Christian Science Society The vital importance of spiritual growth will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday. Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Probation after Death" is the Golden Text from Jeremiah (17:7): "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is."

Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (406:28-29): "We can, and ultimately shall, so rise as to avail ourselves in every direction of the supremacy of Truth over error, Life over death, and good over evil, and this growth will go on until we arrive at the fullness of God's idea, and no more fear that we shall be sick and die."

From the Bible will be read the following (Luke 20:38): "For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for all live unto him."

Bridal Couple Feted With Formal Dinner

Last night Miss Patsy Smith and the Rev. Malloy Owen, who will be married at 4:30 o'clock today, were honored at a candle-light dinner party at the Proctor Hotel dining room. Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Alton Clapp, Mrs. E. D. Griffith, Mrs. Robert Ramey, Mrs. Frank Moseley, Mrs. Lee Ward Hardee, and Mrs. Leon Cox. On arrival, guests were greeted by Mrs. Moseley and Mrs. Clapp and presented to the receiving line composed of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, parents of the bride, the honoree, Miss Elizabeth Lamb, aunt of the bridegroom, and Malloy Owen Jr., father of the bridegroom.

Miss Smith and her mother were complimented with pink carnation corsages and the hostesses remembered the bridegroom with a boutonniere. For the affair the bride-elect wore a full-skirted blue dinner dress. Mrs. Cox directed guests to the cocktail table which was centered with a silver punch bowl encircled with ivy and pink roses and azeleas. Mrs. Griffith served the tomato juice cocktails assisted by Mrs. Hardee and Mrs. Ramey. Guests were invited to the appointed tables where the two-course turkey dinner was served. Pink floral arrangements and burning tapers graced each table where silver appointments and placecards carrying out a bridal motif were used. The honorees were presented gifts by the hostesses which were displayed on a gift table centered with a silver candelabra surrounded by ivy and pink roses. Goodbyes were said to the six hostesses and honorees.

30 Years Ago Today

April 26, 1906 Today is straw hat day in Greenville, and despite the overcast skies and a disconcerting drop of the mercury the occasion promises to end most auspiciously for the merchants who have gone to the trouble to arrange elaborate displays of the latest creations in straw hat manufacture. Rev. Billy Sunday, who in the midst of a sermon a night or so ago threatened to require the payment of $1 of any man entering his tabernacle Sunday without a straw hat, led off the "straw" campaign today by wearing a $100 Panama presented him sometime ago while on an evangelistic campaign in Florida.

Music Club The Greenville Music Club will meet Monday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Richard Atkinson, 1905 East Third Street. The program will include a string quartet.

May Fellowship Day May Fellowship Day will be observed Friday at 12:30 p.m. at a covered dish luncheon meeting at the Eighth Street Christian Church by the Greenville Council of Church Women.

WINTERVILLE—Miss Polly Nobles and William Richard Gilliam were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the bride's home in Winterville.

The Rev. John W. Gilliam, father of the bridegroom, officiated at the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Eton. The bride attended Mars Hill Junior College and is a graduate of the Department of Radiology at the University of North Carolina. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nobles. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Gilliam of Eton, is a student at the University of North Carolina. Nuptial music was presented by Miss Irma Sue Worthington, pianist, and Mrs. Fred Gilliam, vocalist. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length sheath dress of chantilly lace over satin. Her shoulder length veil of tulle was attached to a tiara of lace outlined in seed pearls and sequins, and she carried a white prayer book topped with white carnations and an orchid. Mrs. Durwood Worthington, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a mint green street-length dress with a pink and green hat and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bridegroom's brother, Theon Gilliam, was best man, and Don Gilliam, nephew of the bridegroom, was an usher. Reception Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Worthington entertained at a reception in the bride's home following the ceremony.

From Junius H. Rose High

Howard Garner Elected SCA President

By MARTHA PIERCE Reflector Teen Writer For the first time in recent Junius H. Rose history, a write-in candidate for the presidency of the Student Co-operative Association gave some real competition to the regular candidates. In the final outcome, three rising seniors, one rising junior, and two rising sophomores were elected S.C.A. officers. Howard Garner was elected president of the S.C.A. in an election April 18. Billy Boyd Cox was chosen vice-president. Frances Cozart will serve next year as secretary of the organization. The office of treasurer will be filled by Clark Brewer, rising junior. Roving representatives will be Melinda Coleman and Larry Roberts.

MARTHA Additional plans for the next school year began this week when all classes, except seniors, filled out choice slips for next year's classes. Next year's curriculum will include six class periods each day, and each student is required to take five full-credit courses. Graduation Not Far Away With all these signs of June 3 approaching, and the calendar showing only 27 school days remaining, the seniors are looking toward graduation with mixed emotions of sadness and joy. They are happy to think that 12 years of work will end and a new part of their education will begin. As one senior expressed his feeling a few months ago on where the class should graduate, "I don't care where we graduate. They can send me my diploma in the mail. Just as long as I get it." Not Be Vacant Other seniors are looking with apprehension toward the new adjustments that must be made for college, life, the business world, and as homemakers. These seniors realize that their seats in the gymnasium will not be left vacant next year as a memorial to them, but will be crowded with the rising juniors who will cover their footsteps with new achievements.

A representative from DuPont spoke to the science students in an assembly yesterday. His topic was "The History of Chemistry," and it was given in observance of Chemistry Week. Joyce Sutton, Ray Lane, Anne Moore, Clara Faye Crawford, Billy Boyd Cox, Judy Jolly Lawrence, Perkins, Betty Evans, Milly Bowden, Jane Perkins, Lillian Mowe, Barbara Davis, and Billy Goodwin were some of the boys and girls present for this affair. Polly Batts, Faye Bland, and Kathryn Windsor got the traveling urge last weekend and visited Judy Batts near Wilson.

Geographic Aspects Of Politics

For whatever else the appointment of Sen. Everett Jordan might mean to North Carolinians, it almost certainly means the end of the longstanding geographical distribution of the state's top offices.

Jordan's appointment is not the beginning of the end of the old custom of alternating governors between East and West and the custom of having one Senator from the East and one from the West. Jordan's appointment is merely confirmation of the fears of many Easterners that the old custom has all but been abandoned.

The heavily populated and politically powerful Piedmont section of the state is consolidating its hold on Tar Heel politics.

That is not to say the East can be counted out of the political picture. The East is still powerful, particularly in the Legislature. It has afforded North Carolina with strong leadership over a long period of years, and it remains even now the stronghold from which the Democratic party in North Carolina derives its dominating strength.

Rotation of governors between East and West was carefully observed by North Carolina Democrats for 40 years. It was abandoned either in 1948 with the election of W. Kerr Scott as governor or in 1952 with the election of William B. Umstead . . . depending of course whether Alamance County is in the East or West.

From the viewpoint of the Easterner, Alamance County belongs to the West. As a matter of fact most Easterners view that section of the state beyond Raleigh or certainly Durham as belonging to the West at least as far as Tar Heel politics are concerned.

Certainly the custom of selecting governors alternately from East and West, and the custom of having a Senator from the East and one from the West lasted long enough to prove its worth to North Carolina. During the 40-year period it produced some of the most capable leaders North Carolina has ever had — from both East and West.

Is the unwritten rule which has so much merit now to be disregarded entirely by North Carolina? Is the political power of the state—at least so far as the top offices are concerned—to be given over to the West?

Is the Democratic party of the state to turn its back on the East from which it gains its strength like the national Democratic party has at times turned its back on the South from which its balance of power comes?

Democratic Party leaders of North Carolina should reconsider the geographic aspects of the party's strength before abandoning altogether East-West senatorial representation and rotation of governors.

Toll-Free Policy For State Should Continue

The matter of a toll bridge across Alligator River should be settled now, and settled permanently.

