Death Verdict For Starkweather; Appeal Set

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Attorneys offered to bet one of his defense witnesses he would be so sentenced to die in the electric chair, will seek a new trial for the stony-faced killer.

His father, Guy, quoted him as saying recently "If I want to make my atonement with God and be electrocuted, that's my business."

Starkweather's attorneys pleaded insanity, against their client's wishes. Jurors were reported to have rejected the plea on the first ballot.

Jensen," Starkweather said. "They tried me for the whole thing."

Brig. Gen. Charles B. Duff, acting commanding general of the First Region of the Army Defense Command, made the statement as civilian demands grew for an explanation of Thursday's tragedy.

Adopted Children Of Different Races Help Make The Family

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There is room for everything but racial prejudice in the home of the Rev. Howard E. May Jr., pastor of the Federated Churches of Willington, Conn.

In addition to their own 10-year-old son, the Rev. Mr. May and his wife are raising three children of different races they adopted during a missionary tour of Alaska.

The youngest are Sus Anne, 2, born of Eskimo parents; Jeanette, 5, Chinese-Japanese; David, 10, about-Scandinavian; and their 10th child Kenneth.

The only problem, says the Rev. Mr. May, is adjusting the children to their new environment. This includes his own son, who spent 7 of his 10 years in Alaska.

The people of Willington have accepted the diverse family group, says the minister, but "the children realize there is prejudice in the world. And they understand it's best merely to shrug their shoulders whenever it appears."

"We have tried to teach each child to be proud of his own individual background and heritage."

During his Alaska tour, the Rev. Mr. May ran a Baptist community church and hospital in Cordova, a fishing village of 1,500 persons near Anchorage.

Sister Mary Eleanor, a shy Roman Catholic nun, is the only woman allowed inside the walls of the federal reformatory in El Reno, Okla.

She comes to the reformatory each Saturday afternoon to direct choir practice — and stays to lend a willing ear to the problems of her inmate-students. Often, more inmates turn out for talk than for choir practice.

"KNOWN BUT TO GOD"

Thousands flock every year from all corners of our nation to stand in hushed reverence before the tomb of the soldier "known but to God."

To all others, he is labeled "Unknown." And in this fact alone, there is tremendous significance. No man knows who this boy really was—but God knows!

God knows you, too, as he knows every man, every woman, every child in the world. That means that no matter who you are, no matter what you do, you can never be really "unknown."

You might ask yourself, "Do I know Him?" If the answer is negative, remember that your first step in finding Him is the step that takes you through the door of His house on earth.

Start going to church!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor in our search for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Will We Keep Eyes On The Future?

The laying of the keel for the first nuclear-powered merchant ship of the United States is a significant occasion for this country.

Ceremonies which marked the event came this week on the 139 anniversary of the first ocean-crossing of a steam powered American ship.

In addressing the group gathered for ceremonies at Camden, N. J., Rep. Herbert Bonner cautioned against the United States making the same mistake with naval use of nuclear power that it did with steam power.

Said Bonner, chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee:

"It is a paradoxical bit of history that the unprecedented trans-Atlantic voyage of the steamship Savannah in 1819 should have turned out to be the forerunner of the era of American supremacy on the seas in the days of the Clipper ships. And American naval architects thereafter concentrated their efforts to perfecting the safer—and at that time—the more efficient Clippers. 'Steamships,' they said, 'can never compete with sail as long as the wind remains free.'"

"At that fateful time, blind to the portents of the industrial revolution, decisions were made that, after brief years of glory, were to leave us a third-rate maritime power for a half century. Competing nations quickly saw the significance of the SS Savannah, while we turned our backs on the future."

Is the United States making the same mistake in developing peaceful uses of nuclear energy that it did in the incident cited by Rep. Bonner?

It is no secret that other nations—close friends of the United States—are pushing the development of nuclear energy uses more rapidly than we are. For the most part it is because these nations are not blessed with the abundance of natural resources that this nation has. As a result they have to look to the new source—nuclear—if they are to keep pace with the world's economic development.

They are putting nuclear power to work in generating electricity through a much more ambitious development program than we have undertaken. They are likewise pushing the development of other peaceful uses of nuclear energy in an effort to overcome the handicap of few natural resources.

Some day coal, oil, and our other conventional sources of power will be as outmoded as the sailing vessels of a century ago.

When that day arrives will we still be clinging to their apron strings as we cling to sailing vessels after developing the first ocean-going steam powered ship?

Some Counties Bar Single Shot

By LYNN NISBET

SINGLE SHOTS — There are a dozen or so counties in North Carolina which operate under special local acts requiring voters to mark ballots for as many candidates as there are positions to fill. If there are three county commissioners to be nominated, for example, and there are four or more candidates, the voter must vote for three or have this ballot thrown out.

"Single shot" voting is the term applied to the practice of marking only one candidate, thus building up proportionate strength for him over the others. In communities where there is considerable "bloc voting," a term used when one candidate gets a disproportionate number of the total votes, and since it is quite possible for a minority of the voters to put their man in the lead.

Local acts banning single shots were first enacted several years ago to apply to a few towns in Eastern North Carolina. The ban has since been extended to a number of counties throughout the state.

The law has not been tested in the courts, but many lawyers think it is unconstitutional. An Associate Justice of the Supreme Court said he is sure that the law would not stand up five minutes if it ever came before his court.

The General Assembly has full authority, said the jurist, to prescribe qualifications for voting, to protect the rights of citizens and candidates. But it does not have the power to force a citizen to vote for one or four men whom he distrusts and despises in order to have his vote count for one man whom he wants in office. A front page box story in the Lexington Dispatch quotes Davidson county's board of elections chairman as saying every registrar in the county had been warned to comply with the full ballot law.

AMERICANS ALL — Because the United States government was founded by men who had previously been citizens of British colonies, and nearly all of the original constitutional provisions and laws stemmed from old English common law practices, there is a general disposition to think of Great Britain as the "mother country" and to regard non-Anglican names and customs as "foreign." This narrow attitude prevails in many places, despite the tremendous contributions made to the country by persons of Celtic, Romance, Scandinavian and Teutonic origin.

Take a look at some names which have lately been featured in the news. The North Carolina Merchants Association at its annual meeting in Raleigh this week elected Charles B. Zeigler of Gastonia as President and Arnold A. Schiffman of Greensboro as "Retailer of the Year."

Democrats in Maryland nominated Thomas D'Alandro, mayor of Baltimore, for the U. S. Senate, and Republicans in Pennsylvania nominated Arthur McGehee for Governor.

A man named Eisenhower is President of the United States. Before him there were two Roosevelts. One of North Carolina's most distinguished Governors was named Ehringhaus. All of these are Teutonic names.

Then consider the roster of the United States Congress. It includes Senators Dennis Chavez of New Mexico, Henry Dworshak of Idaho, Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, Roman L. Hruska of Nebraska and Andrew P. Schoepel of Kansas.

The House of Representatives has such stalwart American names as Addonizio and Auchincloss of New Jersey; Anfuso, DeRouman and Zelenko of New York; Blatnik of Minnesota; Hiestand of California; Klucynski of Illinois; Marchewicz of Michigan; Sadiak of Connecticut and Zabolotz of Wisconsin.

TAKES — The tax study commission is working hard to complete its job and have at least a preliminary report ready around July 1. Reason for this special effort is to make the findings and recommendations available to the advisory budget commission when it begins its inspection tour of State institutions preparatory to making up appropriations and tax bills to be presented to the 1959 General Assembly.

Another and kindred reason is to avoid the criticism and resentment voiced by legislators two years ago when the Legislature was asked to revise State revenue laws on basis of the tax commission recommendations — but without opportunity to read or study the report upon which the recommendations were based.

The present study group is keeping a tight lid on its doings until ready to release the report. Information seeping out is that major attention is being given to the relationship of the State and local governments in areas of taxation and responsibility for service.

