DE GAULLE FORMING A NEW GOVERNMENT

Rayburn Agrees Big Tax Cuts Unneeded

WASHINGTON (AP)—Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) said today he is "in full accord" with President Eisenhower's recommendation against substantial tax reductions this year.

Rep. Wilbur Mills (D-Ark.), chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, concurred in Rayburn's statement at a joint news conference.

Mills said his committee will start consideration tomorrow of a bill to continue corporate and excise tax rates at their present levels.

These rates, under existing law, would drop automatically July 1. Eisenhower has asked Congress to continue them to prevent an estimated three-billion-dollar drop in revenues.

Several members of Congress have said they will seek a reduction in the excise tax on automobiles, whose sales have been lagging.

A bill to extend the present corporation and excise rates is expected to reach the House floor early in June.

Rayburn said he does not favor a general decrease in taxes now. He said both he and Mills are "in accord with the statement (from the President) that there will be no further recommendations for tax reductions this year."

"I have never thought that a tax reduction would be very potent in stopping a recession," Rayburn said. He added he could not comment on whether the recession is tapering off.

Republican congressional leaders said the administration's stand against any antirecession tax cut is prompted by the uneasy international situation and the threat of inflation. Senate Minority Leader William F. Knowland of California gave newsmen that word after he and other GOP chiefs had held their weekly meeting with President Eisenhower.

Eisenhower yesterday said he opposes any general tax reduction now. In doing so he renewed his request for a one-year extension of corporation and excise taxes at current levels.

At a news conference, Knowland was asked whether Eisenhower had explained why he had decided against any general tax reduction. The senator replied Eisenhower would have to speak for himself. But Knowland added that Secretary of the Treasury Anderson, who attended today's session, had made it clear the administration is concerned about the revenue loss which would result from any cut.

It also is concerned, Knowland quoted Anderson as saying, with the international situation and "the implication of a widening deficit and inflationary pressures" which might result from a reduction.

Rayburn said there will be a bill this year to provide tax relief for small business as recommended by the President. Rayburn said present estimates are that the government will have a three-billion-dollar deficit for the year ending June 30 and from eight to 10 billions for the following year.

"I just don't feel like the Treasury could stand a tax reduction of any kind this year," he said. Mills said Anderson will testify at tomorrow's Ways and Means Committee session.

Since tax-raising and tax-cutting legislation must originate in the House, the position of the House speaker and the chairman of the tax-writing committee could be considered decisive on the issue.

The President's stand was announced late yesterday after earlier conferences between congressional leaders and the Secretary of the Treasury Anderson. Presumably it had the advance blessing of the House leaders.

Although some senators disagreed, Chairman Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.) of the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax legislation, openly welcomed the administration stand. He said tax cuts could start a new spiral of inflation.

Eisenhower called again for action to halt scheduled reductions in corporation and excise taxes due to go into effect July 1.

American Said Pilot For Rebels

JAKARTA (AP)—The Indonesian army said tonight the pilot of a rebel Indonesian bomber shot down by government forces is an American. The army identified him as Allan Lawrence Pope of Miami, Fla.

The army said Pope was one of two airmen captured after their U.S.-built B26 bomber was shot down in flames near Amoy May 18 while attacking Indonesian government ships.

The government said at the time that one of the two was a foreign national but refused to disclose his nationality.

The chief army spokesman, Lt. Col. Piringadja, said both captured airmen had been brought to Jakarta and are held at an undisclosed place. He said Pope is 30 and has a wife and two children.

He said documents found on him showed that Pope formerly was a U.S. Air Force lieutenant and now is with the "Civil Air Transport, with headquarters in Taipei, Formosa." CAT is the air line founded by Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault of Flying Tiger fame.

Piringadja said Pope had admitted receiving $10,000 from Indonesian rebel leader Lt. Col. Ventje Sumual.

The other captured airman was identified as an Indonesian, Jan Harry Rantung.

U.S. Embassy officials here said they knew nothing about Pope and had not been told of his capture.

Fund Directors Meet Tonight

Directors of Pitt County's United Fund will meet tonight to adopt the constitution and by-laws of the organization and to set the dates for the 1958 United Fund campaign in Pitt County.

E. E. Rawl, Sr., president of the organization, said a date for the annual stockholders meeting of the organization will also be set. He explained that each person who makes a contribution to the United Fund will be a stockholder in the organization.

Tonight's meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at the Carolina Sales building, Evans and Fourteenth Streets in Greenville. Rawl urged all members of the board of directors of the United Fund to be present for the meeting.

ANY DOGS AROUND?

Winterville Man Stabbed In Heart, Woman Charged

WINTERVILLE — A Negro man was stabbed through the heart in a home on West Railroad Street here last night.

He has been identified by Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson as James Richardson, 58, of Winterville.

Arrested in the case was Retha Perkins, 28-year-old Negro woman. The sheriff said the Perkins woman had been charged with murder and placed in Pitt County Jail without bond.

No inquest into the death has been set but Sheriff Tyson said he planned to confer with Coroner Griffin H. Rouse today.

The Perkins woman, mother of five children has admitted stabbing Richardson, according to the sheriff, and she claimed he had molested her eight-year-old daughter.

Winterville Police Chief James Buck, who called in the Sheriff's Department to assist in the investigation, said Richardson was still alive when he reached the scene. However, the injured man took only a few breaths after the chief arrived and died on the spot. Richardson was found near the door steps of the Perkins woman's home.

Richard had been stabbed only once but his heart was penetrated. The stabbing occurred around 9 o'clock last night.

The arrest was made by Sheriff Tyson, Chief Buck and Deputy Loyd Manning.

Chief Buck stated when he first arrived at the scene he thought Richardson was drunk. He noted that he was lying on his side in the middle of the sidewalk approximately 20 feet from the Perkins woman's house.

"I found out he was hurt when I turned him over and found blood running out of his mouth and blood all over his clothing," the local police officer stated. "He breathed a few times and died."

According to Buck, Richardson was stabbed in the front room of the woman's house and fell out into the street. Physical evidence at the scene of the crime indicate the victim was then dragged about 10 feet from the house where he was found minutes later by officers.

The death weapon has been described as a paring knife. It was found this morning by Chief Buck in an apple basket in the Perkins residence.

Sheriff Tyson quoted the Perkins woman as saying Richardson was "bothering" her daughter and was trying to get her to go home with him. Both the victim and the assailant were drinking, the Sheriff stated.

Fountain Seeks To Issue Bonds

FOUNTAIN — Fountain's Board of Commissioners has petitioned the North Carolina Local Government Commission for permission to issue $17,000 in bonds for purchase of a new fire truck and for drilling a well.

If the project is approved by the state agency and by Fountain voters in a special election, the commissioners propose to use $6,000 of the funds for the fire truck. The remaining $11,000 will be earmarked for a new town well.

Sues Airline In Husband's Death

CHARLOTTE (AP)—A Charlotte woman is suing Piedmont Airlines for $300,000, alleging negligence in the death of her husband.

Mrs. Blandine S. Pruitt, filing the suit yesterday, said Oren Ace Pruitt plunged to his death June 13, 1956 on a Piedmont flight from Charlotte to Asheville.

The suit said Pruitt, after finding a washroom door locked, pulled an unmarked handle that opened the outside door. The outside airstream sucked him from the plane over the Shelby area.

Earlier, the Navy announced it would continue training its fledgling pilots instead of using civilian instructors for primary flight training as the Air Force and the Army do.

The Navy made its stand known in a news release at an Aviation Writers' Assn. meeting here, talking issue with certain recommendations of a survey conducted by a Cleveland firm, Robert Heller and Associates.

The Navy described the Aeronautical Training Society of Washington, D. C., which made the Heller report public, as a "bargaining agent for civilian flight training organizations."

ATS represents the primary, instrument and ROTC flight training schools which conduct primary training for the Air Force and the Army.

The Heller report, made public at ATS urging after being kept secret for more than a year and a half, estimated the Navy could save almost seven million dollars a year by using civilian flying instructors.

"We feel logically that even the most qualified civilian instructor could not give the military leadership experience to our students, which we feel is imperative," the Navy statement said.

Urges Nation To Remain Calm As Leftists Strike

PARIS (AP)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today started forming a new French government. There were growing indications that he would have the assistance of President Rene Coty and Premier Pierre Pflimlin.

A source at the President's Elysee Palace, who would not be named, said the resignation of the Pflimlin Cabinet could be expected tonight.

PARIS (AP)—Premier Pierre Pflimlin today refused to step down so that Gen. Charles de Gaulle could form a government. Pflimlin reached his decision after a Cabinet meeting and two conferences with President Rene Coty.

The same source said De Gaulle saw the Premier during his mysterious visit to Paris last night. The two agreed on the formation of a new government, which would be headed by De Gaulle but include at least some of the ministers now in office.

The meeting between De Gaulle and Pflimlin took place at the country estate of Defense Minister and Pierre de Chevigne, a few miles west of Paris.

The two men talked over the grave political situation France is facing as result of the virtual breakdown of the French generals in Algeria and the mounting clamor for the World War II hero to take over.

De Gaulle announced earlier in the day he was moving to take over the government. He urged the nation to remain calm.

He promised a quick contact with the Gaullist leaders in Algeria to settle that crisis on the Right.

New trouble boiled up for France on the far Left. Hundreds of thousands of workers began laying down their tools in a general strike called by the huge Communist-controlled General Confederation of Labor to protest against De Gaulle's rise to power.

Paris suburban train service was tied up. Northern coal fields were deserted. Many factories were idle. But non-Communist unions were not cooperating. Paris subway service was reported normal. Only 40 of the city's 1,700 buses returned to their garages.

The National Assembly recessed shortly before De Gaulle issued his statement. Premier Pierre Pflimlin and members of his Popular Republic Movement (CMRP) hurried off to see President Rene Coty.

No one at his Paris headquarters had advance notice that he intended issuing a statement. From his country home 150 miles from Paris, De Gaulle telephoned the declaration to his orderly officer, Lt. Col. Gaston de Bonneval, in Paris.

"I depend on that process being carried through and that the country will show by its calm and its dignity that it wishes it to succeed."

"In these conditions any action from whatever side it may come, which threatens public order, risks having grave consequences. I could not approve it."

"I expect the land, sea and air forces in Algeria to remain exemplary under the orders of their chiefs—Gen. (Raouf) Salan, Adm. (Philippe) Aubouneau, Gen. Edmond Jouhaud."

De Gaulle expressed his confidence in those military chiefs and added that he would make immediate contact with them.

The military chiefs in Algeria first launched the move to bring De Gaulle to power.

It was not immediately clear whether the World War II hero had been asked by President Coty to form a government.

A spokesman at the presidential palace said he was not aware that Coty had asked De Gaulle to step in. But he added that could have been done by telephone.

De Gaulle slipped into Paris last night and presumably set the takeover machinery in motion. He spent four hours in Paris, then returned to his home near Metz.

In the wake of De Gaulle's statement Communist and non-Communist leaders met together and decided to make immediate joint contact with the government.

Members of Pflimlin's MRP party went into caucus.

De Gaulle is 67. He dropped out of French political life in 1946 disdainful of the nation's political system. He stepped into France's blackest crises two weeks ago when he came to Paris to announce that he was willing to take over the reins of government—but on his own terms. Then he returned to his country home.

All along, the Communists have threatened to tie up the country with strikes if De Gaulle came to power.

Before De Gaulle's announcement, the National Assembly went into session for what had been considered a last-ditch effort to shore up the Pflimlin government.

The Assembly began and then adjourned an urgent debate on constitutional revisions aimed at strengthening the feeble executive system in an effort to keep De Gaulle from taking power.

Subs Sail Thirty Days Underwater

GROTON, Conn. (AP)—Two of the nation's atom submarines—the Skate and the Seawolf—have sailed for 30 days and more under the sea to set new endurance records.

Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations, hailed the records as "major breakthroughs of the first magnitude with implications far beyond undersea warfare."

During a training exercise, the Skate operated continuously underwater for 31 days and 5 1/2 hours. The Seawolf surfaced after 30 days. She held the previous endurance record of 16 days.

Burke made the dramatic announcement moments before the nation's sixth and fastest nuclear vessel, the Skipjack, slid down the ways into the choppy gray waters of the Thames River.

The Skate rode quietly at anchor only a short distance away in the yards of the General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division, where it, too, had been launched only last year.

Burke said the time spent underwater by the 160 men of the two vessels was the longest known period in which man has been exposed to an artificial atmosphere under actual rather than laboratory controlled conditions.

UN Truce Chief Dies In Crossfire

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israel and Jordan each blamed the other today for the death of Canadian truce chief Lt. Col. George Flint, killed in a crossfire while trying to arrange a truce between battling units of the two nations.

Flint's own chief of staff said it could not be determined which side fired the bullet that felled the head of the Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission on Mt. Scopus in Old Jerusalem yesterday. Four Israelis also were killed on the Jordan-surrounded Israeli enclave adjoining the Mount of Olives.

The death of the 47-year-old veteran of World War II and the Korean War brought expressions of sympathy from Jordan's King Hussein, U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and the Israeli government.

Flint had accompanied a Jordan patrol to investigate rifle fire on Mt. Scopus. Stepping out in front of the Jordan patrol, he was hit as he sought to stop the fire exchange to permit removal of four wounded Israeli guards.

Flint could not be rescued in the heavy crossfire that continued and died to death before aid reached him.

One Israeli officer and three soldiers also were killed in the exchange. It was the gravest Israeli-Jordan border incident in months. No Jordan casualties were reported.

Thinks Public May Be Turned Against Tobacco

CUMBERLAND FALLS STATE PARK, Ky. (AP)—President James P. Richards of Tobacco Institute Inc. says prejudice and misunderstanding may be turning the public against smoking.

Richards told the Burley Auction Warehouse Assn. here yesterday the institute hopes to serve as a fact center to dispel attacks on tobacco as a health menace.

The former South Carolina congressman, who served last year as President Eisenhower's roving Mideast envoy, said the recently organized institute plans to stress the important position tobacco plays in the nation's economy.

"It is not right," he said, "that the American public be misled by the anti-cigarette side of a question on which there is such marked divergence of opinion by leading scientists and doctors the world over."

Drag Mill Pond For Fisherman

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP)—Dragging operations continued today for the body of 60-year-old shad fisherman Jim Beatty of Smithfield, who drowned last night in treacherous Sarah Barbara Mill Pond.

Friends watched helplessly from the shore as Beatty fell from a small boat into the pond which was almost twice its normal depth and swirling with dangerous currents.

One man attempted to rescue him by holding out a shad bow— a cutting device connected to a 10 foot wooden pole. It failed by three feet of reaching the tiring Beatty who was clutching a log.

Bystanders said Beatty let go the log in a futile effort to reach the bow of his boat. The swift currents then rushed him downstream.

Group Plans Fight To Extend Jobless Relief

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bipartisan Senate group planned a fight today to broaden legislation to extend unemployment benefits. But supporters of an emergency bill said they have the votes to pass it without change.

A final vote on an anti-recession measure was possible today, but there was some sentiment a debate began to wait until tomorrow for a vote.

The emergency bill, already passed by the House, follows closely Eisenhower administration recommendations in this field.

Douglas and Kennedy prepared amendments that would both broaden the temporary features of the bill and write in higher permanent standards for jobless payments. Such payments now vary in duration and amount under state laws.

