:

Boys and girls from eight to fifteen like stamp collecting, apple pie, potato chips and hamburgers, in that order, the American Hobby Federation finds that a survey shows . . .

A new organization calls itself "TSAB" (sic), which is short for the Theatre-Screen Advertising Bureau . . . Last winter 48,000,000 Americans spent 206,700,000 days on all types of travel, the National Industrial Conference Board calculates. While no figures are yet available, this winter they'll probably spend 300,000,000 days, largely to get away from the recession. Or doesn't that make sense?

Tighter restrictions on income tax reporting of expense accounts will require a stack of paper 15 miles high, according to UARCO, Inc., a Chicago form company.

AUTO DEPARTMENT
A woman from Ohio wrote to Consumer Reports that she chose a Volkswagen because, "It's my strong maternal instinct. It needs me." And E. B. Weiss, merchandising authority, wrote in Advertising Age, "Judging by advertising . . . I think that the auto makers have fallen in love with the rear ends of their cars."

WE'VE WINGED IT AWAY. A survey by Opinion Research Corp. shows that 3,000,000 adults lose an average of $44 in cash each year through carelessness. By no curious coincidence, the survey was made for American Express, which sells travelers' checks. That's what AE calls 'em.

AND FIRE LOSSES LAST YEAR totaled $1,023,190,000, the National Board of Fire Underwriters reports.

"The most horrible realization industry faces this year is that now we've got to work for a living," Nathan Arell, Baumritter president, told a Chicago furniture conference.

WANTS FLACKS LICENSED
Leo J. Margolin, of New York, is demanding that states license public relations practitioners. Mr. Margolin is a public relations practitioner, working for Tex

Europe and America will be exchanging live television programs before the end of next year, predicts Steelways magazine. It says the problem of getting waves over the horizon is being solved . . . New York, clerical workers have the highest pay and shortest hours in the country, the Office Executives Association reports . . .

The biggest single supermarket item: beef. So says John A. Lopiano, president of the National Association of Food Chains . . . Dun & Bradstreet finds the typical farm supply store netted 1.5 per cent on sales in 1956 . . . Lending and loan insurance by Federal agencies totaled $138.7 billion from 1917 through 1953, a new study shows.

A Brooklyn manufacturer is advertising a napkin holder made of "antique white plastic."

NEW NAMES DEPARTMENT
The National Retail Dry Goods Association has changed its name to the National Retail Merchants Association because nobody digs "dry goods" any more . . . Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., has changed its name to Canada Dry Corp., because it not only makes other soft drinks now but also the stuff used to spike them . . . And Russell Kelly Office Service, which supplies temporary workers, has changed its name to Kelly Girl Service, Inc., because clients insist on calling its workers "Kelly girls," even though their names may be O'Brien, Olson or Sepulveda.

NEWS YOU CAN USE IN MANAGEMENT
The National Industrial Conference Board's "Economic Almanac for 1958," a sturdy reference of business facts, will be out in a few days. It's $5 . . . A publication telling how "Your Community Can Profit from the Tourist Business," is 15 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C. . . . The 1958 "Tax Guide for Small Business" is available for 35 cents from the same source. . . . Copies of a booklet, "The Role of Polyethylene in Creative Packaging and Successful Selling," is free for asking Dept. 1141, Bakelite, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
IN THE FACE OF NEW TRUTH

One of the hardest things in the world is to keep an open mind on all subjects. It's not only hard, it's dangerous — dangerous if we keep it open and dangerous if we don't.

The danger of open-mindedness arises from the fact that a person's mind may be open at both ends. Where this is true, the person in question accepts everything new and rejects everything old — a dangerous procedure.

But the danger arising from a closed mind is ever greater. Martyrdom has almost always been the result of a closed-minded majority persecuting, and often massacring, an open-minded minority. Many of Columbus' contemporaries averred that he was a dangerous man who should be burned at the stake. Galileo was forced to his knees and compelled to renounce the absurd heresy that the earth traveled around the sun, instead of the sun around the earth. The patriots who have gone to stake and gallows have usually been condemned by a closed-minded gang armed with big sticks.

Rockets and satellites are on the wing. They will probably reveal incredible new truths. Don't slide over to the gang that put Socrates to death or forced Galileo to his knees — or to the superficial lunatic fringe who accept everything new.

Let us keep our minds open and our feet solidly on the ground.

It Is Easy To Pray

Walker Allen, Rose High School senior, is an active participant of sports. He maintains honor grades which has obtained him membership in the National Honor Society. Walker is a member of the Eighth Street

Christian Church. What is Prayer? Prayer is the only way we, as Christians, have of communicating with God. It is the only way we have of asking for forgiveness for our sins, or of asking Him for help for ourselves and for others. If prayer is all this shouldn't we be more conscious of the way in which we pray? How many times, when praying the Lord's Prayer at church, school, or in assembly, have you realized that you were a line ahead or behind and just saying words? We are probably all guilty of this.

Many times we start to pray, but our thoughts wander and before we realize it we are not actually praying at all.

Do you ever pray to God and ask for something, and then because you do not immediately receive it, give up? We should remember that if anything is really needed it is worth praying for.

We should never forget to say a sincere "thank-you" for all prayers answered. Prayer is not just a way to ask God for the things we want or think we want. It is a way of being with God and expressing our joys and happiness to Him.

Prayer is simple. It requires only the right feeling, thought, and concentration.

Jesus taught us to pray thus: "Our father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name; thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil for thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen."

Opinions In Brief

"Perhaps one of the most . . . revealing indications of municipal thinking is the deadpan demand of New York City's Mayor for more Federal aid to combat juvenile delinquency. Instead of assuming their own plain obligations, the civic authorities prefer . . . to dump all responsibility on Washington."

"The best way to be grateful for the Salk vaccine is to think about the blighted lives of those

Other Editors Saying --- Mr. Dulles' Difficulties

(Richmond Times-Dispatch) State Secretary Dulles is an eager beaver who believes in being on the spot wherever the boys get together to talk shop.

At the moment he is in the Turkish capital, sitting in at the fourth Ministerial Council of the five-nation Baghdad Pact.

Nominally, this is an independent organization, i.e., the United States is not (officially) a member. We are classified (with baffling accuracy seldom encountered in international politics) as "a donor nation."

Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd is there, representing Britain, listed as member and "donor nation" (but also on the receiving end of monetary blood transfusions).

The only public session of the council was held Monday, in the bar early completed $25,000,000 building that will house the parliament of Turkey. (Turkey has received generous U. S. aid for the excellent reason that Turkey, like Pakistan, has been consistently friendly, and determined to oppose Soviet expansion.)

In formal speech "Observer Dulles" reminded the statesmen of Iran, Iraq, Pakistan and Turkey (and Britain) that his government has "associated itself with over 40 nations in defense of national independence and peace."

He recalled that congressional approval of the Eisenhower Doctrine gives the President of the United States power to come to the aid of "any nation or group of nations" (such as the Baghdad Pact), "requesting assistance against armed aggression by international communism."

Considering that "over forty nations" have similar claims against the lives and incomes of American citizens, such assurances should have impressed the Baghdad-Pacters.

Mr. Dulles found out that such pledges were not enough.

Muslim members insisted that "more (U.S.) economic aid is vital."

Turkey's Premier Menderes was less insistent on this point, but he blandly assured the other Muslim nations, that "the necessary means and resources will be provided for further achievement in the field of joint projects."

The confidence implicit in his words may have been inspired by news that the United States Congress will jettison the national debt ceiling from $75 billion to $78.500 billion, to facilitate deficit-spending for foreign aid, if necessary.

To make matters even more difficult for Mr. Dulles, Premier Nuri As-Said of Iraq tossed the apple of Palestinian discord into the proceedings. He made a vehement plea for Baghdad Pact support of the Arab nations seeking a settlement of the Israeli frontier question along lines laid down by the United Nations resolution of 1947.

Prime Minister Feroz Khan Noon of Pakistan startled the statesmen with a proposal that the "donor nations" supply the four Muslim members with the "latest (i.e., nuclear) weapons, similar to those they may encounter," from across the iron curtain.

Today Observer Dulles, actually the pivotal figure, attended secret sessions at which such patriotic ideas as "freedom and independence" will give way to the more practical question of interested governments:

"How much do we get out of it?"

Knowland May Run Into Trouble

By RAY TUCKER
SAN FRANCISCO — Recent politico-economic developments at Washington and elsewhere have raised California Democrats' hopes of defeating Senator William F. Knowland in next fall's gubernatorial contest and of recapturing Vice President Nixon's state as a happy prelude to the 1960 Presidential election.

These appear to be gloomy days for Republicans generally, but especially for the California GOP. In addition to the Eisenhower Administration's apparent loss of prestige and popularity, due to the Sputnik setback and the economic decline, there are specific reasons for increasing Democratic confidence here.

The cuts in domestic expenditures in the new budget hit this coastal state hard, and where it hurts most grievously. Eisenhower has decreed that there shall be no "new starts" on reclamation, irrigation and water power projects, whereas water and electricity are the life blood of California's thirsty acres and booming cities.

CALIFORNIA'S RESENTMENT OF ADMINISTRATION THE cutbacks in the housing, highway and school building programs bear adversely on what is possibly the fastest growing state in the Union. These new facilities are sorely needed. Another cause for resentment is Ezra Taft Benson's austerity farm plan, since California is a leading agricultural area. It now surpasses several of the Old South states in production of cotton.

Labor layoffs in the airplane factories is another GOP handicap. Walter P. Reuther, whose automobile union includes aviation firms' employees, can be counted on to ship money into the state against Knowland. The Senate Minority Leader's advocacy of "right to work" legislation, which bars the closed shop, has incurred the wrath of the AFL-CIO hierarchy.

SUPREME COURT RULINGS MAY BE ANTI-GOP Even Chief Justice Earl Warren's recent rulings may be an anti-GOP factor. Under the Supreme Court's decision upsetting the Smith Anti-Subversive Act, 11 convicted Communists were recently freed by California's highest tribunal, although reluctantly, it seemed. These 11 have for years tried to dominate and disrupt the docks and waterfront operations of the West Coast and Hawaii, to the detriment of shipping and commerce.

It was Chief Justice Warren who, as Governor, first appointed Knowland to the Senate. Finally, the intraparty strife which led to Democratic charges of a "white House deal" has not been resolved. When Governor Goodwin J. Knight, after a conference with Sherman Adams in Washington, D. C., agreed to step aside for Knowland, and to run for the Senate, Knight thought that he faced a clear field.

SURPRISE FOR KNIGHT FACTOR But Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, a popular figure, also seeks the Senate nomination. And he surprised the Knight faction by showing surprising strength in a recent demonstration. At a meeting of the so-called Candidate Fact Finding Committee, Christopher tied Knight for that body's endorsement, with four absentees.

The committee has no official status, and its decision is not binding. But it was established many years ago as an unofficial Party agency for endorsing candidates in advance of the June primary. Under the California Primary Election Code, the State Central Committee cannot make an official selection.

SENATOR KNOWLAND, TOUGH CAMPAIGNER Although the Democrats may be counting unhatchable chickens, for Knowland is a grim and tough campaigner, the defeat of the White House spokesmen in the Senate would be a Republican catastrophe of major magnitude.

Dollars Don't Go Far

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Sidewalk scrawls of a Pavement Plak: Victorian England saw the rise of societies for the alleviation of the poor. What is needed in America today is a society for the amelioration of the millionaire.

For the millionaire, once the symbol of wealth, might and the wastrel life, has fallen upon sad times. Now he is more to be pitied than censured.

The reason is simple: Money being what it is today, a simple millionaire no longer can afford to make much of a splash. He is no longer really rich, merely well-to-do, living on the plush side of poverty, so to speak.

Many a prisoner of the paycheck sighs, "I don't want to be a millionaire—I just want to live like one."

Well, a millionaire feels exactly the same way. He'd like to live like a millionaire is supposed to, but he knows he hasn't enough money.