The commission has had two replacements since it first began the current study under authorization of the 1957 Legislature. Sen. Joe Eagles of Wilson was named chairman in place of Brandon Hodges of Asheville, who died. Alonzo C. Edwards of Hookerton, executive vice president of the Farm Bureau, succeeded Flake Shaw of Greensboro, who was appointed in that same capacity and died several months ago. Other original members are Dallas Alford of Rocky Mount, A. K. Barrus of Kinston, W. H. Holderness of Greensboro, Harold Myrick of Lincolnton, Frank Pittman of Scotland Neck, D. W. Royster of Shelby, J. A. Speight of Windsor.

Of Direct Concern To Public And Merchants

Every year hundreds of young Pitt Countians become involved in one way or another with merchandising for the first time in their lives.

For many, it represents a haphazard start in what may well be a lifetime of work in the retail field.

They start "green", with only the foggiest notions of what lies behind the great business force which keeps the wheels of trade turning. For many, training is by trial and error.

Distributive Education classes of the past have been a boon in this direction, but we rather like the possibility posed by directors of the Merchant's Association that a course in retailing be established in the city schools.

Granted, it's a long way from the "three R's", but retailing is much a part of our lives as home economics, vocational agriculture and other special fields open to young learners.

We hope the proposal will be found practicable; for the field as a whole is widely misunderstood by many who know it only from the customer's side of the counter, and often obviously a secret to even some employees.

Such a state of affairs is of direct concern to merchants and the buying public.

Underneath It All, A Desire To Be Friends

In so many instances one may read of expressions of warmth toward Americans and America by individual Russians.

The few travelers from this country who have visited Russia return home to tell of hospitality and curiosity (as well as misconceptions) about the United States. American athletes touring in Russia are invariably greeted by huge turnouts and cheers; American artists similarly win acclaim.

In this country, the rare visit of Russian athletes and artists is similarly an occasion for good humor and applause.

All evidence points to the suggestion that a massive exchange of tourists, cultural talents and knowledge would be welcomed by people on either side of the Iron Curtain . . . if it were allowed.

Of course there are barriers . . . all of them man-made, and as such they can be destroyed.

The important thing is that basically people are people, humans are humans, whether you look to the East, the West, the North, the South.

It could be such a wonderful world.

How They Dope Cost Of Living

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the midst of recession, living costs have risen to a new peak. They rose again from March to April. They are 3 1/2 per cent higher than a year ago. The government said so Thursday.

Living costs are figured out by the staff of Ewan Clague, the Labor Department's commissioner of labor statistics, who has been in charge of checking prices around the country every month in 46 cities and towns.

In a recent statement he estimated as many as 2,000 different products or services are bought by the average American family. From those 2,000 his field staff checks the prices of the 300 most important items. The findings are reported to Washington. Clague's staff here breaks them down and analyzes them. The result is what is known as the consumer price index which is the record of living costs.

The 300 items or samples include over 80 foods, apparel of all kinds, rents, home ownership costs, public transportation, automobiles and their operating costs, reading the recreation, personal care and so on.

The index can be divided into three major groups: (1) foods, (2) commodities and other than foods and (3) services of all kinds. What goes into them and what happens to them can be taken one at a time.

Foods — This group ranges from free vegetables to meats. There is a lot of fluctuation in prices in the food division for many reasons. One important one now is bad weather which hampered the growing of certain items, created shortages and thus forced up the prices. Clague, explaining the continued price rise in fresh fruits and vegetables, said people are eating more of them and continue to buy even when the prices rise. Services — These include items of personal care, like haircuts, permanent, street car fares, recreation items such as movies, doctors' fees and hospital costs. Clague pointed out the prices of these are heavily influenced by law and by custom. For example: streetcar fares can be changed only when approved by a public service commission.

"The price of a haircut or a visit to a doctor's office," Clague noted, "is governed to some extent by custom. They change slowly but, when once raised, they usually stay there."

"For the past 20 years the prices of the services represented in the index have climbed slowly but steadily. They will continue to do so for some time to come."

Commodities other than foods — In this group are both soft and durable goods. The soft goods include such items as clothing, shoes, home furnishings, household supplies, gasoline, and so on.

This group as a whole, according to Clague, ordinarily shows the influence of the spring and fall seasons in apparel prices. To put it another way:

Clothing prices go down in January and February, in the after-Christmas sales, and in July and August, when summer sales take place. They go up in March, when the new spring lines are introduced, and up in September when fall clothing comes in.

The durable goods — such as automobiles, furniture, household appliances, TV and radio — show seasonal influences too.

Bigger Riding Bargain

By BILL NEWKIRK

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—The inflationary spiral knocked the five cent bus ride out the window long ago, but another burgeoning American problem has brought Toledo bus riders an even bigger bargain.

They get their bus rides free. Not all over town, of course. The free rides are granted only inside a 24-block zone covering most of the downtown business section.

It's all part of a system to speed up traffic flow and encourage downtown shopping. Traffic jams have been virtually eliminated in the process.

Passengers riding into the zone pay upon entering the buses. Out-going riders pay when they get off. Rides beginning and ending in the free zone cost nothing at all.

The big advantage of the system is that it speeds loading and unloading in the downtown area. Bus drivers no longer have to spend time counting heads and change at each downtown stop.

The system was inaugurated in December, 1955, after city officials noted that much of the downtown traffic congestion was caused by the buses' long curb stops.

Community Traction Co., franchise operator of the buses, agreed to try out the free zone plan and downtown merchants pounced on the idea. They promoted it as an answer to the threat from suburban shopping centers.

A later development involved a tightening of on-street parking restrictions. On many streets, parking was banned entirely during morning and evening rush hours. Remaining metered parking places were put on a skip-a-basher, to enable cars to get in and out of traffic quickly.

Paul Robinette, city commissioner of traffic engineering, says the zone system and revised parking laws have resulted in a 30 per cent improvement in the movement of downtown traffic.

C.H. Forsgard, president of Community Traction, says the system has cut downtown loading and unloading of buses by as much as 50 per cent, bus running time through the downtown area by 30 per cent and total bus trip by 15 per cent.

To the bus company, the free rides within the neutral zone are a necessary evil, unavoidable if the drivers are to be freed from taking fares downtown.

But, Forsgard says, "Any possible loss of fares and transfers has been compensated by speed of loading and improved public relations."

Strength For Today

WE NEED TO BE WORRIED

I'm worried, and I hope you are too.

It may seem a fantastic thing to be worried about, but the more serious the Near Eastern situation gets, the more it would appear we all should be worried.

You may remind me that this is a religious column, not a political one. Yes, to be sure. But the thing that worries me is that the Bible has considerable to say about this Near East situation.

In other words, international situations in other parts of the world may be predominantly political and economic, but in the Near East the situation is also quite seriously a religious one.

For the Bible — especially the Book of Revelation — is most definite in its contention that the last great battle that will be fought on this planet will be at Armageddon — in the Near East at the Hill of Megiddo, where so many important matters in Israel's history took place in distant centuries. The Bible is explicit in its declaration that when the Battle of Armageddon is finished, we will be also. That will dawn — for some an era of happiness, for others an era to be faced with terror.

So we had better consider a bit before we leap. A war in the Near East can get mighty sticky — so much so, in fact, that God will step in and settle everything with a firm hand.

Several blends of whiskey are now selling at prices lower than they were a few months ago. Some distillers are offering quarts at prices close to, but not quite meeting, prices charged for fifths a while back.

There are several reasons. First, sales in the hard-working, hard-drinking industrial centers are off because of unemployment. Second, there is quite a bit of jockeying among competitive brands. And third, many companies are under pressure because heavy stocks of liquor in bond are reaching the eight-year limit at which time taxes must be paid or the liquor destroyed.

