Motorists Given Extra Time For Buying A License

Pitt County motorists have been given two "extra" days in which to purchase and display 1958 auto license plates.

According to Mrs. A. J. Garris, Clerk of the local Carolina Motor Club Bureau, Motor Vehicles Commissioner Ed Scheidt has granted a two-day extension. The extension was made, Mrs. Garris explained, because many license bureaus and banks throughout the state are closed today.

In effect the deadline has been moved up from midnight tonight until midnight Monday. The extension enables Pitt County motorists to drive tomorrow and Monday with 1957 plates.

Long Lines This Morning Car owners, waiting to purchase 1958 license plates, have been lined up almost to Five Points all morning, despite frequent showers of rain.

Mrs. Garris said she expects heavy sales up to closing time this afternoon. She indicated that the two-day extension would be a great help to all concerned, stating, "I am certain it will help a lot of motorists who have been unable to get their forms in order."

Suggests State Ready To Back Total Education

HIGH POINT, N. C. — The people of North Carolina now are ready to support "total education" suggests Dallas Herring, chairman of the State Board of Education.

Herring was principal speaker yesterday at a regional meeting here of the North Carolina Committee for Better Schools, of which he is vice chairman.

About 500 persons from 33 central North Carolina counties attended.

Discussion groups which met earlier yesterday announced such proposals as re-emphasis on fundamental subjects; fostering of moral and spiritual values through selection of good teachers; physical education for all pupils; special department for gifted children, physically handicapped and mentally retarded.

The program of activities was presented to the board by James W. Butler, chairman of the Chamber's Program and Public Relations Committee.

Under industrial development, the program calls for publishing and distributing industrial briefs on the city, compiled from economic surveys.

The Chamber plans to provide services to aid existing industries to expand and operate successfully. The Industrial Committee will arrange conferences with the Department of Conservation and Development and industrial departments of railroads and the Virginia Electric and Power Co., urging their assistance in bringing new industries to the city.

A survey of the Tar River basins by the N.C. Board of Water Commission will be promoted with the view of development for the benefit of this area.

Also listed under industrial development projects are plans to advertise Greenville, complete with the Merchants' Association, "Made in Greenville Display" in city hall, continue to support the organization of the Pitt County Industrial Development Commission, a format of an "Industrial Relations" sub-committee.

Promote Adequate Air Service In the transportation and communication field the Chamber would like to promote with the Airport Commission more adequate air service for the area.

The Chamber will continue to offer to Negro 4-H Club winners 50¢ in cash for "Inners in the 4-H Swine Chain" and $50 in cash for winners in the 4-H Poultry Club Chain.

The Chamber will also co-sponsor the Pitt Progress Program, and co-sponsor with the agricultural agencies a program designed to encourage Pitt Farm families to do a better job with crops they are now producing.

The organization will sponsor projects with the cooperation of agricultural and industrial committees the chamber will offer its services in the formal opening of Chemell Hatchery.

One Time Contribution Plan Under civic and public affairs the Chamber endorsed and supported a "one time contribution" plan for financing organized charity and character building agencies. The organization will co-sponsor Fire Prevention Week, promote civic consciousness for cleaner alleys and streets and city and highway beautification. It will also encourage the solution of satisfactory swimming facilities problem.

Weather Man Is Bringing More Snow For Carolina

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Heavy snowfalls blanketed much of North Carolina today and the Weather Man issued a warning that more is coming. Generally the snow began falling early today and was still coming down at noon in the mountains, central and Piedmont sections and apparently was heading toward the coast.

Even as weather forecasters were warning of three to six inches of snow for the mountains and Piedmont sections, the Highway Patrol issued a "stay at home" warning to motorists.

A patrol spokesman said highways were slick and dangerous over the entire state with the exception of the extreme eastern portion.

"It'll get worse before it gets better," the spokesman said. The patrol said it has received a flood of reports of highway accidents and at least one fatality was blamed on the weather.

This was in Franklin County but the patrol said no details were immediately available.

As winter shed its icy teeth over the state, highway crews were sent into action, scraping roads and laying sand on bridges in an effort to make the highway safe. For those motorists who were forced to drive in the hazardous weather, the patrol advised chains.

Radio station WMT of Charlotte which has its transmitting studios at Clingman's Peak, neighboring Mt. Mitchell, whose lofty peaks in the Black Mountains of Yancey County are the highest east of the Mississippi, reported two inches of snow since last night leaving an accumulation of 23 inches.

The noon temperature at Clingman's Peak was 18 degrees, following a low of 14 last night.

The snow, beautiful but dangerous, began falling early today and increased in intensity as the morning wore on.

A troop of 15 Gastonia Boy Scouts, who camped out overnight on Crowders Mt., about four miles west of Gastonia, had to be rescued early today when two cars which accompanied them up the small mountain were unable to get down because of snow.

The boys were found safe and enjoying their predicament when the Gastonia Rescue Squad arrived.

The prediction was snow in the mountains and Piedmont, and snow and sleet in the coastal plains and snow flurries in the mountains tomorrow and rain in the east, ending in the morning.

The predicted highs were 27 to 33 today except in the 40s in the east and lows tonight of 20 in the mountains ranging to 30 in the east. By 8 a.m. Gastonia reported an inch and a half of snow on the ground and flakes still falling. Lenoir also had an accumulation which covered the ground except for traveled streets.

Raleigh's early morning sleet and rain changed to snow and forecasters expected the snow flurries to continue throughout the day.

In Charlotte, snow began before dawn and by 9 a.m. had cut visibility considerably, although streets remained clear. Last minute automobile license buyers, about 200 of them, turned up their collars and huddled in their overcoats while standing in line in the snow to purchase 1958 tags.

High Point's snow, accompanied by temperatures just below freezing, also started before dawn and by early morning had become heavy.

THOMASVILLE, Ga. — Harold E. Stassen resigned today as President Eisenhower's disarmament adviser in order to run for governor of Pennsylvania.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said at the President's vacation headquarters the decision was Stassen's own and that he was not asked to resign.

In accepting the resignation, Eisenhower wrote Stassen: "I deeply regret that you are leaving the federal government, effective today, and that our five-year association together in government is terminated."

In recent months Stassen and Secretary of State Dulles have been at odds over disarmament. That led to reports—planned to at least one high administration official—that Eisenhower had decided Stassen had outlived his usefulness.

Hagerty, when asked today whether Stassen had been asked to get out, replied: "Of course he wasn't."

Hagerty added he thought the friendly tone of Eisenhower's letter made that clear. He also pointed to the friendly tone of Stassen's letter of resignation to the President in laying Stassen's leaving of his own accord to bid for political office.

Two top officials of the State Medical Care Commission—Chairman James H. Clark and Executive Secretary Charles S. Tompkins—have resigned.

Gov. Hodges' announced yesterday that Clark had wished to step down for some time, but the governor persuaded him to stay on. His resignation is effective Feb. 1.

Apparently the two resignations were unrelated.

Templeton, who has asked to step down on or before March 15, has accepted a job as hospital consultant with the state of Florida.

Until Clark's successor is chosen, Agnew H. Bahnsen Sr. of Winston-Salem, the commission's vice chairman, will serve as acting chairman. The commission's next meeting is set for March 20.

Clark, 74-year-old banker, merchant and farmer, was appointed to a new four-year term on the commission last year by Gov. Hodges.

WASHINGTON — House investigators will hear next week a Federal Communications Commission member's defense against charges that he accepted money from a lawyer in a contested television case.

Commissioner Richard A. Mack yesterday termed the charges "without foundation" and a few hours later plans were announced to hear Mack either Wednesday or Thursday.

BURLINGTON, N.C. — Klux Klan leader James Cole, declaring that the KKK in North Carolina now is operating "completely underground," planned to hold an "evangelistic" meeting near here tonight instead of a Klan rally as previously advertised.

Meanwhile, Cole, a Marion, S.C. preacher, said Klan officials have urged the Federal Civil Rights Commission in Washington ask an investigation of state and county officials on grounds that the KKK was conducting police protection for its rallies.

Cole, indicted by a Robeson County grand jury, is free under $1,000 bond on a charge of inciting riot at the meeting.

The former cardinal politician said he will speak near here tonight "as an evangelist" on the subject, "The Truth About Maxton."

He said no more Klan meetings are planned in this state until full police protection is promised. "As of today," he declared yesterday, "the Klan in North Carolina is operating completely underground."

Percy Flower's Store Is Given Green Light By Jury After Prolonged Deadlock

SMITHFIELD, N.C. — Percy Flower's county store, padlocked since last July when officers raided it, was free to re-open today.

A jury decided last night in Johnston Superior Court that the store is not a public nuisance, he verdict climaxed a trial that began Tuesday.

Flowers, 53-year-old merchant-farmer, faces trial here Monday on several charges involving violation of liquor laws and two counts of assault. He is under an 18-month sentence imposed recently at federal court in Raleigh on a contempt charge.

It appeared for a time last night that the jury was hopelessly deadlocked. Prior to a recess for supper, one juror told Judge C. W. Hall he didn't think "we will ever" reach an agreement. The jury was deadlocked 9-3.

Still deadlocked at 8 o'clock, the jury was summoned to the courtroom. Judge Hall told them he would not "coerce you into an agreement" but "it is your duty to reason your differences and come to an agreement if you can do so conscientiously."

The Durham jurist pointed out that a mistrial would be "unfortunate" and a new trial would be expensive to taxpayers.

There was no demonstration when the verdict was announced. The question submitted to the jury was whether Flowers used and maintained "his premises described in the complaint for the purpose of the unlawful sale of whisky and thereby" constituted a public nuisance.

Two previous trials involving Flowers ended in mistrial. A jury was unable to agree on a verdict last summer when he was tried in federal court in Raleigh on income tax evasion charges.

The same thing happened recently when he was tried in Raleigh on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal liquor laws.

The state contended moonshine whisky was sold at Flowers' store and that the place bore a bad reputation.

GASTONIA, N.C. — A $200,000 fire shelled a four-story brick building, before dawn today and threatened Gastonia's main business block.

