Twelve Persons Die As Rash Of Tornadoes Strike In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss (AP)—Daylight disclosed new damage today from a series of late winter tornadoes which ravaged central Mississippi last night...

One of the hardest hit spots was the world-famed Piney Woods Country Life School about 25 miles from south of Jackson...

Dr. Laurence C. Jones, the white-haired Negro educator who founded Piney Woods, said destruction there was "terrible."

Shattered buildings and shreds of farmlands dotted the 140-mile area in central and east Mississippi that stretched from Canton, 20 miles north of Jackson; and Poplarville, 120 miles to the south. Five of the dead were in the hard-hit rural area between Richland and Waynesboro...

The town of Walnut Grove, where Mrs. Tarrin Ellis was killed, was another center of destruction.

George Keith, editor of the Carthage newspaper, said the town was "literally torn up" with 50 or 60 houses damaged.

Twenty injuries were reported in the Poplarville area of Pearl River County.

Several dozen were reported hurt in the devastated Richland-Waynesboro area.

Percy H. Clark, 56, said he and his wife, 48, heard a sound like a train as they sat in their living room.

"The next thing we knew we were sitting under it," he said. "We heard a roaring, and all at once we were going."

He said his pickup truck was carried 100 feet and deposited in the top of a pine tree.

Pitt Application For Surplus Food Is Given Approval

Pitt County's application for surplus government commodities has been approved, County Auditor Reginald Gray announced today.

Gray said he had received the approved contract from Jay P. Davis, the North Carolina Department of Agriculture commodity distribution director.

Once the Welfare Department has ascertained the number of families in need of assistance, the county will be able to draw the commodities from the state warehouse at Camp Butler.

Junius S. Grimes of the Welfare Department said yesterday that a schedule has been set up for conducting interviews about the county.

He announced the following schedule for conducting interviews: Grimesland, Friday; Falkland (W.W. Wooten Store), Monday; Farmville, Tuesday; Bethel (City Hall), Wednesday; Ayden (city courtroom) and Grifton, Thursday.

Representatives of the Welfare Department will be at the designated places from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. on the scheduled days.

Grimes said action on the applications received is expected to be completed by March 7. Now that the county's contract for the surplus commodities has been approved...

Families who are approved for the program will draw commodities monthly. The food packages will include cheese, dried milk, rice, meal and flour with the quantities depending on the number of persons in the family.

Division Heads Announced For Red Cross Drive

Representatives of the Welfare Department will be at the designated places from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. on the scheduled days.

Grimes said action on the applications received is expected to be completed by March 7. Now that the county's contract for the surplus commodities has been approved...

Heavy Vehicles Will Be Kept Off Damaged Roads

RALEIGH (AP)—Heavy vehicles will be banned from weather-weakened roads in North Carolina to hold down damage from fickle winter weather.

Highway Director W. F. Babcock acted yesterday in the face of weather conditions described as the harshest on highways in two decades.

He told division engineers to place load limit restrictions in effect where necessary to protect primary and secondary roads.

Chief Highway Engineer W. H. Rogers Jr. planned an on-the-spot check of conditions in the west, hardest hit by warm rains following the wake of a prolonged cold wave.

Rogers was scheduled to begin the tour today at North Wilkesboro.

Babcock asked motorists to cooperate by keeping heavy equipment and trucks off damaged highways, even though load limit restrictions signs may not be posted.

Ultimate damage to highways will depend "on weather conditions over the next ten days to two weeks," Babcock said.

If the weather clears and the ground dries slowly, damage will be minimized, he explained.

The hardest hit sections are from the Piedmont area west to the Tennessee state line, the highway director said.

In this area, warm rains after hard freezes "have made a quagmire of unpaved secondary roads and seriously damaged many sections" of paved roads, he said.

Restrictions on primary highways are: 13,000 pounds for one axle; 20,000 for two axles; and 30,000 for three axles.

British Airliner Crash Killed 33

BOLTON, England (AP)—A chartered British airliner with 42 persons aboard smashed against a snow-covered mountain today only five minutes from its destination.

A policeman at the scene said 33 persons perished.

An injured stewardess, the only woman aboard, and the copilot struggled through knee-deep snow to a television relay station on top of the mountain and gasped out the first word of the disaster.

Helicopters, snowplows and mountain rescue teams fought through a blizzard to the scene.

The twin-engine Bristol Wayfarer operated by Silver City Airways, was carrying automobile dealers from the Isle of Man in the Irish Sea on a one-day junket to Manchester, only 15 miles from here, to inspect a plant of the Exide Battery Co.

Wisecracking and jovial, the party of 39 businessmen boarded the plane for the 100-mile flight, waving goodbye to wives and children.

There was a crew of three aboard.

Thirty-five minutes later, with visibility cut by heavy clouds and the blizzard, the plane smashed to bits against Winter Hill, near the bleak moorlands of Lancashire and only 400 yards from a lonely TV tower manned by five engineers.

Stewardess Jennifer Curtis stumbled out of the wreckage with copilot William Howarth. Shocked, exhausted and injured, they staggered uphill into the TV station and gasped: "Our plane has crashed."

The snow was so deep that no vehicle could get within a mile of the wreckage.

Bulldozers and snowplows groaned through four-foot drifts, opening the way for ambulances, when the call for help went out from the TV station.

Rescuers, juggling stretchers, blankets and medicines, struggled on foot the last distance.

Three helicopters took off from a nearby Royal Air Force base with doctors and nurses.

Men at a quarry some distance away helped carry survivors to the ambulances.

The whole area has been gripped by a blizzard for the past three days. Giant drifts are blocking roads, isolating villages and bringing chaos to road and rail transport.

High Resentment Over President Backing Benson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Resentment flared among rebellious Midwestern Republicans in Congress today over President Eisenhower's sharply worded defense of Secretary of Agriculture Benson.

As two GOP House members prepared to carry corn belt protests against Benson's farm policies to the White House later today, Rep. O'Konski (R-Wis.) told newsmen: "So far, I've been under the impression we only needed a new secretary of agriculture. Now I think we also need a new president."

Eisenhower made abundantly clear to his news conference he had no idea of ousting Benson and little thought of interfering with the Secretary's farm policies.

One or the other has been urged openly by many farm belt Republicans.

Praising Benson as a man of courage and honesty, Eisenhower said those advocating his ouster are badly mistaken.

Eisenhower said that by and large the country will be better off if farmers are free from government regulations and operate under free market forces like the rest of the economy.

He also said that Benson's programs generally have had the approval of bipartisan agricultural advisory committees.

Taking the House floor shortly after the President made his statement, Rep. Andersen (R-Minn.) commented bitterly: "It now appears that the President has foreclosed any opportunity to acquaint himself with the facts of life."

Andersen was one of about 30 Midwestern, GOP House members seeking to force Benson's resignation or a change in administration farm policies in favor of higher farm price supports.

Rep. Weaver (R-Neb.) said, "Mr. Benson is ineffectual because the folks have lost confidence in him. When he lacks that confidence and leadership, the President ought to take cognizance of it."

Rains And Wind Delay Vanguard

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Heavy rains and an unfavorable wind forecast blocked the Vanguard rocket launching program today, at least until next week.

They thus crowded one U.S. space program against another, into two possible satellite launching attempts in the first week of March.

The Army is waiting to launch a second Explorer satellite, atop a Jupiter-C four-stage rocket, as soon as the Navy puts up its three-stage Vanguard with a 64-inch satellite sphere in its nose.

Repeated rainfall has flooded parts of the low, flat missile test area and forced workers to keep the 72-foot Vanguard rocket "buttoned up" under protecting cover to hold moisture away from the test vehicle's many delicate instruments, fittings and connections.

This has so delayed the preparation of the rocket for firing that informed sources said a Vanguard launching this week was out of question.

College Paper Grew Into A Novel

By JIMMY ELLIS, Reflector Staff Writer

Several years ago, when Frank Landing of Plymouth was an undergraduate at East Carolina College, one of his English assignments was to write a paper on the Confederate ram "Albemarle."

The paper drew a top grade from Landing's instructor, Dr. Edward J. Rutan. The professor liked it both from a standpoint of construction and a standpoint of content.

At the time, Landing didn't attach a great deal of significance to the paper, beyond the ordinary interest a student has for an assignment. It was a paper on a subject that was familiar to him, and in completing the assignment he was able to answer some personal questions — but that was about as far as Landing's real interest went.

Time, and an intensified interest in the subject, have changed that attitude, however.

What started as a routine assignment for an English class more than eight years ago has become a novel, Landing's first.

The book, "War Cry of the South," will be published March 24 by Exposition Press of New York. It is a historical novel of the construction and battles of the Rebel Ram "Albemarle" (or "Albemarle," a colloquial expression and spelling used by Landing.)

Although he insists the work is far from a scholarly undertaking, Landing's book represents a sort of putting into practice what he preaches. As an English and Journalism teacher at Junius H. Rose High School, Landing makes a concentrated effort to teach creative writing, and writing based on a solid respect for facts.

The combination of love for creativity and respect for facts is something that has been developed by Landing throughout his entire life. As a youngster in Plymouth, which figures prominently in his book, Landing grew up among Civil War stories told by people who were either directly or indirectly involved in the situations.

While at East Carolina, Landing combined his study of English and History while getting his degree, and he has continued the combination since he began teaching.

The book which Landing has written grew mostly out of his interest in the particular subject and a desire to have the whole story of the "Albemarle" told well.

"I had never been able to find a complete story on the ram, but over a period of years I've read every thing about it I could get my hands on. The book itself is based on pieced-together facts, but there is certainly a fictitious element in the story," he says.

"Because it has that fictitious element, I wouldn't recommend the book as a reference work. It isn't. Furthermore, it's no scholarly work, but simply a story told in a fairly free-and-easy style described by the publishers as 'graphic' writing."

The book itself tells the story of the Rebel Ram "Albemarle" (or "Albemarle," a colloquial expression and spelling used by Landing.)

Arts Festival To Begin With Exhibit, Illustrated Talk On Theatre Saturday

An exhibition of materials on the "History of the Theatre" prepared by Dr. James D. Allison of East Carolina College and an illustrated talk by Richard E. Jordan of Nags Head, general manager of the "Lost Colony," will be chief attractions of a program Saturday in the Sheppard Memorial Library.

The East Carolina Art Society will sponsor the event. The program will open a series of exhibitions, lectures, dramas, and social events scheduled for March, April, and May and presented as attractions of the annual Community Arts Festival in Greenville. In previous years similar programs have been given during a single week each spring.

Dr. Allison's exhibition of 70 items traces the history of the theatre from its beginnings to the present. It was prepared to illustrate a televised course of instruction on "History of the Theatre" offered this school year by East Carolina College and taught by Dr. Allison, a member of the department of English. The exhibition will be on view throughout March.

Included are pictures, prints, photographs, masks from Africa to Japan, and various items of costume. Puppets made by Dr. Allison's niece, Mrs. Latham Lee Allison of Arlington, Va., will also be shown. An exhibition of books on the theatre will be on display. Following the program an informal reception honoring students in Dr. Allison's TV course and other guests will take place in the gallery.

Ronita Off To World Premiere

Miss Ronita Respass will leave tomorrow morning to represent Greenville at the World Premiere of "Lafayette Escadrille" in Washington, N. C. Arriving in Washington about 1 p. m., "Miss Greenville" will be greeted by the Chamber of Commerce and taken to a private home made available by the Washington Woman's Club for her private use.

At 3 p. m. she will participate in one of the biggest parades ever to take place in Eastern North Carolina. Bands, marching units, majorettes, and beauty queens from approximately 15 cities in North Carolina will be included in this event.

Ronita plans to wear a street ensemble as her parade outfit. At her shoulder she will wear a giant yellow chrysanthemum corsage and a "Miss Greenville" banner. Other activities scheduled for her during the day include an outdoor barbeque and air show at Warren Field.

30 Years Ago Today

February 27, 1928

The City of Greenville has been asked to take charge of the public library. This fact became known in a formal statement made through Mayor J. C. Lanier by the Woman's Club. No reason was assigned for the desired change but it is generally assumed that lack of finance is responsible for the action. The matter was referred to members of the library committee of the board who will make a private investigation of the library and report at the next session.

Miss Spikes, Mr. Bates Marry In Grifton Church

GRIFTON—The marriage of Miss Marian Shirley Spikes to Richard Coleman Bates was solemnized Sunday at 5 o'clock in a candlelight ceremony at the Methodist Church.

The Rev. Ralph I. Epps, pastor of the church, officiated, using the double-ring service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Spikes and the bridegroom the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hampton Bates, also of Grifton.

The church was decorated with palms interspersed with bridal greenery, seven branched candelabras, and floor baskets of white pom poms. Family pews were marked with white tulle bows.

Nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Mary M. Wetherington of Vanceboro, organist, and Lowell Speight, soloist, who sang "Whither Thou Goest" and as the benediction "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of Venise lace over satin fashioned along princess lines. Her bodice was accented with a band of satin which came to a point in the front with a small bow. The Sabrina neckline was lace edged as were the long sleeves. She used a fingertip veil of silk illusion attached to a tarsi embroidered in seed pearls. Her cascade bouquet was of bride's roses, valley lilies, and a white orchid.

Mrs. Robert F. Spikes of Kinston, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Miss Edith Williams of Richlands and Miss Virginia Stocks.

The matron of honor wore a pink pure silk waltz length dress styled with a portrait neckline and bouffant skirt and a matching headdress. She carried a bouquet of blue pom poms and pink carnations. The bridesmaids wore identical blue dresses styled like that of the matron of honor and carried bouquets of yellow and pink carnations.

William Ivan Jackson was best man and ushers were Robert F. Spikes of Kinston, brother of the bride, and George Fuller.

For the ceremony the bride's mother chose a navy suit with white accessories and a corsage of white rose bud.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a soft gray woolen with black accessories and a red rose corsage. After the ceremony, the couple greeted guests in the church vestibule and later left for a Florida wedding trip. On their return they will be at home on St. David Street.

For her wedding trip, the bride changed into a spring suit of light blue woven tweed with black accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her wedding bouquet. The bride is a graduate of the Grifton school and is now employed at the Kinston Du Pont Company.

The bridegroom attended the Contentnea school and is now in the service station business in Grifton.