Many people who envy a millionaire do not realize his true plight. He is like a man who stands on the doorstep of Valhalla, hearing the music and singing, but who can't quite get inside. He is like a colonel in the Pentagon. He has considerable rank, but not enough, for there are many colonels in the Pentagon.

A man with only one million dollars is really a pitiable figure, when you get right down to it. He has the reputation of being rich, but none of the pleasure that goes with really being rich. Just how rich is this gilded pauper—a guy with only one million bucks to his name? Well, let's see.

Suppose he wants to conserve his capital and live off his income. What can he do? To begin with, he invests in some kind of bonds — no income taxes — at 3 per cent. That means his income will be a mere $30,000 a year.

That sounds like a lot of money to the ordinary breadwinner, and it is — to him. But if you want to live like a millionaire it is pretty small potatoes.

Shouldn't a millionaire have a place in Palm Beach, a penthouse on Park Ave., and summer home at Newport or Bar Harbor?

Shouldn't a millionaire have a chauffeur, a butler, a gardener, a cook, a maid, a housekeeper and at least one secretary?

Shouldn't a millionaire be able to travel abroad every year? Shouldn't a millionaire be able to play the playboy, and toss occasional gifts of diamond bracelets and mink coats to chorus girls?

He should, indeed, be able to do all these things — if he could afford to live up to the public's idea of a millionaire.

But if he did his million bucks wouldn't last him long — not at today's prices. Four chorus girls and five years later our millionaire would be bankrupt, standing at the corner holding up his last sterling silver cup for a pittance from passers-by. He would be too poor even to hire a servant to beg for him.

No, a millionaire no longer can afford to live like a millionaire. It takes a multimillionaire to do that, and the way things are going it soon will take a multimillionaire.

The millionaire today is merely the symbol of a faded glamor. He is a creature of a sorrow known only to himself — a guy too poor to be rich and too rich to be poor.

And I, for one, wouldn't trade places with him — except for a million dollars.

ON THE HOUSE

Does art play a part in your home and your life? To famed artist Millard Sheets, of Los Angeles, it is the "heart of all living."

And now, after an artistic career that has placed his works in 42 American museums, he finds architectural design the most exciting challenge he has met.

In his hilltop house in the San Gabriel Valley, Sheets and his family are surrounded by art—Indian friezes, Egyptian carvings, pre-Columbian sculpture, Japanese pottery, Chinese screens. "These things are meat and drink, an insight into life," he says.

"When I was a student at art school, art was something worshipped by a few. It never occurred to people that it was important to the act of living. Everyone has both the instinct and the desire for beauty. We simply do not always know how to go about expressing them. Too many outworn prejudices and traditions inhibit us."

And not only does art make a good life, Sheets, asserts, but it makes for good business.

"Business men are becoming unbelievably receptive to the idea of art in buildings, offices and products," he says. "They are realizing that art gives them distinction."

Sheets cites a building he designed for a financial institution in Los Angeles. He encrusted it with sculptures. For the president, he designed a suite with the subdued grace of the temple and the comfort of a hearth.

"That building so impressed people with its warmth that they patronized the firm to such an extent that the building paid for itself in a year," Sheet says. "The owner received hundreds of letters from people just because the building has warmth."

Now Sheets is engaged in the greatest building project of his career. I Dallas, Tex., he is designing the interiors of two buildings—one 20 stories, the other 16

—for the Mercantile National Bank. He has 30 artists at work on them, is spending $250,000 on designs and furnishings for one firm alone.

"A man spends more time in his office than he does in his home," Sheets observes. "Why shouldn't it be a fine reflection of himself?"

Born at Pomona, Calif., in 1907, Sheets has works on exhibit in 42

He covered World War II as an artist for Life Magazine. He was in the isolation booth as a summoned expert with Billy Pearson when the jockey won $64,000 on the subject of art on a television quiz program.

Weekend Bargains In Ham And Chicken

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Ham and chicken get the feature treatment, with larger type and smaller prices, in many of the nation's supermarkets and neighborhood groceries this week.

Ham and other varieties of pork are expected to be somewhat cheaper in the months ahead. The U.S. Department of Agriculture says hog producers plan a 6 per cent increase over last year in 1958 spring farrowings. This should result in a crop of 56 million pigs, or 6 per cent more than a year ago.

Output of chicken also is expected to top 1957, when a record 1,400,000,000 birds were sent to market.

Prices for sirloin steak and rib roast are reported 2 to 6 cents a pound higher this week, which accounts for the scarcity of beef offerings in the stores. Those that are featuring beef have selected chuck roast, an old standby of the bargain hunter.

Hamburger, once regarded as a low price regular, is selling in the higher brackets these days. The reason is twofold. Ranchers whose herds were depleted by drought now are rebuilding them and corn belt farmers are increasing their feeding operations. Consequently, packers have a hard time laying their hands on the lean, lower grade cattle used for hamburger meat.

Another factor pushing hamburger higher is that Americans eat a higher proportion of their beef as hamburger. Meat men estimate the figure at 24 per cent compared with about 12 per cent before World War II.

Potatoes rank as the best buy among vegetables, although onions also are a good buy. Carrots in plastic bags are a little lower this week and should be a good buy.

Lettuce, on the other hand, is trending higher. The leafy vegetable is still rated as a good buy, however. New cabbage from Texas and California fields supplies the diminishing supplies of storage cabbage. Others in the good buy category include broccoli, brussels sprouts and celery.

Beans, peppers and egg plant generally show a wide range in quality and condition, but the careful shopper may find good ones reasonably priced. Yellow and green squash are moderate.

Canned and frozen peas are in the bargain class as processors strive to unload big inventories from last year's crop. Canned stocks are reported up 31 per cent over a year before and frozen 6 per cent higher.

California oranges and lemons are abundant and attractively priced, along with avocados and limes. The California crop of avocados is topped only by the record 1954-55 season. Supplies of Florida citrus are increasing steadily, with prices tending lower, market men say. Oranges and grapefruit are not as good a buy as last year, but getting better all the time.

Apples and pears also are good buys among the fruits. Varieties of the latter include the popular boscos and anjous, as well as compears, which are exceptionally spicily when ripe, and the forelles pears, which have an attractive red blush on their skin.

Walter Slezak Stands As Symbol Of Good Eating

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Amid a nation of calorie counters, Walter Slezak stands out as a monument to good eating.

A porcine 270 pounds, the 61-year-old actor is fat and likes it. "I simply like the good things in life too much," he explained.

"I may have just a bite for breakfast and catch a fast lunch. But dinner—ah! that is when I lose my head.

"I also like to drink, though I never get drunk. I always eat when I drink—perhaps that is the secret. I have a couple of highballs before dinner and a bottle of beer or two with it."

home to do a Playhouse 90 on CBS-TV tonight and he interrupted rehearsals to enjoy a hearty lunch: bloody Mary, chicken liver omelette, etc.

"Seven calories," he said, holding up a wholewheat cracker before popping it into his mouth. "You see, I know the calorie count of every item of food. But I don't let it bother me.

"Oh, I used to hold my weight down. When I was a leading man in Europe, I once went to a Swiss sanatorium because I felt I should be slimmer. They took the weight off scientifically and I dropped from 185 to 165 pounds.

"But when I came out, I was like a lion, snarling at everyone.

Since reducing did that to me, I said to hell with it, let it spread. I got fat and I've been finding roles steadily for the past 15 years."

Don't his doctors urge him to reduce?

"Of course. Every one of them does. They say I will live longer if I take off weight. And I must pay about 7 per cent more in insurance premiums, which would be reduced if I became 50 pounds lighter for six months.

"But I think they are sticking blindly to statistics. I've known a lot of fat men who have lived to be 70 and 80 years old and a lot of skinny ones who have died young. Look at Ezio Pinza (his costar in 'Fanny'). He didn't have an ounce of fat on him.

"My theory is that tension and frustration can do more to shorten your life than overweight. I've seen too many people become miserable because they constantly watched their weight. That's not for me."

All His Brothers Are Eagles, Too

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—When the Eagle Scout badge was pinned on Paul Lester Griz, 16, it was an old story to the Ghiz family.

Sons of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Ghiz, Paul's three brothers had won their Eagles within the preceding five years.

The elder Ghiz is leader of an Explorer Post.

Help Shortage Due To Shooting

MADISON, W. Va. (AP)—"We are late," said the headline over this story on page one:

"As a result of the unfortunate shotgun shooting of Walter Hendricks, the Coal Valley News is minus one of its working force, and Bill Duty was off Monday hunting his brother-in-law. With 14 pages this week, the mailing of the paper is Friday morning."

Blonde Date With Murder

By WILLIAM P. MCGIVERN

Geoffrey O'Neill, Chicago detective, agrees to protect Estelle Moran, a shapely blonde who fears for her life, until she leaves Chicago the next day. He accompanies her to her hotel, where, after several drinks her fears of being murdered subside and she appears on the make. O'Neill finds giving her the brush-off isn't easy.

CHAPTER III
Estelle Moran's hands moved around to the back of O'Neill's neck and she pressed close to him. "I don't want to be left alone. Why can't you stay here with me?" she said.

O'Neill pulled her hands away from his shoulders. "You've paid me fifty bucks," he said. "It's all I want. No bonus necessary."

"She turned away from him, picked up a pack of cigarettes and a matchbook from a table. "Are you angry?" The tone in which she said this was even and unexpressive, but when she struck a match O'Neill saw bright patches of color in her cheeks.

He grinned and walked to the phone. "No, I'm not," he responded. "But you are."

"No woman likes that kind of brush-off," she said. "What is it? Scruples or discrimination?"

O'Neill picked up the telephone, got connected with the room clerk and asked him to send up the house detective. The room clerk said, "Yes, sir," in a discreetly alarmed voice and O'Neill hung up. The girl was standing before the fireplace, taking nervous drags on her cigarette.

O'Neill turned to her. "The house detective is on his way up. You haven't anything to worry about. He'll watch until I get back."

"Fine," the girl said. "We can read the sports section together. Or is chess your game?"

O'Neill grinned at her. "It wasn't a question of discrimination. That's what you want me to say. Does it make you happy?"

The girl smiled then, carelessly. "I'm sorry you caught me being bitchy. Women like to think that every man they meet is dying to kiss them. When they meet one who doesn't it is naturally a blow to vanity."

"I'm sure millions of men would envy my being here alone with you," O'Neill said evenly and wonderingly. Women! Even with their lives in danger they don't forget their charms.

"Thanks for that much," Estelle responded. "Bernie told me you were tough but maybe you're nice too."

There was a knock on the door then, a loud firm knock. It wasn't the way a bellhop would knock.

"That's Sam Spencer, the house detective," O'Neill guessed. "You can tell by the knock he's expecting to find Arsen Lupin in here going through your jewel case."

He walked over and opened the door. The heavy-set, mild faced man who stood in the doorway blinked in surprise when he saw

O'Neill. "What's up?" Spencer asked. "Nothing serious," O'Neill said. "There's no trouble. But I'd like you to do me a favor."

Sam Spencer came in, looked questioningly at the girl, then said to O'Neill, "You know you can count on me, provided it isn't a deal the hotel wouldn't like."

"Good," O'Neill said. He knew he could trust Spencer. The house detective was a retired city patrolman, a solid, dependable man who always tried to take care of his friends. Spencer was married, had two teen-aged kids and a home in the suburbs, were O'Neill had spent a number of pleasant evenings, drinking beer and admiring Spencer's collection of pistols.

Spencer was as good a guy as his job would let him be. "It's this," O'Neill said. "Miss Moran here is in a little trouble; somebody's been bothering her. I'd like you to keep an eye on the suite until I get back. I'll just be gone a few hours."

"Sure thing," Sam said. "I'll park right out in the corridor where I can watch the elevators and the stairs. He nodded again at the girl and smiled. "You won't be bothered, Miss. I'll see to it."