The group favoring a stronger bill contended the House-passed measure would provide no help for many jobless workers who have exhausted unemployment payments.

A controversial feature of the bill would make the temporary program optional with the states. This was a departure from administration recommendations. Douglas and Kennedy said most states have reported their legislatures would have to take action before they could participate in the program.

However, Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland of California predicted the Senate would pass the bill as it came from the Senate Finance Committee.

"I believe there is substantial support for the bill on both sides as it is," Knowland said. "It meets the immediate needs."

"If there are to be permanent changes in the law, these should be studied more thoroughly in committee."

Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D-Va.), chairman of the Finance Committee, also said he understood there were sufficient votes to defeat amendments.

Byrd told the Senate the states should use their reserve unemployment funds before calling for federal help.

The bill sent to the Senate floor would permit states to get federal loans to extend by as much as 50 per cent the number of weeks insured workers could receive jobless payments. The amount of the payments would not be changed. This would mean an extra 13 weeks in most states. To repay the loans, the payroll tax on employers in participating states would be increased, beginning in 1963, unless the money had been repaid otherwise by the states.

NO ROOM FOR DEAD

EGREMONT, Mass. (AP)—This town of 851 residents has nowhere to bury its dead. There is no room in either the Riverside or Town House Hill cemeteries, the town's two burial areas. And now the voters have defeated a proposal to purchase three acres of land for burial purposes.

Disclosure Of Child Bride Cut Short Singer's Stay In Britain

LONDON (AP)—American singer Jerry Lee Lewis and his 13-year-old bride packed up and headed for home today as British theaters canceled the rock 'n' roll shouter's tour in the face of rising public resentment.

They checked out and told us they were catching the first plane for the United States," said a reception clerk at the singer-pianist's hotel.

"It's all very unfortunate," said Oscar Davis, manager of the three-married Lewis, "and there could be a reaction in the States."

Lewis was greeted in London last night with catcalls, boos and shouts of "Go home, you cradle-snatcher."

While this was going on in one theater, another teen-age idol, British-born Shirley Bassey dodged rotten eggs and ripe tomatoes in another theater.

Miss Bassey was making her first London appearance since her successful six-month tour of Australia.

Reasons for the resentment against her were less obvious. But, before Shirley shoved off for Australia, she made headlines when a jilted-boy friend held her prisoner at gun point in a London hotel. The spurned suitor is now serving three years in jail.

the reason for public anger over Lewis.

A sinister silence greeted his first number.

"Yawl seem awful quiet out there," drawled Jerry Lee. "I sho hope yawl ain't as half dead as yawl sound."

In the parlance of show business, Jerry Lee was asking for it. "Go home, you crumb," someone shouted.

"Go home, baby - snatcher," yelled someone else.

"We've had enough of you," chorused several young men.

Lewis put down his head, played away at his piano, sang above the din and finished his show.

Later, a crowd gathered outside his dressing room and bawled shouts through a keyhole.

'Poppy Day' Originator Cousin Of Local Women

Miss Moira Michael of Athens, Ga., who originated the idea of wearing the Flanders poppy in memory of the World War dead, is the third cousin of Mrs. Bernard McGee of Greenville, mother of Mrs. F. Richard Atkinson, also of Greenville.

Miss Michael conceived the idea of making the poppy the war memorial flower before the signing of the Armistice in 1918.

While serving on a Y.M.C.A. staff, a soldier placed a copy of a current issue of a magazine on a table which contained Colonel John McCrea's "In Flanders' Field."

Miss Michael read and reread the poem and dedicated her coming years to "keeping the faith" and wrote a poetic pledge of the same name.

She then began to devote all of her time to the spreading of the movement. The Georgia department of the American Legion adopted it as the memorial flower in 1920 and the same year the national convention followed suit. Today Poppy Day is observed among all of the allied nations of the war.

May 31 has been proclaimed Greenville Poppy Day.

The Distinguished Service Medal, the highest honor within the gift of the American Legion Auxiliary, was presented to Miss Michael in Symphony Hall, Boston, in 1930. The medal had at this time only been conferred to one other American woman—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

Wyatt's Looking For Certain Gal

By VIVIAN BROWN

AP Newfeatures

You can't pull the wool over the eyes of a wide-awake bachelor like Hugh O'Brien, and that's one reason why he's still looking for a wife, he says.

Quick-on-the-trigger O'Brien is just as fast spotting flaws in a girl as he is a target.

"I'm ripe for marriage," admits the handsome, rugged former athlete, champion marksman and TV personality, "but I'm afraid of it. Most women try to trick men into believing they are something they are not."

Thirty-two-year-old O'Brien, who plays Wyatt Earp in a TV series, claims he isn't girl shy. He dates Flann James, social belle, and once was really in love "with a girl who had everything" when he was in the Marine Corps. His ideal may have died with her.

"I meet lots of glamor girls. They look beautiful in evening clothes and think life is one big cocktail party. I don't want to marry a hothouse flower. I want a wife who is a companion. Even if she doesn't enjoy my choice of outdoor sports, she should love me enough not to complain."

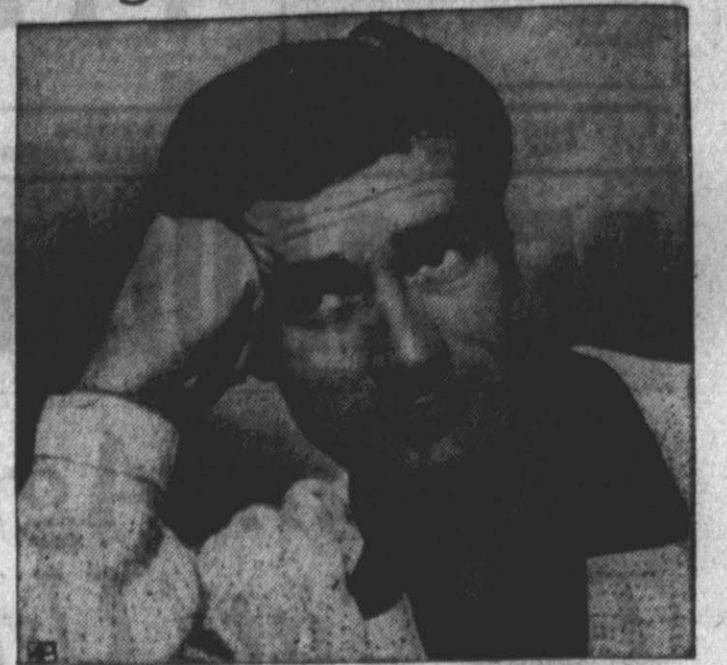

He isn't selfish, he says. The way to make a marriage last is to keep the man happy, he says, a secret most women refuse to recognize. "Keep a man happy," O'Brien says, "and he'll keep you in seventh heaven."

O'Brien gets lots of marriage proposals, but most fans advise him to wait, and he sure plans to do just that. "I won't say 'I.D.O.' until I find a girl I can't live without."

What are some mistakes husband-seekers make? "They talk too much," he says. "Girls who drink to excess invite his scorn too. They think they are the life of the party," he says, "but who wants to marry a road show?"

Tight-fitting gowns and plunging necklines are no bait for an O'Brien type either. "A man may be attracted to the obvious," he says, "for a little while, but he'll soon lose interest. A girl who is inconspicuously dressed has more chance to make a man really aware of her charms."

And if a woman doesn't respect a man, they can never make a go of marriage, one reason why he'll insist on that quality in his future wife.

THE PRESCRIPTION PHARMACY

IT DOESN'T ALWAYS
PAY TO BE BRAVE . . .

Adults too often put on a show of courage with a "cold," rather than retire and rest—and call the Doctor. Pneumonia sometimes attacks such stalwarts.

Do not try to be brave with a "cold," however simple. Follow the well-established guidance—rest, eat a well-balanced diet, and drink plenty of water and fruit juices. If symptoms persist, call your Doctor promptly, while there is still time for treatment of the current illness and prevention of possible hazardous complications. If medicines are indicated, we will be happy to render the best in Pharmaceutical service in filling your Doctor's prescriptions.

Help For Agriculture; Is That All?

For more than 40 years Pitt County has been spending local tax money year after year for the promotion and improvement of its agriculture. Over a period of years the wisdom of this tax supported program has proved itself time and again.

Is it not now time that the county add to this expenditure for agricultural development a small portion for industrial development?

Through programs of the Farm Agent's and Home Agent's offices, great strides have been made in the development and application of better farming practices. The productivity of land, the yield of crops, the diversification of agriculture and the increase in farm income all have been results of the program which was underwritten in this county by the expenditure of local tax funds.

When voters of Pitt go to the polls Saturday they will be asked whether the county should now begin a somewhat similar program designed to promote the development of the county's industrial potential.

If a majority of the voters cast their ballots in favor of the proposed industrial development tax, Pitt will have a county-wide development commission designed to promote industrial development. If voters are against the measure, the proposed development program will not become a reality as it is tentatively planned.

Under the legislative act which provides for the establishment of an industrial development program for Pitt, the county commissioners would be allowed to levy a special county-wide tax of up to three cents per $100 valuation.

The proposed development tax levy would yield approximately $17,000 to $20,000 annually. With that amount Pitt could establish an effective program for developing home-grown industry to go hand-in-hand with agriculture. It could mount an effective program for attracting industry here from other areas.

Would such a program produce results? Would it bring new industries to Pitt County? Would it provide new jobs, new payrolls and thereby boost the county's economy?

The only way to answer those questions is to look to the experience of another county which has launched a similar venture.

For the past 22 months there has been in operation in Union County a tax supported industrial development commission similar to the one proposed for Pitt County.

In that 22 months Union County has secured seven new industries which will eventually employ some 730 people. These seven new industries are expected to develop an additional payroll of almost $2,000,000 annually for Union County.

A good return on an investment of $17,000 a year by Union County?

We think so. In addition to the new jobs and new payrolls, the new industries will also pay taxes to the county, purchase supplies, buy services and provide more buying power for residents of the county.

A good many people in Pitt County recognize that this county must begin to develop its industrial potential along with its agriculture if it is to reach a new and higher economic plateau. A county-wide development program—supported by county tax funds—is the sound approach to the matter.

Certainly no one interested in the economic progress of Pitt County would advocate abandoning the programs designed to develop agriculture. Over a period of years they have proved their worth to the county in dollars and cents. Yet few people stop to realize that these agricultural development programs cost money . . . local tax money. During the current fiscal year Pitt County is spending more than $70,000 in local tax funds to carry out the programs of the Farm Agent, the Home Agent and the vocational agriculture and home economic teaching in the county's schools.

In order to further develop and balance our economy should we not provide for some small expenditure of tax money to be directed toward industrial development in our county?

The Daily Reflector urges the voters of Pitt County to go to the polls Saturday and vote in favor of the proposed tax levy for industrial development of our county.

Primaries Are The Next Step

By LYNN NISBET
VOTING — If your name is not properly entered on the precinct registration book you need not bother with regulations for voting in Saturday's primary. It's too late to correct that omission. If you are properly registered the following information may be of value.

The polls open at 6:30 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, and close at 6:30 p.m. There is provision that in precincts where voting machines are used the county board of elections may permit the polls to remain open until 7:30.

Technically, there are two primaries — one for Democrats and one for Republicans. They are conducted by the same officials and under the same rules. There can be no independent or cross-voting in the primary. Only registered Democrats will be entitled to mark a Democratic ballot, and only registered Republicans can obtain a Republican ballot. Very few precincts have a Republican primary. There can be no write-in names on primary ballots. A written-in name probably would have the effect of voiding the entire ballot.

Each voter will be entitled to only one ballot of each kind, handed him by a judge of the election after his name has been checked by the registrar. If he wrongly marks or spoils the ballot, he may return it to the registrar and get another. If he spoils three ballots, he is out of luck. He can't get any more. Use of voting machines complicates the matter of correcting mistakes before pulling the main lever.

No voter will be permitted to enter a booth, either for pencil marking or machine voting, occupied by another; and no voter shall be allowed to occupy a booth for more than five minutes if others are waiting. Permission for husband and wife to occupy the same booth and for aid if marking ballots is largely at discretion of the registrar.

ARRANGEMENT — The statute is very explicit about the physical arrangement at polling places — even to the point of printing in the law books a diagram of the lay-out. It is quite probable that no polling place in the whole state fully meets these requirements.

G.S. 163-165 provides: "No person shall, while the polls are open at polling places, loiter about or do any electioneering within such polling place or within fifty feet thereof, and no political banner, poster, or placard shall be allowed in or upon such polling places during the day of the election. The election officials and ballot boxes shall at all times be in plain view of the qualified voters who are present, and a guard rail shall be placed not nearer than ten feet nor further than twenty feet from the said election officials and ballot boxes."

IMPOSSIBLE — Most polling places are in school houses or country stores, or porches of private homes or in fire stations and city halls. The 10, 20 and 50 feet limitations simply cannot be applied.

Your reporter votes at Raleigh No. 1 precinct in the fire station at Oberlin Road and Park Avenue. There isn't a room in the fire house as much as 20 feet wide, or more than 50 feet from a public street. Voting machines are used except in some special elections where only one ballot box one issue is involved.

It is a compact set-up with election officials, voting booths and ballot boxes (when required) all jammed in approximately 100 square feet. Political workers campaign literature is much in evidence on the street — less than 50 feet away. It is impossible to comply with the letter of the law. But in more than 50 elections — primary, regular and special — during the past 20 years there has never been a suspicion of complaint that the spirit of a fair election was not maintained. That story can be duplicated at some 2,000 precincts in North Carolina.

ALEXANDER — "Alexander county with 1904 farms is one of the smallest and most diversified counties in the Piedmont section of North Carolina," states the opening sentence of a 1957 Progress Report of the county. The report deals almost exclusively with agriculture. It does not include progress in public schools and public health or additional hospital facilities and other items of equal importance.

Major farm activities include broiler and commercial egg production; dairying and beef cattle; fine-cured tobacco, corn, small grains, apples and peaches.

Farm income was up more than $600,000 last year over 1956, due mainly to diverted attention from row-crops to livestock and poultry. Despite a loss of $407,425 to $4,612,352.

Progress was not limited to the 1957 returns. Much attention was given to soil conservation and reforestation. Nearly a quarter million pine seedlings were set out during the year. Forest fire damage was reduced more than 50 per cent by improved control methods.

Not showing up on the 1957 achievement report, but of tremendous long-range significance, was the emphasis placed on work with young people in 4-H, Future Farmers and Future Homemakers clubs.

Alexander County belongs to the Northwest North Carolina Area Development Association and copped several prizes last year for community progress.

France Retains An Old Delusion

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — The root of the troubles of France, once again in crisis, is in its split personality. It has a bagful of splits.

It has an ancient political history but in 1938 it is still a political juvenile and can't adjust. For Frenchmen freedom is a one-way street. Freedom is for them — not for the colonial peoples under their control.

This cradle of European liberty has never stopped being colonial minded. In their insistence upon maximum freedom for themselves they have operated through a mess of political parties which have made every postwar government unstable, paralyzed the nation and brought them to the edge of chaos.

And the French, once the masters of Europe, cannot get used to the idea that in the evolution of history they have become only a second-rate power at best. They still dream of glory.

Out of their chaos, their dreams of glory, their desire to hold what they have — in this case their Algerian colony — they look more and more not to freedom but to authority.

That authority is represented to them now in the person of one man: Charles de Gaulle. The French pride themselves on being practical minded but the growing devotion to and the desire for De Gaulle is in the realm of mysticism.