Exploiter Of Curiosity

I have a friend who has an almost endless supply of things to do when he is bored, and therefore is seldom ever bored.

He is not what you would strictly term an eccentric, because he fully realizes what he is doing at all times and is never under the illusion that the things he does are "natural." Neither is he an exhibitionist, or a lunatic, nor does he have a neurotic need to draw attention to himself.

No, for him, it is a game. He prides himself that he can have more fun indulging in his little games, inexpensively, than most other people who have to throw money away for outside entertainment. And he relies strictly on human curiosity for his pleasures, and on human nature.

He loves to fool people. He has told me, "It's funny the way people are made. They all have imagination to a certain extent and whenever they see something out of the ordinary, their imaginations start to work like a run-away triphammer and they can dream up all sorts of weird answers and reasons for these things that they don't understand. And, being human, they are curious."

"Most people," he says, "are too curious. They are prone to take things too seriously. It they see something strange or unusual, they can never say 'well, so what?' The heck with it! No, they've got to stare and wonder and analyze and project and worry and even strain themselves about it."

And so, my friend gets his kicks by exploiting these human traits.

For example: He took his wife to a high school graduation ceremony at one of the small high schools in Pitt County about a week ago. After the ceremonies began and everyone was settled in their seats, solemn, dignified, and prim, he reached in his pocket quietly and withdrew a small rock he had picked up outside. Without disturbance, he calmly placed the rock in one of his ears.

Then, he sat quietly, absorbed in the ceremony throughout the rest of the evening.

Only three or four people in the whole auditorium happened to see him. Those three or four sat, giggled, leaned, worried, and stared throughout the rest of the evening, too polite to speak to their companions about it during the ceremony, and too curious to ignore it.

One of those sitting near him broke out into muffled but uncontrollable laughter during a long prayer by the speaker and received harsh looks from the rest of the audience.

On another occasion, while making a trip on the bus, he put a grapefruit under his shirt, over one shoulder and reclined as if asleep throughout the whole trip. All those who happened to see him, asleep there with a big knot on one arm, were disturbed for the rest of the day until he got off.

Another time, at a dance, he reversed his shoes—putting his left shoe on his right foot and his right shoe on his left—and danced all night that way. He never mentioned it or acted as if he noticed it. And, of course, people were polite enough not to embarrass him by laughing or talking about it or telling him. They just stood around worrying and looking from a distance.

Once, while on a summer vacation at the beach, he let himself go without shaving for a week, then shaved off half of his beard and left the other half there. The natives were restless over that one, too.

One of his favorites is to put a ping pong ball in his mouth—and it is unnoticeable—just before going to a movie or a concert of some kind. Then, upon sitting down there, he nods very politely, very elegantly at the one whom he is sitting next to. During the course of the evening, he comments quietly about the concert to his neighbor. Then, just before leaving, he reaches in his mouth and pulls out the ball, looks at it as if he's never seen it before, looks at the neighbor as if astounded, gets up nervously and walks out. The only trouble with this one is that he doesn't get to see the neighbor's face but for a second, he says.

The secret of this, says my friend, is never to act as if you're aware of what's going on. Maintain your dignity, you know.

Other Editors Saying --- An Important Factor

(Washington Daily News)

If a newspaper editor comes out flatly and says that residents of an area should have hospital insurance, he might be accused of working for the insurance people.

It might be dangerous ground on which to tread. In recent years more and more people have taken out hospital insurance, and it has proved a financial salvation to thousands of families all over this state.

We talk about the new Beaufort County General hospital sometimes in terms of how much money it will lose the first year or how much it will lose in later years.

Even if every patient who enters the hospital is covered with hospital insurance, the plain truth is that this insurance still leaves the patient a responsibility for that part of the bill which hospitalization does not cover.

Even if someone might say that the newspaper is bound to be getting something out of urging people to take out hospital insurance, we nevertheless feel that something ought to be said in behalf of hospital insurance.

We realize that many families feel they can't afford such insurance. We realize only too well that economic conditions are such with many people that every cent available is needed to feed the family, pay rent, and pay for the absolute necessities of life.

We have been told many times by hospital officials that there are three types of patients. They are those who absolutely cannot pay, those who can pay and won't, and those who can and do pay. Sickness does not recognize economic conditions. The hospital, in a real sense, does recognize that some people just cannot pay.

The latter two classes have no real reason either for not paying or for not having hospital insurance. They should have it. The greater percentage of our people who have hospital insurance, the lower will be the losses incurred by our own hospital or any other hospitals to which our own people might go for treatment. We, in reality, are protecting not only ourselves but each other when we have insurance which will pay part of our hospital bills.

What we are trying to put over at this time is the idea of getting our people to think in terms of hospital insurance. We've made tremendous strides in this direction in recent years. There is still a long way to go. Hospital insurance costs money, but when a patient goes to the hospital for treatment it costs money to give him that treatment.

We urge everyone who possibly can to think about this matter seriously. We never know when sickness will strike and when hospital bills will mount. Health worries are often heavy, but money worries are also terrible.

Accident, health, and hospital insurance do not offer us a complete answer to all our worries. But at least there is a partial answer. And we need to think seriously about the subject.

Some Distillers Cutting Prices

By ELMER ROESSNER

A bit of the creature may be costing a little less.

Help for nonferrous metals. There's no agreement on what should be done to help producers of copper, lead, zinc and other nonferrous metals. Neither subsidies nor higher tariffs are satisfactory to all concerned. Nevertheless, some action this year is certain simply because Congress dare not let these industries deteriorate while Russia remains a threat.

BOON FOR RAILROADS

Railroads to benefit. For the same reason, Congress faces the necessity of keeping the railroads reasonably healthy. Consequently, taxes may be eased and some loans provided, but the bigger question of easier regulation is too intricate to be handled in the short time Congress has left.

A leveling off of prices. Retailers say they have absorbed all the price cuts they can without losing solvency and that further action must come from manufacturers. The latter, however, are inclined to wait a little longer, and a broad drop is not likely in the immediate future.

Everybody trans - Atlantic. The European travel boom will be even larger than earlier estimates made here and elsewhere. The Brussels fair and the Centennial at Lourdes are attracting thousands. Eased restrictions in Russia and other Iron Curtain countries are also attracting some Americans. Trouble in France has not discouraged many, and most other European spots are peaceful.

Another business migration is building up. A few years ago many firms moved to suburbs. Then the trend faded because disadvantages seemed to offset the gains. Some companies returned to the city. Now cuts in commuter services and rises in fares and highway tolls are causing some companies again to consider moving to the country.

Kiwanis Upset Lions 7-4 In Little League Contest

He Will Remember Those Three Innings Long Time

Starling Uses Four Hurlers In 1st Defeat

The ASSOCIATED PRESS
Warren Spahn will remember the last three innings of Friday's Milwaukee-San Francisco game a long time.

The Braves' brilliant southpaw probably will pitch those innings over and over again for many nights to come.

In those three innings, Spahn lost, in order, a perfect game, a no-hitter, a shutout, a 3-0 lead, a 5-3 decision, and a spotless 1958 record.

Spahn faced 18 batters in the first six innings and retired them all. When he disposed of his rival hurler, Johnny Antonelli, to open the seventh, the County Stadium crowd of 24,430 had visions of a perfect game—the first of modern National League times.

Eight batters to go. The first of these—Danny O'Connell, an ex-Brave, put the first blemish on Spahn's spotless performance. He drew a walk. The next batter—Willie Mays—busted the no-hit bubble. He singled O'Connell to third. Then Hank Sauer ruined Warren's shutout attempt with a scoring grounder.

Now it was the eighth. There was one out. Milwaukee still led 3-1. But Bob Schmidt and Willie Kirkland banged two straight Spahn pitches for home runs to tie the score, 3-3.