North Carolina, we thought, made clear its opposition to tolls on the highways when it fought the proposed federal toll on the Blue Ridge Parkway. If the state's administration can in good conscience oppose a federal toll highway, certainly it cannot in good conscience harbor ideas of a toll bridge as part of the state's highway system.

Lindsay Warren put the matter forcefully and concisely this week in an address at Nags Head. Said the former Congressman and Comptroller General:

"May I respectfully say, in this presence, that we should never tolerate in North Carolina a class of citizens who ride free in the west and in the far east ride under the shackles of tolls."

The state should continue to follow a uniform policy for its own highway system and for the federal highways which are a part of that system. The toll-free policy which the state has established should remain intact.

If an exception is made at one place, surely other exceptions will be made elsewhere in the state. It would be only a matter of time before North Carolina would have some of its citizens riding free highways while requiring others to pay tolls for the privileges of using other highways.

North Carolina has made enviable progress with its highway program without the use of tolls. There is every reason to believe the state can continue to meet its needs for highways without imposing tolls for the use of them.

Confused By All The Confusion?

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — No wonder if you're dizzy from what's happening in the Senate on labor legislation. It's a mish-mash. This is the background on a confusing situation.

In 1954 President Eisenhower, disturbed by disclosures on the misuse of employee benefit funds, asked an investigation. He got it. Three times since then a Senate Labor subcommittee has held hearings filling thousands of pages with testimony.

These subcommittees were headed in turn by Senator Ives (R-NY), Douglas (D-Ill) and Kennedy (D-Mass.). Just before going home last year this subcommittee approved a measure — called the Ives-Douglas-Kennedy bill — which would do this:

Compel disclosure of the handling of employees' pensions and welfare funds to prevent their misbanding by employers, by employers and unions combined, or by unions.

Approval by the full Senate Labor Committee — necessary before the bill could go up to the full Senate for action — had to wait until this year. Congress came back in January.

On Jan. 23 President Eisenhower proposed a 12-point program of labor legislation. One point duplicated, and therefore approved, the Ives-Douglas-Kennedy bill upon which the full Labor Committee had not yet acted.

The rest of the Eisenhower program would add amendments — or make changes — in the 1947 Taft-Hartley law by imposing additional regulations on unions. But it also hit at crooked dealings between management and labor leaders at the expense of union members. Some business organizations called the Eisenhower program pro-labor.

Sen. Knowland of California, leader of the Senate Republicans and therefore the one who might have been expected to introduce the Eisenhower proposals, offered a big omnibus bill of his own. He described his ideas as an attempt to assure democratic control of unions by their members.

Knowland, who's giving up his Senate seat to run for the governorship of California, would go beyond amending the Taft-Hartley law by adding some brand new ideas to it. Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, leader of the Senate Democrats, has called Knowland's bill anti-union.

Then on March 26 and 27 the Senate Labor subcommittee headed by Kennedy began hearings on a number of proposals — which said would include those by Eisenhower and Knowland. But after those two days the subcommittee recessed for the Easter holidays and hadn't picked up yet where it left off.

These hearings were not on the Ives-Douglas-Kennedy bill, which dealt with the protection of employees' benefit funds. That was still awaiting approval of the full committee, which only last Monday gave its blessing to the measure and sent it to the full Senate for action. The Senate scheduled consideration of it the next day.

Suddenly and unexpectedly, Knowland announced he would offer his bill as a series of amendments to the Ives-Douglas-Kennedy bill. Since what was in his bill went far beyond what was in the other, that provided a basketful of headaches.

Then Thursday the Eisenhower administration announced it would offer its 12-point program — which also went far beyond the Ives-Douglas-Kennedy bill — as an amendment to the latter.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

IN WHOLESALE LOTS

A policeman is reported to have remarked about certain juvenile delinquents from well-to-do homes: "These kids ought to act like ladies and gentlemen and not like they were brought up."

The statement lacks considerable from the standpoint of syntax and grammar, but we can all get the point. This particular officer had observed that the so-called privileged homes are not always as privileged as they are cracked up to be. Mothers who hand the youngsters over to others to bring up, fathers who think about nothing but business and their golf scores, couples who think it is perfectly their right to have dripping-wet parties in their homes and to behave—and to allow their guests to behave—before children in a way that no decent night-club manager would tolerate in his establishment—these were undoubtedly the people the cop had in mind.

Such have existed in every age, but in the past 100 years—in this country at least—the actions of people of this variety have been frowned upon. Today they seem to be in the jolly swing of things. The statement that there are no juvenile delinquents, only adult delinquents, has a point. People like this ruin kids in wholesale lots.

The young people very often take a beating which their parents and a lot of other adults deserve.

British Tourist Wave

By NORMAN MOSS
LONDON (AP) — The first British tourist wave in 19 years is heading across the Atlantic this summer.

Britons carrying the tourist's standard equipment of slidebook and camera are going to see for themselves whether Americans at home bear much resemblance to the figures they see on their movie and television screens. Some look forward to treading with wonder the ground where covered wagons once rolled, others simply to gawking at skyscrapers.

All are going to satisfy a long frustrated curiosity to see the most talked about country in the world today.

War-time, Rule Relaxed
Since 1939, Britons have not been allowed to spend any of their money for travel to dollar areas except for strictly business purposes. The rule was imposed at the start of World War II to conserve Britain's strained currency reserves, and relaxed only last year. The relaxation came suddenly, in June, too late for most people to take advantage of it. Vacations are planned early and carefully here.

Now travel agents rushing out "Come to America" folders are handling a flood of inquiries, and they estimate that around 20,000 British vacationers will set out this summer.

Many British and U.S. officials have said they are happy at the prospect of ordinary Britons on vacation rubber necking around American cities and scenic spots.

They feel that if more and more ordinary citizens of the two countries meet face to face, divisive elements will have difficulty maintaining the hostile British image of the American as blustering, belligerent, money-mad and irresponsible; and the prejudiced American picture of the Briton as lazy, shabby-genteel, humorless and hypocritical.

The visitors Americans can expect this summer will be people like Mr. and Mrs. John Barker, who together run a radio and TV store in Gillingham, east of London, and who have booked passage for America in July.

"It's been a lifetime ambition of ours, to see America," says Barker.

"We haven't had a holiday of more than a week in 20 years. We've worked hard and brought up two children. This holiday is one of the things we've been working for."

And I've got a brother in Canada I'll be seeing for the first time since 1918."

And people like Mrs. June Smith, a pleasant, fortyish, war-widowed schoolteacher, who began traveling around Europe in the summertime to fight off loneliness, and kept it up as a hobby.

"America's a chance to travel in a new direction," she enthused recently.

"I've seen Americans on those American TV serials, and I've heard Americans talk about America. Like most people here, I want to know what it's really like. Whether everything really is bigger and better than anywhere else."

Englishmen want to see the West, travel agents find. Not Hollywood and Las Vegas but the Rockies, the Grand Canyon and the prairies, the scenic background of that sage of the American West that has become part of all the world's childhood tales.

They are also more anxious to see New York City and American small towns than they are to see some of the great national monuments. Again, they want to compare the real thing with the TV image.

Number Will Be Small
But there are still restraints. Most Britons would like to see America, and keeping the number expected this summer down to the thousands.

The government will allow Britons to take out only 100 pounds ($200) for their American vacation, exclusive of fares to, from and inside America. The fares can be paid for in pounds. Travel agencies reckon the $200 will last them only three weeks at the outside unless they are staying with relatives or friends.

Another factor is the expense of the trip. Most British couples who take a vacation in America will have to spend about $1,400 on it. This is the average British wage-earner's salary for 10 months — a big chunk of money to spend for recreation.

Another Kind Of 'Dirty Fallout'

By DON SCHLIENZ

Mostly About Letters

Something we all have in common is pleasure in getting a letter from a friend or someone in the family.