"I'm very grateful," she smiled. "That's settled," O'Neill said. He picked up his hat. "I know you won't let anyone into the apartment, Sam, unless he gives you his name and Miss Moran says he's okay."

"Sure," Sam said. O'Neill turned to the girl. "You've got nothing to worry about. I'll be back shortly."

"I hope you're right," she said. Two hours later he was sitting in his office attending to reports to a client, a bonding company from which he had been diverted by his ramble in old correspondence and the entry of Estelle Moran into his office. The phone rang shrilly, insistently, annoyingly.

He picked it up, said, "Yes?" A voice said, "O'Neill? This is Logan."

"What's up, Inspector?" "I want to talk to you. Can you get down the Metropolitan in a hurry?"

The Metropolitan . . . the girl's hotel. O'Neill's fist tightened on the phone.

"What's up?" he asked. "Sam Spencer got shot here about a half hour ago." The inspector's voice was urgent. "I heard you talked to him just before it happened."

"I'll be right down," O'Neill said. "Do you know who did it?" "No. We got a girl here, Estelle Moran her name is, who must have seen the whole thing. The guy made a clean break."

"I'll be right down," O'Neill repeated. There was a crowd in the hallway outside 1124 of the Metropolitan. O'Neill saw men from the coroner's office, the newspapers and Central station.

Inspector Logan was talking to two reporters. He left them and walked to meet O'Neill.

"Let's go inside where we can talk," Logan said, without formalities.

He elbowed his way through the bystanders. O'Neill following. They went into the living room of Estelle Moran's suite, and closed the door. The only other person in the room, a self-conscious looking young detective, gave O'Neill a searching glance and then stared thoughtfully at the door.

The detective said, "Okay," and went out. "What do you know, O'Neill?" Logan said. "I know you do work on the side for the D.A. that nobody's supposed to ask any questions about. But I got to know what you know about this deal."

He looked at O'Neill squarely and there was an uncompromising, stubborn set to his jaw. O'Neill gave him the same expression right back. "I asked him to come up here and keep an eye on Miss Moran while I was gone."

"Why did she need a house detective to look after her?" Logan asked. "Because," O'Neill said, "I wasn't here."

Logan took a deep, exasperated breath and said, "All right then. Why does she need you to look after her?"

"Let me talk to her first," O'Neill said. "I'll give you a square deal on this, Logan."

"All right," Logan said. "Go in and talk to her. She hasn't told me anything. Said she wouldn't talk until you got here. You can have a nice clubby reunion with her. I'm going to sit in on it."

"Come on, then," O'Neill said. He glanced around the room. Thinking of his last words with Spencer. "Where's the body?" he asked.

"They took it downtown," Logan said. O'Neill nodded. He was thinking of nights he had spent in Spencer's home, talking with his wife and his two teen-aged kids. Of drinking beer with Spencer and looking at Spencer's guns. And now he was dead. It made him mad. And sick.

With Logan at his heels he walked into the bedroom. Estelle Moran was lying on the bed, the pink coverlet pulled up to her chin. Her eyes were closed.

The police matron standing beside the bed was a heavy, solid woman in black flat-heeled shoes with a tired face.

"You can wait outside, Miss Meyers," Logan said. Estelle Moran opened her eyes at the sound of the masculine voice. She looked from Logan to O'Neill and began to cry.

O'Neill sat down on the edge of the bed, took her hand. "You've got to talk now," he said. "Take your time, but tell us everything."

"I can't talk about it," she whispered. "You've got to," O'Neill said, impatiently. "You saw who did it?"

She nodded and looked away from him. He put a hand under her chin firmly, pulled her head around until her eyes met his again.

"You've got to tell us everything you heard and saw," he said. "We're going to help you. And get the guy who killed Spencer."

"It was about a half hour after you left. I heard someone talking outside the door. I recognized Spencer's voice, but the other man was speaking so low I couldn't be sure if the voice was familiar. I was too scared to open the door. Then Spencer's voice got louder and he seemed angry. Then they seemed to be struggling and Spencer started to shout. I started for the phone but before I got there I heard a shot. I ran back to the door and I heard someone running. I opened the door and there was a man just turning the corner of the stairs. He looked back and saw me, but he didn't stop, just disappeared around the corner." Her eyes moved away from O'Neill's. "Mr. Spencer was lying just in front of the doorway. There was blood." She buried her head in the pillow. "All right," O'Neill said, "his mind working over oddities in the story. "You recognized the killer, didn't you?"

She lifted her head and said, "Yes," in a voice so low he had to lean forward to catch it. "Well, tell us who it was," Logan rasped.

"Eddie Shapiro," she said. Logan shifted his weight from one foot to the other. "Are you sure?" he asked. "Yes," she said. "I couldn't be mistaken."

Logan shifted his weight again. "Okay, O'Neill. Sorry I acted edgy."

He went out. O'Neill heard the front door of the suite being opened, then Logan's voice issuing fast orders. In five minutes O'Neill knew every cop in town would be told by police radio and call box to look for Eddie Shapiro.

"There's something queer about this deal," O'Neill said. He looked down at the curved line the girl made on the bed and tried to think. Looking at her didn't help his thinking. "Shapiro isn't dumb," he went on, "this doesn't sound like his work. He's putting himself in a hell of a spot and getting nothing out of it. That isn't the way he works."

The girl turned her face away from him and closed her eyes.

O'Neill stands guard — over an empty room. The blonde disappears in tomorrow's instalment of BLONDE DATE WITH MURDER in The Daily Reflector.

Cases Heard In City Police Court
Judge Charles H. Whedbee disposed of 21 cases in Municipal Recorder's Court Monday, eight of them involving violations of motor vehicle and traffic laws.

Robbers Had To Identify Victims
PHOENIX, Ariz., (AP) — Sheriff's officers today reported a new wrinkle in law enforcement: they had to get the robbers to identify the victim.

Two holdup men who robbed liquor store clerk James G. Karsatos of $110 Jan. 9 threatened to kill him if he gave their description to authorities.

Karsatos was so terrified that he went the robbers one better: he changed their physical description in reporting the crime.

But deputies arrested Oscar Lee Walker, 22, and Bobbie Lee Barnes, 20, on another robbery charge. The men said they couldn't have committed the stick-up because they had robbed Karsatos at the time.

Deputies Jack Watson and Bob Dorn confronted Karsatos with the two men, who promptly identified him as their victim. They are being held in the county jail.

Unexpected Help By Hunting Dog
SELDINGROVE, Pa., (AP) — A Pennsylvania Game Warden received unexpected assistance as he approached a pair of hunters in a corn field, whom he suspected were shooting pheasants out of season.

Warden Raymond Holtzapfel said before he could question the two hunters, one man's hunting dog ran up to the warden and laid the evidence, a freshly killed bird, at his feet. The dog's master confessed to the game law violation readily, Holtzapfel added.

Horse's Dignity Upheld By Court
HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Night club comedian Bozo St. Clair has been ordered not to sing about cowboy star Gene Autry's horse Champion.

Federal Judge Joe Ingraham ordered Pete St. Clair, night club owner, Pete Lout and the Town Lounge to pay $250 damages to Autry and Western Music Publishing Co. because of a song recorded in 1953.

Autry's petition said St. Clair recorded a song entitled "Old Gene Artery" in 1953 and the record was sold at the Town Lounge. It said the song made use of profane language and infringed on the copyright of Autry's theme song, "Back in the Saddle Again." The suit sought a total of $5,250 damages.

Ingraham's order enjoins the defendants from making or using such recordings again and specifically ordered that Champion's name not be used again.

Will Show Movie On Heart's Function

Dr. Irwin A. Moon in a scene from "Red River of Life" operates the cardiac pulse duplicator. This new machine was designed specifically for the production of this new film, and makes a specimen heart beat as in a human body. This is done by varying the pressure against the heart walls which in turn actuates the heart valves.

A look at the inside of a beating heart and a personally guided tour through the 100,000 mile maze of blood vessels in the human body are in store for audiences seeing the newest film "Red River of Life" just released by Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. The film will be shown at the Grace Free Will Baptist Church, Saturday, February 1, at 7:30 p.m. This fresh and dramatic approach to the story of the heart, the red blood cell and the circulatory system is the fruit of four years of intensive work by Dr. Irwin A. Moon and the staff at Moody Institute of Science, MBI's film-producing branch in West Los Angeles, California. Inspired by the biblical phrase from the Old Testament, "The life of the flesh is in the blood" (Leviticus 17-11), scientists at MBI set out to explore the almost unknown story behind the mystery of life. They found that the human body is quite similar to an automobile—except for the fact that it has 30 trillion cylinders; that the human heart is the most powerful and precise pump for its size that can be found anywhere, and that the red blood cell is the key to one of the most amazing transportation systems ever devised. In the film Dr. Moon uses an automobile engine to explain what makes the human machine tick. They are similar, he says, because they both need fuel, oxygen and removal of exhaust or waste gases. In an automobile engine these functions are performed by separate systems—fuel, air intake and exhaust—while in the human body these are all performed through the bloodstream which acts as a combination fuel and exhaust.

'Dart Weapon' Remains Secret

WASHINGTON (AP)—That secret bow and arrow study locked deep in government mystery proposes three bow and arrow-type dart gun weapons. They are nicknamed "Little Joe," "Big Joe" and "Joe Louis," and the biggest of them reportedly can throw a half-pound metal dart.

So reported a staff memorandum for the House Government Information subcommittee today as Chairman Moss (D-Calif.) made public a letter about the matter to Secretary of Defense McElroy. Dr. Wallace R. Brode, science adviser to Secretary of State Dulles, testified last week that official secrecy still shrouded results of some bow and arrow experiments directed as a sideline during World War II by a scientist who was an archery enthusiast. He gave no details. The House committee said the work was done by Dr. Paul E. Klopsteg, now assistant director of the National Science Foundation. It said his reports first were classified "restricted," the lowest level, but were raised to "confidential" when the restricted classification was abandoned. Then, tongue in cheek, the staff memorandum said the House group has received comments that the bow and arrow study is being kept secret because such may be the only weapons left after an atomic attack. Or perhaps it was classified in connection with the recent Indian assault on a North Carolina Klan meeting, it said.

Selling 4 Cars For 99 Cents

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—A Flint used car dealer is selling four cars for 99 cents each and another four for $99 apiece tomorrow. But the eight people who'll get them have been waiting in line since Tuesday. Sweating out the line is the only catch.

The cars have been completely reconditioned and are in good shape. The 99-centers have a retail value of $250. The $99-dollar jobs are worth about $500.

It's first-come-first-served. You can't sell your spot in line, you can't have a relief, and you get only 15-minute breaks.

First to show at 11:30 a.m. Tuesday, was James Stewart, an unemployed factory worker.

The only woman in line is Mrs. Sandra Hollingshead, a mother of three, who was laid off from the General Motors A-C Sparkplug Division last week. "My husband thinks I'm nuts," she remarked.

Three students from the General Motors Institute, who have their school books with them to keep up with their classes, are utilizing fraternity pledges to bring them food.

They got their scrambled eggs, toast and coffee in their pup tent. Stewart, who spent a year in Alaska, says the cold is the worst problem. Temperatures have been in the low 30s and despite hunting outfits and heavy bundling the nippy night wind is tough to buck.

Stewart, who says he'll take one of the 99-cent cars, stands to pick up $90 in bets from friends who say he won't stick it out.

All deals are strictly cash. Salesmen get a $15 commission on each sale.

Twin Sons Born On Hospital Trip

FREERPORT, Ill. (AP)—Mrs. Walter Smith gave birth to twin sons yesterday — on her way to a hospital.

She and her husband left their farm home at Egan by car for the 20-mile drive to Freerport.

A 6-pound 10-ounce son was born during the road trip.

The second twin, 5 pounds 15 ounces, was born unattended at the hospital entrance.

Attendants then hustled the mother and her babies inside and they were reported in excellent condition.

