Rivers Overflow Into Town

Mud And Silt Left As Waters Begin Recede; Clean-Up In Works

CALLETSBURG, Ky. (AP) — "We've been lucky. We're in good shape now," Mayor Charles Gibbs said as his town of 4,000 prepared to dig out of mud and silt left by the overflow of two swollen rivers. The Big Sandy and the Ohio rose nearly six feet over flood stage here yesterday, but the murky waters began receding after nightfall. When the Big Sandy crest reached Callettsburg, where it flows into the Ohio, the crisis in eastern Kentucky ended. But the Ohio, also swollen above flood stage, continued to roll over low lying areas along its Kentucky and Ohio banks. Maysville, secure behind its new flood wall, said a crest of 58 feet, eight feet over flood stage, was expected today. Although Maysville closed its new flood gates for the first time, residents in other scattered communities along the banks from Callettsburg to Louisville evacuated from their homes. Crews were expected at Cincinnati tomorrow and Louisville Monday. The little Mason County community of Springdale, a few miles east of Maysville, was an almost isolated island last night. Water closed the only road leading to the town. Residents were able to get in and out over the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad line leading to the town. Bread had to be brought in by boat. The little community itself was in no danger, as it is on higher ground than surrounding land. At Manchester, 70 families evacuated. Augusta, Ky., in Bracken County had water standing in its main street. The Farmers Liberty Bank was forced to move out, and other businesses closed and evacuated. The highest water had not yet hit there. Mayor Gibbs said water was still four feet deep in half the business district and a low-lying residential area last night, but he expected to start a clean-up today.

Federal Agencies Report More Improvement On Economy Front

By JOHN H. AVERILL WASHINGTON (AP)—Fresh government reports reflect improvement last month in employment, home building and retail sales. Various federal agencies announced yesterday that: 1. Farm employment increased more than usual in late April to come within 1 per cent of the number employed the same time last year. 2. Unemployment among workers covered by jobless insurance dropped by 66,900 during the week ended April 26—the largest decline for any week since July 1957. Forty one states reported reductions. However, that week's total of 3,265,700 in insured unemployment was more than double that of the corresponding period last year. 3. Housing activity picked up, slightly exceeding April 1957 in the number of new units put under construction. 4. Retail sales increased 2 per cent during the month, with the biggest improvement in durable goods. At Hot Springs, Va., Secretary of Commerce Weeks said the great majority of his Business Advisory Council seems to feel the recession has gone about as deep as it will go. But he added that these corporation executives doubt there will be a recovery before fall. Some of the advisory group called anew for tax cuts but Weeks said there was a great division of opinion on the subject. "A speck more optimism" over the business outlook since the group last met in March was reported by Roger M. Blough, board chairman of U. S. Steel Corp., and head of the Council's economic policy committee. The volume of initial claims for jobless benefits, the barometer of new layoffs among insured workers, declined by 19,800 during the week ended May 3 for a total of 403,300, the Labor Department said. The department said this was the lowest total of new claims in any week this year, but compared with 247,200 for the same week last year. In its housing report, the Labor Department said a total of 95,000 units were put under construction last month, a little more than in April a year ago. The Commerce Department said preliminary figures, adjusted for seasonal factors, showed that April sales of all retail stores totaled $16,100,000,000—up 2 per cent from March.

Commanders Ask Unified Continental Defense Role

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—Military officers charged with the aerial defense of the North American continent are convinced that lack of unified command and rivalry among service branches are endangering continental safety. These officers run the North American Air Defense Command, which has the responsibility of protecting the continent from enemy air attack. NORAD is composed of elements from the U. S. Air Force, Navy and Army, in addition to the Royal Canadian Air Force. One of its most vital jobs is to act as the eyes for the Strategic Air Command. SAC does not maintain its own warning system and depends on NORAD for information that an enemy attack is threatened. Then the massive retaliatory air arm would go into action. But NORAD's high officers feel that inter-service rivalry and a lack of authority vested in NORAD commander Gen. Earle E. Partridge seriously jeopardizes the function and mission of the organization. NORAD stands by itself and is attached to no operational branch of the service. One ranking officer who declined to be identified, said: "Sure, Gen. Partridge is commander but he can't even hire and fire the field officers assigned to his outfit. They don't even have to tell him what they are doing with their units." This means, the officer said, that an Army, Navy or Air Force commander in charge of a unit attached to NORAD could reduce the number of weapons, equipment or men without advising or consulting NORAD. "The lack of single authority in an organization charged with the continent's defenses is obviously a serious and a dangerous problem," another NORAD officer said. He cited some examples in which the Air Force had reduced the number of its early warning aircraft on both coasts, the Navy had reduced its picket warning ships, and the Army had reduced the number of Nike missiles in the contribution to NORAD. These were done for economy purposes. These cuts were made without consultation or advising NORAD, the officer said. He said the action meant NORAD had a fighting force whose eyes had been taken away.

Some Business Leaders See Signs April May Have Been Turning Point

By STERLING F. GREEN HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—Some business leaders have told Secretary of Commerce Weeks of faint signs that April may have brought a turning point in the recession for several key industries. But optimism was far from unanimous among the 100 top ranking corporation executives meeting here as the commerce secretary's Business Advisory Council. And the business leaders did not agree on whether the government should stand pat on taxes or ask Congress to cut income tax rates as a booster for business. A special seven-member anti-recession committee of the BAC, named in April at Weeks' request to recommend a prescription for recovery, came up yesterday with a report proposing: 1. That President Eisenhower call on industry and labor for a voluntary, one year moratorium on both wage boosts and price increases. 2. That no tax reduction be asked now, but that "if the decline in general consumption continues," a flat percentage cut be made in all personal income tax rates. The moratorium idea provoked no discussion. But the tax recom-

School Placement Law Of Alabama Is Upheld In Test

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Alabama's school placement law does not conflict with the federal constitution, a three-judge U. S. District Court panel ruled yesterday. The unanimous decision was issued by U. S. Circuit Judge Richard T. Rives and District Judges Seybourn H. Lynne and H. Hobart Grooms. School placement laws in Virginia and Louisiana have been declared invalid by the courts. A similar law in North Carolina was ruled constitutional. Alabama's placement law gives local school boards virtually unlimited police power to say where individual pupils must attend classes. The three judges said Alabama's law is more like that of North Carolina. Its formula for determining which school students attend differs substantially from those of Louisiana and Virginia. The panel ruled against a petition by the parents of four Birmingham Negro children who asked for an injunction to keep school authorities from using the law to assign their children to classes. Alabama's placement law "furnishes the legal machinery for the orderly administration of the public schools in a constitutional manner," the judges said. Unless there is evidence of discrimination in application of the law, the panel added, "we must presume it will be so administered in a lawful manner." The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham Negro minister and integration leader, said a decision on whether the ruling will be appealed will be made after a consultation with attorneys for the Negro children and their parents. Shuttlesworth's daughter, Ruby Frederica Shuttlesworth, was one of the children involved in the suit. The minister was beaten by several white men when he tried to enter a group of Negro students in all-white Phillips High School in Birmingham last September.

Wouldn't Accept Terms By Dulles

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev says he still wants to sit down with other heads of government but he isn't about to accept Secretary of State Dulles' list of what should be discussed at the summit. Declaring the Soviets have "nerves as tough as Alpine rope," Khrushchev told diplomats and officials at the Czechoslovak embassy's National Day reception last night it would take more than words to frighten the Russians. Western correspondents were not invited to the reception, but other newsmen present gave this account: "We want summit talks," the premier said. "We want them in the same degree the Western powers should want them. But if they want to maintain a tense situation, then it must be that way. We can live in tension too." Commenting on summit topics proposed by Dulles and endorsed this week by Atlantic Alliance foreign ministers, Khrushchev asserted "none of them is acceptable."

Council Decides 3 Cats Enough

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP)—How many cats is enough? And when does a kitten become a cat? After a week of speeches and a public hearing, the Glendale city council has come up with its answers: Three cats is enough. To have more—according to the council's ordinance—you'll have to get a permit. Now, about kittens: If you have three cats, you can keep as many kittens as occur. Until they get to be four months old. At that time, by order of the city of Glendale, they become cats, illegal cats.

No Post Office For Postmaster

NATURAL BRIDGE, Va. (AP)—A postmaster without a post office will preside at the 49th annual convention of the National League of Postmasters opening here tomorrow. He is F. R. Moon Jr. of Warmington, Va., whose post office was closed recently for economy reasons. Moon is president of the league.

