A Closer Check On Waste Needed

Every now and then information pops up which dramatizes the terrible waste of taxpayers money which goes on under the guise of national defense.

We realize that all the waste in federal government does not take place within the branches of the armed services. At the same time, it must be acknowledged that the major share of federal budgets in the past two decades has gone directly or indirectly into military or "security" spending.

The General Accounting Office a few days ago pointed to the appalling waste of an Air Force supply depot in Morocco. The GAO guessed the depot contained about twice the $144 million in supplies it was estimated to have. More than that, a substantial amount of material was left in the open and suffered rapid deterioration. Little or no effort has been made to divert the excess to other U. S. military agencies or bases.

How many times has this same story been repeated at military bases at home or overseas? How many millions of dollars worth of goods have been wasted from such operations? How much unnecessary expense could American taxpayers be spared had sufficient care been exercised to prevent such waste?

It is unlikely that this or any other incident of waste in the military or any other agency of government will bring about sufficient restrictions to prevent their repetition. Yet, this incident should once more call attention of Congress to need for more careful checks on federal expenditures. It should point up vividly to members of Congress the fact that there are instances in which the taxpayer is not getting his dollar value in return for his taxes.

The nation faces a period in which gigantic expenditures must be made for the development of missile and satellite programs in addition to more conventional defense weapons. These programs in themselves will place a heavy burden on the nation's taxpayers. Are citizens of the country to pay for these programs and continue to pay for such uncalled squandering of federal dollars as cited by the GAO at the Morocco Air Force depot?

Hodges' Flights In Guard Planes

By LYNN NISBET

GOVERNOR'S PLANE — Governor Hodges has broken all records of chief executives of North Carolina for air travel. He has traveled by regular commercial scheduled flights, he has used private planes loaned for special trips, he has utilized regular US army and air force equipment. Most of his air travel has been by Air National Guard plane. He used the ANG for a trip to Wilmington and thence to Athens, Ga., this week. Both trips were official, and as commander in chief of the National Guard the Governor has authority to requisition the craft for official use. Availability of ANG planes was a major argument against the proposal by the Advisory Budget Commission last year that the State purchase and maintain aircraft for the use of the Governor and other officials.

Perhaps the main argument against the idea was the cost of operation. In one sense it does not cost the State anything to use ANG planes. They belong to the United States and operating costs are paid out of the Federal Air National Guard are required to spend a certain number of hours in the air in order to keep in training and maintain rating. It doesn't cost a dime extra to have the Governor aboard.

In another very real sense the requisitions of ANG craft by the Governor do cost something, because they frequently disrupt scheduled training flights. Only a very few National Guardsmen, either air or army, are full time soldiers. They are civilian employees with salaries jobs. Sometimes special calls for duty impose hardship or entail extra cost.

As far back as 1949 the late Sen. Jack Blythe of Mecklenburg introduced a bill authorizing purchase of a plane for use of the Governor's office. The Blythe bill didn't live as long as the 1957 budget proposal. It is almost inevitable, however, that within a few years North Carolina will provide aircraft for the executive department.

PATROL — The State of North Carolina owns four small planes kept in constant use for patrol purposes. The forestry division in the Department of Conservation and Development has three Cubs, which have proven their worth many times over in discovering and fighting forest fires. The Wildlife Resources Commission has one for enforcing game conservation laws. These planes are equipped with two-way radio and keep constant contact with cars and trucks on the ground.

Commercial fisheries division has requested the budget and legislative authorities for one or more planes to aid in enforcing the marine fisheries laws. The highway patrol has given consideration to use of planes or helicopters in traffic law enforcement. As of now, the State of North Carolina owns four small planes, used for law enforcement and fire control, not adapted and never used for passenger transport.

DEPENDENT — The State Democratic convention is scheduled this year for May 15. That is at least a week earlier than the big shot Democrats wanted it. They found, however, that they had to yield to others with respect to availability of hotel rooms and auditorium space—if the convention was to be held in Raleigh. The May 15 date was the only time the Raleigh municipal auditorium and the Sir Walter Hotel were in position to handle the meeting. Long time ago the Democratic conventions were held in Charlotte or Greensboro or Winston-Salem. But for 30-odd years they have been staged in the capital city and that has become the accepted procedure. The county convention will be held in the 100 courthouses on the preceding Saturday, May 10, and the precinct meetings on Saturday, May 3.

VACATIONS — Swamped under a pile of inquiries about North Carolina Miss "Speedy" Covington in the State advertising division quipped: "Times may be hard, but if everybody who is planning a vacation in North Carolina this summer comes, the tourist business will be mighty good." Inquiries about recreation and vacation spots are heavier this year than ever.

TOP SOIL — Director W.F. Babcock told the highway commission at its latest monthly meeting that he and Chief Engineer W.H. Rogers are becoming more insistent that their own forces and road building contractors take as little top soil as possible from adjacent land for road construction and maintenance. There was considerable complaint a few years ago about the sometimes ruthless stripping of fertile soil for roads. The tendency for some time has been toward more conservation for the value of producing crops, and using other materials for road construction.

GOD REVEALS HIS TRUTH

Several times in his epistles we find St. Paul testifying to the fact that he received his gospel not from men but from God Himself. In all his writing Paul maintains that the gospel is not his opinion of divine things or any man's theory, but the truth which God has definitely imparted to certain of his servants, including Paul himself, by miraculous means.

Revelation is God's disclosure of truth to man. In some cases it is the slow dawning of certain truths to the human mind under the power of the Holy Spirit. In the cases of some of the early disciples, we believe that it was something more direct than that. In order to make clear to all mankind that body of truth known as his gospel, God revealed himself to many in the early Church with a directness practically unknown in later generations. Unusual situations called for unusual manifestations of truth.

The practical value of revelation is that it undergirds our faith with certainty. Christianity has called forth the faith of unnumbered millions because they have believed that the teachings of the New Testament constitute God's message to mankind. They believe that it sets forth the plan which God has made for man's redemption.

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't read his mail:

That Lord Byron, a poet who was as odd as his rymes, invented his own special diet to lose weight. It consisted of cold boiled potatoes and wine.

That men outnumber women 25-1 in "Who's Who in America." The youngest of 50,645 celebrities listed is actress Margaret O'Brien, 21.

That if you are a normal, red-blooded American, you will eat 62 hot dogs in 1958.

That this remark was overheard at a bar: "She made a millionaire out of him. When she married him he was a multi-millionaire."

That a possum at birth is about the size of the eraser on an ordinary lead pencil.