Probers Offer Second Chance To Tell Whether Bribes Paid

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate racketeers offered Chicago contractor Stephen A. Healy a second chance today to tell whether he paid $228,923 in bribes to union chieftain William E. Maloney.

Healy pleaded yesterday that "it might incriminate me" to tell whether he had bribed Maloney, president of the powerful International Union of Operating Engineers.

He thus became the first witness to plead the Fifth Amendment's protection in the current series of hearings. None of the union witnesses who have testified thus far has refused to answer questions.

The 74-year-old Maloney says he is too ill to testify. The special Senate committee said it has been denied access to 10 bank safety boxes held in the names of Maloney and his wife in various cities.

With announced intention to explore Maloney's sources of income, the committee's counsel Robert F. Kennedy said he has subpoenaed Maloney's Chicago accountant, whom he named as James R. Bansley, for questioning.

Healy, 69, heads the S. A. Healy Co. of Chicago, which Kennedy has described as one of the nation's major construction firms. Committee Chairman McClellan (D-Ark.) referred to Healy's age in saying that time is getting short and "your country needs" the testimony to help fight evils of corruption in unionism. Healy refused to answer more than 30 questions dealing with his finances and his relations with union officials. While Healy smiled grimly, committee investigators testified the books of the Healy company show he withdrew $228,923 in cash between May 1950 and Dec. 31, 1956. Kennedy and McClellan teamed up, then, in demanding whether all or any of this had been passed out as bribes to Maloney, to buy favored treatment in negotiating collective bargaining. Healy refused to say. He also refused to tell whether he had participated in a deal to hold Chicago Local 150 under Maloney's one-man rule for 29 years. The committee has heard days of testimony alleging misuse of huge sums from funds of the union's San Francisco, Philadelphia and Newark locals, and brutal beating of members who protested. It is turning now to what went on in the international headquarters here, and its Local 150 in Chicago, which Maloney ran. Before Healy's appearance, the committee heard testimony that special payments and benefits aggregating $238,900 or more had been made by the union's Newark Local 825 to labor racketeer Joey Fay and Mrs. Fay. Most of this, the witness said, was since Fay went to prison in 1948 for extortion. He was paroled in 1956. Fay headed the local until he was sent to prison. From documents and witnesses the committee produced figures to show that among other things the local had put up $63,150 to pay lawyers defending Fay; now pays Fay $12,600 a year pension; had given Mrs. Fay a job with "no set duties" or regular working hours that paid her $87,500 in salary and bonuses in the eight years Fay spent in prison; and gave her a car worth $3,282.

In addition, the testimony showed, the union last year bought for $88,144 from a firm in which Fay was a partner the Newark building in which the local has its headquarters. The committee said the building's appraised value was $77,000.

GM Says Price Boosts Still Fail Cover Costs

Condemned Man Given Reprieve

WASHINGTON (AP)—General Motors President Harlow H. Curtice said today that the higher price tags on its 1958 model cars fail to cover the increased cost of producing them.

"For every dollar of increase in our own costs," he said, "price has increased only 60 cents."

Curtice was called before the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly subcommittee after two days of testimony by Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers.

The GM president told the subcommittee, inquiring into pricing practices in the automobile industry, that "increased wage costs have been the largest single element in our rising costs."

He said in his prepared statement that he found it somewhat difficult to reconcile Reuther's "professed concern over inflation with his announced 1958 collective bargaining program."

The UAW has proposed, as part of its goal, a plan under which workers and car buyers would share in the profits of the automobile manufacturers.

Reuther contended that wages have lagged behind productivity and profits and that his profit-sharing plan would help to overcome what he called an imbalance in the economy by increasing purchasing power.

While Curtice made no direct reference to the UAW's recently unveiled profit-sharing plan, he rapped Reuther's proposal of last year that the Big Three auto makers—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—agree to cut 1958 model prices by $100.

He called the proposal "completely unrealistic" and said he thought it was obvious that was "just another public relations job." In return for the proposed price cut, he said, Reuther had offered only to take it into consideration in making contract demands this year.

Reuther told newsmen during a recess in the hearing that if the auto companies agreed to cut car prices $100, as the UAW had proposed, the union would drop the price rebate to purchasers which it called for as part of its profit-sharing plan.

Attach Assets Of Hedy Lamarr

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Two attorneys seeking to collect alleged unpaid fees of $24,557 have attached actress Hedy Lamarr's local assets.

The attachment was disclosed when a sealed complaint, filed in Superior Court by William G. Israel and Norton B. Harper, was opened yesterday. They alleged the actress owes them $8,557 for general services in the last four years and $16,000 for special work in connection with the movie "Love of Three Queens."

RALEIGH (AP)—A 22-year-old Bennettsville, S.C., Negro, scheduled to die in the gas chamber tomorrow for robbery-murder, has been granted a 30-day reprieve.

Gov. Luther Hodges announced yesterday he was granting the reprieve because he needs more time to study the case. Unless Robert Bunton receives further executive clemency, he will be executed March 21. Under state law, the execution date will fall on the third Friday after the expiration of the reprieve.

Prison officials said that when Bunton learned of the reprieve he broke out into a smile and said, "I'm very happy and thank everybody for me."

He was convicted of murder in the holdup-slaying on Jan. 5, 1957, of Clifford Whit Phillips, High Point taxi driver. The robbery netted Bunton and an accomplice, John Kollick Jr., a total of $15.

The trial jury recommended mercy for Kollick. This automatically fixed his punishment at life imprisonment. According to testimony, Bunton fired the shot that killed Phillips.

The State Supreme Court handed down a decision Jan. 10 in which it found no error in Bunton's conviction.

Some See Today's Decline As 'Inventory Recession'

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Is this an inventory recession like the two previous postwar ones? And like them will it end when inventory cutting runs its course and business starts refilling the supply pipelines?

Most business leaders who express an opinion say so—both for their own lines and for the economy as a whole. Government economists count heavily on this when forecasting an upturn by midyear or early fall.

Only a few observers caution that inventory cutting could be largely a symptom of something else and that possibly other things may have to be cured before a need to refill the pipelines becomes a deciding factor.

Some even question if the remedies now being tried—easier money, intentionally, and increased defense spending, primarily for other reasons—will be enough.

It's easier to see how inventory cutting came about than to chart its course and turning point.

The situation in the auto industry typifies what has been happening in many other forms of consumer durable goods, such as appliances.

Consumer buying of the 1958 models, for whatever reason, hasn't come up to Detroit's earlier hopes. So production has been cut back. So far this year the factories have turned out 25 per cent fewer cars than in the same period of 1957.

Cutbacks in auto production have led Detroit purchasing agents to go slow in ordering steel. Present steel stocks are being used up.

This has been one reason the steel mills have cut back output. This week's tonnage production is 41 per cent lower than in the same week in 1957.

Workers have been laid off all along the line.

This rise in unemployment, added to job trimming in other industries, is beginning to show up as a drop in total personal incomes—in other words, less consumer purchasing power.

Inventory trimming will run its course and level off when steel stocks equal what is needed to produce the number of cars the public will buy. Inventory build-up will start again when the public buys more cars, requiring that more steel be ordered to meet the demand.

Consumer reluctance to buy durable goods is only one of the reasons behind the general inventory trimming.

A major one was the decision of businessmen themselves to cut back on their expansion program. This spending reached a peak last summer with industry plunking out nearly 38 billion dollars at an annual rate for new plants and equipment. In the first quarter of this year the annual rate has dropped to 35½ billion.

A chief factor in sparking the inventory cutback was the economy wave in the Defense Department, which clipped spending from 10 billion dollars in the spring quarter to 9½ billion in the final months of the year.

A worldwide business slowdown cut exports by about two billion.

All together these led businessmen to switch from a policy of adding to inventory at the rate of two billion a year last summer to trimming stocks by three billion a year as 1957 ended.

Filling A Need For Housemaids

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—A typical American shortage has made a good business for Tor Petterson. He imports housemaids.

The 41-year-old Norwegian opened the scandia Placement Agency seven months ago. Since then he has brought 450 persons here from Scandinavian countries to work as domestics.

"In the United States no one seems to want to work as a domestic," Petterson said. "Living standards are too high; the work no longer appeals to Americans. But Scandinavians feel differently about it. It's good training for them. Good training for marriage, a good way to come to know the United States and its way of life."

Petterson says his imports get $125 a month, plus room and board. The hiring family pays Petterson's $65 fee and also the passage money, deducting the latter from the servant's pay over a period of six months or a year.

Petterson came here in 1945 with $7 and worked his way through California Institute of Technology. He will soon become an American citizen.

"If the American family is large, we try to find a strong, husky girl from a large family who'll fit in," Petterson said. "If the family is small—for example, in Beverly Hills—we try to find a girl who knows the social graces. We try to weed out the girl who is going only for the ride."

The average maid's age is 25 and the average working contract 18 months. Of the 450 imports so far, all but 20 were women. Ten of the men were husbands of maids. Petterson plans to extend his operations to Wales, Scotland, Switzerland and Holland to meet increasing demands.

An Expressway Zoo Moving For

MILWAUKEE (AP)—One of the most widely known and historic parts of Milwaukee's zoo has been doomed by demolition plans for an expressway.

The two dens which housed the first polar bears born in captivity and raised successfully soon will be torn down. In the dens, 19 polar bears were born over the last 38 years and 16 grew to maturity. Zoo officials say it's a record unmatched by any zoo in the country.

A new zoo is being built at another site.

Phantoms Host To E. City; East Carolina Hosts WCC

G-Men Expected To Triumph By More Than 20

By BILLY ARNOLD Reflector Sports Editor NORTHEASTERN STANDINGS

Table with columns W, L, and scores for various teams like New Bern, Greenville, Washington, etc.

Greenville's Rose High Phantoms, fresh from an impressive 62-53 victory over Washington, takes on Elizabeth City here tomorrow night in their seventh Northeastern Conference ball game of the year.

For the Phantoms, it will be their second meeting with the EC club. They won earlier by 20 points over the winless Yellow Jackets.

Greenville's win Tuesday night over Washington's Pam-Pack showed the Phantoms into second place in the conference standings behind New Bern. The surprising Bears walloped Jacksonville 64-56 on the same night to stay far ahead, while Kingston claimed a win over Elizabeth City.

Thus, as the conference tourney nears (it will be in Greenville in the last of February), the standings are beginning to take a definite shape.

Coach Boley Farley's quintet, improving with each game, is rated more than 20 better than the Yellow Jackets tomorrow night. The visitors will come to Greenville without a win and are expected to leave in the same fashion.

A victory—an absolutely sure thing—would give the G-Men a 5-2 mark and better their chances of catching up with the runaway Bears before the season is over.

Expected to start for Farley tomorrow night will be Allen and Hudson at guards, Nunn and Evans at forwards, and Crawford at center.

Game time for the varsity encounter is set for 8:00. A junior varsity game will get underway at 6:30 at Jumbo H. Rose Gym.

NFL Eliminates Bonus Agreement

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The National Football League, acting on advice from congressional investigators, eliminated one of their player selection show pieces last night—the bonus choice.

League owners at their annual winter meeting also reaffirmed their television policy for another year, passed a rule giving further protection to college players and joined with the players association in retaining former all-pro star Bill Dudley to formulate a pension plan.

Elimination of the bonus choice, though reported a possibility by commissioner Bert Bell, came as somewhat of a surprise. Instituted in 1947 at the suggestion of ex-pro coach Curley Lambeau, this out-of-the-hat drawing had become a bright feature of the annual player draft.

The Chicago Bears won the first bonus 12 years ago when they picked the lucky slip and chose Bob Fenimore, an Oklahoma A.&M. back.

The bonus choice preceded the start of the regular draft and gave the lucky team negotiating rights to any eligible college player in the country. The Chicago Cardinals last Dec. 2 were the last of the 12 pro clubs to get the bonus, choosing Rice quarterback King Kill.