Cake Cutting

Following the rehearsal on Saturday night an informal cake cutting was given by the parents of the bride for the bridal party and families at the home of the bride.

A color note of pink and white was used throughout the home. The bride's table was covered with a pink cloth and held the three tiered wedding cake topped with the miniature bride and bridegroom. The cake was served by Mrs. Bates, and bridal mints, nuts and punch were served by Mrs. Spikes.

The Belfryettes of Greenville Free Will Baptist Church rendered a musical program at the Tuesday night meeting of the Wihla Council No. 42, Degree of Pocahontas.

Mrs. Sallie Vainright and Mrs. Lena Mae Cox were welcomed as new members. Mrs. Geneva Webb had Good of Order.

Mrs. Maycie Culbreth was the presiding Pocahontas at the ritualistic meeting.

The door prize was won by Mrs. Louise Hyman after which Mrs. Thelma Whitaker and her committee served refreshments.

Wihla Council Has Program

GRIFTON—Mrs. Alton Chapman gave a sketch of William Faulkner for members of the Grifton Book Club Tuesday afternoon.

Faulkner is a widely-known American novelist and Nobel Prize winner for literature. Mrs. Chapman discussed his works, family and hometown. Mrs. Robert Meyborn, president, presented Mrs. Chapman.

At the refreshment hour homemade cake and coffee were served.

Choir Concert Lacked Vitality

By GEORGE E. FERRY

The East Carolina College Choir, under the direction of Dr. Carl Hjortsvang, gave its annual spring concert last evening before a moderate-sized but appreciative audience.

Taking a wide-range look at it, there were several examples of noteworthy singing in the program, and highlighting the concert was, to me, the rendition of "Beautiful Saviour," in the well-known arrangement by F. Melius Christiansen. The best tonal blend of the concert was obtained on the summed opening section, and in the conclusion was the most vitality they showed all evening.

The whole was nicely legato without destroying the audibility of the words, and an appropriate dynamic range was employed.

Another of the more outstanding numbers was "Were You There," a most effectively sung version of the well-known spiritual. The start was a bit shaky, but the nice pianissimo, the blend, the legato, and the word-ellision made up for the weak beginning.

Barbara Harris as soloist, while a little uncertain vocally, put everything she had into her words and the thoughts behind them which added much to the rendition.

Miss Carolyn Elam's solo work in "The Carol of the Birds" was extremely sensitive, as was student-conductor Milton Mann's.

The opening of the number was lovely, so was the ending; but the overly boisterous treatment of the middle section detracted from the overall effect. It should have been strong, true, but in no ways rough.

From the standpoint of the composition itself, "The Two Kings" was the most interestingly-treated number. There was good tonal and lingual contrast between the two verses; the vitality in this selection was solid, and the entrances were intact.

"Holy Radiant Light" contained the best climax of the evening, but the consummate effect was marred by the bases, and men in general, who often sounded over the rest of the choir. The best part-work was done in "Oh Most Blessed Jesu," which was well sung with a good balance between all of the parts, and the number contained several noticeably musical effects.

"O Magnum Mysterium" had some shaky entrances in it, but the nice work done in the "Alleluia" section rather saved it.

Milton Mann, student director, did another fine piece of work conducting "Old Man River," where a punctuated effect and a very steady rhythm were used advantageously.

What seemed to be lacking throughout the whole concert was

(the intense vitality with which the choir has usually sung. Choirs are a thrilling thing to hear, but I am sorry to say that I was not thrilled nor excited as I had hoped to be. I suppose a reason for this might be because the choir has just completed its tour, and a certain amount of fatigue is understandable.)

But the test of the lasting musician or group of musicians is, can they perform under difficult circumstances without showing it? Another thing which detracted from the overall picture were the several shaky and uncertain entrances, not so much pitch-wise, but they just didn't seem to know how to enter with necessary precision. Then, sometimes the blend was beautiful, and at other times there was a noticeable lack of it; this inconsistency was another of the detracting factors of the concert.

Some beautiful soft work was done, but dynamically speaking, there was a lack of contrast along these lines, and especially in using the full forte which is possible in a choir. While moments of hushed beauty were present, there was nothing exalting or uplifting about the concert.

The two novelty numbers which closed the program brightened the scene considerably.

Progress Group To Meet Monday

The Progress Committee of Red Oak will have a called meeting March 3 at 2:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Leon Tyson. Plans will be formulated for participation in the 1958 Pitt County Progress Program at this time.

These plans will be presented to the Red Oak Home Demonstration Club at their March meeting.

Committee members are Mrs. Tyson, overall chairman; Mrs. Rena Manning, Mrs. Lucy Allen, and Mrs. Sue May, group chairmen.

Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. Odell Evans, Mrs. Ruth Crawford, Mrs. Bertha May Jackson, Mrs. Lina Wynne, and Mrs. Nina Tripp are assistant chairmen.

Adjust Bath To Your Own Skin Problems

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

"How long should one stay in the bathtub? Will it hurt the skin if you spend too much time in the tub? Is it necessary to wash the back with a bath brush or will it be cleaned properly if one just relaxes in sudsy water?"

That letter from a young girl asks some questions that could be controversial. Many experts feel that the daily bath, and too much time in the tub, may rob skin of its natural oil. This could be true of some people, just as some girls may find that certain kind of stockings are irritating to their legs. Millions of girls wearing them may experience no problems, however.

The best idea is to judge the situation by observing the effect a long bath has on you. Most women find a bath relaxing, exhilarating, cleaning. They enjoy the luxurious feeling a tub affords, and they stay in the tub as long as they can. Young girls are likely to notice a temporary shriveled look of the fingers from prolonged soaking, or perhaps itchy skin caused by using a soap that is too alkaline. One must choose soap the way one chooses cosmetics for the skin—with an eye to personal response to it.

If one has the proper assortment of bath brushes, there is no doubt that the bath is made more pleasant. Newer bath brushes have an efficient cleansing action with nylon bristles that provide gentle stimulation as they remove dry and dead skin from the body. They are good too where excessive oiliness is likely to create blemishes on the back from plugged-up pores. These brushes with the stiffer bristles do offer a real brisk rub that is invigorating to the skin.

One could cleanse the skin by relaxing in the sudsy water, and then toweling dry with a large rubbery bath towel that will remove all the soap and take along dirty residue too.

If one has brushes at hand, it does make the bath easier. The palm-sized complexion brush has extra soft bristles, brushes for nails and hands are stiff and firm and the long-handled bath brush has good stiff bristles.

A drop of bath oil, bath salts or bubble bath are other inducements to a leisurely bath. These are not necessary if the soap is scented, but every little bit helps toward emphasizing femininity, a feeling that makes the average woman feel good.

FEMININE TREAT—A relaxing bath is good for the nerves. Newer bath brushes with tynex nylon bristles offer stimulating action.

Mrs. Mewborn Has Card, Supper Party

GRIFTON—Mrs. Robert Mewborn entertained Friday night at bridge at her home on McRae Street for members of her card club.

Spring flowers were used as decorations in the living room where the tables were placed for the games. As guests arrived they were invited into the dining room for supper. The table was covered with a linen cloth and held a centerpiece of pink roses. Cherry tarts were served as dessert.

Mrs. J. L. Quinerly and Miss Hazel Patrick were recipients of the high score awards.

Old-Fashioned Sewing Room Is Gone; Now Done Everywhere

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

With today's compact houses, the old-fashioned sewing room has given way to the television room or the family room. As a result, women are setting up sewing corners all over the house, according to the results of a recent survey.

Among the 40 million women in the United States who sew, the most popular room for the purpose is the bedroom, with 30.4 percent, or some 12 million women, operating from there. Next in popularity seems to be the dining room, securing 22.3 percent; then the living room, with 22 percent; and finally the separate sewing room, with only 12.3 percent.

Obviously, women who sew enough to need a special sewing area keep up to date on the latest thing in sewing machines and cabinets, with demand high at present for the new slant-needle automatic machines. They also need a sewing machine cabinet that will blend into the decor of the room and an arrangement whereby sewing equipment can be stowed away out of sight when not in use.

Local sewing center experts suggest a bedroom sewing corner, specially designed recently in connection with the introduction of the new automatic sewing machines. No expensive construction is involved, as the basic ingredients consist of a curtained area for storage and a handsome sewing cabinet.

For good design coordination, the curtained storage area should match the drapes used at the windows. The fabrics selected for the model room were dark green-textured American viscose rayon for curtains and drapes, harmonizing with a bedspread of bold blue and green checks.

One side of the curtained area is made of ordinary unpainted bookcases, for convenient and easily-visible storage. The other side is open, for storing dress form, ironing board and other bulky accessories.

The sewing machine is housed in an Early American cabinet, with authentic hardware and tooled legs. The honey-toned maple wood accents the rich green of the draperies and blends with the other furnishings in the room.

When the area is closed, the drawn curtains become a continuation of the window area and the closed cabinet doubles as an occasional table, brightened by a pot of ivy in a copper container.

Of course, the home seamstress who owns a new automatic sewing machine will not be content with a sewing corner featuring only straight stitching. The decorative touch in the model room is seen in the seat cover for the sewing stool, which features decorative stitching in a neat geometric design, looking like hand embroidery but quickly done simply by dialing the desired stitch on the machine.

Program On Japan Presented WSCS

GRIFTON—At the WSCS general meeting Monday night Mrs. Ralph Epps presented a program on Japan, followed by a film strip and devotional on missions in Japan by Mrs. Cecil Cobb.

Mrs. J. C. Hooten presided at the business hour and heard the circle reports and made announcements of coming dates for various meetings.

Mrs. Hooten announced that Mrs. John Scheide of Kinston would be a guest at the next meeting and asked a large attendance.

STUFFED EGGS TARTARE
Ingredients: 6 hard-cooked eggs, 6 tablespoons commercially-prepared tartar sauce, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1-4 teaspoon (generous) dry mustard, paprika, parsley springs, salad greens, other raw salad vegetables.

Method: Shell eggs and cut in half lengthwise while still warm from cooking. Remove yolks and mash fine; add tartar sauce, parsley and mustard; mix well. Spoon mixture back into egg cavities. Cover and refrigerate to allow flavors to develop. Sprinkle with paprika and garnish each half with a parsley sprig just before serving. Serve 3 egg halves to a portion on salad greens and accompanied by other raw salad vegetables such as radishes, cucumber, tomato. Makes 4 servings.

The Board Left Questions Hanging

Pitt County Commissioners may have disposed of the recent County Tax Office controversy to their own satisfaction, but it is our opinion they have left a good many questions unanswered so far as the people of Pitt County are concerned.

It appears to us the Commissioners must know considerably more about the situation which existed than they have told the people of the county. If they did not have more information than they have made public, it is difficult to understand how they could arrive at an intelligent decision in this important matter.

Among questions which have not been answered are:

If "personal differences" were the cause of the dispute in the tax office, why was it necessary for both persons apparently involved to leave the office? Would not the matter of "personal differences" have been resolved if one or the other of the two officials had left the office?

Did the Commissioners meet to discuss or deliberate about the tax office matter prior to making their decision? If such deliberations were held, what facts were developed from them?

Why was it necessary for the Commissioners to meet in the office of an attorney not connected with the county government rather than using the Commissioners room at the Court House that has been good enough for other meetings?

Why would the Chairman of the Board of Commissioners not acknowledge any decisions were reached at a special closed session of the Commissioners held just a few hours before the cut-and-dried session Tuesday afternoon in which the resignations of the two tax officials were swiftly and surely accepted.

If the Commissioners had not pre-arranged the action for Tuesday afternoon's public meeting, how was it possible before the meeting adjourned for the Commissioners to give to press representatives a previously prepared typewritten statement saying what action was being taken at the meeting?

It is our opinion that the Commissioners, by failing to handle the matter more openly, have been unfair both to the two former tax officials involved and to all the citizens of Pitt County to whom, in the final analysis, the county government belongs.

So long as government at any level belongs to the people, the people are entitled to know pertinent facts concerning major decisions reached by their governing officials.

In this case these facts, in our opinion, have not been presented to the people of Pitt County by the Board of County Commissioners. In fairness to the people of Pitt County, the Commissioners should make public a more comprehensive statement than so far has been given of the situation as they found it and the reasons behind their decisions.

A 'Wait And See' Attitude Falls Short

President Eisenhower has made it clear his administration will stand behind FCC Commissioner Richard A. Mack until cause is shown for his removal from the power regulatory body.

Unless we miss our guess, the House committee investigating actions of members of federal regulatory agencies will not give the administration long to wait. To go a step further, the committee might give the administration sufficient ground to fire other officials around Washington also. If the House investigation has not shown cause for Mack's removal from his high office, it has certainly established ample cause for grave concern about the manner in which federal regulatory agencies are conducting their business.

Information so far developed in the committee hearings seem to justify a full-scale investigation of the regulatory agencies, both by Congress and by the administration. Whether the administration will mount an investigation program designed to seek out corruption in its own agencies remains to be seen. For the welfare of the nation, however, it seems the administration should do more than "wait and see".

'Popism' In The American Public

The United States seems to be afflicted with "popism." "Popism" you know, is the word invented for the American masses' excessive adoration and oversentimentalizing of their idols. It is said to be caused by maternal domination of the family and the preponderance of female teachers.

"Popism" is hereby offered as the same for a counterpart feeling. Just as many Americans have a spiritual dependence on their mothers, they have a materialistic dependence on pop or, in each case, successor symbols.

As children, many of us saw less of pop than we would have liked. He was too busy earning a living. And that living was always there. If work was scarce, pop sold apples or cracked a bank. He always managed to supply subsistence. If he didn't, you are not here to read this column or to suffer from popism.

EVERYBODY'S POP: UNCLE SAM In times of spiritual or emotional stress, many of us turn to other mothers, or to those we have symbolically substituted for her. During the war, some military men said "momism" made young men less self-reliant and sometimes damn poor killers.

In times of economic stress, we turn to pop or a symbol. For many, this symbol is Uncle Sam. Uncle Sam is the government, Washington, the Great White Father. Because spending is down, the popists expect the government to increase it; because jobs are fewer, they expect Uncle Sam to create some; because the flow of money has slowed, they want taxes cut. In the bottom of pop's pocket there was always one more Sunday dime; surely there is another billion at the bottom of Uncle Sam's pouch pocket. Thus popism clouds the fact that any cuts in taxes now simply postpone payments until our old age, or passes them on to our children.