That migrating geese fly up to 60 miles an hour and hold the altitude for high-flying feathered folk — 29,000 feet.

The original "Siamese twins" joined together from birth, married sisters and had a total of 22 children. Among their descendants were an Air Force general and a railroad president.

That the more feminine beauty fashions change the more they are the same. Women of ancient Pompeii painted their cheeks and wore their hair bound in a manner pretty much like the present day "pony tail."

That it was never safer to be mother. Fewer than one woman out of 2,000 now dies in childbirth.

That bandleader Sammy Kaye says television will never take the place of the movies until the coming of a set that will also dispense popcorn.

That in certain parts of Egypt a father or brother who kills his erring daughter or sister is regarded as an "honor criminal" — and usually gets only six months in jail.

The Sultan Ismail of Morocco once built a 350-mile wall from Meknes to Marrakech so that he and his members of the journey could feel their way along it and avoid coming to harm.

That a baby camel in Morocco costs $50, but a fully grown cream-colored desert speedster is priced up to $350.

That a seventh of the world's population now is Moslem. This youngest of major faiths prohibits its members from drinking intoxicating beverages or eating pork.

That if your girl tells you she is suffering from gargalaesthesia, don't brood about it. That is just a scientific term meaning she isn't ticklish.

"Do not do to others what you do not wish done to you" was uttered by the Chinese philosopher Confucius in 478 B.C.

That in Sweden girls believe they can get their marriage off to a good start if they bake a loaf of bread and give it to a poor stranger.

That giraffes sometimes go a week without sitting down.

That some banks now are installing pastel-colored safe deposit boxes to please women customers. Incidentally, there are now 142 women bank presidents in the United States.

That it was HaveLOCK Ellis, quoting a German mystic, who said, "God is an unutterable sigh in the human heart."

Can Egg-Throwing Help Peace?

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks like an egg-throwing contest — with old eggs. Both sides are splattered in the high-level American-Soviet discussions on how to hold a summit meeting.

Premier Bulganin has written President Eisenhower four letters since December. Eisenhower has replied with three. Both agree peace is wonderful. Each uses a lot of paper blaming the other side for the mess the world's in.

Others heaved eggs of their own from the sidelines: Secretary of State Dulles, Communist party boss Khrushchev, the State Department, the Soviet Foreign Office.

So, while both sides talk of the summit, both are using the exchanges for propaganda. This may be the diplomats' idea of how to arrange wonderful. Each uses a lot of paper blaming the other side for the mess the world's in.

He blamed the "cold war" on communism; accused the Soviets of running out on promises to help unify Germany and let the satellites hold free elections; condemned the Soviet Union for undermining nations with its 82 vetoes in the United Nations.

D'You Have A Tale, Too?

When I was much younger, I used to enjoy sitting around a hot wood stove, listening to the "darkies" on my father's farm, weave their stories of "haints" and some of the unexplainable things seen by their parents in the old days.

Many was the time I would sit starry-eyed while they spoke. Oftentimes I would be late for my dinner but that didn't make any difference to me. Spankings didn't cool my curiosity for the weird conversations that usually took place on a cold winters afternoon or evening.

After hearing these stories over and over again I began to wonder if they were not true. Even so, I often wondered why I had never seen anything. When I mentioned this they would say, "Why child you ain't never going to see 'em if you don't believe."

One of the tenants would not plow in the "Island Field", a field about a mile or more in the back woods, after the sun started setting. He told my father that he saw "sometime white" coming out of the swamp toward him about dark one day and his mule got so scared that he broke the traces and ran. Sometime afterwards another tenant said someone or something called his name clearly several times while he was working in this field late one day.

I dispersed the thought from my mind thinking they were imagining things until something strange happened to me. One afternoon I was plowing in the field just as the sun set but I only lacked two or three rows finishing so I continued. A few minutes after the sun went down over the trees someone called my name, faint at first but clearer the second and third time.

The sound was getting louder and clearer as I continued to plow. Presently my mule began to get uneasy and started to snort. I decided to leave without an explanation for the incident.

When I got back to the stables, I told the tenant what had happened. He smiled and said, "See what I tell you boss, it always happens around that time of day."

A favorite story of an old Negro who once lived on the farm was about "the thing" he saw pass him on a lonely swamp road about dusk one night. He swore that he heard something coming behind him and turned around to see what it was and a human on all-fours passed looping like a dog.

Another said he was walking along the same road late one night by himself and a man, without a head, passed him. According to the way he used to tell the story, the "thing" never slowed up and soon disappeared when it got a short distance from him.

This old creek road, famous to the Negroes living in the general area of my father's farm, had many more stories told about it. Back in the old days, "something" used to get on carriages near the creek bridge and weight it down so the horse could not move. One white man said he was riding alone when "a thing" hitched a ride with him and rode for about a half mile before disappearing.

Some of the older men and women said they used to hear a "death ring" in their ear and right after it they would hear of someone dying. One old white woman told my father she saw my grandmother about an hour after she died and that she came up to her window and called her by name.

The night after my grandmother died, several heard the big bell on the homeplace ring continuously. Another saw a huge light in the trees surrounding the house.

Many strange stories I have heard around the wood stove. Who can actually say they are not true?

Other Editors Saying --- School Curriculum Study

(Greensboro Daily News)
The State Board of Education is going about its study of the public schools' curriculum in North Carolina in a manner calculated to secure genuine results.

The key to the success or failure of any such study lies largely in the person who will direct it. To understand his assignment and to know how to go about gathering and evaluating data the study's director should have come up through the North Carolina school system; he should know not only the schools but the state and its needs as they shift into a rapidly changing pattern.

Dr. E.I. Ready has been identified with Tar Heel schools since 1926 and superintendent of Roanoke Rapids schools, recognized as among the best in the state, since 1945. Dr. Ready is exceedingly well qualified for his position. He has the confidence and support of school folks themselves; he has demonstrated his ability to get along with the public and to work with the numerous individuals and agencies necessarily involved in the special study committee's undertaking. His participation in several other school studies should stand him and the state in good stead.

The director's own approach to his new job is reflected in his promise of "a comprehensive examination of the good, the mediocre and the bad in the public school system... from grades one through 12." A continuing curriculum study and evaluation are essential for the transition through which we are passing is not likely to end in a week, a month or a year. What North Carolina wishes is a curriculum which will keep abreast of the state's needs, opportunities and responsibilities and prepare its children for the finer as well as the fuller life. Dr. Ready's conditional recognition of the scope and magnitude of his task goes far toward getting it off to the right start.