Five fire companies, answering the 5:30 a.m. alarm, confined the flames to Spencer's Inc. building.

Consider Housing Authority In City

Mayor S. Eugene West today announced that Greenville's City Council has begun consideration of the establishment of a municipal housing authority to provide additional low-cost housing in Greenville.

The mayor said the matter of establishing such an authority will be considered at a meeting of the City Council in the near future, and that a thorough study of operations of municipal housing authorities in neighboring cities will be made.

"In view of the progress made in other cities toward providing low-cost housing through municipal housing authorities, we believe Greenville should investigate the matter of establishing such an authority for our city," Mayor West said.

He pointed out that the neighboring cities of New Bern, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Kinston, Tarboro and Goldsboro all have had municipal housing authorities in operation for several years, and each of these cities operates low-cost housing projects.

The mayor said today that he had written for and received from the Federal Housing Authority information pertaining to requirements for a municipal housing authority and how such an authority may be established. In addition, he said, Councilman C. W. Harvey has visited Kinston where he consulted with officials of the Kinston Housing Authority concerning their operations.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

We were struck by the irony of a statement in a review of Edmund Wilson's new commentary on American life, "The American Earthquake: A Documentary of the Twenties and Thirties". The review was by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. — with whom we went to college, back in the thirties — and in this week's N. Y. Times Book section . . . "The whole thought of economic collapse," he writes, "a generation ago in a nation as spectacularly opulent as ours now, has for many — perhaps most of us — no more reality any longer than a bad dream." Is Mr. Schlesinger correct, we wonder? Is the thought of economic collapse such an impossibility to us these days? H. must have written his review before the figures on recent unemployment came out, and before the pictures of the breadlines in places like Chattanooga, Tenn., ran in the papers . . . All we can say is that we hope like's corner is not as far away as Mr. Hoover's was, when he said, "Prosperity is just around the corner," in 1930 . . .

Nags Head Saga
From Harper's who will publish Betty Smith's new book, "Maggie-Now" next week, we hear that the writing of this novel was done down in what they picturesquely call "a remote cottage in Nags Head." It seems that Miss Smith was not getting any great books written in the beautiful house she was living in — bought by "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" — at Chapel Hill. Life, in fact, was too pleasant. Anyway, to Nags Head she went three years ago, and now she's turned out what promises to be a best-seller — "Maggie-Now" already has the nod from the Literary Guild, so maybe a remote cottage in your-know-where is the next place you ought to try if you really want to get something done, yes? . . .

Old Times — New Issues
Jack London, whom you may remember as the author of "The Call of the Wild" about wolves — four-legged ones — in the northlands, also wrote, among many other books, "The Iron Heel," a phenomenally accurate prophecy of the kind of world dictatorship Hitler yearned for while he bossed the Germans. First published in 1908, we now learn it will come out in a new edition in March, with an introduction by Max Learner. It should be something worth reading, if you haven't already . . .

Hints for Spacemen
In these days of Sputniks and Explorers, it's good news to discover that a book has just come out explaining all about them — from the ground up, you might say. "Satellites and Spaceflight," by Eric Burgess, gives you a scientific account of how earth satellites developed — launching procedure, transmission of data, flight orbit, etc. — and discusses the problems of actual space flight by human beings. Mr. Burgess who is past Chairman of the British Interplanetary Society — so he certainly ought to know about these things — also provides a realistic and practical view on the possibilities of trips to the moon and the planets. With 17 photos and 47 charts, what more could you want — except maybe a night with Flash Gordon — and Dale, occurring . . .

The Local Scene
Getting back to Greenville from the moon, we want to remind art and culture lovers that the spring dinner of the East Carolina Art Society will be held next Thursday, the 20th, at 6:30 in the small dining room at E.C.C. . . . Community Fine Arts Festival plans also include something new and different this year: a big gala Fine Arts Ball in Wright Auditorium on April 11 — not too far ahead to plan to come . . . And don't forget National Library Week: March 16 to 22 . . .

Today's Review
Mrs. Madge Allen contributes her comments on a new and important book by an outstanding Negro writer, in conjunction with Negro History Week, now going on — its purpose is to commemorate the contributions of Negroes to American culture . . .

WHITE MAN, LISTEN, By Richard Wright. New York: Doubleday & Co., 1957.
This book is the published version of a series of lectures given in Europe between 1950 and 1956. They were written after much study to attempt to set forth the darker man's reactions to the world, and affairs. There are four of these lectures, and all of them worth reading.
Richard Wright has lost none of his bitterness. He makes some very pointed remarks. His descriptions of attitudes are rather refreshing. For example in his discussion of the Negro and his songs he wrote "they are simply and directly wish fulfillments, projections of his longings to escape his chains and blows."

He states that there is nothing wrong in being a Negro, any more than being some other kind of man, racially, but it is what pressures are put to bear to make one think there is something wrong in being one. In many countries the opinions of leaders are not respected until they have suffered for the things they believe. This is especially so in India.
The world is fast coming to the place where "has to face the fact that the Asian-African man must be dealt with on a basis of equality all along the line. The advent of the atom bomb and space travel makes concern much, much, greater to deal with the world rather than waste time trying to convince individuals of the superiority or inferiority of skin pigments.
Mrs. Wright spends quite a bit of time in explanations, and they are a bit tiresome. However, they do not detract too much. It is one of the most self-revealing books of this period. Whatever the reader does, agree or disagree, "White Man, Listen," will be worth your while.

Christian Science Society
The spiritual relationship of God and man will be a topic dealt with at Christian Science services this Sunday.
Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul" is the Golden Text from Isaiah (25:9): "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation."
Selections from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will include the following (120:4): "Soul, or Spirit, is God, unchangeable and eternal; and man co-exists with and reflects Soul, God, for man is God's image."
Scriptural readings will include the following from Psalms (43:5): "Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me? hope in God: for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance, and my God."

Jay-C-Ettes Entertain With Party

A Valentine party feted the husbands of the Greenville Jay-C-Ettes last night at the Greenville Country Club.

The club was decorated with the Valentine motif and dinner was served by candlelight.

Mrs. M. W. Aldridge, president, welcomed the guests and Mrs. Roy Hardee introduced a dance program presented by a prize winning group from WNCN's Danorama.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whitehurst were guests for the occasion. Twenty-two couples attended.

Dancing concluded the evening's activities.

Whole World Will Join In Prayer Chain

World Day of Prayer, when millions of women around the world join in a 24-hour prayer vigil, will be observed February 21 at 11 a.m. at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

This day is set aside to unite all Christians in the bond of prayer and to make an offering for Christian missions at home and abroad.

At no time in the 24 hour passage of the sun around the earth will the chain of prayer be broken.

The voices of men and women dedicated to peace and universal good will cross 144 countries on six continents around the sphere. By nightfall they die to a whisper in the Land of the Midnight Sun—that that speak in the Bering Sea that is St. Lawrence Island.

In the United States where World Day of Prayer came into being in 1887—the idea of a small group of dedicated Christian women—more than 25,000 communities will take part in this year's observance.

The theme for the day is "The Bread of Life." So, in Tamil, in Swahili, in Chinese, as well as in English, French, German, Spanish, and other tongues, men and women will ask for bread for the physically hungry and for the Bread of Life for those who hunger and thirst spiritually.

E-Z Mixes Topic Of Adult Meeting

The first adult meeting held at the Belvoir-Falkland home economic cottage was on "E-Z Mixes" Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Hazel Tripp, home economics teacher, assisted by Misses Barbara Harris, Catherine Windham and Lillian Corbett presented the demonstration. After the completion of the study the 30 persons were served the deserts with coffee.

Valentine's Day Observed By Cards, Candy, Party, Animals

By MARTHA PIERCE

Reflector Teen Writer

St. Valentine's original messages of love from his prison cell have undergone many changes, but his reason for sending the messages—love—remains today in our Valentine's Day.

Valentines came to some of the senior high girls in the form of cards, boxes of candy, and small stuffed animals. Some of the teachers received Valentine messages that had been written on the blackboard.

Mrs. Haskett's English class had a Valentine party in the cafeteria during lunch period Friday. Other classes fixed Valentine bulletin boards. An English class, under the direction of Mrs. Kenneth Bing, made original Valentines and wrote original verses for them.

Snow Came

The snowfall Thursday was gone by the end of the day, but the homeroom of W. F. Landing took advantage of it early Thursday and built a four-foot snowman during homeroom period complete with hat, pipe, and scarf.

In an assembly Friday morning members of the Exchange Club and two men from the State Bureau of Investigation spoke to the student body on crime. The polygraph or lie detector was explained to the students.

Duke Loyalty Fund Chairman Named For Area

DURHAM—Mrs. Harry A. Allen Jr. of Greenville, a member of the Duke University Class of 1949, has been appointed area chairman of the University's 1957-58 Loyalty Fund campaign in Greenville.

Announcement of the appointment was made today by Charles A. Dukes, the University's director of Alumni Affairs, who also reported a new mid-campaign high for the annual fund of $189,877.

With a goal of $275,000, area chairmen and their workers will attempt to raise the balance through personal solicitation projects in regions where Duke alumni are concentrated. These include 218 cities and towns in 32 states, the District of Columbia, and two foreign countries.

All area campaigns will continue into March.

Dukes noted that the Loyalty Fund, participated in by both alumni and other friends of the institution, has never failed to reach its goal since organized in 1947. The fund is used to help Duke meet current financial needs each year and, Dukes said, is generally directed toward faculty salaries.

Too Much Pump-Priming Bad, Too

How much federal pump-priming and accompanying deficit spending can the nation afford before it reaches the point of diminishing returns?

At what point do federal measures cease to be economic stimulants to the national economy and become instead outright waste of the taxpayers dollar?

At the outset of the current session of Congress, President Eisenhower outlined the largest peacetime budget in the history of the nation. The huge budget was brought about by additional billions earmarked to intensify the nation's development of missiles and space vehicles to overcome the apparent lag which has set in in these fields. In outlining his budget proposals just a month ago, the President indicated they would probably run the government once more into deficit spending.

