SUSPENDS DESEGREGATION AT LITTLE ROCK

Thirty-Day Wait On Phone Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — It will be at least 30 days or longer before the Utilities Commission hands down a decision on the request of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. for rate increases totalling nearly three million dollars.

Atkins testified that CT&T would compare well with most companies in its ability to borrow. His own firm has handled CT&T stock in the past, he said, adding that the amount of capital CT&T has attracted in the past 10 years has been substantial despite its debt ratio.

Grand Jury Judge Approves Will Get Delay 'Til 1961 Crash Case

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—An Arkansas U.S. District judge today ruled that racial integration at embattled Little Rock Central High School could be suspended until 1961.

U.S. Dist. Judge Harry J. Lemley of Hope said in his order, received by mail in the district clerk's office here, that the Little Rock gradual plan for desegregation could be suspended for 2 1/2 years without the school "being considered collectively or individually, in contempt" of this court.

Both Davies and Lemley were assigned here temporarily to fill a vacancy on the bench of the District of Eastern Arkansas. Of the nine Negroes enrolled at Central last September, seven would have been eligible to return this fall. One of the Negroes, Minnie Jean Brown, was expelled earlier this year and transferred under a scholarship to a private interracial school in New York City.

"We make within the next few years will leave their mark upon this state and its people for many generations to come," Hodges reiterated that he will submit and support a legislative program in 1959 "for the good of the people without regard for my own political future."

Pfc. David Nagle will no longer have to face charges of first degree burglary alone. The 21-year-old Cherry Point Marine now has company. Local authorities yesterday afternoon arrested Donald Gary Robar, 20, also a Cherry Point Marine from Saint Lawrence, New York in connection with the series of recent robberies and attempted housebreakings.

Chances Look Good For End Of Freight Levies

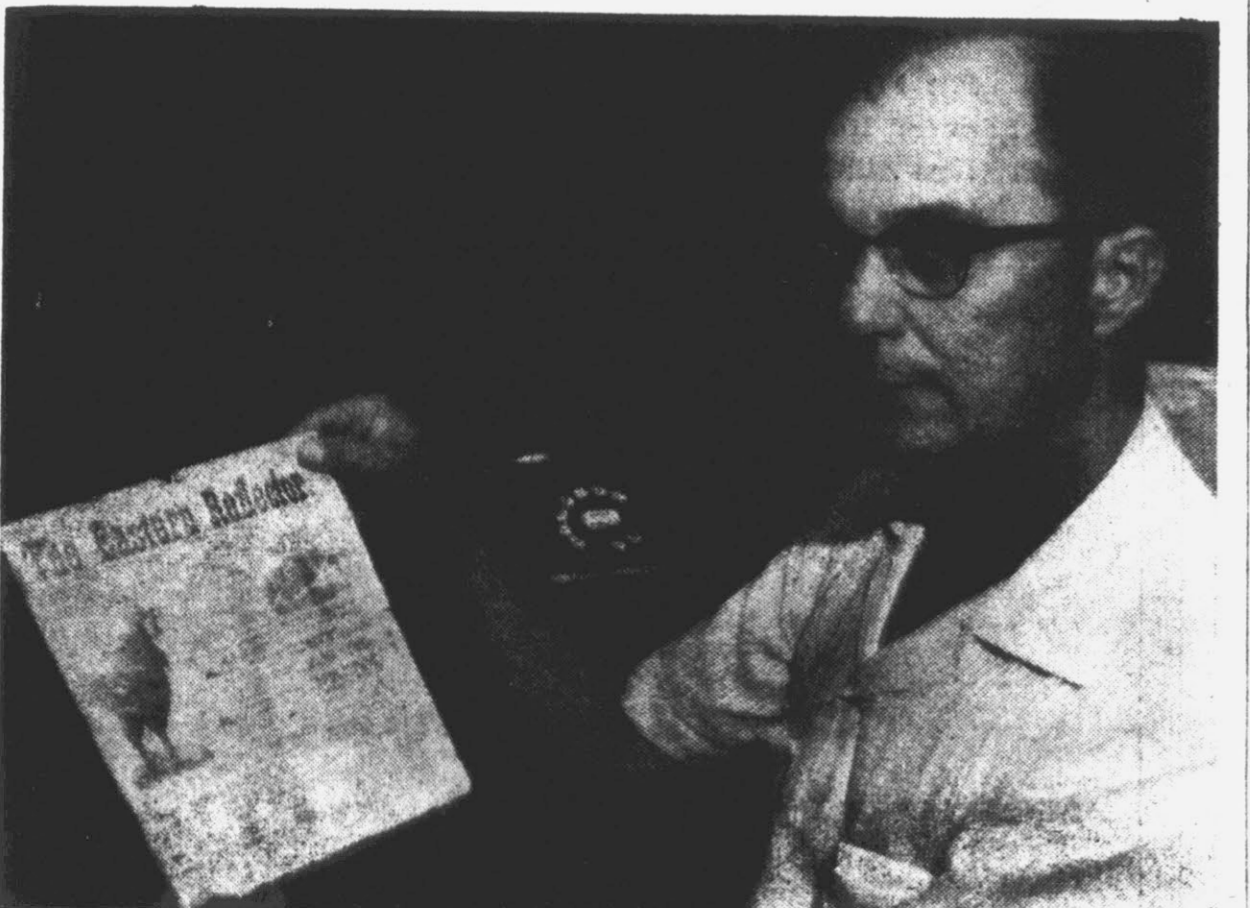

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chances appear to favor congressional agreement on elimination of the federal tax on freight despite administration opposition. The Senate late yesterday voted to erase the 3 per cent levy on freight and the 10 per cent tax on passenger fares in passing a bill to continue for another year present rates on all major excises and the 52 per cent tax on corporation profits. In the absence of extension legislation, these rates would drop automatically on July 1.

Finds Weekly Reflector Of 1886 In A Trunk

By JIMMY ELLIS Reflector Staff Writer D.J. Whichard, founder of The Daily Reflector, made no bones about his political feelings in his first newspaper, The Eastern Reflector.

Eastern Reflector, an extra published after the 1886 general elections, was devoted largely to Editor Whichard's comments about Democratic victories in the various races. He was obviously pleased.

The second page also has two illustrations, one of a smiling man over the names Louis C. Latham, Denison Worthington and Willis R. Williams, and the other of a dejected individual over the names Lycurgus J. Barrett, Claude M. Bernard and Germain Bernard.

Latham won the first district Congressional seat from Barrett by a 2,000-vote majority, Worthington defeated Claude Bernard in the race for Solicitor, and Williams beat Germain Bernard in the race for Senator.

The editorial also said, "North Carolina has done well. The State judicial ticket is elected; Simmons is probably elected to Congress from the Second District; there is some doubt as to the election of Graham in the Fourth and Reid in the Fifth Districts."

desired to see the Aukean stables cleaned out, but King, for Sheriff, and Wilson, for Register of Deeds, are elected."

According to the official summary of the county's vote, listed on the edition's third page, King won the Sheriff's job by a vote of 2,333 to 2,274 over Patrick, and Wilson won the Register of Deeds job by beating Ward, 2,301 to 2,280.

The paper was mailed to "Jas McLawhorn" of Ridge Spring (now Scuffletown), grandfather of the Ayden insurance agent who found the old paper in the bottom of a trunk. The copy was the only one of The Eastern Reflector in the trunk, although McLawhorn said he found several copies of The Ayden Dispatch dating back to the early 1920's.

CHAPTER 5

"Slade Considine sent you a message," Martha Kilgore told her grandmother. "You'd better keep your scrub longhorns home if you don't want them shot by his Uncle Nick."

Rachel Kilgore shrugged. "Nick's an old liar. If he's claiming my bulls are on his range — but I'll send Jim Ned out to see about it tomorrow."

"One of them was certainly on his land," Martha insisted. "That's how I happened to fall in the creek. He was fighting a big Hereford and I stopped to watch — on a narrow trail. My horse got scared and threw me and I rolled down the hill into the creek."

The old lady plainly didn't like being disputed. "Well, I'll see about it!" she repeated testily. "I didn't get those fighting bulls to pester my neighbors as much as keep them from pestering me. Having a bunch of scrub bulls is one sure way of making Wynn Thomason and Nick Considine keep their cows on their own range."

"But doesn't that mix up your herd too?" Rachel Kilgore grinned as impudently as a child. "Nope. I sold all my cows and calves last fall, and bought a bunch of black polled Angus steers this spring to fatten through the summer. In a white-face country black steers aren't much temptation to a rustler's loop."

In spite of her proud bearing and some of her grand lady ways, Rachel Kilgore's household was run plain ranch style. There was a table in the dining room with a white-clothed table, good silver, and fine china, but everybody, from the head woman down to the cook-housekeeper and young Mexican roustabout, ate together. Viewing them all together like this, Martha found her opinion of her grandmother's character went up several notches. They all treated her with affectionate familiarity — but as a gun crew expected to take on the whole U. S. Government, they didn't stack up so high. With the exception of the Mexican kid there wasn't a one of them under fifty.

There was old Jim Ned Wheeler, the foreman, a small, wiry man with twinkling friendly eyes, whom Martha liked on first sight. He must have been somewhere around sixty.

There was tall, gaunt, horse-faced Mary McIntosh, the cook-housekeeper, about the same age as Jim Ned. And another sun-wrinkled man named Hud Livingston, probably not much over fifty.

The supper table talk was mostly about the new governmental organization called the Forest Service that proposed to move in and take control of all the Federal lands in the Chupadero Mountain Range — and what Rachel Kilgore intended to do about it.

"We're mean as rattlesnakes around here, honey," Hud winked. "Forest Rangers won't let them on your poor feeble ol' granddama!"

"Feeble ol' granddama my foot!" Rachel Kilgore's tone was almost a snarl. "We'll fight this Forest Reserve business tooth and nail — but it'll be the one to decide how it is done — and don't you two old blazers forget it!"

"You're blushing something bigger than Nick Considine this time, Rachel," said Jim Ned soberly. "And I think you're wrong to fight it!" He took a long swig of coffee, then set his cup down slowly. Rachel Kilgore snorted again and half rose from her chair, fire in her eyes. "But if you want it fought — I aim to help you — however you say," Jim Ned added in the same sober, considering tone.

"You'd darn well better!" said the old lady shortly. "And don't scare me like that again!"

Nevertheless, for all her brave boasts earlier in the afternoon, Martha could see that her grandmother was pressed and worried. Now that she had got over her first angry shock on hearing of the Forest Service plan, she had sense enough to realize she was up against something big.