Extra Copies Of ECC Edition May Be Reserved

Additional copies of the East Carolina College 50th Anniversary edition to be issued by the Reflector next Wednesday may be reserved with the paper's Circulation Department. The special tabloid section is now being prepared and it will be included in the regular edition of the Reflector Wednesday. Articles by Reflector staffers and East Carolina personnel will trace the development of the college from the time the idea of a teachers' training institution for eastern North Carolina was first conceived. Alumni, students, college personnel and those interested in East Carolina College should find the edition of historical value. The special ECC section will be printed in advance of the Wednesday issue. Therefore, reservations for additional copies should be made by noon Tuesday. Those wanting extra copies may dial 6166 and ask for the Circulation Department.

Marks 34 Years Directing FBI

WASHINGTON (AP)—J. Edgar Hoover today marks the 34th anniversary of his appointment as director of the FBI. Hoover has served continuously in that post under five presidents, starting with Calvin Coolidge, and under 12 attorneys general. Associates said Hoover, now 63, plans no special observance.

Nixon Takes A Breather In Quito; Police Are Alerted

By STANFORD BRADSHAW QUITO, Ecuador (AP)—Vice President Nixon planned a breather in his South American tour today by going to a soccer game. Police were alerted for a possible demonstration at the stadium. Nixon received a warm reception from generally friendly residents when he arrived yesterday after hostile demonstrations occurred here, they probably would come at the match between two Quito soccer teams. "The Communists, who were blamed for sparking the Peruvian hostility, reportedly number less than 3,000 out of 600,000 voters in Ecuador. A small core of Reds was thought to have been behind the painting of "Go Home, Nixon" signs on about 50 houses Thursday night. Police panted them out before Nixon landed. Ecuador is the sixth country visited by Nixon in a tight two-week schedule. He enjoyed a relatively looser program today, including a sightseeing tour and a meeting with Ecuadorian business leaders. The vice president had been scheduled to visit the University of Quito and to talk with labor leaders. The university visit was called off after Nixon was stoned and spat upon in Lima, although some of his aides felt Nixon might still make a surprise call there. The trade union meeting reportedly was cancelled due to a lack of interest by the generally weak labor movement in Ecuador. Nixon called on President Camillo Ponce Enriquez shortly after his arrival here. He also met Federico Intrigo, minister of economic development, who gave him a list of proposed projects requiring up to three million dollars in U. S. loans or grants. Before going by to see former president Galo Plaza, Nixon—whose neck was shaved by a rock in Lima—stopped in a small second-class barbershop to have his hair lightly trimmed. The barber said he doesn't discuss politics with clients.

Pflimlin Asked Form A Gov't

PARIS (AP)—Pierre Pflimlin will accept President Rene Coty's request to try to form the 25th post-war government, reliable sources said today. He will go before the French Parliament for approval Tuesday. Pflimlin is expected to give his formal response to the president tonight or tomorrow. His own Catholic Popular Republican Movement decided 45-2 today to back him fully. Pflimlin sought National Assembly support for an Algerian policy roughly the same as that of the government which fell 25 days ago over Algeria. On paper, Pflimlin's policy for rebellion-torn Algeria was roughly the same as that offered by Felix Gaillard, whose government fell April 15. Pflimlin proposed negotiating a cease fire with the rebels at a time of France's choosing, to be followed after a cooling-off period by elections. By this plan, France would retain sovereignty over Algeria—the point that has caused the rebels to reject it when offered by earlier premiers with the support of a National Assembly majority.

Adjourn Meet Of Press Ass'n

KINSTON, N.C. (AP)—The spring meeting of the Eastern North Carolina Press Assn. adjourned at noon today after hearing publisher Hal Tanner of the Goldsboro News Argus and J. B. Robinson of the Jacksonville Daily News. Last night the Eastern North Carolina newsmen received praise from State Ports Director D. Leon Williams who credited the press with the success of the State Ports Authority. Williams said the ports authority and the press share the common goal of "promotion and growth of North Carolina."

Plenty Of Ships, None American

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—A group of Suffolk high school students wrote the Norfolk Propeller that they would like to drive the 20 miles to Norfolk to visit an American merchant ship. They were writing essays on "The American Merchant Marine and its Importance to the National Economy." Propeller Club members escorted them to the waterfront on busy Hampton Roads. There were plenty of ships in port but all merchant ships were foreign.

CROPS CUT BACK

SHELBY (AP)—Rain and cold weather have so retarded farm operations this spring that Cleveland County may have its smallest crop yields in two decades.

Dog Catcher Has Own Problems

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)—James Shipley reported his 13-month-old daughter was bitten by a dog—his own. Police delivered an official notice, instructing Shipley to keep his dog confined for 10 days for observation for rabies. That was no problem, Shipley is the assistant city dog catcher.

Governor Hodges To See Week Of Travel; Manteo To Miami

RALEIGH (AP)—A busy week of traveling, from Manteo to Miami, is ahead for Gov. Hodges. There'll be politicking, too, with the Democratic State Convention bringing the governor and other Tar Heel party leaders together Thursday. Office work and meetings of the Council of State and the Executive Committee of the Consolidated University of North Carolina Trustees will come Monday. Hodges and Director W. P. Saunders of the State Conservation and Development Department will be flying companions Tuesday. First they will go to Winston-Salem, where the governor will open the American Woodworking Equipment Show at noon. Charlotte will be the next stop, for dedication of a new meat packing plant. A flight to Marion will follow, with a reception at the Penland School. The return to Raleigh will come late in the evening. Hodges will hold his weekly news conference Wednesday morning. He will also take part in ceremonies at which the Navy will present to the state a set of silver from the USS North Carolina, then present awards to essay contest winners and the outstanding handicapped North Carolinian. After the State Democratic Convention on Thursday, Hodges will fly to Manteo for the annual banquet meeting of Honorary Tar Heels. A trip to Clayton is set Friday for an afternoon tour of the Union Carbide Test Farm. FOX HAS ALLIES ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP)—When three residents of Lowville Township tracked a gray fox to his den, they discovered their game was entertaining company. The fox ran out, followed by six skunks who inflicted the usual punishment of their breed on the "raiders."

Red China Ends Business Dealings With Japanese

TOKYO (AP)—Communist China notified Japan today it is suspending all business between the two nations "because of Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi's hostile attitude toward China." The head of Red China's trade delegation, which has been negotiating in Tokyo since March 30, issued a statement saying his government has stopped issuing import and export licenses to Japan. Major Japanese trading firms also were informed by cable from Shanghai that their contracts had been nullified. The action followed Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi's blistering attack on Kishi yesterday. The Japanese government termed the Communist move intervention in Japanese internal affairs. It was considered aimed at discrediting Kishi's conservative government in the May 22 general elections. "China last month nullified a 190-million-dollar trade agreement with Japan when Japan refused to grant the Communist flag diplomatic recognition in Tokyo. Li Chuo-chih, head of the Chinese delegation in Tokyo, today told Japan his delegation was discontinuing more than 40 days of negotiations "because of Kishi's hostile attitude and obstruction." Li's delegation has been negotiating for implementation of a Japan-Red China Steel agreement amounting to 200 million pounds—500 million dollars—over a five-year period, signed last February in Peiping. A contract for 150,000 tons of Japanese steel and iron had been initiated.

Indicted Congressman Fights For Re-Election

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) under indictment on charges of income tax evasion has opened an all-out fight to keep his seat in Congress. The Tammany leadership reportedly plans to dump Powell. "If Tammany Hall dumps me," the Negro congressman told the New York Daily News today, "we will name candidates from our own organization to oppose every Tammany regular up for election in this congressional district in November—and this includes assemblymen and district leaders." Yesterday the government launched a probe of possible outside influences in Powell's indictment. The indicting grand jury reportedly was prodded into action. U. S. Atty. Paul W. Williams named as target of his inquiry William F. Buckley Jr., editor of the right-wing weekly National Review, and Thomas Bolan, a former assistant U. S. attorney in Williams' office. Powell announced that Edward Bennett Williams, prominent Washington criminal lawyer, has offered to defend him. Powell said he has accepted the offer. In announcing that a grand jury subpoena has been issued to Buckley, Paul Williams said he would make an investigation "of the entire matter of any effort by the editor of the magazine to communicate with members of the Powell grand jury." Bolan, who originally handled the Powell inquiry, has not been subpoenaed. He said: "If Mr. Williams wants to take any action to reveal to the public the facts of this case, I will welcome it." The National Review took credit for reviving the investigation of Powell after the case lay dormant for 14 months. In an issue last December, the magazine said the investigation was called off by the Eisenhower administration as a "probable act of political gratitude." Powell crossed party lines two years ago to support Eisenhower. Copies of the December article allegedly were mailed to each of the 23 jurors. The probe of Powell's affairs was reopened April 17. Thursday, the jury indicted Powell on three counts of evading $3,063 in 1951-52 taxes on his own income and that of his wife, pianist Hazel Scott. That jury then was dismissed. Buckley freely admitted violating a federal law against contacting jurors on matters pending before them. He said: "We're not reluctant to take credit for stirring the grand jury up." When the grand jury reconvened, it considered for a time going over Paul Williams' head and hiring Bolan to advise it in its investigation of Powell. Bolan, now in private practice, has said he was told to drop the case by the Justice Department before he left Paul Williams' office. Had the grand jury held off until next September, the statute of limitations would have taken effect.