The French do not know — because De Gaulle has never said — exactly what he'll do or what direction he will take.

If they choose him as the master of their fate they are relying on hope and not on a stated policy. He has not stated his policy — he has not even clearly said whether he wants to be a dictator — except to indicate he wants plenty of power.

The freedom-minded French held on to their Middle East possessions until they could hold no longer. Their power in the Middle East is zero now.

They held Indochina until in World War II they were forced out by the Japanese. It was the British who had to go back into Indochina after the war and hold it for the French until they could resume control.

They showed no evidence of giving freedom to the Vietnamese, training neither an administrator nor an officer corps which would have been necessary to run a new government.

In the end the Indochinese nationalists, led by the Communists, revolted and forced the French to give up their hold on the country altogether.

They lost their grip on what they held in North Africa except for Algeria.

To the rebels in the last strong-hold of French colonialism — Algeria — the French said no to freedom. In short, they had learned nothing from all their disasters.

In an effort to crush these rebels, France had to pull its forces out of the NATO defense of Europe and send them to Algeria. And it still hasn't been able to win there.

Bit by bit France has been growing smaller, less powerful. The French, despite all their experience in politics, are too politically immature to face that realization.

They have not had 25 governments since World War II. What they face, if they pick De Gaulle, is something they can't even predict.

Public Forum

To The Editor:

May 31st will be a most important day in the history of Pitt County because on that date not only do we vote for our State Senator, County Commissioner and Sheriff, we will decide whether the proposed tax levy for the economic development of Pitt County is a reality.

In our democratic country we are given the right and privilege to vote, and it is the duty of each and every one of us to exercise this privilege to the fullest. We are abusing this privilege, however, even when we go to the polls and vote if we are not informed voters. It's awfully easy to let the "other fellow" do our thinking for us if we aren't particularly interested in what goes on around us. It's awfully easy to spin a cocoon around our home and our family and be content to "let the rest of the world go by." But our country wasn't built by men who were content in their own small domain. These men made it their business to be informed and they fought for their convictions. We need many more such men and women today.

When we go to the polls on the 31st, let's go as informed voters. We become informed through the medium of our newspapers, magazines, radio and TV, and by listening to and talking with men well versed on the subject.

Tonight, at 8:00 p.m., in the Court Room of City Hall, we will be given an opportunity to learn more about the tax issue on which we will vote May 31st. A panel discussion on the proposed tax levy for economic development of Pitt County will be held, with City Manager Leonard Bloxam, County Commissioner Woodrow Wooten and Newspaperman Dave Whitchard, III as the panelists. The public is urged to attend.

This meeting is being sponsored by the Greenville League of Women Voters, a non-partisan organization, whose purpose is to promote political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government.

The League on the past two Sundays also has presented to the public via television, Station WNCN, the Candidates for the State Legislature, County Commissioner and County Sheriff.

Let's make it our business to be informed.

5,000 Miles In B52

By VERN HAUGLAND
LORING AIR FORCE BASE, Maine (AP) — A 5,000-mile night-time jaunt eight miles above the earth is routine for the men flying the B52 intercontinental bomber—but a new thrill for an outsider.

Lifting some of the secrecy from this giant of the jets, the Air Force for the first time has permitted a newsmen to go along on a B52 training mission.

This one was a 10-hour simulated nuclear bombing run which included radar jamming and refueling. Ranging a zigzag, roundabout course of 5,000 miles or more, 12 B52s rained make-believe atomic death on successive bombing targets in Richmond, Va., St. Louis, Mo., and St. Paul, Minn.

Launched from this northern Maine base at 10-minute intervals, the big eight-jet Boeing bombers attacked from altitudes of 41,000 to 43,000 feet. Electronic scoring equipment on the ground tracked up the devastating accuracy that has become standard with B52s of the Strategic Air Command.

The mission also included ECM runs—sorties involving the use of electronic countermeasures to jam the enemy's radar—against Air Defense Command radar stations near Burlington, Vt., Williamsport, Pa., and Kirksville, Mo. There was a planned attempt by a radar-jamming simulator on the ground at St. Louis to knock out the radar aids by which the B52s navigated their way through darkness toward their targets.

The men aboard the B52s matched their wits against this simulator. When they could no longer identify on their radar scopes the landmarks along their course, the B52 operators switched to other frequencies. This usually gained them a few seconds in which to pinpoint their location before their sets were jammed again.

In spite of this interference they worked their way in and hit their targets. These B52s had to get over their targets to release their make-believe bombs. Already in production for delivery later this year is an improved version, the B52G. This can carry in addition to bombs the super-sonic, nuclear-armed Hound Dog guided missile which can be fired while still hundreds of miles from the target.

The final phase of the night-long mission was a series of high-altitude refuelings from four KC 135 tankers, with three B52s assigned to each tanker. Each bomber was required to take about 15 minutes of fuel within a half hour working period—a difficult task with wind and other conditions making for frequent separations.

Newsmen here and at Westover Air Force Base, Mass., also were permitted for the first time to watch "cooked" B52s—that is, bombers fully loaded with atomic weapons and fueled and ready for action—take part in practice alerts.

The average time for these cocked bombers, from the instant of the alarm until all eight engines were roaring and ready for taxiing, was eight minutes. Commenting Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweeney Jr., commander of the 8th Air Force: "These men have a fantastic responsibility. I remember back in 1948, when I wrote the first war plans, we thought in terms of retaliation within six days of an enemy attack."

"When we cut it down to hours. Now we can be off in 15 minutes—and over the target a very few hours later."

Opinions In Brief

"The level of glamor is frequently low in the fields of science, literature and arts. The output of men and women working in those fields is often hard to understand, yet their contribution to our society, though often obscure, is tremendous. Formal public recognition of merit among those who work primarily with their minds be not at all a bad idea."—Shreveport Journal.

Ulcerous Executive Type Myth

By ELMER ROESSNER

If somebody offers you a Van Dyck portrait of an overworked, harried, ulcerous martini-drinking business executive, don't buy it. Van Dyck never painted such a picture and, despite popular conception, the typical business executive doesn't look like that.

The idea that "your next promotion can kill you" has been fairly well disproved by a number of new researches.

Auren Uris, writing in the American Management Association's "Management Review," says there's nothing to the idea that a typical workday puts the typical executive through a wringing of multiple demands and crises that leave him limp and woe-weary. The fact is, he says, he never had it so good.

RUDDY AND REWARDED

Mr. Uris adds that the businessman is in much better condition than he thinks. It may be that in accepting the picture of himself as someone always under stress, he actually contributes to executive illness. A study of 3,500

Standard Procedure

By DON SCHLIENZ

Now, Strawberry Time

This is the Time of The Strawberry, that little juice-laden fruit of red capped with green, and literally bursting with flavor that makes initiates drool.

Sad to say, their day is short; and soon after the strawberry's first seasonal appearance housewives begin to hoard the tender fruit against future appetizing.

Freezers are being laden, jars being filled with preserves . . . and some young mothers have found that with molds and berry juice a tasty treat on a stick could be frozen for clamoring small fry on a warm afternoon.

The strawberries I recall with the fondest sort of memory were wild, growing along the fairways of a golf course visited on a long-ago vacation. The berries were tiny, about the size of the eraser on a pencil, and crammed full of the flavor you'd look for (and seldom find) in one of those over-sized monstrosities.

It was never really made clear whether the outings on the links were primarily devoted to golf or that obvious distraction.

You can eat chilled strawberries with a fine coating of sugar, with shortcakes, or with ice cream or whipped cream; or as any right-thinking youngster does . . . unwashed and still warm from the sun. Patient folk sometimes mix a quart of berries in a freezer of ice cream; some make strawberry pie, but that never did quite make a hit with me.

The days of spring and the strawberry may be numbered, but they whet the taste for other springs and still more berries.

Filled to repletion, the owner of a sated appetite only smiles to watch "cooked" B52s—that is, bombers fully loaded with atomic weapons and fueled and ready for action—take part in practice alerts.

The airing of issues and presenting candidates is one of the finest services The League of Women Voters can provide. In one sense, it is filling the gap in the political picture that occurred with the collapse of old style campaigning.

It's late in the campaign trail now, but the idea persists a bunting-draped speaker's platform on the court house lawn would still be appropriate.

There, candidates and their spokesmen could bend ears of willing listeners; debate and debate, heckle and argue, answer questions and pose them.

Now that the primary vote-getting drive is entering the final stretch I feel the old excitement of politics has been revitalized after a long rest.

Campaigners might find such a retraining a harrowing experience, but voters would find it refreshing and revealing. Latent interests might well be fired up after such a spectacle.

President Eisenhower has recorded his wartime appraisal of De Gaulle. The U.S. general felt that: "De Gaulle's many fine qualities were marred by hypersensitiveness and an extraordinary stubbornness in matters which appeared inconsequential to us. My own wartime contacts with him never developed the heat that seemed to be generated frequently in his meetings with many others."

Winston Churchill, in a passage warmly praising the wartime leader, recognizes that De Gaulle "felt it to be essential to his position before the French people that he maintain a proud and haughty demeanor towards 'perfidious Albion,' although an exile dependent upon our protection and dwelling in our midst." (For Albion, one could as easily read "The Sam.") Churchill recalls that De Gaulle "even . . . explained this technique" to him, and adds: "He certainly carried out this policy with perseverance."

ment of politicking has been revitalized after a long rest.

Campaigners might find such a retraining a harrowing experience, but voters would find it refreshing and revealing. Latent interests might well be fired up after such a spectacle.

President Eisenhower has recorded his wartime appraisal of De Gaulle. The U.S. general felt that: "De Gaulle's many fine qualities were marred by hypersensitiveness and an extraordinary stubbornness in matters which appeared inconsequential to us. My own wartime contacts with him never developed the heat that seemed to be generated frequently in his meetings with many others."

(For Albion, one could as easily read "The Sam.") Churchill recalls that De Gaulle "even . . . explained this technique" to him, and adds: "He certainly carried out this policy with perseverance."

The first U.S. gesture in World War II toward the De Gaulle Free French movement was the opening of lend-lease facilities by order of President Roosevelt on Nov. 11, 1941. But the State Department, still trying to maintain relations with the Vichy government, was painfully embarrassed when Free French forces on the following Dec. 24 unexpectedly occupied the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, off Newfoundland, ousting the Vichy regimes.

De Gaulle in turn was bypassed when the Allies invaded North Africa in November 1942.

This stiff, uncompromising man has twice admitted planning a coup d'etat. Perhaps he has best described his own type in his book The Army of the Future (1934):

"The depth, the singularity, the self-sufficiency of a man made for great deeds is not popular except at critical times. He is seldom liked. Moreover, his faculties, shaped for heroic feats, despise the pliability, the intrigue, and the parades through which most brilliant careers are achieved in peacetime."

Other Editors Saying --- DeGaulle And The U.S.

He protested vigorously when Gen. Eisenhower established Admiral Darlan, former Vichy premier as "responsible for French interests in Africa."

These frictions continued throughout the war and after it. De Gaulle suspected that the United States might attempt to return certain French African territory for postwar air and naval bases. There were difficulties over military currency. Above all was what Gen. Eisenhower described as De Gaulle's desire "to be clearly and definitely recognized by both the Allied governments as the ruler of France"—recognition which both Churchill and Roosevelt refused to extend.

Even before the war ended and he was made head of the provisional government, De Gaulle envisioned a permanent alliance with "dear and powerful Russia." For postwar France he proposed "socialization of economic, financial, and commercial enterprises essential to the life of the nation."

But in October 1947 he observed that only U.S. power could restrain Soviet ambitions. "There is not one free man in the world," he said, "who does not hold as salutary this American will."

Nevertheless, he opposed the European Defense Community plan in 1954, arguing that France should regain freedom from U.S. "interference" to foster coexistence between Russia and the United States.

Too many people still take politics for granted, and that's not the way it should be.

A real old-fashioned open-air meeting of office-seekers could do a lot toward whipping up personal interest in who's the man who can do the best job.

Raleigh Youngsters Form Missile Club

RALEIGH (AP)—From the top of a telephone pole to the top of the moon?

Maybe so. Anyhow, the Raleigh Ballistic Missile Club has plenty of enthusiasm, ingenuity and a fine eye for cost.

The club was organized recently after six youngsters experimented with launching a foot-long plastic rocket they bought at a beauty shop. With the fuel supplied, the tiny rocket wobbled four to six feet off the ground.

When they ran out of fuel, children put their little heads together and concocted their own secret fuel. Ingredients were vinegar, ammonia, baking soda and powder, calcium and several other elements.

The other elements are top secret, they said, but the whole thing was very inexpensive.

The home-made fuel sent the tiny rocket whooshing straight up, high above a telephone pole—200 feet, they estimated. And it kept on going so through several tries.

The six promptly organized. Brent Lawrence, whose backyard was the launching ground, was named owner. Charles Silver Jr. was elected club president; Sammy Capps, vice president; Tommy Fulghum, secretary; Sprague Silver Jr., treasurer; and the lone girl, Judy Fulghum, chief launcher.

The club wants to expand and is now open for new members—

Accused Burglar On Trial For His Life Tomorrow

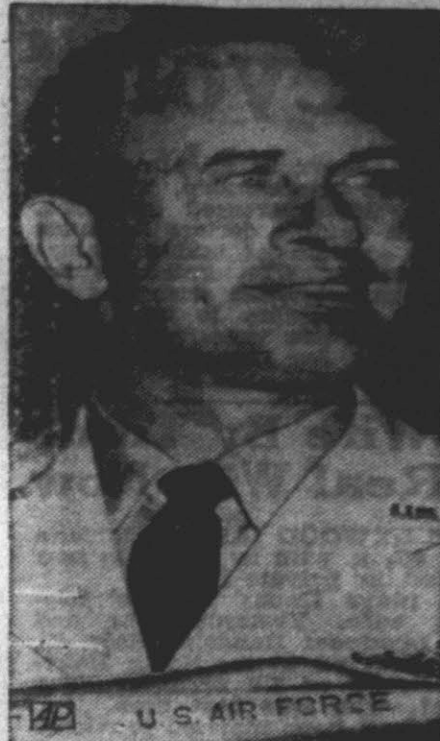

SANFORD, N.C. (AP)— Clarence Pugh, an ex-convict and accused burglar, is scheduled to go on trial for his life here tomorrow for the murder of C. O. Nodine.

Pugh, 48, of Valdese, pleaded innocent when he was arraigned in Lee County superior court yesterday, after the grand jury indicted him for the slaying of the Chatham County merchant.

A 75-member special venire of Lee County citizens was ordered by Judge Hugh B. Campbell of Charlotte for selection of a jury to hear the trial.

The 70-year-old Nodine was found shot three times with a pistol, near the Deep River Bridge in Lee County on May 15. He had disappeared from his Chatham County store the night before.

Pugh was arrested in connection with a Caldwell County burglary the day after Nodine's body was found. Officers said a pistol in his possession was linked by ballistics tests with the weapon which killed Nodine.

Biology-Forestry Building Ahead

DURHAM (AP)— Duke University plans to construct a biology-forestry building at an estimated $3½ million dollars.

The Executive Committee of the Duke Board of Trustees has commissioned Philadelphia architects to draw the plans. Construction is scheduled to begin by early fall with occupancy a year later.