But she wasn't the kind to stay whipped long. Before the evening was over she was making her plans. She would organize the stockmen in the Chupaderos. If they all stood pat, the Government wouldn't force the issue right now. Wynn Thomason's uncle was a senator from Colorado. He could put pressure to bear in the right places to nip this thing while it was still in the bud.

If all these other things failed, she and all the other ranch owners in the Chupaderos would fight.

The girl behind the desk in the small hotel called to Slade Considine as he entered the door and started across the lobby. "Oh, Slade! There was a man in here a while ago asking for you. A captain John Catlin from Washington. He's in Room 13 upstairs. I told him I'd tell you when you came in, and he said to go on up."

The cowboy nodded. "Thanks, Beulah."

The girl's eyes were wistful as she watched his tall, lean figure step up the stairs. At that time then she turned and went back to the little private sitting-room that adjoined the lobby.

Beulah Denhart was a pretty girl, with thick, straight, dark red hair, serious grey eyes, and a cute, plump figure. When she first came to town Beulah had had a lot of attention from all the eligible males in and around Barrancas — or rather all except one, the one she had ever had a liking for if she had ever had any encouragement. That one had always been friendly and that was all until finally Beulah had realized that she was the way it always would be. She wore a diamond on her left hand now, but she had never been completely happy about it. The women of Barrancas were a little suspicious of her. They didn't approve of a young, pretty girl running a hotel by herself in the first place, and in the second place there was something about the girl — a kind of deep, inner reserve — that held them at arm's length and aroused their resentment.

A cowboy lounging in a deep leather armchair in her living room straightened up as she came in. "Beulah, did I hear you telling Slade Considine that there was a man from Washington wanting to see him?"

"Darn, why didn't you tell me Captain Catlin was in?"

"You didn't ask me." She smiled at him. "Naturally I supposed you came to see me."

"Stop swearing, Wynn!" she continued. "And keep your shirt on! Slade won't be up there all day, and when he leaves you can see Captain Catlin." She emptied his ash-tray, plumped up a pillow on the couch and sat down. "Did you know Mrs. Kilgore had a granddaughter?"

"No, is she pretty?"

"She's the most beautiful girl I ever saw in my life." Beulah Denhart said soberly. "She stopped here night before last and asked how to get out there. She's so lovely I wanted to hate her — and then she was so darn nice and friendly I couldn't help liking her."

Morning Ceremony Unites Couple

In the First Presbyterian Church this morning, Miss Janet McNeill Watson, daughter of Mrs. T. M. Watson and the late Dr. Watson of Greenville, was married to Mr. Claude Dawson Zeigler, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Zeigler of McRae, Ga., in a ceremony of dignity and simplicity.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John C. Livingston of Winchester, Va., cousin of the bride.

The church was decorated in bridal greenery and large standards of white flowers, carrying out a color note of green and white.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Guy V. Smith of Greenville as organist and Mrs. Irving Smith Jr. of Robersonville as soloist. Mrs. Smith was a former roommate of the bride at Florida State University.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Charles Watson, chose for her wedding a gown of frosty white starched alencon lace over taffeta. The molded empire bodice featured a scalloped neckline and tiny cap sleeves. The long princess lines of the gown drifted into a wide gored waist length skirt. Her veil of sheer illusion was attached to a dainty cap of alencon lace trimmed in tiny seed pearls and sequins. With this she wore lace mitts with points over the hand and carried a white prayer book showered with lilies-of-the-valley.

Miss Mary Ann Stark of Durham was maid of honor and Miss Anne Zeigler of McRae, Ga., sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Both attendants were dressed in white organza, waist length dresses with white accessories, and carried colonial bouquets of early summer flowers.

The bridegroom was attended by his father as best man, and ushers were Guy V. Smith and Fred H. Haar.

Mrs. Watson, mother of the bride, chose for her daughter's wedding a gown of aqua lace over taffeta with matching shoes and hat.

Mrs. Zeigler, the bridegroom's mother, was dressed in light pink French voile with matching picture hat and pink accessories. Both mothers wore natural hybrid orchids.

Miss Janet Livingston, aunt of the bride, was wearing navy blue voile with navy accessories and white gardenia corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony Mrs. T. M. Watson entertained Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler, the immediate families, bridal party, and out-of-town guests at a wedding breakfast in the Fellowship Hall of the church.

Mrs. Zeigler is a graduate of East Carolina College and received her Master's degree from Florida State University in Music Education. She now holds a position in the public schools of Jacksonville.

The bridegroom of Jacksonville and Daytona Beach, Fla., is a graduate of the University of Florida Department of Building Construction. He is a member of Sigma Lambda Chi and Gargoyles Honorary Fraternities and Sigma Alpha Epsilon Social Fraternity. He is now employed by O. P. Woodcock Co. of Jacksonville.

After a short wedding trip the couple will make their home in Florida.

church for the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

Out-of-town guests attending nuptial events were Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dawson Zeigler and Ann Zeigler from McRae, Ga.; Joyce Alexander, Paris, Tenn.; Martha Johnson, Leesburg; Mary Ann Stark, Durham; Sally Beard, Mullins, S. C.; Miss Mary Eve Carpenter, Miss Laura Carpenter and Miss Lillian Carpenter, Wilmington; the Rev. John Charles Livingston, Winchester, Va.; Mr. James Livingston, Miss Sarah McGeachy, Miss Elizabeth McGeachy, all of St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Smith, Mrs. Carl Mash of Fayetteville; Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Watson, Mary Watson, Neill Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Smith, Carolyn Smith, John Memory, David Memory, Wagar, Miss Ruth Blackwell, Winston-Salem; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jenkins Jr., Jim Jenkins, Raleigh; Mrs. Jeanette Parrott, Kinston; Dr. and Mrs. Jim Darden, Ahoskie.

After-Rehearsal Party

Last night Dr. and Mrs. Fred B. Haar and Dr. and Mrs. Karl Pace entertained the Zeigler-Watson bridal party and out-of-town guests with an after-rehearsal lawn party.

Mrs. Haar greeted the guests at the front gate leading to the appointed area for the party. Greeting the guests also on the top terrace were the future bride and bridegroom, Miss Janet Watson and Claude Dawson Zeigler. Mrs. Pace presided at the appointed table.

The bridal table was centered with the traditional wedding cake and five branched candelabras holding burning green tapers flanking each side. The punch bowl at one end of the table was presided over by Mrs. C. D. Zeigler. Arrangements of white gardenias and feverfew in epergnes were placed around the table.

Nuts, mints and cake were served buffet style.

Pre-Rehearsal Party

Proceeding the rehearsal last night, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus W. Stark, Miss Mary Ann Stark, Mrs. Roy Coburn, Mr. and Mrs. Arden L. Tucker, and Miss Susan Arden Tucker entertained the Zeigler-Watson bridal party, family, and out-of-town guests at a dinner party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tucker.

On arrival the honoree was present a white corsage to compliment her yellow dress.

The guests, after being greeted by the hosts and hostesses, were served fruit juice appetizers.

The guests were then directed into the dining room to a buffet table covered with a white organza cloth over a green, which featured an arrangement of pink roses, daisies, and baby's breath flanked by silver candelabras which held burning pink tapers.

Bouquets of mixed garden flowers were used throughout the hour.

Mrs. Watson, mother of the bride-elect, served ham from a silver platter. Mrs. Zeigler, mother of the bridegroom, served the salad.

Auxiliary tables placed throughout the house accommodated the guests.

The bride presented her attendants with gifts.

Mrs. Claude Dawson Zeigler, Jr.

Watch Step On Summer Blind Date

By VIVIAN BROWN

Summer is the season when blind dates thrive, when romantic mountain and beach belles expect to meet their heroes in some unexpected place—emerging sun-tanned from the briny deep, in the moonlit glow of a garden party, or even in an air-conditioned movie.

The girl who accepts a blind date should be aware of the importance of the social amenities involved.

1. The boy should not be a friend of a friend. The person who recommends a blind date should be someone of responsible character—parent of a friend, a relative, respected teacher. It is the duty of that person to know the blind date well.
2. There should be others present on the date. Another couple who have known each other for a long time and many times before is a safe bet.
3. No Obligations

You have no obligation to the blind date, no matter who has introduced you. If he is surly, a specimen of a parking problem, boorish or bore, it is your privilege to cut the evening short. Give him the brush-off just as you would any other date.

4. When a blind date is suggested to you it is a good idea to ask the age of the boy, and get some information about his background. If he is out of your sphere as far as mutual interests go, it is better not to accept the date. (For example: You hate sailing, and he owns a boat, and all he lives for is a day on the water. If the date is to be for a sail, don't think that by accepting it you can change his mind at the last minute.)

5. It's a good idea not to seek a blind date or act too eager about one that someone is making for you. In the worst possible case the telephone call from a girl to a boy discussing a proposed blind date. The boy and girl should be properly introduced by the person who is the go-between.

It is true that one can be pretty lonely at a summer resort, responding invitingly to an anonymous note or phone call, prompted by the same loneliness on the part of the male. Sometimes if the suggestion is made that the boy find a mutual friend for purposes of introduction, there is no harm in accepting the date.

30 Years Ago Today

June 21, 1928

Honoring her house guest, Mrs. Gary Hughes of Asheville, Mrs. F. J. Forbes charmingly entertained at bridge on Wednesday afternoon. The home was lovely with pink gladioli and snapdragons. Forbes assisted the hostess in serving a delicious salad course.

Mrs. Jolly Club Hostess

The Pierce Home Demonstration Club held its June meeting at the home of Mrs. W. O. Jolly Jr. Mrs. Edwin Harrington, president, presided over the meeting with project reports given by Mrs. Harrington and Mrs. Jolly.

Plans were discussed for the club's annual picnic.

June being Dairy Month, Mrs. W. O. Jolly Jr., food and nutrition leader, gave a demonstration on the use of milk and ice cream in a menu.

Since few people drink milk, she suggested ways milk could be used in cooking to help give the amount needed each day.

Mrs. Jolly made a variety of toppings to be used on ice cream. She then invited the group into the den where she served ice cream and cookies with the various toppings made in the demonstration.

Mrs. George Dail assisted Mrs. Jolly in serving.

Cool Styles Leave Boss Cold

BY DOROTHY ROE

Associated Press Women Editor

If you want to get that job, girls, don't apply for it wearing a sack dress, a straggly short haircut, bare legs and loafers. These are the current pet hates of bosses, as revealed by a recent survey of 200 office executives.

The girl who gets the job, employers agree, is the neat, well-groomed miss who wears a trim tailored suit (fitted, please), a small hat, clean gloves, sheer stockings, plain pumps with high or medium heels, a medium-length well-brushed hairdo and a minimum of makeup.