New Kind Of Cantor In U.S. Synagogues

By TOM HENSHAW
NEW YORK (U.P.)—A new type of cantor is beginning to make his presence felt in the more than 4,000 synagogues of American Jewry.

He still meets the age-old requirements of the Talmud. He has a "sweet voice." He is scholarly, pious and humble and modest. But, more and more, he's being trained in American cantorial schools.

And, more and more, he's becoming the musical personality of his congregation in addition to his role as a central official of worship.

Three American schools, all in New York City, are turning out cantors whose services are in high demand in the present boom in synagogue building in the suburbs.

The College-Institute School of Sacred Music has been training cantors since 1948. Its eighth graduating class next month will bring the number of American-trained cantors to 75.

The Jewish Theological Seminary started its Cantorial Institute five years ago and Yeshiva University's Cantorial Training Institute joined the ranks in 1954.

Many cantors have a mild aversion to the name cantor. They prefer the Hebrew "hazzan."

"The word cantor has too much the connotation of just a singer or an entertainer," says Hazzan David J. Puterman of the Park Avenue Synagogue in New York.

The cantor is much more than a singer. He may entertain but he is not an entertainer. His part in the Jewish service is as important as that of the rabbi.

"The rabbi is the teacher," says Puterman. "The cantor is the emissary of the people; he's the intermediary between the congregation and God."

"A cantor," says Hazzan Puterman, "should know the meaning and context of the prayers so well that a stranger to the synagogue could feel what is happening by the cantor's interpretation."

"Voice is important but there have been great cantors who have had limited voices. Their greatness lay in the fact that their interpretations inspired their congregations."

Juniors Take Seniors On Underwater Trip

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Teen Writer
Neptune, king of the sea, reigned in splendor at the Junior-Senior dance and banquet last night at the senior class's kingdom on the floorshow and decorations.

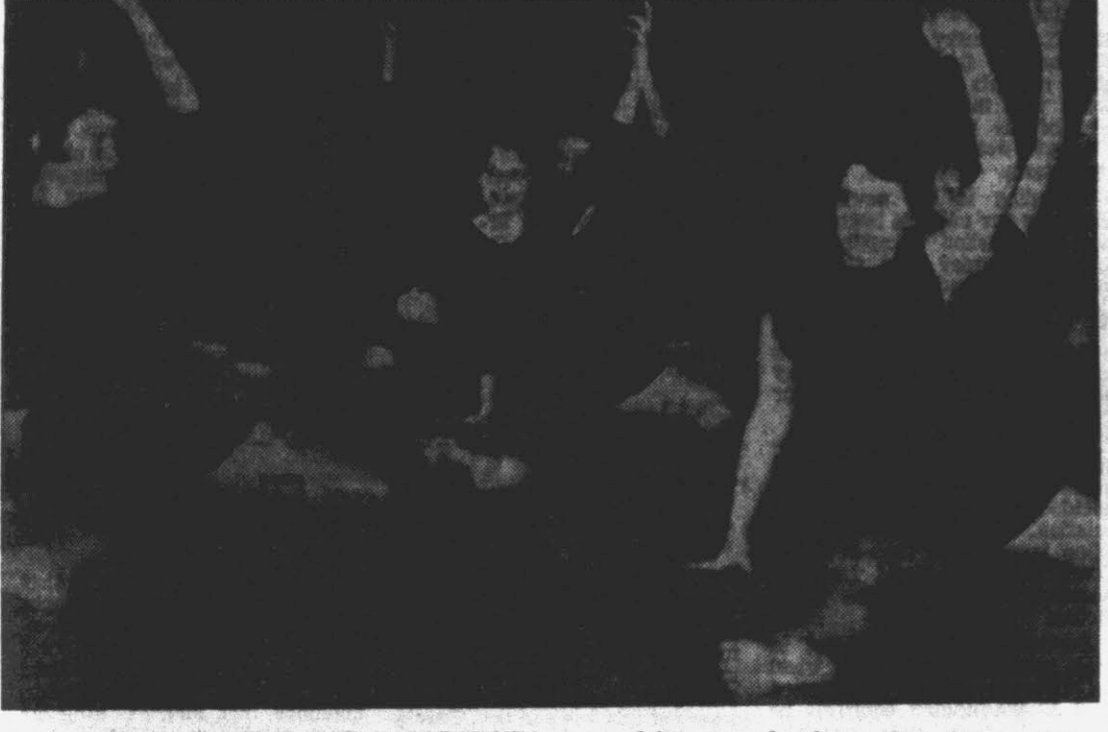

Merine Raynor, Katherine Oakes, Clara Faye Crawford, Joanne Eagles, and Nancy Berryman were the dancing goldfish.
Helen Overton, Ann Avery, Ann Podrie, and Ruth Clark, part of the sea council, sang "Deep Blue Sea."

Bryce Cummings, did a comedy routine and Patsy Jones sang "Wonderful, Wonderful."
Lobsters, Lib Rogers, Carolyn Britley, Lou Rogers, Libby Keel, Jeri McDaniels, Julia Anthony, Faye Hardee, Sally Ross Simpson, Gene Davenport, and Janey Cox, did a modern jazz number.

students who headed to the beach early this morning with hopes of proving that the weather reporters had goofed again.
Stuart Boat, Mack Roebuck, Marietta Northrup, Ginger Lang, Margaret Ruffin, Carol Tadlock and their dates spent the weekend at Margaret Sutton's cottage at Morehead.

Mrs. James, mother of the bride-elect, served the lime ice punch and the bridal cakes were served by Miss Shirley Spain. Miss Elizabeth Spain of Chocowinity also assisted in the serving.
Color pictures of the honoree, bridal table and gift table were taken by Miss Spain.

Mrs. Cox Honored At Class Meeting

PARMVILLE—Mrs. Thad Cox, wife of the former Christian Church pastor, was presented a fruit bowl from the Royal Women's Class of the church by Mrs. C. L. Ivey, president, who also read a poem she had composed for Mrs. Cox.

The class met last Friday night at the home of Mrs. Louise Harris with Mrs. L. E. Turnage in charge of the devotional. Mrs. R. K. Pippin led a program of two Bible quizzes.

Melody Batten Has Gala Birthday Party

GRIFTON—On Saturday night Miss Melody Batten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Batten, celebrated her 11th birthday by having an informal party and dance with 30 young friends as guests.

Mrs. Laura Hill was elected as the new president and Mrs. Ivey was named vice president. The other officers will continue to serve as follows: Mrs. Pippin, secretary; Mrs. L. E. Flowers, treasurer; Mrs. Louise Harris, card chairman; and Mrs. A. C. Turnage, Mrs. L. E. Turnage and Mrs. R. L. Corbitt, class teachers.

Mrs. Edwards Has Clubbers For Cards

AYDEN—Mrs. Mac Edwards entertained on Monday night at her home on Lee Street for her club members and other guests.

Three tables of bridge were played among arrangements of early spring flowers. Misses Janet and Julia Mac Edwards assisted their mother in serving a salad course.

New, Honorary Members Guests Of Garden Club

GRIFTON—On Monday afternoon members of the Griffon Garden Club were host at a tea at the home of Mrs. Clifton Jackson to honor their new and honorary members.
The home was decorated for the occasion with floral arrangements being made by members of the garden club. In the living room a color note of yellow and white was used. Yellow iris, Scotch broom, pansies and carnations were combined in the different bouquets.