The E-shaped building will contain three-story and five-story sections.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)— County commissioners have made "Plumb Nearly" the official name of a road southeast of Charlotte. Residents along the previously undesignated road said the name meant "plumb out of the city and nearly out of the county."

Dulles' Daughter Slated To Get Degree Tonight

NEW YORK (AP)— Secretary of State John Foster Dulles tonight sees his daughter, Mrs. Lillian Dulles Hinshaw, receive her bachelor of divinity degree.

She is the second of Dulles' three children to study theology. Two years ago, Dulles, the son of a Presbyterian minister, attended the ordination of his son Avery as a member of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) of the Roman Catholic Church.

Like her father, who is a ruling elder of the Brick Presbyterian Church here, Mrs. Hinshaw is a Presbyterian. She is 43 and the wife of Robert Hinshaw, a publicist man and a Quaker. They have four children.

Union Theological Seminary, which is graduating Mrs. Hinshaw, is nondenominational. Mrs. Hinshaw has passed her ordination examinations. "And if I find the job I am looking for, I can be ordained in the fall," she said at her home in Manhattan. A part-time job as assistant minister is her immediate objective. "The problem," she explained, "is that I like to be at home when the children come home from school, and evenings too." The oldest, Janet, 15, said: "We are all very proud of mother. Even when she was studying hard, she never stopped being a mother. Now we are all campaigning hard to help her get the kind of job she wants." Beside Janet, the family consists of David, 13; Foster, 10; and Lila, 7.

Herter Says People Must Learn To Live Together

RALEIGH (AP)—Peoples of the world must face the facts of international life and learn to live together. Undersecretary of State Christian A. Herter told Shaw University graduates yesterday.

The urgency of the need for education for international understanding was underscored recently by hostile demonstrations during Vice President Nixon's South American tour, Herter declared.

The Baptist college for Negroes awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree to Herter during the traditional graduation exercises. Other honorary degrees presented by Dr. William R. Strassne, Shaw president, went to: Asa Timothy Spaulding, Durham insurance executive, Doctor of Laws; the Rev. William Lockett Mason, Rocky Mount, and the Rev. Joshua Alpha Nimmon, Greenville, Doctors of Divinity.

Herter listed three reasons for urgency in developing understanding among nations and peoples. First, he said, lack of understanding may result in policies today the perfection of modern instruments of destruction makes limited military action ver difficult," he warned.

Second, extensive education is necessary to form ties with newly-emerged nations which have taken their place since the end of World War II.

The ideological struggle for uncommitted areas of the world, including Southeast Asia, Africa and parts of South America, provide a third urgent reason to develop understanding, he added.

Eyewitness Report On North Celebes Revolt

By JUSTIN K. B. Fuller
Written for The AP

The fighting which erupted on Central Sumatra in the Indonesian rebellion foreshadowed government moves against the North Celebes. The Sumatran insurgents were quickly routed. But I believe Jakarta will find the Celebes a tougher nut to crack.

I hadn't expected civil war when I arrived last October at Menado, Minahasan province, in the North Celebes. I had come to teach anthropology in Tondano Teachers College.

Almost immediately after starting at Tondano, I began commuting 30 miles a day to teach also at Permesta University, established by the Indonesian rebel Permesta (All Together) party at Menado.

In those earlier, placid days of the rebellion nobody seemed to mind that I was working both sides of the educational street. The central government at Jakarta, which had hired me for the Tondano post, actually granted me permission to work at Permesta University.

It was at Permesta University that I met and grew to understand the ideals and aspirations of the North Celebes rebels, who want the re-establishment of the United States of Indonesia which President Sukarno abolished and replaced with a centralized republic seven years ago.

The first government attack at Medano came as a complete surprise Feb. 22. Not a shot was fired at the attacking planes. They made three bombing and strafing passes, killing six and wounding many more.

Popular reaction was swift and violent. Shock gave way to anger. A soldier tore a portrait of President Sukarno from the wall of a bombed building and smashed it with his rifle. "How could the President order the bombing of his own people?" he shouted. "He is no longer our president."

On March 2, anniversary of the Permesta proclamation, scheduled celebrations were called off, but unscheduled fireworks were provided by central government bombers which returned to work over the airfield.

A few days later, two Indonesian navy corvettes shelled Bitung and Menado. Kerosene and oil tanks at the Shell Co. compound were hit at Menado. There the Permesta defenders opened up with everything they had, trench mortars, missiles, artillery pieces, and recoilless rifles. The return fire kept the corvette from pressing in too close.

One person was killed and eight wounded in the hourlong shelling, but the people of Menado now realized they were involved in a real-life war.

Most of my students enlisted in the army. Many foreigners, including most of the Dutch, prepared to leave. Soldiers now trained grimly.

Prices rose. Cigarettes vanished and gasoline—now that the tanks had been destroyed—was impossible to get without military authorization. What few ships did arrive brought weapons, and the province took on the appearance of an armed camp.

It seems to me that if Sukarno should lose the civil war, it will be because of the fighting spirit of the Minahasans.

Victory over rebellious Central Sumatra proved fairly easy; the Sumatran rebels lacked fighting spirit. Their cause was not a real grassroots movement.

The real grievance of the Sumatrans was overexploitation of their natural resources by a central government which collected but then neglected—not only in Sumatra but in all of the so-called outer provinces of Indonesia.

But instead of emphasizing this genuine grievance against the Jakarta government, the Sumatran rebel leaders stressed the Communist menace. This, though real enough in Java, seemed to the Sumatrans a rather vague and distant threat.

Not so in the Celebes. There the powerful sentiment of anticommunism is combined with a strong—and clearly enunciated—sense of dissatisfaction with Jakarta.

The Permesta movement was proclaimed March 2, 1957, by Col.

Ventje Sumual, military commander of East Indonesia. It became a popular cause in many ways.

For the workers of the North Celebes it has meant more jobs and higher wages, partly the result of the province's trade with Singapore. For the people in general—60 per cent of whom are Protestant and 40 Roman Catholic—it took on the aspect of a Christian revival movement.

A young Minahasan Catholic priest named his new church the "Permesta Church" because "it would never have been possible without the Permesta movement."

The new administration has contributed funds to both Catholic and Protestant churches and schools.

One of the first jobs of the Permesta movement was to clean up the local Communists. Some 30 Red leaders were arrested, and Communist party headquarters was converted into an army barracks.

While the army officers represent the authority behind the government, there is no atmosphere of military dictatorship. The people are not oppressed by taxes, since the regime derives its funds from a system of taxing plantation owners. With overwhelming popular support, the army has not found it necessary to limit freedom of speech, press, or assembly—except for Communist party members.

Elfrida Sets TV Quiz Show Winning Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Elfrida von Nardroff last night became the all-time high winner for a single TV quiz show.

The Brooklyn woman set a new mark when she won $50,000 to boost her bankroll on NBC-TV's Twenty-One to $216,500.

The highest single show winner had been 11-year-old Robert Strom, who won $192,000 on the CBS show The $64,000 Question.

Miss von Nardroff, 32, won $50,000 by defeating Frederick Rein of Alexandria, Va., in their fifth game. They competed for $2,500 a point in the difference between their scores.

The champion defeated Rein by a 21-1 score to add to her previous total of $166,500.

Miss von Nardroff and Rein, who is on the staff of the U.S. Information Agency, completed their fourth tie game last night after starting the program deadlocked at 10-10.

In the decisive game, Rein scored 11 and Miss von Nardroff 10 in the first round on world cities.

The challenger then missed a 10-pointer on political leaders when he was unable to name the late William Bankhead as one of the three men who have been speaker of the House of Representatives during the last 20 years.

Then, Miss von Nardroff correctly named the U.S. senators representing Massachusetts, Illinois, Wisconsin and Ohio states with senators from both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Miss von Nardroff returns next week to announce whether she will continue on the show with another contestant.

Biggest Profit Is In Experience

MILFORD, Mass. (AP) — An idea spawned on a rainy day more than a year ago has sprouted into a weekly newspaper — a two-page mimeographed sheet with some 100 subscribers.

"The Crockett" is the brainchild of Charles W. Calcagni II, the 11-year-old editor, and his brothers, Paul, 9, and David, 6. Three other local youngsters also pitch in on the project.

The weekly contains local items, poetry and editorial comments on the weather, recipes and breezy neighborhood items. The boys' mother helps with the typing and supervises the final layout of the pages, including its advertising.

The editor, who doubles as subscription manager, reports the paper's income at about $5 a week. The "payroll" is non-existent after the expenses are totaled.

Predict Holiday Death For 350

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic accidents in the nation will kill an estimated 350 persons during the Memorial Day holiday weekend, says the National Safety Council.

The council's predicted toll is for the period from 6 p.m. (local time) Thursday to midnight Sunday. The 350 estimate is about 50 more deaths than would be likely if the period were not Memorial Day weekend, the council said.

The council said that the estimate could be kept lower "if a large enough number of motorists and pedestrians use more care and judgment than they do habitually."

An estimated 40 million cars will be on the highways during the 78-hour holiday period, the first extended weekend of the spring season.

Prayer And Promise For Worried City

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) — A citizens meeting called in the wake of the explosion of eight Nike missiles at a nearby installation heard both a prayer and a promise last night.

The prayer was for the 10 men who lost their lives in Thursday's disaster.

The promise came from the Army, which vowed to do all in its power to prevent a recurrence of the tragedy.

Army spokesmen told the 200 residents at the meeting that any future changes in the Nikes will be made with only one of the missiles above ground at a time.

Brig. Gen. Charles D. Duff, commander of the 52nd Brigade, said the battery site at his base was not on an alert status when one of the missiles exploded and set off the others.

Duff, questioned closely on why so many of the missiles were above ground, said the weapons were in the process of being checked out before a scheduled alert.

The general said the new regulations permitting only one Nike above ground at a time would minimize the dangers of such a chain of explosions in the future.

He said the regulations are going into effect at Nike bases all over the country.

Duff added there would be an effort in the future to station career soldiers instead of draftees at Nike bases.

Hercules missiles expected here in early 1959 will not be equipped with nuclear warheads next year, Duff said.

Duff said it may be months before experts can determine exactly what set off the explosion.

Moscow Says Troops Will Be Pulled Out Of Romania

By ROY ESSOYAN
 MOSCOW (AP) — Announcing the Soviet Union will pull its troops out of Romania and reduce forces in Hungary, the Soviet bloc called on the NATO nations again today to join in a 25-year non-aggression pact.

At the same time, Premier Khrushchev threatened to set up rocket bases in East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia if the United States and its allies arm West Germany with nuclear weapons.

These disclosures appeared in a communique summing up the meeting of the Soviet Union and her East European allies in Moscow Saturday. The group met after a four-day economic conference of the members of the Warsaw Pact, the Communists counter to the North Atlantic Alliance.

Soviet troops have been in Romania since they liberated the Balkan neighbor on the Black Sea from the Germans in World War II. The communique did not specify the number, but some sources estimate the total at 30,000 to 40,000. Their withdrawal would leave Soviet troops stationed in Poland and East Germany as well as in Hungary.

The communique said the Soviet government will cut its Hungarian garrison by one division this year. The Soviets said earlier this year they were pulling 17,000 soldiers out of Hungary. They did not specify how many would then remain, but Western observers put the figure as high as 100,000.

The Warsaw Pact nations also announced their decision to reduce forces by 119,000 men in 1958 in addition to a 300,000-man cut announced earlier for Soviet forces. The new reductions are Romania 55,000, Bulgaria 23,000, Poland 20,000, Czechoslovakia 20,000 and Albania, 1,000.

The Soviets called on the West to make similar manpower reductions and said the Warsaw powers are ready to meet at once with NATO representatives on a non-aggression pact.

The Soviet Union has made previous non-aggression proposals to the West. The United States has rejected them on grounds both countries subscribe to the U.N. Charter, which bars aggression.

Pardon Likely For Old Escapee

McALESTER, Okla. (AP)—Gov. Raymond Gary said he probably will grant a full pardon to a Houston, Tex., transportation executive who escaped from the Oklahoma Penitentiary 18 years ago.

A. R. Talley, 42, terminal manager for Herrin Transportation Co., was sentenced in 1935 to 15 years imprisonment for armed robbery.

State Prison Warden H. C. McLeod and State Crime Bureau Chief O. K. Bivins, who investigated Talley's record, appeared before the Pardon and Parole Board on the Texan's behalf.

Talley, who reportedly is making more than $20,000 a year, said he had disclosed his past to a friend who urged him to seek clemency. "I just got tired of living under the strain," he said at Houston.

Talley's mother Mrs. Grace Alexander of Oklahoma City was overjoyed by the board's action. She had kept her son's secret and disclosed he had informed her two months ago he was going to seek parole.

Robert Herrin, Talley's employer, sent a company attorney to McAlester to plead Talley's case.

Sen. Jordan Asking More Funds For N.C. Projects

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-NC) has asked Congress to go beyond President Eisenhower's requests and appropriate about $500,000 for surveys and construction of 10 North Carolina Water projects in the fiscal year starting July 1.

Jordan, saying the projects were badly needed, told the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday a Neuse River basin study should be added from the Eisenhower-endorsed $10,000 to $35,000. He said the President's $125,000 request for carrying on the Wilkesboro reservoir work should be retained along with a $14,700 request to complete a study of deepening the Pamlico Sound-Beaufort harbor waterway from 7 to 12 feet.

Jordan asked that these appropriations be added to the Eisenhower list:

Beaufort Harbor — $146,000 to complete a deepening project to the Morehead City-Beaufort port area.

Cape Fear River basin, $40,000, to continue a study.

Thoroughfare Bay — Cedar Bay channel, $35,000, to complete channel deepening.

Survey of farmland flooding along the Intracoastal Waterway between Alligator River and Pungo River, $15,000.

Rollinson channel, $10,000 to complete a channel - deepening study.

Stumpy Point Bay breakwater, $10,000 to complete a breakwater study.

Topsail Inlet channel and Surf City boat basin, $4,500 to start a survey on possibly cutting a channel through Topsail Inlet and building a boat basin at Surf City.

Try To Head Off Aircraft Strike

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Federal Conciliation Service today seeks to head off a strike of 15,000 employees of McDonnell Aircraft Corp. — Missouri's largest employer.

Members of Machinists Union Local 9 voted Sunday to reject what the company said was its final offer.

The company offered a wage increase of from 11 to 20 cents hourly the first year and 3 1/2 per cent the second year of a two-year contract.

The local wants a 15-cent cost of living increase plus a 6 per cent raise, or 30 cents total, which ever is higher.

Bus Struck By Lightning Bolt

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A bolt of lightning struck a crowded transit bus at a busy Portland intersection yesterday evening, setting it afire.

All the 50 passengers — many with singed eyebrows and hair — escaped without serious injury. Thirteen were hospitalized overnight for treatment of smoke inhalation and noncritical burns.

Witnesses said the lightning, which struck at the height of a sudden storm, skipped along the trolley wire before it shot into the electric trolley bus.

Inside the bus, the bolt became a huge ball of fire which flashed over the passengers' heads and set the rear portion of the vehicle ablaze.

"The bus is on fire, open the doors," a passenger shouted. Bus driver Walter Nabors pressed the electric door switch, which still was operating and the passengers — some of them hysterical — poured out into the street. A number of them lost shoes, purses, umbrellas and other possessions in the scramble to get out.

The bus burned.

Blacked Out At Wheel Of Bus

HALIFAX, Va. (AP) — Larry Conner, 17, was finishing his second trip as a substitute driver of a county school bus yesterday when he momentarily blacked out, he said.