As to boys, the best way not to get a job is to wear an Elvis Presley haircut, a loud sports coat and slacks, pork pie hat and two-tone oxfords with rubber soles.

The bosses say that the first impression made by a young job seeker is the most important. The boy or girl who takes the trouble to be well-groomed and properly dressed when applying for a job is the one who may be expected to show initiative and responsibility after he gets it.

Girls also are warned to avoid metallic nail polish and long fingernails. Employers feel, reasonably enough, that the girl with curved talon fingernails will not be too efficient at the typewriter.

They also frown on heavy perfume and an excess amount of costume jewelry for office wear.

As to mannerisms—you don't have to walk like Marilyn Monroe to land that job. Believe it or not, the average employer is looking for efficiency rather than sex appeal during office hours.

York-Best Given Rehearsal Dinner

AYDEN—Mr. and Mrs. Joe Tripp and Mr. and Mrs. Powell Speight entertained the York-Best wedding party and out-of-town guests at an after-rehearsal dinner party last night at the Tripp home on Terrace Drive.

The hosts and hostesses greeted the guests upon arrival and presented the bride-elect, mother of the bride-to-be and mother of the bridegroom with gardenia corsages.

Mrs. Bonnie McCormick served the guests punch with Miss "P" High of Lucama and Mrs. Kermit Tyson assisting in the dining room with the buffet dinner.

The table was laid with a white cloth and where groups of people living at high altitudes depend only on agriculture, they lead a barren and difficult life. We see the difference in the kind of life led by the Pawnee Indian doing his best to eke out a bare subsistence from meager crops and few domestic animals, and the Indians who work in the operations of the mines. This film takes us right into the copper mines at Cerro de Pasco, virtually at the top of the world.

MAN AND HIS CULTURE (EFP), 15 minutes, sound, black and white—Shows the great variety of man's sound color—The film compares the African tribesman, American city dwellers, people of China, Mexico, South America, India, etc. Indicates the characteristics which all cultures have in common, and the conflict which results from the fact that cultures are constantly changing.

POSTER MAKING DESIGN AND TECHNIQUE (Bailey Films), 10 minutes, sound, color—The qualities that make a good poster are illustrated by samples. A poster is completed in carefully planned step-by-step demonstration.

PRESIDENT THE (EFP), 17 minutes, sound, black and white—The film opens with an election which marks the beginning of a President's career. Then, over glimpses of Presidents Truman and Eisenhower, taking oath of office, we note that the Constitution originally gave few specific powers to the Presidency, but the achievements of strong Presidents have made this one of the most powerful offices in the world.

ROMANCE OF TRANSPORTATION (Int. Films), 11 minutes, sound, color—While an ironic commentator delivers the historical narrative, animated figures independently portray, with humorous effect, successive stages in the development of transportation in Canada.

SNAKES ARE INTERESTING (Mauri Deising Film), 10 minutes, sound, color—The film develops clear understandings of the snake as a living creature, and helps build reasonable attitudes toward them. We see the characteristics of the snake's eyes, ears, and tongue; see the shedding of the skin, and learn about rattlesnakes. The film comes to a climax as we see a remarkable series of pictures of the fox snake laying eggs, and the garter snake giving birth to the living young. The differences between egg laying and living births are explained simply and naturally.

Educational Films Are Announced By Librarian

Miss Elizabeth Copeland, Librarian, announces the following films will be available at Sheppard Memorial Library during the weeks of June 16-July 11.

HIGHLANDS OF THE ANDES (UWF) 20 minutes, sound, black and white—Based on the geographic principle that the highest settlements in mountain regions are usually associated with mining, where groups of people living at high altitudes depend only on agriculture, they lead a barren and difficult life. We see the difference in the kind of life led by the Pawnee Indian doing his best to eke out a bare subsistence from meager crops and few domestic animals, and the Indians who work in the operations of the mines. MARBLE CAN BE DAMAGED

Marble is not as rugged as many persons think. Oils, citrus fruit acids, alcohol and tobacco, all of which will stain wood, also will stain marble. On the market is a creamy wax which cleans, polishes and protects marble.

When fragile lace needs washing, baste it first to a piece of clean white cotton fabric. Then wash by hand, dipping it gently through warm soap or detergent suds and rinses to remove soil.

Conference On Exceptional Children Scheduled At ECC

How to train the exceptional child to use his assets advantageously will be discussed at a conference on special education July 3 at East Carolina College. Mentally retarded children and young people with deficiencies of hearing and speech difficulties will receive special attention.

Mrs. J. H. Rose, special education teacher at the college this summer, has arranged the program for the day. Events will include a being at 10:30 in the Joyner Memorial Library held by members in this part of the state of the International Council For Exceptional Children. New officers of the organization will be elected. Observation from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. of work now being done at East Carolina in a clinic for mentally retarded children and in a speech and hearing clinic has been announced by Mrs. Rose as opening events of the day. Max Blaky of the University of Michigan, visiting professor at East Carolina this summer, will demonstrate methods and techniques of training the mentally retarded. Mrs. Rose, a director of the speech and hearing clinic, will provide visitors an opportunity to see some of the work being carried on at present.

Dr. Joseph D. Franzoni, psychiatrist and director of the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic, will be principal speaker on a program in the Joyner Library at 11 a.m. His topic will be "Guiding Exceptional Children."

Pride In Our Educational Strides

Throughout Eastern North Carolina citizens should take pride in efforts which are being made to assure that sufficient facilities will be available for the ever-increasing number of young people seeking college educations.

East Carolina College, the third largest state supported college in North Carolina, has grown by leaps and bounds in the past decade. Its student body during the past school year numbered just under the 4,000 mark. Yet the college, as has been the case for a number of years, was forced to turn down applications from prospective students because of lack of facilities to accommodate them.

Now under construction on the East Carolina Campus is a dormitory which will house more than 500 men students. Just this week it was announced that a federal loan has been approved for the construction of another men's dormitory that will house another 500 students.

These facilities, together with others in various stages of planning or construction, will enable East Carolina to serve a greater number of young people in this part of the state.

Also this week it was announced that contracts were let for $5,000,000 worth of construction at the new North Carolina Wesleyan College on a 300 acre site near Rocky Mount. The Methodist college, which is expected to open in 1960, is being planned to eventually handle 3,000 students. A similar Methodist college is being planned on a 600-acre site near Fayetteville where classes are expected to begin next year.

Throughout this state expansion programs on a smaller scale are being carried out by denominational colleges and junior colleges as they move to meet the growing demand for higher education.

There was a time when Eastern North Carolina lagged far behind other sections of the state in its facilities for higher education. That day has now passed, thanks to the forceful leadership which has been afforded by the citizens of this part of the state.

The section has four-year colleges in ECC and Atlantic Christian College. In a few years it will have two more such institutions in the Methodist colleges. Besides these, Eastern North Carolina has a number of junior colleges which are playing an important role in higher education.

If the pace of progress in higher education in Eastern North Carolina continues, the area will have the facilities to meet the challenge of increasing numbers of youngsters who want and need a college education.

Law Enforcers Are To Be Commended

Greenville police are to be commended for their work in apprehending the man believed responsible for the series of robberies which has disturbed local residents for the past few weeks.

The latest occurrence of night robberies last week-end caused considerable unrest among the people of Greenville. The manner in which the robberies and attempted robberies were carried out was particularly disturbing. There are countless local citizens who have slept much better since the announcement late Wednesday that the prime suspect in the case had been apprehended.

Many aspects of the case made it extremely difficult to apprehend the individual believed responsible. It required many long days of work by local officers and the highest degree of cooperation between Greenville authorities, the SBI and military officials at Cherry Point.

The Reflector commends the officers on their work in apprehending the prime suspect.

Whether or not they have the right man is for the courts to say.

Unusual Types Of Resolutions

By LYNN NISBET

UNUSUAL — Two unusual type resolutions were presented to the Utilities Commission in connection with the public hearing on request by Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Company for a rate increase. Fifty-five municipalities and four counties in Eastern North Carolina are protesting the rate increase. A substantial "kitty" was raised by appropriation of public funds and private subscription, and attorneys employed to fight the rate increase. Sam Behrens, former assistant attorney general, is chief counsel. He is assisted by Lucy McBryde of Fayetteville.

McBryde introduced into the record a resolution by the Farm Bureau of Cumberland county. Then he presented for information, but not as part of the official record, copies of resolutions by county commissions of Cumberland county and the Democratic Executive Committee of Cumberland. Counsel for the telephone company objected to all three as a matter of form, and to the Democratic committee offering for impropriety.

The fact of the Democratic organization becoming involved is unusual, but the text of the resolution more so. It is reminiscent of the Vigilante days in the Old West when every accused horse thief was promised a complete fair and impartial trial before being hung. The gist of it is:

"Now, therefore, the Democratic Executive Committee of Cumberland County, North Carolina, urges the North Carolina Utilities Commission to thoroughly investigate the necessity for the new rates, taking into consideration the hardship such increase would work upon the people of Cumberland county and after so doing it disapprove the increased rates sought by the company."

HANDS OFF — Governor Hodges told newsmen at his latest session with them that he is satisfied we will have a "good legislature" next year. He said most everybody gained and lost some support as result of the recent primary, depending upon the point from which the appraisal is made. He appeared pleased with overall prospects for progressive legislation.

He said that despite a lot of rumors, he is taking absolutely no part in the upcoming speaker's race. He said he called both the avowed aspirants for Speaker of the 1959 House—Carl Venters of Onslow and Addison Hewlett of New Hanover—and assured them of a continuing hands-off attitude.

Despite his personal neutrality, so far as any act or statement of his is concerned, the "word" got around that the legislative group generally rated as pro-administration—meaning those who will most times go along with the Governor on major issues simply because of his position on them—are actively supporting Venters. Many of them are categorically stating that the Governor prefers Venters. Admittedly they have no authority to speak for the Governor, perhaps they lack his consent, but the activity is not without his knowledge. Such tactics have been very effective in the past.

The same thing happened two years ago when Kemp Doughton of Alleghany and George Uzzell of Rowan were contesting for the Speakership. The "word" got around that Governor Hodges wanted Doughton, although he never publicly said so. Result was that Uzzell saw members who had pledged to support him moving into the Doughton camp, and several weeks before the General Assembly convened Uzzell withdrew from the race.

INDIRECT — It happened, too, in the 1956 primary for Lieutenant Governor. Governor Hodges, whose nomination for a full term in his own right was as certain as taxes, many times avowed neutrality among the five candidates for the No. 2 post—Luther Barnhardt, Alonzo Edwards, J.V. Whitfield, Kidd Brewer and Gurney P. Hood. The real race was conceded to be between Barnhardt and Edwards. Edwards was first to start campaigning and in the early stages he apparently had considerable advantage.