Commissioner Bell was told during his appearance before a congressional committee investigating pro sports that the out-of-hat system bordered on an illegal lottery. So, the owners, unable to come up with a satisfactory substitute, decided to please congress and toss out the bonus altogether.

Lambeau's original idea was to give each NFL locality a chance to obtain over the 12-year cycle, one of the top college players of the year.

Benn announced that the NFL would continue to black out telecasts of its games within 75 miles of the scene of a game. He reiterated that under no conditions, including playoffs and championship games would the league deviate from this policy, approved by a federal judge several years ago after long and costly litigation.

In connection with this decision, the players association issued a statement backing Bell 100 percent on the TV policy. The association, through its president, Bill Howton, star end of the Green Bay Packers, said, "In maintaining the blackouts, Bell was acting in the best interests of the players. In the event Bell permitted hometown television future gate attendance could suffer and pro-

More Than One McGuire With Yankees In NC

By KEN ALYTA CHARLOTTE (AP)—Another McGuire and his basketball players from the sidewalks of New York have come to North Carolina and formed a winning team.

Last season Frank McGuire's University of North Carolina team swept 32 games and won the national championship.

This season little Belmont Abbey, a Roman Catholic college, 12 miles west of here, has a 14-0 record against college competition in Al McGuire's debut as a head coach. Al is no relation to Frank, for whom he played college ball at St. John's in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Al, who is 28, brought three freshman starters from New York with him to go along with hold-over talent. The combination has jelled quickly. Only a 73-59 loss to the Quantico, Va., Marines in a holiday tournament semifinal game mars the Abbey slate.

McGuire has installed a system of good ball handling and smart shooting that has seen the opposition held to a 57.2 average while the Crusaders have averaged 69.3. Last year when Abbey won only 11 of 27 the enemy averaged 84 points against 79 for Abbey.

Other yearling starters are Jim Mullen, from Brooklyn, N.Y., a smoothie who is the "quarterback" of the club, and Dan (Sunshine) Doyle, from New York City.

Top scorer, with a 20-point average is Bob Stewart, Lynchburg, Va., junior. He's one of the nation's best foul shots, hitting 71 of 82. Mike Ross of Greenville, S. C. is the only senior starter.

McGuire, who played pro ball with the New York Knicks and Baltimore before taking assistant posts at Dartmouth and St. John's has his eye on a berth in the National Assn. of Intercollegiate Ath-

Bucs Seek Revenge For Earlier Loss

Swinging back into action after over a week of idleness, the East Carolina Pirates take on Western Carolina here at the ECC gym tomorrow night—rated 10 points underdogs.

The Catamounts, boasting a 6-2 record and third place in the North State standings, defeated the Bucs earlier at Cullowhee, 92-85. Tomorrow night, though they are rated to win again, it is expected that they will have plenty of trouble doing it.

East Carolina is long overdue in the win department. They haven't won a ball game since the North State Commissioner, C. B. Hinshaw took three conference games away from them on an alleged ineligibility forfeit. Immediately following Hinshaw's announcement, the Pirates were beaten at Lenoir

Elliott Beats Mile 2nd Time

MELBOURNE, (AP)—Australian Herbert Elliott tonight ran the mile in 3:58.7—the second time in five days he has clocked under four minutes.

The lanky long-striding Elliott went to the front with one and a half laps to go and comfortably held off a strong challenge by Lincoln, Ro. Clarke was well back in third place with 4:09.5.

Rube Walker To Get Campy's Catching Slot

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Tragedy has thrust the opportunity of full-time employment to Al (Rube) Walker, a catcher with little to do during the last six baseball seasons.

Walker's trouble was simple. He was on the same team as Roy Campanella, a circumstance that practically reduced—or elevated—him to the leisure class. But Campanella is gone now with a broken neck, and Vice President Emil Bavasi of the Los Angeles Dodgers had this to say yesterday: "Walker is our No. 1 catcher now, and for at least three weeks after the start of spring training. He will be given every opportunity over that period to show Manager Walt Alston that he can pick up the burden.

U. S. To Drop Secret Label On Soviet Science Reports

By G. K. HODENFIELD PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The government has decided to let down all the bars and release for immediate public use more than 50,000 Soviet scientific documents a year, an authoritative source revealed today. Every agency in the government which now translates such Soviet literature has agreed to take part in the plan, he said.

"No longer will the documents be stamped 'secret' and left to gather dust in the files," he said. "From now on, all this important scientific material is going to be distributed to the nation's scientists just as fast as it can be handled."

The sharp reversal in government policy was revealed by a source close to the government who is here as a delegate to the conference of American Abstracting and Indexing Services. He asked not to be further identified.

The bulk of the Soviet literature will be made available by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Air Force's Air Information Division. The Air Force set up its own intelligence agency to handle Soviet documents some years ago. It has been using the facilities of the Library of Congress.

The material to be released first is current literature which has been received and translated within the past year. A backlog estimated to contain hundreds of thousands of documents will be released in small batches so the flood of literature doesn't swamp the country's scientists.

Most of the material has been "secret" only insofar as this country is concerned. All has been published openly in the Soviet Union, or in such European countries as East and West Germany and France.

The source said the material had been stamped secret for three reasons—security, because the agencies couldn't afford to produce enough copies, and because they couldn't afford the considerable costs of distribution.

Some of the documents, the source said, "undoubtedly originated in this country, were translated into Russian by the Soviets, brought back to this country and translated back into English—and then stamped 'secret.'"

No final decision has yet been reached, the source said, on just how the mass of documents will be made available to the public. The abstracting and indexing agencies, the nation's major scientific information services, were asked if they would like first crack at the material. The source said they were enthusiastic, but withheld a final decision on the question until later today.

Attack Power Company Rates

RALEIGH (AP)—A provision in the industrial rate schedules of Carolina Power & Light Co. has come under attack by 38 manufacturing firms which claim the rates are unjust and excessive.

The firms, 34 of which are utility organizations, have banded together under the name of "Carolina Committee for Industrial Power Rates and Area Development Inc." to oppose the rates.

They asked the State Utilities Commission yesterday to eliminate a provision in CP&L's industrial schedules which ties its rates to the price of coal.

The petitioners contend the rates have retarded and will continue to retard industrial development of the eastern Carolina area served by CP&L. They also claim the rates put them at a competitive disadvantage with firms served by Duke Power Co. in the Piedmont.

Under the provision, CP&L is permitted to levy an additional charge on each kilowatt-hour above 15,000. The charge is .0065 of a cent for each 10 cents above a base cost of $6 per short ton of coal.

In calling for elimination of the fuel adjustment provision, the petitioners asked the commission to "fix a schedule of rates...which will be fair, just and reasonable" and will not subject them to "unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage." The petition asserted CP&L charges "a greater rate per kilowatt hour, and per unit of product," than plants are charged in Duke Power Co.'s area.

May Find Space Crawling With Mental Hazards

By JOHN A. BARBOUR AP Science Reporter NEW YORK (AP)—An Air Force scientist says man may find space crawling with these mental hazards:

Marching squirrels, tiny rocket ships that fire pellets, and little men who swing on space ship instruments.

Reporting today to a meeting of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences, experimental psychologist George T. Hauty told of three pre-space-flight experiments.

One of these was conducted by McGill University scientists of Montreal, Canada. They wanted to find out what happened when you shut off sights, sounds and other sense stimuli. They closed male volunteers in cubicles for 48 hours.

Soon one subject reported: "A procession of squirrels with sacks over their shoulders marching purposefully across a snowfield..."

Another said he saw a miniature rocket ship shooting pellets at his arm.

In addition to having hallucinations, the volunteers became irritable and were unable to concentrate on complex ideas. The volunteers were amused by the visions at first—but later complained that they interfered with their sleep.

Researchers made the experiments to determine if there is a background activity as well as normal sensory activity in the brain.

In another experiment, Hauty and R. Payne confined 30 volunteers in cockpits and put them to work for 30 consecutive hours. They had to regulate and control certain occurrences using dials and buttons on instrument panels.

While allowed 20-minute breaks at mealtimes, they were not permitted to sleep. Much to the surprise of researchers, the subjects reported hallucinations and illusions.

Some were simple and poorly defined, said Hauty—for instance "the instrument panel kept melting and dripping to the floor."

Other subjects reported very well-organized phenomena such as: "On several occasions, the (instrument) showed a hippopotamus smiling at me."

Another said he spent a good deal of time brushing away little men who kept swinging on the air speed indicator and preventing him from reading it.

No Extradition For 81-Year-Old

RALEIGH (AP)—An 81-year-old New Jersey man can look ahead today with the happy thought that he will not have to return to the North Carolina prison camp from which he escaped 30 years ago.

Gov. Luther Hodges announced yesterday that he will not request the New Jersey governor to extradite Ben Johnson and that he is commuting Johnson's sentence to time already served.

Johnson, known in New Jersey as Charlie Johnson, escaped from a Wake County prison camp in 1928 after serving 12 years of a 20-25 sentence for second degree murder. He was arrested in New Jersey recently on a charge of drunkenness. A routine check showed he was wanted in North Carolina.

During his years as a fugitive, Johnson has lived an exemplary life in New Jersey. He had worked for a paper company in Newark for many years until his retirement a few years ago. He was described by his former employer as "a mild-mannered man and a good worker."

Hodges said the North Carolina Board of Pardons, "as do the New Jersey authorities, recommend that his sentence be commuted to time served and that his return to North Carolina not be requested."

The governor said he was taking into account Johnson's "extreme age and (poor) physical condition, the fact that all of his family ties are in New Jersey and his relatives have expressed the desire and intention to care for him during his remaining years."

Hodges, noting that Johnson had actually served more than one half of his sentence, said "a prisoner is eligible for parole consideration after serving one-fourth of his sentence."

Saved By Half Pint Of Blood

CHICAGO (AP)—A half-pint blood transfusion was credited as a life saver for a tiny baby suffering from an Rh blood factor condition.

The 47-day-old girl, Yvonne Fountain, weighed only 2 pounds 14 ounces when she was born prematurely in Presbyterian - St. Luke's Hospital. Now she weighs five pounds.

Hospital officials reported that her blood was Rh positive and her blood was Rh positive and condition which caused destruction of the baby's blood, threatening life.

In the transfusion, the baby's blood was alternately removed and replaced until the antibodies were carried away in sufficient amounts.

OK Compromise On Insurance In Bogart's Death

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An insurance company's compromise offer to pay $40,000 on a $90,000 policy issued on the life of the late Humphrey Bogart has been approved in Superior Court. The Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. issued the policy, the court was informed, on Feb. 2, 1956, only 11 months before the actor died of cancer.

C. O. MacNeill, Security-First National Bank trust officer, testified yesterday that the compromise between the insurance carrier and the beneficiary, Bogart's Mapleton Productions, Inc., was reached after it was pointed out that the actor may have been unaware he had cancer and thus could not so inform the insurance company.

Bogart, 56, died Jan. 14, 1957. A high speed ferry boat travels between the mainland of Italy to the island of Sicily, making the 8-mile crossing to Messina in just 10 minutes.

Better Students Regarded Key To Advance In Science

By CHARLES L. STAFFORD
AP Staff Writer

One educator put it this way: "We won't launch any satellites by turning out a lot of students in science fields."

"We may be turning out better ones."

He is J. Cloyd Miller, a member of the New Mexico State Board of Education. He was discussing a tough new rule that will send most of the science teachers in his state back to school.

Since the Russians successfully launched the first moon in October, Americans have been asking whether our educational system has failed, and if so where.

An Associated Press survey carried the question across the country to educators at both the state and local levels. At the state level, it found signs of positive action and a wealth of ideas. Several states have taken steps to improve science teaching, broaden the scope of science courses and give talented students new opportunities to learn. Others are studying what needs to be done.

Says Miller: "If they have been out a long while, they need refreshing in their fields. Science is something which doesn't stand still."