There are some who have resisted popism. President Eisenhower, despite the efforts of his friends and television advisors to build him up as the great paternal leader, has refused to recommend tax cuts or leaf-raking jobs. WANTS LESS TINKERING Another resister is H.E. Humphreys, Jr., U.S. Rubber chairman. In a speech in Washington he declared "businessmen run to Washington too much as it

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS THINGS ETERNAL What is heaven like? People often ask this question, and when they go to the Bible for an answer, there is little which satisfies their curiosity.

The Bible does make it plain that heaven exists. Life continues beyond the grave, personality persists, there is undoubtedly recognition among friends and loved ones and a continued fellowship. Furthermore, there are indications that we may very well be amazed upon arrival in heaven to find that it resembles earthly existence in more ways than we might have expected.

Yet on the whole, heaven will be so different, probably not so much in form as in quality—that it will be an experience of the nature of which could not be explained to us in human language. This is probably the reason why the Bible has so little to say about the nature of heaven. There are conditions and categories of reality there which the human mind simply cannot comprehend. Eternity—can you comprehend that? Complete release from evil—can you imagine such a thing? The Bible says that there will be no more sin. A realm of radiant light, no darkness, fellowship with the angels—can any mind be stretched to take in such realities?

"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him."

Story Of A Fish Dinner

Saw a little robin on the lawn at City Hall the other day. Robins, as everyone knows, are a sure sign that spring is on the way.

My old heart, weary after the long hard winter, jumped for joy. On closer inspection my heart sank. The robin was dead. Must have frozen to death.

Reflector Woman's Editor Anne Singleton and other girls who work in the newspaper office went to a Samba party the other night.

They came back with the following story which I pass along with absolutely no verification whatsoever:

It seems a local lady had several friends in for a dinner party one night. Fish was to be the main item on the menu.

The maid, preparing to serve the meal, went to the kitchen to bring in the platter of fish. To her horror she found the family cat calmly nibbling around the edges of the fish.

The maid, afraid she would be blamed for the mishap, snatched the cat away and covered up the nibbled portions with parsley.

She served the fish to the ladies who enjoyed it immensely. Nobody would have been the wiser if the maid hadn't noticed the cat in the driveway after the guests had left. The feline was deceased.

Panic stricken she notified the lady of the house of what had taken place. The hostess called up all the guests and told them the cat had died and it must have been from the fish it ate.

Then, so the story goes, the ladies rushed to their doctors and to the hospital for treatment.

In the midst of all this confusion, the party giver's next door neighbor called to say how sorry she was that the cat was dead.

The original lady of the story was puzzled as to how her neighbor knew of the animal's untimely death so soon.

"Why, I ran over your cat as I was backing out the drive," the neighbor replied.

I don't have a wife myself, but if I did I would check her breath upon her return from one of those card parties.

Today the banning of nuclear weapons holds top priority on the Soviet agenda for the Summit talks. This is easily understood. For the present Soviet superiority in infantry and artillery would make this nation the decisive military force in the world.

The NATO defense is in nuclear strength in its conventional military power. But look at the future. Today only three nations have nuclear weapons. If one attacks you know from whence it came. But this day is waning. It will not be long before France will join the three, and others are to follow.

With the perfection of Polaris, sub-marine warfare takes on another threat. Then next threat will be when earth satellites become weapons platforms.

It is obvious that a freeze is imperative. But how to arrive at a balance of power is the unanswerable question. You have Soviet armed forces deep in the heart of Europe. The Western nuclear power balances these Soviet forces.

In the meantime the Soviet propaganda machine grinds on weakening the neutral's will to resist. Britain and the United States have stated their case. The West cannot renounce use of nuclear weapons as long as Russia continues to arm with nuclear missiles unless the Reds agree to inspection and a guarantee on their part to do what they are demanding of others.

These questions must be settled before a Summit meeting can accomplish anything but another propaganda sounding board for the Reds.

Moon Is Not For Humans

By HAL BOYLE NEW YORK (AP)—Have you been saving up pennies to finance a vacation to the moon?

Well, if you have, now is a good time to stop, break open your piggy bank and spend the money on the nearest blonde. You'll have more fun.

Like millions of red-blooded Americans I, too, was eager to make a pioneer voyage to the moon. I was, that is, until I did a little research on the earth's only original, or pre-Russian moon.

Although I consulted such standard works as the Encyclopedia Britannica, I found their articles on the moon a bit too advanced for a mere tourist, after all, who knows what a synodic month is? Or a draconic month? And what does it mean to you to be told that on the moon the darker parts of Oceanus Procellarum reflect only an eighth as much light as the Crater Aristarchus?

The real blood-curdling facts about the moon, however, are fully bared in a little volume called "The Young Scientist's Funbook, for Boys and Girls age 10 to 15."

From this lunar Baedeker for the barefoot scholar, I learned: The moon is no place for insomniacs. The nights there are two weeks long. So are the days.

The moon is no place for music lovers. Because it has no atmosphere, you can't hear a sound of any kind. In one way this is an advantage. You could sit three feet from a rock 'n' roll band—and not even be aware it was playing.

The moon is no place for people who like to keep their feet on the ground. Because its gravitational pull is only a sixth that of the earth, you'd have trouble avoiding floating every time you went for a walk.

The moon is no place for claustrophobes. It has no air, and the sky is black.

The moon is no place for people who like cold weather. During the year it is so hot that you could fry an egg in your hand. You'd fry, too.

The moon is no place for people who like hot weather. At night it is so cold your body would freeze solid.

The moon is no place for people who like to garden. It has no soil—just endless rocks.

The moon is no place for people who like to drink highballs. It has no water—not even enough for a chaser.

The moon is no place for people who like to climb mountains. It does have mountains, up to 18,000 feet high, but since there is no oxygen you couldn't climb high enough to get your second wind. On the moon your first wind the year it is so hot that you could fry an egg in your hand. You'd fry, too.

The moon is no place for romantic people who like to look up at the twinkling stars. Seen from the moon, the stars don't twinkle—just burn. And the earth looks like a big blob of eerie bluish.

When you get right down to it, the moon simply is no place for ordinary people at all. It isn't true that sleeping in moonlight will make you add—as the old legend says—but anyone who pines to voyage to the moon to get away from the cares of earth is certainly deluded.

The next time you get a chance, take a good long look at the man in the moon. Do you think he's smiling? He isn't. It's an optical illusion.

Actually, his mouth is wide open, and he's crying, "Help!"

Opinions In Brief

"If the Sputnik critics of our educational system will have a little patience, they will soon be turning out graduates who can pass a football to the moon—where some Russian there to receive it."—Oswald West, former governor of Oregon.

Businessmen Myth Is Battered

By RAY TUCKER WASHINGTON — The Eisenhower record so far tends to jeopardize the general belief that the nation's affairs — the Government — should be entrusted to businessmen trained to operate great industries rather than the Roosevelt-Truman type of "politicians." The "Madison Avenue boys" seem to have lost out to Tammany Hall, or to its more decent equivalent.

This seemingly academic question has suddenly become a political issue, and one on which the Democrats will assume the offensive in future campaigns. They will compare and contrast the two Republican Administrations since World War I, which were dominated by businessmen, with the Roosevelt-Truman regime, when the clubhouse boys ruled the roost.

This ancient debate has been revived recently as a result of the ineptitude and naivete of the Texas Republicans in staging a $100,000 dinner for Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., in the hope of winning — the Democrats refer to it as "buying" — his support for the Natural Gas Bill.

Previously, the oil-gas interests had shown their heavy-handed attitude by offering to "contribute" $2,500 to Senator Francis Case's campaign funds in return for his support of the measure, when he was already committed to it. In both instances, they embarrassed legislators already in their corner, and killed the bill they want so dearly.

REFLECTIONS ON BUSINESSMEN'S COMMON SENSE The scandals surrounding the investigation of the Federal Communications Commission also reflect upon the common sense of businessmen when they dabble in public affairs. They should have known that their fees and favors to officials charged with regulating their operations would eventually become known, to their detriment and discredit.

Another agency where businessmen have rushed in where politicians fear to tread is the Civil Aeronautics Board. With childlike naivete, a few great airlines have showered kindnesses upon their monitors. They have entertained them lavishly at sunshine resorts. They have flown them around the country to swanky convention sites. They have maintained expensive hotel suites at Washington for entertainment and lobbying purposes.

All these unsavory details will tumble out if Speaker Sam Rayburn or Senator Wayne L. Morse presses for a searching and nonpolitical investigation of the so-called independent agencies.

was entrusted with national responsibilities because the voters had become disgusted with the "politicians" of the Roosevelt-Truman era, and they suspected that Adlai E. Stevenson would play along with them.

Yet two of the Cabinet members charged with partial responsibility for our present plight, economic and military, were the leading representatives of industry Secretary George M. Humphrey, and former Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson.

HUMPHREY'S TIGHT CREDIT POLICIES Humphrey, according to bankers and businessmen friendly to him, applied a deflationary squeeze to the economy too severely and for too long a period. He is held partially responsible for the current decline on the ground that his tight credit policies curbed expansion, production and purchasing.

Moreover, he was so intent on penny-pinching and budget-balancing that he held down national defense expenditures. He contributed to our lag behind Russia, especially in the research and scientific fields. He had the complete co-operation of Wilson, who admitted that he had no use for the kind of basic research that produces Sputniks, Explorers and intercontinental missiles.

HOOVER AND COOLIDGE EXALTED BUSINESSMEN In this connection, it is noted that Herbert Hoover and Calvin Coolidge exalted businessmen more than any Presidents in history.

"The business of the United States," declared Coolidge, "is business." Yet he encouraged a boom bound to wind up in a crash. And Hoover refused to resort to unconventional remedies that might have softened the disastrous effects.

Rightly or wrongly, the record suggests that business executives are too unyielding, too inflexible, too uncompromising, too dedicated to "classical" theories of economy. They show a contempt for public opinion, although this feeling is frequently mingled with a fear of the masses of Americans.

FLEXIBILITY OF POLITICIANS By nature and need, the politicians are more responsive, more flexible, more compromising, and more attuned to the demands and pressures of changing conditions. They are more daring, more pioneering, and more willing to experiment. F. D. R. drew his advisers from politics and the professions rather than from Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit.

Partially as a result of these contrasts, the politicians will probably return to power in 1960. Every prospective Democratic Presidential candidate knows more about the ballot box than he does about machinery or counting houses. And Vice-President Nixon, the GOP's leading entry, is neither a titan nor tycoon.

Heavy Rush To Southern California Is Easing Up

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The bold rush to southern California shows signs of easing off for the first time in years. Officials blame business conditions for the migration decline. After World War II thousands of 20th century pioneers trekked overland to sunny southern California—described as the rooey land of the big boom, the big deal and the big job. Almost a million and a half out-of-state visitors came in during 1947, for instance. Thousands stayed on to get jobs and build homes. The population of Los Angeles and its suburbs jumped from 1,970,358 in 1950 to an estimated 2,358,120 on Jan. 1, 1958. Officials said the over-all population growth of the city is beginning to level off.

"People are afraid to pack up for California right now." The tourist influx, however, still is high. The All Year Club of Southern California said out-of-state and foreign visitors poured more than 608 million dollars into southern California last year.

Strike A Blow For Young Love

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Michigan lawmakers struck a blow for love and romance yesterday. By a 22-67 vote, the House killed a bill to raise the cost of a marriage license in Michigan from $2 to $5. Rep. Adolph Blanchard of Bay City, who handled marriage license applications for 18 years as Bay City county clerk, said: "Five dollars is too much to ask for the privilege of getting married." Rep. Chester Wozniak of Detroit asserted it was a matter of personal opinion. Married a little over a year, he said: "If I were to do it again, I wouldn't mind paying $5."

TURN AROUND LONDON (AP)—Britain's first standard railway coach with swivel seats went into service for one week to test passenger opinion.

THIS GAG IS REAL COOL—The snow and ice at McMurdo Sound, Antarctica, hasn't chilled the humor of U. S. servicemen. When pine trees, used to mark airstrip, were "planted" at the base, the gagsters came up with this version of signs in the national parks.

South's Marriage Mills Slowly Dying Away

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The get-married-in-a-hurry mills that once lured couples to some Southern states are becoming a relic of the past. One after another, Dixie Legislatures have tightened their marriage laws in recent years to put a crimp in the business of converting romantic couples into newlyweds in a matter of a few hours. The Georgia lawmaking assembly acted only last week to put the brakes on "quickie" weddings of young lovers. A newly enacted law requires a three-day waiting period for couples under 21 years old, and permits the sale of marriage licenses only between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. If the bride is pregnant, however, the waiting rule is waived. Georgia adopted its new restrictions only three months after the Mississippi Legislature took similar action in a special session. Marriage mills had flourished in Mississippi border counties. Effective July 1, Mississippi will require a three-day waiting period and blood tests for venereal disease. South Carolina has had a 24-hour waiting period for several years, but no blood test requirement. Last year the Legislature added a provision requiring proof of age of prospective newlyweds before a license can be issued. A three-day waiting period has been in force since 1953 in Florida which also has a compulsory blood test law for those bound for the altar. Alabama, Kentucky, North Carolina and Virginia also require prospective brides and bridegrooms to undergo blood tests before they can tie the nuptial knot, and all four states have what amounts to waiting periods long enough to discourage hasty wedding plans. Applicants for marriage licenses in Kentucky must wait three days; in North Carolina it takes 48 hours. No waiting period is spelled out in the Virginia law, but it amounts to the same because it takes a minimum of three days to get blood test results before a marriage can be performed. Neither does Alabama law say a couple must wait a specified time before joining in matrimony. But the blood testing law itself sets up an automatic delay of varying length.

In cities where approved laboratories are functioning, a blood test can be completed and license issued in one day. But in most communities, the blood specimen must be sent to state laboratories and it takes two to three days to get the results. Until 1947, only the husband-to-be was required to take a blood test in Alabama. Now the rule applies to the bride as well. The results were immediately changed. The number of marriages dropped from 45,000 in 1945 to only 20,000 the following year.