O'Connell, the first batter to face Spahn in the ninth, singled. Mays, whose first major league hit—in 1951—was a home run off Spahn, made his last one a home run, too, to put the finishing touch on the 37-year-old pitcher's wonderful dream.

In other National League games Chicago drubbed Philadelphia 11-4, Pittsburgh nipped St. Louis 3-2 and Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles 4-1.

The American League leading Yankees stretched their victory string to ten in a row with an 8-1 decision over Detroit. Chicago's Early Wynn outpitched Baltimore's Jack Harshman 1-0. Ted Williams went four for four as Boston thrashed Kansas City 9-1. Cleveland shaded Washington 2-1.

Mays' 13th home run of the season increased the Giants' first place lead over the Braves to 2½ games. Antonelli won his fourth in seven decisions. He permitted only three hits but two of these were home runs by Eddie Mathews and Del Crandall.

Philadelphia shortstop Chico Fernandez' wide throw of a potential double play ball opened that gate for a seven-run fifth inning for Chicago. Then followed Al Dark's bases-loaded triple, Ernie Banks' two-run homer and Bobby Thomson's two-run double. Dark had three runs and Thomson had two.

Bill Maserowski's eighth inning single broke a 2-2 tie for Pittsburgh. The second baseman shared honors with Dick Groat who batted in a run, scored the other two and had 10 assists at shortstop. Stan Musial got three of St. Louis' 10 hits and raised his league leading batting mark to .470.

Two buns, a pop fly single, a sacrifice fly and Gil Hodges' throwing error gave Cincinnati three runs in the fifth to end a scoreless duel between Los Angeles' Johnny Podres and the Redlegs' Bob Purkey. Ed Bailey's homer in the sixth put the extra frosting on the cake. Hal Jeffcoat preserved Purkey's fifth victory in six decisions by retiring two Dodgers with the bases loaded in the eighth.

NEW YORK (AP)—"What's next?" they asked Johnny Busso, a professional flat fighter who had just defeated the French lightweight champion, Labouari Godhi.

Johnny spoke up before his manager, Nunzio DeLuca, could mention the matches he had in mind.

"Next for me is being best man at a wedding," said Johnny, pressing an ice pack against his slightly puffed left eye. "My kid brother is getting married June 7 and I'm the best man."

The way Johnny said it, this was the most important thing in his future.

Busso, 23, a free-swinging New York lightweight, won a unanimous decision over Godhi in 10 rounds at Madison Square Garden. The officials called it lopsided. Referee Mark Conn 7-2-1, Judge Bill Reicht 7-3 and judge Harold Barnes 8-2. The AP card was 7-3 for Busso.

Next door in the loser's dressing room, Godhi's handlers were telling visitors that the trouble was the Garden—not the fighter.

"They all tighten up the first time in the Garden," said Jersey Jones, who handled Godhi's affairs on this side of the pond. "In Washington (where he beat Larry Baker April 18) he felt at home. Small club and everything. In the Garden he was trying too hard."

Jersey also had a few words for the referee, none complimentary. He blamed Conn for not letting Godhi fight in the clinches when he had one hand free.

The facts of the matter were that Godhi simply did not fight enough. There were no knockdowns but Busso landed the heavier punches and pressed the action most of the time. Godhi was reluctant to mix freely, especially in the early rounds when his slicking jab often fell far short.

Godhi, 140, took a 20-fight winning streak into the Garden against Busso, 140½, who is ranked fifth among the lightweight contenders by the National Boxing Association. Godhi went in to the ring the favorite.

Kiwanis	1	2

Coach R. B. Starling's league-leading Lions were clubbed into their first defeat of the 1958 season yesterday at Elm Street Park by the Kiwanis—a team that had gone winless through two previous games.

Victor Henderson hurled his Kiwanis club to the victory, striking out five, walking only one, and giving up only three hits.

Coach Starling, whose frantic shifting of his lineup had brought him two earlier victories this season, went into his antics again yesterday—shifting in four different hurlers and changing his infield and outfield around—but to no avail.

It was a familiar story in the North State loop. The Lions and the Kiwanis have been bitter rivals since the formation of the league and have kicked the loop championship around between them like a ping-pong ball. After edging the crown for several seasons running, the Lions were finally dislodged from that perch last year by the Kiwanis.

This season, the Lions started out to regain the title with a pair of decisive wins over the VFW and the Jaycees, while the Kiwanis were dropping two to the same teams.

Yesterday's meeting was a clash between an undefeated team and a winless club. And an upset resulted.

Though the Lions got only three hits, all three were powerful blows. Red Kennedy blasted off for a homerun and a double and Robbie Powell cracked another double. Those hits accounted for the Lions' scores in the third, fourth, and sixth innings.

The Kiwanis chopped out five hits against Lions hurlers Kennedy, Powell, Taylor and Register. They scored four runs in the fifth inning, on six walks and a double; they scored three runs in the sixth on three hits, two walks, and an error.

Henderson was the winning hurler, of course. Kennedy began on the mound for the Lions and was relieved in the third inning by Powell. Powell came in with the bases loaded and two outs and pitched to one man, retiring the side. In the next inning, Coach Starling substitute Sonny Taylor, who went one and a half innings. Then, Register came in to finish up. It was Taylor's loss.

Myers Park Play Finished Friday

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Martinsville, Va. pro golfer Wayne Haley and Bernice David teamed with Mrs. Brigham McGinty of Martinsville and Mrs. Edision Foard of Charlotte for a winning score of 117 in yesterday's pro-ladies tournament at Myers Park Country Club.

Their score was a new low for the tournament.

Five strokes behind were Steve Duda, Mrs. C. B. Cushman, Mrs. W. M. Kerr, all of Camden, S.C., and Mrs. William Sparks, Charlotte.

The team of Dick Clark, Eva Frye, Frances Steere, all of Winston-Salem, and Mrs. Walter Smith of Charlotte scored a 124 for third place.

Max Briggs and Dave Tinsley of Charlotte had low score of 63 in the pro-pro division. Charlotte's Dick Tiddy had a 66 for low pro score and Cynthia Sullivan of Florence, S.C. shot a 74 for the low score among the ladies.

The tourney drew its largest field in six years, 30 pros and 90 ladies.

Yankees Clinch Tenth Straight Win At Detroit

Turley Says Common Sense Won Ball Game

By JOE REICHLER
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT (AP)—Bob Turley credited himself with common sense for his amazing pitching start that has all baseball bug-eyed.

Not because the Tigers lost another, an 8-1 decision to New York. Not because it was the 10th consecutive victory for the Yankees and the ninth straight loss for Detroit. Not because it was Turley's seventh successive triumph without a defeat.

But because Turley was shooting for so many targets the poor fellows just couldn't keep up with him.

Here's what Bullet Bob was shooting at:

1. Most victories in a season—41—by Jack Chesbro, New York Highlanders (Yankees) 1904.
2. Most victories from start of season—19—Rube Marquard, New York Giants, 1912.
3. Most shutouts—16—Grover Alexander, Philadelphia Phillies, 1916.
4. Most consecutive shutouts—6—Doc White, Chicago White Sox, 1904.
5. Most consecutive scoreless innings—56—Walter Johnson, Washington Senators, 1915.
6. Most complete games in a season (also consecutive)—39—Jack Taylor, St. Louis Cardinals, 1904.

Turley lost out on only two objectives—consecutive shutouts and consecutive scoreless innings—as he won his seventh game in his seventh start, all complete.

Cleveland moved into second place with a 2-1 triumph over Washington. Boston climbed to third with a 9-1 rout of Kansas City and Chicago nipped Baltimore 1-0 to drop the Orioles from a second to a fourth place tie with the Athletics.

In the National League, San Francisco regained its 2½ game margin over Milwaukee with a 5-3 victory over the Braves on Willie Mays' 200th homer of his career. Pittsburgh shaded St. Louis 3-2, Cincinnati defeated Los Angeles 4-1 and Chicago drubbed Philadelphia 11-4.