Time and again I've caught myself asking "Any mail today?" as part of the greeting on coming home from work. And on those days when there was something besides magazines or bills, or circulars left by the postman, I couldn't get to that letter soon enough.

Funny thing about letters from friends or kin . . . neither quality nor quantity makes much difference in their welcome.

And the most head-shaking and pleased-smile feeling inside is inspired by the letter from the man or woman who has the reputation of "never" (well, almost "never") committing themselves to paper. On the infrequent occasions they write, they have something to say; and that is rare in many when writing or speaking.

The day of the literary, stylized letter seems to have passed, if it ever existed save for some few unique personalities of the dim dear days beyond recall. Most people now deal with recounting facts rather than impressions and ideas put into fanciful words.

It's too much for the writer to anticipate the welcome his own letter will receive. . . he, or she, is apt to weigh his letter by the measure of reluctance the writing is approached. People who enjoy their mail most, are frequently the most unwilling to write.

Confucius didn't say it, but the truth is, "He who writes no letters receives no letters."

Light reading is our accustomed fare, but there is something to be said for reading the North Carolina General Statutes, too. Staffer Jimmy Ellis referred to them, the other day, in preparing material for today's feature page in The Reflector.

One segment intrigued me. It was the exemptions from jury duty.

The list included such people as practicing physicians, licensed druggists, printers and linotype operators, telegraph operators, funeral directors and embalmers, regularly licensed pilots, regularly practicing ministers, active members of a fire company, and on and on.

Then, "all millers of grist mills" are included among the exemptions. . . an item which hearkens back a long, long time.

But the Statutes can top even that. My favorite eye-opener in this field is the provision to the effect that a County Board of Commissioners may exempt any ex-Confederate soldier who requests it.

I bet that one item kept Commissioners right busy across the state last year.

Other Editors Saying-Summerfield's Nonsense

Tampa Morning Tribune
No sane individual will deny that the American people deserve the best postal service in the world. Nor will many dispute the fact that they are not getting it now.

We'll go along with Postmaster General Summerfield's contention that if we are to have the best service, both Congress and the administration must come to grips with the need to provide new and more efficient Postoffices as well as new mechanical and electronic machines to sort and distribute mail and packages. But we do not finally part company when he says thousands of new buildings will be constructed in all parts of the country, including 17 in Florida, if Congress finally votes a five-cent rate for out-of-town letters, thus suggesting that nothing can be done unless mail rates are boosted.

Senator Johnston, Democrat of South Carolina and chairman of the Senate Postoffice Committee, quickly canceled Summerfield on that point. He noted that all money the Postoffice Department takes in goes to the U.S. Treasury and every penny of the more than $3 billion it takes to run the department for a year is appropriated by Congress in the same fashion as for other departments and agencies.

In other words, construction by any Postoffices or other federal buildings has no relation whatever with whether or not Congress approves a five-cent stamp or any other postal rate increase.

It is most unbecoming, in our opinion, for a top-ranking Cabinet officer like Mr. Summerfield to play crude politics with such essential things as new Postoffices. The Postmaster General may be a zealous executive, but in this instance his efforts are misdirected and are likely to meet the same end as an illegibly-addressed piece of mail which has wound up in the Dead Letter Office.

HOW TO BRING UP A JUVENILE DELINQUENT
Jackson (Miss.) Clarion-Ledger
Mississippi parents might be interested in the following list of Do's and Don'ts compiled by the police department of Houston, Texas:

Begin in infancy to give your child everything he wants. He will grow up to believe the world owes him a living. Laugh at him when he picks up "dirty" words. These will make him think he's cute. Don't give him spiritual training before he is 21, so he can make up his own mind.

Praise him in his presence to the neighbors and show how much smarter he is than the neighbor's children. Never use the word "wrong." It may develop in him a guilt complex. He will be prepared later on to believe when he is punished that society is against him and that he is being persecuted.

Pick up after him and do everything for him, so that he will be experienced in letting someone else carry all of his responsibilities. Have no concern for what goes into his mind. Let him read anything. Quarrel frequently in the presence of your children. Give him all the spending money he wants. Never let him earn his own.

Contract Farming Spreads Out

By ELMER ROESSNER

One phase of the current industrialization of American agriculture is the rapid growth of contract farming.

Contract farming isn't new. The system had been used for many decades in production of cannery vegetables. For example, a cannery will offer to buy a certain number of acres of tomatoes of a specific variety at a specific price.

A farmer can decline. There have been many strikes against cannery prices and sometimes the prices have been forced up. If a farmer declines, he can plant tomatoes and hope that failure of crops on other farms will give him a good bargaining position, he can grow tomatoes and truck them to some other market, or he can plant some other crop. If he signs, he is sure of a market at a firm price.

The cannery gains some security, too. It knows that the necessary acreage will be put into tomatoes in the area, and that the price will be firm even if there is a crop failure.

IN POULTRY, HOGS
Contract farming has spread through the big poultry centers and is now sweeping into the hog-raising regions of the nation. Furthermore, the contracts are becoming so detailed that many a farmer has said, "We're just hired hands."

In the poultry industry, the broiler packer offers contracts specifying just what kind of chickens are to be hatched, how many, just what their feed must be, what antibiotics and pharmaceuticals must be administered, what sanitary conditions must be observed, and how much the farmer is to receive. In some cases, the packer supplies the day-old chicks.

This has taken the chicken raising out of the hands of the farmer's wife. It has changed broiler-raising from a side line to a major occupation. And it has forced even the most conservative farmers to adopt the newest scientific methods of feeding and caring for chickens. It has reduced the average time of raising a broiler for market from 14 to nine weeks; it is producing more meat per pound of feed than ever before and it has kept the price of poultry moderate. The average price per pound of chickens on the farm was 16 cents in 1956, compared with 18.4 cents in 1950.

EVEN FATHERS SELECTED
The hog contracts are often more detailed; sometimes they provide that the packer provide the boars. Food and raising conditions are spelled out minutely; the type of farrowing pen is specified and the kind of food provided for. Some contracts call for heated pens in winter and showers in summer.

As a consequence, leaner hogs are grown faster. The type of food prescribed is responsible. Hogs no longer wallow in mud. They live in penned cleanliness on concrete. Only the sows are permitted a bit of exercise at certain times.

Contracts usually provide that the farmer is to be paid the average market price on the day of delivery, plus a bonus. The packer is willing to pay the bonus because he knows he will get leaner meat.

Contract farming is also being used to greater extent in egg production, turkeys, beef cattle and lamb. And as big business slowly takes over farm production, farmers trade their independence for greater security, the most significant current developments in agriculture and its likely to continue," according to Orlin J. Scoville, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Economics Research Division.

"Contract farming can contribute to more efficient use of agricultural resources, but its ultimate effects on farm incomes and welfare of farm people remain to be seen," he said.

New Bern Hands Rose High School Licking, 9-3

Phants Throw Game Away With Errors, Walks

NEW BERN—Rose High School lost its first baseball game of the season last night here as the New Bern Bears copped a 9-3 North-eastern Conference victory.

The Bears overcame a 3-1 fourth-inning lead by the Phantoms. It was the Bruins' second win of the year against three losses. For the Phants, it was their first loss in six games this season.

New Bern picked up eight of their nine runs through errors and walks on the part of the G-Men.

Joe Moye pitched for the Greenville team and was relieved by Randy Bass in the last of the sixth. It was Moye's loss.

New Bern opened with Carroway on the mound, but No-Hit Ace Robert Gillikin came in in the fourth and squelched the Phantoms after that.