The bus, loaded with high school and elementary school pupils on their way home from classes, left the highway and hit a tree. Eighteen of those aboard, ranging in age from 7 to 16, were injured — none critically.

Ten of the young victims still were hospitalized today.

State Trooper R. A. Adams Jr. said the bus was traveling about 35 m.p.h.

Conner, who received his driving license four months ago, said he couldn't explain his blackout though he had not felt well all day.

No Regrets Over Joint Trial For Slaying Woman

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — "I stuck with my buddy," Eddie Oxendine told a newsman who accompanied him to the state penitentiary yesterday.

Oxendine, 27, and his buddy James Spence, 29, were taken to death row. They are sentenced to die Aug. 16 for the murder last March 31 of Mrs. Ruth Zimmerman, 19.

The North Carolina men were convicted last week of shooting the young mother after forcing her husband Reggie, 22 to open a Lawton store for robbery. Zimmerman was wounded by gunfire as he and his wife sat trussed in the closet of their apartment above the store.

Oxendine expressed no regret about insisting on a joint trial with Spence, the triggerman.

"I stuck with my buddy," said Oxendine. "We did the robbery together. We did everything together."

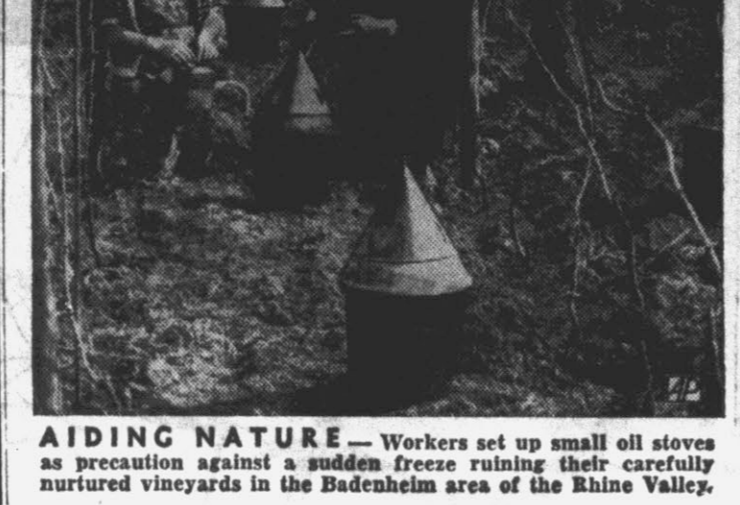

"And I guess we'll die together."

Warship Bringing Two Soldier Dead Back To Their Homeland

WASHINGTON (AP) — A grim, gray warship threaded its way up the Potomac River today, returning the bodies of two unknown fighting men to the country for which they died. In twin bronze caskets, the two will be buried in Arlington National Cemetery Friday to symbolize all the nameless dead of World War II and Korea. A third, brought with them from foreign battlefields, was given a sailor's burial in the sea yesterday after a final selection was made during a rendezvous off the Virginia Capes. He was one of two picked from the anonymous dead of World War II. Tomorrow morning the two caskets containing the Unknowns will be removed to the rotunda of the Capitol. There they will lie in state, in the place reserved by custom for presidents and other famous men who have died. On Memorial Day, they will be entombed in Arlington close by the Unknown Soldier of the first World War! The three men — one from Korea, one from the European-North African battlefields of World War II, the other from the Pacific theater of that war — came to the seaward approaches of their homeland yesterday. The man from Europe was aboard the destroyer Blandy. Aboard the guided missile cruiser Boston were the bodies of the Pacific World War II dead and the man who died in Korea. In the rain, on the gray swells of the Atlantic off Cape Henry, Va., all three bodies were transferred to the missile cruiser Canberra. Then, in solemn ceremony, William Charette, a Navy enlisted man and holder of the Medal of Honor, chose between the identical caskets of the two World War II dead. Charette prayed for guidance before he placed a floral wreath on the casket to his right to mark his choice. The chosen one of World War II and the man from Korea's battleground were transferred to the Blandy. The Canberra, with the body of the other Unknown, steamed farther out to sea, out where fifteen fathoms of water roll above the rim of the Continental Shelf. Six bearers brought the flag-covered pallet to the slanted platform on the afterdeck. Chaplains, in their vestments, said the prayers of four faiths. The bearers tilted the platform. Out from under the covering flag slid the shrouded body, weighted to carry it down. A little cloud of foam drifted back from the stern of the Canberra, to mark the spot briefly on the quiet sea.

Cardinal Stritch Dies In Rome; Burial Set In U.S.

By FRANK BRUTTO ROME (AP)—The body of Samuel Cardinal Stritch lay in state today at the Pontifical College where Americans study for the priesthood. The 70-year-old Archbishop of Chicago died today at Rome's Sanatrix Clinic. He had been confined there with circulatory ailments since he arrived in Rome April 25 to assume the high post given him by Pope Pius XII. The cardinal's body will remain at the North American Pontifical College until tomorrow night. Then it will be taken to Rome's St. Ignatius Church. A funeral Mass will be celebrated there Thursday and the body will be flown home to Chicago for burial. The funeral mass will be celebrated by Bishop Martin John O'Connor of Scranton, Pa., the rector of the Pontifical College. All cardinals in Rome will pass before the body and each give his absolution. The last to do so will be Eugene Cardinal Tisserant, French-born dean of the College of Cardinals, who will give absolution in the name of the Pope. The prelate's remains were brought to the college early today and embalmed in the presence of Dr. Ralph Bergen of Chicago, his personal physician. The cardinal died before he had a chance to take up his duties as pro-prefect of the Vatican's Congregation for Propagation of the Faith. He was the only native American ever named to the Vatican Curia, the church's highest administrative body. The prelate was stricken first with a blood clot in his right arm while en route to Italy to take up his Vatican post. Three days later the arm was amputated to eliminate danger of gangrene. Eight days ago, while apparently recovering rapidly, he suffered a severe stroke. He had lost ground steadily since then. His last act before death was to kiss a small crucifix he kept with him throughout the past week of crisis. At the end of the cardinal's bedside was surrounded by close associates and relatives including two nephews, the Rev. Morris Stritch of Memphis, Tenn., and Robert Emmett Stritch of Chicago. Pope Pius was one of the first notified of the cardinal's death. He gave his approval for funeral and burial plans in accordance with canon law. Cardinal Stritch had asked that his body be returned to Chicago. The cardinal's death brought to 15 the vacancies in the College of Cardinals. The full complement is 70. In Yugoslavia Alojzije Cardinal Stepinac was reported in critical condition. He is suffering from a blood disease complicated by bronchial pneumonia, a weakened heart and a blood clot in his leg.

Superior Court Adjourns Today

Pitt County's May term of Superior Court for civil issues scheduled to continue through Friday, was completed this morning and the term adjourned by Judge George M. Fountain of Tarboro. Ten judgments, including six divorces were returned in yesterday's all-day session. The divorces, all on grounds of two years separation, went to Deary Miller from Adelaide Miller, Charles Stewart Allen from Vonciel Allen, Elizabeth Parker Dawson from Walter Dawson, William Bright from Ethel Mae Smith Bright, Ola Mae Smith from Luther C. Smith, Jr., and Charles L. Worthington from Charlotte Worthington. Other judgments included three in which matters of controversy were compromised and settled. They were T. L. Perkins versus William Carter Wallace and Faulkner-Wallace Construction Company; Robert Elks and Rufus Keel, trading as Friendly Furniture Company, versus Clarence Elks; and Swift and Company versus Paul Nicolopoulos and Gus Honduras, trading as Dixie Lunch. In the judgment in the Swift and Company - Dixie Lunch action, Swift and Company was noted to have agreed to accept $550 from the defendants as a settlement. In the other action cleared from the docket yesterday, Ayden Nitrogen Company was awarded $298.40 in an action brought against H. C. Evans.

Lincoln Catafalque Is To Serve Again

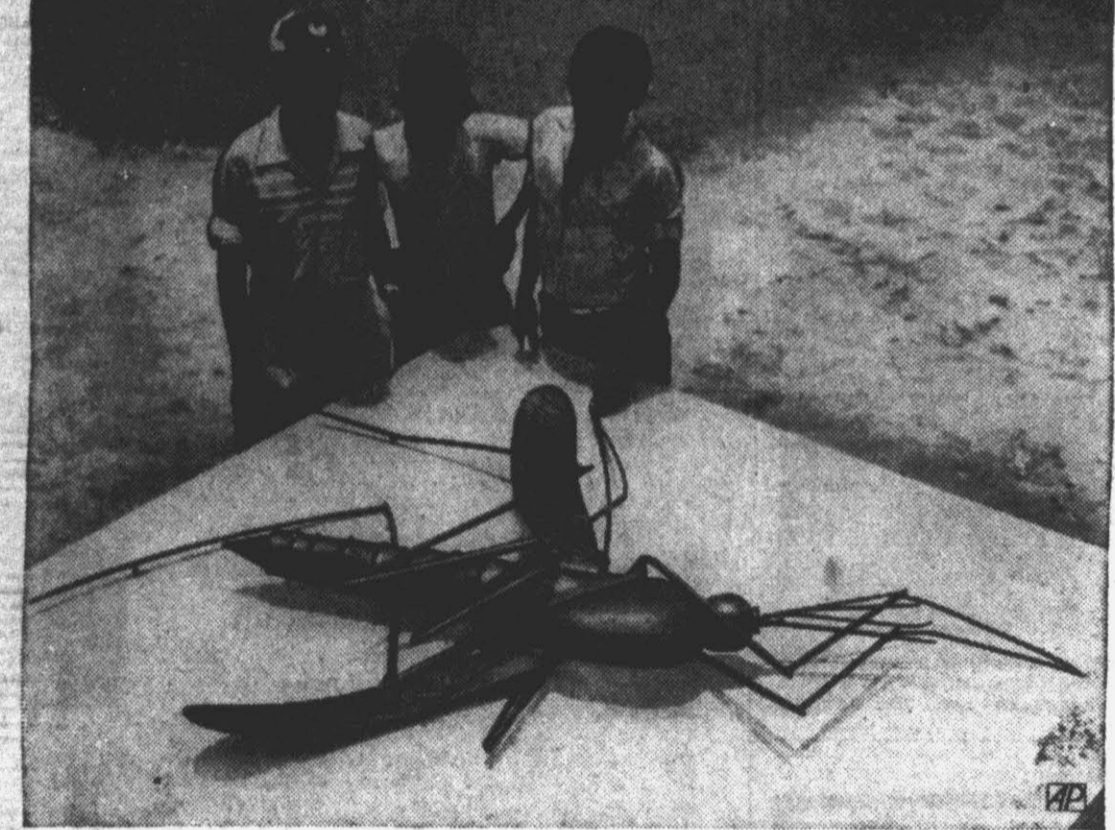

By EDMOND LE BRETON WASHINGTON (AP)—Abraham Lincoln's catafalque stood under the great dome of the Capitol today ready to receive the caskets of two unknown American fighting men of World War II and the Korean War. They will lie in state from 10 a.m. tomorrow until 1 p.m. Friday. The two houses of Congress will assemble separately in their chambers and go together to the rotunda to receive the honored bodies. Lincoln was the first man so to lie after death in the rotunda of the Capitol. The honor—to which Congress must agree—has been accorded since then to only 12 others, including the Unknown Soldier of World War I. The heavy timber catafalque, built 93 years ago to support the casket of the martyred Civil War President, was brought up earlier from its vault and re-covered in black velvet. The Army has made an exact duplicate. When the caskets first are brought to the rotunda, that of the World War II Unknown will be placed on the Lincoln catafalque and the Korean conflict representative's casket on the duplicate. At noon Thursday the places will be exchanged. As in Lincoln's day, the public will be admitted at the door opening on the broad east steps of the Capitol, to stream past the caskets with their military guard and leave the building by the rarely used west portal. The rotunda has not been used for funeral honors since 1953, when the body of Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio was brought there. Five years earlier Gen. John L. Pershing, U. S. commander in World War I, lay in state there.

Church Doors Are Open, But Few Negroes Enter

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer PITTSBURGH (AP)—The door is open to all races at most Northern Presbyterian churches, a survey indicated today. But there's relatively little interracial traffic through it. In one of the most comprehensive denominational studies of its kind, the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. reported 85 per cent of its pastors (4,050 out of 4,768) think their congregations would admit persons of any race. But only about 8 per cent (647) of the congregations actually have active mixed memberships. The findings were presented in advance of ceremonies here tomorrow merging the big Northern Presbyterian body and the United Presbyterian Church. They'll form a combined church of 3 1/2 million members, fourth largest in United States Protestantism. The report on the generally pro-integration policy of the Northern church pointed up the absence of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. (Southern) from the merger. It declined to join. The racial report, drawn up by the Northern church's Social Education and Action Department, said about 60 per cent of the congregations "have virtually no choice but to remain segregated" because of segregated residential patterns. Most white congregations are half a mile or more away from the nearest Negro home, the report said. Only 105 congregations said definitely they would not take in other races while 261 said they probably would not. About 350 said they didn't know. The U. S. A. church, popularly referred to as Northern, includes some congregations in the South. As its merger with the United Presbyterian Church approached, there were reports of scattered opposition in the latter organization. About half a dozen congregations reportedly were threatening to pull out of the plan—and want to take their church property with them. Both merging denominations hold their final separate assemblies today.

Pandemonium On The Field

Why Retire? It Took Him 40 Years To Learn

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Light heavyweight boxing champion Archie Moore, whose boxing life keeps rolling right on through his 40's, plans a promotion campaign to win another shot at the heavyweight crown.

"Retire, why should I retire?" he asked last night after handing veteran Charley Norkus a thorough beating in 10 rounds. "I gave the better part of my younger days trying to learn this boxing game."

Moore did not break the all-time record for knockouts he shares with the late Young Stribling at 126, but he has probably had few easier work evenings.

Relying mostly on his left hand, Archie did not lose a round as he jabbed and hooked to the head and body. Norkus, 29, from Port Washington, N.Y., came off with a bloody nose and battered face.

Weighing a pudgy 196, all of 21 more than the light heavyweight limit, Moore came in three pounds heavier than his opponent, who always has been a heavyweight.

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Manager Fred Haney and the Milwaukee Braves seem to have profited by ignoring the old adage and breaking up a winning combination of coaches.

As one Milwaukee player put it recently, "There's harmony between Haney and the new coaches now where there wasn't last year, a least from about June on. After all, these are Fred's men. He couldn't say that last season. They were either here when he came or picked for him."

The Braves surprised most of the baseball world last fall when they fired three of their coaches 16 days after beating the Yankees in the World Series.

Ousted were Connie Ryan, Johnny Riddle and Charlie Root. The resignation of bullpen coach Bob Keely this spring, ostensibly because of poor health, made it a clean sweep.

Erskine Pitches 2-1 Win Over Philadelphia Club

Victory Is His Second In Only Eight Days

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press
A year ago, Carl Erskine was prepared to quit if his arm trouble didn't respond to treatment. Today you'd have to tear that Dodger uniform off his back.

The Happy Hoosier gained his second complete game victory last night, following up a shutout victory over St. Louis eight days ago, with a two-hit, 2-1 decision at Philadelphia for the last-place Los Angeles Dodgers.

The fourth-place Chicago Cubs were beaten 4-3 at Milwaukee in the only other National League game scheduled.

