Catch Young Road Gang Escapee Late Yesterday After Major Hunt

Manhunter

By EVERETTE PARKER, Reflector Staff Writer. SNOW HILL—Simmie Lee Moyer, the escaped convict whose assault on a guard yesterday touched off one of the most intense manhunts ever in the Pitt-Greene County area, has been captured.

The 18-year-old Winterville Negro was apprehended late yesterday afternoon approximately two and one-half miles from the scene of his escape. He did not resist arrest.

According to Captain James Langley, Superintendent of the Greene County Prison Camp, Moyer was found lying in a ditch near a rural paved road between Willow Green and Lizzie. "He was a little nervous but did not appear to be too scared," Langley noted.

Still At Large

George Dewey Bennett, 25-year-old convict who escaped from a Pitt County road gang in the Haddock's Crossroads section Tuesday afternoon, is still at large.

The search for Moyer was centralized in a 16 square mile area in the vicinity of the escape. Little-by-little the hunt narrowed until the convict was tracked and cornered in a tobacco patch.

Langley stated the bloodhounds tracked the escapee to the tobacco patch but became confused after getting the scent of several workers in a tobacco field near the woods.

Langley one the bloodhounds tracked the escapee to the tobacco patch but became confused after getting the scent of several workers in a tobacco field near the woods.

Langley explained the attack as follows: "After the foreman left for help, Moyer, who was shrubbing a roadside right-of-way, began making a move toward the dense undergrowth nearby. He was told to get back with the other prisoners and became extremely angry. Without warning he then threw his bush ax at Smith, striking him just above the right eye. Smith slumped to the ground, and Moyer ran.

According to the Greene County Prison Camp Superintendent, no other prisoners, all Negroes convicted of misdemeanor charges, attempted to escape. In fact, he commented, they did everything they could to comfort the injured man until help arrived.

Moyer arrived at the prison camp here on July 29. He was sentenced to two years in Greene County Court for assault with a deadly weapon and 30 days in Winterville Mayor's Court for assault.

SIMMIE MOYE ... back in custody

ON THE TRAIL—Bloodhounds Work A Trail Left Yesterday By Escaped Convict Simmie Lee Moyer

MANHUNT . . . Part Of Which Is Just Waiting

Searchers Comb 16 Square Miles

By JIMMY ELLIS, Reflector Staff Writer. WILLOW GREEN—"Manhunt" became more than just a word yesterday in approximately 16 square miles of crop lands and low ground Northwest of this Greene County crossroads community.

"Manhunt" became an intense, and at times bitter, search for an escaped convict. More than 100 lawmen, state employees and residents of neighboring areas in two counties were beating bushes, nosing into watery corners of a big pocosin, and standing watch on five roads flanking the section where the fugitive was known to be.

Object of all the search was husky, bad-tempered Simmie Lee Moyer, an 18-year-old Negro who is serving the fourth road term of his young life. He is a native of the section where the search was centered.

The search for Simmie Lee, also known as "Zorro" and "Cannonball", was intense, bitter and painstakingly thorough because of the manner in which he made his escape. He nearly killed a guard in his dash for freedom.

News that the wounded guard, 47-year-old Richard M. Smith of the Greene County Prison Camp at Maury, would recover spread slowly through the group of searchers yesterday afternoon. It made little apparent difference in the concentrated effort to find Moyer.

Moyer became a marked man about 9:30 a.m. He threw a bush ax at Smith, left the guard dazed and bleeding on the roadside, and dashed frantically into the swampy forest while other prisoners in the roadgang tried to comfort Smith until help came.

As soon as word that Moyer had attacked the guard and fled had been spread, the vast complex of recapture operations went into business. Bloodhounds from Greene and Pitt Counties were pushed into the area and put on Moyer's trail.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Winfred Hart of Ayden and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Arthur Phipps of Arapahoe.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Roy Turnage Jr., organist of Ayden, including the traditional wedding marches, and "To A Wild Rose" was used during the ceremony, and the soloist, Fred Hall of Durham, sang "Because," "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us" and "A Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

The vows were spoken before a background of greenery interspersed with seven branched candelabra holding yellow candles and baskets of yellow gladioli, pompons and mums. A wrought iron prie dieu centered the wedding scene, and the pews were marked with a yellow candle and gladioli.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a waltz-length dress of white imported Chantilly lace and nylon tulle. It was fashioned with a basque bodice, portrait neckline of unique scallops, bordered with pearls and irridescent. The scalloped detail was repeated on abbreviated sleeves and matching gauntlets. Her voluminous skirt featured diamond shaped lace motifs. Her illusion veil was caught to shell cap of lace edged with seed pearls and rhinestones, and she carried a white prayer book topped with a white orchid showered with tube roses and white satin streamers.

Mrs. Willie Bruce Powell of Dover was her sister's matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Hubert Hart of Ayden and Mrs. Gordon Winfred Hart of Warsaw, sisters-in-law of the bride, and Miss Janice Lorraine Worthington of Ayden, a cousin of the bride. They wore identical, ballerina length dresses of yellow crystal over taffeta, fashioned with fitted bodice featuring matching taffeta sashes and panels that extended to the hemline of the bouffant skirts. They wore matching headbands and carried cascades of yellow glabella and caladium leaves tied with two-toned yellow satin ribbons.

Honorary attendants were Misses Linda Worthington and Dorothy Dean Hart, cousins of the bride, Miss Betty Craft, Miss Jeannette Worthington, Miss Peggy Watkins, all of Ayden, and Miss Mary Frances Johnson of Goldsboro. They wore ballerina dresses of pastel shades and carried a single yellow carnation and fern.

Joe Phipps of New Bern was his brother's best man. Ushers were Charles Hubert Hart, brother of the bride, and Bob Smith of Ayden, and Tommy Godley of Maury.

Mrs. Hart chose for her daughter's wedding a mauve Shantung dress with self colored lace and rhinestone trim and matching hat with navy shoes. Her corsage was of white carnations. The mother of the bridegroom wore a dress of white silk with a yoke of matching lace and her accessories were of white and navy. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The bride and bridegroom are both students of the Free Will Baptist College in Nashville, Tenn. where they will make their home following their honeymoon. And for her wedding trip the bride changed to a black cupon outfit with patent accessories, white hat and gloves and the white orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

Library Sees Large Increase In Circulation

The Sheppard Memorial Library has seen a 46 per cent increase in its circulation of books since the beginning of local television three years ago stated Miss Elizabeth Copeland, librarian.

The greatest proportion of the increase is the books borrowed by adults.

This information center has in its collection 55,000 books.

During the past requests for fiction were the most numerous but recently the records show that fact and information top the list. This is caused mostly by the increase in quiz television programs.

With a circulation of 76,814 books Sheppard Memorial owns 358 records. These records include classical music, operas, folk music and many educational types.

Nineteen hundred and ninety-seven people throughout Pitt County saw 46 films during the library's fiscal year. Subjects from natural history and government to child welfare are discussed in these films.

A 16 mm projector is owned by the library and is available for groups who borrow the films.

Another new addition is the charging machine at the front desk.

"It is much more efficient and speeds up the desk work. The machine eliminates duplication of names and those who are not registered at the local library, said Miss Copeland.

Meet the President Who Enjoys People

MRS. RALPH BRIMLEY . . . president of Newcomers Club. (Photo by Peggy Smith)

By PEGGY SMITH

Mrs. Ralph Brimley of 2308 Deal Place has been a resident of Greenville for one year.

"It is so refreshing to be able to speak to everyone you meet on the street," she said, "and have everyone in return speak to you. Before coming here, I lived in Winston-Salem and I'm certainly impressed with the friendliness shown here."

The most outstanding thing which Mrs. Brimley considers has happened to her is "having five grandbabies!"

Collecting antiques, gardening and "everything that happens to people are my hobbies," she commented.

"People are my greatest satisfaction."

Besides her husband, Dr. Brimley, who is director of Public Relations and Foundations at East Carolina College, there are two married daughters in the Brimley family.

Newcomers Club

"The Newcomers Club is an outgrowth of the Woman's Club," said Mrs. Brimley, president of this active organization.

A small group of members of the Woman's Club organized this club in order to meet the needs of newcomers to Greenville.

She added, "All newcomers are invited to visit the club. Anyone who receives an invitation and visits the club three times and shows interest in the club may become a member."

This club has no dues and is considered a social organization. Among their many activities is a yearly tea which is given each September for all the newcomers of the past year.

One of the money-making projects of the year is a bridge tournament held to enlarge the funds for the needy family which this group helps during Christmas.

Another highlight of the club year comes when Mrs. W. J. Bundy invites the clubbers to her Morehead cottage for bridge.

During the summer months the club meets only once a month, but beginning in September it will start on its regular schedule of two times per month, noted Mrs. Brimley.

White gladioli and pink carnations were used throughout the room as decorations. Pink wedding bells were placed around the table as individual place cards.

A three-course dinner was served to the 13 persons present.

The honoree was remembered with a cup and saucer in her chosen china pattern and a silver bread tray by the hostesses.

People's Princess-- That's Suga of Japan

By FRED SAITO

TOKYO (AP)—A young farm boy working as a gardener in the Imperial Palace grounds got lost in the huge garden.

The bewildered youngster came across a young, pretty girl strolling alone in the garden, and asked her, "Please, miss, I'm lost. Tell me how I can get back to the exit."

The girl affably smiled and said, "All right, mister, follow me." The two walked a few minutes before they met the boy's father, an ancient palace worker. The old man trembled, bowing his head almost down to the earth, mumbling, "Your highness overwhelmed us with your extreme kindness."

Princess Suga smiled back. "You are welcome. See you around!"

When the idol of the Emperor and 90 million Japanese left, the old man literally flew into rage at the still bewildered boy: "You idiot, swine, moron. . . Don't you know her highness? Oh, you have increased your poor father's white hairs five-fold in this one minute."

The story—officially denied by the Imperial Household spokesman but widely believed true—well illustrates why the 19-year-old beautiful princess is so popular in Japan.

Princess Suga's three elder sisters, now all married, would have never dreamed of walking alone in the palace grounds. Nor would they have thought of talking to unknown commoners.

Princess Suga, a trim and shapely 5-foot-4 1/2, is a sophomore at the Gakushuin (Peers) College, majoring in English literature—the first daughter of a Japanese emperor to do so.

All her sisters were educated by tutors inside the Palace.