The "word" got out that Hodges wanted Barnhardt—and voters who had committed to Edwards asked to be released. They frankly said they couldn't afford to go against the Governor. Result was that Barnhardt led in primary voting. Edwards decided not to call for a run-off and Barnhardt got the nomination with 37.2 percent of the total vote.

Governor Hodges had more prestige than he has now, and use of his name—authorized or not—may not have as much weight now. But when the record of the past quarter century is checked, it will be found that in nearly every instance the candidate for Speaker who was believed to have the good wishes of the Chief Executive gets the job.

Probers Didn't Pry Very Deep

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House subcommittee probing Sherman Adams' relations with Bernard Goldfine is neither the sharpest, toughest nor most thorough group that ever quizzed a witness on Capitol Hill.

The treatment given Adams when he went before the subcommittee compared with that handed other witnesses in other cases before other committees—was almost like a once-over lightly with a feather-duster.

On June 10 the subcommittee disclosed that Goldfine, an industrialist, had footed more than $2,000 in bills run up at his expense at a Boston hotel by Adams, President Eisenhower's chief assistant.

This caused such a storm that on June 12 Adams wrote the subcommittee, acknowledging he had stayed at a Boston hotel and charged it to his account. He added something which the subcommittee apparently didn't know: that he had done that same thing at a hotel in Plymouth, Mass.

On June 13 at a news conference James Hagerty, Eisenhower's press secretary, referred to Adams' letter and said he believed the President's No. 1 aide had "put on the record all the facts."

As it turned out, Adams hadn't put all the facts on the record. On June 16 the subcommittee disclosed that Adams had stayed at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York at Goldfine's expense, although he didn't mention that in his letter.

Adams charged that when he appeared before the subcommittee June 17, he also informed the congressional group in his testimony, but not in his letter, that:

"I had received from Goldfine vicuna cloth — which he said cost Goldfine's mills $69—for a coat and that Goldfine had given him on loan—an expensive Oriental rug."

The information about the vicuna and the rug didn't come from the committee—in fact, subcommittee counsel Robert W. Lishman said he didn't know about either—but from a reporter and a newspaper. A reporter asked Hagerty June 12—the same day Adams wrote his letter—whether true Eisenhower's aide had received a $700 vicuna coat from Goldfine. On June 13 the New York Post reported that Goldfine and Adams had picked out a $2,400 oriental rug at Macy's in New York. Goldfine paid for it with a check drawn against one of his textile mills, the paper said.

Adams refused to confirm or deny the statements. But he did say that day he believed Adams had put all the facts on the record in his letter and said

Ready To Take A Loss

By NORMAN MOSS

LONDON (AP) — In the hotly competitive world of the London commercial theater, the English Stage Company is unique. It wants to make a lot of money to lose.

Operating away from London's bright lights center (a sort of British Broadway), it has constantly run in the red by unsparingly following a policy of promoting new talent, new ideas and new trends in the drama. It has been interested in performers more than hits in serious purpose more than sellouts. This policy has won it the accolade from one critic as the most influential theater group in Britain.

But when the red ink threatens to drown out the brave venture, the company reaches into a constantly changing repertoire and sees a likely long-term production into the commercial theater — for a fee. Often enough for survival, the emigrants scores a smidgen and money comes rolling back from London's fashionable West End Theater, even from New York's Broadway.

The man driving behind the success of the English Stage Company is George Devine, its shaggy-haired artistic director.

The modern theater in this country has almost no relation to modern life," he complained recently. "Look at it! How often do you see the moods of life today reflected in the theater?"

"Compared with modern painting, modern music or modern poetry, our theater is like an old lady in a suburb. The English Stage Company was formed two years ago to combat this state of affairs. It took over the Royal Court Theater in Chelsea, an old playhouse with an illustrious history—the first plays of Bernard Shaw and Henrik Ibsen were presented there to shocked and divided Edwardian audiences.

Almost immediately the English Stage Company dropped a bombshell into British drama in the form of John Osborne, the 28-year-old playwright rapidly became the archetype of the "angry young man" currently raising the temperature of British letters.

The Royal Court put on his youthful, tempestuous and tormented "Look Back in Anger," rocking him to fame. It is now packing a New York theater.

Sir Laurence Olivier saw "Look Back in Anger" and met the rebellious author in the theater. "I thought you'd write a play for me to act in," he remarked over a drink.

The result was "The Entertainer," in which Sir Laurence played a New York theater vaudeville. He received only a fraction of his usual salary when the play was presented at the Royal Court.

"The Entertainer" was moved to a West End theater. Sir Laurence is now playing the role on Broadway, in the same production by the 28-year-old director, Tom Richards.

Venturesome Trials The English Stage Company has introduced some new American drama to the British stage. The much-praised play by the Nobel prize winner, William Faulkner, "Requiem for a Nun."

Another was the Broadway success "A Member of the Wedding," by Carson McCullers.

The company stirred up controversy with a comedy mocking religion called "The Making of Moo," and with the works of the French dramatist Eugene Ionesco. The French playwright, who believes true communication is impossible, wrote a play for two characters and 24 chairs. This also went to New York via the Royal Court.

The Royal Court is a theater center as well as a playhouse. Young writers sending in their plays — and the company receives 30 a week — are encouraged or counseled.

That is what the dramatists can have more contact with the live theater. Devine has instituted a "writer's pass" which he gives to a chosen few. This gives the holder free run of the theater front-of-the-house and backstage.

People-Watching Hobby

Have you ever noticed the way people behave when they think nobody's looking? I've made a study of it. There's actually a science to watching people when they don't think they're being watched. You have to cultivate it, but it is worth every bit of the trouble.

Every chance I get, I do this. I have special hiding places all over town.

The other day down by the library I saw squatting behind some bushes, just looking, and I saw an old man — he must have been about seventy or eighty — coming down the walk. He glanced around and, not seeing any cars or people, started yawning all over the sidewalk, stomping his feet, stepping on ants.

There is another interesting case which I have followed closely. There is this prominent businessman in Greenville who takes his dog walking after supper every night. It is just beginning to grow dark about that time of the evening and he frequently thinks that he isn't seen. What he does, he walks along deserted streets and every time he comes to a telephone pole he stops and chaps on it with a can opener. You can see his handiwork all over town.

I was standing behind a tree in Meadowbrook the other day when a young woman came walking down the street. Thinking there was no one around, she sat down on the curb and began scratching the bottoms of her feet with a hairpin. When a car approached she pretended to have dropped her purse and was searching for it.

Other Editors Saying --- Judge Parker's Dream

(Greensboro Daily News)

No more pertinent illustration of the need for court reform in North Carolina can be imagined than the fast-unraveling scandal of recorder's court irregularities in Charlotte.

A police captain and recorder's court official have been suspended. Records have disappeared from court files. Judges have changed verdicts several days after handing them down. More than $30,000 worth of appearance bonds have been ordered forfeited by the court but were never collected.

In the wake of these revelations a grand jury investigation looms.

Whatever the outcome, enough irregularities have been uncovered to prove the words of the N. C. Bar Association's Court Study Committee, that the inferior courts of North Carolina should be brought into one unified state-wide basis. Their responsibilities could be nailed; then the chief justice, acting on recommendations of resident Superior Court judges, could appoint qualified district court personnel; then certified record keeping would be mandatory.

The Charlotte revelations may be only one minute exposed part of a larger iceberg of inefficiency among the 1,400 crazy quilt inferior courts spread across the state. Court costs and rules differ widely in these courts. What number of justice requires a defendant to pay $10 court costs for a particular violation in one court and $18 in another? Why should the justice of the peace courts depend on convictions to pay their way? This is not justice; in some cases it is highway robbery.

To whom, under our present court structure, is the taxpayer accountable? He runs his own court and if he is honest, efficient public servant, fine; but if he is not, the public pays.

The Court Study Committee set forth its recommendations in detail at Myrtle Beach last week. They were approved enthusiastically by some 300 of the state's eminent lawyers. But that is only the beginning of the campaign to get them enacted by the 1959 General Assembly and approved by the people.

Their recommendations are detailed and complex, covering all phases of judicial reform. In essence they call for one unified court system established on a state-wide basis from top to bottom. They recommend transfer of the rule making power from the General Assembly to the courts themselves. They suggest revisions in the lawyer system and the jury selection system.

Committee Chairman J. Spencer Bell of Charlotte consulted the late Circuit Judge John J. Parker before his death and closely followed his advice in drafting recommendations. Shortly before his death, Judge Parker told Bell:

"The accomplishment of the objectives of this committee will be the realization of a dream of my lifetime for my native state. I only hope that I shall live to see it and contribute to it."

Judge Parker did not live to see his dream fulfilled. But North Carolina has an opportunity to make his dream a reality and a monument to his memory.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE VIRTUE OF TRYING People sometimes have wrong ideas regarding their religious duties. Many people are continually overcome with fear of hypocrisy.

"If the world only knew how evil I am," they mutter to themselves. "I would indeed be an outcast."

It is appalling the extent to which very excellent people torture themselves by a continuous inner contemplation of their own iniquity and shortcomings. They look at other people who apparently have no religion at all, yet their lives are kindly and full of much worth. "Here I am," they say. "I am supposed to be a firm religious believer, and I think I am, yet what a

Living Costs Slated Level Off

By ELMER ROESSNER

The cost of living, which has gone up almost every month since March, 1957, may level off this summer.

Foods, excepting meats, are generally becoming more abundant. Housing costs are not likely to advance as rapidly as employment high. Prices of appliances, furniture and autos will be shaved as dealers work to clear inventories in preparation for 1959 models. There is no pressure for high apparel prices and the unemployment situation may check the upward trend in the costs of services.

However, consumer prices will resume their upward march later this year. Inevitably higher labor costs will push up prices of most goods; new model autos, appliances and fashions will command higher prices. Food prices tend to rise with the end of the producing season and the advent of the winter holidays increases demand. The rise in employment — now confidently expected — will increase the costs of services and housing.

HOSPITAL MEDICAL COSTS Here are more predictions, based on analyses of developing trends: Medical care costs will rise. Insurance plans are increasing medical and hospital rates in most sections of the country, largely because of higher fees charged by doctors and hospitals. A good portion of these increased costs (in hospital charges) has resulted from hospitals taking great advantage of allowances made by insurance benefits.

Once insurance revenues are increased, hospitals and doctors will be tempted to increase their charges again. These increases, incidentally, will help push up costs of living later this year.