Only one game was scheduled in the American League, and the Kansas City Athletics won it, beating Baltimore 5-4.

Erskine, once the ace of the Dodger staff, was shooting for his third no-hitter for 5 1/3 innings, and had a one-hit shutout until the eighth while ending Robin Roberts' comeback winning streak at three. The Dodgers scored in the fourth on Don Zimmer's two-run double off the left field screen.

Erskine, while padding his record to 3-2 against the Cards and Phils, a couple of pushovers for the 31-year-old right-hander, looked plenty sharp in this one. He walked four, fanned four; giving up a single to rookie Chuck Essegian with one out in the sixth, and a single to Willie Jones in the eighth. A walk, Roberts sacrifice and Richie Ashburn's fly ball brought Jones home with the run.

Don McMahon won his third without defeat for the Braves, riding in on Ed Mathews' 11th homer in the eighth after Lew Burdette had blown a 3-0 lead. Burdette gave up 19 hits in his 2-3 frames. McMahon allowed just one single the rest of the way.

Frank Torre's second 1958 homer, following a walk to Mathews and Billy Bruton's single, built the 3-0 lead in the fourth against Moe Drabowsky.

Sugar Ray Says He Won't Fight Again During 1958

NEW YORK (AP)—Sugar Ray Robinson says he isn't going to fight again this year.

"I can't afford to," says the middleweight champion. "The way the tax situation is it would even cost me money."

That's the way Ray sees it today. He's been known to change his mind.

Robinson discussed his future plans after he seconded his sparring partner, Otis Woodard, 160½, of New York, to a second straight victory over Eddie Andrews, 159½, of Lowell, Mass., at St. Nicholas Arena last night. Andrews once again had ex-middleweight King Rocky Graziano in his corner.

Woodard opened nasty cuts over both of Andrews' eyes to win on a TKO in 2:41 of the fifth round.

Robinson remarked he was in the 95 per cent tax bracket. "Uncle Sam would take all I make if I fought this year," said Sugar Ray, "and some of what I have. The government is still holding $514,000 against taxes I may owe."

"The way I figure it three-quarters of the money that goes to foreign aid is mine."

Life In Atom Sub Was Eerie Feeling

EDITOR'S Note—The Navy has announced that two U.S. submarines, Skate and Seawolf, have completed a record-breaking month under water. What did it feel like cooped up in an atomic submarine?

By LOUIS E. KLEINLEIN
BOARD THE U.S. S. SKATE, GROTON, Conn., (AP)— Cruising beneath the surface, with no feeling of motion whatsoever, was a very eerie feeling.

This feeling of suspension must be what a whale feels when he swims under the ocean. We spent a long and tiring 40 days at sea, but surprisingly none of us had that "bottled up" feeling.

For more than 31 of those days we were totally buttoned up under the water. This was longer than any men have remained under the sea before.

Reading was a favorite pastime. The most popular books at the beginning were "Peyton Place," "Onionhead," and "Don't Go Near The Water." But books became a little boring.

Movies were shown in the mess hall every night. Some of the movies were "The Benny Goodman Story," "Underwater," "Away All Boats," and "The Country Girl."

As the days passed, a fad started for exercising with the muscle-building outfit, so timely purchased before underway time. Everyone took a crack at it.

The crew's attitude was good all the way. No tension developed at all. I suppose this will be a surprise to many, especially when they imagine themselves with more than 80 others in a sealed pipe 250 feet in length and 25 feet in diameter.

We had virtually no news of the outside world. We did learn of the stoning of Vice President Nixon in South America and of the pay raise passed by Congress. These scraps of news came to us during reception of official messages received by radio.

But after 20 days the games began to wear off and we all became a little restless. The air was still country fresh and our source of "sunlight" via the neutron was still bright.

Beards began to blossom out in good shape. Everyone tried to outdo the other. I attempted to trim mine in the gay 90s style. It was in pretty good shape by the thirty-first day. I'm still wearing it. My

He is Dr. Norman H. Topping, 50, a scientist and educator, who got both his bachelor of arts (1933) and M.D. (1936) at USC.

His appointment was announced by Asa V. Call, president of the school's Board of Trustees. Topping succeeds Dr. Fred Fagg, who retired last year after 10 years' tenure.

Topping has been a vice president of the University of Pennsylvania since 1952.

Snider Pays Secret Visit To Doctor, About Hurt Knee

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Duke Snider paid a secret visit to a New York physician yesterday hoping to learn why his ailing left knee is failing to respond to treatment.

The knee, which underwent surgery last November, has become progressively worse in the last three weeks, said the worried Los Angeles slugger.

"I went on my own," he emphasized. "The front office knows nothing about this. I told Bavasi (General Manager E. J. Bavasi) and Dr. Wendler (club trainer) that the knee was getting worse instead of better. I wanted them to get in touch with the doctor who operated. They did make an attempt to contact him by telephone but he wasn't in."

Snider, who hasn't been in the starting lineup since a week ago last Sunday, said the New York doctor assured him the operation was a success and that he should be back in the lineup within a few days.

"He told me the knee was still inflamed," the Duke said, "and some fluid had collected around the joint. That was the reason for all the pain. He gave me a shot of cortizone, which is supposed to deaden the pain. Right now it hurts worse than ever but I'm told it takes 24 hours to work." Snider said the knee began to swell anew after a 14-inning game with the Phillies in Los Angeles May 5. It is Snider's feeling he began playing too soon.

3 GUYS FROM DIXIE

629 Dickinson Ave. Greenville, N. C.

Where I Stand:

1. I will oppose any Sales Tax on farm machinery, insecticides, fuel oil or any additional tax on any farm commodity, or products.
2. I will oppose any further tax on tobacco.
3. I am in favor of the present uniform system for the support of the schools by the State, and I am against placing a part of the burden on the counties by levying tax on real and personal property as suggested by our Governor.
4. I am in favor of the continuation of our present system of electing Superior Court Judges, and will oppose any change whereby they will be appointed by the Governor.
5. I am in favor of a revision of our present State Highway System. It is too highly centralized with all of the authority in Raleigh.
6. I am in favor of establishing a Nursing School at East Carolina College, as we have a serious shortage of nurses.
7. I realize the importance of East Carolina College to Pitt County, and will do everything I can for its further expansion and development.
8. I have always been a strong supporter of good schools, both the Elementary and High Schools, and Colleges. The fact that I have three daughters in school at the present time makes my position even more emphatic.

Your vote and support for the State Senate will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,
J. Henry Harrell

Lowell Thomas On Verge Of 15,000th Broadcast

By CHARLES MERCER
 NEW YORK (AP)—A hardy voyager has just stumbled out of the archival jungle of the Lowell Thomas office with word that by June 3 the CBS radio reporter will have made his 15,000th broadcast.

While programs come and go, die and are revived, switch times and change their formats, Lowell Thomas and the News has had the longest continuous run of any news program in radio and is still going strong. Its position in the broadcast schedule, never has varied since June 1932.

It's safe to say that Thomas has been heard more frequently by more Americans in the last three decades than any other man. He still makes two broadcasts a night, his second being beamed to the West Coast. Besides his role on radio he has been widely heard as a lecturer and as narrator for Cinerama, dozens of short films and for 17 years as the voice of Fox Movietone news.

It's equally safe to say that he has broadcast from more unusual and obscure places than any commentator: from a plane circling the Empire State Building, in the first broadcast from a helicopter, a bobbed, a—you name it. In the course of these broadcasts Thomas estimates he has traveled five million miles by every conceivable means of transportation.

Thomas was well established as a writer and lecturer when he first faced a microphone in 1930 as the replacement of Floyd Gibbons, last but not least of the "I was there, myself, in person" type of foreign correspondent.

News broadcasting in 1930 was largely unexplored territory. Gibbons had been the only commentator on the air and there were widely divergent notions as to just how it should be done.

Thomas's first broadcast followed a nine-hour "how it should be done" session in which the participants included such persons as William S. Paley, now chairman of the board of CBS, a then obscure manuscript reader named Ogden Nash, and a certain Dale Carnegie. Thomas then went on the air and broadcast in his own way—the way he's been doing it ever since from just about everywhere, including Lhasa, the forbidden city of Tibet.

Asked for a list of the most memorable broadcasts during his years in radio, he names none of his own. Rather, he cites these: Churchill's famous "Blood, Sweat and Tears" speech; President Roosevelt's Declaration of War message to Congress; MacArthur's "I Shall Return" speech; Ed Murrow's "Orchestrated Hell" broadcast on the bombing of Berlin; Charles Collingwood's description of the Nazi surrender; President Eisenhower's first acceptance speech in Chicago; Alben Barkley's last speech before his death; Dr. Jonas Salk's radio announcement of his polio vaccine; Doug Edwards' description of the sinking of the Andrea Doria; Moscow radio's announcement of the first earth satellite.

Her Pies Retain Fond Memories

VINITA, Okla. (AP)—For 35 years before retiring in 1947, Mrs. W. E. Updegraff cooked in the cafe she ran here. She estimated when she retired she had baked more than 375,000 pies.

To celebrate her 75 birthday this year, Mrs. Updegraff's children rented the cafe and hundreds of friends showed up to wish her well. The conversation was still her mouth-watering pies that no one could forget.

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore City Bar Assn. has decided it still wants Soviet Ambassador Mikhail A. Menshikov as a speaker for the annual meeting next month.

The association had been bombarded with protests as a result of the invitation.

Visiting The Sick Is 'Special Art'

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—Visiting sick folk is a special art, says the Rev. Herbert E. Richards, of the First Methodist Church here. Writing in his denomination's monthly magazine, together, he offers this advice:

"Take your best smile... into a sickroom. Plan what to say in advance. Bring uplifting news, but keep it brief. Never comment on a patient's appearance. . . Don't sit on the bed. . . Don't smoke. . . Leave medical talk to the doctor. If you must be funny, keep jokes mild. Excessive humor is tiring."

In The Box, A Voice Said 'Who'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Something inside the box on the police information desk was saying—"Who."

Patrolman Marvin W. Terrell opened it cautiously. Inside was a baby owl.

Inspector Harvey Alston dropped by a few minutes later to explain. His 10-year-old son found the baby bird, which apparently had fallen from a nest. Naturally, the boy thought first of the police and brought it to headquarters.

Zoo officials have promised to pick up the owl.

Orphanages Are Becoming Dated

MILWAUKEE (AP)—St. Vincent's Infant Asylum is closing its doors because orphanages have become old fashioned.

The asylum, founded in 1904, once cared for as many as 60 children at a time, but populations of orphanages have declined because child welfare experts now prefer placing children in foster homes.

The Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul plan to abandon their present building in the fall. They are considering establishment of a small home for emotionally disturbed teen-age girls.

To The Voters Of Pitt County

When I announced my candidacy for the State Senate from Pitt County, I said it was my objective to promote the agricultural and industrial development of Pitt County—through supplementary farm income and the establishment of new industries—and to strengthen its educational resources in public schools and at East Carolina College.

These are and will continue to be my objectives. I will devote my time, my energies and whatever ability I have to carrying out these objectives for the benefit of all the people of Pitt County and for the good of the people of our state.

I was born in Greenville and raised here. I attended school in Greenville and the old Winterville Academy.

A life-long Baptist, I attended Wake Forest College where I received my law degree. During World War I, I served with the Field Artillery. I was licensed to practice law in North Carolina in 1920 and was presented to the court at the Pitt County Courthouse by the late F. G. James of Greenville.

After receiving graduate work at Harvard, Oxford and the University of Paris, I went to work for an American company and was assigned to its office in Paris from 1930 to 1940 when I returned to my home in Greenville.

Since that time I have made my home here and my primary efforts have been devoted to activities which I felt were for the betterment of the people of my home county and my home state. I have been privileged to work closely with each session of the North Carolina General Assembly for the past 11 years. I feel this experience will be of value if you see fit to elect me as your Senator.

I shall endeavor to represent the wishes of a ll the people of our great county in all matters.

I am in favor of sound programs which will boost the income of Pitt County's farm families. I likewise support efforts which will enable Pitt County to develop its industrial potential.

I would be opposed to any attempts to place a heavier tax burden on farm operations or on agricultural products.

I believe that in order to progress we must maintain a strong program of public education. Therefore I would support measures which would lead to that end.

As for East Carolina College, I feel that this outstanding institution should receive every means of support we can give it both at home and in Raleigh in order that it can increase the priceless service it is rendering to the people of our section of the state.

I am in favor of the establishment of a State-supported School of Nursing in conjunction with East Carolina College and will support efforts to establish such a school.

So far as the highway program for secondary roads is concerned, I believe that county governments should have a more direct and a more powerful voice in deciding how secondary road funds are to be spent in individual counties.

In offering myself as a candidate for the Senate from Pitt County I have only one purpose in mind, and that is to be of service to the people of our county and our state.

Former Child Star Is Trying Rebuild Career

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I was carried on a satin cushion and then dropped into the garbage can."
 That is Robert Driscoll's view of his acting career, which began at 5. Now a sharp, realistic 21, he is attempting to rebuild his career as an adult. He's doing nicely.
 Robert is better known as Bob Driscoll, though he's trying to duck the youngish name. As Bobby, he was a busy actor in such films as "The Window," "So Dear to My Heart," "Song of the South" and "Treasure Island." He even won an Oscar as an outstanding child star.
 But he admitted that his career didn't buy him happiness. He sees now that he had too little discipline and too much adulation.
 "Yet I really feared people," he said. "The other kids didn't accept me. They treated me as one apart. I tried desperately to be one of the gang. When they rejected me, I fought back, became belligerent and cocky and was afraid all the time."

Dormitory Rate At UNC, State Is Going Higher

RALEIGH (AP)—Parents will have to shell out a little more to keep sons and daughters in dorm rooms at North Carolina State College and the University of North Carolina.
 The purpose of the rent hikes, ranging up to 25 per cent, is to raise money to help build dormitories for still others in the rising flood of students.
 Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina voted yesterday to put into effect the rent increases recommended by W. D. Carmichael Jr., university vice president. He said they were necessary to collect funds for building two additional dorms at both State College in Raleigh and the University in Chapel Hill.
 The dorms will be built under a self-liquidating program, which calls for rentals from all dorms to be used in paying off federal loans for the new facilities.
 At State College, room rents will go up from $135 to $170 per year. At Chapel Hill, rates for men students will be raised from $130 to $170 a year and for women from $192 to $215.
 There will be no change in the $10 annual rent at Womans College in Greensboro because no new dorms are planned there.
 The trustees at State College and the university would cost about four million dollars and would provide housing for 800 additional students at each campus.
 In another action, George Nick Noble of Trenton was elected by the trustees to replace the late Judge John J. Parker of Charlotte on the Executive Committee. Noble won by a 47 to 35 vote over H. L. Riddle Jr. of Morganton.
 Victor S. Bryant of Durham, Mrs. A. H. Lathrop of Asheville, and Mrs. Rosa Parker of Albemarle were elected to new terms on the Executive Committee.
 The trustees also voted to name a new dorm on the Chapel Hill campus for Judge Parker. Another dorm will be named for Col. Waightstill Avery, Revolutionary War hero, and the Avery family.