Garden Club Hears Program On Care Of Flowering Shrubs

PARMVILLE—"The proper selection of shrubs that will grow in this section and give a succession of blooms all the year is vitally important," said Mrs. J. I. Morgan, Farmville Garden Club guest speaker.
Speaking on "Summer Care of Flowering Shrubs," Mrs. Morgan, who is honorary president of the club, named a number of shrubs suitable for this area and also pointed out that the sweet shrub or Sweet Betsey is excellent for its fragrance.

"Pruning, watering, spraying, mulching, and fertilizing are necessary in the care of all shrubs. Plants are like children and respond to loving care and attention. Water is most important and the mulch is to retain the moisture and prevent the growth of weeds," she explained.
Mrs. Morgan added, "Many shrubs are shallow rooted and chopping with a hoe will injure the roots, so pull up the weeds that come through the mulch. Often when plants look sick it is in need of fertilizing. Gardeners have to know the kind of soil a plant needs."

Mad Hatters Brunch

The Home Department of the Woman's Club is sponsoring a Mad Hatters Brunch to be given at the Woman's Club Wednesday at 10:30 a.m.
Prizes will be awarded for the smallest, most original, funniest, and biggest hats. A door prize will also be given. Tickets may be obtained from members of the Woman's Club or by calling 4922. Tickets will also be sold at the door Wednesday morning. A menu consisting of ham biscuits, doughnuts, and coffee will be served at this brunch which is open to the public.

Each new member was presented a corsage for the occasion. Honorary members present were Mrs. Ralph Epps, Mrs. Herbert C. Gravely and Mrs. William Linke.

Delta Kappa Gamma Honors Dr. Turner

Dr. Lucile Turner, one of the state founders and the founder of Delta Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, was honored Thursday by Delta Chapter at the final meeting of the school year.

The dinner meeting held at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church was attended by members of Delta Chapter from Greenville, Washington, Ayden, Belhaven and Grimesland. Miss Ona Shindler, former member, was a special guest.

Miss Mary Thomas Smith, president, presided. Miss Laura Bell reported on the highlights of the state convention which was held in Winston-Salem May 3-4 and at which Mrs. Nettie B. Herring, state president, presided.

A tribute to the national founders of Delta Kappa Gamma was given by Mrs. Elizabeth Mims in commemoration of Founders Day, May 11, 1929. In paying tribute to the state founders, Dr. Lucile Turner was thanked for her great contribution to the organization.

On behalf of the chapter, Miss Frances Wahl presented Dr. Turner with a silver pitcher. Dr. Turner is retiring from her position as chairman of the English Department at East Carolina College at the end of the first summer term. In responding to the tribute, Dr. Turner presented "Living Ideals of Delta Kappa Gamma" the theme of which was "It is good to learn from those who counsel well."

New Officers
New officers of Delta Chapter were installed at the close of the meeting. They were: president, Mrs. Sally Klingenschmitt; 1st vice president, Annie Mae Murray; 2nd vice president, Eunice McGee; corresponding secretary, Laura Bell; recording secretary, Mrs. Guyia Clark; treasurer, Ruby Edens; and parliamentarian, Mrs. Antoinette Jenkins.

On Beverly Dunn's houseparty were Martha Moye, Dee Gardner, Milly Bowden, Ann Moore, Judy Jolly, Ray Lane, Margaret Harrell, Florence Norman, Anne Parkinson, Catherine Moore, Julia Anthony, Cathy Barrett, Maritha Hice, and Delores Basso.

The fearless four, Dick Evans, Don Wilkerson, Billy Brown, and Ed Buchanan, were among some of the boys who are staying in a motel near Morehead. Joe Moye, Howard Garner, Walker Allen, Billy Boyd Cox, and Merrill Bynum are also staying in a motel.

Naomi Gibbs, Jean Ann Waters, Iona Jones, Joyce Sutton, Sandra Phillips, Owen Johnson, Claudette Wilson, Jane Bass, Bunny Overton, Yvonne Allen, JoAnne Parker, Rebecca Highsmith, and Martha Pierce are some more of the crowd who went to Morehead.

Sara Smiley was one of many who invited students to be her guests at the beach.

'Til September To Find An Answer

Whether federal troops will be returned to guard Little Rock Central High School next September is a moot question which should concern every American.

President Eisenhower has announced federal troops will be removed from the school on May 29—the day after the regular school term closes. Whether federal troops will return next fall the President did not say. Apparently the Chief Executive's decision will be determined by conditions in Little Rock when Central High students go back to the classes next September.

From the children's standpoint, it should be hoped that the federal government will not order its troops back to the school.

Since last September students at Central High have gone to school under the watchful eye of federal troops. Attending classes under such conditions—plus the other distractions that have occurred at the school since the forced integration order—is bound have taken its toll of student attention to classroom courses.

At the time President Eisenhower ordered federal troops into the Little Rock school, the Reflector expressed the opinion that federal troops were not the answer to the school and integration problem in Little Rock. Neither was the previous action by Arkansas Gov. Faubus the answer.

Cautious View Given Proposal

By LYNN NISBET
SHORT BALLOT — In side-stepping a positive statement on the merits of the Bell Bar Association committee's tentative proposal for appointing judges instead of electing them, Governor Hodges may have given some intimation of his stand on the whole matter of a "short ballot."

The Governor told newsmen that he would not comment directly on the proposal until he had seen a copy of the report containing the widely publicized recommendation that Supreme and Superior Court Judges be appointed on nomination of the Judicial Council instead of being elected by the people.

"Chances are the public has no desire to change the method of selecting judges," he said. "I do not." He added that he understood the proposal had been made by a subcommittee and might not be approved by the whole commission. He voiced further hope that emphasis on this one point will not detract attention from some sorely needed court reforms.

The Governor's cautious comment has significance because of its probable reflection of his position on other governmental reorganization issues. Opinion is widespread that the commission on reorganization of State government and the commission on amending the constitution are considering recommendations that several officers of the executive branch be made appointive rather than elective.

UNPOPULAR — Rumors were circulated in late 1957 that the reorganization commission then functioning planned to recommend appointment of the Secretary of State, the Treasurer, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and the Commissioner of Agriculture; Labor and Insurance — probably the Auditor — leaving only the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and Attorney General to be elected.

Public reaction was emphatically negative, and if the commission ever thought about recommending that change the idea was quickly abandoned. (Similar recommendation had been made by the Brookings Institution in its reorganization study a quarter century ago.)

Neither of the commissions on reorganizing government or revising the constitution have released any progress reports, and Governor Hodges said at his news conference he had not heard from them. It is unlikely any authentic information will be available until late summer or fall.

Many States follow more closely than does North Carolina the Federal pattern of permitting the Governor to appoint his "cabinet," comparable to our Council of State. North Carolinians have insisted upon electing their officials. However, executive control has been achieved by legislative acts transferring more and more authority from elective to appointive officials, and by increasing the number of administrative agencies managed by appointees.

NO CUTS — General fund revenue receipts for the current fiscal year are holding up to just about legislative estimates. That means there is no apparent need for a horizontal reduction of legislative allocations by the Director of the Budget—as authorized in event revenue falls below estimates upon which the appropriations were based. However, the budget office has warned agency, department and institution heads to tighten their belts. In a few instances amounts appropriated by the Legislature have been reduced for actual spending, in the discretion of the budget office. Governor Hodges, who is director of the budget, said all agencies have shown fine cooperation in holding down expenses.

SUPREME COURT — The state Supreme Court has only one more week of arguments before closing the spring term. One criminal and six civil cases will be heard on May 20-21. Final stated opinion day for the term is set for May 21. At that time the court will announce another date or dates for opinions to be handed down.

Only three cases were decided in the opinions released Wednesday of this week. Two of them of all opinion writers in concept were "Per Curiam," who is rapidly becoming the most loved of all opinion writers in concept of newsmen who have to write stories about opinions. "Per Curiam" means "by the court," and there is no indication as to which member wrote the text. Opinions by Judge Per Curiam have perhaps somewhat more prestige because there is no doubt about complete concurrence of all the judges. Usually they are short and to the point. As literature they cannot compare with the 15 to 30 pages of text in some individually written opinions, which sometimes quote poetry and excerpts from the classics, as well as free use of colloquialisms and idioms.

During the long tenure of Chief Justice Walter Stacy Per Curiam opinions were rare. Chief Justice William A. Devin and Maurice V. Barnhill made more use, but still sparingly, of Judge Per Curiam. Chief Justice Wallace Winborne is working Per Curiam. Chief Justice Wallace Winborne is working Per Curiam pretty hard. The lawyers and the reporters like it that way.