New fight on PX's. Retailers are planning a new campaign to get Congress to limit the range of goods sold by post-exchanges and ships' stores. Now that a half-billion-dollar-a-year raise has been voted to members of the Armed Forces, they will argue that men in uniform and their wives no longer need cut-price merchandise to get by.

Retailers generally do not object to sales by PX's overseas. or the sales of convenience goods on posts, but they scream when servicemen can buy substantial household goods at super-discount prices.

STRIKING IN SOLID SILVER In silver sales. Despite the dip in the marriage rate, makers of sterling silver expect to set new records this year.

The Sterling Silversmiths of America have launched a $500,000 campaign to promote the use of sterling for birth as well as bridal gifts, and for daily use in the home. Response so far has exceeded expectations.

Relief for railroad. Emergency loans for railroads seem certain of enactment, even though the omnibus railroad-aid bill has some unpopular features. Friends of the railroads are willing to eliminate all but the loans, if necessary for passage. The Senate has passed its version of the bill; the House is still struggling with it.

Drive for higher gold prices. The fight to increase the price of gold, so far unsuccessful, is not over. American mining interests, as well as British and South African interests, are continuing the fight. Although chances are slim, the prize could be great. Some proponents are talking about tripling the $35-an-ounce price.

One difficulty: A sharp price increase might cause Russia to pour out holdings in order to gain dollars for international machinations.

Seeking Widows Of Confederates

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Hon. Herbert C. Bonner announced today that the Veterans Administration has requested his assistance in trying to locate an estimated 1,500 widows of Confederate veterans believed to be entitled to federal pensions.

The request was made by Sumner G. Whittier, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, who told Congressman Bonner of the VA's problem in trying to identify the widows, who for the first time are eligible for VA pensions under recently signed Public Law 85-245.

The new law also provides pensions for the two living Confederate veterans, Walter W. Williams of Franklin, Texas, and John Sailing of Slant, Virginia. Both men have been contacted by VA field representatives and assisted in filing their claims.

The widows, however, present another problem, Mr. Bonner explained. Only those southern states which pay similar benefits have partial rolls of Confederate beneficiaries. The United States has no official records on these beneficiaries and since the benefits are not automatic, the widows will have to fill out application forms which may be obtained in person or by letter from any VA office.

The two Confederate veterans are eligible for the same pension as widows of living Union counterparts, $101.50 a month, or $135.45 if physically helpless or blind. Widows under 70 are entitled to $40.64 and over 70 to $65 a month. If the widow was married to the veteran during the Civil War service, she is entitled to $75 a month.

Top Brass Convene, Named To Post Three Caught With The Goods In Raid

QUANTICO, Va. (AP)—The nation's military high command takes up an old and hotly debated issue today, the roles and missions of each of the armed services in event of war.

The topic, one of the major controversies in President Eisenhower's Court Friday, eight of them involving David Nagle, Cherry Point Marine, on five charges of burglary and three charges of attempted burglary in Greenville. Nagle was bound over to Superior Court.

Approximately 175 civilian and uniformed chiefs of the armed forces are attending the parley at this big Marine Corps base 35 miles south of Washington.

The job of spelling out space age strategy fell to Gen. Nathan F. Twining, an Air Force general who finds himself in the neutral position of chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

As leadoff speaker, it was Twining's assigned job to tell his colleagues of the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force how each fits into the over-all plan devised by the Pentagon.

To this basic plan there now is being added features of the reorganization program, including the proposed creation of new combined commands under which individual services will play diminished roles.

Congressional debate on the plan already has brought expressions of alarm from some legislators that the separate services would be subordinated to tightly controlled direction by the Defense Department.

Added to the continuing issue of how each service should fight a war now is a new argument over what type of war is most likely.

Nothing Like A Wedding To Keep One Busy

By PEGGY SMITH
Reflector Woman's Writer
"What's next?"

In the wonderful whirl of engagement and marriage, this question comes to the mind of practically every bride-to-be.

The planning and preparations start to take form approximately three months prior to the wedding.

The bride's gown enters the picture from the start, for it determines the degree of formality for the wedding party, as well as the bridegroom's clothes. The gown governs what type of ceremony she must have and the size of the church.

In a large church she may choose a gown with a long train; but, in a small chapel, she would have a short one.

A young bride, wearing a formal wedding gown, usually chooses white or ivory. Covering her head, she will have a flower circlet or a pearl-seeded hat with a veil of illusion attached. Her jewelry, a gift of the bridegroom, must be simple.

Time, Attendants, Trousseau
Religion, climate, and local custom are important factors, as well as the bride and bridegroom's plans for their honeymoon, in deciding the best time of day for the ceremony.

No matter how small a wedding, the bridegroom will have a best man to assist him during the ceremony. A maid-of-honor will assist the bride with her bouquet and veil.

With only two months away from the big day, an invitation list will be of top interest to the bride. This list will be made up of the friends and relatives of the bridegroom in addition to her friends and family.

Where the bride is planning to go on a honeymoon and where she is to live after marriage, determines what type of trousseau she will purchase. She keeps in mind the usefulness of each individual item in her trousseau during the first year of marriage.

Selecting a household trousseau is another duty of a young prospective bride. Patterns in china, silver, and crystal must be chosen.

After announcing her attendants and selecting their dresses, a gift of gratitude will be in order.

One Month Away

Invitations mailed out, the majority of wedding presents—nestled in crisp tissue paper and tied with white ribbons—will greet the bride during her season of entertainment.

Morning may bring a luncheon honoring the bride; evening, a shower or dinner party, whichever it may be, they all test the poise and graciousness of a bride.

Final plans have been made for a reception and all the bridal party's wedding attire has been checked. She arranges the moving of her wedding presents to her new residence and makes sure each gift-giver receives a "thank you" note.

One Night

After the pre-rehearsal party, the bride will retire to wait for that big unforgettable day.

With the sun up, she has breakfast in bed and then dresses with leisure and her day—so carefully planned—is off to a glorious start.

Miss Janet Best, pictured on this page, could easily fit the description of this bride. For today is her unforgettable day.

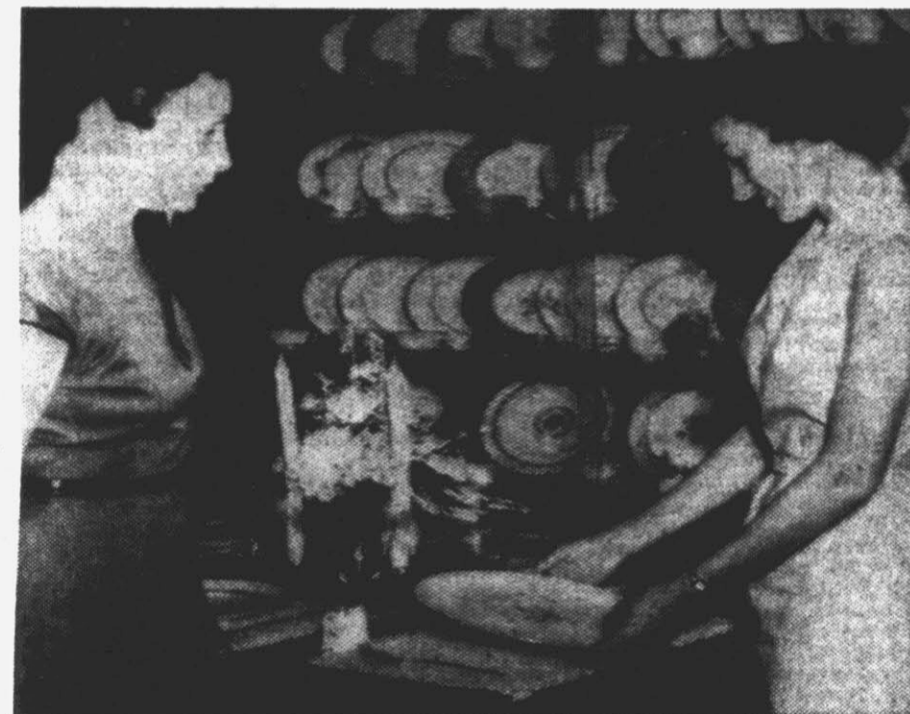

BRIDE MUST BE CONSIDERATE . . . when she is choosing a dress for a bridesmaid.