Home runs by Gil McDougald, Elston Howard and Yogi Berra featured the Yankees' 14th victory in their last 15 starts and boosted their season's record to 25-5.

Early Wynn outpitched Jack Harshman in Chicago's 1-0 victory. The 38-year-old right-hander hurled a three-hitter for his fourth triumph of the season and the 239th of his career—topping among active pitchers. He's beaten Baltimore 15 of 17 decisions. The veteran pitcher scored the only run in the third when he singled runner to third on another single by Luis Aparicio and crossed the plate when center fielder Lennie Green dropped Nellie Fox's fly.

Cal McLish pitched a three-hitter against the Senators as the Indians won their third straight and moved over the .500 mark. Fourth inning singles by Roger Maris and Russ Nixon and a scoring grounder by Billy Harrell broke a 1-1 tie.

Ted Williams had a perfect 4-for-4 night and Don Buddin and Dick Gernert slammed home runs as the Red Sox finally climbed into the .500 class with a 17-7 record. Willard Nixon, after four straight losses, won his first game of the season with a three-hitter.

Chamberlain had this good word for Kansas: "If I had to start over again from high school, I would want to attend the University of Kansas."

He will be eligible to join the Philadelphia Warriors in the National Basketball Assn. after his class graduates in 1959.

Meanwhile, Chamberlain said he planned to organize two 10-man squads, one of Negroes and one of whites, for the tour. He said the manager, Bill Leuchner, believed they would gross $250,000.

The Greenville Recreation Department has started off the summer with a full-fledged active program for baseball and softball fans in this city and area, that is perhaps the most well-rounded in its history.

There are softball games every night at Guy Stadium, from Monday to Saturday, with Industrial League playing on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and the Church League taking over on the alternate nights.

Also, for night baseball fans, Teen-er League activity, featuring boys between the ages of 13-15, is beginning and will offer more play at Guy Smith. On some nights, there will be both softball and baseball going on in the park and spectators can take their choice.

MORE BASEBALL

In the afternoons, Little League action takes place everyday at Elm Street Park, where the defending North Carolina State Champions make their home. There are two leagues, eight teams, and the best Little League baseball in the state—free of charge—to anyone who wants to see it.

Just across the fence at Elm Street, approximately 100 youngsters between the ages of seven and 10 work out every afternoon in the Small Fry League, offering still another outlet of entertainment for fans and exercise for the city's kids.

A HARD WORKER

Responsible, in great part, for the establishment of this wide-range program, is W. C. (Neely) James. A rural Mail carrier, James is able to work only part-time with the Recreation Department—yet he spends close to 15 hours a day in that capacity. Every afternoon, he helps get Little League play underway, then steps across the way to supervise the Small Fry league and personally coaches the 100-man circuit by himself.

At night many times, he takes charge of the Softball activity at Guy Smith Stadium.

James, an ardent athletic fan and supporter of athletics in Greenville, was instrumental in the beginning of Little League play here, as well as softball in both Industrial and Church league form. He also worked with the initial planning of Teen-er League in this city.

He has worked in the capacity of a coach, official scorer, umpire, manager, League Supervisor, and other incidental positions since he began to take an active interest in kids and sports here, many years ago.

His initial interest in his "part-time" work is merely a love for kids and a desire to help them become strong, well-rounded, and useful, as well as happy.

Of course, Neely James isn't the only man devoting valuable time to the support and molding of Greenville's athletic program. There are others—most of them giving their part-time help freely and without receiving a whole lot of credit for it. James is enigmatic of them all; he was one of the first and he is still at it. He serves as an inspiration to all those who take an interest in molding the future for a younger generation and as a repudiation of those who "haven't got time."

TANGIBLE RESULTS

The work of Neely James and of all others who have put in valuable hours with Greenville's Small-Fry, Little League, and Teen-er League baseball programs has begun to pay off now—in quite tangible terms: Greenville high school's baseball team this season had a 9-3 record, the best in many, many years and several of its players were former Little Leaguers. Coach Milton Reece took a handful of leftovers from the 1957 State Little League champs this season and turned out a team of Phantomites who went undefeated. Coach Bud Phillips also took some veterans of the city program into his junior varsity team and came out with a winning season—

And it does not stop there. The boys turned out from this energetic Recreation program will go on to become strong, capable young men, leaders, as they have already begun to do.

Greenville's work with kids and baseball is still far from complete and satisfactory. Help from other volunteers—no matter how little or how much—is needed.

Wilt The Stilt Is Turning Pro

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP)—Towering Wilt Chamberlain is turning professional, just like the dopsters have been saying for two years that he would.

The two-time all-America basketball player had left Kansas University and was buzzing homeward to Philadelphia today in a brand new red convertible.

His plans to pursue a $250,000 pot of gold on a 160-game barnstorming tour of South and North America were disclosed yesterday in a copyrighted, signed article in Lock magazine.

Chamberlain told his friends here his magazine contract prevented him from talking about the tour. That's why, he said, he had denied as recently as May 8 that he would pass up his final season at KU next fall.

There wasn't much cheer among the Kansas Jayhawkers.

Coach Dick Harp remarked rather wistfully that until now he "hadn't thought too much about our team next year." Then, with clipped firmness, "we'll get busy and come up with the best we can."

Ex-coach Phog Allen, who won out over more than 200 other coaches in recruiting Chamberlain, sorrowfully said he was "greatly disappointed to see a boy leave school before he graduates."

Pierce Clubs A Hole In One On Local Course

Carl Pierce slammed his first hole in one yesterday at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, on the new nine.

It marked the third hole in one clubbed on the 15th hole since the new nine was added three years ago.

Pierce, who has been playing golf only about three years, made his shot with a no. 4 iron while playing in a foursome with Troy Dodson, Donald Conley Jr. and Ray Masten.

The shot covers a 115 yard distance.

Holliday Elected Lefthanded Prexy

GREENSBORO (AP)—John Holliday of Gallivants Ferry, S.C. was elected president yesterday of the Left-handed Golfers Assn. of the Carolinas, which is holding its 23rd annual tournament here.

Other new officers include Mason Smith, Charlotte, first vice president; P. G. Wall Jr., Pilot Mountain, second vice president; and Ed Sweetman Sr., Greensboro, secretary.

Bill Sharp, Greensboro, was re-elected executive vice president and treasurer.

20 Pros Chase Prentice Today

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—The scene shifted today as 20 rival professionals took up the chase of Jo Ann Prentice, first-round leader, in the Land of the Sky Open Golf Tournament.

The 25-year-old Birmingham, Ala., professional nursed a four-shot lead after setting a competitive women's record 68 for the Biltmore Forest Country Club course yesterday.

Jo Ann put together a pair of 34s over a man-sized 6,250-yard course, six under par. She cracked the record of 69 set 18 years ago by Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, a former National Amateur champion.

Today the tournament moved to the Beaver Lake course, with women's par of 77.

Jo Ann, in breaking 70 for the first time in competition, was running ahead of Jackie Pung, former amateur queen from San Francisco, who posted 36-72.

That put Mrs. Pung one stroke in front of Wiffi Smith at St. Clair Shores, Mich., winner at Spartanburg, S.C., last Sunday.

Wiffi was tied for third, five shots off the lead, with Marlene Hage of Delray Beach, Fla.; Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay; and Louise Suggs of Sea Island, Ga. Another stroke back at par 74 were Kathy Cornelius of Lakeland, Fla., and Ruth Jessen, Seattle.

Miss Prentice had four birdies and a bogey on each nine as her putter was her chief weapon. On the back nine, after canning a 25-footer for a par on No. 10, she dropped puts of 30, 25, 7 and 5 feet for birds.

The all-pro field winds up the 54-hole tournament Sunday at a third course, the Country Club of Asheville.