Arrest Seven On Larceny Charges

Seven persons were arrested yesterday by deputies on charges of larceny, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson announced this morning. The arrests bring to ten the number of individuals who have been charged with larceny by the Sheriff's Department since Sunday. Six of those arrested yesterday are accused of taking a quantity of copper tubing from a tobacco barn on the Edward Mayo farm near Falkland. The tubing was found to be missing Feb. 25. The six facing the larceny charges, all white, were identified by the Sheriff's Department as: Latham Williams, 29, Greenville, Rt. 1; Reid Causey, 21, 309 Duncan Ave., Norfolk; Thomas Eugene Williams, 21, 309 Duncan Ave., Norfolk; Alvin Coley, 21, 306 Duncan Ave., Norfolk; Jessie Williams, 30, Greenville, Abram Williams, Jr., 27, 306 Duncan Ave., Norfolk.

They were taken into custody by Deputies Ralph Tyson and Rick Jackson and the six men are presently lodged in Pitt County Jail, the sheriff reported. Trail on the charges will be before Judge Dink James in County Court March 11. Sheriff Tyson said the group also faces similar charges in Edgecombe County. All the men were arrested in Greenville yesterday. In a separate investigation deputies arrested Louis Henry Greene, 17-year-old Negro of Greenville, 3 for larceny of a quantity of corn from the Leon Hardec farm located on the southeastern edge of Greenville. The arrests of two other Negro youths on charges of larceny of corn were announced Tuesday by the sheriff. Both were 16 years old. Also Tuesday the sheriff reported

Consider Visit By The Princess

LONDON (AP)—A visit by Princess Margaret to the United States this summer is under top-level consideration in London. The pretty, 27-year-old princess has long wanted to see America, a country she reads about avidly and admires. She is due in Canada July 12 for a 24-day official visit. It would be easy for her to take a side trip south of the border. No British-American consultations about a visit are known to have taken place on any official level. A U.S. stopover apparently is still an idea rather than a project being actively planned, but protocol considerations and other aspects are already being thought about in high places. Under consideration are such questions as: Would the British Commonwealth countries which Margaret has not yet visited feel slighted if the princess visited the United States first? Since Margaret is not a head of state, but has high status as the sister of the Queen, where should any invitation originate? Would teen-agers and others in America, whose sympathy for Margaret grew after she renounced Peter Townsend, stage frantic welcoming demonstrations that would embarrass the princess and the crown? On the other hand, would there be any unwanted effect on American opinion if the princess goes to Canada without paying a courtesy call across the border? Such questions would be weighed carefully here before any moves were made to arrange a visit.

Much Opposed To Use By Cole

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—There won't be any speaking accommodations for the Rev. James W. Cole tomorrow night at the Guilford County courthouse, if three county commissioners have their way. Commission Chairman L. C. Amos said yesterday no official vote had been taken on preventing the self-styled North Carolina Ku Klux Klan leader from appearing at the courthouse but: "All I can say at the moment is that county commissioners are very much opposed to granting Cole permission to speak at the courthouse because he is presently under indictment in Robeson County for inciting to riot at a rally near Maxton in January." Commissioners Carson Bain and Charles J. Hunt joined in opposing the appearance of Cole, a Marion, S.C., minister. The Greensboro White Citizens Council arranged for use of a courtroom on Tuesday, but yesterday the council vice president, the Rev. George Dorsett, announced Cole would be the principal speaker. Dorsett said he had not been required to give the speaker's name when he made arrangements for the courtroom.

MAKING FOOD SAFE

SAVING A CROP. The new fungicide is sprayed on a field of tomato plants in Delaware. The crop-saving product required many years of research and field testing.

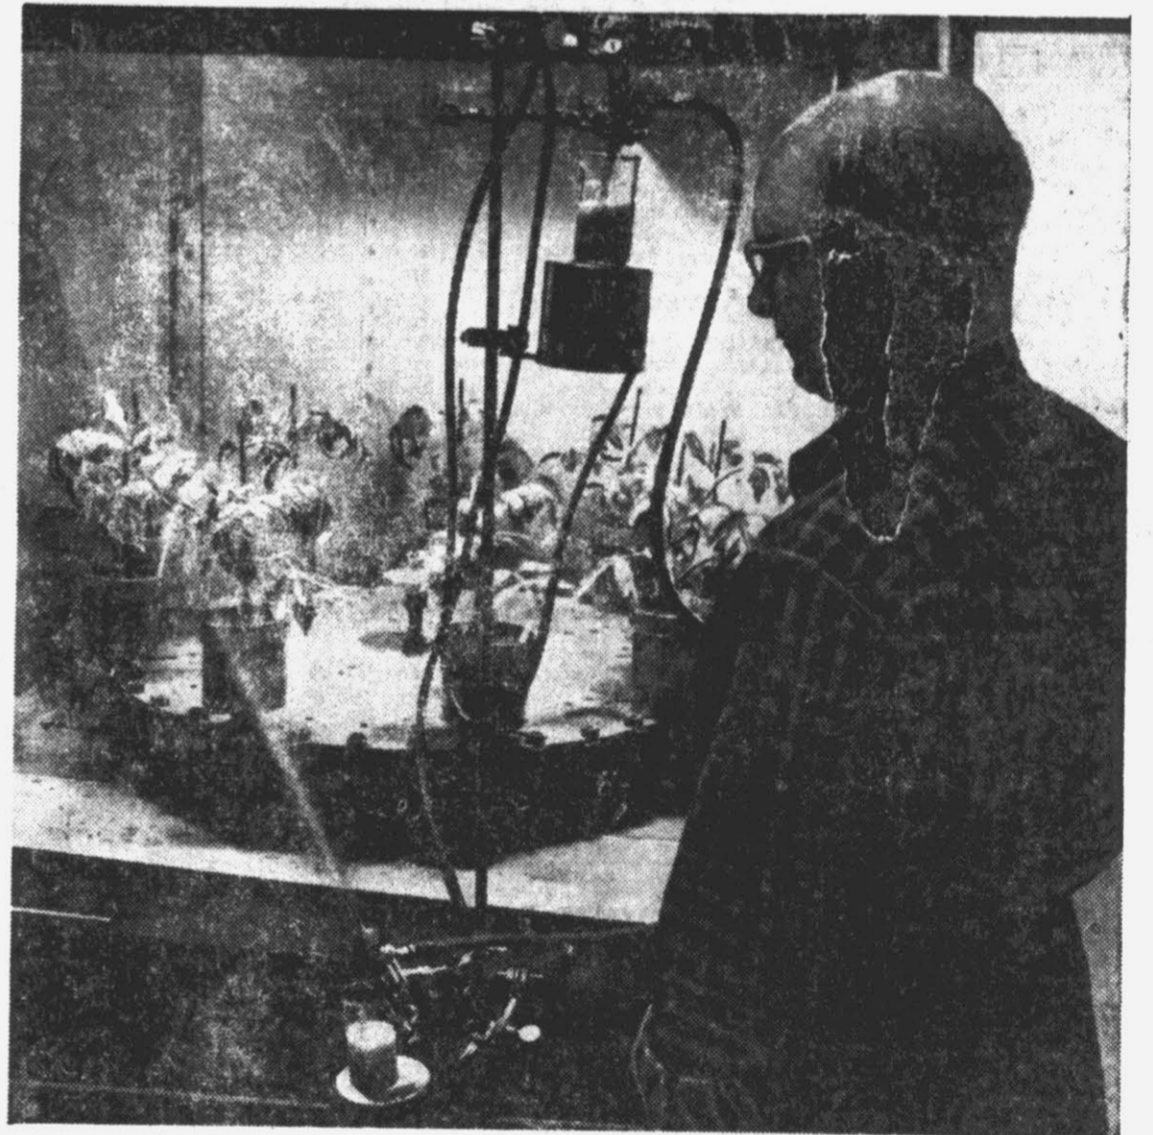

Discoverer of chemicals to fight fungus was Albert Flenner, above. After his discovery of basic maneb compound, he worked several years developing satisfactory formula for the new fungicide.

With more chemicals than ever being used to grow, process and preserve food, new safety responsibilities are being assumed by the nation's chemical firms which turn out some 260 million dollars worth of pesticides used each year.

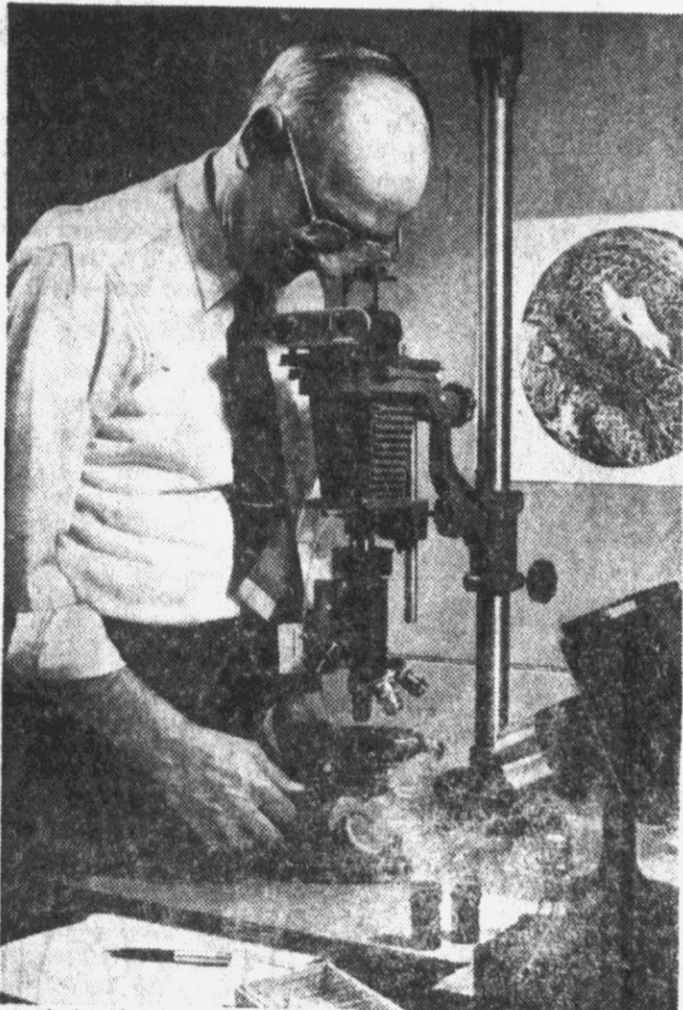

Making fungicides, insecticides, and weed killers effective in the battle against the crop destroyers is only half the job. Making them safe is the more important other half. Staffs of toxicologists, pathologists, biochemists and other scientists are being employed constantly in testing and research to make sure that neither the user nor consumer will be harmed as a result of chemicals used in agriculture.

Illustrative of the care with which safety factors are determined is the work done by Du Pont at its Haskell Laboratory for Toxicology and Industrial Medicine near Wilmington, Delaware, in the development of a new fungicide.

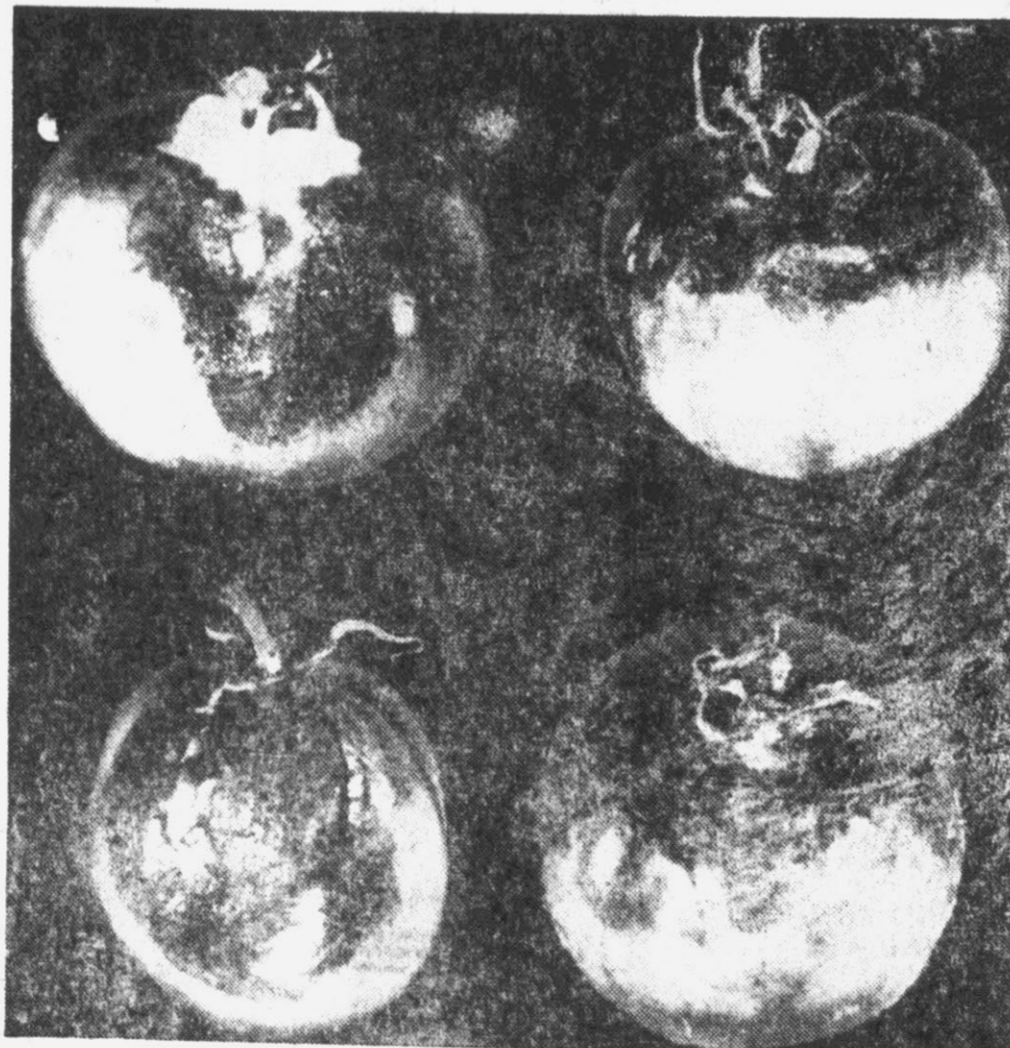

Over a four-year period, company scientists made exhaustive tests, such as pictured here, to establish the effects of the chemical when eaten or brought in contact with the skin. At the same time, directions for use were worked out so that amounts on sprayed crops would be well within safe limits.