 Funeral services will be held at the Wilkerson Chapel Wednesday at 2:00 p.m. by her pastor, the Rev. W.D. Morton of Farmville. Burial will be in the Forbes family cemetery near Greenville.
 Mrs. Forbes was born in Pitt county and attended Louisburg College. After her marriage to Mr. Forbes in 1902, she on the Falkland Highway. Mr. Forbes died June 21, 1949. She was a member of Boyd Memorial Presbyterian Church.
 Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. R. Douglas West of Morehead City, Miss Lillian Rives Forbes of Greenville and Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Arthur W. Smith of Annapolis, Md.; four sons, Ola Forbes of Laurens, S. C., Alfred A. Forbes, Jr., of Greenville; Harry G. Forbes of Greenville, Tenn., and Jack R. Forbes of San Antonio, Texas; 17 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren; three sisters, Mrs. H. O. Skipper and Mrs. Sidney M. Saunders of St. Petersburg Fla., and Mrs. Orville H. Camera News

By IRVING DESFOR
 AP Newsfeatures
 Amateur photographers, usually short on facilities, space and time to do their darkroom work, have come up with a varied assortment of short cuts, substitutions and adaptations to stretch their limited time and budget.
 Many a camera fan, for instance, has discovered that an electric hair dryer, borrowed from the female department of the family, serves a useful purpose in quick-drying negatives. The cold air stream can be held very close to the negatives without harm and speeds up the process without water spots or streaking. This sort of household automation, which eliminates the usual overnight wait and permits same-day printing, is a great advantage to the weekend photographer.
 Many kitchen gadgets have wound up leading a double life after serving their original purpose.
 One of these is the old breadbox which can make a light-proof storage compartment for enlarging paper.
 Another is the wide-mouth stainless steel or aluminum coffee maker. It makes a perfect funnel for pouring solutions back into storage bottles from trays or tanks.
 A breadboard can be converted into an easel for making borderless enlargements. Attach double-surface adhesive tape to the four corners and center and it will hold the enlarging paper down flat.
 An old porcelain kitchen table top makes an excellent work surface for developing and printing. Turn it upside down and the raised edges will prevent splotchers or dripping. I've found it helpful, also, to first spread a layer of newspaper under the trays to absorb some of the excess liquids. After the session, the papers are rolled up and discarded for a quick cleanup.
 Kitchen cabinets, of course, make fine storage compartments for photo and darkroom equipment. They can be bought separately, are fairly inexpensive and can be hung where it is most convenient.
 Some darkroom workers find a small amount of borax added to their print developer gives an added sparkle and cleaner whites to their prints. A salt shaker makes a very convenient dispenser for this purpose.
 When working in a kitchen or bathroom, an accessory lampstand can be used to hold the safe-light where you need it. It's a lot easier than changing bulbs in the regular fixtures.
 A portable gadget board is another handy device when you don't have a permanent darkroom. Made out of perforated wallboard, it'll hold most of your small rolls of gadgets, each in its own speak and can be propped wherever you work. Between sessions it can be hung in a closet.
 It is often necessary to keep track of the working life of various solutions so that they can be replaced before they are exhausted. One easy method is to keep a supply of rubber bands handy. Slip one of them around the neck of the bottle each time it is used.
 One of the household workshop items that can find a useful life in darkroom work is a chemical liquid rubber, Neoprene. It can be painted on almost any surface with a brush and forms a waterproof, lightweight and acid-proof surface. You can protect metal equipment near your processing area with this synthetic rubber. You can salvage old trays or sinks and repair leaky bellows by dabbing it on. You can even convert a cardboard or plywood box into an emergency processing tank by applying three coats inside and two coats outside.

SOMETHING BORROWED—A camera fan, in a hurry to print his negatives, speeds up the drying with a cold stream of air from an electric hair dryer. First, of course, he had to get it away from the women of the household.

Cases Heard In City Police Court

The court's judgment also provided that the defendant is not to molest or harm the prosecuting witness, Marcellus Harrington, Negro, 408 W. 15th St., 60 days on the roads, suspended on payment of costs, and he is not to harm the prosecuting witness.
 Curtis E. Taft, Negro, 317 Second St., the prosecuting witness was taxed with court costs ($13) for malicious and frivolous prosecution.
 Herbert Staton, Negro, No. 1 Greene St., possession of non-tax paid whiskey for sale, failed to appear and an instant capias was issued for him.

Knowland Firm Against Aid For Red Satellites

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.) said today he will oppose vigorously proposed authority for President Eisenhower to furnish economic aid for Soviet satellites.
 Knowland, Senate Republican leader, said in an interview he will fight this provision in a $3,707,000,000 foreign aid bill which may come before the Senate later this week.
 "I do not think the granting of mutual aid to Communist countries can be justified," he said. He said his effort will be directed primarily toward shutting off any assistance for Yugoslavia and Poland.
 As approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, an amendment to the House-passed bill would authorize the President to provide economic aid to any country except the Soviet Union, Communist China and Communist North Korea.
 In doing so, the President would have to find that such assistance would (1) strengthen U.S. security by enabling "freedom loving peoples" to gain additional release from Red Chinese and Soviet domination, (2) strengthen their efforts to make their governments less dependent on Moscow, and (3) reduce their economic dependence on the Soviets and Red China.
 Knowland said State Department acceptance of the amendment will not deter his opposition. He said he had no plans to discuss the matter with Eisenhower.
 The theory on which the mutual security program was founded was to provide help for nations that are willing to stand together in maintenance of the free world," he said.
 "On foreign policy matters, Yugoslavia has voted against us and with the Soviet bloc 90 per cent of the time in the United Nations. It has attempted to undermine us in the Far East and in NATO," he added.

Navy Officer Is Given Diploma

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Lt. Cmdr. C. A. Betleyou of the U.S. Navy will be graduated from Meadville High School June 3. Betleyou quit school to join the Navy while he was a sophomore at Meadville in 1924.
 He recently applied for a high school diploma. The school board voted unanimously to give it to him.

Head Of State School For Blind Is Speaker

Ted Stough, principal of North Carolina State School for the Blind, spoke to the Lions Club last night.
 He told about the work the school is doing to educate the handicapped children of the state. He said "We stress the fact that it is not important whether or not one has his eyes, or hands or feet, but that the most important factor is that a person do the most he possibly can with what he has." These youngsters learn easily because they want to learn.
 The school averages about 184 students per year and has a staff of 35 teachers. The academics of the school are the same as in any other public school in North Carolina. In addition, he pointed out that vocational training was also included to prepare the youngsters for work after graduation from the school. "I have never seen a group of students with a good dogged determination to make the best of life," he said.
 The school, located in Raleigh, includes grades from kindergarten through high school and is run entirely by funds from the State Legislature. There is no charge to parents for their children who attend the school.
 The following officers were elected: President, John Biggs; Dick Worley, First Vice president; Harry Allen, second Vice president; A. A. Hines, third Vice president; Frank Dail, Sec. Treas.; Clarence Tugwell, Assistant, Secretary-Treasurer; Clarke Stokes, lion tamer; Charles Marston, tall twister; Frank Brown, Jr. and Norwin Pierce, members of the board of directors.

UNC Graduating 200 Teachers

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP)—The University of North Carolina will graduate a record 200 school teachers at commencement exercises here Monday.
 The class, recently returned from practice teaching duties at schools throughout the state, was honored yesterday at a luncheon. The school, located in Raleigh, includes grades from kindergarten through high school and is run entirely by funds from the State Legislature. There is no charge to parents for their children who attend the school.

SOME SLIPS DON'T SHOW

CHAPTER 19

"Somebody shadowed George Cadott out to a motel in Vallejo, entered the motel and removed George Cadott from the scene," I told Carl Jensen.

"You mean permanently?" he asked slowly.

"Effectively and permanently." "He was . . . was—"

"Go on," I said, "why hesitate about it?"

"Murdered?" he blurted.

"That's right," I said.

"For a second he wasn't flustered, but then he regained his poise and sat there thinking, his steely blue eyes looking at the blotter on his desk. You could feel his mind going around like a pin-wheel.

"This is supposed to help me?" he asked after a little while.

"It will help you."

"How?"

"You can get your story concocted, so that when the police call on you, it won't look so bad in print."

"Suppose Cadott didn't write me any letter?"

"I said, 'The guy used a typewriter. It would be very embarrassing if you should be positive he hadn't written you, and then police should find the carbon copy of the letter in his files.'

"And why are you out here, Lam?"

"I want information."

"What sort of information?"

"About what steps you took to counter the threat in Cadott's letter."

"What sort of steps?"

"Detective agency, police, lawyer, whatever you did to protect yourself. You're not the sort to sit around and wait for the other guy to get set. You'd beat him to the punch."

Abruptly, Jensen raised his cold, blue eyes and said, "You're talking. Give me the details. What do you know about the killing?"

"First," I said, "you can tell me what you know about Lois Marlow."

He didn't even hesitate. He said, "I've known Lois for three or four years, right after her marriage went by the boards. But I didn't know she had been married to Cadott. Cadott is a nut. I have never met him personally. He has written me twice. I had the guy classed as a crazy crank. I tossed his letters into the wastebasket."

"For two years, Lois Marlow has been doing work for me during the conventions. I had some water-ski demonstrations and she rode both on the skis and in the motor-boat."

"Then at the sales meetings after the conventions, she was one of the hostesses who made the guests comfortable. They helped serve drinks while I showed motion pictures. We held these meetings in private suites. I rent those suites in the convention hotel. That's all there was to it. Now tell me about the circumstances surrounding Cadott's death."

I said, "He was found dead in Cabin 24 of the Roadside Motel at Vallejo. He had registered as George Chalmers. He'd gone out there early in the afternoon. There wasn't anything particular to do out there except play solitaire, go to bed or write letters. It would be interesting to know whether he had written letters."

"Wouldn't it?" Jensen said thoughtfully.

He thought things over, then said, "Look, Lam, where do you stand in this?"

I said, "I'm representing a client. I can't tell you his name. I can tell you that he also received a letter. This letter made threats."

"All of Cadott's letters had threats," Jensen said. "Look here, Lam, you have put cards on the table with me. I'm going to put them on the table with you. I'm a promoter. I'm no inventor. I picked up the patents on the Thrustmore motor and I can tell you it's plenty revolutionary. You don't know about outboard motors, but we're making an outboard motor with a variable-pitch propeller, and we've got it down to a price that's competitive."

"You can figure what that does and want it means. Those propellers get to spinning pretty fast, and the difference of just the merest fraction of an inch in pitch makes a terrific difference in performance. On standard models it's been a job to change props. It takes one kind of prop for high speed, driving a lightweight, unloaded boat through water. It takes another type of prop to push a heavily loaded boat or to push one with a water skier on behind."

"When you're on water skis, you want to get up on the surface of the water just as fast as you can after you're ready to start. You can see what it would mean to have a variable-pitch propeller that would jerk a skiner into an upright position the minute the slack came out of the rope."

"I've got it."

"Naturally I have troubles. Some of my competitors would like to buy me out. They'd like to buy me out at their own price. In order to soften me up, they've filed suits and patent litigation and resorted to just about every trick they could think of."

"I'm virtually certain that George Cadott was another trick."

"What makes you think so?"

"The way his letters read. Hang it, Lam, you've been around. You know conventions. You have to hold the buyers' interest. A charming young woman is the best way ever devised for holding customer interest. I pay these hostesses to entertain prospective customers. They see that the glasses are kept filled, cater to the buy's ego, and see that the customer gets all the dope on the Thrustmore motor."

"George Cadott's murder," I said, "may complicate the situation somewhat."

"It may complicate it a lot. Are you sure he had been married to Lois Marlow?"

"That's right," I said. "Where were you last night? Do you have an alibi?"

"What are you talking about? Nobody's going to suspect me of killing the guy."

"No?" I asked, with just the right amount of cynicism in my voice.

"For heaven's sake, Lam, don't be a goof! He was nothing to me. I barely remembered the name. I threw the letters in the wastebasket."

"Ever talk with him?"

"Good heavens, no!"

"How far did the friendship progress between Barclay Fisher and Lois Marlow?"

"I never inquired. He was pouring cold champagne down his gullet the last time I saw. He complained of his throat burning."

"What was Lois doing?"

"Keeping his champagne glass full."

"Why?"

"Fisher," he said, "is one of those long, mournful—Abruptly he caught himself."

"Customers," I said.

"Potential customers," he corrected me, grinning.

I said, "I notice your secretary has an appointment book. Does she, by any chance, keep the names of all the persons who call on you and your appointments?"

"Anything wrong with that?" he asked.

I said, "In case Cadott called on you yesterday afternoon before he went to Vallejo, you'd better get his name off the book."

You can go as wrong playing hunches as sure things, Donald ought to know. Read what happens in "Some Slips Don't Show" here tomorrow.

Teams winning second place from Pitt county in competition with four other counties were: Peanut, Ray Williams, Bethel 4-H Club; electric, Barbara Dixon and Desora Harris, Farmville 4-H Club; Dairy foods, Barbara Harris, Farmville 4-H Club.

A Greene county 4-H team won first place with a peanut team demonstration and a Wilson county team won first place with an electric demonstration.

All first place winners from the three group eliminations held in the Northeastern District will compete in the District Federation program to be held June 5 at H. B. Suggs High School in Farmville.

Kentucky Holds Primary Today

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—The bids of three congressmen for reelection held most of the interest today as Kentuckians turned out for primary elections.

Most of the attention was focused on races by Representatives Brent Spence, Noble J. Gregory and Eugene Siler.

Gregory, who has represented the 1st Dist. since 1936, appeared to have the toughest race. His most determined opposition has been from State Railroad Commissioner Frank A. Stubblefield.

Spence, 63, ran against Morris Weintraub of Newport in the 5th Dist. Weintraub served as speaker of the House in the 1956 Legislature.

Siler was opposed by Daniel Boone Smith of Harlan in the 8th Dist.

Siler is a Republican. Gregory and Spence are Democrats.

The only other primary race is in the 4th Dist. where Rep. Frank Chelf is running against Stanley Riley Jr., Bardonia.

By CHARLES BISSETTE

"Reach for the Stars, Neighbor"

I said that to Chester. It's not his real name, of course. He might be touchy about being quoted.

Well, anyway, Chet lives about 15 minutes away from our place and dropped by last week to talk about buying a camera for the holiday weekend. He asked a question we hear a lot around our place:

"Got an inexpensive camera both my wife and I can use? She wants snapshots she can carry with her. Me, I'd like to take color slides."

Right then, I told him to "reach for the Stars" because each of these three new Brownie Star Cameras takes three kinds of pictures. With just one camera, Chet can get color slides and his wife can take black and white snaps, or color prints guaranteed to interest her bridge table the minute she takes them out of her purse.

I knew they'd both like the low price, too. Just $5.95 for the Brownie Starlet, others to $10.75. That idea, as I told Chet, is to take home two and preserve the domestic tranquility. Chet reached for two Stars. He's probably going to tag them HIS and HERS!

A Cigar Per Day Since He Was 16

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Hiram Franklin Deaner sat back contentedly after dinner last night and lit the 32,486th cigar of his life, the first in a birthday package of 107—one for each of Deaner's years.

Deaner, a retired piano tuner, figures he's been smoking a cigar a day since he was 16.

"I'm a little hard of hearing," he said, "and I wear glasses. But there's nothing wrong with my memory."

His recollections include one of watching President Abraham Lincoln drive into Gettysburg, Pa., to deliver that immortal address. But the then 10-year-old Deaner didn't stay around for the speech. He ran off to play with some friends.

Accidents each year claim the lives of more than 25,000 Americans aged 65 and over.