The Phantoms took an early lead in the fourth inning—overcoming a 1-0 lead picked up by the Bears in the first—with a three-run fourth inning. Billy Cox led off with a single and Dick Evans got on an error. Mack Roebuck drove in Cox with a single, and Bynum singled to score Evans. Joe Moye then singled to score Roebuck.

At that point, with no outs, the Phants had two men on base. New Bern Coach Arbes replaced Carroway with Gillikin, and the pinstriped reliever struck out Harrison, Bass, and Edwards to retire the side.

Gillikin held the G-Men to one more hit throughout the rest of the game.

In the bottom of the fourth, the Greenville team came apart at the seams. Gillikin opened with a pop fly to the third baseman and Allen dropped the ball. Carroway then batted one through Cox's legs at shortstop. Moye walked the next batter to load the bases. The next Bruin batter knocked a slow roller to Dick Evans and he erred the ball, scoring one man. Moye walked in the next run. Another New Bern batter doubled. The next one slammed a homerun. The Bruins picked up seven unearned runs in that one inning.

New Bern's first-inning run was also unearned, coming on an error by Evans.

Greenville got seven hits last night. New Bern got six. Hitting for the Phants were Billy Cox with two, Bass, Allen, Roebuck, Bynum and Moye with one each.

Ayden Wins First Ball Game; MVP Awards Presented

AYDEN — Ayden high school claimed its first victory in five games yesterday, defeating Snow Hill, 14-10, here.

Tommy Edwards pitched the full distance for the Tornados, giving up 13 hits. Losing pitcher for Snow Hill was Harold. Wells and Brann hurled the first three innings before Harold went into the game. Harold gave up eight runs and four hits after taking over.

Leading hitters for the winners were Dan Bateman who got on base four times on five trips and batted in five runs, and Edwards who got two hits. Ayden collected eight hits.

At Ayden's Athletic Banquet last night, Most Valuable Player awards were presented for football and basketball performers. Carolyn Sumrell won the girls' trophy for basketball. In boys' basketball, Tommy Edwards and Leslie Stocks were both awarded MVP awards. Edwards also was named MVP for football.

Billy Casper Still Leading

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Billy Casper, generally a stranger to jitters or pressure, today remained on top of the field going into the third round of the $40,000 Tournament of Champions.

With rounds of 65-70 for a 36-hole total of 135 behind, Billy the Kid, from Apple Valley, Calif., admittedly was leading a dangerous list.

He was just one stroke in front of a seasoned campaigner, Tommy Bolt. Close behind were such other challengers as Frank Stranahan, 66-71-137; Stan Leonard, a champion from Canada, 69-69-138; former PGA champion Walter Burkemo, 71-68-139, and tied at 140 were Masters champion Arnold Palmer, 72-68, and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, 70-70.

UNC Football Coach Jim Tatum Addresses Local Alumni

"Coaching At North Carolina Is Toughest Job In The World"-Tatum

say to yourself, 'Well, we'll try to win seven and lose three this year, or win eight and lose two.' A coach who plans to win only some of his games will get his brains beat out every time his club goes on the field.

"You have to go after all of them. The goal is to win every game."

"Now, in order to win, a coach has to have good boys, good material. In order to get good material, one has to hand out scholarships. The time has come when every good high school athlete expects to be offered a scholarship. Other schools are going to offer scholarships to the good athletes and none of the athletes are going to come to Chapel Hill unless we offer the same, regardless of how much they love the school."

Rams Club

UNC's plan for the Rams Club would relieve the present situation, Tatum believes. If the annual goal of $100,000 can be met, he thinks the Athletic Department can wait its turn for scholarships from the Educational Foundation and still emerge comfortably.

The new organization would be a supplement to the Educational Foundation, according to the coach, one of the most successful in college football. It would, he said, stabilize the Educational Foundation and even encourage contributions.

Tatum was accompanied by two of his assistants, Jim Hickey and Ernie Williamson, who assisted in previewing Tar Heel prospects for the 1958 season.

"Next year," Tatum said, "our team will be improved in every position except fullback. We should have good quarterback strength, because we have four of the best quarterbacks I've ever had. All four can kick, are good defensive players, and, of course, can run and pass."

Carolina's 1957 team won six and lost four. In 1956, Tatum's first at Carolina since leaving Maryland, the Tar Heels won two, lost seven and tied one, but the Atlantic Coast Conference ordered the team to forfeit its two victories because an ineligible player was used.

A Tough Job

The job of building a winner for UNC has been a hard job, Tatum said.

"At Chapel Hill, athletes are not looked upon as favored above any other student. There, everybody is a hero. The Archeology Department is as important as the Athletic Department; so are all the rest. We have to wait, and take our turn."

"I haven't spent any time coaching football in the past two years. I've been busy traveling, giving talks like this one, trying to raise a little money and trying to get some ball players. It's a tough business, but the coaches and the Educational Foundation, in part, have to do it because of the situation at Carolina."

Tatum and the other Carolina fans at last night's meeting took time from their discussion of modern UNC, football and money to pay homage to Jack Cobb, a Greenville resident who is one of UNC's all-time athletic greats. As a basketball player at Carolina, Cobb was a three-time Helms Foundation All-American, player of the year in 1926. All-Southern in 1924, 1925 and 1926, and backbone of the Tar Heel's first outstanding basketball teams. He was named to the Helms Foundation's basketball Hall of Fame in 1952.

Last night's meeting was directed by Lee Folger, Greenville alumnus of UNC who is one of three alumni members of the UNC Athletic Council, and a leader of the Pitt County branch of the Educational Foundation.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

This past week has been one of the most busy and most successful six days—I'd venture to say—in the school's long athletic history.

- Take a look at the results:
- (1) The ECC baseball team racked up its fourth North State conference win over Atlantic Christian 6-3, to remain undefeated and on top of the league standings. The Bucs also played yesterday at Elon.
 - (2) The tennis team went hog wild and punched the wind out of High Point, Atlantic Christian, and Elon in five matches spread out over a four-day period, winning all five by shutout scores. They improved their NS mark to 7-0 and the club is full of personal triumphs, too. For instance, Maurice Everette, who cracked the state's win record of 52 two weeks ago has gone on to chalk up 58 by now. Also, there are three unbeaten singles players on the club—and that includes all matches played thus far.
 - (3) The Pirate track team walloped N. C. State 69-61 in one of the top events of the week at Raleigh. The match was tied until Jess Curry's 159'3" toss of the javelin in the next-to-the-last event. It was Curry's win that decided the match. Curry also won the high hurdles. Other ECC firsts were recorded by Edwards, Morse, Maynard, O'Brien, Speight, Holmes.
 - (4) Coach Howard Porter's golfers copped their sixth straight victory of the season, knocking off Elon 8 1/2-7 1/2.

MORE TO COME

And there's more to come next week. Duke University, the defending Atlantic Coast Conference baseball champion, will journey to ECC, Wednesday night, for a tilt with the Bucs.

It will be the second night game of the year for ECC, and the third battle against an ACC club for the Pirates. Thus far, the slate is 1-1 against members of that conference. Coach Jim Mallory's club downed South Carolina and took a licking from North Carolina (the night game).

For Duke's admirable Coach Ace Parker, the contest will be something of a Homecoming. The Ace, an All-America baseball and football performer at Duke in his collegiate days, played two years of amateur baseball in Greenville in 1935-36 in the old Coastal Plain league. He has many friends in Greenville, including former teammates of his, Bo Farley, Reynolds May, and Ty Wagner.

It will also be something of a homecoming for Duke's baseball team. The only time a Blue Devil club has ever played here was in the dedication ceremonies of Guy Smith Stadium long ago. In that one, the Dukes walloped Wake Forest 13-4. Wednesday night, the two teams will be playing in that same stadium.

Pirates Suffer First NS Loss At Elon, 5-4

Big Herman Was Colorful Figure

By WHITNEY SHOEMAKER WASHINGTON (AP) — Herman Hickman's death yesterday deprived sports of one of its biggest, most colorful figures.