From Congress, and from many parts of the nation came demands for government economies in non-essential spending to partially off-set the increase in defense spending.

These voices for economy in federal operations have suddenly become lost in moves by both Congress and the administration toward federal programs designed to stem what appears a downward trend in the nation's economic situation. Rather than economy measures, the goal now seems to be more ways of pumping federal money into national circulation.

If the government's domestic program is now to be pointed toward creating as many new jobs as possible at taxpayers expense, there is no place in such a program for eliminating non-essential jobs which already have crept into the scheme of federal government.

But have we reached the point in our national economy where all of these programs must be expanded? Have we reached the point where tremendous increases in government spending are necessary to keep the wheels of business turning?

Though proposals for new government spending programs have come rapidly in the past few days, it will be six months or a year before any of these could actually begin to put money into the national economy. According to some economists—and apparently including those closest to the White House—the nation's economy will take an upturn of its own volition before the end of 1958. According to others, it will take much longer without federal pump-priming.

While the government should be considering moves which may be necessary to thwart a recession in the national economy, there should be no pell-mell rush to push through programs that are not needed.

Priming the pump to keep the bucket full is one thing. Pumping enough to run the bucket over is quite another.

Controversial Points Should Be Aired Early

The people of North Carolina are entitled to a complete explanation of the confusion that has arisen in connection with the new ports director selected by the State Ports Authority.

It is up to the Authority to clear the matter of controversy which has arisen around the man they selected to fill an important position in North Carolina. We are sure the allegations that have been leveled from Georgia at the man selected to head North Carolina's ports operations came as a surprise to the SPA as they did to the people of the state.

Yet, North Carolina, with the controversies which it has already had over its ports, can ill afford to bring into a key position an individual which could be the center of an even greater controversy.

The State Ports Authority should waste no time in seeking clarification of the varying reports concerning the man they have selected to direct North Carolina's ports operations. As quickly as possible they should make a complete report of their findings to the people of the state.

Phosphate Land Lease Dragging

By LYNN NISBET

PHOSPHATE — No real developments have occurred in the matter of leasing State owned phosphate lands since the Council of State about a month ago declined to confirm a lease which had been negotiated by the Department of Conservation and Development. Bear Creek Mining Company, both of which have been granted a lease of some 60,000 acres has not submitted a revised bid. General Crude Oil and Monsanto Chemical, both of which showed lively interest some time ago, have not formally applied for a lease. However, all these companies are known to still be interested. Representatives of both have been in Beaufort and Hyde counties during the past few days.

A delegation visited Governor Hodges this week seeking help in obtaining lease agreements on both State and private owned lands so that the local landowners would not be discriminated against. The Governor told newsmen that is no direct relation between the public and private lease agreements. Local landowners, however, fear that if one firm obtains all the 60,000 acres of State lands there will be no inducement for that or any other company to develop private lands.

Dr. J. L. Stuckey, State geologist, said he expects to have some specific data to submit to the next board meeting at Goldsboro on April 7 and 8. He doubts, however, that the project will be far enough advanced to justify official action at that time.

CAPITOL — The national capitol at Washington is about as inadequate for demands made upon it as is the State capitol at Raleigh. Congressional committees are studying plans for enlarging it. Similar studies have been going on here for many years. Just who would have to authorize changes in the national capitol is not known here. The Congress would have to appropriate money for the job.

The last General Assembly removed any doubt as to where authority for revamping the State capitol is vested. The Director of Administration, with approval of the Governor, can make any changes for which money can be found. It is not conceivable that any director or any Governor would dare to disturb the architectural beauty of the capitol. But in absence of further restrictive legislation they have full authority to take off the dome and put a square pent house in its place.

FEUD — A long standing personal feud erupted in public at the Farm Bureau convention, when J. Vivian Whitfield challenged the fitness of Alonzo C. Edwards to serve as executive vice president. Both men have been active in Farm Bureau affairs for many years. Both have represented their counties in the General Assembly. Two years ago soon after Edwards formally announced his candidacy for Lieutenant Governor, for which he had been an unavowed candidate for months, Whitfield also threw his hat into the race. Some of Edwards' friends charged then that the whole purpose was to split the eastern farm vote and defeat Edwards. When Edwards was nominated for the full term as executive vice president Whitfield charged that he was not qualified for the post, because of his political activity. He wanted Edwards to declare whether he had any further political ambitions. Edwards denied he had ever used the Farm Bureau for his own benefit. The membership gave him a rising vote of confidence — and promptly re-elected him without a dissenting vote.

ROAD DAMAGE — Highway officials are reluctant to make guesstimate at this time on extent of weather damage to the secondary road. It has been more severe than for several years, with another month of winter to come. Governor Hodges told his latest news conference that it might be necessary to transfer funds from some other purpose to take care of essential maintenance. It pains State officials to think about another bond issue for highways, especially secondary roads.

It is interesting to recall that the terrible winter of 1917-18 aroused public sentiment for the first $50 million bonds for highways issued in 1921. Again it was the impact of weather on the roads in the winter of 1945-46 that set the stage for the $200 million secondary road bonds in 1949. The three year lapse in each instance was due to exigencies of politics. Member of the 1919 and the 1947 Legislatures had been chosen before the impact of road damage was realized. And in 1918 and 1946 there was no new Governor to be elected. The road bonds were made issues in the gubernatorial campaigns of 1920 and 1948.

Members of the 1959 Legislature are in process of being chosen now, before any intelligent appraisal of weather damage and road needs can be made. Again this is not the year to elect a Governor.

Viewed in the light of history the next General Assembly will not make material changes in the highway set up, but roads will be an issue in the 1960 campaign with prospects that substantial help will be provided by the 1961 Legislature.

Find Your Own Success Secret

By ELMER ROESSNER

Most business experts recognize the existence of a secret ingredient of success which two men will start identical businesses, each with the same amount of capital and experience. Both will work hard, advertise, take discounts and persevere. One will become a success; the other a Dun & Bradstreet statistic.

Sometimes analysis will show why one succeeded and the other failed. But often the secret ingredient is so hidden or so ephemeral that it can't be defined.

So today let's take four capsule success stories and see if we can identify that ingredient. NO HAMPER FOR BABY

Case 1. Thirty seven years ago Harold Gleitsman, then 14, entered his father's hamper-making business in New York. He delivered baskets by day, made collections and kept books, going to school at night.

He married at 20 and the next year became the father of a girl. His wife wanted a hamper with a pearl top. He bought one for $50, but it was never used for his daughter's clothing. Harold took it apart and decided he could produce a better hamper cheaper. But before he plunged, he asked 2,000 women what they wanted in a hamper.

In the midst of the depression he started making hampers. Sales started slowly but, as young Gleitsman advertised hampers in the gift market, they rose. In 1935 he leased a small building in Long Island City; as profits came in he used them for automatic machinery and a larger plant. Today his Pearl-Wick plant occupies a full water-front block, with its own dock, employs 500 and piles up profits.

Case 2. William Zinn started out as a musician a few years ago and still has a beat. But he discovered he was more interested in engineering. Being a man of musicianly tastes in ties, he wore the flowing kind which constantly got in the way when he reached for his slide rule. So he designed a miniature slide rule which actually works both as a slide rule and tie clasp.

Sales of this gadget are soaring.

ing. Zinn is still an engineer, but a new-product engineer with about a dozen more about to hit the market.

Case 3. Harold N. Leitman has been a successful operator of retail and truck tire stores. He had an idea: women would buy tires as readily as men, if they had a chance. So he started selling through shopping center branches of department stores.

First results convinced him he was right, and he began establishing tire service centers in shopping centers, tied to big department stores. While women shop their cars can be equipped with new tires and the amount charged to their department store bill. Last summer one Long Island store grossed $300,000. Leitman stores have been set up along the Atlantic Coast; next summer they'll appear in Southern California.

Case 4. Jennie Graves had to help support her family when she was 15. She earned some money dressing dolls for a so-called charity organization. One day she discovered her dolls on sale at high prices in a Boston department store. So she began dressing her own dolls and selling them direct to stores. By coincidence, she dressed some of her first dolls in the basement where her uncle, Alfred G. Fuller, made his first brushes. But that's another story.

Mrs. Graves continued making dolls on a moderate scale until 1939, when her husband died. With a family to support, she moved her operations from basement to factory and expanded her business. In 1948, she plunged on an eight-inch, all-plastic doll with moving eyes. New York buyers turned it down. They said the public wanted larger dolls.

Mrs. Graves took comfort from her Bible and sold her dolls where she could. Within three years, her doll — "Ginny" — was a marketing sensation. Since then she has manufactured 7,000,000 dolls, including "Ginette" and "Jill," and operates two factories.

So from these case histories, you can figure the secret ingredients in success. It is — well, what is it anyway?

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

WITHOUT IT WE FAIL

The word "humility" has a long history. Whether in Sanskrit, Greek, Latin, or English the word means the same thing — "on the ground." The humble person is the one who has got down on the ground. He has bowed down. He has prostrated himself before something.

and we never really understand an idea nor achieve an ideal until we have enough humility in us to understand what the idea is trying to tell us, or what the ideal is requiring of us by way of sacrifice and adaptation, and promising us. Only the truly humble learn. Only those who really bow down to the earth — down to the "humus," for thus is the word derived.

Great men like Washington, Lincoln, and Lee were conspicuous for their humility. Jesus said to himself that he was meek and lowly of heart. And his word to his followers was: "Whoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that humbly himself shall be exalted."

Snow? Fed Up To Here

The scene was probably repeated in thousands of local homes Thursday morn. The first one up in the household took a casual glance out a window and did a quick doubletake; then called to other bed-bound members of the family "Hey, we've got snow."

That routed out everybody else and brought on such exclamations as "My, but it's pretty" and "Look, mama, snowwww!" Well, we've had more of the white stuff in other years; but it did make for a change from the usual panorama of dead grass and barren trees.