Complain, But Still Buy At High Prices

By RUSSELL LANE
CHICAGO (AP)—A Chicago housewife gazed dubiously at a pink and white pork loin in the butcher case.

"I don't believe it," she said. "You say 75 cents a pound for the loin half?"

"I can let you have the rib half, nicely trimmed, for 65," the butcher said.

She grumbled a bit—and bought the loin.

Also in this particular case was a blade pot roast at 49 cents, the day's featured item. But choice round steak was 89 cents a pound; lamb shoulder chops were 79, and steer liver 59.

In similar New York shops, prices were higher. In Baltimore, Md., they were lower. In Los Angeles they were lower, except for pork.

But Adolph M. Hanson, in his butcher shop on Chicago's North West Side, spoke words that would have held true almost anywhere in the nation: "Yes, prices are up. The customers are complaining."

"But they're still buying," he said, "and they're not switching from the cuts they like to buy on account of price."

The American Meat Institute affirmed that housewives are paying more for most meat than they were a year ago, and the rise in prices for pork and beef has been dramatic in the last two months.

Meat prices are about 25 per cent higher than a year ago.

But, the AMI's spokesman said, the price of meat relative to other food costs is still modest on the consumer's price index. "Meat has been a real food bargain and still is," he said.

Why the dramatic upswing in prices charged by the butcher? The AMI pointed to government marketing statistics. Meat supplies at the stockyards have been 10 per cent less than a year ago on the average. But Americans are buying more meat than last year.

Behind the generally spare marketing of livestock, market men say there are motives which have a lot to do with the weather, or, more specifically, rain.

Cattlemen who had been running thin range herds because of drought and sparse forage in the Southwest were confronted with lush grass range this year resulting from ample winter rains. Until recently they held stock on the range to build up their herd populations.

Feed, especially grain feed for both cattle and hogs, is plentiful and low in cost. So, many cattle which might have been shipped to market with little weight feeding are being held longer to bring in better prices because of greater weights and improved class.

Rug-Hooking Has Its Own Rewards

HOOKING PICTURE . . . Mrs. Swope, one of the charter members, has made five rugs, set of chair seats, and now hooks picture.

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor

Years ago women gathered at quilting bees, today they meet in rug-hooking sessions.

At least this is the weekly habit of 11 industrious Greenville women who truly enjoy making their own rugs.

For the past five years, Mrs. J. M. Daniel, Jr. of Wilson has been conducting weekly all-day rug-hooking sessions in various homes in this city. These series of ten classes each originate in October and continue until mid or late April.

Keen Group Interest
"One thing that is indicative of rug groups is group interest in one another's work," noted Mrs. Daniel, who has been teaching the art for the past 12 years in Rocky Mount, Wilson, Ayden, and surrounding communities.

She explained that at the weekly workshops she tries to teach color and color balance.

"While hooking their rugs, these women have been painting pictures with rags rather than brushes, oils, or water colors," pointed out the instructor.

Two of the members, Mrs. Ray T. Cox and Mrs. Darrell Swope, started hooking rugs when the class began. "I've been hooking ever since the classes began and I hope to continue hooking forever," mentioned Mrs. Swope.

Gratifying, Relaxing, Productive Hobby

Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Swope both agree that rug making is a relaxing, gratifying, and productive hobby.

Another charter member of the group, Mrs. George Staples, said, "When the classes organized, I joined and I have never missed a class, yet."

Making rugs is an intricate art which demands a great deal of time and patience. As artists with their palettes, these women with woolen rags, a hook, and frame began the tedious and interesting job of creating vivid rugs.

As an aid, the women purchase patterns for the rugs designed by Pearl K. McGowan who has organized and trained rug hooking teachers throughout the United States.

These rugs range in size from the picture and chair seat ones to full room-size works of art.

Personal as Penmanship
"Each rug is as individual and as personal as penmanship," reflected Mrs. Daniel, who added, "The same pattern never looks the same when done by different people."

Each rug is designed for a particular room or spot in the rug-maker's home. It is because of this, that many of the women have to resort to frequent wool dyeing in order to create the desired colors in their rugs.

"Hooking as an art goes back to 300 A.D. and it was done in Colonial Days particularly in the New England states where they have continued hooking through the years. New England is now considered the home of hooking," said Mrs. Daniel.

This ancient art which dates back to the days of the Copts in 200-300 A.D. was carried on particularly by sailors of the olden days who practiced the art as a means of passing the time aboard ship.

Sailors Brought Art to U.S.
It was the sailors who brought the art to the United States and it was the Colonial women who quickly adopted it as a hobby and as a means to beautify their homes with individuality. Often these women, as history says, tried to imitate the expensive Oriental rugs which many of the wealthy people of that time used.

It was quickly mentioned by Mrs. Daniel that today's rugs are of a much finer quality than those of Colonial days. "Today we cut the woolen strips much finer and more attention is paid to the contour, perspective, and color harmony," she noted.

During the summer months when the children are home from school and the beach beckons the women will lay their rugs aside.

But, in October the rugs will become a special part of the lives of each of the women pictured on this page again.

ADJUSTS HOOK . . . Mrs. Webb is busy with her first rug.

WORKS ON 9 x 12 RUG . . . for her dining room, Mrs. VanNortwick has been hooking the rug "on and off" for three years.

RECEIVING INSTRUCTIONS . . . from Mrs. Daniel, Mrs. Cox has spent two winters working on a full-room size rug.

Napoleon's Memory Keeps Power Vested In Assembly

EDITOR'S Note: The turbulent events of the past 10 days in Paris and Algeria have put the spotlight on the French political system which has resulted in 25 governments since World War II. A veteran member of The Associated Press bureau in Paris explains the system and why it exists.

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP)—The memory of two Napoleons has been the dominant principle of French political life for the past 80 years.

The short but never forgotten shadow of pinstriped Napoleon I has led to the long shadow of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Napoleon twice seized power in France and ruled the nation with a firm hand for 15 years before he was forced to abdicate in 1814.

Some 30 years later his nephew, Napoleon III, took over in a coup and ruled for a quarter of a century with an absolute power that was later liberalized.

These two experiences, dimmed into the minds of every French student, seem to have decided the French people forever against any kind of strong or personal government.

To guard against a recurrence, the power in France during both the Third (1870-1940) and Fourth (since 1947) Republics has been vested in Parliament.

The executive arm is called the Council of Ministers, or Cabinet, and is voted into office by the National Assembly which can vote it out whenever a majority of the deputies wish.

The 596 Assembly deputies are divided among 16 parties as varied—and changing—in policy as the colors of a rainbow. Their difficulty in making up their collective mind has led to unending confusion.

Governments frequently have been voted out of office by combinations which could never agree on anything except to disagree with the Cabinet.

France is tured to governmental instability and the outside world paid little attention until increased dependence on security alliances brought France's problems to international prominence after World War II.

The same increased awareness of the international scene may have reacted on the French too. In any case, the French have begun to show impatience with government instability as things go badly for the nation.

During Third Republic, 1870 to 1940, France had 101 governments. The average life to each was about eight months. Some lasted only a few days. During World War I, France had seven different cabinets. Georges Clemenceau is remembered as the French wartime premier, although he did not take office until November 1917. He stayed in office until 1920 and participated in the peace conference.

Since World War II the average life of a cabinet has been a little more than six months.

The Assembly now includes 143 Communists and about 30 Poujadists who are in systematic opposition to anything the government proposes.

Take out the Communists and Poujadists, and any prospective premier has a field of about 400 deputies—ranging from Socialists to right-wing Independents—in which to find a workable majority of about 325 supporters.

Including half a dozen different political parties in one Cabinet often led to timid action or inaction.

Why so many parties? It's all part of the traditional French system. There is a party for the workers who follow the Communist line, and the Socialist party for the workers who refuse to look to Moscow.