Chief Justice Winborne inaugurated another slight change in the mechanics of releasing opinions. Each member of the court has a distinctive color for the cover of his text. Used to be that per curiam opinions bore the cover of the justice writing them. Now they have a distinct color of their own. Experienced reporters can tell at a glance who wrote which opinion—and the deep orange of Judge Per Curiam is the most popular.

Certainly the situation in the Little Rock school will not be improved by the presence of federal troops there for another school year.

The President, Gov. Faubus and the citizens of Little Rock have had nine months now to consider the situation which has existed at the school. Certainly the unfortunate, unpleasant and unnecessary conditions which have existed at the school for the past nine months should not be repeated next September.

If by September a more constructive answer to the complex situation has not been found by the people involved, then they haven't been trying to find a better answer.

Something Good Can Come In A Recession

The relatively small decline from last year in the employment of June college graduates is another indication America's economic condition is far from being as bad as some hysterical voices have shouted.

Some 300 hirings were announced by the UNC Placement Service through April, as compared to 336 on the same date last year. The difference is small.

The director of the Service reports stiffer competition in finding jobs. A factor which works two ways: prospective employers can choose the more promising prospects from the new crop of hopefuls and future jobholders are reminded they must prepare themselves for that competition.

An added value is being attached to jobs these days, which is a good thing; and added value is being attached to serving the consumer, which is fine. Importance is being laid on economizing, the streamlining of procedures, improving of products, planning for the future and firming up the present.

All of these are philosophies inherent in good business practices and have contributed immeasurably to our economic stability in the past.

As a result we can see this country emerging from its mild recession period stronger and better prepared for future growth and prosperities.

Recessions are not all bad.

We Can't Ignore The Physicians' Advice

North Carolina cannot ignore the request of its physicians that polio vaccinations be made compulsory for all children from two months to six years of age.

The State Medical Society at its annual meeting in Asheville has made it a matter of record that it supports the compulsory program of polio vaccinations for children of that specific age group.

If the people of the state and their government are to ignore the advice of the doctors of the state in matters of this sort, where will they turn for advice?

At the earliest possible date, North Carolina should follow the recommendation of the State Medical Society and make polio vaccinations compulsory for young children.

Climax Reached In Nixon Ordeal

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — The stoning and spitting inflicted on Vice President Nixon in Peru Thursday was the climax to a series of unpleasant situations in every one of the five Latin American countries he has visited.

No doubt the Soviet Union will have a propaganda field day with what's happened to him. The antagonism he has encountered was perhaps in great measure Communist-inspired. But it would be too easy and comfortable to think the Reds did it all. Nixon himself said "there is a very considerable lack of understanding" in Latin America about United States policies and motives. Why? Perhaps a congressional investigation will attempt to get answers.

In all five countries he has visited — Nixon has received requests — direct or indirect — for more American economic help. Nixon's whole Latin-American trip, and its events, raised two immediate questions:

1. Was the trip wise in the first place? Surely the State Department must have known there was some broad anti-American feeling in Latin America and there might be unpleasant episodes. Perhaps it misjudged how unpleasant they would be.

2. Is American policy and propaganda in the area a failure or so badly handled that, despite help from this country, resentment is growing? And, of course, there's the question: What can be done about it?

A short rundown on Nixon's trip shows what happened: He arrived in Uruguay April 28. He got a 21-gun salute, shouts of praise, and jeers. Students from the National University shouted "Out with Nixon." They condemned him as a representative of "North American imperialism."

Uruguay, in an economic crisis, is dickering with the Soviet Union for trade. The trade of this small country — 2½ million people — with the United States has dropped off. Then he flew to Argentina to attend the inaugural of President Arturo Frondizi. He was so badly slowed up by traffic he arrived late for the ceremony and was jeered when he did arrive.

The official receptions he got everywhere, of course, were friendly. He got a 21-gun salute in Paraguay but several students were arrested for crying "Long live liberty." This slogan was described as Communist by the military dictator of Paraguay, President Alfredo Stroessner.

Nixon was welcomed to Bolivia with a shower of confetti and pamphlets telling him to go home and proclaiming "death to the high cost of living imposed by the Yankees."

When Nixon got to Peru — where there's much unemployment and growing anti-Americanism — his reception was cool, and with jeers.

The New York Times reported that one newspaper, anti-Communist but leftist, declared editorially that while opposition to Nixon was fomented by a Communist fifth column, much of the Peruvian resentment was due to the "frustrations and bitterness that the United States created among genuinely democratic groups friendly to the U. S. people, such as ourselves."

Some of the causes for the anti-Americanism listed by the paper: alleged U. S. support for Latin American dictatorships and economic policies injurious to the region.

There had been widespread criticism of this country recently in Peru, Mexico and Bolivia after the U. S. Tariff Commission proposed higher tariffs on lead and zinc, major exports of those countries.

The climax to the disastrous trip was reached when Nixon and his party — sought to enter San Marcos University, where he wanted to talk with the students. He was greeted with stones, fruit and spit. A floral American flag was torn up.

Nixon was followed along the streets by jeering crowds. This, he said, was "day of infamy." It's also a day which didn't make the United States look good.

Here are more look-aheads in business, based on analyses of developing trends:

Tax trims. Congressional sentiment is growing stronger for cuts in excise and transportation taxes as a means of stimulating business. However, cuts in income taxes are less likely than ever.

Smooth lines. Manufacturers of furniture, household furnishings and other products are studying reports that consumers are rebelling against excessive trim on autos. As a consequence, many will try to avoid the same mistake.

More mergers. Recent licks in sales and profits are causing more companies to consider mergers. When financial stringency is the cause, there is less likelihood of government or stockholder objections.

COSTLIER JUICE, MEAT
Juice price rise. Florida citrus production has not snapped back from the effects of the rough winter. There have been several rises in the price of juice and

Logic Reaches A City

By JACK RUTLEDGE
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Confusion is the order of the day in Mexico City's street names and house numbers.

But not for long. The Mexicans soon will install a new system so simple even the latest arriving tourist will be able to find his way around.

He'll not only know where he is but how far and in what direction he has to go to find what he's looking for.

The radical but logical system was devised by Enrique Elias True, the well-to-do owner of a heavy equipment agency. It has been patented in both Mexico and the United States.

It's already being put into effect in Acapulco and several United States cities have shown an interest.

Cabbies Confused
Mexico City certainly needs it. The current system — if there is one — is so confusing that even veteran taxi drivers get lost.

For instance, there are 20 streets named Juarez. Some streets change names five or six times in a mile. As to numbers — well, 324 may be just next door to 32.

The new system will end all that. It works like this: The center of the city, established by presidential decree in 1950, is the intersection of Tacuba, Puente de Alvarado, San Juan de Letran, and Sta. Maria la Redonda.

All numbers will branch from there. And they will be more than just numbers. They will represent the actual number of meters (slightly more than a yard) away from the center of the city.

If a building is located 357 meters away, that will be its number.

Next, the city will be divided into north, south, east and west zones. Street signs in each will be colored differently. For example, north may be purple, south gold, east blue, west red.

Thus, if the street sign is purple, and a nearby number is 1610, you're just about a mile north of the center of town. But that's not all.

The signs, about 20 by 20 inches and clearly visible, will have two arrows. The top one will be small, and will indicate the progression of numbers. If the number is 1132, and you want 1157, you follow the arrow. If you want 967, you go contrary to the arrow.

Traffic Arrows
The large arrow is for traffic purposes. It will indicate the direction of the traffic flow. A red arrow will mean avenues, a green arrow ordinary streets.

Under the second large arrow will be the area's zone number. Any tourist with a map showing zones can easily pinpoint his location.

Next, and very important, will be the name of the street in large letters. This is going to be a major problem — renaming streets.

Officials promise that under the new system, streets will keep their names, not change every few blocks — and no two streets will have the same name.

The street name idea goes a step further: a small block at the bottom of the street sign will give a brief biographical sketch of the person for whom the street is named.

Experts believe this new system will make Mexico's street sign and numbering system the most perfect in the world.

Opinions In Brief

"Over a period of years we have entered into many agreements with Russia, and the records show that Russia has violated these time and time again. In consequence, we can't depend on Russia's word and most certainly we shouldn't when the whole future of civilization is virtually at stake in the gamble." — Argus-Leader, Sioux Falls, S.C.