From out of some forgotten hiding place my old Army brogans made their appearance (they're worn only when snow falls in Greenville . . . which is seldom . . . or when I go fishing . . . which of late is a similarly rare occasion) and they felt as comfortable as they did 13 or 14 years ago.

One other consolation marked the morning; while the family's gasoline buggy was draped in snow, there was no ice and much of the night's feathery residue blew away when driving to work.

In the news room there were pep talks and high strategy dedicated toward making the most of what snow we had, concluding with that fist-pounding exhortation "C'mon gang, get in there and fight!"

Our mission: to make snow a hot topic on the news front. (We wound up with more pictures than we could get into the paper.)

Once the day's work was behind us, and most of the snow melted, it was home again with more tales of an exciting day . . . chiefly concerning snowballs, snowmen, snowmelt and just plain snow. The subject was wearing a bit thin.

A news telecast, including snowmen, snowballs and more snow than you could shake a stick at; prolonged the discussion. Then, a weather forecast indicated the "East" would see more snow Saturday. Did that mean us?

In retrospect, there was only perhaps an inch and a half of snowfall in town Thursday morning; but by bedtime I'd had my fill. Nose dripping, an occasional sneeze, cold feet and a thick head. Just not the lad I used to be.

Why I can remember scuffing my way to school through knee-deep snow, wending through drifts higher than my head . . . that was in 1925 or thereabouts.

We just don't see winters like that any more.

When I was a boy, we used to . . . Okay. Had enough?

Other Editors Saying --- More Years Of Austerity

(Henderson Dispatch)

More years of austerity in the production of flue-cured tobacco are in prospect for growers, a State Agriculture Department specialist told the Aycock farmer class the other night. What he said was not surprising. Those who have viewed the situation with stark realism have seen the spectre on the horizon for some time. It is the result of the surplus in available supplies that exists.

The explanation of the surplus is not difficult to discern, either. Over-production, the flitertip cigarette and increasing foreign competition are the factors involved. Heroic efforts on the part of growers are being made through curtailed acreage to reduce the excess. The other two causes appear to be a fixture and which must be faced and dealt with from now on. Between the two, there is the necessity for holding production to lower levels than those that have been the rule in recent years, prior to 1957.

Manufacturers have found a method of making cigarettes that requires less tobacco. It is but a tiny amount per pack, but when that is multiplied by the hundreds of millions turned out annually it runs the figure to somewhat alarming levels. Many foreign countries that have learned how to grow flue-cured tobacco — and in part by the help of Americans themselves — have the advantage of cheap labor and a lower standard of living. It doesn't matter a great deal that we have here the finest quality leaf grown anywhere in the world, lower prices for foreign yields are being and will continue to be accepted despite the sacrifice of aroma and blending.

That's the picture as of now, and is likely to be for some years to come, if not permanently. But there is a ray of hope. The Department of Agriculture reports that as of January 1, stocks of tobacco in this country and Puerto Rico were 5,149,000,000 pounds and down by 205-million from a year earlier. In the over-all total, however, that amounts to only about four percent. Flue-cured stocks, at 2,809,000,000 pounds, were less by seven percent from a year earlier. That, too, is a silver lining, but nevertheless scarcely more than a pittance. Flue-cured constituted more than half the total supply, and the decline reflected the short crop in 1957.

This is only a beginning in the ordeal of bringing supply into balance with demand. Mr. Cyrus told the Aycock class that curtailed acreage will be necessary for at least two more years, presumably including 1958. Assuming that he is correct, as he should be, this does not mean, however, that there will be any sizable increase in allotments in 1960, although any amount would be beneficial to growers and that much of a lift to the tobacco country's economy.

More years of austerity so far as this crop is concerned are in prospect. It emphasizes the necessity for finding more jobs and additional means of livelihood for the small farmer who stands to be frozen out of his part of production of this money crop.

We Can Catch Up By Acting Now

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — J. F. of Long Beach, Calif., in a note of exasperation that seems to be shared by many other readers, writes:

"I have read almost all the so-called experts' analysis of the relative military strength of the United States and Russia, and I cannot draw any definite or final conclusion. Some insist that we have superiority over the Communists, and that we could defeat them in a great war, even though suffering terrific damage ourselves. Others question that optimism.

"From your viewpoint at Washington, just how do we — or would we — stand up against the Communists in a showdown?"

With enough money, it is believed that this gap can be closed within two or three years. Meanwhile, our almost 500 air bases and fields at home and abroad, serving as takeoffs for 1,000-mile-an-hour bombers carrying atomic and hydrogenic bombs, should give pause to the Kremlin. They ring Russia from Britain to Korea, and the Communists could not destroy them all with a sneak Pearl Harbor attack. A surprise attack of devastating effect is practically impossible.

The United States, incidentally, is superior in heavy bombers for hauling thermonuclear and nuclear bombs. As during World War II, Moscow has concentrated on fighters and light bombers.

For obvious reasons, the two nations' preparations within the next two or three years — during the remainder of President Eisenhower's term — will be vital. If he doesn't close whatever gap exists — that is, by 1960 or 1961 — it may be too late. I think he recognizes that danger.

Our Naval forces are far better trained and experienced than the possible enemies. But the Reds are outbuilding us unbelievably in cruisers, destroyers and submarines. They have 500 U-boats to about 100 for our side. Hitler had only about 70 at the start of World War II, but they almost strangled Great Britain.

We still depend on "massive nuclear retaliation" to make Russia be good. But we would not dare to use those awful weapons in a local conflict. It would alienate the people living there. We must have more ground troops and the planes to carry them overnight to the scene of conflict. Those problems have been woefully neglected.

Finally, if we can keep Khrushchev at bay for another two years after Eisenhower's re-assuring statement, was in effect a way of saying that the Democrats don't think Eisenhower is showing the leadership he should and so therefore they'll do the leading. And in this Johnson will be the leader of the leaders. He can't do himself any harm.

Texan Did It Again

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some men duck the spotlight. Some love it so much they crawl towards it on their hands and knees. But Sen. Lyndon Johnson creates it. He did it again this week.

The tall, 49-year-old Texan did something else this week too. He showed again he has what every good politician and athlete must have: a sharp sense of timing.

He bounced back from a heart attack in 1955 like a man with a battery recharged. As leader of the Senate Democrats he has given the Senate — particularly in the past few months — a look of speed and action.

In those months he did three major things, all of them of the kind that compelled national attention and all of them useful if he looks for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1960.

This is what he has done since the first Sputnik went up in October:

1. As chairman of the Senate's special subcommittee on preparedness, he led the investigation into the Eisenhower administration's defense program, with the accent on missiles.

But he did it so smoothly the Republicans haven't accused him of playing politics.

2. As soon as that subcommittee had ripped through its inquiry, he proposed the Senate should create a special committee to study the entire range of problems facing this country in outer space.

The Senate, Democrats and Republicans alike, bought this idea overwhelmingly, making Johnson the probable chairman of the new committee. It will make news for months.

3. This week he proposed — and his fellow Democrats went to work on it right away — a 10-point program for fighting the economic recession now spreading across the country.

His timing was excellent on all three of those activities, but particularly on the last.

He outlined his 10-point anti-recession program just after President Eisenhower issued a statement intended to reassure the nation the recession will go away.

Eisenhower in his statement pointed to steps already taken by his administration to curb the downturn, promised he would take any others he thought necessary.

Thus it is a matter of opinion whether Eisenhower is doing enough or whether Johnson's proposal is really needed.

But this is an election year for all 435 House members and one-third of the 96 senators. If the recession gets worse, the Democrats will blame it on the Republicans.

If the Senate, where Democrats have a majority, puts through the Johnson program and the recession fades, the Democrats at election time will claim credit.

Johnson's proposal, coming so soon after Eisenhower's reassuring statement, was in effect a way of saying that the Democrats don't think Eisenhower is showing the leadership he should and so therefore they'll do the leading.

And in this Johnson will be the leader of the leaders. He can't do himself any harm.

Opinions In Brief

"Union monopoly power stems from two sources. One is the unions' exemption from the anti-trust laws. The other is compulsory unionism — that is, the union shop, under which a man who doesn't join and pay dues can't work at his trade. The only cure here is the right-to-work law." — Industrial News Review.

"Paper-money inflation continues to penalize the pocketbooks of hundreds of millions of Americans. The question is being asked if it pays to save." — Denver, Colo., Mining Record.

"We are still hoping the wisdom man has gained over the ages will rule, that man will find a star as the wise men did, rather than be guided by a beeping, man-made satellite and all the other ingenious instruments he has devised." — Campbellsville, Ky., News-Journal.

Phantoms Rally In Last Half To Whip Kinston '59-50

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

East Carolina Pirates invade Elon tonight in a game that some folks are calling the battle of the bottoms. Both clubs are currently in the last-half of the league.

ECC is sixth, behind Atlantic Christian and Elon is trailing everybody. East Carolina is rated to win by 13 points.

Right On The Button

Speaking of predictions, we hit the Greenville-Kinston game right on the button last night. Our prediction that the Phants would be victorious by nine points didn't look so good at halftime when the Red Devils had a six-point lead, but it all came out in the end.

It was the second time this season, by the way, that we've hit a Greenville High School win margin perfectly. We predicted the G-Men 20 points over Elizabeth City several weeks ago and it ended that way.

Evans Looked Good

Dick Evans, the 6-2 Phantom forward looked better than Charles Lewis last night. The highly-touted Kinston performer is perhaps the best individual ball-player in the league and certainly one of its highest scorers. He came to Greenville last night with an average of 24 points per game.

Evans, who has shown flashes of All-Conference ability on several occasions this year, plunked in 22 points, took control of the Kinston backboard, and kept his team steady last night.

Our vote for the Most Unpredictable Ballplayer in the Northeastern loop goes to Francis Peanut Nunn. The Phantom forward, who was leading the G-Men in scoring about a week ago, is the most Hot and Cold performer you can imagine.

He has hit more than 20 points on several occasions and less than 10 on many others. Last night he failed to score.