New Mexico is seeking better teaching. This may be a natural thing. New Mexico first joined the atom age. The first A-bomb was tested there, and high priority installations dot the state.

The new rule that Miller mentions almost triples the amount of study a teacher needs to teach science.

By Sept. 1, 1960, he says a science teacher must have 24 hours in laboratory courses, including eight hours of physics and one course each in chemistry and biology. Two years later, the minimum requirement will be 36 hours of science.

"My idea is that if we'd had these strict requirements in the past—and could have gotten the teachers—we (the United States) would have been in a much better position today," says Miller, who also is president of New Mexico Western College.

The New York State Board of Regents has proposed a multi-million-dollar program.

The plan includes an increase in scholarships from 6,000 to 12,000, including 500 more for engineering and science students. It would add one hour to the 5 1/2 hours of daily classroom work in junior and senior high schools.

An extra million dollars a year would be spent helping schools establish experimental courses in science. Special aid also would be provided for teachers wishing to return to college and for gifted students.

In Kansas, the State Board of Education is considering new requirements for high school graduation. They would include: four years of English, two of science, at least two of mathematics, three of social science and two of health and physical education. Present requirements are three years of English, one of science, one of mathematics, 1 1/2 of social science and one of physical education.

New standards requiring high school students to complete at least one year of mathematics have been adopted in New Hampshire. Previously the only state requirements were three years of English and one of American history.

New Hampshire and Vermont high school physics students attend monthly lectures at Dartmouth by members of the college's physics faculty.

In Florida, youngsters have been getting an early baptism of science for almost two decades. In 1938, science text books were provided for the first six grades. A few years later, science and mathematics requirements were established for all students in the first nine grades.

Builds Own Road To His Island

ST. AGATHA, Maine (AP) — Edwin Pelletier of Frenchville farms a 300-acre island in Long Lake here. Until this year, the only way to reach the island was by boat. "Sick and tired of running a ferry," Pelletier had a causeway built. It took 5,000 yards of rock and 36,000 yards of gravel. Now he has his own road, three fourths of a mile long and 18 inches above the spring high water mark. He figures it will make easier his job of raising potatoes, grain and hay. He also pastures beef cattle on the island.

Simpler, If Nations Could Act Like Individual People

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Life would be simpler and maybe safer if nations of people could act like individual people. For instance: in visiting one another.

This week the United States and the Soviet Union signed an agreement for exchanging visitors—delegations from industry, agriculture, the arts, and so on—but it took effort ever since 1955 to get around to it.

The idea started that year at the summit conference in Geneva. Some visits were exchanged. But in the fall of 1956 the Soviet Union crushed the Hungarian revolt and this country on Dec. 3, 1956, called a halt to the exchange program.

State Department officials represented President Eisenhower as believing the program should not be resumed until the Soviet Union showed it believes in the right of neighboring countries to coexist under governments of their own choosing.

The Soviets haven't demonstrated any such thing but nevertheless, the new exchange program was agreed to this week.

In fact on April 12, 1957, the Eisenhower administration tentatively agreed to resume the program.

During this time some small exchanges were taking place. But the idea got a boost—or a needle—on June 2, 1957, when Nikita Khrushchev, Communist party boss, appeared on millions of American TV screens in a filmed interview made by the Columbia Broadcasting System the previous month.

Among other things Khrushchev called for wider exchange of cultural delegations. At his news conference June 5 Eisenhower rather brushed aside the Khrushchev performance.

But the Soviets followed up. On June 6 they sent their ambassador to Washington, Georgi N. Zarubin, to the State Department. He spent more than two hours there, urging expansion of cultural exchanges.

On June 24 this government urged the U.S.S.R. to allow Soviet and American leaders to speak directly to each other's people in a series of uncensored radio and TV programs.

The State Department, in making this offer, acknowledged the timing was influenced partly by Khrushchev's appearance on TV here. The Soviets on July 26 proposed a conference with this country to get agreement on exchanges.

On Aug. 16 this government said it was willing to talk. On Oct. 28 Zarubin walked into the State Department with 52 proposals.

The two main American suggestions turned out to be these: agreement by Moscow to stop jamming voice of American broadcasts in Russian, and regular exchange of uncensored radio-TV comments on world events.

The negotiations, which started with Zarubin's visit last October, were finally turned into the agreement signed Monday. The United States didn't get its two main requests. The Soviets didn't get all they wanted, either.

For example: the Soviets, who have jet airliners, wanted direct Moscow-New York air service, which would probably mean Soviet jets landing in this country twice a week. The Soviet proposal wasn't turned down flatly.

This country may agree to this when it has jet airliners in operation too.

Sheriff Is Freed From Own Jail

BISBEE, Ariz. (AP)—The sheriff of Cochise, sprung from his own pokey, was a free man today.

Sheriff Jack Howard consented Monday to stay in the county jail as a publicity stunt for the local March of Dimes. The stunt succeeded. The drive exceeded its local $3,000 goal by $1,500 but the group still is plugging for $50,000 in nationwide donations.

Drive chairman Orrin Crandall decided to release the sheriff. After all, he said, if they waited until they got $50,000, the sheriff might have to stay in jail until he got a pardon from the governor.

Active Week Behind Students At Grifton

By BARBARA TAYLOR
Grifton School Reporter
Grifton's Tri-Hi-Y Club members were guests of the Ayden Tri-Hi-Y Club at a recent joint meeting.

Susan Ross was hostess for the meeting which was presided over by Carol McLawhorn. The program for the day included a Bible Quiz, won by Grifton and led by Shirley Moseley.

Judy and Millie Bateman were hostesses at a recent meeting of the Beta Club. Mr. Earl Denton, advisor to the club, presented plans for the district Beta Club Rally which will be held February 14 in Williamston, and the State Beta Club Convention which will be held March 14 and March 15 in Raleigh.

Delegates to the two meetings were elected.

The most recent meeting of the Future Homemakers of America was held in the Home Economics Building with President Esther Coward presiding. Reports were received from committees that distributed Christmas baskets to needy families, and the eight purposes of FHA were explained by program chairman Doll Groat.

Seniors have taken one more step toward graduation by ordering their invitations and calling cards. Members of the class have also voted to use black caps and gowns for the exercises.

Propose Three Insurance Rates

RALEIGH (AP)—The State Fire Insurance Rating Bureau, in an amended filing, proposes establishment of three classes of unprotected dwelling rates rather than two.

The action came yesterday as a result of a recent decision by State Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold.

Gold said he did not approve that portion of the filing relating to unprotected dwellings because he thought the difference in rates for the originally proposed two classes would be too high. He asked for three classes.

A public hearing on the matter was scheduled for Feb. 4.

The original proposal called for a "Superior Class" carrying a rate of 54 cents per $100 and an "Ordinary Class" carrying 80 cents per $100.

Under the three-class proposal, the first would carry the same 54 cents a $100, the second would be 60 cents and the third 72 cents.

It was recognized there was a need for a rate revision because of unfavorable loss experience.

Weather Poses Missile Hazard

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP)—The weather has become one of the major hazards in the United States' earth satellite program.

Yesterday, strong winds buffeted the Florida east coast, making uncertain the time when the Army might try to put up a man-made "moon" with its Jupiter-C missile.

Last week, heavy rains were an important factor in the Navy's postponement of a second effort to launch a Vanguard satellite rocket and in the Air Force's failure to make a scheduled firing of a Thor ballistic missile.

High winds can make launching of some missiles extremely difficult.

At ground level, gusts of 20 to 30 miles an hour, such as those of yesterday, could exert a strong effect on a rocket in the early stages of its flight.

In the upper atmosphere, winds sometimes reach velocities that could topple a rocket.

Rain can flood underground conduits, shorting out the power supply to the launching complexes. That is what prevented the Thor firing Friday.

The Thor blasted off Tuesday. The Air Force announced immediately after the firing that it was a successful test.

Yesterday, after studying data gathered by recording stations on the missile test range, the Air Force said the missile deviated from its prescribed course. No further detail was given.

Claims Slaying Inspired By Fear

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP)—William Matthews Stewart, his story broken by sobbs, testified yesterday that he killed his wife Jan. 18 after living in fear of her since their 1955 marriage.

The 61-year-old Negro was sentenced to 18-28 years in prison after pleading guilty to the second degree murder of his wife, Sarah, who, herself, had served a prison term for slaying her first husband.

"I was scared even to sleep with her," Stewart said. "She carried a knife to bed and would fuss and quarrel all night long."

The woman died of 17 knife wounds. Officers found Stewart beside her body, wiping blood from his knife. He said she had attacked him with a lamp and knocked him down.

"As God is my secret judge," Stewart testified, "I didn't want to do it. She brought it on herself. I was scared of her all the time and I was tired of running and running."

It Takes A Lot Of Chickens

LAUREL, Del. (AP)—It takes a lot of chickens just to make "chicken feed" in the broiler business, according to a University of Delaware poultry extension specialist.

Silas McHenry says you need 30,000 broilers to reap a net income of only $300 a month. The $4,800 annual costs include in addition to the birds and poultry house, miscellaneous equipment, taxes, insurance, repairs, painting, labor and interest on the loan.

Crew Is Ready For Jet Plane

MERCED, Calif. (AP)—If and when President Eisenhower decides to switch from the Columbine to a jet-propelled plane, his crew will be ready.

Col. William G. Draper, commander of the Columbine, and his navigator and flight engineer began an 11-week course at Castle Air Force Base yesterday to familiarize themselves with the KC135 jet tanker.

Early Start In Science Studies

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Taking note of Russia's success with its earth satellites, the Chambersburg school district has introduced formal science instruction in its lower elementary grades.

Heretofore, formal science instruction did not begin until the eighth grade. The school board decided to teach courses, in science starting in the fourth grade.

Weather Poses Missile Hazard

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP)—The weather has become one of the major hazards in the United States' earth satellite program.

Yesterday, strong winds buffeted the Florida east coast, making uncertain the time when the Army might try to put up a man-made "moon" with its Jupiter-C missile.

Last week, heavy rains were an important factor in the Navy's postponement of a second effort to launch a Vanguard satellite rocket and in the Air Force's failure to make a scheduled firing of a Thor ballistic missile.

NO MISUNDERSTANDING

KIRKLAND LAKE, Ont. (AP)—Fire Chief R. J. Mathieson felt that immigrants were smoking in prohibited areas because they couldn't understand English. He now has posted 200 signs which say "no smoking" in 25 different languages.

Urge Limitation On Using X-Ray

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Two state health officials say X-ray still are the most significant form of ionizing radiation from the public health point of view.

John C. Lumsden, chief industrial hygiene engineer of the Occupational Health Section of the State Board of Health, and Dr. William M. Peck of the board of health's Division of Epidemiology addressed the fourth annual seminar on radiation and public health which ended here yesterday.

They told the group of more than 100 persons from the Carolinas and Virginia that even with "present day applications of radioactive isotopes, particle accelerators and nuclear weapons, X-rays still are the most widely used type of radiation."

They said the elimination of unnecessary human exposure to X-radiation should be the goal of the public health department. And, they added, the key to radiation safety is constant inspection of equipment.

Early Return Of Stolen Camera

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—C. W. Shipman had his camera stolen, but he got it back before he found out it was gone.

Mrs. J. V. Campbell showed up at Shipman's home to ask if he owned a camera that was missing. He said it was in the car but when Shipman looked, he discovered it was gone. Mrs. Shipman had found it in some weeds near her home.

Heart Symposium Audience Is Told Medical Care Costs To Go Higher

One of the world's foremost authorities on heart disease warned Tuesday night that medical care will become more costly.

The increases will come, according to Dr. Samuel A. Levine, "because the medical profession has something to sell, and if medicine is available we want it."

Dr. Levine was one of four speakers at the Coastal Plain Heart Association's fourth annual heart symposium, jointly sponsored by the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society. His comments were made at a public session which closed the symposium.