More Look-Aheads For Business

Costlier beef. The shortage of red meat is being worsened by hoarding by owners of freezers, including restaurants and suppliers. The basic cause of the shortage is the desire of growers to rebuild herds cut by the drought.

Chicken bargains. Supplies of poultry this spring and summer now appear abundant. There will be some increase in demand as a consequence of high meat prices, but poultry supplies seem large enough to expect considerable price weakness.

No quick jobless aid. Congress is doing more waiting-and-seeing in the unemployment situation. It still hopes an upturn will make it unnecessary to extend benefits to 39 weeks, or to provide payments to those not covered.

Items They Worry About

Riding home from work last night I was lucky enough to find out some of the things the top-notch officials in Washington are doing with their time while the rest of the world awaits their strategic decisions in domestic and international affairs.

According to the news commentator our nation's lawmakers had been asked to appropriate $15,000 in order that the bird problem around the Supreme Court Building might be alleviated. The appropriation provided for some sort of shock system to specifically discourage any bird from "resting" on, near or over the law building.

Following several closed sessions, the commentator said, and hours of research, the legislators decided not to make the appropriation. Their reason—the birds when taunted at the Supreme Court Building would just fly across the square to the White House.

Another problem was put to high government officials when an Oregon senator requested that 10 Washington squirrels be "loaned" to his state for show of some sort. The senator guaranteed that his home state would take excellent care of the imported nutcrackers even to go so far as to build them a miniature White House so they would not get homesick.

Following several closed sessions, the commentator said, and hours of research, officials declined. Their reason: since the squirrels seemed happy and content in Washington, they saw no need to upset their daily routines.

City police had two unusual cases last week.

One night a woman called and informed the desk sergeant that there was something in her backyard keeping her family awake. A police car was rushed out to find out the nature of the trouble.

It didn't take long for officers to find the troublemaker. They said it was a little frog who paid little attention to their presence as he paid his homage to a beautiful Spring night.

Detectives were called upon to solve a regular "whodunit". It seems someone had pulled up a handful of flowers and some vegetables in a local resident's yard.

The villain remains unpunished according to the last word from investigating officers!

Walking down East Third Street not too long ago I witnessed what I considered a rather unusual incident.

In the middle of the street there was a stalled pickup truck and two men sponging gas from a large tank, situated in the rear of the vehicle, into its tank while traffic zoomed by.

As I continued on my way I thought to myself what a wonderful thing it is to be prepared.

There was at least one good businessman at last weekend's

Boy Scout Camporee, besides Erroll Webb who was in charge of the Trading Post.

I have been told that one Scout brought a truckload of drinks and "goodies" with him and managed to do a right sizable amount of business during the three day event. It seems he would open his store when the Trading Post closed and vice-versa.

Despite "competition", the Trading Post did over $3,000 worth of business, Webb said with a smile.

Other Editors Saying --- That Senseless Shortage

(Dallas Times Herald)

Secondary schoolteachers, if the National Education Assn. may be believed, will still be in "critical" shortage next fall. The public should be growing weary of this hue and cry. Teachers are scarce in some areas of the nation, though not in Dallas. But this situation has been dragging for a decade. It could have been remedied long ago. Main reasons why it has not should be obvious.

School boards find plenty of money for architecturally splendid buildings, for gymnasiums, multiple auditoriums, swimming pools, lounges, stadiums, park-sized playgrounds and dozens of other frills and non-essentials. But few school systems can "afford" to pay their teachers salaries commensurate with their training and ability. Most of the public has gone along with this patent nonsense.

Another thing that has reduced the supply of potential new teachers is the excessive emphasis on pedagogy rather than knowledge of the subject to be taught. Albert Einstein would not have been qualified to teach mathematics in many public school systems. He would not have had a sufficient number of hours on college transcript in courses on how to teach and maintain classroom records.

Arbitrary pedagogical requirements not only bar many competent college graduates from teaching jobs, but mean that many teachers are not as well versed in their subjects as they should be.

Basically what is wrong is that too many of us have not thought it important that our children have the ablest teachers that money can buy. We have had more regard for impressive buildings, hot lunches, athletics and a blissful social life for our children than for able, dedicated teachers who are trying to impart learning to younger generations. Any time the public, in Dallas or Podunk, wants to end the teacher "crisis" and step up the quality of education it can do so by insisting that commonsense prevail.

SHOULD BE GROUNDED (Memphis Commercial Appeal)

A judge in the Los Angeles area recently sentenced a young actor to spend 15 days in jail for speeding. The man had been stopped seven times previously for moving violations and had been served with warrants in five of these cases. The record is clearly that of a driver who is unwilling or unable to abide by the rules of traffic. In all fairness, we think, he should be grounded for a long time, if not forever. The guess is that a driver of this sort will kill somebody in due time unless drastic moves to the contrary are made.

In talking with a veteran traffic officer from another Southern state not long ago we got from him the devout wish that people would regard reckless use of a car as they do reckless use of a gun. He pointed out that a heavy car, driven at high speed, is a weapon more dangerous than most guns. It is something to think about.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, MAY 10, 1958

SUNDAY IMPORTANT DAY . . . to Mrs. N. G. Dean and many other mothers all over the country.

WELCOMES CHILDREN . . . little Gordon and Mrs. Dean greet William, Norman, and Bobby back home after a day at school.

Mom's Day Is A 24-Hour Proposition

Every day is really "Mothers' Day," but once a year there's a special day set aside to honor these devoted women.

Besides messages, gifts, and visits from their children on this day the United States honors them by presenting the national flag on all public buildings.

This special day has only been observed for 44 years, Congress first acknowledged it in 1914.

A day in the life of any mother involves a busy schedule . . . and there's no such thing as a "typical" mother just as there's no "typical" daily routine for one to follow.

Mrs. N. G. Dean's day is probably unlike that of many mothers.

One thing her day has in common with them all, she says, and that is "it is a 24 hour proposition."

Another likeness is her household chores, except she washes more clothes than most.

"With four sons and a husband in my family, I have quite an unusual amount of clothes to be washed each day," she pointed out.

She adds, "When I complete my household duties, the afternoon is free to spend with friendly neighbors.

"We've lived in Greenville for sometime and there's always someone trying to make my family feel welcomed and at home.

"Sgt. Dean, being an Air Force recruiter, is sent to different places; therefore, we are constantly moving.

"Being a bit superstitious, I have found a way in which to know when we will receive orders to move. Whenever there are flowers planted and they bloom; immediately afterwards, we have received moving orders for the past fifteen years.

"After marriage and becoming a mother doesn't mean that there is never any time to call your own, because, there is. In spare time there are a few hobbies which I enjoy," mentioned Mrs. Dean.

Collecting antiques and old money are two hobbies which Mrs. Dean enjoys but the most outstanding of her hobbies is reading.

With three of the four children in school, she is a member of the Parent-Teachers Association and also an incoming officer of the local Junior Woman's Club.

Is motherhood a rewarding profession?

Mrs. Dean noted, "By having a family of all boys I've learned many things I never knew before becoming a mother because I came from a family of all girls. Motherhood has certainly been rewarding in every way."

MORNING CHORES . . . vacuuming the carpet is one of many household duties.

YOUNGSTER HELPS TOO . . . during wash day Gordon comes in handy in helping bring clothes from out-of-doors.

HAS TIME FOR HOBBIES . . . one of which is collecting antiques from various places where Mrs. Dean and her family have lived.

Looking For More Trouble Between Soviet, Belgrade

By JOHN M. NIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. officials look for more trouble between the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia, with the possibility that the Soviets may use economic sanctions against the independent Communist country.

Speculation that the Moscow-Belgrade row would seriously affect the Soviet's attitude toward a summit conference with the Western powers. However, some authorities consider it likely that Khrushchev would prefer not to go into a summit meeting when he was having serious difficulties in his satellite territory.

found followers in other, Soviet-controlled countries. How far Khrushchev will find it necessary to go in the present situation is the big question now. Speculation here is that he may slow down or cut off altogether the Soviet's program of economic assistance to Yugoslavia. The aid program, in which other Soviet bloc countries are participating, has an undelivered balance of about 260 million dollars, including an aluminum plant and a nuclear reactor which Tito was promised.

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I can't retire—I'm too old!" That's George Burns' pleasant illogical explanation of why he is going to carry on despite Grace Allen's retirement.

Grace. "Grace really had to work harder than I did," he said. "Our scripts would run about 49 pages and she'd be in about 37 of them. And her lines were always nonsensical, which are the hardest to memorize."