There is a party, the Popular Republican Movement (MRP), for the Catholics. The Radical Socialists get most of their support from the small shopkeepers. The Peasant party gets support from the farmers. The deputies elected from overseas territories have two separate groups who fight each other.

Some of the parties are separated only by small nuances of political outlook: Two of the big parties, the Socialists (97 deputies) and Popular Republican Movement (75) are split by one explosive issue—the granting of state funds to church schools.

The Socialists, who get considerable support from the school-teacher union, are bitterly opposed to the church schools. The Popular Republicans, with a church background, fight to maintain this aid.

The multiparty system is encouraged by the proportional representation election system. Under this system, a department may be allotted five deputies. These five seats are then shared out according to the share of the vote each party gets. Almost never does one party get all the seats from a department. Each important segment of political opinion gets something.

A voter does not cast his ballot for any individual, only for the party. The party decides which individuals shall be put at the head of the list, where they may have a chance of being elected. Thus a Frenchman has no chance to vote against an individual he may feel has done a bad job in Parliament.

There has been much agitation in recent years for a change in the proportional representation system. Parliament never has been able to agree on any new system. Some prefer the district system used in the United States and Great Britain. Half a dozen various schemes were proposed in 1955. All were voted down.

Opponents of change point out that France has used no less than five different systems since 1870, but none produced governmental stability.

The present Pflimlin Cabinet is talking about a system to reinforce the executive by making it necessary for the opposition to agree on a new premier and a program before voting a government out of office.

Peace-Making Campaign Adopted At Baptist Meet

HOUSTON, Texas. (AP)—Cooperation in the 1955 peace-making campaign for Southern Baptists as they headed for home today from their annual convention.

It was echoed in the final phases of the vast, week-long convalescence, and formed a persistent chord throughout the series of policy-making actions.

It emerged as the particular variation on the overall convention theme, "Go...Make Disciples."

The convention pluggers for interracial peace and reconciliation, for peaceful teamwork with other Baptist bodies, and it moved to summon its 9 million followers into a crusade for world peace.

In a hostily-wracked world, said Rep. Brooks Hays (D-Ark.), convention president, peace is the desperate need of the hour.

"Baptists ought to be just one of many Christian bodies who join in this effort," he added. "We've got to get down to business and say what is the Christian basis for world peace."

Another church leader, the Rev. Dr. Theodore Adams of Richmond, Va., president of the Baptist World Alliance, stressed the same plea in a closing address.

"There is something in our faith," he said, "which overlaps the barriers of languages, race, nations and political systems. We must put it to work to bring people together."

His statements came after the convention, heading a proposal by Hays, set up a nine-man commission to mobilize Baptist strategy in the cause of peace.

In other actions during the week of business, worship, debate, petitions and speeches, the convention:

1. Decided not to spread the Southern Baptist tent into Canada, but rather to extend aid to other Baptist churches there in developing their own denominational affiliation.
2. Adopted a series of organizational changes designed to strengthen the internal machinery of the convention, and bring its many and various agencies under more coordinated guidance.
3. Beat off an attack of acceptance by its Christian Life Commission of a $15,000 gift from the Fund for the Republic, which was under fire from some, but which others strongly defended.
4. Overwhelmingly voted acceptance of a report calling for greater communication and fellowship with peoples of every race despite keen opposition by a few.
5. Deferred action on a move to alter the activities of its Home Missions Board, and to set up a new loan board to handle church financing.
6. Condemned the liquor trade and what was termed a swelling traffic in obscene literature, and give the go-ahead for developing new means to combat both.
7. Re-elected Hays as president, and in a tight race chose the Rev. Dr. Charles Quarles of Jackson, Miss., as first vice president.
8. Approved a million-dollar-increase in the convention's 1959 cooperative budget, its basic denominational resource, bringing it to $17 1/2 million.

9. Launched a "Jubilee Advance" program, by which six national Baptist conventions—North and South, Negro and white—will join in a six-year, joint drive to win souls.

10. Chose St. Louis as the site for the 1961 convention. Meeting places previously had been set for Louisville, Ky., in 1959, and Miami Beach, Fla., in 1960.

Dr. Walter Pope Binis, president of William Jewell College of Liberty, Mo., was appointed by Hays to head the newly set up peace committee.

Hays said its first step would be to do thorough research into the complex problems of world peace.

After a program has been developed, he said, the full resources of the convention would be called to join in implementing it. This would include the 12,000-strong missionary forces overseas, the 200-station network of radio and TV stations which carry Baptist programs, and other Baptist forces.

Dr. Cleveland J. Bradner Jr., director of religious activities at East Carolina College, and supply minister for the Hooker Memorial Christian Church, will be the guest preacher at the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday morning and Dr. H. G. Haney, pastor of the Eighth Street Christian Church, will preach for the Hooker Memorial Christian Church which is meeting at the present time in the Emmhurst School. Each service is at 11 o'clock.

Sunday schools will meet at 9:45 and the youth organizations will meet at 5:00 and 6:00 in the afternoon with a light supper served at 6:00 for the intermediate and young people's groups.

The two conferences for young people in the immediate future are the Young People's Conference June 8-14 and May 28 is the deadline for applications to be sent in; and the Chi-Rho Camp June 30-July 5, the deadline of which is June 23. The young people of the church and Sunday school who desire to go to camp or conference should get an application blank in the church office immediately.

The congregations of the Christian Churches are requested to cooperate in the national program of a special Week of Prayer for peace during the week May 25-31. This program is sponsored by the 4500 Kiwanis clubs throughout the United States and Canada. The program is not merely timely but also commendable.

The choir of the Eighth Street Christian Church under the direction of Mrs. H. L. Carter will sing Sunday morning Tchaikowsky's "O Thou, From Whom All Blessings Come."

Candidates Are On TV Sunday

Candidates for two county offices subject to the May 31 Democratic Primary will appear on WNCN's "Meet the Candidates" television program tomorrow at 2:30.

The program, sponsored by the non-partisan Greenville League of Women Voters, will include the two candidates for County Commissioner from the Fifth District and for Sheriff. Both groups will answer questions pertinent to the offices they are seeking.

B. Alton Gardner and R. Guy Jackson, candidates for County Commissioner, will answer the question, "Are you in favor of a county-wide tax for industrial development?" The three persons seeking the Sheriff's office, Ruel Tyson, Sam Whitehurst and Ben Farnes, will be asked, "If you are elected sheriff, what are your plans for law enforcement in Pitt County?"

If time permits, the candidates will answer questions submitted from the audience. Such questions will be screened, however, before presentation.

Diplomas Going To Their Wives

CHARLESTON, S. C. (AP)—The Citadel will award 59 F-H-T-D degrees this year.

That stands for "pushing husbands through degree."

The degrees will be handed out tomorrow by President Mark Clark of the State Military College. They'll go to wives of students who get degrees next Saturday or at the end of summer school.

The wives' diplomas picture an eagle atop a perfume bottle and a baseball bat—symbol of mastery of husband management.

These Students Advanced On Basis Of Reading Skill

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Christian County elementary pupils got report cards this week carrying such announcements as "Promoted to 'Down the River Road'" instead of promoted to another grade.

Promotion by book titles is part of a new plan. It abolishes the usual elementary grades one through six.

From now on youngsters will advance according to their reading level.

Their report cards will announce promotion to new readers through the equivalent of the first six grades.

"It will let youngsters advance at their own rate. And it helps prevent youngsters who don't mature early mentally from being pushed too fast, or failed," Mrs. Elizabeth Wade, county supervisor of instruction, said.

Teachers in the school system are enthusiastic about the plan. It's been tried in other schools across the nation and works well, Mrs. Wade said.

Christian County has experimented on the idea with a few classes of first and second graders for the past two years.

Starting next fall, 1,900 youngsters in all but one of the county's 18 elementary schools will be in reading levels instead of grades.