Clinical Professor of Medicine, Emeritus, at Harvard University's School of Medicine and a consultant in cardiology at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, Dr. Levine was scheduled to address the public meeting on "Facts and Fancies About Heart Disease." He prefaced his remarks, however, with what he termed "a few comments on various aspects of medicine apart from heart disease."

According to Dr. Levine, "Doctors had accomplished little until 100 years ago. They 'protected' society, but the world wouldn't have suffered much if there were no doctors.

"Today, the situation is so different. We hear so much about the cost of medical care, and it is high and will go higher because the medical profession has something to sell, and if medicine is available we want it."

"We don't know, of course, what we will need in a particular situation but we like to think we can get it if necessary. We like to think we have that protection."

"Yes, the high cost of medical care will get worse, but the care will be better. We learn more and we do more."

Dr. Levine cited "tremendous advances in my lifetime" before giving the floor to Dr. Ernest Craigie and Dr. W. C. Sealy who appeared with him on the symposium. Dr. Craigie gave an illustrated discussion on prevention of heart disease and Dr. Sealy discussed the necessity of research in heart disease and some of the present techniques in heart surgery.

Dr. John B. Hickam, professor of medicine in Duke University's School of Medicine and president of the North Carolina Heart Association, presided at the open session.

Dr. Craigie used cartoon characters he called "The Vulnerable Valvictorian," "The Sedentary

Asks $25,000 In Bowling Mishap

CHICAGO (AP)—A man struck by a bowling ball sued for $25,000 damages yesterday.

Thomas Kincaid, 43, alleged he suffered a permanent brain in-Jury March 11, 1957, at the Laguna Recreation Parlor. He sued for damages from the owners, George Lagens and Leo Thomas, and from a patron, William Lapp.

The Circuit Court said Lapp took a ball from a rack and began swinging it. The ball slipped from Lapp's hand, sailed 30 feet through the air and hit Kincaid. Kincaid did not regain consciousness for three days and spent two weeks in a hospital.

The suit said an alley employee had oiled the finger holes of the ball and that the proprietors were negligent.

A FUTURE IN NEWS DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Dean Earl P. English of the University of Missouri School of Journalism believes there's a great future in news work for young people. Last year, Dr. English told an interviewer his school graduated 110 students and had 563 job offers for graduates.

NAM Head Raps Heavy Spending

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The president of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, touring the South, sharply criticized government spending during a news conference here yesterday.

Milton C. Lightner, who recently became NAM president, said 15 to 20 per cent of tax money is lost on the trip from the state to the federal government and back. He branded it "extravagant and wasteful."

Lightner said, "The federal government tends to see expenditures are made according to Washington's idea of wise spending, rather than what may be the hometown idea. We need stronger state and local governments."

Switching subjects, Lightner predicted, "The movement of industry into the South is bound to continue. You have the natural resources, transportation, the market, the labor."

Lightner delivered an off-the-record address at a meeting of about 100 Carolinas NAM members here.

Consider Strain In Dental Work

LOS ANGELES (AP)—While taking the pain out of your teeth, your dentist may get an aching back.

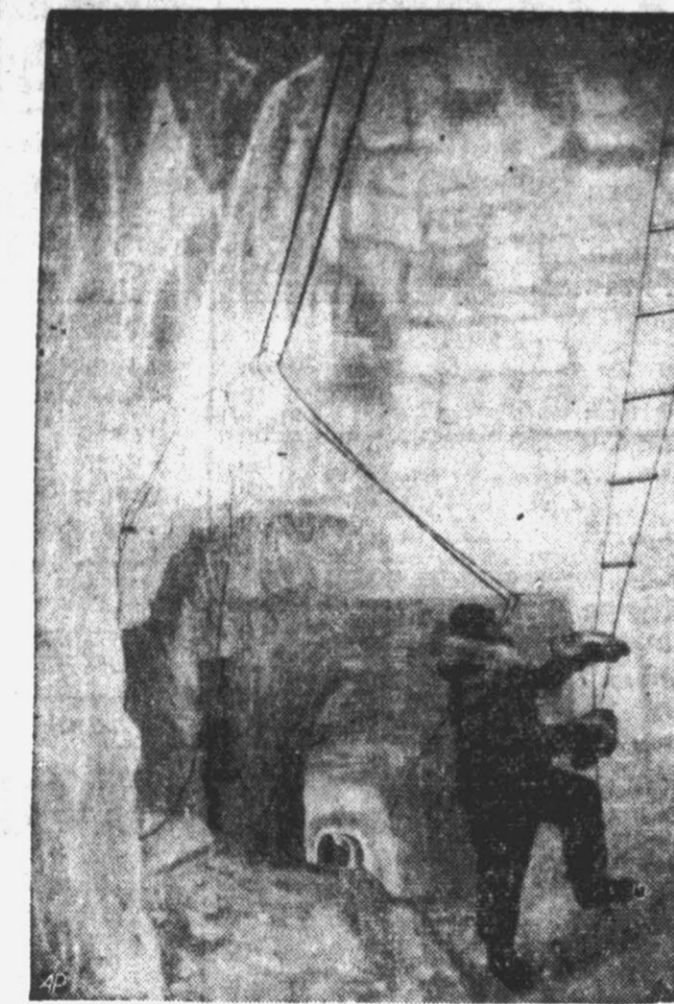

Noting this, a UCLA physical education professor, Dr. Laurence Morehouse, and a dentist, Dr. Sanford S. Golden, have set up a dental office to study the profession's stresses.

While working on a dummy patient, the dentist is tested for fatigue clues. His blood pressure, respiration and muscular efforts and tensions are recorded.

Dr. Morehouse said the research may lead to new dental equipment in which the dentist sits while the patient half reclines on a couchlike chair.

Studies 'Shrink' Antarctica Size

ANTARCTIC ICE MINE—E. W. Remington of Bethesda, Md. grabs a rope ladder leading from man-made cavern at the South Pole. IGY soundings show the ice here is more than 1 1/2 miles thick.

By RENNIE TAYLOR
Associated Press Science Reporter

LITTLE AMERICA, Antarctica (AP)—The first dim ideas about the surface features of inland Antarctica lying beneath its great mantle of snow and ice are beginning to emerge from studies made by International Geophysical Year scientists.

Initial reports of depth soundings and other observations, assembled here for the first time, suggest that the continent is less formidable in elevation and perhaps in area than formerly believed.

Antarctica long has been regarded as the highest of all continents — two miles above sea level in much of its heartland and about twice the size of the continental United States.

The new findings indicate Antarctica is the highest continent only because of its enormous ice cover, which may be 6,000 to 12,000 feet thick.

Stripped of its permanently frozen white top, it might well be a land of moderate heights and depths. It does, however, have at least one mountain peak rated at 20,000 feet above sea level.

o Polar Plateau
Soundings taken at the South Pole and data obtained by fliers in that area are beginning to produce indications that there is no high polar plateau other than the thick ice which keeps its surface at nearly 10,000 feet above sea level, says Dr. Harry Wexler, chief U. S. scientist for Antarctic.

The evidence to date, although meager, suggests that the polar region may be a great basic dotted with hills and mountains. There are signs also, the scientists say, that there is an ice-buried mountain range partly encircling the pole area.

One of the most significant findings was made by Rev. Daniel Linehan, Boston College seismologist, at the pole itself. His seismological soundings indicated the U. S. pole station, calculated to be 9,200 feet or more above sea level, is resting on ice 8,300 feet thick and that bedrock there is only 900 feet above the sea.

Tests previously made at a Byrd station, in the little known area 650 miles southeast of Little America, yielded an ice thickness figure of 10,000 feet. Since that U. S. station is 5,000 feet above sea level, solid land is 5,000 feet below the sea there.

Russian, French and Norwegian soundings at various points inland from the coasts and reported to IGY headquarters here, tell a similar story.

From these preliminary reports the little known interior of Antarctica begins to shape up as a land of hills, mountains, valleys and basins hidden under ice ranging from a few hundred feet to two miles or more in thickness. Dr. Wexler says the findings suggest the true shape of the continent may be longer and narrower than the present maps indicate.

Rites Friday For Dr. Hubert Poteat

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP)—Dr. Hubert M. Poteat, 71, educator, author and Latin scholar who died last night following a stroke, will be buried here tomorrow.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m. tomorrow in the First Baptist Church. Burial will follow in the Wake Forest Cemetery.

Dr. Poteat, for 44 years a member of the Wake Forest College faculty, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday morning and never regained consciousness.

A former imperial potentate of the North American Shrine, Dr. Poteat stepped down from his teaching career two years ago when Wake Forest College moved from Wake Forest to Winston-Salem.

His accomplishments were many. He was a former Southern tennis champion, author of several books and musical compositions, spoke a half dozen languages and was a foremost authority on Cicero and Pliny. To thousands of Wake Forest students and alumni he was affectionately referred to as "Old Thunder."

His father, William Louis Poteat, was president of Wake Forest College for 22 years.

Dr. Harold W. Tribble, president of the college, termed Dr. Poteat "one of the college's greatest scholars and teachers."

Dr. G. B. Earp, who became head of the department of classical languages when Dr. Poteat retired in 1956, said "he was the greatest teacher, the greatest scholar, and the greatest Christian gentleman I ever knew."

A native of Wake Forest, Dr. Poteat was an outstanding chess player and once was ranked among the top 10 pipe organists in America. He never attended public schools. He was tutored at home by his grandmother, who had conducted her own private school at Wake Forest for 22 years.

Dr. Poteat gave up tennis in favor of golf at the age of 45. He posted a 35 on the nine-hole Wake Forest course, a record that stood for several years.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hot prices steady to 25 lower. Tops of 19.90 to 19.75 at Tarboro, Edfield, Scotland Neck and Winterville; 18.75 to 19.75 at Hillsboro; 18.75 to 19.50 at Rocky Mount, Bethel and Murfreesboro; 18.75 to 19.25 at Smithfield, Clayton, Kingston, Lillington, House's Mill, New Bern, Benson, Nahant, Albemarle and Angier; 19.00 at Pine Level at Lumberton, Rich Square, Caswell, Hayne, Spring Hope, Dunn, and Blackman's Crossroads; 18.75 at Mount Olive, Whiteville, Clarkton, Newton Grove, Goldsboro, Shalotte and Siler City.
NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market remained narrowly higher early this afternoon in quiet trading.
The edge of an early advance by stocks and selected issues was blunted considerably.
Gains of leading stocks were mainly fractional. There was a scattering of losers.
U. S. Steel trimmed part of an early 1-point gain but continued in favor due to announcement of record yearly earnings. The second biggest steelmaker, Bethlehem, which reports on its 57 earnings today, was up a fraction at the start, then canceled the gain. Youngstown Sheet and Tube added fractions.
Chrysler also backed away slightly from an initial 1-point gain as the firing of its satellite, bearing Jupiter-C missile was still awaited. General Motors was firm and Ford eased.
Leading rails nudged ahead on average following their late rally of yesterday. A possible proxy fight drew interest to New Haven Railroad stock. The preferred, crucial in deciding a struggle for this road, was ahead about 2 at the start, and kept point-plus of 2 in later dealings. New Haven common, less actively traded, rose a fraction.
Union Carbide fell 1/4 at 92 1/2 on 2,400 shares and was off 1/4 on a subsequent block of 10,000 shares as a big investment trust was reported selling the stock.
Oils with heavy interests in Venezuela showed little reaction to reports of a wave in that country for a bigger share of foreign oil profits. Standard Oil (New Jersey) dropped a fraction.

Cases Heard In Superior Court

Pitt County Superior Court's one-week mixed term drew nearer to adjournment today, with judgments returned in ten criminal actions and one civil suit.

The civil suit, the only one heard thus far this week, was divorce on grounds of adultery granted to Martha Bell Nelson from Willie Cleveland Nelson. The judgment was signed by Judge Joseph W. Parker, presiding judge at the term.