While it is quite probable that advisers and consultants will be brought in from outside North Carolina to aid in the study, it is reassuring that evaluations and recommendations will, when finally made, bear the imprimatur of our own educators and leaders. By that means local conditions, circumstances and practicalities will be recognized and actual effectuation of whatever the study commission and the State Board of Education decide upon will stand much greater chance than it otherwise would. North Carolina wants the facts about its schools; an intelligent, well-advised citizenry can then be expected to go along with them.

But, upon analysis, all the Soviets were suggesting was that the foreign ministers act like a bunch of booking agents without authority to make preparations for a summit meeting that might accomplish something.

That was what the State Department fired back in an aide memoire of its own. What it meant in nondiplomatic language was: Whom are you kidding? What it actually said: Do you want a worthwhile summit meeting or a "spectacle"?

And Dulles at his news conference last week called the Soviet note a "fraud, or a hoax."

This is in addition to some extra egg-throwing on the side. For instance, the Soviet radio blamed the United States for the French bombing of a Tunisian town. The State Department tumbled on this as "outrageous."

It seems safe to say after all this that American-Soviet relations are no better and a summit meeting no nearer.

Seeking Federal Loans For 2 Church Colleges

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala.) today pondered a request by Methodist church officials that existing laws be relaxed permitting two proposed Methodist colleges in North Carolina to receive federal loans for construction.

Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee, was the author of federal laws permitting colleges to get federal construction loans. He told the group, representing Methodist College at Fayetteville and North Carolina Wesleyan College at Rocky Mount, he was "sympathetic" with their requests.

He added, however, "There are practical problems involved in working out safeguards against colleges which do not meet high standards."

The contingent was headed by

Methodist Conference and donated by private citizens.

His request was for additional funds necessary for full dormitory facilities, libraries, student unions and other units in addition to the classrooms.

"With federal loans," he added, "we could start construction immediately on a full-fledged campus on the pattern we plan to operate."

Admiral Momsen will participate at noon on the campus Parade Ground in the annual Awards Day of the college Air Force ROTC. Metcalfe will conduct a round table discussion at 2 p.m. in the Y Hut on the campus. At the same hour Lindley will speak on a program broadcast from WITN-TV, Washington, N. C.

Sleener Awoke To Find A Car

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP)—Wiley Faught, 19, was asleep in a car when it went out of control on a curve and threw out its driver, James Adron Ivie of Summertown.

The auto continued on. It knocked down a mailbox and guard rails, scaled an embankment and knocked down a church sign. Then it swooped back down the bank and across the highway into the front yard of the George Crews residence. Finally it smashed into the living room.

Crews awakened, went into his living room and shouted: "Hey, there's a car in here, and—why, there's a car!"

It was indeed. Inside was Faught—unhurt and still asleep.

President Calls For Road Safety

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP)—President Eisenhower appealed for organized citizen support today to help overcome "the terrible march of death . . . on our public roads."

"Action is the answer . . . Co-operation is the means," Eisenhower said in a filmed keynote message to the first of four citizen leadership conferences of the President's Committee for Traffic Safety.

A recent study, the President stated, showed that as an average the 48 states had applied only 58 per cent of their basic traffic safety programs.

"If this record is to be improved, every state, county and local official with responsibility for traffic control must have organized citizen support," he said.

Other conferences will be held in Chicago, April 1-2; San Francisco, April 8-9; and Miami Beach, Fla., May 29-30.

States represented at the two-day Eastern regional conference are Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Vermont.

General Lew Wallace, who was territorial governor of New Mexico, wrote much of his celebrated novel, "Ben Hur," while serving in office.

Dr. Conant Back To High School

By TOM HENSHAW
NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. James B. Conant, once president of Harvard, has gone back to high school.

Conant, now in active retirement, for the past six months has been conducting a private survey of American public high schools two-year grant from the Carnegie Corp. He has studied 40 high schools in 13 states so far.

His "tentative" conclusion: Schools, communities and parents are not doing all they can to encourage and develop the brightest students, who will be the professional leaders of tomorrow.

Dr. Conant, who refers to himself as a "three-X man — ex-chemist, ex-president of Harvard and ex-ambassador to West Germany," says he has found three specific matters for concern in secondary education: "Not enough is being done to single out the academically talented student for special attention. The student often is not being guided into the course that fits his or her ability.

"The usual fear of what is sometimes called 'ability grouping' is that it would create a social strata. This is not necessarily so; not if it's done carefully. It can be set up without rubbing noses in it."

The best way to avoid divisiveness, says Conant, is the home room system, where one class, gathered at random, remains together during its high school years for purposes of general administration and student government — "like the home ward in politics."

A second matter for concern, Conant says, is that "too few girls are taking science and mathematics courses."

"This means they will not be able to continue those subjects on the college level and we will lose many potentially good science teachers at the high school level where we need them the most."

Conant is also worried over the light treatment given foreign language studies in high school.

"Our nation needs people who can speak foreign languages," he says. "Lack of such people hurts us in the world. I have been told the Russians have a great advantage over our people overseas because they take pains to learn the native languages."

Conant has drawn up what he considers his ideal academic schedule for the bright high school boy or girl.

It includes three or four years of mathematics, three years of science (with a tough physics course), three, preferably four, years of some foreign language.

This in addition to four years of English (with special emphasis on composition), three or four years of history and related social studies—and 15 to 20 hours of homework weekly.

Battle Lines Drawn Over Capitol Face-Lifting Job

WHAT'S PROPOSED—Altered photograph shows major part of proposed Capitol alteration, which would move present east wall forward 32 1/2 feet. Proponents say it would improve the building's lines and make room for needed additional office space and dining facilities.

By ROGER GREENE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The battle over face-lifting the United States Capitol, at issue ever since the Civil War, is erupting with new bitterness.

The daughters of the American Revolution call the project "vandalism."

Architect Frank Lloyd Wright terms it "absolutely profane."

"They should leave it alone," says Wright. "I'm sure they can't improve it."

And Sen. Clark (D-Pa.) in a speech on the Senate floor denounced the plan as "unnecessary and ill-conceived."

But a different version comes from Capitol Architect J. George Stewart.

The fact is, says Stewart, that the front wall of the historic structure is crumbling from old age and might collapse at any time, perhaps bringing the great white dome thundering down on the nation's lawmakers.

Few sightseers ever notice it, but the "skirt" of the 4,455-ton cast iron dome juts out 15 feet 9 inches beyond the front wall of the 165-year-old central portion of the Capitol, between the Senate and House wings. The colonnades of the East Portico disguise this fact.