The reading level setup divides youngsters into primary and intermediate blocks — each one taking about three years to complete. Between the two blocks will be a special transition room where children who need extra help can spend a year if necessary.

Subjects taught will be about the same as under the grade system, Mrs. Wade said.

"Bright children can have supplementary readers. They won't be moved along faster than their social group in the class unless they are definitely superior."

Dismiss An Old Treason Charge

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—A treason indictment filed 96 years ago against a former vice president who joined the Confederacy has been dismissed.

Commonwealth's Atty. Paul Mansfield approved dismissal of charges against John C. Breckinridge yesterday. He told Circuit Court:

"It is my policy to consult with the prosecution witnesses before recommending dismissal. I made an effort to consult with them... they are not found."

He noted a sheriff met a similar problem trying to serve the warrant on Breckinridge in 1862.

Breckinridge was a general commanding a Confederate infantry division. The sheriff reported him "not found."

Breckinridge later served the South as secretary of war.

He had been vice president at 35. He ran for president against Abraham Lincoln, then won a U.S. Senate seat in 1860.

The Senate expelled him in 1861 for joining the Confederacy.

He was indicted after Kentucky made it illegal for this state to enter the war. The indictment stood until dismissal was asked by the Civil War Round Table, a group interested in the war's history.

After the war, Breckinridge fled to Cuba, then to Europe. Granted amnesty, he returned here in 1869. He practiced law until his death in 1875.

SOME SLIPS DON'T SHOW

By A. A. FAIR (Eric Stanley Gardner)

CHAPTER 17

I let Horace Dutton pump my hand up and down, let him put his arm around my shoulder.

"Come on in, Billings. Come on in," he said, "I'm painting on it."

"On what?"

"On conflict. It's going to be a wow! A hunderdinger! A bull's eye!"

"That's fine!" I told him. "For your information, my name isn't Billings. I'm Donald Lam. I'm the private detective who was looking for George Cadott. He was hiding from me. I cultivated you in order to get a line on George. Now it seems George has been murdered."

His hand went limp. His arm came off my shoulder. He stared at me openmouthed.

"And for your further information," I said, "I just want to tell you to keep on painting. Conflict. I think it'll be terrific! As far as this modern art is concerned, I haven't the faintest bit of use for it."

"But there's going to be a big stink over George's murder. Newspaper photographers will be out here, looking for new angles. If they find you painting on one of those blotches of color, you'll get a lot of free publicity and then someone might buy it. Barnum said there was one born every minute. Some of 'em have money."

"Good-bye."

I walked off and left him standing speechless in the doorway.

I stopped at the first hotel I encountered that had a telephone booth, closed the door lightly on the booth, dialed long distance, and called Bertha Cool collect.

I heard Bertha's voice at the other end of the line. "Tell him to pay for it! He's got all the expense money. What in blazes does he mean, calling collect? All right. I'll take the call. Yes, this is Bertha Cool. Hello! Hello!"

"Hello, Bertha, this is Donald."

"I know who it is," she said. "What's the big idea calling collect? You've got expense money. Put it on your hotel bill, and then we have something to show for it. Otherwise this call is billed at the end of the month, and I have to make out a bill."

"Forget it," I told her. "We're in a jam."

Bertha suddenly quit squawking. There was tense silence at the other end of the line.

"You there?" I asked.

"Of course I'm here. What's the jam?"

"Now listen, Bertha. Get this straight. We can't afford to fall down on it."

"All right, what is it?"

"I said, 'I've blundered into something head on. George Cadott has already written Minerva Fisher telling her about her husband, about the convention, and about Louis Marlow. That letter's in the mail.'"

"Fry me for an oyster!" Bertha said. "Couldn't you head the guy off?"

"Wait a minute," I told her. "That's only half of it. George Cadott was murdered last night."

"What?"

"Furthermore," I told her, "our

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Another one of those periodic controversies is now going on in The Saturday Review, between Poetry Editor John Clardi and his readers. Cause of the quarrel is Clardi's long analysis of Robert Frost's poem, "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening," which appeared in SR a few weeks ago. The analysis precipitated a deluge of objections from all sorts of people who claimed that poetry should be left alone and not spoiled by the kind of minute examination Clardi made. In his reply, Clardi claims that you have to analyze a poem in order to understand it properly, or at least to get to the point where understanding is possible. We'll have to agree with him there.

—A poem is not enough if it's just a group of meaningless words strung together, no matter how beautiful the words are. Not that the analysis should displace the poem—but sometimes you have to have both, whether you want them or not.

New Appointment

Speaking of Robert Frost, we hear from Henry Holt Company, his publishers, that he has just been made "Consultant in Poetry in English" for the Library of Congress during 1958-1959. This honor caps a long string—just last year the State Department sent him to England where he was a much more successful good-will ambassador than a high public official was recently in another part of the world. In England, Frost received degrees from Oxford, Cambridge and Dublin Universities. He won the Pulitzer Prize in Poetry four times, and received special recognition from Congress on his 75th birthday back in 1950. Early next year, Holt will issue another edition of his poems, written since publication of his last book, "Complete Poems," in 1949. It should be an important literary event.

Commencement Plug

The Honorable George Allen, director of the U.S. Information Agency for the State Department—and a Tarheel, by the way—gave a good speech at E.C.C.'s commencement exercises last Sunday. What interested us especially were his remarks about books and libraries in the State Department's campaign for good-will abroad. . . . To foreigners, he said, the American idea of a free public library in every town is completely new, and something that has been a great boon to our prestige. Getting books and people together, and encouraging everybody to read more are unique functions that American librarians perform in their capacity as custodians and distributors of books. They're not, as they are in most countries, watchdogs to keep people away. The more people read, the better our librarians like it—just drop in at Sheppard Memorial anytime, if you want to see what we mean.

New Arrivals

Recently delivered to us for review in these columns are three new books about the South that should interest many of you. . . . "Gift From the Hills," in a beautiful edition from Bobbs-Merrill, is the story of Miss Lucy Morgan's establishment of the Penland School of Handicrafts over in

Loves To Preach And Proves It

OMAHA (AP)—Because Dr. T.D. Fitzgerald loves to teach, he does not mind a 900-mile commuting trip.

Once every two weeks, Dr. Fitzgerald travels from Alliance, Neb., to Omaha to spend a day teaching in the Creighton University department of preventative medicine and public health which he formerly headed. He returns to Alliance that night.

"I've been doing this since 1953," Dr. Fitzgerald says. "It's a voluntary arrangement."

Ten-Year-Olds Started It All

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—There is a little graveyard here with a flock of markers, called Animal Hill in the manner of the Western badmen's cemetery, Boot Hill.

Ten-year-olds Jerry Williams, Terry Hill and Larry Martin said they got started with a blue jay that forgot to go south for the winter. Now there are crosses for 15 birds, two rats, one hamster and one snake.

"We kept finding the birds," Larry said. "After we started putting up the crosses, other people would bring them." Now there's a painted sign labelling the place.

In The Market For Used Skulls

BOSTON (AP)—Boston City Hospital is in the market for skulls—animal skulls of any type. This came to light when the mayor received a request from hospital officials for $2,500 to pay for the craniums.

Officials did not specify where they would get the skulls, which would be used to teach anatomy to student nurses and other hospital personnel.

Neosho, Mo., is so intent on beautifying the city that garlands of flowers are placed around garbage cans.

In Recognition Of The Presidents Speech, May 20, we are complying with His Request That Business Make an Attempt to Better Satisfy Consumer Needs By Lowering Prices and thereby creating A New and Justifiable Market — This is an experiment on our Part — It can last only so long as our Volume Takes up our Arbitrary Loss on Retail Prices. Therefore Effective Immediately and Continuing as Long as is Feasible we are Reducing All Merchandise By 10 per cent, 20 per cent and in some cases 30 per cent.