Although a schoolgirl, Princess Suga is considered one of Japan's loveliest and most brilliant women. She is also said to be Japan's most fastidiously dressed woman.

She goes shopping accompanied only by one lady-in-waiting to downtown department stores. She always orders medium priced dresses of her own designs, usually showing a copy of an American fashion magazine and saying, "Something like this, but changing this and that." She also has her hair set in the store's salon, dictating her own style.

Millions of Japanese bobby-soxers see her portraits carried in the newspapers and follow her hair-do and dress styles.

Princess Suga is also a good athlete, particularly adept at tennis and skiing.

She is often called "Japan's Princess Margaret," although Princess Suga has not been ro-manically linked to anyone. Husbands of her three sisters—ex-prince, ex-duke and ex-marquis—were chosen by the imperial family because of their backgrounds. If Princess Suga chooses her own—probably with support from her brother, Crown Prince Akihito, who is not too happy about rigid court protocol either—few Japanese will be surprised.

Her choice might even be a commoner.

County Has Outgrown Its Hospital

Pitt County has been assured of one million dollars or two thirds the cost of the proposed addition at Pitt Memorial Hospital from state and federal sources if local taxpayers are willing to approve a bond issue to provide the remaining $500,000 needed for the facility.

Although hospital officials for the past two years have pointed out the fact that additional rooms would be needed at the hospital, the need has become more apparent and more acute in recent months.

The days when the hospital had to turn away patients for lack of room have become frequent. The number of days in which beds have been placed in corridors of the hospital in order to take care of patients has increased.

In short, Pitt is obviously outgrowing its present hospital facilities even though the hospital is only a few years old.

The proposed addition would add approximately 75 beds. It would provide for additional patients and enable the hospital to meet the growing demands being made upon it.

Hospital Trustees and the County Board of Commissioners have approved a referendum on a $750,000 bond issue for the hospital addition. When the machinery for the referendum was set up, it appeared that the county's share of the new structure would be about that amount. Since then it has developed that a large percentage of funds than first anticipated is available from state and federal sources. Thus the county's share of the cost will be less than the estimated $750,000.

The big question: Will the voters of Pitt County approve the bond issue when it comes to a vote in November?

Studying Their Campaign Plan

By LYNN NISBET
CAMPAIGN — Woodrow Jones, Democratic state chairman, spent two or three days this week conferring with the North Carolina congressional delegation and Democratic national headquarters at Washington about the general election campaign. He said before leaving for the conference he would be largely influenced by wishes of the candidates for congress as to what type of campaign will be waged.

Governor Hodges declared two years ago that he thinks the custom of separate rallies in each congressional district is outdated. These meetings are poorly attended and often run for two hours or more. The Governor attempted to streamline and shorten the program last time, but with indifferent success. He favors making more use of radio and television with less strain on the candidates and party leaders who have customarily made the district-by-district tour.

A number of other party leaders, particularly on the local level, want to continue the plan of getting together in each district for at least one rally during the fall.

HISTORY — The district meeting plan was inaugurated in 1928 by O.M. Mull, then state chairman, for a few districts. It was expanded by Wallace Winborne, chairman in 1930, to include the whole state, and has been conducted on state-wide basis ever since. It is true that facilities of radio and television were not available then and it was more important to take the campaign to the people in the persons of the candidates.

A more important factor was, and still is, the opportunity afforded candidates for district and county offices to participate in the program. The Mull-Winborne idea was that if every county goes Democratic, there will be no worries about the state.

LOCALIZED — This year the Presidency is not involved. Neither is the Governor nor any member of the Council of State. A United States Senator and an Attorney General must be elected for unexpired terms. Not even the most optimistic Republicans think there is any chance to win these offices from the Democratic nominees—Senators Everett Jordan and Attorney General Malcolm Seawell. Democratic nominees for the Supreme Court and a dozen or so Superior Court judges are assured election.

The only real contests are in two or three Congressional districts, mainly the 10th and 12th; in three or four State Senatorial districts, and in 10 to 20 counties for Representatives in the Legislature, sheriffs, clerks of court and county commissioners. These contests are all in less than state-wide areas. The Democratic candidates are much more concerned about help in their home balliwicks than about big speeches from Raleigh and Washington.

There is some sentiment for making the district rallies more local, featuring county candidates in the area, rather than a Governor or Senator who must of necessity make about the same speech the voters have already heard or read.

SECRETARY — Chairman Jones also said he expects to appoint a secretary for the State Democratic Committee within a few days. He indicated he has several Young Democrats in mind, and that he does not regard geographic residence as important. He is from the western part of the state, while the vice chairman and both members of the national committee are from the eastern half. Regardless of where they live, Jones thinks all these party officials have a state-wide view and that is all he expects from the secretary.

SUPREME COURT — The Supreme Court will convene for the 1958 term on Monday, August 25. Beginning Tuesday, August 26, appeals will be heard from the first, second, 29th and 30th districts. For that week one criminal case and 13 civil actions are on the calendar. There is still time for docketing appeals from other districts, but those already on the book indicate the high court will have one of its busiest terms this fall.

UNCONSCIOUS TRUTH — A typographical error and a proof reader's oversight is responsible for the Session Laws of 1953 perpetuating a delightful truth. Your reporter was checking the record of some appropriations in past years and discovered that a special act in 1953, allotting some $351,000 for additions to the Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill specifies that "The funds herein appropriated shall be expended under the Execution Budget Act."

Reference, of course, was to the Executive Budget Act of 1925 as amended from time to time. That is the usual addenda to such appropriations. Many State agency and department administrators think of the budget bureau as an executioner for their hopes for more money. So, when the law book spells out the "Execution" Budget Act shall control, that makes it legal.

No one can answer that question until after the votes are counted. Answers given before that time will be mere guesses.

Pitt County needs the additional facility at its hospital. It is needed if the county is to care for its citizens who are seeking hospital treatment in increasing numbers.

Despite this obvious need, we must be realistic. The past few years have seen a growing trend against special bond issues or special tax levies for much-needed improvements where local governments are concerned. This is true in Pitt County as it is elsewhere in North Carolina.

Slightly more than two months ago Pitt citizens went to the polls to express themselves on a proposed special tax levy to promote the economic development of the county. The measure carried by only 34 votes out of more than 9,000 ballots cast.

Recently two municipal governments in Pitt have brought bond issue proposals for local improvements before their citizens. In both cases the voters turned down the bond issues. Griffon citizens voted against bonds for a new town hall, and last week Fountain voters rejected a bond proposal for a new fire truck and a new well.

Perhaps these instances are not indicative of how the people of Pitt feel toward the proposed bond issue for the hospital addition. Even so, they should prompt those who are aware of the pressing need for enlarged hospital facilities in Pitt to seek to acquaint their fellow citizens with the hospital needs of the county.

Obviously, Something Is Wrong In Prisons

North Carolina has a new reason to take a careful look at the number of prison escapes it has had in recent months.

Aside from the fact that the frequency of escapes has made residents in some sections of the state uneasy, the Federal Prison bureau has now come out with a report that North Carolina had more prison escapes during 1957 than any other state in the union.

The fact that North Carolina uses many of its prisoners for road work at least contributes to the number of escapes. It is easier for a man to slip away from a road gang, or take his chances running off through the woods than it is for him to saw through iron bars or scale prison walls. At the same time we must not overlook the fact that North Carolina is not the only state which uses its prisoners for road work. There are several others, and at least in 1957 their experience with escapes was not as bad as that of North Carolina.

According to the Federal Prison bureau there were a total of 2,210 escapes from state prisons throughout the country last year. North Carolina alone accounted for slightly more than 21 per cent of these escapes.

When North Carolina leads the nation in the number of prisoners escaping from state prisons during a given year; and moreover when escapes from prisons in North Carolina account for more than 21 per cent of the total number of escapes from the prisons of all 48 states, something is drastically wrong with our prison system.

Repeated complaints have brought little in the way of improvement in cutting down the number of escapes from the state's prisons in recent months. As Chief Executive of the state government, Gov. Hodges should step in immediately and see that the situation is improved without further dilly-dallying.

Look Clumsy In Letter Exchange

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Russia both look clumsy in their almost fantastic exchange of proposals for a summit meeting which now is dead.

Premier Khrushchev scored an early propaganda victory by proposing the meeting but then— from what seemed sheer impulse rather than shrewdness— got himself into a box from which he finally escaped by calling the whole thing off.

The Eisenhower administration, reluctant about such a meeting, at all got pressured into agreeing to one. It finally suggested the kind of get-together that almost certainly would have turned into a name-calling, shouting match.

If the administration decided to agree but only under conditions it felt Khrushchev couldn't or wouldn't accept, it succeeded. The final Soviet refusal to meet on American terms caused no unhappiness among key officials here.

Khrushchev got a two-edged propaganda jump: by proposing the meeting and at the same time by accusing the United States and Britain of aggression in sending their troops into Lebanon and Jordan.

It was hardly the way to start toward a peaceful meeting. He proposed the United States, Russia, Britain, France and India meet outside the United Nations and, if they reached agreements, make recommendations to the U.N.

He wasn't alone in this idea. French Premier de Gaulle didn't want a summit meeting in the U.N. either.

President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles had very little stomach for the Khrushchev proposal. Ever since last December they had opposed a summit meeting without thorough preparation and agreement on what would be discussed.

Khrushchev wanted a meeting in a hurry. British Prime Minister Macmillan agreed but suggested it be held in the U.N. Security Council. Eisenhower and Dulles could either agree or break with Britain. Under this pressure, they agreed.

Then Khrushchev pulled what looked like a huge boner. He shot back his acceptance fast, so fast he didn't have much time to think it over. By agreeing to meet in the Security Council he was ignoring two facts which he later pointed out angrily when he flatly refused to meet in the council:

1. That the 11-nation Council is loaded with American friends. On any matter except one of major importance — when the Soviet Union could use a veto — the Soviets figured to be overwhelmingly outvoted, if there was a vote.

2. By sitting down in the Council—where Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist China is a permanent member — he might seem to be agreeing that Chiang had a rightful place there.

Red China, excluded from U.N. membership mainly by American influence, claims it should be on the Council and that Chiang is an impostor. So Red China couldn't help being disturbed by Khrushchev's sitting in the Council.