The Round Man (he used to weigh somewhat more than 300 pounds) died at Providence Hospital of an ulcer condition worsened by severe liver and kidney complications.

Death removed Hickman from the sports and TV-radio scene at the age of 46. In his time, he won renown as a football player, coach, chronicler and commentator.

Services will be held (at the Gliddens Funeral Home) in Jacksonville Beach, Fla., home of Hickman's twice-widowed mother. No date has been set.

Hickman, the former Yale coach and Tennessee guard, retired from an active role in football in 1952, two years after Yale had renewed his contract for 10 seasons.

From '48 through '51, his Ell teams won 16, lost 17 and tied 2. Brains and arm, with a hill-billy drawl that belied his erudition, Hickman already had become a TV personality and quiz show panelist. He continued to appear on radio and TV sports programs and to write for magazines.

As versatile as he was large, Herman became football editor of Sports Illustrated and published a work called the "Herman Hickman Reader." He wrote his own verse and could quote almost any poet of greater or lesser note.

Hickman, who last week told a reporter he had shrunk "60 pounds under my eating weight," loved to eat and loved to cook. "Ah eats anything that won't eat me," he once said.

He was born Herman Michael Hickman Jr. at Johnson City, Tenn., Oct. 1, 1911. Starting his football playing at Baylor Prep in Chattanooga, he later starred at the University of Tennessee under Coach Bob Neyland. Hickman was named a guard on the All-Time Football Team selected in The Associated Press midcentury sports poll.

After graduation in 1932, Hickman played professional football for the old Brooklyn Dodgers and between seasons more than made expenses traveling the pro wrestling circuit.

He went to Yale as head coach in 1948 after hitches as an assistant at the Wake Forest, North Carolina State and West Point.

His wife and mother were at his bedside when he died. He courted his wife, the former Helen Clara Smith, on the Tennessee campus about 25 years ago. They had no children.

BURLINGTON — Elon's defending North State Conference championships handed East Carolina its first baseball loss of the season here yesterday afternoon, 5-4.

Gil Watts hurled for the winners, going the full nine innings. He gave up eight hits to the Pirates, struck out seven batters, and walked three.

Coach Jim Mallory, whose Pirates were leading the North State loop at the beginning of the game, exchanged his 3-0 record for a 3-1.

Mallory used his three best pitchers against the Fighting Christians yesterday and neither of them could make the difference. All three did an adequate job of stopping the Elon club at the plate (Elon got only four hits) but the Christians still picked up their runs. Ben Baker began on the mound for the Pirates and was pulled in favor of Leonard Lilley shortly. Righthander George Williams later relieved Lilley.

Tony Carcaterra paced the hitting for the Christians, smashing out a homerun and a triple. He batted in two runs and scored twice himself.

High Point Today

The Bucs journey to High Point this afternoon for another North State Conference match. Yesterday High Point was nipped by Atlantic Christian 6-3 at Wilson.

On Monday the Pirates are scheduled to battle with Catawba at Salisbury.

Next Wednesday East Carolina has a rugged doubleheader scheduled with High Point and Duke University in Greenville. On Wednesday afternoon, the Bucs will tangle with High Point at College Field. Wednesday night they will play host to the defending ACC champions Duke at Guy Smith Stadium.

Woodling Paces Orioles To 2-1 Yankee Trimming

Villanova Seeks Third Straight Carnival Sweep

By ED WILKS The Associated Press

Well whaddya know! Those New York Yankees ain't perfect after all. And Gene Woodling should find things a bit more pleasant in Baltimore from now on.

Woodling, the ex-Yankee who was booted out of Baltimore three seasons ago, was traded to Cleveland, and now is back with the Orioles, improved public relations immensely last night. It was his pinch-hit, two-out, two-strike double in the ninth that turned a shut-out into a 2-1 victory.

Yesterday's was the second consecutive game in which the defending American League champs blew a lead in the ninth. It was shortstop Gil McDougald who made the boots in both losses.

Last night, he bobbled a leadoff grounder by Dick Williams in the ninth. A fielder's choice, a walk to first Jim Busby and Woodling's Yankee style clutch hit broke up a wonderful duel between righthander Connie Johnson of the Orioles and Whitey Ford, the Yankees' stubby southpaw.

Both finished with five-hitters, with Ford striking out eight and Johnson six. Both now are 1-1.

The Washington Senators moved into second, a game behind the Yankees, on Pete Ramos' six-hit, 2-0 victory at Boston. The Chicago White Sox escaped the cellar and dropped Kansas City to a close third by beating the A's 6-5 in 12. Cleveland smacked Detroit 12-2.

The San Francisco Giants took the National League lead by beating the Chicago Cubs 4-0 on Ray Manzant's four-hitter. A record NL night-game crowd of 60,635 at Los Angeles saw the Dodgers beat St. Louis 5-3. Big Bob Rush's six-hitter gave Milwaukee a 4-0 decision over Philadelphia. Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 4-3.

Mickey Mantle and Bill Skowron each had two of the Yankee hits off Johnson, who gave up Mantle's double and a single by Skowron in the first, then shutout the champs the rest of the way. Ford who beat the Birds 3-1 last week had no-hit the Orioles from the fourth until Woodling's shot off the right field wall. Johnson's lone defeat was a 7-0 shutout by the Yanks.

Mickey Vernon drove in five runs for Cleveland, four with a third-inning home run. The Tribe then counted six in the fourth with Bobby Avila and Minnie Minoso both driving in two while chasing Jim Bunning to his second defeat. Ray Narleski won his second, both over the Tigers and Bunning. He allowed the Tigers just six hits, struck out four.

Ramos gained his third major league shutout and second against the Red Sox. The young righthander fanned seven for a 2-0 record, both against Boston. Southpaw Frank Baumann struck out 10 in his seven frames for the Red Sox, but lost it in the fifth when Eddie Mose doubled and a pair of ex-Sox, Albie Pearson and Norm Zauchin, followed with a single and double.

West Coast Rookies Are Treating Fans

By ED WILKS The Associated Press

The rookies are really giving those rookie crowds a treat in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

The San Francisco Giants, winning their third straight, climbed into the National League last night with a 2-0 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Righthander Ray Manzant, no rookie but a youngster, gained his first major league shutout with a four-hitter while rookie Bob Schmidt tripled and scored the first run, on Manzant's single, and rookie Orlando Cepeda drove in the second.

At Los Angeles, rookie Norm Larker drove in a pair of runs while rookie southpaw Fred Kipp won his first as a NL record night

Milwaukee's world champion Braves gained a share of second with the Cubs, a half-game behind, as ex-Cub Bob Rush tossed a sixth hit shutout for a 4-0 decision over Cincinnati 4-3.

In the American League, Baltimore scored unearned runs in the ninth for a 2-1 victory over the first place New York Yankees. Washington took second, a game back, by beating Boston 2-0 on Pete Ramos' six-hitter. Cleveland clubbed Detroit 12-2 and the Chicago White Sox ending their losing streak at five with a 6-5, 12-inning victory over Kansas City.

Robersonville Area Counts Over 400,000 Chickens

ROBERSONVILLE — Farmers and businessmen in and around this Martin County town are proving that diversification can be a paying thing.

During the past 18-20 months poultry raising has been the economic ointment they have applied to a wounded farm income.

The coming of the Austin Farms poultry processing plant has triggered the rapid development of this diversified industry in an area where raising chickens on a large scale was unheard of two years ago. At the present time over 400,000 birds are being raised within a 15-mile radius of Robersonville.

Austin Farms, Executive Vice-President of Austin Farms, Inc., estimated that at the present rate about two million chickens will be raised within this radius in 1958.