First check of chemical showed new fungicide's effectiveness. John Glacklin, laboratory technician, sprayed tomato plants on rotating platform. Tests put plants under humidity, other conditions.

Animal tissue was studied to determine after-effects of chemical on body organs. William Anderson shows technique for photomicrography.

Fungus diseases such as late blight, above, could destroy entire tomato crop.

Growth test determined whether fungicide in diet would affect physical characteristics. Specialists like Marjorie Reed, shown above, weighed rats regularly, watching for any changes.

A NEW SUSPENSE NOVEL BY WILLIAM FULLER

CHAPTER 15

Joan Morris and I walked side by side across the patio, then down the walk through the matted grass to her kidney-shaped swimming pool. The lights had been out when the first time we'd been out. Some body had turned them out. When the others had left, we sat close together in the deck chairs the other two had vacated.

Joan sipped her coffee. "What were you doing in the Caribbean, Brad?"

"I told so many lies that day that I figured a few more wouldn't hurt. Maria had figured me for an engineer so I'd use that. 'I'm a civil engineer, Joan. The company I work for has been building a dam in the Republic of Guayra. I've been down there most of the time for the past five months.'

She sighed. "Must be wonderful to be a man and do things like that."

"You seem to be doing all right."

"Yeah, Yeah, I guess so." She added suddenly. "What did Jack Forbes tell you about his job in Coronado?"

"We'd been pretty close friends, remember? He told me about some of the things he'd done, was doing, for Carrasco. The secret missions. The cloak-and-dagger stuff. I was trying to remember what Lear had told me about Forbes' missions for Carrasco. 'People in and out of the country late at night. Unauthorized aerial photos. Secret movements of funds in and out of the country.'

She interrupted me. "I know all about that. What else did he tell you?"

I shrugged. "Well, nothing much. Except that he admitted he was getting in pretty deep down there. He said he anticipated trouble. But the pay was so good he planned to hang on as long as he could."

She seemed relieved. "And that's all he told you?"

"That's all. Is there more?" I'd tried to make it sound casual.

There was enough moon to light her face. I watched her. She caught her breath. The muscles of her jaws tensed. And for a suspenseful split-second I watched her fight what seemed to me an obvious desire to unload some piece of information that had been nagging for release for a long time. The suspenseful moment passed. She breathed deeply. Her face relaxed.

"Nothing that I know of," she finally said.

I turned to her. "You know Tom Lear, don't you?"

Her face wrinkled into an expression of distaste. "That party you can have. A real shoul. He and Jack Forbes were, at one time, real buddies. The guy was always making passes at me when Jack wasn't around. Sometimes it would be weeks between Jack's flights from Coronado to Miami—he didn't fly a regular schedule—and Tom would make an awful pest of himself. For a long time I put up with him because he was such a good friend of Jack's.

I finally decided I couldn't stand him any longer and decided to tell him off. I never had to, though. Jack finally wised up and did it for me. Why do you ask?"

I shrugged. "No particular reason." I wondered why Lear had been so quick and so forceful in denying that he and Forbes had ever been close friends. I decided to think that through later.

I turned to Joan. "You one of those people who insist on waiting an hour after eating before swimming?"

"That routine's an exploded theory," she said.

"Got any swim shorts for a man?" I asked her.

"Sure," she said. "You'll find some in the dressing room."

In a matter of minutes I joined her at the pool. She was in a pink bathing suit. We dove into the cool water and swam the length of the pool and then back again. She stopped and clung to a side. I stopped beside her. Her short blonde hair was plastered to her skull. The moonlight highlighted her cheekbones and shadowed her cheeks below them. Her teeth were very white. She looked very pink. I took her in my arms and kissed her. She whirled, ducked, kicked against the side of the pool for momentum, and was gone. I ducked and followed her. I grabbed for a slippery ankle and missed. She surfaced for air. I followed her. As I surfaced she ducked again and darted away in a swirl of water. I swirl of water. I swirled air, surface-dived and followed her. When I surfaced again she was sitting on the side of the pool opposite me. She was grinning at me. I swam slowly across the pool. I pulled myself to a sitting position beside her. Suddenly she turned to me. Her arms went around my neck. Her lips went for mine. A hand dug at the back of my neck. My hands caressed the firm, satin-smooth length of her back.

Suddenly she twisted from me. She stared at me. I could see tiny flecks of light in her eyes.

"Did marriage ever enter into your calculations, Dolan?" she said lightly, and I pondered the question before following her into the house.

Forty minutes later, when we were dried off and dressed again, we sat side-by-side in the living room. Now, when Joan spoke, her voice was tense. "Brad, you were a friend of Jack's. There's something you should know. Something you must know. I..."

She hesitated.

"Yes?"

"I've never told anybody. It's been inside me, nagging at me, feeding on me! I've got to share it with someone before it drives me crazy!"

I nuzzled her cheek. "I'll be happy to share it with you, baby."

"Make us a drink, Brad. Scotch and soda for me. It'll help me get this off my chest. It'll make me talk better."

I stood, bent and kissed her cheek and told her I'd be right back. I left the living room and walked out onto the patio beyond it. I went to the portable bar. I checked the ice bucket. It was almost empty. I sloshed bourbon in one glass, Scotch in another, and took them to the kitchen. I got an ice tray from the refrigerator, took it to the sink, ran water over it until the cubes came free, then dumped a handful of cubes into each glass. As the cubes clinked into the glass I heard a muffled thud from the direction of Joan's bedroom. It sounded as if something fairly heavy, perhaps a piece of furniture, had been overturned. I ran a little water into my glass. Joan had probably decided to repair her make-up. She'd probably stumbled over something in her room and had turned it over.

I remembered, just in the nick of time, that Joan wanted soda in her Scotch. I looked around the kitchen and didn't see any. I remembered that there had been soda on the portable bar in the patio. I went back through the living room to the patio. I filled Joan's glass with soda. I stood there for a moment breathing the fresh night air into my lungs. I had a very strong and very happy feeling that I was just about to get information that would clear this whole thing up. Jack Forbes seemed to be the key figure in this whole mess. After Joan had talked I felt sure the various segments would fall into their proper places.

I left the patio and went back across the living room and looked through the open bedroom door. The two glasses in my hands. Joan lay face down across the bed. Her right arm dangled over the side of the bed and the fingers of her right hand rested limply on the floor. A widening pool of blood splashed the bedspread beneath her head.

My whole body went numb. I was only dimly conscious of the fact that the glasses slipped from my nerveless fingers and shattered on the floor at my feet.

I walked on rubbery legs to the bed. I forced myself to put a hand on Joan's shoulders and turn her over. She was no longer lovely. Her throat had been slashed and she was dead.

"I'd be a sitting duck if I tried to run. So I stood there and waited for the man with the gun to make the first move."—Brad's story takes an exciting turn tomorrow.

Business Booming Inside Rocket Plant

By DWIGHT PITKIN

DETROIT (AP)—Business is booming at Chrysler Corp.'s missile factory.

I visited this big government-owned plant 16 miles north of Detroit last November after the Russians started the world by putting up Sputnik I.

Things were humming then, but in a quiet sort of way. The workers went confidently and purposefully about their tasks of producing Redstone ballistic missiles for the Army.

I revisited the plant, still under secrecy wraps, after the Army put up our Explorer.

I sensed a big difference. There are more workers. The operation is spreading from half-use of the plant and soon will take over all the 2,100,000 square feet of floor space. Everybody seems more relaxed—and happy and smiling.

I also noted the stepped-up production tempo. The clatter of hammers and power tools mingles with the hissing sound of high-pressure air tests—3,500 pounds per square inch.

They're moving out equipment made obsolete by the space age. Going into production is the Jupiter 1,500-mile-range missile, big brother to the Redstone, with a range of 200 miles plus.

The workers are jubilant over Algeria, a part of the French empire in North Africa, includes 850,000 square miles, three times the size of Texas. Of this area, 724,000 square miles are in the Sahara Desert zone.

Home gardeners in the United States spend over 800 million dollars annually for seeds and potted plants.

Another Step-Up To Be Asked On Defense Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense McElroy said today the administration soon will ask another step-up in defense spending.

The Pentagon chief told a Senate subcommittee that plans for high priority military hardware will boost the initial 40-billion-dollar defense budget asked by President Eisenhower early this year.

McElroy said details should reach Congress within the next few weeks.

He listed expanded production of the long-range jet B52 bombers and their jet tankers, the K135s, as items that must be accelerated.

McElroy came to the Capitol on an invitation to make a progress report on military matters. The choice of particular subjects was left to him.

No Bottles Pop For Psychologist

SEAFORD, N.Y. (U) — With a Duke University psychologist on hand yesterday, no bottles blew their tops nor did objects fly in the home of the James Herrmann family. Since Feb. 3, the Herrmanns—the parents and Lucille, 13, and James Jr., 12—have reported flying objects in their six-room ranch home. In addition to bottles blowing their screw tops, other things have whizzed through the air—including a portable phonograph. The Duke specialist, Dr. J. Gaiter Pratt, is a member of the university's parapsychology laboratory, which investigates such things as "extrasensory perception" and other seemingly unexplainable phenomena. Pratt is trying to determine if young James could be influencing things. He has been close at hand after every incident. Nobody has seen the boy put the objects in motion physically. Whether he is doing so mentally is another matter. Pratt, who had no immediate comment, planned to spend at least one more day at the Herrmann home. Also on hand at the Herrmann home was a mobile transmitter equipped with ultra high frequency receivers manned by a full crew of technicians. They reported that no odd electrical waves were picked up.

Claims On Moon Are Piling Up

PHOENIX, Ariz. (U) — Things may be getting a bit crowded on the moon. Two Phoenix men who claim ownership of the moon have learned that someone else staked a claim several years ago. William E. Dufman Jr., a hotel clerk, and John B. Snell, presently unemployed, filed a warranty deed to the moon last week with County Recorder N. C. Moore, who insists the deed was drawn up legally. Now it turns out that Professor Andrew Kenneth Primos of New Orleans, who died Feb. 13, filed a similar claim several years ago in Cook County, Ill.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Mrs. J. L. Hayes has a hobby of collecting witty sayings and shortcut languages of youngsters. Here are some examples: "Well, it's still ours unless proven otherwise," Dufman commented. "That's for the courts to decide."

Sirengine — fire engine with horn blaring. Bellophone — a ringing telephone. Underbrella — an umbrella, in use. Forlett — small fry's way of saying he forgot something and left it behind.

Charges Of Laxity In Law Enforcement Will Be Aired

WASHINGTON (U) — Charges of lax law enforcement in the face of picket line violence set at airing today in a Senate investigation of the Kohler Co. strike. The Senate Banking Committee's public hearings already had set off a long-range row in which Sen. Goldwater (R-Ariz.), a committee member, and President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers called each other outwards and hypocrites. The committee is seeking to determine whether the Kohler Co., manufacturers of bathroom fixtures at Kohler, Wis., or the UAW is to blame for violent acts in their 3½-year-old strike dispute. The company and union each has accused the other, and conflicts developed even in the first day's testimony. A long-standing feud between Goldwater and Reuther flared up again when Reuther, at a news conference, called Goldwater "a political hypocrite and a moral coward." Goldwater, replying in a Senate speech, also called Reuther a coward, a man who "wouldn't know the truth from his left foot," and an immoral hypocrite professing morality. Reuther had linked his attack on Goldwater with a denunciation of the committee for refusing to let Reuther be heard by witnesses when the hearings started yesterday. In testimony, three nonstriking Kohler employees swore they had suffered violence at union pickets' hands. Mrs. Alcee M. Tracy, a graying, motherly looking widow, testified she was "stomped on" and cursed for trying to cross the picket line in 1954. She named Jess Ferrazza, an aide to UAW Secretary-Treasurer Emil Massey, as the man who "stomped" on her feet. Dale Oostdyk, another nonstriker, testified a group of union pickets held him captive and beat and kicked him for crossing the picket line. He quoted Ferrazza as telling him "I should be killed for trying to get into work." The third nonstriker, Harold Jacobs, said he was kicked, harassed, threatened and cursed for refusing to strike. He said Ferrazza had kicked him, also had kicked another nonstriker in the groin, and was known as a man "handy with his feet" in a fight. Jacobs testified he "definitely" agreed with Goldwater that the then Sheriff Theodore Mosch had been "dragging his heels" when asked to protect nonstriking in difficulties with hostile union pickets. He said he knew of no arrest of strikers made by Mosch. The nonstriker's testimony differed from that of Allan Graskamp, president of the UAW local. They had charged among other things that the union used at least 100 "stranger" pickets from other cities and plants. Graskamp, a cousin of Oostdyk, had testified he knew of no violence by union people, and that he believes not more than 15 non-Kohler workers were among the 2,000 pickets who ringed the plant in mass picketing at times.

Accidental Job Lasted 11 Years

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — One day 11 years ago, retired master woodworker Paolo F. Puelo visited the Du Mont laboratories to get ideas for building a television cabinet. He's been designing cabinets for Du Mont ever since. The 74-year-old Puelo has developed more than 200 cabinets used for television receivers and phonographs.

By JOHN O. B. WALLACE
AP Newfeatures
One of the most frequent questions we are asked at this time of the year concerns the common household problem of excessive humidity and window condensation.

From time to time we have provided answers to these questions and have made suggestions for corrective measures, but we have requests for more detailed information on this problem. Here, then, is an effort to supply this detailed, specific information:

The chief cause of excessive humidity in the house is the flow of vapor from such activities as cooking, laundering and bathing. Condensation of water vapor on inside walls and windows can damage paint and woodwork. Floors also can be affected by vapor. Insulation, a distinct advantage throughout the year in all homes, can add to the problem, however, if the house is not properly vented. So proper ventilation is a must. Also to blame are construction features which do not allow vapor to escape from the house.

Window condensation can become so bad that water runs down and stains wall coverings. Most cases are mild, though, and respond to proper treatment. In cases where window condensation is stubborn, a heating contractor should be called in to check the problem. First, don't blame the windows. They are performing strictly according to the laws of physics. They actually are giving you a danger signal that the water vapor in the air of your home is excessive.