By this time deadly damage had been done anyway. For the letters from Khrushchev to Eisenhower and the Eisenhower letters to Khrushchev were full of accusations, charges and counter-charges.

In brief, Khrushchev kept accusing this country of direct aggression in the Middle East; this country accused the Soviet Union of indirect aggression.

But when Eisenhower subsequently began laying down conditions for any meeting in the U.N. — that it had to be according to rules and preceded by agreements — Khrushchev apparently had second thoughts and said he wanted none of it.

Meanwhile, two things happened:

1. Last Thursday Dulles at a news conference made clear this country was not going to a summit meeting with any broad Middle East program but with only two main purposes in mind: to deny Soviet charges of American aggression and to accuse the Soviets of indirect aggression.

With this revelation it became clear any meeting under those conditions would be a shouting match.

2. Khrushchev flew to Red China where his allies must have been disturbed about the thought of his sitting down in the Council with Nationalist China. So yesterday he fired off a blast:

He wanted no part of a summit meeting in a Security Council loaded with American friends and no part of sitting down with Chiang Kai-shek or his representative.

Instead, he proposed the whole Middle East problem be turned over to the 81 nations in the General Assembly. Eisenhower quickly agreed. This opened the door to new arguments about what the Assembly would discuss.

A Lift From Iron In The Diet

By EVERETTE PARKER

Waiting For The Story

"It's for you," one of the staffers said. I stopped typing and picked up the phone receiver and customarily said "good morning". It was my wife.

"Honey I have the most wonderful news for you," she excitedly blurted out. "We have won a television set."

"That's wonderful," I responded. "How did we win it?"

About this time I too was getting a little excited. She proceeded to explain to me that her mother had just called her saying that several people had heard and seen Mrs. Sylvia Ann Parker of Greenville's name on television earlier in the morning. Her mother went further to say that a picture of the television set had also been shown. Finally before hanging up she had informed me that she didn't know how we had won the TV.

About this time I could hardly contain myself. I informed several members of the staff that I was going out to check on this thing.

First I tried to call several grocery stores to find out if they were giving away anything. Failing with this effort I decided to check personally with each one. The first place I went was not giving away television sets.

"Oh well — its probably one of the other stores," I said to myself as I drove on, smoking one cigarette after the other. My nerves felt like they were trying to escape through the pores of my skin.

On and on I drove. The gas in my car was getting low so I stopped at the nearest service station. "Why is that attendant so slow," I asked myself. I was ready to get back on the road.

I was told at one store that they had given away a TV set about two weeks ago but didn't know whether the winner had picked it up. "That must be it," I thought.

"Sure," he replied. He called on the phone and talked to somebody at another store. I had to light another cigarette.

In a few minutes he came back and informed me that someone else has won the prize. He explained that another grocery store in town had given away a TV set recently. I looked up the number and called. That set was won by someone else too.

In desperation I finally called the television station and asked if anyone knew anything about my wife winning a television set. Nobody did.

Then I decided to go home and find out more about the prize from my wife. She didn't know anymore than she had told me on the phone so I called her home.

Sure enough several other people had heard that she had won a TV set. One woman even called up, wanting to know when the set was going to be delivered.

All my efforts went for naught. I knew as much when I finished searching for answers as I did at the beginning.

Now I am waiting for the mailman to bring a letter informing my wife that she has won a television set.

and breathes for his master alone. In summer's heat he follows you. In winter's cold he never leaves you. When you laugh or when you cry, he is your pal.

Whatever the world may think of you—to your faithful friend—your dog—you are the wisest and most splendid of things. To him you are as wise as Napoleon. To him you are to be worshipped as the best of men.

He knows no deceit or pretense. With what reverence he crouches at your feet. With what dependence he looks up to you. With what cheerful joy he obeys you.

He has a share of man's intelligence, but he has no share of man's falsehood. There is a general comfort in his companionship. There is an ever ready touching humility.

He loves your friends. He watches you faithfully by night that you in peace may sleep. When your best friend leaves you, when your closest friend betrays you, your dog is ever at your side.

In health and in sickness, he will stand by you. He will sleep on the ground when the winds of winter blow, if only he could remain with his master. He will accept the food that is offered, be it much or little, and be ever so grateful. He will lick the hand that has no food to offer.

He is the one dependable friend in the world. He is not a fair-weather friend. And when the master is laid to rest in the cold ground his dog will be found at the grave, with his head between his paws, his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness.

An amazing peek inside certain types of appliance stores under current competitive conditions has been given by Home Furnishings Daily.

The trade newspaper has presented 10 articles in which a salesman discloses some almost incredible practices. The editors say that an experienced newspaperman assisted in the preparation of the series, but the guts of the articles are the true experiences of a real salesman.

Here are some of the items of salesmanship revealed:

"If my customer has remained too quiet during my spiel, I wind up by producing a pencil and starting to write up a bill of sale . . . By the time I ask him where the merchandise is going, he thinks he's committed and digs out a deposit to spare himself embarrassment."

If another customer can't make up his mind, the salesman says he may "impulsively" point to a lamp imposing on a TV set and say, "All right, give me the order now and take that lamp with you. I'll make it up with the manager."

"Does the tough guy have to know that the lamps are spotted for just such an event and are worth all of 89 cents?"

HIS PRIVATE WAREHOUSE
Sometimes, the salesman wrote, he picked up in inventory book and remarks that an item is the last one. If the customer seems suspicious, "I get on the phone and ask the warehouse if they will hold the lone box for me. My wife is quite used to receiving such calls from me."

Sometimes a salesman knows that a customer has been shopping around for a specific model. "I give him a price all right—anywhere from cost to $20 below . . . If the shopper has come in for a certain filter-type washer . . . I naturally take the filter out and show it to him. Only this particular filter has rust on it."

Then begins the switch to some other brand the sue — the customer hasn't shopped, on which a profit can be charged.

When a shopper demands a refrigerator trade-in allowance, the salesman has two choices. "First is to allow no more than $10 or $15 on the old box, then try to add it back on as service and delivery charges. Second is to tell him point-blank that the old box is worthless."

HOW TO HANDLE GRIPES
When a customer complains about a television set, the salesman says, the best thing is to give him the number of the service company and let him do the talking.

When a customer complains before delivery, it may be an attempt to get out of a contract. A store in Astoria, N.Y., he says, "simply tells the customer that the contract he signed has committed him to buy even if the merchandise has not yet been delivered. If the customer still tries to pull out, he is informed that the store will hold the goods while the bank garnishes the guy's wages for the monthly payment. Then two years later when the merchandise is all paid for the customer can come around and pick up his goods if he wants to."

Some shoppers are curious about credit charges. The salesman says a friend handles it this way: "He gets a deal on a washer and a refrigerator at $390. The customer gives him $50 down, the balance to be paid over 24 months. Just as my buddy makes ready to write, the customer asks him how much is interest. My pal replies, 'Two dollars and change a month. This satisfies the customer much more than being told the interest will come to $68.'

"When a customer asks me the rate of interest, I never say 10 per cent. I just tell him that it comes out to less than 1 per cent a month, which is true."

CHISELING THE CHISELERS
Sometimes sharp buyers bargain prices down. "On TV for example, a chiseler has forced me to knock $20 off my price. I counter with a $19.95 charge for manufacturer's warranty . . . On a table model, I charge $10 for a swivel base, which actually costs us a buck or two and which we throw in with a normal sale . . . The chiseler also pays me $7.50 for delivery included in the price."

There is lots more. Selling must be exciting in the box stores these days.

They'll Talk & Talk

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — It isn't the people who are off on vacation who cut down the efficiency of the average business office this time of year.

It's the people who are just back from vacation — and can't keep from talking about it on company time.

During his two-week summer vacation Jim Jukes goes on an auto tour of the West, and during a descent into the Grand Canyon almost falls off a mule. Well, naturally, to Jim this is the most exciting event in the history of travel since Burton Holmes discovered the spoken word.

Suppose there are 124 people in the office besides Jim is going to buttonhole 120 of them — all except the four he isn't speaking to because he owes them money — and spend a full hour with each telling his dramatic experience, over and over, always leading up to that terrible moment.

"The mule stumbled, I fell almost out of the saddle, and, boy, did I wish I was back in the good old office again!"

By the time he himself wears of telling about his adventure, half his bored coworkers are mailing insulting letters to the mule, denouncing it as an enemy of the human race for not kicking Jukes into the canyon in the first place.

Jukes spent only two weeks on vacation but 120 hours — or three more weeks — bragging about it. It also took 120 hours of other people's time to hear him out. So altogether the firm lost the services of one employee for a total of six extra weeks.

If the same thing holds true for each of the 125 employees, the management is ostensibly paying only for 250 vacation weeks a year — but actually also footing the bill for 750 more weeks of post-vacation talk.

What is the answer? The solution is simple. Each employee would be given a free extra week if he signed an agreement not to mention his vacation aloud in the office on his return — on pain of dismissal.

During the extra allotted week he would stay home and fill out a vacation information form to be posted on the bulletin board by the office water cooler.

"All right, where did you go?" "How many miles per gallon did you average?" "Have any flat tires besides the one in the back seat?"

"Check any illnesses suffered by the family. Poison ivy? Colic? Cholera? Sunburn? Snow blindness?"

"Tell us any humorous or unusual experiences — not to exceed 50 words."

"Attach the best snapshot you took during trip. Those who went to Paris can also attach any unusual postcards acquired from natives."

If all the offices in America adopted this vacation information card system, U. S. industry would save billions of dollars in lost time annually — and also boost employe morale.

For listening to the other fellow's vacation lecture isn't just a waste of the boss's time. It's a waste of our own.

Which reminds me, Did I ever tell you about that big fish I caught vacationing in the Bahamas last—?

Opinions In Brief

"In the long run, a continuation of our research in production methods, disease and pest control along with a stepped-up utilization program will in large measure determine the future of agriculture in this nation as we have known it, particularly our family size farms. By finding new uses and reducing the cost of production we will be in a much better position to meet the competition of foreign countries in the world markets." — Sen. Everett Jordan.

Education Program Is Due For House Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal education program, a subject of urgent discussion when Congress convened, reaches the House floor for action today in the session's waning days. The Senate was ready to follow through later with action on a similar but broader and more expensive measure than the House version. Both would authorize college scholarships, fellowships and student loan funds for worthy students, along with state grants and other programs to improve the nation's educational structure. The proposal was spawned after Soviet Sputniks emphasized Soviet scientific advances. Committees started working, but interest lagged after a time. The House Education Committee completed action on its bill July 2, but the Rules Committee acted only yesterday to send it to the floor.