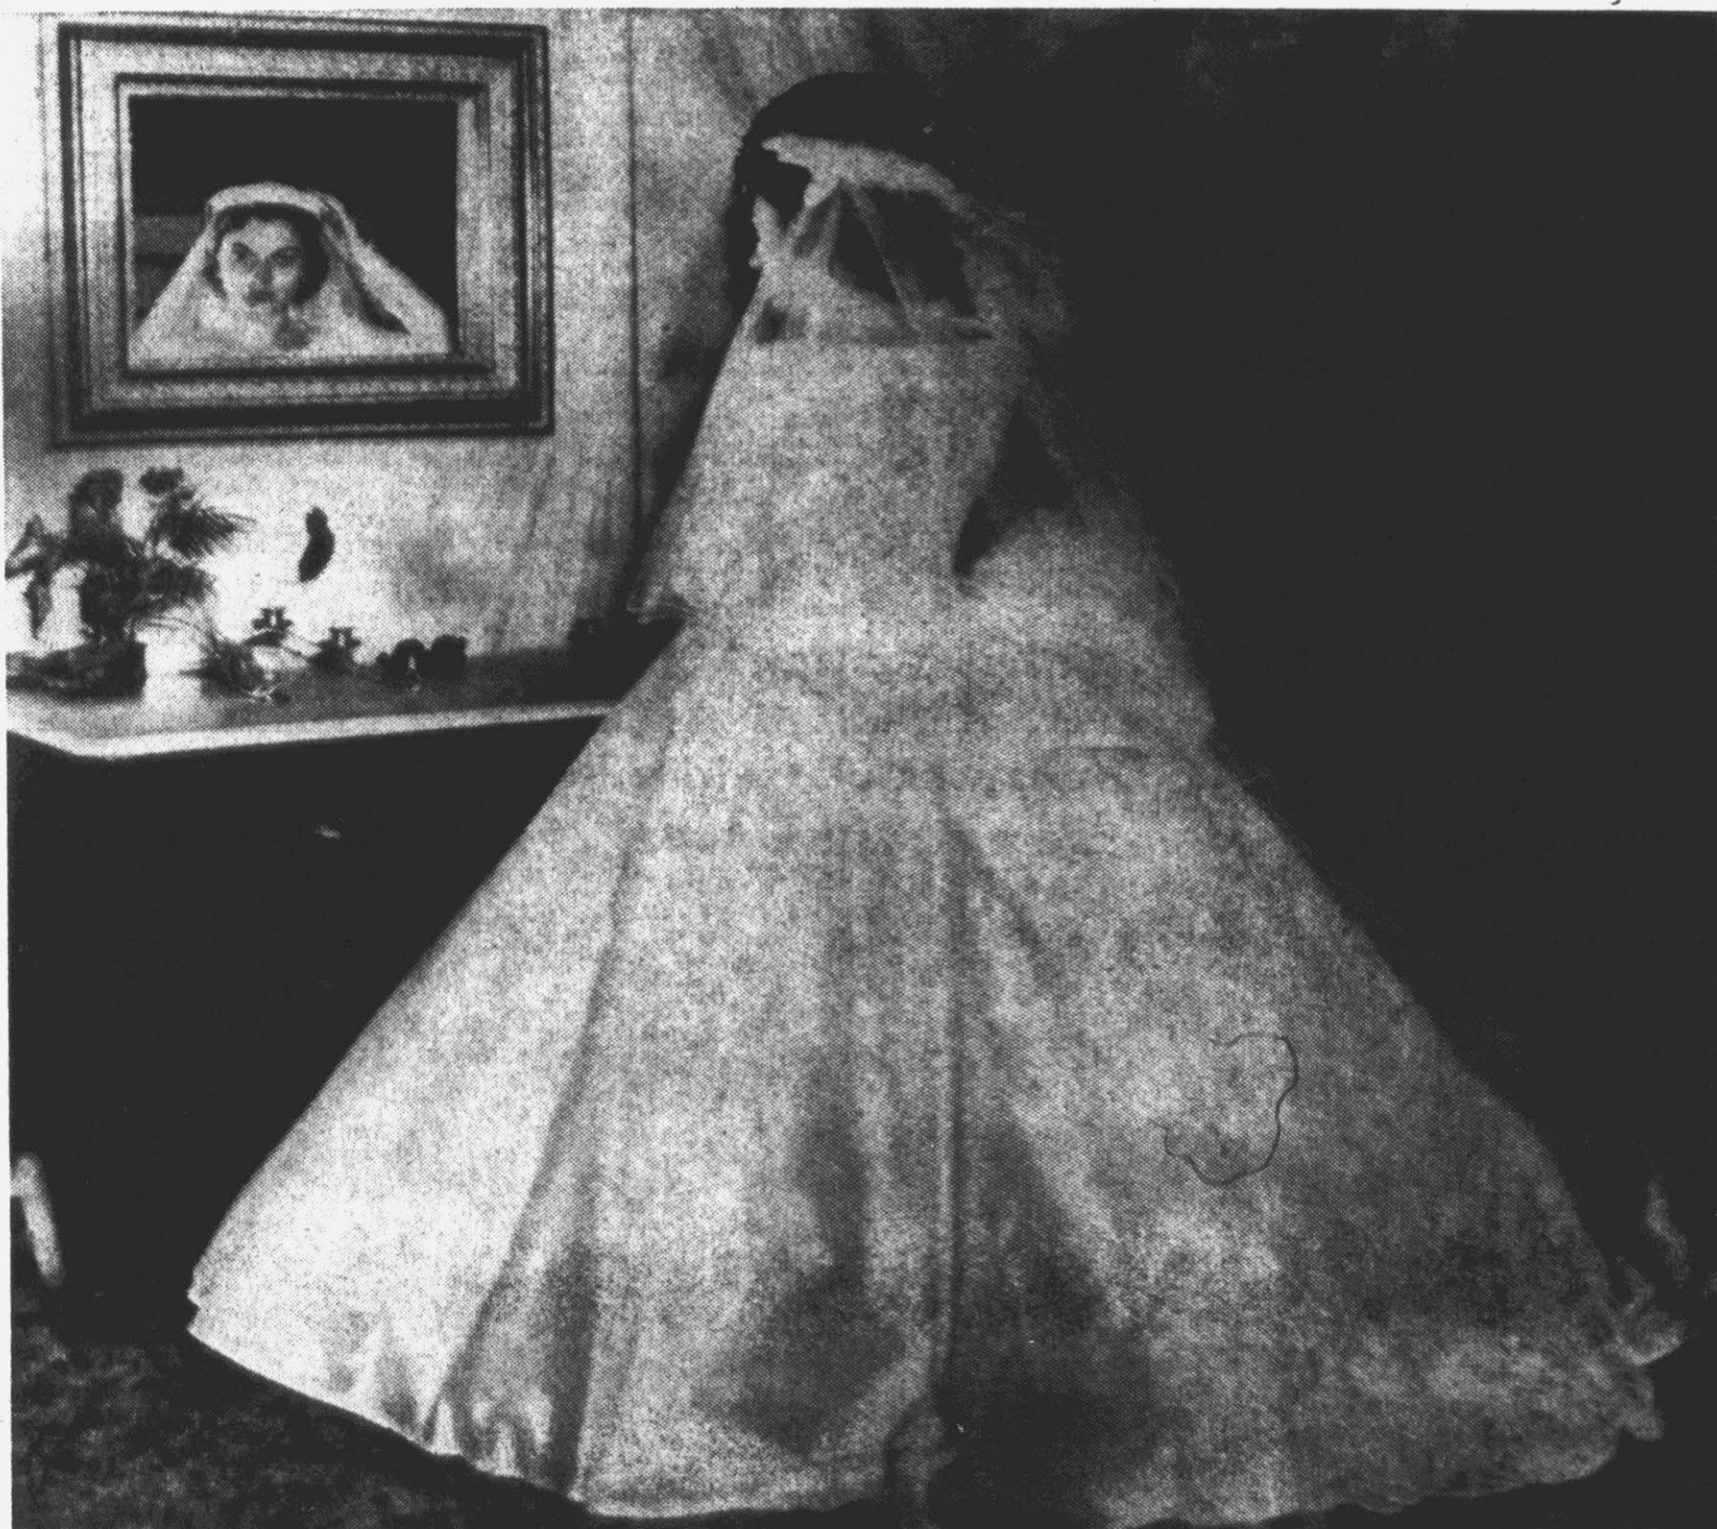

TROUSSEAU IS IMPORTANT . . . to a bride, not only for the honeymoon trip, but the first year of marriage.

(Reflector Photos by Peggy Smith)

WHICH SHALL I CHOOSE? . . . is the question in every prospective bride's mind when she enters a jewelry store to choose her different patterns.

THIS IS HER DAY . . . after three months of continuous preparing to make this a memorable occasion.

War On Secrecy Is Called Never-Ending

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Fighting for freedom of information was described today as being "like stepping on a balloon." "You stamp out excessive secrecy in one place, and it pops up somewhere else," said Rep. John E. Moss (D-Calif.) head of the House government information subcommittee. A federal attitude of excessive secrecy is most apparent in the Defense and State departments, Moss said in speech prepared for a meeting of the California Newspaper Publishers Assn. meeting at Stanford University. Moss said his subcommittee is going further into a recent State Department order on its officials' contacts with reporters. In a recent reply to subcommittee letters he said the State Department disclosed that its officials must write memos of any talks with newsmen "even if they meet them at a cocktail party." "Restrictions on information from the Defense Department have gone even further," Moss said. "The President has ordered a reorganization of the department's information activities so that all information from the three military services will funnel through the politically appointed assistant secretary of defense for public affairs—a job now held by Mr. Murray Snyder, who learned his public relations trade as assistant press secretary at the White House." Under a new memorandum from Secretary of Defense McElroy, Moss said, Snyder "will have the power to prescribe the royal-colored glasses through which the American taxpayers are expected to view the nation's defenses."

American Shipping Strike Ends With New Contract

NEW YORK (AP)—A maritime strike that tied up American-flag ships in East and Gulf coast ports for five days is over. The Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn. representatives signing room officers on 490 passenger and cargo ships, signed a new three-year contract last night with a ship owners' committee headed by Ralph E. Casey, president of the American Merchant Marine Institute. There was no wage increase in the new contract. The MEBA was the last of four maritime unions to reach new work agreements with the ship owners' organization this week. Agreement on the new pact came while the huge liner American, with 1,000 passengers aboard, waited at the pier. The ship had recruited nonunion engineers, but these were replaced by MEBA members after agreement was reached. Casey said the ship operators were forced to sign the new contract after the MEBA won a similar settlement Thursday with Pacific Coast ship operators. "We had to agree," he said. "We couldn't hold out after they signed."

Jesse Calhoun, chief MEBA negotiator, said the most important union gain in the contract was employer recognition for the first time of the principle of severance pay for men whose ships were sold or transferred to foreign registry. He said the severance pay provision will be worked out in further discussions. The contract also provides for a $80 pension increase to a rate of $150 a month. It extends the former 28-day annual vacation to 48 days for engineers employed more than one year by a single company. The vacation will be increased to 60 days a year as of June 16, 1959. Engineers with less than one year with the same company will get a vacation boost from 14 to 30 days. The new pact also calls for an increase in welfare benefits and the addition of an extra engineer to Atlantic and Gulf coast ships. Engineer earnings average $493 to $1,052 a month.

Refugee Family United And Safe; Job Is Awaiting

By WILLIAM B. HARWOOD BALTIMORE (AP) — "It gives some touch in the heart." And those seven words summed up the eight-month first chapter in the American history of a Polish refugee family — Dr. Jerzy Leon Nowinski, a brilliant mathematical researcher, his wife, Maria, and daughter Krystyna. Today, the humber, happy Nowinskis returned their borrowed furniture and packed their meager belongings. Tomorrow, they leave for Madison, Wis., where Dr. Nowinski will join the faculty of the University of Wisconsin as adjunct professor attached to the Mathematics Research Center. It was last November that Dr. Nowinski, a 52-year-old, 140-pounder with a Charlie Chaplin moustache came to the United States to lecture at Johns Hopkins University. On Jan. 3, the State Department announced asylum had been granted Nowinski and his family. Ten days later, his wife and daughter, who had made their way to England in the meantime, joined him here. They had carefully planned their escape from Communist-dominated Poland, leaving their Warsaw home with little more than the clothes on their backs. Dr. Nowinski, a professor at the University of Warsaw had been one of Poland's top theoretical mathematicians — a specialist in thermoelasticity — dealing with the strains and strains on metals under extreme of temperature. Dr. Nowinski's new job will be chiefly research at the Wisconsin center subsidized by the Army. He and his family look forward eagerly to the second chapter of their American life with only the normal regrets at leaving kind neighbors and their first real home.