It is this east entrance—which most Americans take for the "front" of the Capitol, though it is actually the "back"—which is the center of the current ruckus.

One faction, led by House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.), wants to extend the central portion of the East Front a distance of 32 1/2 feet to give more elbow room to the crowded lawmakers inside the Capitol.

Ranged on the opposite side is a group of architects, historians and others who are lifting cries of outrage at the suggestion of "tampering," as they call it, with the nation's most photographed shrine.

Mrs. Frederic Groves, DAR president-general, says "the proposal to destroy the ancient walls and portico of the East Front is incredible."

Another critic, Lorimer Rich, architect of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, said in a letter printed in the Congressional Record: "This facade has looked down upon history. These steps have known the footprints of our early great — Webster, Clay, Calhoun. This portico has received the remains of our martyred presidents — Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley. These are the walls viewed by our grandfathers as they assembled in the great plaza for the stirring Grand Army review of 1863.

"Surely this setting should be preserved . . ."

Testifying before a Senate public works subcommittee, Capitol Architect Stewart said the soft Virginia sandstone of the East Front is cracking and deteriorating badly.

Several ominous cracks, he said, extend the full height of the wall, from balustrade to footing, and run completely through the masonry behind the sandstone facing.

Capitol custodians say visitors can see for themselves what is happening. Chunks of rotted sandstone, taken from a quarry owned by George Washington, are breaking off the wall with increasing frequency.

Stewart told the Senate subcommittee that when Congress authorized the East Front extension in 1955, its intent was (1) "to correct the architectural defect caused by the overhang of the dome over the East Portico" and (2) to provide a longer-lasting exterior by building the new walls of marble rather than sandstone.

In addition, he said, the extension would provide extra office space and room for a new restaurant for Senate and House members who now have to eat in virtually sardine formation in the old, out-moded dining rooms.

Stewart's testimony drew support from John F. Harbeson, Philadelphia architect, who is a member of a panel of noted architects engaged in the proposed renovation.

"It is only a question of time," he said, "until you will have to rope off the front. The only safe way to enter the building will be through covered walkways."

But Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.), author of a bill to block the project, said he agrees with Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) and House Minority Leader Joe Martin (R-Mass.) that any alterations to the East Front should be limited to repairing loose stone which might endanger the public.

In other words, no drastic remodeling.

Knowland, the Senate minority leader, and Rep. Martin are members of a special Senate-House commission set up by Congress to weigh the matter of revamping the Capitol. Chairman of the commission is Speaker Rayburn, who has carried the ball for advocates of giving "the Old Lady of Capitol Hill" a face-lifting.

Rayburn, who says he wants the remodeling job completed in time for the 1961 inauguration, disagrees with critics who contend it would destroy the appearance of the historic structure.

"The East Front extension," he told newsmen, "will give us a great deal more room and architecturally speaking it will look exactly as it is now, with the same facade."

Despite angry opposition, Rayburn said flatly the Senate-House commission will go ahead with plans to extend the East Front.

"The architect is preparing sketches," he said. "When they are ready we will let contracts."

Julian E. Berla, Washington, D. C., architect and chairman of the Committee to Preserve the National Capitol, says he still hasn't given up the fight.

If the proposed changes are made, he says, a plaque should be affixed to the Capitol declaring in bold letters: "Vandalized by Congress 1958."

First Annual Report Is Made To Sentinel Life Stockholders

Sentinel Life Insurance Co. ended its first full year of operations with nearly $3,000,000 in life insurance in effect, President A. Hartwell Campbell told stockholders yesterday.

The company finished its first full year with a net loss from operations of $106,530.25. Campbell said that was about as expected. He noted that company officials last year had anticipated about a $100,000 loss the first year.

It is expected that this year approximately $100,000 more will be invested in the company to give a net loss of that amount for 1958.

The turning point is expected to come in 1959, the president told the stockholders.

"All expenses are dead expenses at first," Campbell told the stockholders. "Actually we feel we do have a progress report that is good at this time."

The president said two studies of the companies records had recently been completed.

Three examiners from the state commissioner of insurance's office recently spent four weeks going over the company's records, Campbell said.

"Their report was a most favorable one. They said they had not found anything in the operation of your company that would require any adverse or critical report,"

Campbell said.

Another study completed recently by an outside firm employed by Sentinel showed:

1. The growth of the company has been good.
2. Debts appear to be in sound condition.
3. Business has been obtained at a relatively low cost.

The president's report showed that the company had on Dec. 31, $578,278 in ordinary life insurance in force and $2,333,104 in industrial insurance in force. There were 498 accident and 763 hospital policies in force.

Life insurance premiums for the year 1957 came to $38,552.12, accident and health premiums, $13,193.15, net investment income, $17,028.93 and miscellaneous, $10.93 for a total revenue of $68,785.13.

Expenditures for the year were: death benefits, $3,363.; hospital benefits, $2,752.80; establishment of reserves, $3,949.85; commissions, $30,087.62; general expenses, $125,505.57; taxes, licenses and fees, $6,151.98; loading on deferred premiums, $3,504.56.

Total expenses for the year were $175,315.38.

The company's board of directors was re-elected by the stockholders. They are: W. J. Bateman, A. Hartwell Campbell, Dr. Robert Gilbert, Gordon S. Lynch, J. T.

Marston, Jr., Bancroft F. Moseley, J. Howard Moye, H.G. Nicholson, Robert W. Potts, John C. Proctor, W.W. Speight, C.F. Terrell, B.B. Turnage.

At a meeting of the board of directors following the stockholders meeting the company's officers were re-elected.

The officers are: A. Hartwell Campbell, president; J. Howard Moye, first vice-president; Robert W. Potts, vice-president; Gordon S. Lynch, vice-president; Bancroft F. Moseley, secretary; John C. Proctor, treasurer; R. Eugene Windham, assistant treasurer; W. W. Speight, General counsel.

Ayden Meets Allen Jay, Tomorrow Night In 1st Round Of State Tourney

Balance, Flexibility Are Tornados' Prime Assets

By BILLY ARNOLD, Reflector Sports Editor. Tomorrow night, Ayden High School's district 1 champions journey to Southern Pines for the opening rounds of the State Class A championship tournament.

tournament. The Tornados coped the Pitt County crown last year and were invited to the district 1 tournament. There, they were disqualified because of a ruling which allowed only a certain number of games played over a week's time.

Since provisions were made to allow the regular-season winner and the tourney winner of the Pitt Conference to enter the district 1 playoffs, Ayden and runner-up Chicod were Pitt's representatives.