Maybe he was saving them for New Bern Tuesday night.

Big Tourney Expected

The Pitt County Conference Basketball Tournament, moving into reality tonight at the ECC Gym, should be the biggest and best yet. The loop has produced some terrific cage play this winter and has turned out five or six teams in both the boys and girls brackets which are capable of walking away with the tourney title.

Ayden (boys) and Stokes (girls) go into the scramble with the top records. Both have 12-2 marks. But past tournaments have shown that the regular-season records are practically worthless when tourney time starts.

The big thing, the deciding factor, some believe, is durability. With so many ballgames packed together in such a short time, a club must be able to play several successive games in top-notch form to win out here. There are nine teams (both boys and girls) and that should make for plenty of good basketball within the next few days for Greenville and Pitt County fans.

Beaten only by Stanford (50-49), and that one in a heartbreaker in which a would-be winning shot was nullified at the buzzer, the Dons are using the typical Woolpert formula of blending "wait for the good shot" shooting with solid defense.

UCLA pused into a half-game lead last night in the Pacific Coast Conference race over idle California, downing Washington State 64-44 for a 7-2 record; Stanford spilled Southern California, 57-44, and Virginia, Marshall, William and Mary and Morehead (Kv) won in other scattered conference games.

Tonight the Dons try for their 15th straight against Loyola of California. Kansas State, making its first start since becoming No. 1, plays at Colorado. West Virginia, No. 2, at Penn State, and Cincinnati and Oscar Robertson, ranked third, are host to sixth-ranked Oklahoma State. Iowa State is at Kansas, No. 4; and Temple, No. 7, tries to extend its win streak to 17 at George Washington. Streaking Duke, No. 8, and now the Atlantic Coast Conference leader, plays Wake Forest. Ninth-ranked Maryland meets North Carolina State, No. 10, at Raleigh.

Stefan Redi, 145 1/2, Passaic, N. J., 10.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — Frankie Daniels, 182, San Diego, outpointed Monroe Ratliff, 179, Los Angeles, 10.

BOISE, Idaho—Billy Lanza, 175, Seattle, and Roque Maravilla, 177, Nampa, Idaho, drew, 10.

The two first met at the Drake Relays in 1956, when Sime and Kansas' Dick Blair both leaped a yard's headstart and Morrow edged the score by beating Sime in the NCAA 100 meters a few weeks later.

Their long-sought rubber match took shape yesterday. Sime's coach, R. E. (Bob) Chambers, asked and got a bid to enter his Duke University squad in the 1958 American Business Club Relays. Morrow and his Abiler, Christian College teammates were entered earlier by coach Oliver Jackson. The meet will be run off April 4-5 in this West Texas city's Memorial Stadium.

Sime and Morrow share with several others the world record of 9.3 seconds in the 100-yard dash. In addition, the Duke star holds the record of 20 seconds flat for both the 200-meter and 220-yard dashes and 22-2 for the 220-yard low hurdles.

Each is quoted as eager to face the other again, and Morrow said earlier this week he was ready to run against Sime any time and anywhere.

State May Be Hungry As 1958 Season Ends

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The North Carolina State Wolfpack, accustomed to retiring to its lair near the end of the basketball season and waiting for the victors to come in one by one, may be a little hungry, yet when the regular season is over.

State, which usually manages to play just about all of its final games at home—plus the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament at season's end—has some rough customers upcoming. And so far the Wolfpack has been convincingly trounced in one of its recent home-stands.

Maryland is the visitor today in a 2 p.m. regionally televised game. The Terps, No. 9 nationally, will be playing most of their final ACC games on the road. They've won four straight, have a 14-3 overall record and are second to Duke in the conference. Their last loss was to N.C. State in January by a 57-48 score.

Since the Wolfpack defeated Maryland, State has played four ACC games, three at home; has won very narrowly from Virginia and Clemson; beaten hapless South Carolina handily; and lost by 18 points to Duke.

Next for State—all home games—come North Carolina, non-conference LaSalle and Wake Forest. Then the ACC tournament in March. And the Wolfpack, tied for third place in the conference, holding a 14-4 overall record, may get chewed up a little in its own den unless it improves on its recent performances.

Duke, the front runner and No. 8 nationally, is at home tonight to Wake Forest, which is tied with South Carolina for the ACC cellar. North Carolina faces Notre Dame for the first time on a basketball court in a game at Chicago, Ill.

Virginia, the ACC's fifth place team, drubbed sixth-place Clemson 74-49 last night, handing the Tigers their sixth straight defeat. Sophomore guard Paul Adkins scored 23 points and Herb Busch 16 to lead the Cavaliers, who held the lead for keeps after the first six minutes.

Walt Gibbons scored 14 for Clemson and George Krajac 13. Virginia now is 4-7 in the conference and 8-10 overall. Clemson is 3-9 in ACC play and 6-13 overall.

Seems Like SF Still Has Russell, Jones

By DON WEISS

The way San Francisco's Dead-eye Dons are playing 'em, and winning 'em, you would think Bill Russell and K. C. Jones were still around.

They're long since gone but Phil Woolpert and his West Coast gang still have the habit and touch acquired when All-America Bill and chunky K.C. were wowing audiences with one victory after another, adding up to 55, between 1954 and 1956.

The Dons, including last night's 69-59 triumph over Pepperdine, have compiled a tidy 39-8 record since the graduation of the two great stars a season and a half ago. Last year, when a carry-over streak that finally reached 60 games was shattered, San Francisco still managed to go 21-7 and surprised all by taking third in the NCAA tournament. Russell, Jones & Co. had won the two previous years.

This year, the Dons are all the way back to championship class by any measuring stick, standing 18-1 with 14 in a row while ranking No. 5 in the country.

Beaten only by Stanford (50-49), and that one in a heartbreaker in which a would-be winning shot was nullified at the buzzer, the Dons are using the typical Woolpert formula of blending "wait for the good shot" shooting with solid defense.

Fights Last Night

NEW YORK (AP)—Runner meets racer tonight in the Baxter Mile in the New York Athletic Club games in Madison Square Garden.

Istvan Rozsavolgyi of Hungary is the inner. Ron Delany of Ireland is the racer. Who will win? Well, racers usually beat the runners. Glenn Cunningham's almost complete mastery over Gene Venske was a good example.

Further, Delany, the Olympic 1,500-meter champion from Villanova by way of Ireland, has won 19 straight mile races over the past three years of running on boards. He's used to the indoor tracks and possesses a remarkable spring finish that has ground down all his opposition.

EVANS SHOOTS . . . He bagged 22 last night.

Evans Gets 22 To Pace G-Men To 9-Point Win

After playing so-so ball against an aggressive Kinston High School club for a full half, Greenville's Phantoms turned on the power to slap down the Red Devils, 59-50, here in a Northeastern Conference contest last night.

The Phantoms needed and got a victory that keeps them in the race with New Bern for the Northeastern title. It moves their record to 8-2.

New Bern improved their record last night by barely squeezing out a 41-40 win over a stubborn Roanoke Rapids club. The Bears are now 10-1 in loop play.

In order to stay in the running for the regular-season title—and a chance to represent the league in the state playoffs—the Phantoms will have to whip New Bern here Tuesday and Kinston at Kinston Friday.

Greenville made a bad beginning, was outscored in the first and second quarters by the visiting five and ended upon the short end of a 38-32 halftime score.

Charles Lewis, the big scoring ace for the Red Devils this season, plunked in 14 points in the first half to lead his team to the halfway edge. John Laws helped out, John Wesley Hudson, Phantom guard, kept the G-Men in the game with several steals and lay-ups. But the Devils had control of the backboards, with lanky Roger Hogood and Lewis monopolizing on the rebounds.

In the second period, Kinston moved to a 10 point lead before the Phants could get their machine in gear—but after that it was no contest.

Kinston was limited to only 12 points in the final half. Lewis, cooling down considerably, managed to sink only one more field goal. The big difference in the two teams after the half was in the rebounding. Dick Evans, Albert Crawford, Mack Roebuck, and Hudson began to snare their share of them and took the play away from the visitors late in the third quarter and throughout the fourth.

Evans, especially, was strong on the Kinston backboard. The Lanky Bland senior began to score more often and ended up with 22 points to lead both ends in scoring. Hudson was second with 17. Lewis' 16 was third high. Laws got 10 for the visitors.

It was the third quarter that broke Kinston's back. Greenville chalked up 15 points to the Devils' four. In the final period, the G-Men nabbed 12 to Kinston's eight, New Bern Next.

The New Bern-Greenville match, scheduled for Rose High Gymnasium Tuesday night, promises to be a thriller—probably THE game of the year for the Phants.

The Bears, who have more-or-less breezed through the league to their 10-1 mark, have had trouble during the past two games. They managed to edge Kinston 57-55 last Tuesday, and Roanoke Rapids 41-40 last night.

Indications are (if these scores mean anything) that Greenville might have a better than even chance of licking the Bears on the Phantom home court. In an earlier meeting at New Bern, the league-leaders won by seven points.

Lumbee Chief Says Help Offered By Other Tribes

CHICAGO (AP)—An Indian raid on a Ku Klux Klan meeting in North Carolina "did much to cripple the Klan all over the United States," a tribe leader said yesterday.

Simeon Oxendine, leader of the Lumbee tribe, said the Lumbees have received letters from Indian tribes in other parts of the country supporting their act against the Klan.

"I was made an honorary chief in Oklahoma," Oxendine told a news conference. "Another tribe offered 700 braves and 1,000 repeating rifles if we needed them."

The Lumbees broke up with gunfire a Klan rally in Robeson County, N.C. on Jan. 18.

"I think we did a pretty good job," Oxendine said.

Trouble from the Klan first broke out about six weeks ago, Oxendine said in a speech before 710 of the Illinois Department of Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

The Klan apparently objected to white persons associating with Indians, Oxendine said, "although they have been inter-marrying for years."

Oxendine said the Klan threatened the tribe. When that happened, he said word was sent to a Klan leader that Robeson County was "our home," and that trouble would follow if he came to the county.