Several authorities feel however this figure will more than double before 1959. Williams estimated that approximately five million birds will be grown in the Robersonville trading area by the fall of this year.

The town's half-million dollar processing plant is currently running on an eight-hour day, five-day week basis. Williams estimated that the operation's 110 employees process in the neighborhood of 125,000 birds a week.

Approximately one-half of the processed birds are coming from the local trade area while the remaining amount is being shipped in from out-lying communities such as New Bern, Wilson and Wendell. The plant's payroll runs in excess of $5,000 per week.

Officials are Vance Roberson, President; Williams, Sherwood Roberson, Vice-President; Charles Wilson, Treasurer; and Paul Roberson, Secretary.

N. C. Business Education Council Holds Meet Here

Members of the North Carolina Business Education Council, holding its spring meeting on the campus of East Carolina College Saturday, discussed the results of a survey made in the white secondary schools of the state.

A majority of the 40-member Council attended the sessions over which Dr. James L. White, associate professor of business at East Carolina College, is president. Mrs. Thaddeus Dewar, also of the EOC Business Education Department, is secretary.

The survey has been made to determine the status of business education in this state, including teacher certification, work experience, teaching load, business education program, measurement and standards in skill subjects, equipment and maintenance policies, vocational guidance, placement and follow-up services, community resources, public relations and classification and enrollment of the school.

Several projects are expected to follow the study of the survey results, including the preparation of a manual of principles and procedures for effective use of community resources.

Forest Fire Is Nearly Encircled

PANTEGO, N.C. — Firefighters hoped for success this morning in a battle to control a forest fire which has burned over 6,000 acres of marshy Hyde County woodlands.

Fire lines encircling the area swept by the blaze were almost completed during a night of work by a force of more than 100 men, including 50 Marines from Camp Lejeune.

All except about half-mile of the nine to 10 miles of line were completed during the night, reported Asst. State Forester Paul W. Tillman. He said the fighters hoped to have the blaze under control this morning.

Use of heavy equipment was hampered by the swampy terrain which frequently bogged down the tractor-drawn plows. A field kitchen and food supplies were moved in for the fighters.

The fire was located between the community of Penzer, Pong Lake and Alligator Lake.

PITT COUNTY'S SUPERIOR COURT . . . Where The Jury Is The Focal Point Of Interest And Dominating Item.

6-Year-Old Is One Cog Of Process

Six-year-old Jan Heidenreich may not realize all the facets of a job she has, but she plays an important role in the administration of justice in Pitt County.

She pulls prospective jurors' names out of a box each month.

Important as it is, Jan's job is only an intermediate step in the process of filling the jury box for each term of Pitt County Superior Court. The process neither begins nor ends with Jan's work.

Superior Court juries in Pitt, and every other North Carolina county, begin in the Tax Department. It is there that lists of taxpayers more than 21 years of age are compiled and made available to the Board of County Commissioners every two years.

Commissioners take that list, and a supplemental list of names of persons who do not appear on the tax rolls, and select persons of good moral character and sufficient intelligence as prospective jurors. They weed out individuals who have been convicted of crimes involving moral turpitude or who have been judged mentally incompetent for jury duty.

When the Commissioners have fulfilled their obligation to compile the list, the board's clerk prepares two copies of it—one for a permanent jury scroll, which is always open for public inspection, and the other for a box with double locks which is kept by the clerk.

The box is the one which Jan Heidenreich dips into every month. It is opened only at meetings of the Board of County Commissioners, when Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson and Board Chairman Woodrow Wooten meet for the specific purpose of supervising drawing of jury lists for terms of Superior Court.

North Carolina's 1957 General Assembly provided Pitt County with authority to draw 56 jurors for January and August terms of court, 48 jurors for mixed or criminal terms and 40 jurors for civil terms. The number of jurors authorized varies with individual counties, but the method never varies. It must be done by a child younger than ten years of age, at least 20 days before the term for which the jurors are being drawn.

Not every name drawn from the box gets on the term list or in the courtroom, where the county pays $5 for every day of service. Each name, as it is drawn, is checked by members of the board, to determine if the individual is a "good and true person," fit for jury duty.

The checking at the time names are drawn has helped much to ease the job of notifying prospective jurors, which is the duty of the Sheriff's Department. It has also resulted in a high quality group of juries for Superior Court terms.

District Solicitor Robert D. Rouse, Jr., and Superior Court Judge Joseph W. Parker both term Pitt's juries as "excellent." That, they say, is important, not from their viewpoints alone, but for the best interests of justice.

"Jury duty," according to the Judge and the Solicitor, "represents the people's justice. Laws are for the benefit of a community, and jury work is the citizen's contribution to his community."

"The most profound duty of any citizen is to pass on the rights of his fellow citizens. Therefore, jury duty involves a dual responsibility for every citizen: The responsibility to the community and its laws; and the responsibility to individuals, to preserve his rights."

To fill that dual responsibility, the Judge, the Solicitor and every other person connected with the courts expect jurors to be disinterested, conscientious, respectful of the law, and mentally honest.

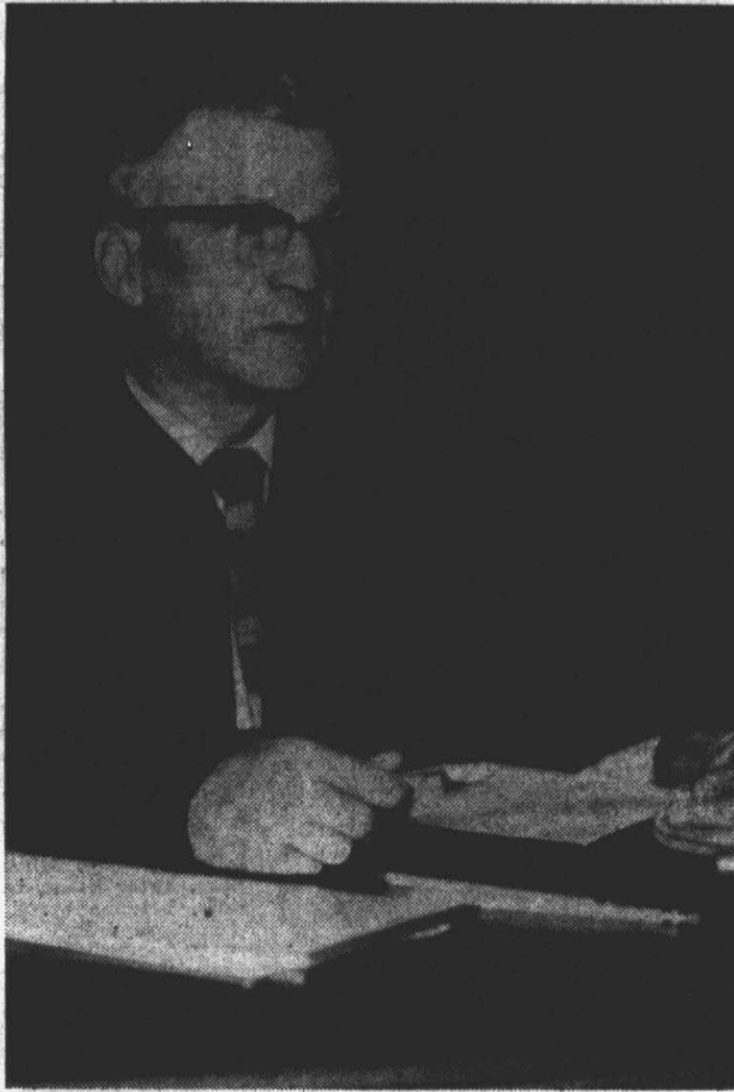

When jurors can meet those qualifications, the Judge and the Solicitor agree there will be intelligent verdicts. "Juries," they say, "will go to the hearts of cases when they listen with open, honest and respectful minds. It is possible juries will miss cases, but when they are compiled as Pitt's juries are, they will miss very few."