May Shed Years In Space Flight

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Mama may someday rocket into outer space to shed years almost as easily as she could now shed pounds on a milk farm. Prospects for a future fountain of youth in limitless space were pictured today by Dr. I. M. Levitt, imaginative director of the Franklin Institute's Felix Platterium. He is a pioneer astronomical physicist, or space scientist. The 33-pound Explorer IV satellite careening around the earth for what is expected to be a five-year journey may prove great speeds help slow time in space. That's what Albert Einstein theorized and mathematics bears him out, said Dr. Levitt. The way Einstein put it, time slows down as an object approaches the speed of light, 186,300 miles a second. "The satellite is traveling five miles a second," Dr. Levitt said. "At that rate, it would age one second less every 100 years. "Of course, after you've lived 100 years, a second isn't very much," said the 49-year-old space scientist briskly. "But let's project. "Suppose in 1928, a 28-year-old couple with a year-old daughter started in a rocket ship on a 30-year space trip. They left their daughter behind. If the ship traveled at 184,700 miles per second, the time slowdown would be 10 — or every 10 seconds on earth would be one second in their rocket ship. Persons in the ship would not notice the slowdown of time. "When they returned after 30 earth years, they actually would have aged three years. In 1958, they would be 31 years old — the same age as their daughter who remained on earth. "Imagine. People would say to mother and daughter, 'You could be taken for sisters because you look the same age'—and they actually would be the same age. "The ladies would love that."

Hails Passage Of 'Disclosure' Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) today hailed House passage of an employee pension and welfare fund disclosure bill as assuring legislation in the field at this session of Congress. The House passed the measure by voice vote late yesterday after turning down a proposal to eliminate employer-run plans. The Senate cleared the bill 88-0 April 28 with Kennedy as its chief sponsor. "I welcome the House action because it means we will get a bill this session," Kennedy told a reporter. "But the Senate version is a stronger bill and I hope we can restore at least a part of the Senate language." Normally a Senate-House conference is named to compromise differences between the two houses, but Kennedy said it is possible the Senate will just accept the House bill as the best it is possible to get this year. The key House test was on an amendment to exempt those plans under which management — alone or through an insurance company — guarantees a fixed level of benefits to the employees. These make-up about 90 per cent of the total in effect. The others are controlled by labor unions or are jointly administered by management and labor. Both versions of the legislation would require fund administrators to file with the secretary of labor comprehensive reports on the makeup of each plan plus annual data on its financial operations. The Senate bill would give the secretary subpoena power to investigate the accuracy of the reports. He also could seek federal court injunctions where necessary to enforce the act, and could prescribe the form of the reports. The House bill would merely direct the secretary to receive the plans and make them available in a public reading room.

Heavy Volume In Weed Sales

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)—Volume continued heavy at most of the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco markets Wednesday but quality fell off, which led to a drop in prices. The U.S. Department of Agriculture said prices began to level off after rising to a second new daily high in two days. A larger proportion of poor leaf and nondescript pulled the general quality down, however. These lower quality offerings fell off as much as $1 to $4 a hundred pounds. Other grades held generally unchanged and the better grade leaf brought a high of $68. For the season, gross sales have amounted to 59,599,279 pounds at an average of $58.81 a hundred. This includes the 12,574,734 pounds sold Tuesday at an average of $61.23, a new high 43 cents above the previous record set on Monday. Wednesday's auction bid averages per hundred pounds on several representative U.S. grades as compared with Tuesday: Leaf — Good lemon $67, up $1; fair lemon 65, unchanged; low lemon 64, unchanged; fair orange 64, down 1; low orange 63, down 1; poor medium green 54, unchanged. Lugs — Good lemon 66, unchanged; fair lemon 65, down 1; fair orange 64, down 2. Primings — Good lemon $64, down $1, fair lemon 62, down 1; fair orange 60, down 2; low orange 48, down 4. Nondescript — Best thin body $37, down $3.

Governess Safe After Uprising

LONDON (AP)—The English governess of King Faisal's cousins has returned safely to Britain after hiding in Baghdad from the rebels who killed the monarch and members of his household. The Foreign Office said today Mrs. Florence Hazeldine, 60, had flown home. At one time there were fears for the woman, who went to Baghdad two years ago as governess of the three children of Princess Badia, Faisal's aunt.

CHAPTER 9
 "Please come into the house," Ann Stewart invited Colin Campbell. "Ling will be delighted to see you."
 She stood aside and Colin entered a large room that was obviously the center of the house. One outer wall was given entirely to a huge stone fireplace. A long table flanked by wooden chairs dominated the center of the room, and against the far wall stood a spacious couch covered with tanned deer skins. At one end of the couch Colin was amazed to see shelves crammed from floor to ceiling with books. On the opposite end was a gun rack holding four rifles, with an empty space for a fifth.
 Colin lingered in front of the bookshelves. Plato's Republic was wedged between Gibbon's Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire and Macaulay's History of England. He tried to catch a glimpse of his voice as he said, "You have a fine library here."
 "It is my father's library," Ann answered. "But I am the only one to read it now."
 Colin was filled with curiosity. What were these beautiful young woman and her father doing here? What had happened to the mind that once studied Gibbon and Macaulay? How did she come to be married to an amiable woodsman who could neither read nor write? He would like to know the answers to all these, but her tone of voice precluded questions.
 "I'm sorry Ling isn't here," Judge Campbell said.
 "Please call me Colin."
 "All right, Colin." She spoke without a trace of self-consciousness. "I'm Ann."
 "A proud and lovely name and most befitting."
 "Thank you!" she laughed. "Ling's gone hunting, as usual. But he should be here soon."
 As though her words possessed some magic which was able to reach out of her wandering husband and bring him to her side, the moment later Ling entered the house.
 "Why, hello, Judge! Mighty glad to see you here!"
 "Hello, Ling!" Colin's greeting was equally warm. "I thought I'd accept your invitation to do a little hunting at Hobbs Creek."
 "Sure, though I wish you'd let them your hounds my kids is playin' with?"
 "Yes, they are."
 "Any good?"
 "As good as any deer hounds I know."
 "We'll try 'em," Ling promised. "In one hand he carried the rifle that was missing from the rack and down his back dangled a turkey key with its head shot off. Blood still oozed from the mangled neck. When Ling laid his turkey on the table, Colin was watching Ann. He saw on her face revulsion and disgust, but he also saw resignation. Probably she had long since ceased trying to explain that ru-keys with bloody heads had no place in the house, least of all on the dining table. But just then her father and little Lingo came in and all she said was, "Take the turkey outside and dress it, Dad, will you?"

 Enos caught up the turkey and Lingo remained at his side as they left. Ling replaced the rifle in the rack and turned to Colin. "Tell you what, Judge. It's a bit late in the day to go out huntin' now. Spend the night here and we'll go out at dawn in the mornin'. Meantime, you and I can go visit some of the folks on Hobbs Creek before dinner."
 "That sounds fine, Ling, but I don't want to put you people to all that trouble. I brought my camping gear with me, and a night out under the stars would be a real pleasure to me."
 But Ling wouldn't hear of it, and his invitation was cordially seconded by Ann. Soon the two men had started up the valley and into the woods on their way to the neighbors, the free-striding Ling shortening his step to suit Colin's. At half a mile's distance, they emerged into another clearing. "Darnley Hamlin's place," Ling explained as they walked toward the log house. "Bedloe an Tracey, his brothers, lives with him and his passel of young 'uns."
 As they approached the house a young man of about twenty came out to meet them. He was as tall as Ling but more heavily built. His hair was red and like Ling, he was clean-shaven. He moved with the same easy woodsman's grace, and his grin was contagious.
 "Hi!" Ling called, and when they were near enough he said proudly, "Tracey Hamlin. I want you to meet Judge Campbell."
 "Right glad to know you, Judge. Tracey's handshake was warm and his eyes spoke their own welcome. "Come say howdy to the rest."
 Colin met Darnley and Bedloe, Tracey's older brothers. He was introduced to Charity, Darnley's competent wife. He warmed to the six children who stared at him, ran into another room, peered around the door jamb and giggled. He accepted with pleasure a mug of hard cider.
 To his surprise, the talk soon turned to politics. He would have thought these men as isolated in their thinking as they were in their domain, but they were aware of all but the very latest developments in the increasingly bitter struggle between the North and the South. About most recent events, they questioned him keenly, phrasing their questions so as to elicit from him an idea of his own opinions. Once they felt sure that he did not share the views of the planter aristocracy, they declared their own views outspokenly.
 "Do you keep slaves?" Darnley Hamlin had asked him.
 "My father has over a hundred at Quail Wings, our plantation. On my twenty-first birthday he gave me two as my personal slaves, two of the best he had. The next day I gave them their freedom and asked them if they would care to work for me. They gladly agreed and they are with me still."

 "What did your father say to that?" Bedloe had put it bluntly. "He thought I'd lost my mind, and we've been arguing about it ever since."
 They were not only against the idea of slavery, believing a man should "do for himself." Colin discovered; they also had a regional pride which had been affronted by slave-owning lowlanders. "No body goin' to ketch us fight's no them easterners can live like kings with all their slaves waitin' on 'em," Darnley said. "Them easterners has been bossin' the whole state of Virginy long enough, grabbin' all the money there is fer schools and roads and," slyly, "courthouses. We got to go clear to Wethery to find a school and clear to the next county when one of us gits into a little ruckus with the law." He winked at Ling.
 Later Colin asked them, "Putting aside all your differences with the east, what would you do if worst came to worst and federal troops entered the state?"
 "I reckon we'd fight right enough," Darnley answered, "or first thing you know they'd be takin' over Hobbs Creek."
 As he left with Ling, it seemed to Colin that the opinions of the brothers Hamlin were more reasonable than those of his own father and brother.

Woman Candidate Believes Symington Can Be Beaten

SEDALIA, Mo. (AP) — "There isn't anyone who can't be defeated whether he is president, senator or constable."
 That's one Republican's theory about U.S. Sen. Stuart Symington, a very popular Democrat in Missouri, a state where Democrats generally are popular.
 Expressing the theory was a Hazel Palmer, a stately, 54-year-old attorney. Now she's going to try to prove it by running against Symington in the November general election.
 Miss Palmer, junior partner in the Sedalia law firm of Palmer & Palmer, won her first statewide political race Tuesday. With party organization support, she easily defeated three men for the Republican senatorial nomination.
 She is the first woman ever selected by either party to run for the Senate in Missouri. But Miss Palmer is unawed.
 "It (the political situation) is very encouraging and the state looks fine for my election," she said.