The Klan leader, the Rev. James Cole, was one of those routed at the meeting.

During his talk, Oxendine displayed a Klan flag he said he took from a Klan leader's car before the Indians plunged the outdoor Klan meeting into darkness by shooting out a single electric light.

Some 30,000 Lumbees live in Robeson County, Oxendine said.

Oxendine, 38, was honored last night at the American Indian Center, Inc. The program was held in connection with Brotherhood Week activities. The Lumbee leader is an Air Force veteran and is district commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in his home area.

Growing Signs Of Real Fatigue In Space Test

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Airman Donald G. Farrell today faced only one more weary, lonesome day and night in the sealed steel barrel where he is trying to prove that man can survive space travel.

Despite his growing signs of "real fatigue," space scientists at nearby Randolph Air Force Base were confident the 23-year-old native of the Bronx would finish his seven-day stint at 9:35 a.m. (CST) Sunday.

International recognition and glowing praise from Air Force military and scientific leaders await the blond, 6-foot volunteer if he successfully sweats out the last long 24 hours.

"He has never, at any time, given any indication that he wants to get out before the experiment is over," Lt. Col. George R. Steinkamp, chief of space medicine at Randolph, said yesterday.

"It has been amazing to us — his cooperation and eagerness to continue the experiment."

"The space medicine chief disclosed that early yesterday, for the first time, Farrell showed signs of "real fatigue." The scientists had expected indications of serious weariness about Wednesday.

"However, he had a real sound sleep and this morning was much more alert than he was last night," Steinkamp reported.

"It does not change our optimism at all that he will finish out the seven days in good shape."

Steinkamp said the obvious fatigue caused Farrell to make mistakes while working a radar tracking problem presented as part of the make-believe ride in the space ship.

He also ignored or failed to notice warning lights that were flashed on his control panel inside the 3-by-5-foot sealed cabin, Steinkamp said.

Law Enforcers Guests Of Club

The Greenville Exchange Club at its weekly supper meeting last night, had some law enforcement officers as guests in observance of National Crime Prevention Week.

President Fred Forbes, who presided, said the club will be host to the members' children next Friday.

Special guests were George Canady and John Boyd of the State Bureau of Investigation, Pitt County Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson, and Greenville Police Chief S. G. Gibbs, Committee Chairman Luther D. Moore introduced them.

Exchange Ed Parkinson explained that these men had made talks in Greenville schools during the day and had made an appearance on WNCN television station.

SBI Agent Boyd described the polygraph, or lie detector, and said North Carolina has only one permanent machine in Raleigh and one portable, which is currently in use in the field of psychiatry at Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill. With charts he explained how the lie detector works and praised its accuracy.

Guests in addition to the law enforcement officials were S. J. Waters, Mac Proctor, Wadell Waters and Dick Newell.

Their Home Is Filled With Treasures Of Travels

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor

The world has been the John Coughlans' oyster for some time now, and from it, they have extracted pearls from England, France, Italy, Germany, Luxemburg, Holland, Norway, Belgium, Ireland, Switzerland, and Scotland.

In their unique home on Willow Street, they have combined an Italian marble-topped table and a brass urn and candlesticks from England with a camel seat from the Sahara Desert.

They haven't hesitated to place an inlaid tray from Italy and German figurines on an old-fashioned marble top wash stand of English origin.

Collector's Dream

Coughlan's personal cup and saucer collection is strictly international. England, Ireland, Germany, France, and Holland are all represented. This hobby, which began in 1947, has grown into an unusual collector's dream featuring over 100 sets (with no two alike.)

All this and pure antiques, too!

The effect is as distinctive as the homeowners.

Mrs. Coughlan, an adventuresome woman with a wholesome smile has a sharp eye for genuine pieces. She does admit, "I have no rhyme nor reason when buying."

They Live With Theirs

Unlike many curio collectors, the Coughlans actually live with theirs.

Their dining room table is set each night with the same pattern of Wedwood china that Queen Elizabeth uses at Valmoral, her summer home.

When Mrs. Coughlan visited the Wedwood factory two days after the Queen's royal visit, she did not realize her selection was the identical pattern the factory presented the Queen.

When friends drop by the Coughlans they enjoy coffee served in fragile cups from the man of the house's priceless collection, accompanied by eye-catching coffee spoons which Mrs. Coughlan brought back as reminders of each of the countries visited.

This casual approach to a home filled with antiques and art objects extends all over the house. Their three daughters' room is a girl's dream with a host of native dolls, wooden shoes, and a closet filled with brilliant costumes.

Four Attending School

A graduate of the University of Alabama, Coughlan is now back in school. This time he is attending East Carolina as a graduate student in the education department.

Every morning Johnnie Leu leaves for Wahl-Coates, Betsy Ann heads for the Junior High School, and Laverne and her father set out for the college. Mrs. Coughlan's role is chauffeur.

Returning to their home in Greenville in October, the Coughlans already are beginning to think about the future countries they will visit. "Next time we set out it will probably be toward Spain or Italy," said Coughlan.

Their trips are in conjunction with the army. Coughlan is now semi-retired. He holds the rank of major and while in Liverpool, England, for the past three years he served as Post Commander.

It is certain that no matter where their next trips might take them, they will return home with suitcases, boxes, and trunks filled with pearls of their travels.

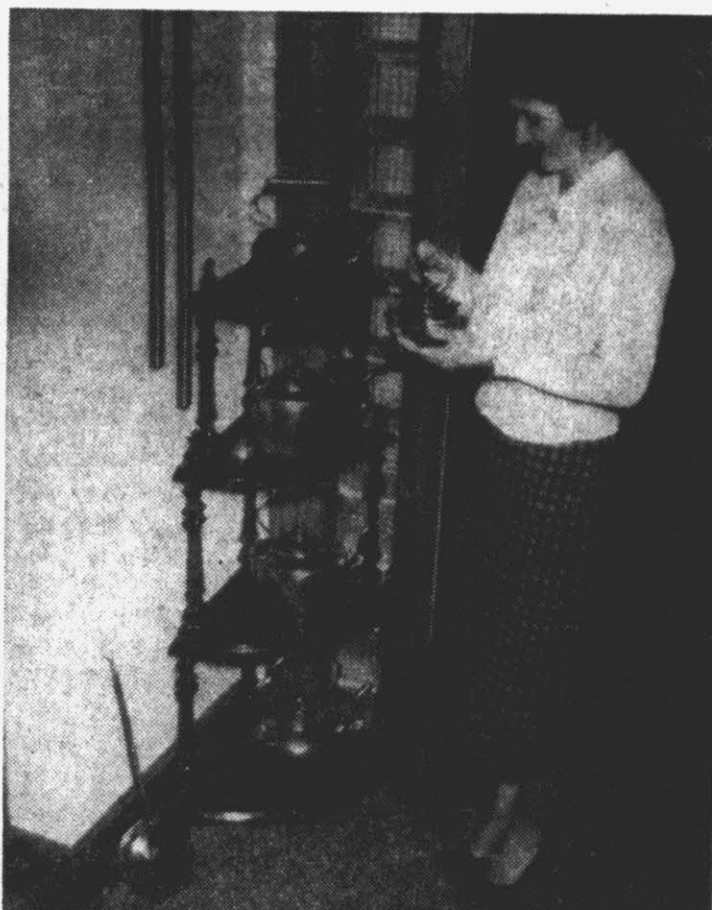

Semi-Retired Army Major Coughlan . . . pauses by priceless cup and saucer collection.

Copper and brass tea kettle collection . . . reminds Mrs. Coughlan of three years in England.

Crop-Measuring Will Feature A New Device

ROTOMETERS REPLACED BY NEW INSTRUMENT... Mrs. Hannah demonstrates old method.

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

A new device with a tongue twisting name, which will be placed in use by the Pitt ASC this year, is expected to make tobacco crop measurement more accurate and faster.

The new instrument, a planimeter, will replace the long-used rotometer for measuring acreage of allotted crops on the special air photographs of Pitt County's farm land.

To understand how the instrument works it's necessary to understand the ASC's system for measuring of tobacco crop lands. All of the county's farm land has been photographed from the air, the air photographs blown up to uniform size, and placed on file in the ASC office.

After allotted crops are planted, crop measurers will be sent out to each individual farm to actually measure the outer boundaries of the fields.

If all fields were square or rectangular figuring the acreage of each would be a simple matter. But they're not. The fields take various shapes and forms.

So, the field measurements are brought into the ASC office. There, the fields are located on the aerial maps maintained in the office and each can be measured to determine the acreage.

If the measurements determine that the farm is within its allotment, the farmer has clear sailing. If not, the over planted portion of the crop must be destroyed. In years past the measuring of the planted fields has been done with a rotometer. This circular clear plastic device was pinned in the center of the air map field. The rotometer operator carefully followed circular lines on the instrument from border-to-border of the field. When the operator had worked from one corner of the field to the opposite corner, the total measurements of the circular lines could be used to determine the acreage.

Slow Process

However, the process was slow and painstaking. There was always the chance of skipping a line, thus throwing the entire measurement off.

This year, the German-made planimeter is expected to reduce chances of error in the aerial photograph measuring.

Instead of measuring the fields by circular lines as the old rotometer did, the new instrument works from a fixed point simply follows the boundaries of the field. The operator pins one arm of the device to the photography. A point on another arm is drawn along the field boundaries by the operator.

As the point moves, it rotates a gauge built into the instrument. Once the field boundaries are traced a reading is taken from the gauge and figures are obtained which can be used for computing the acreage.

As an additional insurance of accuracy, the photographs have been reprinted to a larger size this year. The maps are scaled one inch for 330 feet on the ground instead of one inch for 660 ground feet as was the case in rotometering days.

In addition new type lights have been installed at the local ASC office. Each of the fixtures includes both a fluorescent tube and an incandescent bulb and they are designed to eliminate shadows.

When crop measuring begins this summer, the planimeters will be checked for accuracy each morning. If they are found to be 1-100 of an acre over or under they will be returned to the state office to be re-gauged.