Final Cage Poll Of Year Recorded

By WILL GRIMSLEY, The Associated Press. WEST VIRGINIA, a team of towering mountain boys with deadly shooting eyes, is the nation's No. 1 college basketball team for the 1957-58 season.

Conference Tournament it won for the fourth straight time. The only setback came at the hands of Duke, 72-68, in Durham, N.C., Jan. 27. The mountaineers have a 12-string string as they face Manhattan at Madison Square Garden tonight in one of the preliminary NCAA Tournament playoffs.

Although none of the ball players on the Ayden No. 1 team can be eyed as "a scorer" or "a rebounder" or "a top floor man," all of the starters have played outstanding games in each of those roles as the season at one time or another.

A NEW SUSPENSE NOVEL BY WILLIAM FULLER

CHAPTER 25

I opened an eye. Pain shrieked at me. My face was a swollen mass of flesh. I tried to open my other eye. It was swollen shut. I gingerly worked my jaw; at least it wasn't broken.

I tried to figure out where I was. I lay on cold steel in total darkness. I knew I was aboard a boat — the Teresa, I supposed. The familiar smell of boats — paints, manila lines, turpentine, tar — was in the air; stronger, actually, than usual.

We were not under way; there was no motion other than an occasional and almost imperceptible lifting and settling; no sound other than the occasional groan of a tightening mooring line and the gentle slap of a wave against a hull.

They'd at least been merciful enough to take away the leather that had bound my wrists.

I rolled over on my stomach. This slight movement opened the dam for another rushing flood of pain. I lay there, fingers splayed against steel, until the wave of sickening dizziness passed. Then I rolled to my side, got an elbow and forearm beneath me, and levered myself to a sitting position. The dizziness returned. I sat there, my head and upper body slumped forward, until it went away.

Then I leaped to my feet. My shoulder slammed against a bulkhead. My eyes were becoming somewhat accustomed to the lack of light. Bare frames and planking were on either side of me, narrowing, then converging at the boat's stem. I was in some sort of a compartment, then, in the extreme bow of the boat.

I half-saw, half-felt my way around the compartment. I stumbled over buckets and coils of line and various loose objects. I knew that I was in a sort of combination paint and rope locker, a tiny compartment barely the length of a man and with an overhead of perhaps six feet.

In the middle of the bulkhead closing off this compartment was a small steel door. The door was locked. Overhead was a hatch. I got the heels of my hands on it and strained against it. It had been dogged down topside. I'd never be able to budge it.

I sat down and tried to think. There was no ventilation and the air in the compartment was foul. If they left me here long enough, I'd suffocate. In a sudden, uncontrollable rush of panic I twisted to a crouching position and lunged at the door in the bulkhead and succeeded only in bruising my hands.

I lay where I'd fallen, breathing heavily, fighting for control.

Think, Dolan, think! I told myself. Use your head. If you panic, you've had it!

I sat up and tried to think. They wouldn't leave me here to suffocate as long as I had information they wanted. Or they thought I had information they wanted. But if Marta broke down and told them where the money was my life wouldn't be worth the proverbial plugged nickel! But Marta had held out thus far and I had a feeling she'd continue to hold out.

All right. So what would they do? The going over they'd given me tonight was probably the first of a scheduled series. They were probably waiting for me now to regain consciousness so they could start their questioning all over again.

And sooner or later, they knew one of us would break.

And there was nothing I could do about it.

But was there?

Sooner or later they'd come for me. Sooner or later they'd open that door!

I tried to visualize the probable plan of a boat of this size. I'd seen little of her. I'd admired her lines from the wharf. I knew that she was approximately sixty feet overall. She was a flush-deck job with a clipper stem. There was a sunken deckhouse — certainly over the engine room — that was a combination living-dining salon. There were companionways at each end of the house: one leading forward, the other aft. These things I'd seen; the rest was guesswork.

A boat this size would have a handy to the dining area in the deckhouse. And it would certainly be forward of amidships.

And then, probably, the engine room. Aft of that would be staterooms. Three of them probably. Maybe four. I'd seen them take Marta aft. If she was still aboard and if they weren't in the process of questioning her in the deckhouse she was in one of the staterooms aft.

So all I had to do was go and get her, thank our hosts for a charming visit and walk ashore.

Except for the fact that I was locked in a paint locker forward in air that was growing more foul by the minute.

And that Marta was, to put it mildly, being detained against her will somewhere aboard a boat that I wasn't familiar with.

And that the owner and two more or less voluntary guests — a man with a little tin-god complex and his two hired guns — didn't want us to go.

And that there was an armed guard presumably still on deck, and two more of the same presumably still on the wharf, who would almost certainly shoot first and ask questions later if they saw us disembarking.

And that there was, without transportation, nowhere to go anyway.

With the above minor exceptions we were in excellent shape. Just dandy.

For lack of anything better to do I tried to recall the position of the boat at its mooring. He relationship to the water and land around it. When we'd first flown over the island that morning I hadn't seen it. I hadn't seen it, as a matter of fact, until we'd circled for a landing. And then I'd only caught a fleeting glimpse of it.

When I'd come aboard earlier there had been plenty of light. But I'd had other things on my mind and had paid little attention to the water and terrain surrounding the mooring. I knew, however, that we were in a cove. The cove was, as I remembered it, several hundred yards wide.

With armed guards on the wharf the only possible avenue of escape would be in the other direction, across the cove. A man swimming in that direction would be a sitting duck for anyone aboard the boat with a gun. But for a short while — until the guards on the wharf came, or were called aboard the boat — the boat itself would protect a swimmer from their fire, at least.

Dolan, Dolan, I thought. You've blown your stack!

Suppose I was lucky enough to get over the side. They'd line the rail, match coins for first shot, get their side bets down and have themselves a ball. Or they'd divvy up the shoreline and, like hounds after a rabbit, wait for me to wear myself out and come aboard the boat. I knew it was crazy but I couldn't get it out of my mind.

"I hoped I hadn't killed him, but I wasn't going to stand there worrying about it. If I were alive myself five minutes from now I'd be lucky," Brad Dolan observes, continuing his story here tomorrow.

Cashier Found, Money Missing

PAYETTEVILLE, W. Va. (AP) — One evening last summer, bank cashier W. G. Potter of nearby Mount Hope told his wife he was going for a walk. He didn't come back.

Next day, the Mount Hope Bank's vault was found locked with a timing device set for 72 hours later. When it was opened, $41,504 was gone.