Brand New Town May Die Soon

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—A town called Horse Shu was born in Nevada yesterday, but it may die before it's a month old.

The new town, located north of here on the Nevada-Idaho border, has a population of about 65. Almost the entire population works in four gambling clubs.

Mothers Prefer To Stay At Home

BOSTON (AP)—Boston has cancelled its traditional mothers day observance on Boston Common at the request of a group of mothers.

Grace F. W. B. Announcements

Sunday School begins at 9:45 each Sunday morning. You are invited to come with us this coming Sunday. Honor your mother by being in God's house on the day set aside for such an occasion.

Countdown On Recession Is Fascinating Business

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The countdown on the recession is still one of the most fascinating games for business today.

The current rate of business decline. The New York Federal Reserve Bank in its May review notes this but sees little positive evidence that the leveling-off point is near.

The bank also finds it "inadvisable to count very heavily on near-term help from consumers." Their spending continues high but not in the areas where the industrial slump hurts most.

Congresswoman Refuses Stay Home Or Fire Her Secretary

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Minnesota Congresswoman Coys Knutson said today she will seek a third term and rejected a second demand by her husband to fire her 29-year-old executive secretary, William Kjeldahl.

Her husband, Andrew, 50, who earlier demanded she quit Congress and come home, saying Kjeldahl had exercised dictatorial powers over Mrs. Knutson and that "the decisions that are made are not hers but Kjeldahl's."

She said she considers her family life normal for two people whose interests developed differently—her husband favoring a small town life and she preferring public life.

Nears Half-Way In 'Space Trip'

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Lt. Cmdr. Jack Neiman Jr. neared the half-way point of his "space flight" here today and scientists watching him in the sealed low pressure chamber said he should easily make the full trip of 48 hours.

Joint Disclosure On Air Defense

WASHINGTON (AP)—Canada and the United States are expected to announce Monday joint arrangements for repelling any Soviet air attack on the North American continent.

Christian Church Announcements

At the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday morning the pastor will speak on the theme "Mothers, Yesterday and Today" and the solo of the morning will be sung by J. G. Proctor Jr. He has chosen to sing Malotte's "For My Mother."

New Reservoir Gradually Filling

BROWNLEE, Idaho (AP)—Water is backing up from one of the privately built dams in the controversial Hells Canyon stretch of the Snake River.

W.S.C.S. Circles

The Circles of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church will meet as follows:

Award Presented To ECC Senior

Robert E. Mitchell, East Carolina College senior from Washington, N.C., has been named winner of The Wall Street Journal Student Achievement Award.

Uneasy Haiti May Find Peace If Outlaw Exiled

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Shootings and bombings that have held Haiti in a state of siege for the last week may end with the exile soon of former Senator Louis Dejoie, observers said today.

Dejoie, long a dominant political figure in this turbulent Caribbean Negro republic, is officially an outlaw and is in refuge in the Mexican embassy.

Dejoie lost last September's election to Duvalier and promptly charged fraud. The 62-year-old plantation owner went into hiding then but came out briefly in February after Duvalier proclaimed a general amnesty.

The government moved yesterday to restore normal relations with the United States by giving official assurances of protection to U.S. Ambassador Gerald Drew. The area around his house was spattered with rifle fire Wednesday night but no one inside was hurt.

Court Unamused; Pretender Pays

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Harry A. Deadman was fined $15 after he pretended to be dead drunk.

The 19-year-old youth was lifted into a squad car when he was found on the street, apparently helpless. Deadman sobbed immediately and explained he merely was amusing himself by pretending to be drunk.

Flirting With Fatal Chances

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—Joseph P. Lipinski Jr. of Flagstaff figures the best place for him is home in bed.

While fishing in the Gulf of California his boat capsized 15 miles off shore. He was rescued after several hours in the water.

SOME SLIPS DON'T SHOW

By A.A. FAIR (Eric Stanley Gardner)

CHAPTER 5

"How did George find out about Barclay Fisher?" I asked Louis Marlow.

She said with some feeling, "Three doors down the corridor, in Apartment 31, is a man by the name of Horace Dutton. He's married to a snob by the name of Caroline, Caroline is George's cousin. She also inherited money from the same source George did—a deceased grandfather. I wish both Horace and Caroline would get themselves departed, get smashed up in an automobile accident, or drown. I wouldn't care which."

"They keep an eye on you?"

"Horace is a friend of George Cadott," she said. "Horace Dutton could be a good egg if he had a chance. He'll never be anything as long as he's with Caroline. Dutton is a halfway screwball. Caroline gives him what passes for affection and monthly allowance. Horace pines. He's very friendly with George Cadott. Caroline is syrupy to my face and vinegar behind my back. She'd turn anyone's disposition to hydrochloric acid inside of a week."

"Horace Dutton saw Barclay Fisher when he was leaving my apartment. Dutton dutifully confided what he had seen to Caroline. Caroline yackity-yacked to George. George came over here breathing fire. I'd had a man in my apartment all night. I had become a strumpet."

"All right, I told him off. I told him I'd live my life the way I pleased, that he didn't own me and that I didn't want to be owned."

"And then?"

"He kept snooping around. He found someone who was at the convention. He found that I had been paying attentions to this Barclay Fisher."

"And why had you done that?" I asked.

"Because," she said, "Carl Jensen gave me two hundred and fifty dollars to be decorative in an agreeable. He wanted me to flatter Barclay Fisher because Fisher is working some kind of a motorboat deal where Jensen thought his Thrustmore Motor would find a happy home."

"Personally I wish I'd never seen the two hundred and fifty bucks, or Barclay Fisher. For a while I was having a good time. I needed the dough and that's that."

"Subsequently you patched things up with George?" I asked.

"Subsequently I did nothing of the kind. I haven't seen him since I threw him out of the apartment. But he'll come back."

"And when he does, he's going to finance your millinery shop?"

"Sure he is. But first he's going to apologize."

"Will he apologize if he knows you were paid to entertain customers at a convention?"

"What do you mean, entertain?"

"You used the word."

"I kept his glass full. I built up his ego."

"That was all?"

"That was all."

"Where do I find George Cadott?"

"Anywhere you think you can find him. Personally, I'm willing to bet you won't. I intend to see that you don't."

"You didn't know he'd written Barclay Fisher a letter?"

"Heavens, no!"

"Are you going to let him know it now?"

"That depends."

"Will you," I asked, "tell him that I'm in town and that if he makes one more move to follow up on that letter, if he writes anything that Mrs. Fisher gets hold of, if he writes any more letters to anyone and sends them through the mail, he's going to find himself in so much trouble he never will get out?"

"You make your own threats," she said.

"I can't make them if I can't see him."

"That's right."

"If you're going to tip him off, why not make them for me?"

"Because," she said smiling, "in case you don't know it, Donald, that's not the best way to get financing for a millinery business. And now, if you'll be a good boy and get out of here, I'll start mending some fences and—Well, the ultimate effect of what I'm doing may be to help your client."

"On my way," I told her.

She saw me to the door.

"Bye now," I said. "Be a good girl."

She made a little face. "Save the last. Leave that for George. That's his line. However, for your information, I'm going to be."

It wasn't too difficult to locate George's apartment. He had left about an hour before I arrived. The clerk said he'd phoned to say he'd be away a few days. His car was a sports job. I had a description of the car and the license number.

If George wanted to be hard to find, I wasn't going to be able to contact him in the usual manner. I could trust Lois for that.

I got busy on the telephone. I found an art dealer who knew Horace Dutton. He had some of Dutton's paintings on consignment. I asked a few questions, said it was the wrong Dutton, and hung the Sahara. The price was fifty-seven dollars. It looked like a fried egg that had been broken in transit. The artist could have painted it with the seat of his pants.

I stood off and looked at it. I turned my head to one side. Then I turned my head to the other side. I made a circle of my thumb and forefinger. I held it in front of my eyes. I brought it closer. Then I took it farther back.

The dealer would have been blind not to have spotted my antics. "Like it?" he asked, purring up to me.

"There's a haunting something about it."

"Isn't there?"

"You get the effect of glare."

"You can do."

"It has a sound cockeyed to you."

I told him, "but I'd like to see what a vivid, purple frame would do for it."

"A purple frame? I never heard of it!"