The instrument must be that accurate because Congress has said ASC must penalize growers who overplant by as much as 1-100 of an acre.

Thus, tobacco field acreage must be determined to within a hundredth of an acre.

Best Answer

Measuring from aerial photographs seems to be the best answer to the tobacco acreage problem. That is the way most tobacco acreage has been measured for the past several years.

The North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station recently conducted a survey of more than 80 farms in Lenoir, Wayne and Johnston Counties to determine the accuracy of ASC measurements.

Dr. A.L. Finkner, professor of experimental statistics at N.C. State College compared the measurements of the Experiment State team with ASC measurements.

The difference between ASC measurements and those of the civil engineers average about one-tenth acre per field. Measurements of only 10 out of 82 fields differed by one-hundredth acre or less.

"However," Finkner said,

Foresees Missiles For Forest Fires

RALEIGH (AP)—Missiles carrying chemical extinguishers may be used in suppression of forest fires in the future, prophesied C. Otto Lindin, regional forester of the U.S. Forest Service in Atlanta, Ga.

He told some 300 foresters yesterday that in the future timber harvesting and transportation will be largely by aerial methods and by pipe lines with electronic propulsion.

Lindin spoke at the winter meeting of the Appalachian section of the Society of American Foresters. He said it also may be assumed in the years to come that forest fire control will consist of practically a man-caused fire.

Lightning will be drained from the clouds, he said, and fires detected by electronics.

The two-day meeting wound up today. New officers who took over today include H. Freeman Lathrop, Hampton, S.C., chairman; E.L.S. Harrar, Durham, vice chairman; and Walter T. Ahearn, Columbia, S.C., secretary-treasurer.

Ralph C. Winkworth, regional forester with the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development, and State Forester Charles F. Flory of South Carolina received achievement awards last night for "outstanding contributions to the advancement of forestry" in the Carolinas and Virginia during 1957. Winkworth was presented the Junior Award and Flory the senior award.

Florida Indians Sleeping In Cars

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Florida's icy weather is forcing some of the state's stoical Seminole Indians to sleep in their cars instead of their chickees.

The hardy tribesmen usually pay little attention to cold snaps, but this is the worst winter in the state's history.

"In some cases there are six or seven members of a family forced to sleep huddled in the old family car to keep warm," Morton Silver, white attorney for the Miccosukee tribe, said.

Chickees—the name given to the traditional Seminole dwelling places—are nothing more than palmetto-hatched roofs supported by poles. They have no walls and thus are completely open to the frigid winds now blowing across the open Everglades.

PERFORMANCE CLERK MRS. ELISE HANNAH OPERATES PLANIMETER... as Performance Supervisor Frank Parker looks on.

"ASC's measurements for all fields totaled slightly less than that of the engineers.

"Farmers were favored by a bit more than 2-100 of an acre per field."

To increase accuracy further would be very expensive. For example, the average cost of engineers' measurements in the Experiment Station survey was $17.24 per acre. ASC's average cost for measuring with present methods is about 83 cents per acre.

"If every field in the State were measured by an engineering team there still would be some errors in measurement," Finkner points out.

"Even when the same team at two different times, there will almost always be a slight difference between the two figures."

The research project was suggested by the N.C. Board of Farm Organizations and Agencies. Members of the civil engineering and experimental statistics departments at N.C. State College assisted in the survey and its analysis.

Results appeared in the Winter issue of "Research and Farming" which is published by the N.C. Agricultural Experiment Station.

Sidelights On The Observing Of Lent

By TOM HENSHAW AP Writer

Finnish mothers used to commence Lent by spreading ashes on hillside to prevent their children from sledding and thus insure quiet during the 40 days of penance.

That's not the way Ash Wednesday started but it is an interesting sidelight to Lent from a collection forwarded by the Rev. Martin P. Halverson, executive director of the National Council of Churches' Worship and Arts Department.

Lent used to be known as "Quarantine" because the fasting and penance lasted 40 days. And that's the origin of the modern term for the isolation of ailing and suspect persons.

In some countries, Shrove Tuesday, the day before Lent, is a day of merrymaking. It's called "Mardi Gras," literally "Fat Tuesday." Mardi Gras is a sort of carnival, which derives from the Latin "Carne Vale," or farewell to meat.

The humble pretzel began its career as an honored Lenten bread. Shaped like two arms crossed in prayer, it was called "little arms," or, in Latin, "bracciae." The Germans called it "brez" or pretzel.

Many Lenten customs and traditions derive from pre-Christian pagan times.

The very name of the day which fills a x'es the season of Lent, "Easter Sunday," comes from "Eastre," the goddess of spring in the old Teutonic pantheon.

The Easter egg developed from the pagan symbol of fertility. The process of "a new life creature suddenly coming forth from a seemingly dead object... readily lent itself to Christian symbolism of the Resurrection," says the Rev. Mr. Halverson.

ONE OF THE YOUNGEST "COLONELS"—Eddie Hodges, 10, singing star of the New York show, "The Music Man," is made an honorary Mississippi "colonel" by Mississippi's Gov. J. P. Coleman at the Plaza Hotel in New York. Eddie finds his sword almost as tall as he is. Eddie comes from Hattiesburg, Miss. He joins a growing list of native Mississippians now living in the New York area who have distinguished themselves and have been named honorary "colonels" of Mississippi or aides-de-camp to the governor. WELL, HERE WE ARE.

CRIMESTOPPERS TEXTBOOK
TRULY MAN'S BEST FRIEND

THE BEST INSURANCE AGAINST CAR LARCENIES—YOUR DOG. BUT LEAVE A WINDOW PARTLY OPEN SO THE ANIMAL CAN GET AIR.

YES, WE DECIDED TO LET YOU HAVE THE RECORDS. THE RHYTHM IS SO CORNY, AND NONE OF THE FELLOWS DIG THAT DIRGE.

LIKE I SAID, GIRLS, THEY'RE PURELY 'COLLECTORS' ITEMS.

LOOK, I WANT TO PAY YOU FOR THEM. HOW ABOUT TAKING THIS C-NOTE?

REALLY?

AND IN THAT TARPULIN-COVERED TRUCK, NOT MORE THAN 20 FEET FROM WHERE THE THREE STAND, A CAMERA CLICKS.

AS TRACY PHOTOGRAPHS PANTSY, WHOM HE HAS NEVER SEEN BEFORE, LIZZ, THE POLICEMAN, STANDS BY IN AN ADJACENT DOORWAY.

SO LONG, GIRLS. GOOD LUCK.

WELL, THAT WASN'T SO BAD, WAS IT? REMEMBER, NOT A WORD TO ANYONE, GIRLS.

OH, BOY! WE CAN DONATE THIS TO OUR SCHOOL BAND UNIFORM FUND.

ONE HOUR LATER, AT HEADQUARTERS.

THANKS TO THE GIRLS, WE HAVE THE CONTENTS OF ALL THREE RECORDS TYPED AND TAPED, AS WELL AS THOSE PICTURES OF OUR QUARRY.

AND OUR NEXT JOB IS TO GET TO THAT BURIED MILLION DOLLARS LOOT BEFORE HE DOES.

THAT'S EASY, CHIEF. IS OUR CREW READY?

LATER, AS PANTSY TRIUMPHANTLY REJOINS HIS MOB—

YOU GOT THEM! BRING THE RECORD PLAYER, PAUL!

OH, NO! WE'RE NOT PLAYING THESE RECORDS HERE!

PANTSY, WHAT DO YOU MEAN?

SUPPOSE ONE OF YOU WANTS TO WORK A DOUBLE CROSS?

A DOUBLE CROSS?

WE'LL PLAY THESE RECORDS IN THE CAR AS WE GO! THAT WAY NO ONE WILL HAVE ADVANCE INFORMATION, SAVVY?

THAT'S IDENTIFICATION ENOUGH FOR ME...LET'S HAVE A LOOK!

THIS SHOE HAS A 'B' STAMPED ON IT!

THAT WOULD BE FOR 'BOTTOMLY.' THIS ONE IS MARKED 'M' FOR 'MILES'.

WELL, THAT'S ALL OF THEM...SIX BELONG TO REYNOLDS, FOUR TO COL. BOTTOMLY, AND FOUR ARE MINE!

WHAT HAVE YOU GOT TO SAY NOW, HOOD?

THIS IS WHAT I GET FOR WORKING WITH STUPID CROOKS LIKE THOSE THREE!

LOOKS LIKE THE POT CALLING THE KETTLE BLACK...OKAY, LET'S GO!

Miami Manhunt

A NEW SUSPENSE NOVEL BY WILLIAM FULLER

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Venturesome young Brad Dolan, who is telling the story, came to Miami Beach with two weeks off from his charter-boat business, money in hand, and no strings attached. He was having difficulty obtaining a room at a hotel without a reservation, when a girl came to his aid. He had never seen her before, but she professed to be waiting for him.

She is Marta Blanding, dancer in the floor show of the hotel's night club. Clearly frightened by something, she went to Brad's room to appeal for his protection against a man who has been following her menacingly. She did not want to appeal to police. Upon being pressed for details, Marta confided to Brad that she is the only person who knows where a $250,000 cache is stashed away. She promises him half of it if he protects her till she recovers it. Brad is to meet Marta after the evening floor show to learn more of her "deal." Meanwhile Brad tries to make up his mind if her story is phony and if she is actually in danger...

eye was me till then, why don't you join me? Have a steak. And then we'll go drop a few bucks at the phone and give her the pitch."

"That won't be necessary, Mr. Dolan," he said. He stood.

"You're satisfied? No more talking this evening?"

"I am satisfied. I've favored me with a smile. 'No more talking, as you say, Mr. Dolan.' He left me.

I didn't cash a ticket at the jail-all fronton until the tenth and last game. And then I cashed two. I got back to the hotel shortly after 1. I went across the lobby and into the Gulf Stream Room. There were plenty of empty tables. The Gulf Stream Room, it would seem, was not the most popular night spot on the Beach.