Miss Palmer has been dabbling in politics since, at the age of 7, she accompanied her mother, a Republican committeewoman, on doorbell ringing tours to get out the vote.
 She also can call on an old-time campaigner for advice. Watching with pride as his daughter challenges the formidable Symington will be John W. Palmer Sr., at age 91 the senior partner of Palmer & Palmer. He is a former member of Congress.
 Miss Palmer served three terms as collector of revenue in Pettis County, but her biggest political battle wasn't for public office.
 Just two months ago, the trim and energetic candidate retired as president of the National Assn. of Business and Professional Women, an organization with 175,000 members.

 Does she think Missouri voters are prejudiced against women candidates?
 "No," she replied, "voters respect the good qualities in a woman candidate as quickly as in a man."
 But, she hastened to add, women politicians must be better qualified to receive the initial recognition that is almost automatically accorded to men.
 "People won't vote for just any woman who happens to have her name on the ticket," said the blue-eyed, brown-haired Miss Palmer.

New Title For 'Catfish' Cole

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Klan leader James W. Cole of Marion, S.C., has picked up a new title grand commander of "The Knights of the White Camellia."
 Bill Hendrix, an organization official, said the part-time preacher had headed up the North Carolina branch and was given the added jurisdiction over South Carolina activities yesterday.
 Hendrix called the Knights a social arm of what he termed the National Christian Church.
 Cole, Hendrix and other klansmen were in Tallahassee last week when segregationist John Kasper spoke to a group of followers after his release from federal prison.

Thought She'd Die But To Go To Trial

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—A month ago Connie Nicholas thought she would be dead today by her own hand. But instead she will go to court in an ambulance to face a charge of murdering the wealthy, married sweetheart she was losing to a younger woman.
 The attractive 42-year-old divorcee will be released from the prison ward of General Hospital long enough for a preliminary hearing in the shooting just a week ago of Forrest Teel, 54, executive vice president of the giant Eli Lilly & Co. drug firm.
 Then she will go back to the hospital. She is recovering from effects of 75 sleeping capsules she took after shooting Teel while sitting in his car.
 Prosecutor John G. Tinder is prepared to demand a charge of first-degree murder for what he calls "a deliberate killing, premeditated and conceived in the spirit of malicious revenge."
 Mrs. Nicholas said she shot Teel accidentally during a scuffle after he came out of the apartment of suburban-haired Laura L. Mowrer, a 29-year-old secretary at the Lilly plant.
 "I now know what I must do and it is something that I have given much thought to," she wrote in an unmailed note to Teel dated July 22 and released by police. "Life without you would have no meaning. My only fear is that I might fail."
 Another part of the letter said: "I am still not angry with you, just hurt and heartbroken. I am sorry that you failed me after all this time. . . . We have never had reason to feel cheap about our love for one another."
 Teel, an $80,000-a-year executive with a wife and 14-year-old son, had been going with Mrs. Nicholas for 15 years and paying her apartment rent for the last three years. She said he promised to marry her in 1961 after his son Tommy finished high school.

 Other letters written by the divorcee as early as July 3 to her ex-husband and a woman friend told of her suicide plans and carefully outlined disposal of her possessions and the funeral arrangements — including cremation in a blue negligee and scattering her ashes over the runways of Indianapolis airports.

Macmillan Flies To Athens Today

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan flies to Athens today in a bid to bring peace to Cyprus. After talks with Greek leaders, Macmillan will go on to Turkey.
 Greek demands that Cyprus be allowed to join Greece and Turkish counterdemands for partition of the British island colony between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots have embittered relations among the three North Atlantic Treaty allies.
 Britain last June proposed a seven-year cooling-off period for Cyprus during which Greece and Turkey would share in governing the island. Although Greece rejected the plan, Macmillan probably will bring it up in his talks. Turkey was hostile to the plan but said it could serve as a basis for negotiations.

(AP)—Justice of the Peace Stephen Stoddard discovered how the other side of the bench appears when he appeared before Justice Charles Canfield to face a charge of leaving a vehicle unattended, resulting in a rollaway. Romance Waited For 75 Years MOUNTAIN VIEW, Wyo. (AP)—Seventy five years ago Rob Hamilton met Nora Moss when he stayed at her grandmother's house here.

 Now they're honeymooning. Hamilton, 89, and Mrs. Nora Moss Law, 79, of Carmel, Calif., had a June marriage. The bride moved to California in 1891, but returned to Mountain View early in June to write a historical feature. She met Hamilton again and a whirlwind courtship ended in marriage.

Art Treasure Is Briefly Missing

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Ellen K. Haugen thought the package outside her hotel room door was the inexpensive lamp she had purchased in a Kansas City store. She didn't bother to open it.
 A short while later, Miss Haugen noticed police officers in the hall. C.R. Mayer, a San Francisco art dealer, had reported one of his Persian art treasures missing. Mayer said he had left a package containing a 350-year-old ceramic bowl, valued at $3,000, outside his hotel room following an exhibition at a Kansas City store.
 Miss Haugen volunteered to unwrap her package, which came from the same store. Inside was the missing bowl. Said Miss Haugen, "I'd rather have my $3.98 lamp than that thing."

OPENING A NEW WORLD—Submarine photography is made easy with this new inexpensive underwater camera. Called the Mako Shark, it is made of a tough rubber-resin plastic. The makers claim it will resist damage, even if banged against the cement side of a pool, and water pressures at depths up to 100 feet.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newfeatures

Nowadays, when some one says "C'mon in, the water's fine," they're likely to add "... and bring your camera with you."

For underwater photography is no longer the exclusive domain of the scientist, the professional specialist or the wealthy gadgeteer.

Its upsurge is the result of the rapidly rising interest in skin diving everywhere. What was once a sport for a few adventurous souls in tropical waters only, has spread to enthusiasts near any body of water, large or small, indoors as well as outdoors. It has been taken up by high school and college clubs and is being taught in "Y" and community pools.

Equipment is easier to get, too. Aqualung centers have sprung up in other principal cities of the country besides those on the coasts. Here, underwater photography equipment can be examined and tested with your own camera.

When an aqualung depot is not handy, local camera stores no longer consider it out of this world to order plastic housings and underwater accessories. The very latest camera for underwater shooting is an inexpensive one made from a tough corrosion-proof plastic. Called the Mako Shark, it takes color or black-and-white pictures on standard roll film and costs less than $20.

Till now, economy minded skin divers have used the Voit vinyl plastic bag. This gadget enclosed a small still or movie camera. The camera's controls are felt and worked through the flexible plastic covering with the lens pointed through a glass window.

The contraption is awkward to handle but has proved it is possible to take interesting underwater pictures even with a box camera.

Before tackling underwater photography, however, one should master skin diving technique and fundamentals. Basic equipment consists of goggles, swim fins and a snorkel device for breathing. For deeper dives and longer periods underwater, the next step is an aqualung for breathing and a lightweight skin weight rubber suit for warmth and protection.

Learning should be under the direction of an experienced diver and safety measures should be observed at all times. In outdoor pools, the exposure underwater up to five feet down with the sun shining, is the same as in normal shooting outdoors.

It is best for an underwater photographer to remain motionless at the instant of shooting. He can select a position, swim to it and stay there. The subject should glide slowly by to minimize movement.

All shooting should be close... within 6 to 8 feet. If possible, get backlight on the subject. It adds needed contrast and interest to the pictures.

Though I've gone overboard in this column, I must confess I did it without getting my own feet wet. Strictly a dry land photographer, I like it up here in the air and sunshine. When I mention "depth of focus" about my own pictures, you can be sure it's measured in feet across, not fathoms under.

With Shielding, Can Tour Space

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—A research biologist said today a properly shielded man should be able to travel with no immediate harmful effects through the intense radiation discovered by Explorer IV.

But he would die if exposed to it over a period of time, James W. Osborne, 30, assistant professor in the radiation research laboratory at the State University of Iowa added.

Osborne commented in an interview on the report of a fellow scientist, Carl E. McIlwain, university physicist, on preliminary findings of decoded space radiation information from Explorer IV. McIlwain said the information showed radiation intensifies at around 1,200 miles above South America represented an exposure level of about 10 roentgens per hour.

Osborne said previous studies of animals given that dosage showed the fatal amount ranged from 200 roentgens for guinea pigs to 800 for rats. The fatal dosage for man usually is estimated at 450 roentgens.

"If there are 10 roentgens per hour and if a substantial portion of the cosmic ray is highly penetrating one would expect death to occur if proper shielding could not be provided," he said. "The time of death would be a matter of speculation."

The Traditional Goose Now Dead

COHASSET, Mass. (AP)—Mike the Goose—aloof but beloved town mascot who summered on Cohasset Common Pond—is dead.

Often times Mike would leave his lake post to stroll casually through a nearby shopping center. And one time he was kidnapped for nearly three weeks, being returned only after a newspaper story of the incident.

Residents were considering getting a replacement for the "fixture" on the pond. With Mike gone, a lone white duck was the only bird to uphold the tradition.

Andrew Jackson was the first President of the United States to be elected on a Democratic Party ticket.

Weakening, But Burned Man Sticks To Story

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP)—Growing weaker by the hour, Frank Kierdorf today stuck to his story while skeptical police turned to other sources in their search for reasons why he was turned into a human torch.

State Atty. Gen. Paul L. Adams announced he would quiz Teamsters Union officers in the Pontiac area.

He said he moved into the investigation at the request of Gov. G. Mennen Williams "because there appears to be a tieup with Hoffa-type unionism."

James R. Hoffa of Detroit is international president of the Teamsters Union local at Flint, Mich.

Police in the nearby cities of Flint and Detroit joined the spreading investigation. They called in operators of several dry cleaning establishments that were dynamited recently.

There still was no trace of Kierdorf's uncle, Herman Kierdorf, 68, who helped police worm a story out of his nephew, then vowed revenge for the burning and disappearance.

Kierdorf, burned over 85 per cent of his body, told police that two men took him at gunpoint to a wooded spot, doused him with a fluid and set him afire.