Judgments in criminal actions heard yesterday and Tuesday include:

Will Brown Jr., Negro, Bethel, breaking and entering, and larceny, two years on each count with the sentence for larceny to begin at expiration of the sentence for breaking and entering.

Zebbe Lee Forbes, Ayden, driving under the influence (second offense), two years suspended upon payment of $300 and costs, and on further condition the defendant does not operate a motor vehicle until he obtains a driver's license.

Bernice L. McLawhorn, Bethel, driving under the influence, jury verdict of not guilty; Morgan Fordham, 112 North Summit Street, Greenville, worthless check (two counts), 60 days suspended upon payment of costs.

Samuel Gray Forbes, Negro, no address listed, assault on a female and assault with a deadly weapon, two years on each charge, sentences to be served concurrently and suspended upon payment of costs and on condition he does not violate any state or federal laws for three years, and on further condition he remain of good behavior toward his wife, Bertha Mae Forbes, and children, if any, during the three-year period.

Linwood Bass, Rocky Mount, speeding, no pros; Jessie Whitehurst and John Richard Buck, Greenville Prison Camp, larceny of auto, six months each.

Jessie Whitehurst, Greenville Prison Camp, escaping from prison, six months to run concurrently with the sentence for auto theft; and to begin at expiration of four years he is presently serving.

John Richard Buck, Greenville Prison Camp, escaping from prison, six months to run concurrently with the sentence for auto theft and to begin at expiration of five-to-seven years sentence he is presently serving.

J. D. Stocks, no address listed, forgery and uttering a forged check, 12-to-18 months suspended upon payment of costs and $10 to R. L. Edwards, and on further condition he does not drink any alcoholic beverages for a period of two years.

Senator Jackson Calls For Spurt In Big Bombers

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Jackson (D-Wash) today urged a big spurt in bomber production as he held the "things we need to do immediately to stay alive."

Jackson, a frequent critic of administration defense policies, also called for a quick step up in production of long-range missiles and nuclear submarines capable of firing such missiles. He said the Army should be built up.

In a speech prepared for the Senate, Jackson said the United States has lost "one two precious allies in past wars — time in which to mobilize, and distance to protect our homeland."

"Today whatever force is required, either to deter war or to win it if deterrence fails, must be on hand — ready at all times," he said.

Jackson did not make clear in his speech whether he felt additional funds for such an accelerated program should be included in a $1,410,000,000 emergency defense money bill now pending, or whether he had in mind adding to the regular defense appropriations bill for the fiscal year starting July 1.

It was reported that Senate Democratic leaders decided not to try to amend the total of the emergency bill, which has passed the House and now is before the Senate Appropriations Committee. That bill is for the present fiscal year.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas was understood to believe it would be unwise to seek any additions to the emergency bill. Johnson reportedly said such an effort might delay Senate action on the bill by opening to debate the whole defense structure.

U. S. Position On Summit Talks Facing Difficulties

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States faces mounting difficulties in holding to its position that a summit conference should be held only if there is advance proof it will be successful.

State Department officials are worried over reports from Western Europe that public opinion increasingly favors a top-level conference with Russian leaders on Soviet terms if it cannot be arranged on Western terms.

Officials report that there is so far no basic difference of view among Allied governments on their demand for careful preparation in advance of a top-level session. That preparation would have to afford proof that such a meeting can achieve agreements on important issues.

But public opinion in countries like Britain exerts a powerful pressure on government policies as it does here. This may make it difficult for the Allies to maintain a solid front on the matter.

Furthermore, the Soviets are expected to exploit to the limit the European interest in a meeting.

The State Department has received a steady stream of reports this week from embassies abroad on European press reaction to comments made by White House news secretary James Hagerty in a Sunday TV interview.

Hagerty said in substance that the only thing necessary was to agree on an agenda. After the broadcast he specifically denied that he meant in any way to modify President Eisenhower's stated ambitions for a meeting.

Nevertheless, reports to the State Department show that his original remarks were interpreted as indicating a modification and in the last three days the department has been making public statements trying to knock down this idea. The latest came from press officer Lincoln White.

White told reporters "it should be abundantly clear" that the United States wants "to move toward a summit meeting under conditions which give promise of success." This requirement of advance evidence of success was one of the major points in Eisenhower's recent letter to Soviet Premier Bulganin.

What the United States is seeking specifically is an exchange of ideas on possible solutions of great East-West issues such as disarmament and German reunification, with Russia through diplomatic channels, then a foreign ministers meeting to work out at least tentative solutions and after that a summit conference.

By contrast, Bulganin and Soviet Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev have been calling for a summit conference without detailed preparation.

If an agreement on agenda was the only precondition, it probably could be worked out very quickly. But so far Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles have insisted on much more than that.

Five Youths Charged In Series Of Local Thefts

City police have charged five local young men with larceny in connection with a recent series of thefts here.

Facing the charges are: Harold L. Edwards, 19, of 401 Jarvis St.; Aubrey D. Hudson, 19, 119 W. 11th St.; George D. Hall, 18, of 313 W. Fourth St.; Billy M. Gardner, 18, S. Evans St. Ext.; and Dale D. Brooks, 19, of 315 E. 11th St. All five were released following their apprehension, recognized to appear in City Court before Judge Charles H. Whedbee tomorrow.

According to officers the group was charged in connection with the theft of a quantity of cookies from the Southern Bakers, two five-gallon cans of oil from a Spur Station on Dickinson Ave. and gas from an activity bus at the Junius H. Rose High School.

The arrests were made following the discovery of a portion of stolen items in the back of an automobile parked in back of the local high school building on the night of Jan. 23.

One detective stated that the car was left behind by four boys caught siphoning gas from the activity bus, located in a building on the Rose High School lot. At the time the car was not identified by the school teacher who said he caught them in the act of stealing gas.

Following an investigation police identified Edwards as driver of the automobile. A short time later several cartons of cookies along with a five-gallon can of oil were found in the boot of the car. The items were identified as those taken from the local bakery and service station on the night of Jan. 17.

Edwards was arrested and charged on three warrants for larceny. Detectives also arrested Hall on three charges in connection with the series of thefts. Hudson was charged with larceny of oil and cookies. The other two were only charged with larceny of gas.

Secret Agent Is To Be Witness

RALEIGH (AP)—An undercover agent was among the witnesses the government planned to call to the stand today in the liquor conspiracy trial of Percy Flowers and 16 other defendants.

District Attorney Julian Gaskill hinted that the undercover agent may offer sensational testimony. The trial is now in its fourth day in federal court.

Flowers, reputedly wealthy farmer-merchant of Johnston County, is accused of conspiracy to violate the liquor laws.

Before additional government witnesses were heard today, Judge Gilliam ordered a mistrial for one of the 16 defendants, Obie Parker. He acted after receiving a certificate from a doctor saying that Parker suffered an acute attack of kidney colic and could not attend the trial.

Some 20 persons testified yesterday as the government sought to prove Flowers brought in liquor experts from Wilkes County to assist in his alleged bootleg operations.

ATU agent John L. West of Wilkesboro linked three co-defendants with Wilkes County — Obie Parker, Glenn Bell and Henry Clay Parker and the father-in-law of Bell. Evidence showed they moved to Wilders Township in Johnston County and since have returned to Wilkes County.

West said he talked with Henry Clay Parker at his father's home on Rt. 2, Roaring River, on Nov. 17, 1955. He told the court he went back to the house two or three days later and the place was abandoned. The next time he saw Obie Parker, West said, was on a farm in Wilders Township on June 27, 1956.

Wants College Building Bids In 2 Or 3 Months

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—L. Stacy Weaver, president of a Methodist College to be built here, said today construction bids on the first unit should be called within two or three months.

In a report prepared for delivery to the school's board of trustees, Weaver recommended that if detail sketches of the first unit, a classroom building, were approved by the trustees, the architect should proceed with working plans immediately.

"We ought to be able to call for bids on this building within the next two or three months," he said.

He recommended the size of the college at 1,000 students, with a minimum of these 400 day students. "This would require that we make bonding appropriations for 600 boarding students," Weaver said. "It is recommended that these students be divided: 350 boys and 250 girls."

The proposed four-year college will be built on a 600-acre site already selected near here. The school's original working capital was two million dollars from the Fayetteville area and two million from the North Carolina Methodist Conference.

Weaver told the board, however, that the Methodist churches have postponed for eight months a capital funds campaign.

The target date for opening the school is the fall of 1959 with a first class of about 200 students.

Weaver said he also was investigating the possibility of obtaining federal loans for construction, but he pointed out that under existing regulations, federal loans are available to institutions that have been in operation two years.

Board Suspends Movement Of Liquor Products

RALEIGH (AP)—The State ABC Board today suspended for 60 days the movement of Glenmore Distillery products from the state's central warehouse to county ABC stores. It did not prohibit the sale of Glenmore products already in the stores.

James H. Pou Bailey, attorney for Glenmore, said he did not know whether his client would appeal the decision, which is effective today, to the courts.

The ABC board's action was an outgrowth of last year's "liquor for legislators" scandal and resulted partly from the conviction of a Glenmore salesman on a charge of transporting an illegal amount of liquor to Raleigh's Sir Walter Hotel.

About two months ago, the board ordered sale of Glenmore products suspended for 30 days. However, it rescinded this action when Glenmore complained that it had not been given a chance to be heard. A hearing was held several weeks ago.

SPEBOSA Has Business Session

ASHEVILLE (AP)—Except for maybe a little practicing here and there, delegates to the mid-winter convention of the SPEBOSA devote most of today's time to business meetings, not singing.

(That SPEBOSA means the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.)

The four-day meeting with about 1,000 delegates from the United States and Canada opened here today. Today's schedule listed meetings of the international executive committee, the international directors and the district presidents.

The high spot of the convention, at least from the spectator's point of view, will be the "all star" singing program Saturday night, featuring some of the nation's top barbershop harmony.

Included on the Saturday program will be the champion "Lads of Enchantment" quartet of Albuquerque, N.M. The "lads" won the 1957 international competition. When a quartet reaches championship caliber it never thereafter competes, but keeps on performing for the SPEBQA.

Funeral Friday For Mrs. M. F. Aldridge

Mrs. Cynthia Lockhart Aldridge, 49, wife of Marvin F. Aldridge of Vanceboro, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital at 2:30 a.m. Thursday. She had been in failing health three years and critically ill two months.

Funeral services will be held at Vanceboro Christian Church Friday at 3 p.m. by the Rev. Horace Quigley, Methodist minister of Richlands, assisted by the Rev. Art Bishop, pastor. Burial will be in the Grifton cemetery. The body will remain at the Wilkerson Funeral Home and will be carried to the church at 1 p.m.

Mrs. Aldridge, daughter of the late Dennis and Mollie Gardner Harrison, was born and reared in Martin County at Jamesville and attended the Jamesville schools. She was married to Norwood H. GOP Leaders Charting Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican party leaders today begin charting their campaign to regain control of Congress in elections next fall.

The 26-member Executive Committee of the GOP National Committee arranged to meet today preliminary to a full committee meeting tomorrow with President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon.

Both sessions are private.

The two-day GOP conference will precede closed meetings Saturday and Sunday by the Democratic Advisory Council. The council will issue statements dealing with the administration's foreign defense and economic policies.

Found Billfold Two Years Later

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. (AP)—Two years ago Bob Brazil lost a billfold containing $19 when his boat capsized in Horsehead Lake near here.

Brazil said that while driving along the lake yesterday he saw a vaguely familiar object lying on the shore line. It was his billfold, still holding the $19.

The level of the lake was lower recently, Brazil said, and the billfold was where his boat capsized.

Eight Birds For Every Consumer

WASHINGTON (AP)—Boller chicken production in the top 22 producing states last year was equivalent to nearly eight birds for each consumer.

The Agriculture Department reported total production in these states at 1,295,281,000 birds, an increase of 2 percent over 1954. Georgia was the leading state with 267 million birds, Arkansas was second with 110 million and North Carolina third with 105 million.