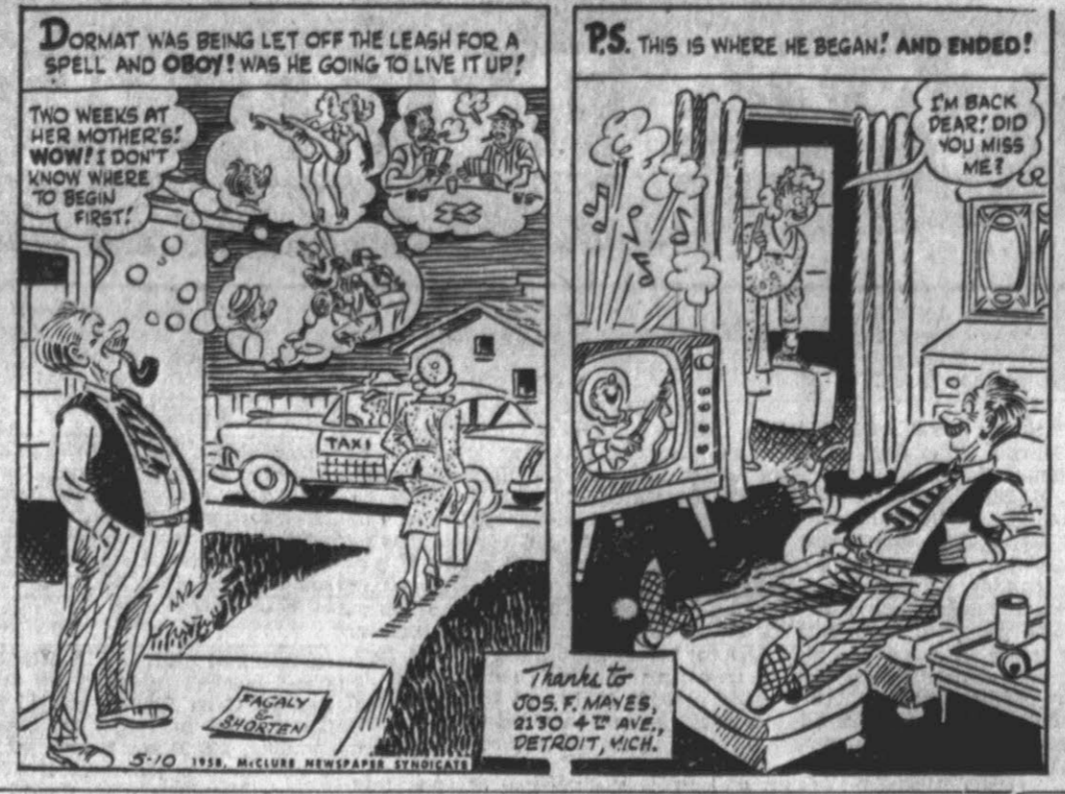

"Nature," I said, "gives shadows a purplish tinge. When the eye up. Then I went down to the art dealer's place and looked around. This dealer featured the modernistic, cubist art. In my opinion, it was terrible. I found a "painting" that bore the scrawl of Horace Dutton.

It was entitled "Sun Over the gets tired of sunlight, it conjures up a purple tone as a means of relaxing the overstrained optic nerve. That's why shadows seem so restful on a vivid, sunlit day."

The guy didn't contradict me. Anyone who knew the first rudiments of salesmanship wouldn't have contradicted a potential customer for a Horace Dutton "Sun Over the Sahara" at fifty-seven dollars.

So far, my scheme looked good. (To Be Continued)

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSBERG

Probably because everybody, or practically everybody, thought that James Cozens' "By Love Possessed" would win this year's Pulitzer Prize as the best American novel of 1957, it didn't. The judges picked "A Death in the Family," by James Agee, who died three years ago, incidentally. His story concerns the reactions of a southern family to the death of the father, and although it won the Prize it has never become a big best seller. . . . The South was deeply involved in this year's awards, we might add, a fact which certainly speaks well for our region as a producer of good literature. Ketti Frings' adaptation of Tom Wolfe's "Look Homeward Angel" won the nod as the best play, and it is still running on Broadway. Three prizes for newspaper reporting also went to this region—Harry Ashmore, executive editor of the Arkansas Gazette of Little Rock, for his editorials on the integration crisis, to the Gazette itself for the way it covered the story, and to Pat Morin, the writer who reported the events that occurred last September in Little Rock for the AP. . . . Even though the Prizes are given up north, out of Columbia University, the South certainly had its share this year, something we're glad to report to y'all. . . .

Popular but Literary

The Saturday Evening Post currently is carrying a series of articles called "Adventures of the Mind," consisting of expert opinions on various aspects of our intellectual and literary life by well-known scholars and authorities in various fields. We recommend the series to you—as the Post editors wrote us, it's an attempt to bridge the wide gap that exists between the intellectuals—the college professors and people like that—and ordinary citizens who are bothered by simply earning a living (not that college professors aren't bothered by that too). Anyway, with such highly thought-of intellectuals as Physicist J. R. Oppenheimer, Architect Walter Gropius and Humanist Jacques Barzun contributing we can guarantee that the articles will be— or are now being—stimulating and authoritative and we are all for popular magazines like the SEP carrying this kind of stuff so that a wide audience can appreciate it. . . .

On Words

Some of you no doubt have come across the new word invented by the space experts who have recently compiled a glossary of terms for use in referring to the phenomena occurring in outer space. . . . It means "a substance that theoretically cannot exist or that cannot be produced by present technology," and the word is "Unobtainium." We would like to suggest another meaning for this word: "Money" . . .

Local Orchids

Miss Emma Hooper, author of the recently produced and very successful pageant depicting the history of E.C.C., "East Carolina's Spade," wants us to tell you all how very deeply she appreciates everything the many folks did who were associated with the project. . . . Particularly, she'd like us to throw a few extra orchids at Miss Wahl and Miss Chauxney of the Wahl-Coates School, who coached the children's choir that contributed so much to the show. . . . And orchids also go to the Women's Club for sponsoring Thursday's Sidewalk Art Show—again it was one of the pleasantest events of the season here, something really fitting to usher in the spring weather. Now all we need is the weather, of course.

Today's Review

Your Communist says a word about Edna Ferber's latest book, published a few short weeks ago and already a best-seller. . . .

ICE PALACE, by Edna Ferber, Garden City, N. Y.: Doubleday & Co., 1958.

If you want to read an exciting account of the settling and development of Alaska, replete with vivid descriptions and a stirring plea for statehood for a territory that has long since deserved it, then ICE PALACE is the book for you.

If you want a well-knit plot, strongly developed characters, fascinating suspense and a satisfying ending to a well-told story, then it isn't Miss Ferber, in her anxiety to present the case for Alaskan statehood in a convincing and compelling manner—we prophesy that the book should have some effect on this long overdue decision—has forgotten to write a novel. She even loses interest in her characters at times, and occasionally her story line shrinks to a very thin thread indeed. But Alaska—awesome, terrible, inconsistent and utterly captivating in a grim sort of way—comes alive as it seldom has before in a book.

Miss Ferber has always been able to describe limitless, windswept landscapes in a style that befits them—that's why she was so good in GIANT and CIMARRON, books laid in Texas and Oklahoma, where the landscapes certainly are like that. Alaska, with its ice-caps, tundra, wild winds and 40-foot snows, is another place where she is perfectly at home.

She's also always been good at superlatives, and she doesn't let you down in ICE PALACE. Her two heroes are the oldest, strongest, most picturesque men in the territory; one of them is the richest, the other is the greatest. Her heroine is the blondest, best-built, darkest eyed, smartest girl in the world, let alone Alaska. Her setting, Alaska itself, which is the real hero of the book, emerges as the most challenging, most terrifying, most wonderful of all lands. And reading about Alaska the way Miss Ferber can write about it makes reading ICE PALACE well worthwhile.

Fainted And Fell; Swung In Window

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Joseph Everet fainted at a fourth floor window and pitched head first toward the street. He came to his senses, grabbed a second floor fire escape and swung into an open window.

The 34-year-old janitor was treated for scalp lacerations and an injured left ankle.

Appeals Ruling On Cheryl Crane

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The father of Lana Turner's daughter, Cheryl, 14, has appealed a ruling making the youngster a ward of the court.

Restaurateur Stephen Crane yesterday filed a motion in District Court asking that the Superior Court order be set aside.

Cheryl was made a ward of the court after she fatally stabbed Johnny Stomapanato, when he threatened the actress.

Cheryl is now in the temporary custody of her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Mildred Turner.