At Detroit, Inspector Glenn Bennett of the police arson squad said a laboratory analysis of the remnants of Kierdorf's clothing showed nothing but water had soaked them.

If Kierdorf had been drenched with a flammable fluid, Bennett said, the laboratory tests would have turned it up.

Rattlers Scared Of Skunk Odor

By RENNIE TAYLOR
AP Science Reporter

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Rattlesnakes can be frightened by the odor of a skunk, one of their natural enemies, says a University of California zoologist.

This points to a possible way of making campsites and homes in snake-infested areas safer, he adds. Tests are under way to determine just how effective the odor can be in scaring off the reptiles.

To test the odor, Dr. Raymond B. Cowles acquired a live rattler, hooked him up to a electrocardiograph and measured his rate of heartbeat before and after exposure to the odor.

The snake also was subjected to the smell of a king snake, another natural enemy. Both the king snake odor and the skunky chemical speeded up his heartbeat, with the chemical only slightly less effective than the king snake smell.

Although the chemical is a synthetic one, its odor is almost identical with that of the skunk, Dr. Cowles said.

The synthetic compound is a mercaptan, which is an alcohol with a little sulfur attached. It is present in many automobile fuels, particularly the premium grades. For years petroleum refiners have been trying to reduce the odor.

Dr. Cowles thinks bits of charcoal soaked in the mercaptan and sprinkled about a campsite or a home would produce enough odor to terrify the rattlers but not enough to annoy the human occupants. That is the basis of the further tests he is making.

Mrs. James Covington received a $102 donation to help her 22-month old child, who has a hole in his heart, have an operation. The donation was from the inmates of La Grange Reformatory, where her husband is serving a one-year sentence. He didn't know his fellow prisoners had taken up the collection.

Two Games In Tourney Tonight

Field Narrows As Tournament Nears Finale

The field in the Northeastern District Fast-Pitch softball tournament is narrowing down now, after three nights of action at Guy Smith Stadium.

Last night, two more teams were eliminated from the nine-team field, as four ball games were played. Maola, of New Bern, and the Greenville Paris and Metals team were beaten and thus knocked out of the tourney. It is a double-elimination affair.

The four ball games finished as follows last night: Carolina Dairies thrashed Greenville Parts and Metals 9-1; the Romancos dumped Coffman's, 6-0; the Graniters topped Pepsi-Cola of Rocky Mount by a 6-0 tally; Carolina Dairies came back to grab victory No. 2 by eliminating Maola, 6-0.

Tonight

Only two games are scheduled for tonight at the stadium. Tomorrow night two more games will be played. On Saturday night—the championship night—only one game will be played unless a playoff is forced. Such a playoff would demand two ball games.

Tonight, the Romancos will battle the Graniters in what is expected to be a smash-up tilt, and the Pepsi-Cola club will meet Carolina Dairies.

The Dairies-Pepsi-Cola game will begin at 7:30 and the Romancos-Graniter tilt will be played at 8:45.

Both Carolina Dairies and Pepsi-Cola have one loss each to their credit and the team which loses tonight will be eliminated from further play. The winner will go on to play tomorrow night in the semi-final rounds.

Both the Romancos and the Graniters are in the winner's bracket, undefeated. The Romancos are the favored club in the tourney, having won it six of the last seven years and being the current defending champions. The Graniters are Greenville City Champions, undefeated in regular-season competition in this city. Speculation before the tournament began, was that these two clubs would clash for the title on Saturday night. Thus far, the tournament has been just about as predicted.

Friday Night

On Friday night, the winner of tonight's Pepsi-Dairies game will return to play Coffman's at 7:30. The winner of that game will hang around to play again at 8:45 against the loser of the Romancos-Graniter tilt. That means that one of the clubs—either the Dairies or Pepsi-Cola will play three games in two nights.

Saturday night will decide the title. The winner of tonight's Romancos-Graniter tilt (title on Friday) will meet the winner of Friday's games for the championship. The winner here will then go to Winston-Salem for the state tournament.

Last night, the games went as follows:

Carolina Dairies defeated Greenville Parts and Metals, 9-1, behind the pitching of Bill McHallich. He gave up only three hits, striking out six and walking none. Getting the hits for the winners were Altman, Tripp, Warren, Moye, Dash, and Sasser.

The Romancos topped Coffman's 6-0. The winning hurler was Clippard. He gave up two hits. The loser was Brantley. Wrenn was the leading hitter for the Romancos.

Graniters leveled the Rocky Mount Pepsi-Cola team 6-0. The winner was Dan Gordon and the loser was Moss. Gordon hurled four-hit ball, struck out six and walked none. Leading hitters for the Graniters were Riddick, Roebuck, Ingram, and Hsidenreich. Ingram blasted a home run in the third inning.

Carolina Dairies came back again to trim Maola of New Bern, 6-0. McHallich and Salem were the pitchers for the winners. Both pitchers hurled close ball and gave up only two hits between them. The loser was Colley. Hall and Altman had homers for the winners.

Duke Addis In Hero Role For Greensboro Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Pitching skill and batting power came in the same package for Greensboro last night, with Duke Addis in the hero role for a 6-3 win over Winston-Salem.

The victory kept the Yanks secure in the Carolina League top spot, but wins by High Point, Thomasville and Danville preserved the tight lineup in the first three places.

The Hi-Toms blanked Raleigh 6-0 while Danville won a close one from Wilson 5-4. In the loop's other game, Burlington defeated Durham 4-1, with Ken Kraynak supplying the scoring punch.

Addis yielded eight hits to Winston-Salem while on the mound. At the plate, he smashed a two-run homer in an eighth inning rally that produced four runs. The Hi-Toms still one game back in second place, won behind

Willey Boosts Milwaukee To Six-Game League Lead

Boone Will Have Stars In His Eyes Friday Afternoon

GREENSBORO—When the East-West High School All-Star football game gets underway tomorrow night (here), Coach Jack Boone of East Carolina College will be watching for three very good reasons.

Three of the All-State gridders taking part in the fracas are scheduled to enter ECC this fall and number up among Boone's footballers for the 1958 season.

The three—Nicky Hilgert, of Elizabeth City; Tommy Matthews, of Hertford; and Dallas Hollingsworth, of Clinton—are reported to be regulars on the East Squad. All three have already expressed themselves in favor of East Carolina College and are, in fact, already listed in Pirate pre-season rosters.

Hilgert is a 180-pound fullback from Elizabeth City who romped through the Northeastern Conference last year with teammate Billy Burgess. The two formed a one-two backfield punch that was regarded one of the most explosive in the state. Burgess was also named All-State and will appear in the Greensboro All-Star affair.

Hollingsworth gained his All-State honors at Clinton where he was a standout as an offensive and defensive guard at 190 pounds. A vicious tackler, Hollingsworth was one of the most wanted young men in the state as a prep star.

Matthews, of Hertford, was a triple-threat halfback during the 1957 high school grid year, weighting in at 185 pounds. He is a powerful runner and a good broken-field man. It is expected that Matthews will see plenty of action in the East backfield tomorrow afternoon.

Four Sluggers In Homerun Battle

By JACK HAND

Associated Press Sports Writer With the New York Yankees leading by 16 games the best race in the American League is for the home run title.

Jackie Jensen of Boston, Mickey Mantle of New York, Roy Sievers of Washington and Bob Cerv of Kansas City are engaged in a four-way fight that could go right down to the wire.

Jensen slammed No. 31 yesterday during Boston's 8-2 romp over Washington in which Pete Runnels of the Red Sox also assumed the batting lead. Runnels took over from Chicago's Billy Goodman with three hits for a .333 average.

Sievers burst into a second-place tie with Mantle by hitting two off Tom Brewer at Boston to make it 30 for the year. The Senators' slugger won both the homer and runs-batted-in titles last season.

Mantle had only one hit, a single, in the Yankees' 3-1 victory over Baltimore. Art Ditmar extended the Orioles' losing streak to 10, longest in the majors this season, with a five-hitter, handing Jack Harshman another hard luck defeat.

Mantle was chased by Plate Umpire John Flaherty for protesting a third strike in the eighth. Chicago's Billy Pierce had Kansas City eating out of his hand most of the night on the way to a 4-2 victory. Cerv, however, hit his 29th homer with a man on base in the first inning. Goodman, had only one hit—a triple—and dropped a point to .332.

A thunderstorm at Detroit washed out the Detroit-Cleveland game with the Indians leading 10 in the third inning.

Milwaukee opened up another full game in the National, boosting its lead to six games by downing Pittsburgh 2-1 on a three-hitter by Carlton Willey. St. Louis overcame a five-run San Francisco lead and edged the second-place Giants 8-7. Robin Roberts

Cris Short's six-hit performance. He issued three walks in the first inning to load the bases, but Raleigh couldn't score. Short had no difficulty in the remaining eight frames.

Wilson twice tied the score with Danville, but couldn't muster the punch to go ahead. Single runs in the first inning left a deadlock until the sixth when a pair of Danville triples put the Leafs out front.

Hal Holland's two-run homer for Wilson brought another tie in the eighth, but Danville put across its winning run in its half of the same inning.

Games tonight: Winston-Salem at Greensboro, Durham at Burlington, Wilson at Danville and Raleigh at Hi-Toms.

WEDNESDAY'S FIGHTS By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS CHICAGO—Sonny Liston, 206, Philadelphia, stopped Wayne Be-thea, 204, New York 1.

Carlton Willey, Milwaukee's smooth-working rookie pitcher, is making a strong bid to succeed teammate Joey Jay as the National League's "player of the month."

The 27-year-old righthander who was farmed out to Wichita at cut-down time now has won six, the last four in succession. As a result, the Braves boast a six-game lead, their biggest bulge of the season.

Willey threw a three-hitter at Pittsburgh last night for a 2-1 victory. While he was dropping the third-place Pirates eight games off the pace, the San Francisco Giants were dropping an 8-7 decision in St. Louis. The Giants blew a 5-0 lead and just missed in the ninth when Jim Brosnan choked off a rally.

Robin Roberts allowed three home runs but still managed an 8-5 victory over Cincinnati, while Los Angeles took a 5-2 triumph at Chicago.

Stan Williams was the winner over Johnny Briggs, although he needed help from Clem Labine in the sixth.