Yesterday, near the statehouse in Charleston, State Trooper A. R. Bruce became suspicious of a motorist with bandages on either side of his mouth and wearing cheap, dark glasses. When the man was taken to company headquarters, Lt. W. R. Callaghan identified him as Potter.

The 57-year-old cashier, a trusted bank employe for 35 years, disappeared Aug. 27, 1957. A federal grand jury indicted him last January.

At the Fayette County Jail, Potter said he was on his way home to give himself up. Authorities said, however, he had a plane ticket to Chicago dated March 12. He had been living in Denver, Colo., and the Midwest.

Potter had $500 on him when picked up. No explanation was offered about the remainder of the money.

Batista Pledges Honest Election

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Cuba's armed forces will insure a "free and honest election" for president June 1 despite the activities of Fidel Castro's rebels, President Fulgencio Batista said last night.

Batista made the pledge on a nationwide radio and television broadcast marking the sixth anniversary of his seizing power. The day passed in comparative peace as a rumored general strike in support of Castro failed to materialize.

An unidentified man bombed a city bus last night with an explosive-filled bottle, injuring seven persons. The bus hit an electric pole, knocking out the lights in the neighborhood, and crashed into a store.

Speaking from an army garrison near Havana, Batista said he would absolutely respect the result if an opposition candidate should be elected. Batista added that he expected the winner to be his candidate, former Premier Andres Rivero Aguero.

Repeating previous charges that Castro's guerrilla war is "led by Communists," Batista said rebel "acts of terror, destruction and death" would not stop the election. Batista's term expires next Feb. 24.

Heavily armed members of Cuba's 22,000-man army were on guard throughout this Caribbean island after Batista had called off his usual anniversary celebrations.

Some rebel sources said Castro may wait until the end of March to call a general strike in an effort to oust Batista.

Crossed Ocean To Find Sorrow

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Carmelia Pasul crossed an ocean to sorrow yesterday, but no one had the heart to tell her.

Throughout an eight-day passage from Genoa, the 29-year-old immigrant told her children — Alessandro, 9, and Liliana, 7 — that they would soon be in a new home in Canada with their father.

Mrs. Pasul recognized no one in the crowd waiting on a pier when the American Export liner Constitution docked. She scanned faces, expecting her husband to meet her — but wasn't there.

Luigi Pasul, 43, died a week ago today in Oakville, Ont.

Cadillac

It's an Easy Step from Dreaming to Driving!

Here he is at last—just a few miles out on his maiden journey—with his hands on the wheel and his head in the clouds. It's his!

And yet, truth to tell, he does have one regret. For he knows that he needn't have waited this long, had he but realized what an easy step it is from dreaming of a Cadillac to driving in a Cadillac.

Like a great many motorists, for instance, he was not aware that a Cadillac—in view of its obvious virtues—could be so modest in price.

Nor did he appreciate, until the facts were presented, how economical a Cadillac is to maintain or how wonderfully it holds its value over the years.

And little did he suspect how accommodating his dealer would be in welcoming him to membership in the great and distinguished family of Cadillac owners.

So, if you have your heart set on a Cadillac, you should hesitate no longer to investigate this happy set of circumstances.

In fact, why not visit your dealer today? He will be happy to help you select your favorite Cadillac model with your favorite Fleetwood interior—be it the luxurious Sixty-Two Coupe or the magnificent Eldorado Brougham.

Tobacco Experts Named To Panel For Farmathon

Six tobacco specialists were named today as members of one of nine panels scheduled for Saturday's eight-hour "Farm-A-Thon" to be presented by WGNCT.

The panel members will be R. R. Bennett, Agronomy Extension Specialist of N. C. State College; S. N. Hawks, Agronomy Specialist; F. A. Todd, Plant Pathology Specialist of N. C. State; Lacey Weeks, Tobacco Associates, Raleigh; and W. D. Lewis, Wilson County Farm Agent.

Station Manager A. Hartwell Campbell said today, "With decreased acreage in the tobacco areas of Eastern Carolina, the tobacco program will likely be one of the most important parts of the entire Farm-A-Thon."

The eight-hour program will begin at 6 a.m. and continue until 2 p.m. with discussions of all phases of the farming industry. An estimated 60 local, state and national farm leaders are expected to participate in the program, the first of its kind in the South.

Station officials said the program will place special emphasis on new farming methods and ways by which Eastern Carolina farmers can raise their farming standards by increased profits in crops other than those they are now raising.

Guest moderators who have already been named for the special program's nine panel discussions are Bill Humphries, Farm Editor of the Raleigh News and Observer; Bill Pope, Editor of The Progressive Farmer magazine; and Dr. Earl Hostetter, Farm Director for Raleigh radio station WPTF and a former faculty member at the School of Agriculture, N. C. State College.

In addition to the guest moderators, Station Manager Campbell, Farm Director Dick Stokes, and Program Director Eck Wall will also serve as moderators.

Boss in Prison, Plant Is Closed

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — Sixty-five employees of American Tool Co., out of a job because their boss has gone to prison for income tax evasion, are hoping they can go back to work.

Rep. Johansen (R-Mich.) said he expected to receive approval today from U.S. Dist. Atty. Wendell Miles of Grand Rapids, Mich., to resume operations at the plant.

The plant, which made precision parts under defense contracts, was shut down Thursday by the Internal Revenue Service after the owner, Alex Pinto, was sentenced to prison on conviction of income tax evasion.

Meany Claims Little Done For Employment

By NORMAN WALKER
WASHINGTON (AP)—Organized labor's top leader today accused both Republicans and Democrats of doing too little to halt mounting unemployment. He called for fast action to avoid economic chaos.
George Meany, AFL-CIO president, demanded a quick tax cut, increased spending and more money for such public works construction as schools, roads, hospitals and airports. His remarks were prepared for 1,500 AFL-CIO leaders gathered here to push for congressional action.
Meany predicted that a new government report on employment for February, due today, would show 8 1/2 million persons unemployed, up 780,000 from January.
'That's more than all the people in the states of Wyoming, Vermont, Utah, South Dakota, Rhode Island, North Dakota, New Mexico, New Hampshire and Nevada, altogether,' he said.
Add to that total the idle time of more than three million workers he said are now employed only part time — three and four days a week—Meany added, and it's the equivalent of another 5,300,000 unemployed.
'This is not the time to indulge ourselves in partisan name-calling. Now is the time for all of us — no matter what our political preferences — to close ranks and get something done.
'That means abandonment of some of the administration's favorite and now thoroughly disproven economic theories. That means that for the good of the country, the Democrats are going to have to put political capital to one side and do something.'