This moisture may be doing expensive damage to paint and other parts of your house where you can't even see it. So take these steps to reduce humidity:
1. Put on storm windows or double glazing.
2. Shut off the furnace humidifier and any other humidifying devices in your home.

3. Be certain that louvers in the attic or the basement, or in crawl spaces, are open ALL YEAR, and that they are large enough for the size of the house.
4. Provide a vapor barrier under slabs or floors of homes without basements. This is a very important point.

5. Run the kitchen and other ventilating fans longer and more often than has been your custom. All day long isn't too much.
6. Open the fireplace damper to allow easier escape for moisture.
7. Vent clothes dryers and gas appliances to the outside of the house.
8. Air out your house for a few minutes each day. Also air out the kitchen, the laundry and the bathroom during their use or just following their use.
9. If troublesome condensation persists, see your heating contractor about installing an outside air intake for your furnace.

10. When buying or building a house make certain that the structure is properly vented throughout.

British Film Is Designated Best

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Hollywood Foreign Press Assn. has picked "The Bridge on the River Kwai" as the best movie of 1957. The foreign correspondents announced their 15th annual Golden Globe awards—often a fair indication of Academy "Oscar" selections in March—at star-packed ceremonies last night. Named the top world performer last year were Alec Guinness ("The Bridge on the River Kwai") and Joanne Woodward ("The Three Faces of Eve"). Other awards included: best direction—David Lean ("Kwai"); musical performances—Frank Sinatra ("Pal Joey") and Kay Kendall ("Les Girls"); musical comedy—"Les Girls"; supporting performances—Red Buttons ("Sayonara") and Elsa Lanchester ("Witness for the Prosecution").

Seeks Inquiry On Weather Control

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Bridges (R-NH) called today for an early inquiry by a special Senate committee into the possibility of controlling the weather from space. Bridges, a member of the Senate's Space Committee, said testimony taken by the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, of which he also is a member, indicates to him that weather control may be within reach. "The nation which first finds the way to influence the weather will have within its hands a powerful weapon for peace or war," he said. "Imagine what the Russians could do to us if they could turn our temperature zone into a frigid zone."

Big Book Store Indulges Browsing, Thievery

By ALVIN STEINKOPF
LONDON (AP)—In her snug office in Charing Cross Road, Christina Foyle opened a letter and was astonished to read:

"I have been stealing books from your shops since 1944. Their weight on my conscience has become unendurable, so I wrapped them in bundles and deposited them in the luggage department of the Charing Cross railway station. Enclosed are the claim checks so you may recover them. Thanks for years of pleasant reading."

There was no signature.

The letter was an incident in a busy day of the attractive woman of 45 who is proprietor of the world's biggest book store.

The stolen books were recovered, among the 4½ million volumes which stretch in endless shelves in five buildings in London's Soho district.

"A conscience fund is one of the interesting little facets of this lively business," said Miss Foyle. "Thieves don't always return books. Some prefer to send money to pay for them. It comes mostly from students and broken-down scholars — poor dears. But a few clergymen have contributed to our conscience fund."

Miss Foyle loves books, like a proper florist loves a rose. So there is a bit of compassion in her heart for a book thief. She doesn't usually prosecute anyone, unless thievery has been on a commercial basis.

"Some of them seem to get a liberal education on their feet," Miss Foyle said. "The other day I was fascinated by a man laboriously copying a musical score, which must have cost about half a crown (35 cents). But maybe he didn't have half a crown."

It's all regarded indulgently by Miss Foyle, because browsers now may become customers later. Herbert Morrison, former Labor foreign secretary, said once that he acquired much of his education in the Foyle aisles.

The shop was established by Miss Foyle's father, William, in 1904, and enjoyed a fabulous growth. At the age of 18, while he was a clerk in a barrister's office, he looked at some text books with which he was finished and decided they were frozen assets. He sold them with surprising ease, and looked around for other volumes. One book led to another, and many millions passed through his hands in the next four decades.

Thirteen years ago, at the age of 60, he withdrew from active management of the business. He acquired historic Beesley Abbey in Essex and made it his home. Now he comes in about once a week to see how things are going.

If it's a book, old or new, it's Miss Foyle's business. One of her special little problems now is to decide what to do with 400 volumes which are separate printings of Oliver Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield."

"One of our friends collected

Vicars, hunting in every part of the world," Miss Foyle said. "Fat and thin books, big and tiny — but all the same story. Now he is tired of it and here is his hobby, covering one of my tables."

Miss Foyle has about 500 employees and one of their jobs, in a room big as a gymnasium, is to deal with the 30,000 letters received daily. A post office spokesman said recently that Foyle's gets more letters than any organization in London except the football pools. The books go out to every nation and Miss Foyle has just returned from Japan to investigate a big, new demand for technical works, some of which she buys in the United States.

Insists Pajama Party Was Perfectly Proper

RALEIGH (AP)—A Durham drive-in operator insists a breakfast party held at his place by a University of North Carolina fraternity was perfectly proper.

Girls at the party who wore shorty pajamas were fully clothed underneath, John S. (Jack) Hopkins said yesterday at a hearing before ABC Examiner Earl Weathersby.

Hopkins also maintained he saw no whisky being served at the party, which was raided early on the morning of Feb. 9. The affair was arranged with the understanding there would be no alcoholic beverages, he explained.

However, Curtis Fields Jr. of Thomasville, the fraternity chapter president, said he saw mixed drinks being served and "some one gave me one."

The hearing was held to determine whether Hopkins will lose his permit to sell beer for violation of a regulation against serving whisky on his premises.

Weathersby said he would present the case to the State ABC

Board at a meeting here March 5. ABC Board Inspector John Buck repeated at the hearing his story that some of the boys and girls at the party were wearing less than what he considered the "proper" amount of clothing.

Buck and two Durham deputy sheriffs called at the drive-in while the party was in progress.

Testimony of fraternity members that all guests were fully clothed was supported by Hopkins and other witnesses.

Robert Moore, a friend of Hopkins, said those in pajamas "definitely" had regular clothing underneath. "It was very, very cold that night and they would have frozen to death" if they had not.

Buck and Deputy Bruce Lawson said that as they approached the drive-in, a voice over a loudspeaker called:

"Get rid of your bottles. The inspector is coming in."

Buck said he saw a man race out of a rear door with an armful of bottles, some of them whisky bottles.

Their Golden Girl Has Seen Some 'Refining'

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—My, how Christine Carere has changed!

Last spring, the French doll was brought here amid much fanfare to play the Françoise Sagan heroine in "A Certain Smile." But all that glitters is not pure gold by Hollywood standards, and 20th Century-Fox decided that its golden girl would need some refining.

In the first place, there was her English. Very bad. In fact, almost nonexistent. When I interviewed her shortly after her arrival, her replies and my questions had to be batted back and forth by an interpreter.

The studio thought enough of her chances to delay the picture, and Christine went to school to learn English. She practiced daily with studio teacher Frances Klant.

Besides her daily lessons, she studied English by watching movies and TV, and she recommends it highly.

Aside from her English, Christine was also ordered to shave a few pounds—to get her figure in shape for the demands of the CinemaScope screen.

Another change: her brown hair has been given a reddish hue to brighten it up for the color cameras.

The theme of "A Certain Smile" is a young girl's romance with a mature man, played by Rossano Brazzi. Though Christine doesn't put in with the Sagan view of morality, she admitted that it made sense for girls to fall for more mature men. She is 23, her husband Philippe Nicaud is 32. "I have always liked men who are older," she remarked. "Going out with boys your age can be fun, but I think it is a mistake to marry them. A husband should have experience with a number of women before he settles down to marry."

SAID THE PRESIDENT TO THE PRESIDENT!—President Eisenhower in smiling mood listens to Gen. Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes, the president-elect of Guatemala, on the North Portico of the White House. The visiting dignitary is on a goodwill mission and was a breakfast guest of Eisenhower. The purpose of the meeting between the two presidents and other officials was a frank exchange of views on United States-Guatemalan relations. (AP Wirephoto)

Harassment By Castro's Rebels

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—Fidel Castro's rebels kept up their harassment campaign in the heart of Havana last night, burning one bus within five blocks of the Cuban capitol and halting others by watering their gasoline supplies.

The rebels avoided the heavily guarded sports palace where world lightweight champion Joe Brown of New Orleans knocked out Cuban champ Orlando Echevarria in the first round of a non-title fight.

Government forces had been on the alert to protect the widely publicized match since rebels kept the star attraction out of Monday's Gran Premio auto race by kidnaping him for 29 hours. The star, Argentina's world champion driver Juan Fangio, was released unharmed after the race ended in a wreck fatal to seven persons.

After burning the bus, the rebels raided the two largest bus stations in the Vedado and Vobora sections of the city and poured water into the gasoline supplies. Many buses had to suspend operations.

Other rebel bands attacked and burned large mattress and leather tanning factories in Marianao, five miles southwest of Havana. Rebels raiders entered the National Bank of Cuba in downtown Havana and burned pouches containing thousands of checks. They fled without bothering any money.

Some Children 'Way Out Front'

DECATUR, Ill. (AP)—Some children are way ahead of their parents.

The parents of a college girl home from school for a semester's vacation complained that they saw so little of her. As she drove off with her boy friend to spend Sunday away from her family, her younger sister commented:

Camera News

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures
 A new type of panchromatic enlarging paper which will produce top quality black-and-white prints from color negatives will be available after Feb. 1. Called Panalure Paper E, this new Eastman Kodak product should provide darkroom workers with a new tool for some interesting printing experiments because of its unusual built-in properties.

While it has been possible, till now, to make fairly acceptable black and white prints on regular enlarging papers directly from Kodacolor and Ektacolor negatives, the results have not always been accurate. Reds printed too black, blues printed too light and the exposure time was considerably longer than usual.

With the new Panalure paper, proper tone relationships are obtained in black and white prints from color negatives in any enlarger with typical tungsten light source without the need of any corrective filters.

When special effects are desired, color filters are used. Thus, it is possible to lighten any color in a color negative (for instance, green grass or trees) by putting a same-color (green) filter over the enlarger lens. To darken a color (green grass or trees), a complementary (red) color filter is used.

As a practical example, suppose we wanted a dark, dramatic sky effect in a black and white print of a landscape scene which we've shot in Kodacolor film. If we had shot the scene originally with black and white film in the camera, we'd have used a red "A" filter for such an effect. Well, now we use the red "A" filter over our enlarged lens when we make our print on Panalure paper with our Kodacolor negative. The blue sky, which normally prints in a light tone, will print as a dark dramatic tone.

For more subtle effects, color compensating filters of the proper degree may be used. For instance, for a slightly darker sky, we could use a yellow filter over the enlarger lens.

The Panalure paper comes in a double-weight stock, in only one (normal) contrast grade. However, contrast can be varied according to the choice of developer and the developing time.

Normally, the recommended developing time is 90 seconds in Dektol developer mixed one part of stock solution to two parts of water.

For lower contrast, a Selectol-Soft developer, mixed one part stock solution to one part water, can be used. It will yield a slightly warmer image tone.

The new paper is adaptable for excellent color toning results, according to Kodak darkroom researchers. Brown rapid selenium and various gold toners have been used in their tests.

An important point to note, however, is that since Panalure is a panchromatic paper sensitive to all light, the usual darkroom safe-light is no longer safe. Composing and focusing must be done first on another piece of paper. Then all lights should be turned off when the Panalure paper package is opened and one sheet inserted in the enlarger easel.

Developing should be done in an extremely low light level with the back of the paper up until time to inspect its progress after one minute.

The all-around versatility of color negatives is given added emphasis by the addition of this new paper.

To sum up what you can do with an original color negative, you can have:

1. A direct, top quality black and white print.
2. An inexpensive direct color print.
3. An inexpensive direct color Type-C enlargement.
4. An easier method of making a dye transfer print, (the most meticulous and most expensive color print technique) and
5. A color transparency.

Simply A Case Where Paychecks Are Shrunk

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—To most of us today the state of the economy isn't something to be understood by the use of big words—deflation, recession, productivity.

It simply is that in spite of the talk of surpluses and easier money our paycheck doesn't stretch any farther or even as far as it did a short time back.

That may be because retail prices tend to stay high although commodity and industrial material prices have fallen. Or it may be that our income has been cut by shorter work weeks or layoffs. For those where both these things apply the going is rough.

Nor do the big words help the jobless man understand why he can't find work.

Even the experts can't agree about how the big words apply or why some of the old economic laws don't seem to function as they once did.

Inflation seems to be licked—on paper. But to the average man inflation just means high prices and he can't see that inflation is licked at all.

To the economic purist inflation means the swelling of the supply of money and credit so that there's more of it to compete for a short supply of goods. The visible result is higher prices, especially for the scarcer, more desirable goods. For 11 months the Federal Reserve Board fought this by trying to keep the supply of money and credit from swelling.

Yet recently the demand for money and credit has decreased. Then the Federal Reserve made more of it available. The visible result was a drop in interest rates.

After Robbery, Afraid To Go On

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—After nearly 40 years of charity work, Mrs. Martha Mayfield, 68, is ready to give up — afraid, she says, to go on.

Mrs. Mayfield has operated missions in many needy neighborhoods in Buffalo during those years.

Tuesday night, as she and an assistant were going home from a children's Bible class they had conducted, she was struck on the head by two men and robbed of $3.50.

She was hospitalized in fair condition.

Police are searching for two unidentified Negroes in connection with the attack.

"I'm afraid now — so afraid I think I may give it up," Mrs. Mayfield said yesterday.

For the last 13 years, Mrs. Mayfield, a white woman, has operated Volunteer Rescue Mission in a predominantly Negro section.

From it she distributes food baskets to the needy, arranges parties and picnics for youngsters and conducts gospel services.

She said her son has urged her to retire and live with him.

"I guess that is what I'm going to do because it doesn't seem safe to live and work in that neighborhood anymore."

Police Commissioner Frank N. Felocetta, a personal friend, told reporters: "It will be the Negroes' loss if she gives up her work."

Playhouse 90 Will Again Dabble In Criminology

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—Crime continues to be staple theme of the weekly television anthology dramatic series.

Playhouse 90 (CBS-TV), which has not dabbled in criminology as much as other series, turns to the subject tonight with "Portrait of a Murderer" by Leslie Stevens. Tab Hunter, Geraldine Page and Rudy Bond appear in this drama which is said to be based on the actual case of a sort of Jekyll-Hyde character.