Neither his wife nor daughter spoke or understood English when they arrived. Both now speak quite a bit of English. They understand it well. "My wife says after a half year she feels at home, completely," Nowinski said. "I no longer fear something that could happen at any time. I feel myself completely relaxed." "We are completely happy here as private persons," the scientist added. "If I wanted to give up my work for another job I could do this. He said, would not have been possible in Poland. "We are going to apply for citizenship as soon as possible," he added. Nowinski's first name, Jerzy, has now become George. And Krystyna has Americanized her name to Christina. Many personal kindnesses, some 200 "kind and encouraging" letters from all parts of the country, blood donated by a neighbor when Mrs. Nowinski had a recent operation, and a fishing rod given by a friend as a parting gift — all of this — "It gives some touch in the heart."

Odd Ingredients Found In The Financial Stew

By SAM DAWSON NEW YORK (AP) — The financial stew today contains three ingredients that look like an odd mixture: 1. A record short interest — Borrowed stocks sold in belief that prices are due to tumble. 2. First earnings reports for the past six months — showing in the main that profits continue to slide, while the number of firms omitting or cutting dividends mounts steadily. 3. General and long rise in stock prices — either in belief that times are due to get better or that more inflation is inevitable. The bears who are selling short seem to take the earnings decline more seriously than do the bulls who apparently think the profit squeeze is temporary and can be eased. The New York Stock Exchange says that in the 27 years it has been reporting the short interest that barometer of bearish sentiment is now at its second high. The American Stock Exchange also reports a record short interest. To sell short you borrow stock in expectation of buying it back later at a lower price. If you do, you make a profit. If you can't, you lose. Last Friday, after five straight months of rising, the short interest on the Big Board totaled 5,795,105 shares, involving 1,008 of the 1,533 stock issues listed, but representing only 0.1 per cent of the total outstanding shares. When the Big Board started keeping records in May 1931, the short interest was 5,589,700 shares, which at that time was 0.4 per cent of the much smaller total of shares listed. Those selling short believe that the stock they borrowed is overpriced in relation to its current earnings and prospects. They expect the price to drop before the mounting federal deficit coupled with a fresh wage-price rise can spark a new burst of inflation. The earnings reports now coming in comfort the bears more than the bulls. Reports so far from 42 companies whose fiscal year ends before the calendar one, show 22 have lower first six-month earnings than last year. Combined, their earnings total $102,098,000, compared with $112,250,000 in the first half of their previous fiscal year, or a drop of 9 per cent. Three of the companies operated at a loss this year and four did the year before. Bright spot in the early reports is the meat packing industry. The eight firms reporting so far show a combined upturn of profits of 9 per cent, reflecting perhaps the higher meat prices this year than last. The decline in profits for the 42 companies as a whole forebodes similar reports by the great majority of companies which will come along next month. The profit squeeze is in contrast to previous years when earnings were mounting. The first half of 1957 showed a 4.5 per cent gain over 1956, which had been 5.5 per cent higher than 1955. That

Nixon Speaks At Roan Mountain

ROAN MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP)—A crowd of more than 5,000 was expected to be on hand today to hear Vice President Nixon speak atop Roan Mountain during the 12th annual Rhododendron Festival. Millions of blazing red rhododendron and pretty girls added to the colorful mountain scenery. The girls vied for the honors of North Carolina and Tennessee rhododendron queens. The festival is a two-state celebration. Other scheduled speakers were Tennessee Gov. Frank Clements and Rep. B. Carroll Reece (R-Tenn).

The ridge of Roan Mountain forms part of the boundary line between Tennessee and North Carolina. Its peak contains the largest red rhododendron display in the world. Nixon and his wife were due here about noon after flying from Washington to Johnson City, Tenn. He was to speak following a luncheon. From here, the Nixon party planned to motor to Banner Elk, where he was to speak briefly at a ground-breaking ceremony for the $1,600,000 Grace Hartley Memorial Hospital.

Nixon planned to visit Bakersville, Spruce Pine, Linville and Blowing Rock before driving to Hickory to board a plane for Washington. The Vice President and Mrs. Nixon were to be the guests of honor at a reception at Blowing Rock given by Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Broyhill of Lenoir. Broyhill is Republican national committeeman for North Carolina.

Walks Into Path Of Slow Freight

GASTONIA, N. C. (AP)—Mrs. Richard Goss, 71, walked unthinkingly into the path of a slow freight train at a crossing here. Kenneth Lefever, 50, of Hickory, the train conductor, ran across the catwalk alongside the engine, put his leg out and kicked hard at her. Mrs. Goss stumbled off the track and Lefever grabbed her arm, propelling her clear. The train stopped about 15 feet down the track. The woman was unhurt.

Dummy Polaris Missile Shown By Navy In Test

An inert Polaris missile bursts from the ocean like a huge fish, then loses its nose cone and falls back into the water near San Clemente Island, Calif., during the Navy's first public demonstration of how it could be fired from a submarine. The nose cone would have acted as a flotation marker if the missile had not dropped back into a chain net used to recover it. A submerged tube using compressed air fired the simulated Polaris to a height of 100 feet. (AP Wirephoto)

Injured Youngsters Strown On Road In Wreck

Injured youngsters, who were riding in a small foreign-made station wagon (background), are strewn along U. S. highway 14 near Woodstock, Ill. after a three-car collision. Ten persons were injured, including six riding in the station wagon which collided head-on with another car. A third car smashed into the wreckage of the other two. (AP Wirephoto)

Back To Reality Of Gunnysacks

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP)—County officials are back to the damp reality of having to use wet gunnysacks to battle grass fires. Nez Perce County commissioners excitedly dispatched a deputy to look over a $9,000 pumper truck they learned could be bought surplus for only $450. The deputy made a sad report after inspecting the vehicle at Williams AFB, Chandler, Ariz. It was no bargain, he said, and here's why: No tires, tank rusted out, pump-er unit rusted and not working, front badly bent.

"Well, $450 will buy a lot of wet gunnysacks," said another deputy. The operation, rare in the annals of lion captivity, was performed Thursday at Miller Park Zoo where Dillah is caged. Officials decided upon operation after prolonged labor brought the five-year-old lioness to a critical condition.

Rare Operation For Big Lioness

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — A 700-pound lioness, Dillah, appeared to be recovering today after a caesarean operation which saved her life but not that of the cub delivered. The operation, rare in the annals of lion captivity, was performed Thursday at Miller Park Zoo where Dillah is caged. Officials decided upon operation after prolonged labor brought the five-year-old lioness to a critical condition.

One Bright Spot In The TV Summer Projects

HOLLYWOOD — There's one bright spot in the otherwise dismal TV picture for summer. That's Sunday at 9. Amid the welter of re-runs and cheap quiz shows comes a topical musicomedie cast to replace Dinah Shore on NBC. Dinah's program has been the most consistently entertaining one on TV during the cooler months. Her replacement shows promise of keeping up her high average.

John Raitt, Janet Blair and Edie Adams will head the weekly roster, starting tomorrow night. They'll have frequent assists from Rowan and Martin, Stan Freberg, Jonathan Winters and Dorothy Kirsten. Not bad for a summer show — huh?

It happens that the sponsors are selling cars faster than the other Detroiters, Raitt said in a press show chat. The firm naturally wants to keep up the pace with a top-drawer program. The singer added further reasoning on the expensive show: 1. Sponsor identification of Dinah's show is high, and they want to keep it that way. 2. The show attracts a preponderance of viewers in the intelligent, over-18 category, a prime market for new autos. 3. The Sunday-at-9 spot is ideal for summer viewing, since most folks will be indoors and home from weekend outings and home.

The 15-week stretch is the first time Raitt has taken on a regular show, and he's pleased that he has been accepted on his own terms. "I'm not going to sing down to people — no rock 'n' roll or anything like that," he said. "Both Janet and Edie have had serious vocal training, so we'll be able to do some good songs together. Every few years, there is a singer who can do songs like that. In the past it has been Nelson Eddy, Allan Jones, Tony Martin, etc. Now I'm going to try."

Raitt, who made a fine impression opposition Mary Martin in "Annie Get Your Gun," has decided to cast his lot with TV for a while. He's lining up a number of musicals to present as spectaculars. Also, he may appear with Bob Hope in "Roberta" — if he can get permission from his auto sponsor to go on for another General Motors car.

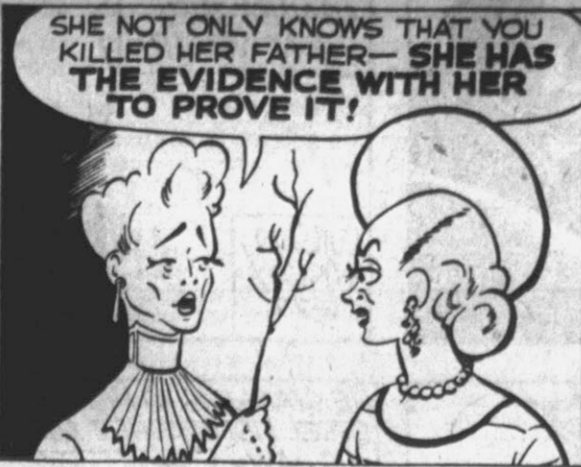

POTENTIAL CUSTOMERS Seventeen million U.S. families are potential customers for a new car in 1958. Five million having completed payment for cars bought in 1955 three million will make final payment this year; four million of the new car buyers in 1956 have either completed payments or have a good trade-in value on a new car; and about five million cars will be scrapped in 1958.

Good Risk For A Vacation Loan

NEW YORK (AP)—A Brooklyn woman applied for a bank loan yesterday to finance a summer vacation. But she had the best security in the world the loan man said. She was TV quiz queen Elfrida von Nardroff, with winnings of $253,500 so far and a chance for more. She can't get her hands on a penny of the winnings as long as she remains on the NBC show "Twenty-One."

So the bank is rushing through the loan for her. Miss von Nardroff, 32, is the all-time top money winner on TV. She quit her job as a personnel manager in May to study for the weekly quiz sessions. She'll be back on the show next Monday night. She would lose some of the money if she is defeated. And at this point federal and state income taxes would take about $200,000.

U. S. Balks At Further Dealings

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States apparently balks at further dealings with Communist East Germany, it is pressed in Russia to take immediate action toward freeing nine U. S. military men held by the German Reds. The nine were grabbed by the East Germans when their helicopter went off its course and ran out of gas during bad weather two weeks ago today.

The State Department asked Moscow last night to have Soviet military authorities in East Germany act immediately to have the men released.

Russia, in what was regarded as a maneuver to force direct dealing between this country and East Germany, which the United States doesn't recognize, has argued it has no control over its German satellite.