Takes Own Life, Child Survived

NEW YORK (AP)—Holding her 4-year-old son in her arms, a Brooklyn housewife plunged into the path of an elevated train yesterday.
The mother was killed. The boy slipped between the ties of the track and hung by a leg, head down, 60 feet above the street for five minutes before being rescued.
Two cars passed over the boy but he was not seriously injured. He was pulled to safety by a motorman and a transit patrolman and taken to a hospital.
Police said the woman, Mrs. Marie Vitucci, 30, killed herself apparently on impulse.
The father, Michael, part-owner of a gas station, had gone to New Jersey in the morning on a car-buying trip.
Mrs. Vitucci left a note for her two older children saying she was going shopping with young Michael and would be back later in the afternoon.
A brother-in-law, Benjamin Vitucci, 42, disputed the police statement that she had leaped in front of the train. He said she had no history of mental illness, and had been in good spirits.

Enthusiastic Bravo For The Choir Boys

By GEORGE PERRY
Never, in the ten years I have been attending concerts in Greenville, have I witnessed such a genuinely enthusiastic reception as that which the capacity audience accorded the Vienna Choir Boys during their last evening's concert. Scarcely a person left his seat before the houselights came up, which is rare even in New York; and when they did leave, many of them were weeping. And who could do but otherwise after being inwardly touched by this singing? So it is no wonder that the very appreciative audience gave forth with evidence of prolonged and sustained applause, for they certainly had heard something which was worth any tribute which they might pay to them.
This was the second appearance of this group on campus, the other occurring in the spring of 1949 (and I still have my program to prove it.), and they were as good as, if not better, than they were then. However, this, the oldest boy-choir in the world, has always been noted for its perfect singing, so the degree of perfection they evidenced is understandable. For look who books them — none other than S. Hurok, the leading impresario in the business, who also is the agent for Piatagorsky, Anderson, Stern, Munsel, Segovia, Theobom, Milster, Rubinstein; in other words, only the top attractions does he deal with. This one fact attests to the other words, only the top attractions does he deal with. This one fact attests to the other words, only the top attractions does he deal with.
And superior they certainly were. I have heard several other boy-choirs, but none of them sings with the high calibre of performance which the Vienna group consistently maintains. They are living evidence of careful and loving training; they are an abundant example of strict training, but never cruel nor severe. Each singer's admiration of the conductor, Mr. Gerhard Track, continuously showed in every face on the stage. Mr. Track, a former choir-boy himself, has done an impeccable job in carrying on the traditions which has made this group second to none in the boy-choir field.
The concert opened with a group of religious numbers, great examples of polyphonic music at its best. Handel, when writing the oratorio, "The Messiah," remarked, "I saw the heavens open, and indeed, I saw the great God himself." During these numbers, I am certain that the audience, as I, could perhaps see the heavens open and hear the closest thing to celestial voices which we on earth are likely to hear in our lifetime. Every tone was straight, pure, models of pitch-perfection. The singing was remarkable for its cleanliness, and everything was meticulously intact. "O Sacrum Convivium" gave evidence of some beautiful dynamic work, and in "Oh Bone Jesu," this masterpiece of musical suspensions, there was a flow of part-singing which was second to none I have ever heard. Then, departing from the religious, they sang the familiar "Echo Song" by di Lasso, and I, along with everyone else, was dumbfounded as to how they achieved that perfect echo-effect; and there was no hidden choir, either, to be the echo.
The opera which they gave delighted everyone in the audience, I know; and merely serves to prove the point that opera need not be in English to be enjoyed. They could have sung it in Sanskrit, and yet it would not have detracted one iota from the effect. For they were not only good singers, but also as actors, and the meaning was as completely conveyed as if they had sung it in our native tongue. The performance also served to portray the contention that opera is often ridiculous, insofar as the plots are concerned. But this was comic opera, and the unbelievable of it made it all the more enjoyable.
The Schubert group which followed the intermission was the perfect example of the way Schubert's immortal melodies should be sung. They were warm, fluent, mobile, but above all, authentically Viennese. The same could be said about the German folk-songs, and especially "The Blue Danube," which closed the printed program. Then came one encore after another, for the audience would not let the singers go! "Nobody knows the trouble I've seen" was one of these, and I am sure that the choir intended no levity, even though a few on stage could not help but smile during it. For their joy in singing could not be contained within them; it simply came forth, even in a number like this. And no one could ever forget their final encore — the familiar "Brahms' Lullaby," which sounded as if we were hearing it for the first time, and left many of us choked up.
I have always maintained that music is fun, and this choir is the glorious living proof of this. Try as I might, I could not find one single adverse criticism to make about this performance. And so, quoting from "Teahouse," I simply had to "leave untouched that which was beautiful," for if anything in this world is beautiful, the singing of the Vienna Choir Boys last evening warrants this adjective.

A Surefire Performer Never Had An 'Oscar'

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"Always the bridesmaid, but never the bride."
This is Elsa Lanchester's attitude toward her nomination for a supporting actress award ("With a vengeance" for the prosecution). "Although long hailed as one of the screen's most surefire performers, she has never gotten the big prize.
This year she could do it. But Elsa isn't waiting around to see. As soon as she finishes her role as a witch in "Bell, Book and Candle," she and husband Charles Laughton take off for a play in England. They will leave a few days before the Oscar event March 26.
"It can't be helped," she says airily.
They will appear together in London in a new play, "The Party," which they'll take to New York if it's a success. This will be their first stage appearance together in over 20 years.
"We're doing the play together because if just one of us did it, we would be apart for a year or so," she explained. "There's no sense in that; you might as well be divorced. Still, I don't think we'd want to appear together all the time. That would get pretty dull.
"Charles and I haven't done more together for the reason that it is hard to find a vehicle with two good character parts. It was different with a pair like Lunt and Fontanne, who were very good looking sex stars and could take a bit of froth and whip it up into a success."
She said they'll probably never appear on TV together "because Charles would want to take the kitty, while I want a kitty for myself." Translation: Laughton would exact a large portion of the show's budget, leaving not enough for her.

Neutralists Gain In Sudanese General Election

CAIRO (AP)—Neutralists showed sharp gains in returns from Sudan's general elections, but the pro-Western Umma party appeared sure today of the top spot in the new Parliament.
With all but 38 seats reported, word from Khartoum said Umma led with 60 of the 173 seats. Next came the Nationalist Union party, a neutralist group, with 29. The Peoples Democratic party ran third with 19 and 27 were scattered among independents and splinter groups.
Balloting for the first Parliament since Sudan achieved independence in 1956 began Feb. 27 and ran 10 days. The deputies will draft a constitution and elect a president of the republic.
The Umma party champions Sudanese independence. The National Unionists favor closer ties with President Nasser's United Arab Republic.