Speaking of crime, it was too bad what happened last week when Playhouse 90 presented "Point of No Return."

If you read the novel by John P. Marquand or saw the play by Paul Osborn, you know that "Point of No Return" concerns a New York banker who was bred in a small New England city and is caught up in a contest for the bank vice presidency.

Marquand skillfully involves us in the banker's family, his suburban home, his job, his boss, his antagonist, and his New England past. The banker, Charles Gray, is an intelligent, amiable, easily identifiable fellow such as many of us know.

Once, like all the young, he had great dreams which in time were dashed; he came to learn, like most modern men, the necessity of compromise. His rebellion was largely cerebral, his emotions always were muted. When he achieved his goal, the vice presidency, he wasn't sure it was worth it—but he took it because there was no other sensible thing for him to do.

In the Hollywood TV adaptation, the temptation is to place much of the balem on Charlton Heston, who has played some fine roles, but who failed utterly to get inside Charles Gray as did Henry Fonda in the Broadway play. Heston worried the role doggedly, but he always was outside it. Hope Lange as his first love and Katharine Bard, as his wife, seemed equally confused as to just how they fit into the electronics scheme of Marquand.

Whiz-Kids Devise Scientific Gadgets

By FRANK CAREY
WASHINGTON (AP)—Interested in an automatic door-opener powered by a washing machine motor — or a household intercom system "to save mother steps" — Get in touch with some of the teen-aged scientific whiz-kids who showed up today as finalists in the annual Westinghouse science talent search.

They're full of ideas on such complex subjects as "the dimensions of right triangles with integral sides" and "the nutritional value of algae." But you'll also find quite a number who have already used their scientific knowledge in developing some pretty useful, down-to-earth gadgets.

Among their projects or ideas are:

- A cleaner for mimeograph ink stains ... gas-powered scooters ... solar-heated greenhouses ... an atom smasher machine that can be built for $150 ... a technique for computing orbits of Sputniks ... a burglar alarm that would detect the presence of a person by the heat given off from his body ...

Selected in a nationwide competition that originally involved more than 25,000 high school seniors, the 32 boys and eight girls are competing for $34,250 in scholarships and awards. The

Whiz-Kids Devise Scientific Gadgets Finds State Is Flooded By Talk

Meanwhile, the youngsters will cruise around town, visiting scientific laboratories and listening to talks by some top adult scientists.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Rep. Clair Engle (D-Calif.), arriving from Washington to campaign for U.S. senator, said last night he found "understandable confusion over floods and dams."

"Northern California is flooded with water and the whole state has been inundated by the oratory of the Republican senatorial candidates."

"Christopher damns Knight, Knight damns me, but neither one knows how to dam the floods."

Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco and Gov. Goodwin Knight seek the Republican nomination to the Senate.

"MY POP AND MOM" was taken by 12-year-old Barbara Desfor at the Lower Falls of Yellowstone National Park with a fixed-focus Starflash camera with 127 Kodacolor film. It's possible now to make a direct print on new black and white enlarging paper with better tones.

Pacific Storms Forced Back By

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The ketch Golden Rule, forced back by Pacific storms from its protest voyage into the U.S. nuclear test area, will try again.

Skipper Albert Bigelow, Cos Cob, Conn., said plans are being made to sail with a three-man crew for the Bikini-Eniwetok area about March 20. The 30-foot vessel docked last Monday, two weeks after its departure to protest, by its presence, nuclear tests this spring.

Bigelow said 60-m.p.h. winds 700 miles out caused minor damage.

Swede Probable New Truce Chief

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Diplomatic sources say Col. Carl von Horn of the Swedish army will be named the new U.N. truce chief in Palestine.

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold was reported yesterday to have chosen his fellow countryman to succeed Canadian Lt. Gen. E.L.M. Burns, who has been spending full time since late 1956 commanding the U.N. Emergency Force on the Israeli-Egyptian border.

Burns' deputy, U.S. Marine Col. Byron V. Leary, has been acting truce chief but Jordan has refused to deal with him on major issues.

Scientist Sets Likely Timetable For Space Travel

By HAL McCLURE
 LOS ANGELES (AP)—One of America's foremost sufferers of moon madness is a tall, bespectacled scientist who, in his own words, "insists on plowing relentlessly toward the stars."
 Not that Dr. John L. Barnes is superstitious and is really hexed by the light of the moon. But he does have a powerful interest—almost a fixation—in the earth's only natural satellite.
 Chances are that when a U.S. spaceman becomes the real-life man on the moon, part of the credit will belong to Barnes, a part-time professor and full-time head of a firm of consultants specializing solely in space travel. Why the moon?

"The first reason, obviously, is that it's the nearest," answers Barnes. "Then there's the adventure of just going there. Scientific exploration is important, too, as is the military aspect."
 "We must protect ourselves for the next war which may come from space."
 When will man be able to see the "other" side of the moon—the dark and mysterious side that has intrigued man throughout the ages?
 Within Reach
 Dr. Barnes says America could send a rocket around the moon within six months. A camera-carrying vehicle appears to be several years in the future and it won't be until 1967 that man will be able to voyage around the moon and return, he predicts.

 Dr. Barnes' firm, Systems Corp. of America, is an outgrowth of two similar companies he helped found and it specializes in consultation and research for private businesses working under government missile or related contracts. Barnes' work nearly is all classified.
 However, some of the findings of Barnes and his associates are startling. Here is his projected timetable for America's space age—providing funds are made available for an all-out program:
 1958 — Small Rocket with instruments or small animal flights around the moon.
 1964 — An instrumented vehicle goes to Mars and Venus.

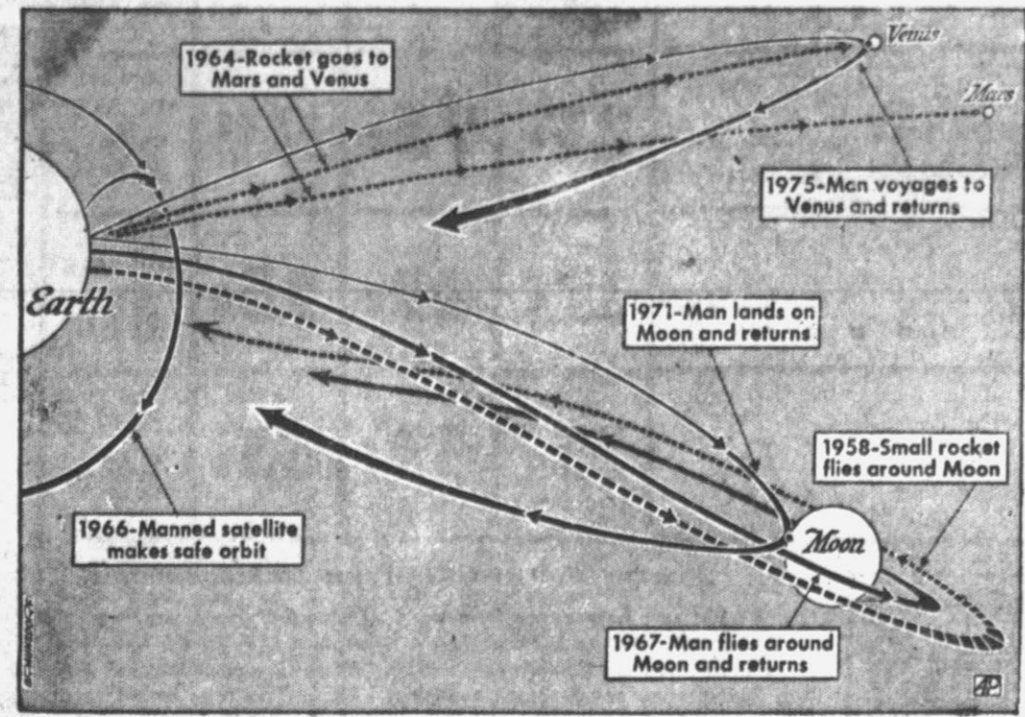

1965 — Manned earth satellite makes safe orbit.
 1967 — Man flies around moon and returns safely.
 1971 — Man lands on moon and returns.
 1975 — Man voyages to Venus and Mars and returns.
 Dr. Barnes says America—if it wanted to spend the money—could send a rocket around the moon and return within six months, using existing hardware.
 "It would burn up, however, when it hit the earth's atmosphere," he said.
 He does not believe life exists on other planets in our solar system. Other galaxies? Perhaps, says Barnes, but propulsion limitations will prevent earthmen from finding out for decades.
 Propulsion—the power used to propel a space vehicle—is the toughest, although not insuperable, problem of today's would-be space adventurer, Barnes says.
 Other obstacles man must overcome to make successful planetary flights include controlling the space vehicle, navigation, communication, re-entry into the earth's atmosphere and biological and psychological limitations.
 Barnes' firm, he admits, has conducted studies touching on most of these problems.
 The research and final flight to the moon "will not be cheap," the space expert says. "Space travel will have a high dollar price."

 Barnes, a native of Haddensfield, N.J., got his bachelor and master degrees at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and his doctorate, in mathematics, at Princeton. He taught at MIT and Tufts University before coming to UC-

LA in 1947, where he teaches engineering.
 Why is Barnes so positive that man will conquer space?
 "There's no doubt in my mind that we'll do it—because we want to. That's the history of mankind. "In the meantime, we just keep plowing relentlessly toward the stars."

Ex-Sergeant Is Willed $1 Million

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP)—A publicity-shy former British soldier, chief beneficiary of a $1 million dollar estate, says he'll get a big kick out of helping his friends and charities with the money.
 Henry Edward Baker said "We just want to be left alone quietly with our friends," after the inheritance was disclosed yesterday.
 Mrs. Jessie McCoy Nutty left a major share of her $1,503,455 estate to Baker. She was the widow of Gale R. Nutty, former president of Gulf Refining Co. Mrs. Nutty died last August.
 Baker, now 68, met Nutty in England in 1919 while working for an oil company.

"We hit it off fine. I liked him and he liked me," Baker said. Baker escorted the oilman around Europe and came to this country in 1926 as Nutty's confidant and private secretary.
 When Nutty died in 1939, Baker continued as secretary to Mrs. Nutty. He became an American citizen in 1927 in Pittsburgh. He moved here in 1952.
 "I intend to remain in Owensboro and continue to work. I can be a little more generous with the charities in which I have been interested." I can help my friends who are in need and I'll get a big kick out of it."
 Baker belongs to no clubs and has an unlisted telephone.
 "I have an aversion to publicity and photographers. I guess I inherited that from Mr. Nutty," he said.
 Baker manages the Pennsylvania-Indiana Oil Co. from the modest, suburban brick home where he lives with his French-born wife Germaine. The couple has no children.

Imposes Curb On Frat Parties After Weekend

ATLANTA (AP)—A curb on house parties and social functions has been imposed on Georgia Tech's Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity in the wake of a snowbound weekend in the Georgia mountains.
 Dean John J. Pershing last night ordered the fraternity to have no more house parties until the spring quarter of 1959 and no social functions until after May 1, this year.
 The dean acted on recommendations by Tech's Inter-Fraternity Council Board after a trial Monday night on charges of improper chaperonage and starting the party before the approved time.
 More than 100 fraternity men and their dates were snowbound Feb. 14-17 at Lake Winfield Scott during one of Georgia's worst snow storms in years.

Six People Killed By Wood Alcohol

NEW YORK (AP)—Autopsies yesterday disclosed that four men and two women died of wood alcohol poisoning after attending a Sunday night party in Harlem.
 Authorities were seeking other persons who attended the party in the home of Mrs. Innocencia Torres, 55, one of the victims.
 Police also were looking for the source of the wood alcohol, or methanol, which is a dangerous poison.
 The victims, all Puerto Ricans, ranged in age from 32 to 58.

New Soviet Ambassador Is Anxious To See Exchange

WASHINGTON (AP)—Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov told The Associated Press in an interview he would like to see top Soviet leaders visit the United States and American leaders go to Russia.
 His sweeping assertion included Soviet Communist boss Nikita Khrushchev and Vice President Richard Nixon.
 "I think personally that the more exchanges we have on all kinds of levels—from the very top to the bottom—the better," Men-shikov said.

 Menshikov, who arrived in Washington only three weeks ago, assailed what he called "artificial restrictions and discrimination" imposed by the United States on trade with the Soviet Union and said they ought to be removed.
 He also said "we don't compete at all" with the United States in assisting the industrial development of such countries as India. And he called for a start "as soon as possible" on arrangements for a summit conference.

Menshikov, 55 and an expert in foreign trade, is something new on the diplomatic scene in Washington — an English-speaking Soviet envoy who is smiling, friendly, relaxed.
 He has spent his first three weeks glad-handing high officials from President Eisenhower down and pushing a whirlwind campaign for trade and better relations between the world's two greatest powers.
 The interview took place late yesterday in an ornate parlor of the Soviet Embassy. It lasted about 75 minutes. Here in summary are the principal points Menshikov made:

1. Summit conference—A meeting on the great issues dividing the West and Russia "should not be delayed."
2. Soviet criticism of the United States — Menshikov said he had read articles in the United States critical of the Soviet Union and went on: "There has been a lot of misunderstanding and, I fyou like, misrepresentation." But he thought criticism would decrease "the more we understand each other's position" and the more international tensions are relaxed.
3. U.S.-Soviet differences — There will always be some sort of disagreement. Ideological differences should not necessarily produce bad feelings between the two countries.
4. U.S.-Soviet trade—"Artificial restrictions and discriminations have been imposed on trade between our two countries. First, all of this didn't cause any harm to our country. Second, your country didn't gain anything from that."
 Menshikov said the United States and Russia should "normalize the economic relationship and mutually advantageous trade." He said Russia could sell such foods as caviar and commodities like furs, skins, chromium ore, platinum and manganese. Russia would like to buy machinery, industrial and agricultural products.
5. Meetings with high U.S. officials—"I can only say that I have been received very well by everybody that I met. They've been very nice. . . I found that most people I met expressed a desire in a general way to come to some sort of understanding between our countries and this is a good sign."
6. Menshikov's travel plans in the United States—"I should like to go to several cities just to see the people and to learn more about your country. . . I can't mention specific dates."
7. Travel restrictions — Both Russia and the United States restrict the travel of each other's citizens and diplomats. "I am sure those restrictions will be lifted," Menshikov said. "The more understanding you have the more you improve relations."