After unsuccessful attempts to work through the Soviet military command in Germany Col. Robert P. McQuill, chief of the U. S. military mission to that command, met with Otto Winzer, East German deputy foreign minister.

But the military contact apparently failed to satisfy East German desires for some degree of U. S. recognition.

The continued impasse brought last night's renewed U. S. appeal to Moscow. Robert Murphy, deputy under secretary of state, summoned Sergei R. Strizganov, Soviet embassy counselor, to the State Department.

Murphy asked that steps be taken toward freeing the nine men under agreements made at the end of World War II by the allied powers occupying Germany for the handling of military personnel in each other's territory.

Fire Alarm Not A Letter Box

DENVER (AP)—Things weren't the same for hours after an unidentified woman tried to mail a letter in the main lobby at Colorado General Hospital.

Within minutes after she pulled the handle of a conspicuous box, two squad cars and seven fire trucks careened up. All they found was the wide-eyed woman with the un-mailed letter.

The assistant fire chief directed her to the mail box. It's across the lobby from the fire alarm.

Many Pro-Eisenhower Papers Split Over Whether Should Keep Adams

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 Many of the newspapers that supported Dwight D. Eisenhower for the presidency have split on the issue of whether he should retain Sherman Adams as his chief White House aide.

The issue of many — but not all — of the Adams-should-go editorials in pro-Republican newspapers has been moderate. On the other hand, two prominent papers that supported the retention of Adams did so in vigorous, almost vehement terms.

Democratic papers generally called for Adams' ouster.

Adams admitted accepting gifts from industrialist Bernard Goldfine and making certain telephone calls inquiring into government matters concerning Goldfine.

Eisenhower, while saying he thought his assistant might have been imprudent, voiced full confidence in the flinty New Englander and said he would retain him.

An example of temperate comment by a paper favoring Adams' resignation came from the Tucson, Ariz., Daily Citizen, which supported Eisenhower:

"Even though he may be a martyred victim of circumstances, Mr. Adams can render final great service to the President by resigning."

One of the more vehement advocates of Adams' resignation was the Nashville, Tenn., Banner, which supported Eisenhower in both his 1952 and 1956 campaigns:

"His resignation is not immediate. It is perfectly obvious that Mr. Adams will be a major political liability to the administration."

One of the most strongly-worded of editorial comments was that of the Republican New York Herald-Tribune. The newspaper, pro-Eisenhower in both elections, said:

"No leader since Washington has had such universal respect and admiration (as Eisenhower). For five years, Sherman Adams has been the indispensable right arm of the President. He still is. The President wishes him to remain so. Accordingly, he should. The President and Mr. Adams can now get back to work."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat,

Adams can make is through the submission of his resignation."

An editorial in Life magazine, which supported Eisenhower in both his campaigns, said of Adams:

"However regrettable it may be in many ways, his resignation is the best way to insure the principles of morality in government's continuance."

On the other side of the political fence, the strongly Democratic New York Post, anti-Eisenhower in both elections, struck a sorrowful note.

"The fact is," said the Post, "that Adams is out on a limb. Even though the President has expressed unshaken confidence in him, it is unlikely that Adams can get down without jumping from the White House to political anonymity. The melancholy truth is that the prestige of the President has suffered a most serious blow."

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, anti-Eisenhower in both campaigns, said of Adams:

"We think his usefulness to the President is ended, and that the President makes a serious mistake, after adopting such a high moral tone on governmental ethics, to condone his assistant's conduct."

The Washington Evening Star, which gave Eisenhower no campaign support, said:

"If Mr. Adams keeps his office a certain sanction will have been given to a double standard of ethics. And it is perfectly obvious that Mr. Adams will be a major political liability to the administration."

One of the most strongly-worded of editorial comments was that of the Republican New York Herald-Tribune. The newspaper, pro-Eisenhower in both elections, said:

"No leader since Washington has had such universal respect and admiration (as Eisenhower). For five years, Sherman Adams has been the indispensable right arm of the President. He still is. The President wishes him to remain so. Accordingly, he should. The President and Mr. Adams can now get back to work."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, which supported Eisenhower both in 1952 and 1956, praised Adams extensively:

"He certainly should remain in government. Gov. Adams is a man of limitless energy and extraordinary ability. In these trying times such men are altogether too rare. A man of outstanding genius, such high moral standards and such boundless integrity should not be lost to the government because of one guileless indiscretion."

A number of newspapers took the attitude that Adams' continued presence in the government may have to be reconsidered in the light of coming political developments.

Expressing the editorial feelings of the Hearst newspapers, which supported Eisenhower in both elections, the New York Journal-American said:

"The issue has not been resolved by the White House announcement that Mr. Adams will continue in his job. Such an affirmation, admirable as it may be, will be answered by political realities which will have to be faced and weighed by the President and Mr. Adams, and by Mr. Adams in his conscience, in the days to come."

The pro-Eisenhower San Francisco Chronicle said in part:

"The popular discovery that the GOP's most outspoken idealist of purity in office has feet of clay and a coat of vicuna will have measurable political effects at the polls in November. We fear that the same brush that it used so forcefully and, let us admit, vir-tuously, to daub the Democrats in 1952 for their 'mess in Washington.'"

The Baltimore Sun singled out for criticism Eisenhower's insistence that he needs Adams. Said the Sun, which supported Eisenhower:

"It is simply absurd to say that he 'needs' him. We can name a dozen men who could move into that office tomorrow and by the end of next week be on top of the job. It grows increasingly likely, moreover, that Mr. Eisenhower is going to have to show that he doesn't need him."

The New York Times took a broad view of the situation, criticizing Adams without calling for his ouster. The Times, which has supported Eisenhower, commented:

"Mr. Adams certainly has shown himself to be guilty, as he suggests, of bad judgment — of extraordinarily bad judgment on the part of so experienced and incorruptible a public servant as he unquestionably is."

Mrs. Eleanor B. Coleman of Greenville is serving as a counselor and Philip Coleman and Pete Anthony are conference members.

The conference will run through Friday morning, June 27.

Says Radiation Effects Doubled

WAYNESVILLE, N. C. (AP)—Radioactivity in human bodies has increased about 100 per cent in the last two years, but the amount still need not be regarded as harmful, says a nuclear medicine specialist.

James B. Harteringer of Washington, D. C. yesterday addressed the Mountain-Top Medical Assembly, made up of doctors from seven states. He is director of the division of nuclear medicine and chemistry at the Institute for Research and Peter Army Medical Center.

He attributed the increases of radioactive materials in humans to increases in nuclear testing by the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

Bear In Middle Of A Triangle

PAWTUCKET, R. I. (AP)—Snowflake has a fight to be miffed.

Snowflake, a female polar bear, rubbed noses through the bars with Bruno, a Canadian black bear in an adjoining section at Slater Park.

Snowflake, male polar bear and Snowflake's room mate, resented. Soon the fur, black and white, was flying as powerful paws slashed away between the bars. Bruno was cut over the right eye and Snowflake cut on paws and nose.

But the rivals abandoned the fray when an attendant threw in some food.

What lady wouldn't be miffed?

Drinking Friends Took His Money

CHICAGO (AP)—Don Parker, 34, a deaf mute of Denton, Neb., came to Chicago with $775 in a wadded auto.

Parker told police in a written complaint last night he started drinking with five new acquaintances. After a few drinks he reported they took him to a South Side room and robbed him of all his money, including $300 he had in his socks.

The Reverend Thomas Money will be welcomed as the new minister of Hooker Memorial Christian Church Sunday.

Sunday School will be held at 9:45 a. m. and at the worship service at 10:45. Rev. Money will speak on Peace of Mind. The choir will sing "Be Still, My Soul" under the direction of Mrs. Florence Scott.

The Executive board of the CWF meets Tuesday at 8:00 p. m. with Mrs. Richard Briley at 2311 Deal Place.

Reverend and Mrs. Money are at home in the new parsonage at 1722 Beaumont Road. The new minister graduated this month from Transylvania College of The Bible, at Lexington, Ky.

Laughs, Poses Probe Question

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower, tongue-in-cheek, wants to know whether George Washington was investigated for accepting a gift sword.

The President laughingly posed the question late yesterday in making a surprise 30-minute tour of the historic Washington home at nearby Mount Vernon, Va.

Turning from study of an ornate sword given to Washington by a German admiral, Eisenhower pointed over his shoulder at the weapon and inquired with a grin:

"Do you suppose they investigated him for getting a present?"

This was an obvious allusion to the current controversy over gifts from Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine to Sherman Adams, Eisenhower's chief aide.

The President made his unscheduled visit to Mount Vernon on the way back to Washington from a Defense Department conference at the Quantico, Va., Marine base.

Eisenhower had visited the Washington shrine many times before, but this was the first time he did so as president.

The chief executive showed special interest in the bedroom where Washington died in 1799 when he was 67, Eisenhower's present age.

Gazing around the room, Eisenhower said Washington was "a good, strong fellow" but that it was "remarkable he lived as long as he did."

Recognized The Stolen Articles

Richard L. Dotson, 23, a waiter, stole $3,500 worth of furniture and cash in a series of burglaries. He moved the furniture into his apartment.

The apartment house owner began redecorating. He needed help and called in a furniture mover.

He was an employee of one of the stores Dotson had burglarized. He recognized the furniture and called police.

Dotson confessed.

Old Cheeta The Chimp Sponges Off Youngsters

DALLAS (AP)—Pity Cheeta, the chimpanzee who once stole scenes from Tarzan of the monkeys, is being sponged off by younger performers more in demand.

Antoniucci gave Cheeta, 14, the book last week. The ape was just too old for Antoniucci's animal act, now playing here.

He was just fair as an acrobat and too old for still walking, dancing and boxing.

Cheeta was offered to the Dallas Zoo, but they turned him down. "Cheeta is too old," said Curator Elva Turner. Besides, he added, the zoo already has five chimps.

So Cheeta must hit the road again with the show, watching from the wings as younger chimps take the applause, and no doubt boring them between acts with tales of how he and Johnny Weissmuller once rode elephants and chased villains.

United States exports to the 20 Latin American Republics in 1957 jumped to a value of 4.7 billion dollars, an increase of one-fifth over 1956 levels.

UN Day Will Be A Paid Holiday

ST. LOUIS (AP)—McDonnell Aircraft Corp. will start observing United Nations Day as a paid holiday this year, and company executives hope the idea will spread throughout the world.

"We believe it is appropriate that all the people of this planet take one day off each year to celebrate the birthday of the United Nations," said J. S. McDonnell, president of the firm.

U. N. Day, Oct. 24, has been made a seventh paid holiday in contracts covering 15,000 union employees of the firm, which manufactures military airplanes and missiles.