In the American League, the New York Yankees continued to roll along, knocking off Baltimore 3-1 on Art Ditmar's five-hitter.

Boston's Tom Brewer turned back Washington with three hits, 8-2, while Jackie Jensen hit his 31st homer. Roy Sievers had two homers for the Senators, boosting his season total to 30 and a tie with the Yanks' Mickey Mantle. Billy Pierce won his 11th with a six-hitter against Kansas City 4-2. The Cleveland-Detroit game was postponed by rain.

Stan Musial climbed into a tie with idle Richie Ashburn of Philadelphia for the National batting lead at .343, driving in three runs for the Cards.

Chuck Stobbs, third St. Louis pitcher, tamed the Giants after Bob Mabe and Bill Wight failed. Stobbs won his first as a National League pitcher on five scoreless innings before he had to leave the game because of a blister. Don Johnson was the loser.

Semi-Pro Field Narrowed Down To Four Clubs

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP)—The field has been narrowed to four teams in the State Semipro baseball tournament here. Los Angeles to a 5-2 verdict over Chicago.

As a result of the day's action in the National, Musial moved up to .343 with two hits tying idle Richie Ashburn of Philadelphia for the batting lead. Ashburn was out of action with a bad cold.

Brewer turned in a brilliant job for the Red Sox with a three-hitter. He didn't allow a hit until Sievers homered with two out in the sixth. Sievers hit his second of the day leading off the ninth.

Jensen, Frank Malzone and Ted Lepcio were Boston's home run hitters and Ted Williams tripled to drive in his 1,700th run. His total bases now stand at 4,501.

Pierce helped himself with a fifth-inning single and rode home on the first of Luis Aparicio's two triples, breaking a 2-2 tie.

All-Star Teams Being Settled

GREENSBORO (AP)—East and West coaches checked through a wealth of talent today trying to decide on starting lineups for the 10th annual North Carolina High School All-Star football game here tomorrow night.

Both squads were in top shape as they ran through a final light drill.

Fayetteville's Joe Goodrich suffered a foot injury earlier this week but the husky tackle is expected to be ready by gametime.

The game is a final program highlight of the annual North Carolina Coaching Clinic.

Nearly 500 high school coaches sat in on more lectures today by Andy Gustafson and his staff from the University of Miami.

Gustafson is devoting a lot of his time to discussing his famous "Miami drive series." He described it as "a combination of the best points of the split-T and the 'belly series.'"

The system, he added, hasn't affected Miami's drawing power. "Every year since 1950," he said, "we have led the South in home football attendance. This will be my 11th season as head coach at Miami and our smallest home crowd was 27,000."

Liston Wants Patterson

CHICAGO (AP)—Piston-punching Sonny Liston's handlers hollered for a match with heavy-weight champion Floyd Patterson and blitzed Wayne Be-thea's camp yelled about a "lobbing" after a 69-second Chicago Stadium bout last night.

Liston hammered a quick TKO over Be-thea in a nationally-televised match for his 12th consecutive victory and 19th in 20 pro fights.

Vone, who only has a second's license in Illinois, repeated the same statement to reporters in the dressing room after the fight.

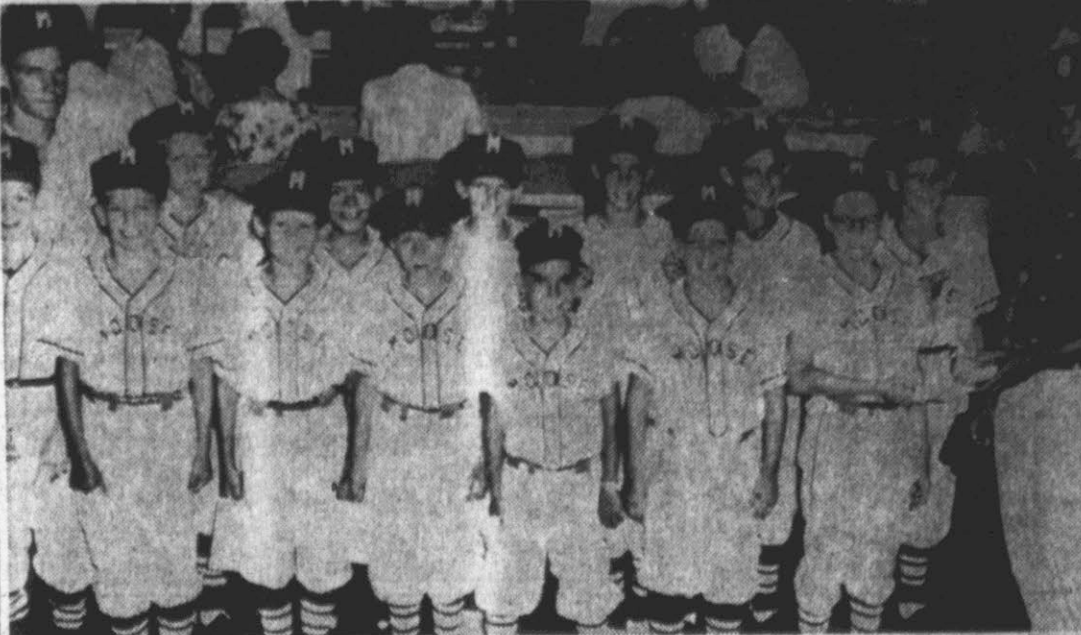

Frank Gilmer, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, said he would wait to see a printed version of Vone's charge before summoning him for an official explanation.

Elliott Says 3:50 Mile Will Come In Two Years

ECC Middle Force

WHEN the 1958 grid season opens, ECC should be strong up the middle with veterans Lynn Barnett, George Turner, and James Speight in the key positions. The team has depth and experience at all three posts. ECC drill opens September 1st (Reflector photo)

By JOHN FARROW DUBLIN, Ireland (AP)—Aussie trillian Herb Elliott, with a fabulous record mile time of 3:54.5 as his authority, sat back today and told the world:

"I think a 3:50 mile could come within a couple of years."

The 20-year-old Aussie quickly added, "Of course we shall need track conditions like the ones we had last night in Dublin—conditions as near to perfect as any runner could want."

It was at Dublin's Santry Stadium that Elliott ran his eighth sub 4-minute mile—with the most fantastic timing ever.

Elliott's time of 3:54.5 is one that will stand as a mile record for years and years," said British sports experts. "He clipped three and a half seconds off John Landy's official world mark."

The first five men in Elliott's record-breaking mile smashed 4 minutes—the first time in history that such a thing had happened.

Three did it in 1955 in London when Laslo Tabori of Hungary was timed in 3:59. Four were under 4 minutes in 1957 when England's Derek Ibbotson hit 3:57.2—a controversial clocking as the race was placed.

Here are the first five placings in the historic Dublin mile: (1) Elliott, 3:54.5. (2) Merv Lincoln, Australia, 3:55.9. (3) Ron Delany, Ireland and Villanova, Philadelphia, 3:57.5. (4) Murray Halberg, New Zealand, 3:57.5. (5) Albert Thomas, Australia, 3:58.6.

The official world mark is 3:58 set by Australia's John Landy at Tarku, Finland, June 21, 1954.

Ibbotson's 3:57.2 at London's White City Stadium July 19, 1957, has not been ratified because of a pacing controversy.

Elliott has all the power and energy of a great miler. He got them through an unusual diet and method of training. His training diet consists of oats, nuts, raisins, dried fruits and diced bananas. Through the winter his training schedule calls for runs and climbs on the rugged hills around Portcrae, some 60 miles south of Melbourne.

Grocers Offer Variety Of Specials

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. The nation's supermarkets and neighborhood grocery stores offer a variety of special attractions this weekend as they hopefully await a break in the wholesale meat market. Some are trying to tempt the budget-conscious housewife with an old-line enemy of the high cost of living, chuck roast or steak. Others offer round roast or steak. The special prices are attractive by current standards, but no bargain judged by the standards of a few short years ago. Frying and roasting chickens, hams and turkeys also are the weekly special in a few stores. Egg prices advanced 1 to 4 cents

New Farm Legislation 'Dead' This Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — New farm legislation appears dead for this session of Congress. The death sentence was pronounced yesterday by Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas in the wake of the second crushing setback suffered by agricultural legislation this year, and third during this Congress. "We have been up and down this hill as many times as I care to go this year," Rayburn declared. His pronouncement followed House defeat of a new farm bill going far in the direction of lower price supports sought by Secretary of Agriculture Benson, but opposed by a majority of House Republicans on the showdown vote yesterday. Republican strategists had gambled in an all-or-nothing bid for House acceptance of a Senate-passed bill. The Senate bill, backed by Benson and GOP leaders, went further in reducing farm price supports than the House version. It also junked the 25-year-old parity concept of calculating supports in favor of a new system based on a three-year average of market prices. The farm bill came to the House floor yesterday under take-it-or-leave-it procedure requiring a two-thirds vote for passage. The vote was 210-186, a majority, but still 54 votes short of the required two-thirds. Following the House vote, Republican leader Joseph W. Martin Jr., of Massachusetts called for reconsideration of the bill under more liberal voting procedures that would permit substitution of the Senate version. Rayburn's statement, however, appeared to have foreclosed that action. Chairman Harold Cooley (D-NC) of the Agriculture Committee joined Rayburn in opposing any further action. Without new farm legislation, farmers face acreage cuts under the existing program if they want price supports. Cotton is slated to drop from 17,200,000 acres to 14,700,000 acres, and rice to around 1,100,000 acres or about 40 per cent under this year's allotment. Senate and House bills would have pegged cotton acreage at 16 million acres and rice at the 1958 level. While the national cotton allotment will drop in 1959, the level of price supports could also go as high as 9 per cent of parity under the support formula. The level this year is around 81 per cent.

Polish Seaman Seeking Asylum

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Federal District Judge Herbert Christenberry will listen today to a Polish seaman's plea for political asylum in the United States. Christenberry will decide whether Richard Eibel, 22, should be given his freedom long enough to continue his fight to stay in this country. Lawyers hired by Eibel's cousin, Leo Marmor, 59, of St. Louis, arranged the hearings, originally set for yesterday, but postponed at the request of Marmor's lawyers. Eibel jumped ship two weeks ago in New York and turned himself in at Boston asking political asylum. He was taken back aboard for a voyage to Mobile, Ala., where immigration officers interviewed him and decided he was not a legitimate political refugee. Later, when the ship reached Galveston, Tex., Eibel denied in an interview that he had asked for asylum. The Immigration Service ordered Eibel to remain aboard his freighter, the Frederick Chopin, and returned to Poland. Officials said his case was considered and it was decided he is not an escapee nor a political refugee. Eibel left the ship yesterday after it docked in New Orleans. He pleaded with his cousin to help. He told Marmor, "I cannot return to Poland. It is prison for me sure. Don't send me back."