"The effort county officials have expended to get good juries, and cooperation from the juries themselves, have meant that the county has been getting juries which render intelligent verdicts."

"No one can ever ask more than that."

SOLICITOR ROBERT D. ROUSE, JR. . . . "Juries Have A Dual Responsibility."

JUDGE JOSEPH W. PARKER . . . "Juries Go To The Hearts Of Cases."

Pageant Will Climax Big 50th Anniversary Program

Climaxing the celebration during 1957 and 1958 of the Golden Anniversary of East Carolina College, a pageant based on the history of the school will be presented on the campus Saturday and Sunday, May 3 and 4.

Special events of the anniversary weekend, announced by President John D. Messick of the college, include a meeting of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association, May Day exercises, a meeting of the college Board of Trustees, two performances of the pageant, and a series of social affairs. Alumni and friends of the college from many parts of the country are expected to be present for the celebration.

"East Carolina's Spade: To Serve," pageant written by Emma L. Hooper of the department of English, presents through drama, music, and the dance the fifty years during which the institution has grown in size and prestige, has contributed to educational progress in North Carolina, and has served the people of the state in their intellectual, cultural, and spiritual interests.

Performances are scheduled for Saturday, May 3, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, May 4, at 3:30 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. The public is invited to attend.

A cast of approximately 600 people will include faculty members and administrative officers of the past and the present, alumni, members of the Board of Trustees, students at the college, kinsmen of those who were connected with the early history of the school, and others.

The East Carolina Orchestra, the college concert band, and three student choral groups will provide a musical background. Specially designed settings and costumes appropriate to the periods covered by East Carolina's history will add attractiveness to the pageant.

Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert of the department of music is director of "East Carolina's Spade." Assistant directors are Dr. Joseph Withey, Claude Garren, and Rosalind Roulston of the faculty.

The story of the development of the East Carolina Teachers Training School into the East Carolina College of today is told in the pageant in four episodes. The first presents a glimpse of a half century ago, the ground-breaking exercises on July 2, 1908, for the first six buildings on the campus.

Thomas J. Jarvis, ex-Governor of North Carolina, turned the first spadeful of earth that day, as a group of interested citizens of Greenville and Pitt County looked on.

The spade, now a treasured possession of the college, gives the pageant its title and becomes a symbol of progress as the history of the school is traced. It will be used in Episode One.

Five of those who were present as the East Carolina Teachers Training School was begun are still living in or near Greenville and will appear in the ground-breaking scene of "East Carolina's Spade." They are Sam T. White, Haywood Dail, Mrs. Haywood Dail, and Cecil Cobb of Grifton.

With the late Dr. Robert H. Wright as president, the East Carolina Teachers Training School opened October 5, 1909. During the twenty-five years of Dr. Wright's leadership, the school advanced from a two-year normal school to a four-year college offering both the bachelor's and the master's degrees, the curriculum was expanded, the faculty and the student body grew in numbers, and physical facilities were enlarged and improved. The name of the school was changed to East Carolina Teachers College.

In Episode Two of the pageant, events of this first quarter-century are enacted. Among those taking part will be a number of "firsts" in the history of the college: Miss Kate W. Lewis of Greenville, charter member of the faculty, now retired; Dr. Patty Dowell, head of the education department at Mississippi State College, the first student to register when the school opened in 1909; Miss Deanie Boone Haskett, Greenville teacher, the first student to receive the master's degree; and Henry W. Oglesby of Washington, D.C., the first man to receive a degree.

Miss Ola Ross of Greenville, who was connected with the office of the registrar for more than forty years, the longest record of service in the history of the college, will also appear the pageant.

Episode Three is based on the administrations of the late Dr. Leon B. Meadows, president from 1934 to 1943, and of Dr. Howard J. McGinnis of Greenville, acting president from 1944 to 1946.

The fourth part deals with the "surging growth" of East Carolina under the leadership of Dr. Emnis H. Cooke, 1946-1947, now president of High Point College, and of Dr. John D. Messick, president since 1947, whose administration has been one of phenomenal progress for the school. Dr. McGinnis, Dr. Cooke, and Dr. Messick will take part in "East Carolina's Spade."

The North Carolina Literary and Historical Association will open its two-day session Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Joyner Memorial Library. The program will include a paper on "The History of Eastern North Carolina" by Dr. L.F. Brewster of the East Carolina faculty and a panel discussion among Ovid W. Pierce of the East Carolina English department, Mrs. Ingila Fletcher of Edenton, and Mrs. Mebane Holoman Burgwyn of Jackson, distinguished North Carolina authors, and Dr. Hugh Lefler of the University of North Carolina, noted historian.

A tea in the library for members and guests will follow the program and displayed in the lobby will be an exhibition of North Carolina arts and crafts.

Dr. Robert Humber of Greenville, international lawyer and patron of the arts in this state, will address the association at a dinner Saturday night at 5:30 in the East Dining Room. His topic will be "Early History of Pitt County."

Sunday morning at 11, the Rev. W.M. Howard of Greenville, speaking in the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church of the city, will discuss "The History of the Church in North Carolina" before members of the association.

GOLFING GULLS
RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Nobody has noticed the James River getting any saltier, but there must be a reason for the sudden appearance of seagulls here, more than 50 miles inland. More than 20 were spotted recently at an unlikely location—the third hole of a local golf course.

WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF HIM, GAMBOLO? HE SEEMS TO BE EVERYTHING YOU SAID HE WAS.

HE'S NOT ONLY THE FIERCEST GAMECOCK IN THIS COUNTRY—HE'S THE CHAMPION. BRING IN THE OTHER ROOSTER.

LOOK, I KNOW WHERE THIS COCK CAME FROM, AND I KNOW HE'S ABSOLUTELY A KILLER.

BELIEVE ME, IF THE PROFESSOR'S TRANQUILIZER GUN CAN DESTROY A GAMECOCK'S WILL TO FIGHT—IT'S WORTH A FORTUNE.

WITH THAT IN YOUR POSSESSION, YOU CAN WIN EVERY COCKFIGHT YOU BET ON. WE STARTED WITH MICE—NOW WE'RE EXPERIMENTING WITH FOWL—LATER, WE MAY USE HUMANS.

AND AT MISS EGGHEAD'S ESTATE— ALL I KNOW IS THAT JUST AS I WAS COMING UP TO THE ROOSTER AND ABOUT TO GRAB HIM, A CAR CAME ALONG.

AND A FELLER REACHED OUT WITH A STICK WITH A NET ON IT AND GRABBED THE ROOSTER.

AND THERE WENT MY CHAMPION GAMECOCK. —AND THERE WENT OUR FIFTY-DOLLAR REWARD.

DID YOU GET A GOOD LOOK AT THE MAN? NO, MISS EGGHEAD, BUT THE CAR WAS A 1958 DETROIT LICENSE NUMBER 4404.

A 1958 DETROIT LICENSE NUMBER 4404? WHAT? WHY, THAT LICENSE NUMBER BELONGS TO—

AND BACK AT THE FIGHT— PROFESSOR, THE CHAMPION HAS NEARLY FINISHED OFF HIS OPPONENT. DON'T YOU THINK YOU SHOULD ACT?

CHAPTER 23

The climb was a steep one, and barely a path, crossing and recrossing the creek that tumbled down from the plateau to the north in a series of falls. Price stopped often to let his roan blow, each time checking the trail for tracks. There was very little travel, so he felt reasonably certain that Bruce's horse had made the tracks he was following. The boy had been by here not very long before, judging by the sign.

moving warily from one side of the stream to the other and now and then touching the ridge tops, a sense of failure weighing heavily upon him. Then, half an hour later, he came up on a draw, and topped the next ridge. Directly below him he saw the Mohawk brothers on horses, Bruce standing between them.