I sat at the bar and ordered bourbon over ice. A ventriloquist was going through his paces on-stage. The guy wasn't bad.

He finished his act and bowed off-stage to feign applause. A young master of ceremonies came on and introduced the next act, a gypsy flamenco dancer. A tired looking old man wearing a bull-fighter's suit and a guitar came on and sat in a chair. He struck a couple of soft chords, then went into some rapid-fire flamenco music. A homely, angry looking young babe wearing the same sort of a suit came out of the wings. She wore tiny castanets on her fingers. She pounded the boards with her heels, clicked the castanets and whirled and looked madder than ever. Every girl flamenco dancer I've ever seen looks mad. I guess it's part of the act.

I looked around the room. Most of the tables were occupied by single couples. There was only one real live party in the room. And, from all the attention they were getting from two waiters, it was the only free-wheeling party in the room.

This party was at a big table close to the center of the stage. A dark, distinguished looking man of fifty or fifty-five was at one end of the table. He wore a maroon silk dinner jacket. Two bottles of champagne were in buckets of ice on the floor beside him. Three other men in white dinner jackets — young men — were in the party. And four gorgeous babes — three blondes and a redhead — all immaculately dressed, coiffured and made up — rounded out the party. Rounded out is the correct expression; they must have helped pour each other into those dresses.

The guy with the maroon jacket et was the center of attention; it was pretty easy to see who was going to pick up the tab. The bartender standing opposite me looked like a friendly type. And he wasn't busy. I ordered a fresh drink. While he was making it, I said, "Who's the guy giving the big party — the part with all the dames?"

The bartender took a swipe at his already spotless bar with a towel. Then he put my drink in front of me. "You oughta read the papers, Mac. That's the guy who had, for eight years, maybe, one of the sweeter jobs in the world. That's Ramez, Mac. Ramez — ex-strogonman of the so-called Republic of Coronado, down in South America. I know you heard of the place and I know you heard of Ramez."

I nodded. "They canned him down there a couple of years ago."

"This was going to be interesting."

There Could Be Gold In Those Math Lessons

WASHINGTON (AP)—Brush up on your math, kids—there may be gold in them that equations and theorems.

Several Congress members have proposed $500 cash awards to any high school graduate who can pass a standard examination in mathematics.

Rep. Price (D-Ill.), one sponsor of the legislation, said "everyone likes it." He did not say whether this support has been voiced by Congress members, the general public, or both. The bill is pending before a House Commerce subcommittee.

Dr. Alan Waterman, chief of the National Science Foundation, said yesterday the proposal has "a means of helping increase the nation's future supply of scientists."

Waterman, testifying before a Senate-House Atomic subcommittee on Research and Development, said he felt the idea would be very effective in encouraging more students to study math and in preparing them to go on to higher studies in science, engineering and mathematics.

Waterman also indicated a belief that more steps than that would be needed to increase the production of scientists and engineers, and to expand the nation's output of basic scientific research.

Price said the cash award proposal not only would provide an incentive for more boys and girls to become proficient in mathematics, but also might be a means of showing up any deficiencies in the teaching of the subject.

There would be competition among high schools all over the country, he said, to see how many of their young people could pass such an examination.

And in those places where the number passing turned out to be low, Price said, "the local people would try to find out why their community was behind the others."

Reds Push War Against Religion

By THOMAS P. WHITNEY
AP Foreign News Analyst

The Soviet Communist party is stepping up its drive against religion.

An unceasing flow of news from the Soviet Union and articles in the Soviet press show the Kremlin is pushing energetically its campaign against Christianity and other religious faiths.

A week ago, for instance, Kom-somol Pravda, the Young Communist League paper, declared religious holidays present a "real danger" to League activities. It called on young communists to be alert in preventing young believers from getting the upper hand in things during such religious holiday period. This amounted to an appeal to League members to wage war on observance of church festivals and holy days.

Only a short time ago the paper Chernomorskaya Kommuna of Odessa demanded intensification of antireligious and atheist education and indoctrination of workers. Radio Orenburg, in the southern Urals, complained that not enough lectures on "scientific-atheistic" propaganda were being given in that area and demanded it be stepped up. Another Soviet radio station reported that in the first few weeks of January more than 20 antireligious lectures had been given in Kiev, capital of the Ukraine.

Ukrainian Communist authorities appear gravely concerned about religious activity in that republic. A Kiev Russian language newspaper, Pravda Ukrainy, demanded on Jan. 17 that atheist propaganda be intensified in order to counteract the influence of religious sermons on certain "instable and poorly educated people."

Ragged Recluse Is Found Wealthy

DIXON, Ill. (AP)—A junk dealer who lived as a recluse died yesterday en route to a hospital in a police car he had called, saying he was unable to afford an ambulance.

Authorities later learned that Morris Adams, 56, who wore ragged clothes, owned an estimated $300,000 in real estate. Adams had been suffering from a heart condition.

Police said a search of his junk-littered home disclosed $500 in currency and $1,000 in checks. The Lee County treasurer's office said Adams owned about $300,000 worth of real estate, including a 160-acre farm in the Dixon area. His only known survivor is a sister, Mrs. Albert Bellars of nearby Sterling.

CHAPTER 5

I walked to the steak house, entered, and sat at a table for two in the shadows. A three-piece combo was giving out with some pretty good low-down live at the other end of the room. I watched the entrance and saw my fat friend in, looking around for a spot. He looked relieved, then moved to the bar and ordered a drink.

A cruising waitress wheeled to a stop in front of me. I ordered porterhouse rare, a baked potato and a green salad. Then I pointed the fat man out of her.

"He's a friend of mine. Ask him if he'll join me, please. Just tell him Mr. Dolan."

I watched her speak to him. It was probably imagination, but I would have sworn that his face blanched. The waitress pointed me out to her, shrugged, paid for his drink, put the glass in a pudgy hand and waddled across the room to my table.

There was just a trace of some sort of a Latin-American accent in his voice: "You are Mr. Dolan?"

"I am Mr. Dolan, amigo," I said. "Sit down."

"I am afraid there is some mistake. Perhaps you have me confused with someone else? I have never met, you Mr. Dolan."

"Sit down, pal."

"That hat," I said. The band stands out like a flag in a stiff breeze. Never wear a hat like that, amigo, when you're trying to tail a man?"

Tail a man? This expression I do not understand.

"Follow him."

"But I have not been following you, Mr. Dolan."

I grinned at him. I was enjoying myself. Marta had tagged as a real easy mark and I wanted her to keep on believing it until I pulled the string. I wasn't quite sure how I'd do it when the time came. But I was going to have some fun. Of this I was sure.

"Look, amigo," I said. "I don't especially mind if you follow me. But I can save you a lot of time. I suppose Marta's worried for fear I'll repeat some of the things she told me about the money. Or get out on the town and forget about our date. Tell her not to worry." I was trying to act just as Dixie as possible without lousing up my act by overdoing it.

"Listen. When a little girl's got the sort of trouble that one has, I'm not going to stand her up. Especially when she happens to look like Marta, if you know what I mean." I favored him with a wink. "I'll keep my mouth shut and I'll meet her in her cabana at 2:30 a.m. just as I promised I would."

It was impossible to miss the glowing expression that passed across his face.

"At 2:30, Mr. Dolan?" he wheezed.

"At 2:30. And look, if you still think it's necessary to keep an

There Could Be Gold In Those Math Lessons

WASHINGTON (AP)—Brush up on your math, kids—there may be gold in them that equations and theorems.

Several Congress members have proposed $500 cash awards to any high school graduate who can pass a standard examination in mathematics.

Rep. Price (D-Ill.), one sponsor of the legislation, said "everyone likes it." He did not say whether this support has been voiced by Congress members, the general public, or both. The bill is pending before a House Commerce subcommittee.

Dr. Alan Waterman, chief of the National Science Foundation, said yesterday the proposal has "a means of helping increase the nation's future supply of scientists."

Waterman, testifying before a Senate-House Atomic subcommittee on Research and Development, said he felt the idea would be very effective in encouraging more students to study math and in preparing them to go on to higher studies in science, engineering and mathematics.

Waterman also indicated a belief that more steps than that would be needed to increase the production of scientists and engineers, and to expand the nation's output of basic scientific research.

Price said the cash award proposal not only would provide an incentive for more boys and girls to become proficient in mathematics, but also might be a means of showing up any deficiencies in the teaching of the subject.

There would be competition among high schools all over the country, he said, to see how many of their young people could pass such an examination.

And in those places where the number passing turned out to be low, Price said, "the local people would try to find out why their community was behind the others."

Poor Research By Extortionist

DETROIT (AP)—This amateur extortionist didn't do enough basic research before he taped notes to two separate doors in a Detroit apartment building.

One note said: "If you don't leave $50 taped to the wall leading to the roof by Thursday, I will tell your wife you are fooling around with another woman."

The second asked for $20 on the wall or "I'll tell your wife you are fooling around with Mary."

Police said the tenant of one apartment is an unmarried woman. The tenant in the other is a bachelor.

Sigma Rho Phi's Affiliation Has Been Given Preliminary Approval

Word has been received by the Sigma Rho Phi fraternity that its informal petition has been approved by Kappa Alpha National.

Merle Teachey, president of the ECC local social organization, stated this morning that his fraternity has been preliminarily approved for national affiliation with Kappa Alpha. He said a formal petition will be filed in the near future.

The local fraternity has been corresponding with Kappa Alpha since the beginning of the year. According to Teachey 14 members of KA at N. C. State College are scheduled to visit the local chapter over the weekend. Several other chapters at colleges and universities in this state have also indicated they plan to visit, he added.

Sigma Rho Phi was organized here in 1951 and was a service fraternity. It was the first such chapter in the state. Since its organization, two other chapters have been formed in the state, at High Point College and Atlantic Christian College. The chapter at High Point has since affiliated with a nationally known fraternity.

Members of the fraternity entertained Greenville alumni of Kappa Alpha at a dinner Thursday night.