Expanding Price War In Prospect

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The prospect of an expanding price war loomed today but most North Carolina merchants marked time until official notification from General Electric that its fair trade price policies had been scrapped.

Word of the GE move sent GE appliance prices down by 30 per cent in New York.
In Raleigh, one merchandiser said his store would slash GE prices by about 30 per cent, adding that a coffee maker marked at $19.95 would drop to $12.98.

Carolina, that all dealers abide by the fair trade price even if only one dealer contracted with the manufacturer to do so. The high court upheld a lower decision that a non-signing dealer was free of the pricing agreement.
Word of the GE move sent GE appliance prices down by 30 per cent in New York.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower in the early afternoon in quiet trading. Some key issues were off a point or more but most losses were in fractions. There was a sprinkling of small gains. Steels, metals, tobaccos and rubbers gave ground. Aircrafts, airlines and oils were irregularly higher and motors were about steady. Much of the day's business news was bearish. Metals were influenced by a new cut in the price of copper by a Belgian producer and dividend reductions by some smaller companies. Down around a point were Goodrich International, Paper Phelps Dodge, Du Pont, American Tobacco, Lorillard, and U.S. Gypsum. Wheeling Steel lost a point or so after yesterday's dividend cut to 50 cents from 85 cents. U.S. Steel gave up a point, then shaved its loss.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 60 cents at $158.70. Industrials lost $1.10, rails dipped 90 cents and utilities were unchanged.

CHICAGO (AP) — Sunbeam Corp. of Chicago has followed action by General Electric Co. and for "competitive" reasons has ordered elimination of fair trade practices on its small products. Sunbeam distributors across the nation have been notified that the order is effective today, said C. C. Mendler, sales vice president. "We are doing this reluctantly," Mendler said. "It was necessary to keep Sunbeam dealers competitive."

He said heavier Sunbeam items, power tools, lawn mowers and hedge clippers, will continue to be "fair traded."

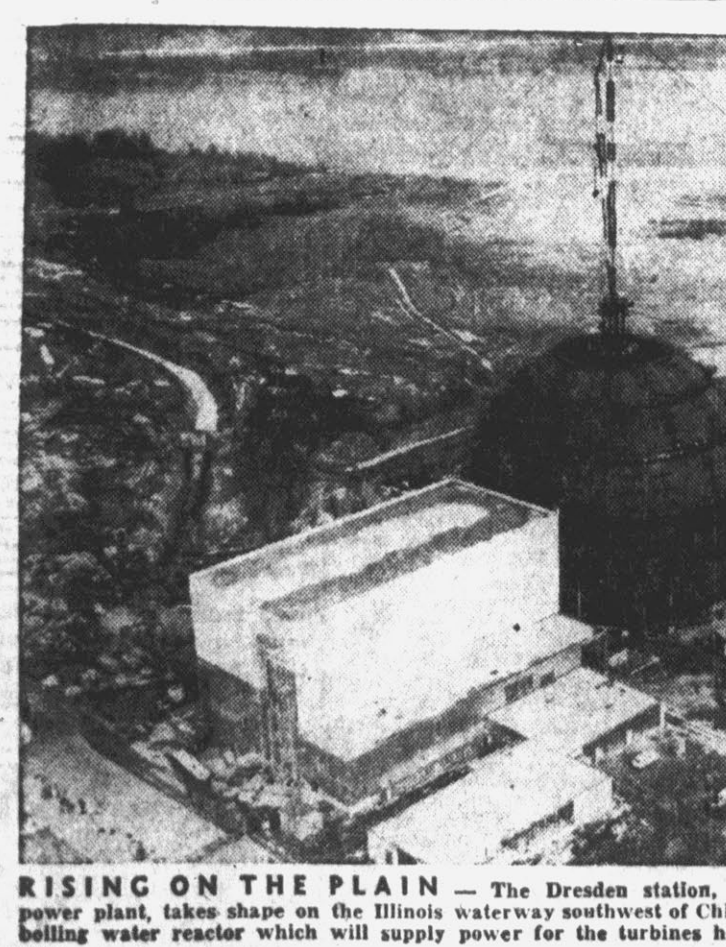

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A High Point Negro accused of rape has been declared sane and returned here for trial at a criminal court term beginning Monday.

The defendant, Charles Moore, 27, is charged with raping Mrs. Al DePorter, wife of an assistant basketball coach at Wake Forest College, last December.

Psychiatrists at the State Hospital at Goldsboro put Moore under prolonged observation after Forsyth Superior Court ordered the examination Jan. 14.

Many Scouters Attend Institute Here

EAST CAROLINA COUNCIL SCOUT TRAINING INSTITUTE HELD . . . P. K. Ewell, Farmville; Erskine Duff, Pitt District chairman, signed in by Bill Chapman, registrar.

Yesterday's East Carolina Council Scouters Training Institute held here was described as "successful" despite inclement weather.

According to Captain Charles Dyer of the U. S. Marine Corps from Jacksonville, 75 scouters representing a 21-county area were present for the annual event. Dyer, who is Leadership Training Chairman for the Onslow Scouting District, was in charge of the institute.

Dyer said the purpose of the institute is to provide instruction for each man "that will help him to understand his job in Scouting and give the know-how in order for him to do a more effective job of serving boys." Attending were members of the Council and District operating committees, the Commissioner staff, District Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen.

Registration began at 3 p.m. and ended at 4 p.m. From 4-6 p.m. a general session was held, followed by a dinner from 6-6:30 p.m. The institute ended with separate meetings from 7-9 p.m.

The first instruction period, the general session, showed how the Council and the Districts operate, the relationship of each operating committee to the total program, and the importance of the work of each group.

During the separate meeting segment of the institute, eight courses were taught by Dyer and members of his training staff. Courses taught were for: Scout Commissioners, District Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen, Advancement Committees, Leadership Training, Finance, Help and Safety, Camping and Activities and Organization and Extension.

Attending from the Pitt District were: Dr. Keith Holmes, Dr. Herbert Hadley, Dr. Harry Billica, J. Kott Proctor Jr., John Ray Hardy, Dr. Robert Wilfong, Erskine Duff, James A. Kleiner, Wendell Smiley, Ken G. Harris Jr. and Robert A. Leftwich of Greenville; Paul Ewell and Dr. John Mewborn of Farmville; Harold Staton of Bethel; and Harry Alley of Ayden.

Arrested Twice In 4-Hour Period

City police arrested Jarvis Parker 67-year-old Negro of 617 Hudson Street on two separate charges within a four-hour period yesterday afternoon.

Parker was first picked up on a warrant charging him with assault with a deadly weapon. According to police the elderly local man struck his wife, Sylvia Parker, 45, in the mouth with a glass during an argument at the West End Tea Room.

After being released under a $100 bond, Parker was again picked up later in the afternoon. This time he was charged with disorderly conduct.

The second charge cost him a night in city jail plus a $50 bond.

Sold $71,558 In Savings Bonds

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Pitt County during January represented 12.9 per cent of the county's goal for 1958, Volunteer Savings Bond Chairman J. H. Waldrop announced today.

Waldrop said bonds valued at $71,558.95 were sold during the month. The county's goal for the year is $553,700.

Sales in North Carolina during January indicated that the month was the best for Savings Bonds sales during the past 12 months. Figures for Area One, which includes 43 counties and municipalities, showed total bond sales of $1,759,545.20 during January. The total represents 10.8 per cent of the area's quota for 1958.

Judge Ponders What To Do In Bribery Case

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge pondered today what to do with a State License Bureau officer who took money to issue driver's licenses to applicants who flunked their tests.

Jay Snuggs, 33, a License Bureau officer here for eight years, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of accepting bribes.

Judge Dan K. Moore, who reserved sentence, said "I have never yet released a public official who was convicted of unfair use of his office without sentencing him to the penitentiary."

"It is a serious case, not a case you can overlook."

Snuggs, who was suspended last Dec. 11, conducted license tests here and at Belmont and Mount Holly.

Elbert Wade Richardson, 52-year-old Negro janitor at the Belmont City Hall, pleaded guilty yesterday to being an accomplice in accepting the bribes. Judge Moore fined him $100 and gave him an 18-month suspended sentence.

Fred Garland, a Highway Patrol inspector who worked up evidence in the case, told the court that the "system"—used only at Belmont—worked this way: License applicants, usually Negroes, who flunked were approached by Richardson with an offer to obtain licenses for them if they would pay $12.50. Snuggs issued the license and turned in the standard $2.50 fee. He and Richardson divided the remaining $10.

"It was stupid and there is no defense," said defense attorney Harley Gaston of Belmont. He is asking the court leniency. About 12 character witnesses, including the mayors of Belmont and Mount Holly, the sheriff of Gaston County, and the city manager of Gastonia, testified to Snuggs' good reputation.

Parkway Tolls To Begin June 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Collection of tolls for use of the Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia and North Carolina will start June 1, the Interior Department announced today.

The National Park Service said imposition of the fees is in line with its long-standing policy to collect reasonable fees from park visitors.

This is done, it said, so that at least a portion of the cost of providing visitor services and facilities may be borne by those who use them, thereby reducing the cost to the general taxpayer.

The action is expected to cause a new controversy such as developed when a previous proposal was announced to collect Blue Ridge Parkway toll, effective May 1, 1955. That proposal was deferred.

The Park Service said the fee schedule will be:

- Automobiles and house trailers: 15-day—$1; annual—$2.
- Motorcycles: 15-day—50 cents; annual $1.
- Commercial passenger vehicles: annual, per passenger, seat, $3.50; quarterly, per passenger seat—$1; one-day per five-passenger vehicle—$2; one-day, for more than five-passenger vehicle—$10.

Funeral Friday For Roman L. Dickerson

Roman L. Dickerson, 64, died in Wayne Memorial Hospital in Goldsboro at 10:30 Wednesday night following several weeks' critical illness.

Funeral services will be held at Goldsboro Methodist Church Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery in Greenville.

Mr. Dickerson, a native of Vance county, lived in Pitt county a number of years. He had been living in Goldsboro since 1931. He was owner and operator of the Dickerson Sand and Gravel Company, Goldsboro. He was a member of the Goldsboro Methodist Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jessie Dickerson; a daughter, Roma Lee Dickerson of the home; two brothers, W. L. Dickerson of Baton Rouge, La., and G. A. Dickerson of Mississippi; two sisters, Mrs. Maude Manacle of Buckreef, Va., and Mrs. Roy E. Peters of Chapel Hill, and a brother-in-law, R. D. House of Greenville.

Rule 6-Year-Old Unable To Judge Safety Elements

RALEIGH (AP) — How smart in the ways of traffic safety is a child under seven years old?

Not enough to be capable of contributory negligence in his own accidental death, a majority of the State Supreme Court ruled yesterday.

The decision drew a dissent from Associate Justice William B. Rodman Jr. He said some 110,000 first graders travel by one means or another to North Carolina schools 180 days a year.

The low number of casualties, said Rodman, shows "these children have more intelligence and judgment than the decision in this case accords them." Chief Justice J. Wallace Winborne joined in Rodman's dissent.

The opinion gave a new trial to Joe Willie Walston of Pasquotank County in a suit Walston brought against Richard Greene in the traffic death of Walston's six-year-old son.

Will Organize Safety Course

A special meeting will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Memorial Gymnasium on East Carolina College campus for the purpose of organizing an American Red Cross safety instructors course.

Applicants to be eligible must be 18 years old and have a current senior lifesaving certificate, Miss Nell Stallings, physical education department, stated.

Approve Settlement For $30,000 Suit

A judgment approving a settlement of $2,500 in a suit which originally sought $30,000 was approved yesterday by Judge Joseph W. Parker, presiding at the current civil term of Pitt County Superior Court.

The judgment approved the compromise settlement between E. F. Windley and Dunn Construction Company of Greenville. In his original complaint, Windley had charged that one of the construction company's trucks had run over him while the company was building Junius H. Rose High School, and he had sought to recover $25,000 for personal injury and $5,000 for punitive damages.

The company, in its answer, said Windley leaned toward the truck and "willfully permitted a bag of cement to brush his shoulder."

The compromise settlement was announced and approved after a jury had been empaneled to hear the case.

A compromise was also approved in an action brought by Walter Lee Haddock against Kenneth Ray Johnson and Mrs. Otis Winstead. The compromise was effected by payment of $200 to Haddock.

R. K. Highsmith was ordered to pay $200 to Grifton Plumbing and Heating Company as a result of a third suit resolved by the court.

An appeal to the North Carolina Supreme Court was entered by Rochester American Insurance Company after Judge Parker ruled that the company was indebted to Coy Smith in the amount of $200 as a result of a fire which destroyed tobacco owned by Smith. The tobacco was destroyed when Dixie Warehouse burned October 20, 1956.

The insurance company entered its notice of appeal after Judge Parker refused a motion to have the verdict set aside. Appeal bond was set at $50 by the judge.

One divorce was granted by the court to Athelton H. Holland from Charles H. Holland Jr., on grounds of crime against nature. Mrs. Holland was also awarded absolute custody of two minor children.

Heavy Rains Pelt Both Carolinas For Second Day

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Heavy rains pelted the Carolinas again today for the second day in a row.

The outlook was for more scattered showers and a few thunderstorms during a windy and warm day.

At 7:30 this morning, the 24-hour rainfall measured 1.27 inches at Wilmington. Greensboro reported 1.17, Greenville, S.C., 1.16, Charlotte and Charleston 1.04, Asheville 1.02, and Raleigh .85.

Rain spread across the Carolinas yesterday, moving northeastward through central South Carolina and Eastern North Carolina, accompanying a low pressure area centered this morning off coastal Virginia.

Today's showers were associated with a low pressure area in Missouri and a cool weather front extending this morning from Missouri to Alabama.

Temperatures generally were mild, climbing to the 50s and 60s around the Carolinas yesterday, and holding mostly to the 40s and high 30s this morning.

High temperatures today were expected to range in the 60s and 70s, with lows tonight in the 40s and upper 30s.

South Carolina could look for clearing and cooler tonight.

Windy and warmer weather with a few thunderstorms was expected to continue tonight over North Carolina.