Harvard U. Buys Time On Radio To Defend Colleges

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—Some people probably were a little surprised to learn that Harvard University had purchased an hour of time on the CBS radio network to present a program entitled "The Case for the College" March 28.
We're so advertising-sponsor conscious these days that the first question in many minds is: What's in this for Harvard?
The answer is that for Harvard, first university in history to sponsor an hour of radio time, does not expect to gain anything in particular itself. It appears that with this effort Harvard basically is doing as much for dear old Siwash as it is for Harvard. It's true that the moderator of the program will be President Nathan M. Pusey of Harvard and that those participating will be Harvard alumni and undergraduates.
But a principal purpose is to try to help rid some people of the notion that a college—not just Harvard, but any liberal college—is an ivory tower isolated from the rest of the world.
Many people seem to visualize the educational process in this Sputnik age as a kind of assembly line on which bright youths will be turned, toolled and sprayed to emerge as shining weapons against a potential enemy. It's not that simple. Higher education is not an assembly line. It's a complexity of individual deposits.

Lipstick Spells Trouble For Two

TROY, N.Y. (AP)—Lipstick can get a man in trouble.
State Police arrested two young men after finding a warning sign on a state highway near here. Such signs are forbidden along state highways without permission of the Public Works Department.
The sign, in lipstick letters, said: "Watch Out—Radar."

Lincoln Slept Here

Team of oxen driven by Raymond Montgomery gives New Salem the look of the 1830's. Log structure at left is restored Hill-McNamar store.

Statue of Abraham Lincoln as young man during his New Salem years stands at entrance to restored village.

James Rutledge's Tavern where Lincoln roomed for a while. Here he met Ann Rutledge. They were reported to be sweethearts. Family moved in 1833. She died two years later.

New Salem, Ill., was Abraham Lincoln's "university of hard knocks." He arrived there in late July of 1831, "like a floating driftwood," poor, uneducated, aimless; he left a man of destiny six years later.

Lincoln learned to depend on the friendship and understanding of his neighbors. The menfolk debated with him and helped him. The married womenfolk mended his scanty wardrobe and cooked for him. The Rutledges, the Camerons, the Kelso, the Onstots, the Doctors Allen and Regnier, Mentor Graham, the schoolteacher — all played important roles in the moulding of the man.

In New Salem, Lincoln supported himself however he could. He worked as a clerk and mill hand, soldier, storekeeper, postmaster and deputy surveyor. He split rails. He developed elements of leadership and met Ann Rutledge. Three years after his arrival he was elected to the legislature. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1836. Next Spring, astride a borrowed horse, he moved to Springfield.

Strangely, Lincoln's stay in New Salem almost completely encompassed the village's brief history. In 1839, the county seat was established at nearby Petersburg and New Salem declined rapidly.

Now New Salem is a state park. It was rebuilt in the 1930's. Its 13 cabins, plus the Rutledge Tavern and shops, are of the squared logs of the Lincoln era.

Henry Onstot cooperage where Lincoln studied by logfire. Cabin is only structure in village in which any of original material remains.

First of two stores run by Lincoln and William Berry is now U. S. postoffice. Clerk John Doyen gives Carla Rebbie a letter.

Second Lincoln-Berry store is stocked with merchandise typical of the 1830's. Venture failed and shackled Lincoln with debts. Raymond Montgomery and his wife, Alia, pose at the counter.

Cooperage fireplace in front of which Abe studied is shown in back. Raymond Montgomery demonstrates barrel-making machine.

Late Miss Davis Wins Special Who's Who Citation

FARMVILLE PUBLIC LIBRARY . . . Receives Citation in the Name of the Late Miss Elizabeth Davis.

FARMVILLE — An Honorable Mention Citation for her gifts to the Farmville Public Library has been made in the name of the late Miss Elizabeth Davis by the Board of Editors of Who's Who in America.

The award is part of the publication's biennial citations for exceptional gifts to libraries. The citation says, "The gift of a handsome new library, and its grounds, valued at $90,000, to the community of Farmville, North Carolina, by Miss Elizabeth Davis was, in the words of the donor, 'A dream come true,' and, in the editors' opinion, certainly, a 'dream' worthy of Honorable Mention. Prior to that time, a library had been maintained in a small room on the second floor of the municipal building and staffed by volunteer, unpaid workers. The town donated the space and janitor service. The library's average income was $6,131.

"Miss Davis' bequest has stimulated the use of library facilities by the citizens of the town and outlying rural areas, and has included many substantial donations by individuals and groups. In her will, Miss Davis also bequeathed $5,000 for air conditioning which was installed this year (1952)."

Citations and honorable mentions by the Board of Editors of Who's Who are awarded on the basis of information requested from libraries throughout the country concerning gifts received by them during the period of July 1, 1952, through June 30, 1953. The present awards are the ninth biennial awards of the publication.

The Farmville Public Library was formally dedicated May 11, 1954, in exercises which included an address by Dr. Edward M. Cushman, president of Converse College which was Miss Davis' alma mater.

Miss Davis died June 3, 1956, after seeing the library begin its first period of growth. The building has a capacity of 20,000 volumes and was air-conditioned last summer with funds set aside in Miss Davis' will.

LIBRARY BENEFACTOR . . . The Late Miss Davis.

C-of-C Favors Single Lease Of Phosphate Land

Greenville's Chamber of Commerce is recommending that state-owned land in Beaufort and Hyde Counties be leased to one phosphate mining company rather than being split between two or more.

The local organization's board of directors passed a resolution to be forwarded to the Council of State and the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development after hearing Washington, N. C. Daily News Editor and Publisher Ashley Futrelle last night.

Board members voted to express an opinion in the resolution that splitting of the lease may result in the development being entirely abandoned.

Futrelle reviewed the prospects of developing the mining operations in the Beaufort County area. The section has been found to have one of the largest phosphate deposits in the world.

At least two mining companies are interested in the deposits. Another resolution adopted by the board of directors endorsed an appropriation of $225 million by Congress for the Hill-Burton Hospital Construction Act to assist communities in construction of hospital facilities.

The action was requested by the County Commissioners.

Four new members of the Chamber were announced last night. They are: Appliance Mart, Friendly Furniture, Co., Hospital Savings Association of North Carolina and Moore's Gulf Station.