Floating Cities

VENICE

GRAND VISTA. A long, colorful procession of gondolas moves slowly along the Grand Canal in Venice. The procession preceded the traditional Venice regatta, in which gondolas compete. Regatta dates back seven centuries.

People of two cities — Venice in Italy and Bangkok in Thailand — live on the water.

In Venice, a quarter of a million of its inhabitants go by boat in getting to and from their places of business, their homes, their shops. The city has 177 canals. All types of craft ply the waterways. Everywhere one sees the gondola, the tourist's delight. Besides, there are motorboats, the large gondolas and barges that carry fuel, foodstuffs and raw materials, the "vaporettos," or small steamers that carry commuters to and from their jobs. The police and firemen carry on by boat. The hospitals use water ambulances.

Bangkok, the Thai capital, has been often referred to as the "Venice of the East." Hundreds of canals and rivers wind in and along the city's side streets. Some 100,000 people cling to life on or near the water. The floating markets are usually the busiest arenas of river life. In a colorful pattern of fruits, vegetables, gay sarongs and the babble of Thai and Chinese, the boat merchants and the customers carry on, undisturbed by the wide-eyed tourists or the saffron-robed Buddhist monks who come daily to beg for their food.

Door-to-door delivery of merchandise by boat is a common sight in Venice. Here, a fruit merchant delivers grapes to a restaurant.

A Venetian "white wing" uses net to skim the debris from a canal.

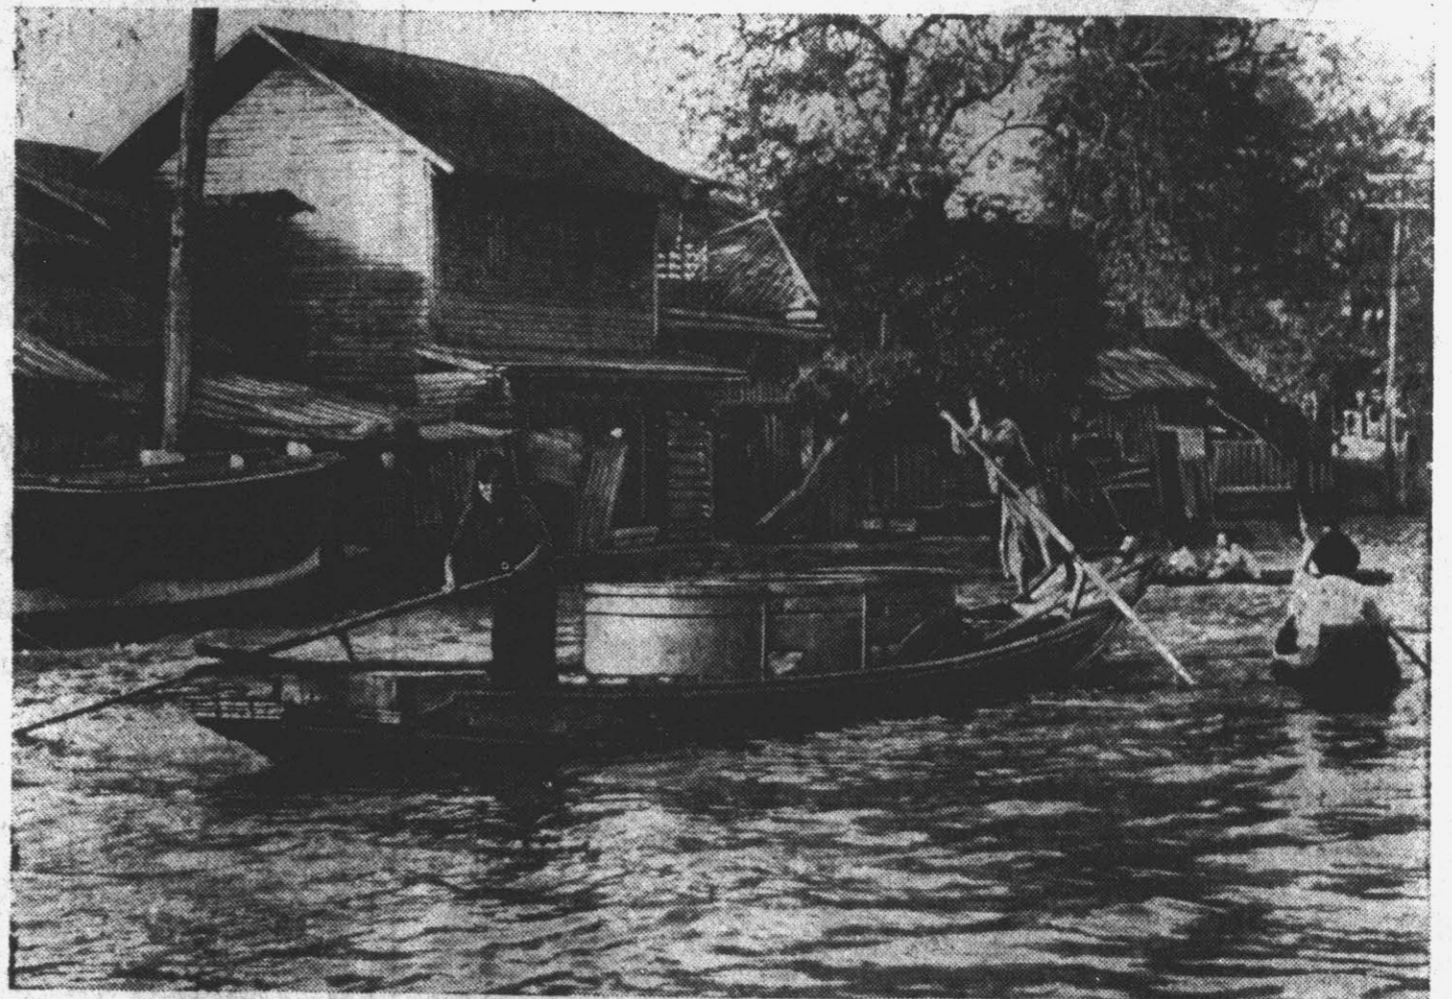

Gondolas are stacked with household goods as family moves from one house to another.

BANGKOK

Tradespeople in Bangkok paddle their small boats through the waterways to peddle their wares. Most items can be bought for much less than in dry land parts of city.

Fresh water vendors ply their boat along a Bangkok stream. The water is sold to people who do not have a well and are unable to catch enough rain water for their needs.

'STRAC' Units Hold Maneuvers

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP)—More than 8,000 infantry and airborne troops were engaged today in a relatively quiet and uneventful maneuver aimed at defending the Eastern Seaboard against a mythical invader.

101st Airborne from Ft. Campbell, Ky., and the 1st Infantry Division from Ft. Riley, Kan. Also taking part is the 4th Armored Regiment from Ft. Knox, Ky.

The only STRAC division not involved is the 4th Infantry Division from Ft. Lewis, Wash. STRAC is an outfit that's kept ready to go anywhere in the world at a moment's notice.

No airdrops or Rocketa finings are planned. As the maneuver began yesterday, the enemy aggressor had established itself in New England, Florida, Norfolk, Va., and Charleston, S.C.

Testing Clean And Dirty Bombs

WASHINGTON (AP)—Both dirty and clean bombs are being tested during the current U. S. nuclear tests in the Pacific, says Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission.

He reiterated yesterday in a TV interview that the danger of radioactive fallout from the tests is relatively small.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market remained on dead center in moderate trading early this afternoon.

A hedge-podge of small gains and losses made a pretty even division among key stocks.

Rails, resting after their rise yesterday on news of the advancement of proposals to aid their industry, showed minor fluctuations.

The market was again in a technical resistance area to further advance because it was near the 1953 highs were stock is available for sale. The continued rise in steel production and another copper price boost at the custom smelter level were bullish factors.

Food Fair jumped more than a point on news that its directors had voted in favor of a 3-for-2 stock split. Carrier Corp. rose 1/4 to 41 1/2 on a large block of 10,000 shares.

Lukens Steel, Goodyear and American Cyanamid were off about a point each while Union Carbide's loss was a bit more than that.

Otherwise it was virtually a featureless market. Even Beech Aircraft, which announced a 30-cent extra dividend—something it failed to do last year—was about unchanged. The stock was off yesterday and had a rise Friday.

Small gains were posted by International Harvester, Anacostia, Allied Chemical, Dow Chemical, Westinghouse Electric, American Can, Texas Co. and U.S. Gypsum.

Small losers included Bethlehem, Goodrich, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Baltimore & Ohio, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Lowe's.

The Associated Press average of 50 stocks at noon was off 30 cents to $169.30 with the industrials down 50 cents, the rails down 20 cents and the utilities unchanged.

Faculty Study Played Role In Board's Decision

RALEIGH (AP)—A study made by a faculty committee played a major role in the decision of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina to seek a reduction in the powers of the State Board of Higher Education.

This was revealed today when a report of the faculty group was made public.

The university trustees yesterday adopted unanimously the report of a special trustees' committee which proposed that the state board be stripped of many of its powers.

The faculty group, headed by Dean Henry Brandis Jr. of the UNC Law School, said that under present state law, the Board of Trustees "is completely deprived of the legal right to control the education policies of the university."

It asserted the law should be changed to restore this authority to the trustees.

The committee discussed the Board of Higher Education's action in reducing a proposed housing development at North Carolina State college from 500 to 300 units. It did not criticize the board's action in reducing the size of the project, but said the board may have exceeded its authority by fixing priorities on the assignment of housing units to married students.

The faculty committee also told of recommendations received from the Board of Higher Education dealing with salary scales at the university.

It added, "the exact extent to which the board believed that it had the legal authority (over salary scales) is not clear. But the apparent intention was to assert a position in the matter superior to that of the university and virtually equal to that of the (state) Budget Division."

$300 Million To Bolster Housing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The administration today released an additional $300 million dollars to carry out the government's recession housing program.

Without the new allocation, the program would have run out of funds in about two weeks.

The Budget Bureau made the money available to the Federal National Mortgage Assn. to buy government-backed home loans. FNMA can commit itself to buy, at par, mortgages of not more than $13,500 on homes not yet under construction.

In an effort to revive building as a counter to the recession, Congress made available up to one billion dollars for FNMA purchases of FHA and VA mortgages.

The administration allocated only 300 million when the law went into effect last month, however, and 220 million of this already has been committed.

With this second allocation, the Budget Bureau still has authority from Congress to release an additional 400 million dollars.

Safe Cracker Fumbled His Escape; Is Quickly Caught

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—A safe cracker who fumbled away his escape when he lost the keys to his parked car during a robbery attempt was arrested on a street here today, police reported.

Officers said Richard Nelson Haugen, 29, of Minneapolis, Minn., was arrested shortly after a locksmith opened the door of the car, parked outside the First Methodist Church, the scene of an unsuccessful safe robbery last night.

The arresting officers were in the church investigating the robbery attempt, and came out to help Haugen open the car after the locksmith grew suspicious and tipped police.

"I did it, let's go," officers quoted Haugen as saying after they found burglary tools in the car.

Police also found a small arsenal in Haugen's motel room. In it were two machine guns, a .45 automatic pistol, a .38 snub nose pistol, two other pistols, a suitcase of money still uncounched by officers and a quantity of clothing.

Officers quoted Haugen as saying he was discharged from the Army at Ft. Carson, Colo. March 21 of this year and had been in "a different place every night since I got out of the Army."

Haugen bragged to officers that he was wanted by the FBI. The FBI in Charlotte said Haugen was not on their most wanted list and immediately assigned agents to the case.

Gastonia police gave this account: Haugen broke into the safe at the First Baptist Church, just across the street from City Hall, and stole about $500. He then drove his car to the First Methodist Church, two blocks away, took what tools he needed, and locked the car.

He was unable to crack the safe and returned to his car only to find that he had lost his keys. He hailed a taxi and went to his motel room where he spent the night. Upon awaking, he returned to his car and summoned a locksmith.

Meanwhile, reports of both safe crackings came to police and officers were dispatched to the First Methodist Church to investigate. The locksmith grew suspicious when he saw the tools in the back seat and notified police. He stalled at opening the car until officers in the church came out and offered to help. The loot from the Baptist church was recovered in the car.

"If I hadn't lost my keys, I would have been long gone," officers quoted Haugen.

Tunisia Prepares Take Its Case Before UN

ROME (AP)—Italy's pro-Western Christian Democrats today boasted their parliamentary strength but once more fell short of a majority in the face of matching gains by leftist forces.

The Christian Democrats appeared to have emerged from the nationwide election Sunday and yesterday strong enough to continue to govern Italy as they have since World War II. They will have to proceed cautiously in a coalition for lack of a majority.

The big losers in the national balloting appeared to be on the right—the Monarchists and Fascists.

The Communists and fellow-traveling Socialists gained after campaigning against installation of North Atlantic Treaty Organization bases in Italy. The Red gains showed they had overcome the setback they were believed to have suffered when the Soviet Union crushed the 1956 Hungarian uprising and Premier Khrushchev exposed Stalin's crimes.

With about 70 per cent of the vote counted for the lower house, the Christian Democrats had won 42.7 per cent, compared with 40.1 in the last election. The Communist-Socialist left was up from 35.2 in 1953 to 37.5. The Monarchists dropped from 6.8 to 2.2 per cent and the Fascists from 5.9 to 4.4.

After all votes are tabulated, the 596 seats in the chamber will be allocated on system of proportional representation.

The final official results for the Senate gave a 41.2 per cent vote for the Christian Democrats compared with 40.7 in 1953. The Communist-Socialist left vote rose from 34.7 per cent to 35.9.

The Interior Ministry announced that the Christian Democrats won 122 of the 246 Senate seats at stake, just barely under a majority. The Liberals, who have been in coalition with the Christian Democrats, took 4 places and the pro-Western Social Democrats 5. The Communists elected 60 senators, the Left Socialists 35, Monarchists 7, Fascists 8, left-wing independents 3 and South Tyrol Volkspartei 2.

Christian Democrats Of Italy Gain In Election

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Tunisian Ambassador Mongi Slim flew here from Washington today and began drafting a formal request for U. N. action to get French troops out of his country.

Slim talked with Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and U.N. diplomats.

Slim told newsmen he was preparing a complaint for submission to the Security Council, but he could not say when it would be ready.

President Habib Bourguiba announced last night that he would call for U.N. action "the extremely grave situation raised by French troops in Tunisia."

Bourguiba also said he had asked for arms from the United States and Britain. In Washington, top State Department officials conferred with Slim and French Ambassador Herve Alphand and urged against any military moves that might set off new violence.

Slim was expected to file a formal complaint in the U.N. against France after consultations with members of the 11-nation Security Council.

U.N. diplomats privately expressed doubts that debate would be of much help at a time when the French government was in the midst of a serious internal crisis which had virtually ruled out any possibility of French-Tunisian negotiations.

Some even doubted whether the French government could get the 22,000 French troops to leave Tunisia even if it wanted them out. The troops remained in the country under the 1956 treaty conceding Tunisian independence. The French army in Algeria, whose leaders have rebelled against the Paris government, wants French troops next door as a deterrent to the rebellious Algerian Moslems who get supplies and arms in Tunisia.

Bourguiba first demanded withdrawal of the French forces after planes from Algeria bombed a Tunisian village in February. He renewed it after weekend fighting between French and Tunisian forces in south Tunisia in which French planes from Algeria joined in.