The Mohawks plainly were not expecting any interference. They had their backs to Price, sitting slack in leather as if perfectly at ease. The sound of their taunting laughter came to Price. He heard one of them say something to the boy, but he was too far away to catch the words.

Price drew his gun. He would probably have made it part way down the slope before the Mohawks were aware of his presence if Bruce hadn't given him away. But the boy was facing him. Like any kid who had his tail in a crack one minute and suddenly saw a chance to escape, he let out a squall. The Mohawk brothers looked around, saw Price, and whirled their horses and dug for their guns.

Price cracked spurs to his horse's flanks and went rocketing down the slope, gun in his hand, shouting, "Hook the moon. You're under arrest." But the Mohawk boys had been born to violence; they were incapable of submitting to arrest even if the shock of surprise had not set off their hair-trigger tempers. They both fired, quickly, snap shots that came uncomfortably close, and Price knew at once there was no chance of taking these men alive.

In a startling moment of insight, like the thoughts that whip through the mind of a drowning man, it occurred to Price that it would be a perverse whim of Fate if they filled him and Bruce, and left Cole Weston in the clear without having to turn a hand.

Price didn't cut loose until he had covered half the distance between them. The Broken Ring men fired again, but now their horses were jumpy and both bullets veered slightly to his left, and let go with his first shot, knocking Joe Mohawk out of his saddle. Price had purposely held his fire until he was sure he wouldn't miss, but by playing it that way he tipped the scales against him. Tom Mohawk had dismounted. He was an old hand at this, knowing that any shot taken from the top of a horse has to have a broad element of luck to score, especially at a moving target. He was a cold, nervous man, and now, on the ground, he was bringing his gun up, the manner back. Price fired and made a clean miss.

If Tom Mohawk had been one second faster, he would have killed Price. As it was, time ran against him. Bruce Jarvis stopped, picked up a rock the size of his fist, and threw it at Mohawk, catching him in the small of the back. It jogged him forward a step and made him miss.

Price pulled his horse and came out of the saddle in a cloud of dust. For a moment his roan was between him and Mohawk. He stepped into the clear and got in the first shot, the bullet driving through the Broken Ring man's chest. He must have been dead before he hit the ground.

Joe Mohawk, with a bullet wound in his shoulder, had been jarred by the fall from his horse. He hauled himself to his knees by sheer will power. Price heard the boy's cry of warning. Instantly, as much as anything, made him drop flat on the ground. Joe's bullet singing above him. Because Mohawk was injured his reactions were a little slow. He'd had Price in his sights and he had fired where Price had been, not where he was.

Price let go with a shot, lying flat on his belly. The bullet grazed Mohawk's arm, making a slight flesh wound, but hurting him enough so that his next shot missed. Then Price, with the last bullet in his gun, caught Mohawk squarely in the chest, knocking him off his knees as sharply as if he'd been yanked by a wucik, hard tug of a rope.

Price got to his feet and reloaded his gun, staring at the two dead men. Now that it was over, he was weak and aware that sweat was running down his face. He seemed to be fighting for every breath that came to him. He turned and walked away and sat down on a boulder. Cole Weston hadn't won yet.

"His eyes filled with defiance, he looked up and said, 'I guess you don't know what it is to be scared.'" Continue the story here Monday.

First Few Signs Of Slump Flattening - Out Are Eyed

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP) — A few first signs that the industrial slump may be flattening out are sighted today amid the welter of unpleasant statistics on the recent past. They are too scattered to foretell a turning in the trend but businessmen are watching them closely. More company executives predict a turn for the better will be apparent in the final months of this year and the upswing in industrial activity will be marked in the first half of 1959. In the less industrialized areas the slump may stay very mild indeed. Here are some of the first signs of a change, as cautiously reported by business executives: New orders for machine tools have risen in each of the last three months. Although these are far behind the volume a year ago, the National Machine Tool Builders Assn. notes that in past recessions rising machine tool sales have led the way to recovery in the capital goods industry. A gain in new orders of late is also reported by Ralph J. Cordier, chairman of General Electric, who thinks this may herald an upturn in durable goods demand. A similar rise in sales in recent days is noted by Crawford H. Greenwell, president of Du Pont, who cautiously offers it as a sign that the chemical industry may be ready for a rebound. Demand for fir lumber has increased and prices have rebounded sharply. This may be tied in with a report that the change in terms for Veterans Administration guaranteed mortgages, particularly the new no down payment rule, have revived house sales in some areas. J. I. Case reports its tractor sales are now running 25 per cent ahead of last year. In this connection, the Agriculture Department notes that farm income now is running at an annual rate of 13 1/2 billion dollars, compared with 11 1/2 billion in 1957. This means that a sizable part of the population should have more money to spend this year. The Department of Commerce adds that consumer spending continues high for all items except durable goods. The maker of one line of soft goods, Colgate-Palmolive, says sales this year easily should top last. And tobacco and drug firms report rising sales and profits. In the prediction department are some other industries currently in

Auto Industry Cutting Back Sales Estimates

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor
DETROIT (AP) — Auto industry circles are speculating over whether new car sales this year will reach even 4 1/2 million units. Estimates for 1958 have been revised downward constantly since the current models were introduced late last year. They started with a six million or better estimate. This was based on the car makers' conviction at that time that 1958 would be as good as 1957. But even though the year's sales may fall sharply below last year's total, the outlook is not all bad. Over the long range the prospects are good. One outstanding fact is: all purchases withheld now will be made later; what amounts to a buyers' strike is piling up a steadily growing backlog of unsatisfied demand. Many top industry executives insist six million new car sales annually is a normal level; it will go higher in the 1960s. They reach the six million figure by estimating annual scrapage at four million cars and a normal annual increase of two million in the car population. The industry currently is trying hard to break through the sales resistance that has tumbled new car sales something like half a million units behind comparable 1957. Meanwhile they are pushing elaborate plans for 1959 cars. There has been some talk that 1959 models will be brought out earlier than usual in an effort to step up sales. But the industry has a big new car inventory. Many millions of dollars are tied up in that inventory. It will have to be reduced to manageable proportions before new models are brought to market. Some guesses are that while several makers will close down earlier than usual for the changeover they will extend the shut-down to enable dealers to liquidate outgoing models. Introduction of new models then would come only a matter of a couple of weeks ahead of the usual date. The industry presently has cars on hand enough for two months at the present rate of demand. The inventory will be a major factor in planning for new model introductions.

Robert Humber Will Address Farmville Meet

FARMVILLE — Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville will deliver the principal address Tuesday at the annual dinner meetings of the Farmville Chamber of Commerce. The meeting will begin at 7 p. m. in the high school cafeteria under joint sponsorship of Rotary, Kiwanis and Lion clubs. The civic clubs, the Tobacco Board of Trade, and the Chamber of Commerce share expenses of the annual banquet. Frank Allen, Chamber of Commerce president, has announced that no awards for distinguished service will be made at Tuesday's meeting. At previous meetings, the now-inactive Junior Chamber of Commerce had sponsored distinguished service awards for a citizen not more than 35 years of age and a public-minded citizen not eligible for the Junior DSA.

Soft Life For Contented Dogs

BRANCHBURG, N.J. (AP) — A dog's best friend is over 50 communities around here is the Contented Warden Service. Started six years ago by David Condit and Michael Kredovskiy who were fed up with the dog-food business, Contented offers dog warden service at a fraction of the cost of retaining a full-time municipal dog catcher. And Contented dogs have it soft. They are kept until claimed by an owner or an interested dog lover and have free lodging and medical service while they wait. Nickel-containing stainless steels are used in modern high-speed aircraft jet engines because they withstand the hot corrosive gases.