Still Had Dime Clutched In Hand

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Flores R. Torres, 10, asked his father for permission to skip lunch yesterday and buy ice cream instead. His father reproved him gently. But the boy, who had just recovered from a kidney ailment, was a favorite, and the older Torres gave in grudgingly. "This is the last dime I'm going to give you for ice cream," he said. Flores, knowing that his father was not serious, rode off happily on his bike. Twenty minutes later he was dead, crushed under the rear wheels of a tractor-trailer. Police who found the boy said he still had the dime clutched tightly in his hand. The Susquehanna Trail crosses the Appalachian Mountains in Pennsylvania and the Gettysburg battlefield.

Mayor Fatally Shot In Ambush

SARALAND, Ala. (AP)—Mayor O.L. Driver was fatally shot from ambush in the driveway of his home last night. Officers said an assailant apparently waited in a clump of bushes until Driver, returning from work, pulled into his driveway. The 56-year-old mayor was shot with what officers believed to be buckshot from close range through the rear window of his car.

FIRST PENSION FOR VETERAN, 112—John Salling, 112-year-old Confederate veteran of the Civil War, receives his first government pension check for $135.45 at his home in Slant, Va. The check is presented by Col. Gene A. Robens, manager of the regional Veterans Administration office in Roanoke, Va. Others in the picture are Salling's great granddaughter, Linda Jean Hawkins, 11, and his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. McCamy. Salling is one of the two surviving veterans of the Civil War. (AP Wirephoto)

Labels, Lines Befuddling Ideas About Middle East

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
American thinking on the Middle East has been befuddled by labels and lines.

The result is that on the verge of a fateful U. N. Assembly meeting United States policy in the Arab East seems a mass of confusion.

The hour is late, but American policy still can profit by taking a candid look at its own weaknesses. If the United States fails to do this, the sense of frustration behind many Arab actions conceivably can bring about a situation with grave consequences for Western Europe.

The waves of nationalism and Nasserism are not as such the main U. S. concern. It is rather how to prevent these forces from leading to a clear Soviet breakthrough. And how to prevent the Soviets from capitalizing on an unending turmoil to the extent that one day they can hope for a commanding influence over the area's resources.

For years American policy makers seemed to approach the Middle East as if they were dealing with the practical-minded citizens of West Germany.

The United States seemed to see no issue but communism and anti-communism. Anything not totally down the line for U. S. policy in the Middle East became anti-Western.

For years the United States, captivated by the notion that hypothetical military lines were protection against violent ideas, attempted to push Arab countries into military pacts. The attempts failed.

The United States then helped put together an agreement called the Baghdad Pact, ironically taking its name from a city where it was opposed by probably 90 per cent of the literate population.

This pact was supposed to be a bulwark against communism, but Arab nationalists saw it, an excuse to perpetuate Western military power in the Arab world.

Invariably the United States and Britain turned up on the side of unpopular men, causes and regimes. To the United States, Nuri Said of Iraq was pro-Western. Therefore he deserved all-out support. To many Arabs, Nuri Said was a onetime heroic Arab nationalist leader who surrendered his right to leadership by becoming a creature of British policy. American policy refused to face up to the fact that Nuri's dictatorship was opposed by an overwhelming majority of Iraq's literate population.

In Jordan, young King Hussein ruled a country created by the British arbitrarily from Arab territory—a strange little country with no real reason for being; Hussein was "anti-Communist." Therefore he was entitled to all-out American support.

Only British-American support keeps the courageous young King alive.

The United States has invested heavily in Hussein—about 130 million dollars. All this was committed since 1953, and more than half of it since the April 1957 crisis. The cost is mounting. To protect the shaky investment, the United States must spend more and more.

American diplomacy permitted itself to be frightened by Arab nationalism and panicked by the threat of communism. This produced a doctrine purporting to defend the Arabs against the threat of Communist military attack. But no military attack seemed in prospect while the Communists were making strides with their political and economic infiltration.

When an internal political fight between out and ins broke out in Lebanon, U. S. policy immediately professed to see pro-Western and anti-Western outlines in it. It did not start that way. Indeed, much of the rebel opposition was definitely anti-Communist and friendly to the West.

The policy tended to force the rebels more and more into attitudes inimical to the West. Lacking any understanding from Washington, or London, they sought support from Abdel Nasser and got it—while the Soviets cheered on the sidelines. Before the rebellion reached its critical stage, it had taken on a definite Nasserist tinge.

Once again, American policy hitched itself to a personality rather than to a principle. The United States cast its lot with President Camille Chamoun, whom the opposition suspected of wanting to perpetuate himself in office.

By the time the Iraqi explosion came there seemed little for the United States and Britain to do but intervene with force in Lebanon and Jordan. But for British intervention in Jordan, Hussein likely would have shared the fate of his slain cousin, Faisal of Iraq. Without American intervention in Lebanon, it is likely the Iraqi eruption would have produced a shot in the arm for a rebel push to overthrow Chamoun by force.

There is some thought that the intervention may have forestalled a Soviet plan to infiltrate "volunteers" into Lebanon from the Moslem Soviet areas of Central Asia. But the need for intervention, with its melancholy parallels to the Soviet action in Hungary, arose in part at least as the result of a long series of American miscalculations. And it is questionable if intervention served American policy in the long run.

Good Show Always Draws An Audience Says Singer

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—If you have a really good television show, you'll get an audience," says Andy Williams.

"It doesn't matter what night your show is, or what time or what network or whether you form your own network."

Well, Williams has a good show as the summer replacement for Pat Boone and the mail indicates he's attracting a large audience of all ages.

The Williams Show has a relatively low budget. It doesn't operate on the theory that it became big name guest stars to hold its audience. In Williams' words, "We mainly just try to do good songs, standard songs that people enjoy."

Williams has the low-keyed manner of Perry Como and he doesn't dish the hokum some performers seem to think is the substance of an interview.

Example: You grow mighty weary of hearing performers complain about the weekly grind of a TV show. But Williams refreshingly remarks. "I'm lazy, and you don't have to work too hard in television. You have to think hard. That is, you must concentrate on absolute sincerity when you're singing a song. Because that close-up camera never lies. The television audience is smart. It knows immediately whether you believe in what you're doing or whether you're faking it—and when you fake you're dead."

About five years ago a quartet Williams was singing in broke up and he went it alone. He hit with recordings and then became a featured singer for 2½ years with Steve Allen.

"In a television show," says Williams, "you seldom know how well it's going. You're working to an inanimate thing. Cameras and directors do half the work for you. Sometimes the less you do the better. Sometimes it seems to me I'm just standing there doing nothing. Then I see the kinescope afterwards and realize a lot has been happening. Other people have been working for me."

Democrats Will Pick Candidates In Tennessee

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Tennessee Democrats nominate a U. S. senator and a governor today, capping the hardest fought primary race in recent years.

The Senate contest was between incumbent Albert Gore, regarded in his home state as a middle-of-the-roader, and Prentice Cooper, a three-term former governor and political conservative.

Four candidates sought the four year term as governor. Gov. Frank Clement was ineligible for re-election. The race developed few issues other than the Clement administration's record.

Critics blasted Clement's road program, his administration cutting in half the Tennessee Education Assn. pay raise demand last year, and what they called his extravagance in office. They accused him of trying to set up a political machine.

Buford Ellington, who served as agriculture commissioner for nearly two terms in the Clement Cabinet, had the governor's endorsement. Opposing him were Mayor Edmund Orgill of Memphis, Circuit Judge Andrew T. Taylor of Jackson and State Sen. Clifford Allen of Nashville.

Tennessee has no runoff primary. In case no candidate receives a majority vote, so the high man in today's balloting wins the nomination—which is equivalent to election in this Democratic state.

All nine of Tennessee's congressmen—two Republicans and seven Democrats—sought renomination. Six were unopposed.

In addition, voters will decide if a constitutional convention should be called to consider lowering the voting age to 18.

Cooper flailed away at Gore's failure to sign the Southern Manifesto and for supporting the civil rights bill last year. The former ambassador to Peru also accused Gore of supporting a global giveaway program.

The Southern Manifesto was a document signed by 19 Southern senators criticizing the U. S. Supreme Court's 1954 school desegregation decision.

Gore, who won his Senate seat in 1952 by defeating the late Sen. Kenneth McKellar defended his record.

The Old Bills As Good As Silver

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP)—Waukeganites sprung several $20 bills on local bankers and asked: "Is it good with or without the 'The' in 'The White House' underneath the picture?"

A few merchants turned down bills not carrying the word "The." But the bankers said both bills were as good as gold.

The bill with "The White House" on it is a Johnny-come-lately as currency goes. It became standard on the $20 bill immediately after President Truman added the balcony on the White House. Prior to this, "White House" was standard.

KING-SIZE TEST

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission plans to set off a king-size underground atomic explosion next summer 1,200 feet under a Carlsbad salt flat. The 10-kiloton bomb will be nearly six times larger than that used in previous underground explosions.

Buddhist Monk In U.S. School

By MARTY SUTPHIN
ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—Ever hear of a college boy who doesn't smoke or drink, won't even shake hands with girls and spends money only for books and haircuts? There's one at St. John's. He's Phra Maha Prasiddh Kittisiddho, the first Buddhist monk from Thailand ever to study in America.

Some leaders in his order objected to the idea of Prasiddh studying in the United States. They were afraid he wouldn't be able to follow the 227 rules of his faith on an American college campus.

Some of those rules: Never touch a woman, eat only one meal a day, never handle money and avoid all worldly pleasures.

But during a year at St. John's College, the 28-year-old monk found he could practice his religion freely.

And he believes reports on his progress being sent back to Bangkok.

REAL SPARTAN—Phra Maha Prasiddh Kittisiddho doesn't permit college ways to disrupt his life as a Buddhist monk.

kok will open the way for other Buddhist monks to study in America.

Prasiddh has resisted all American ways. He didn't even abandon his yellow toga and open sandals during last winter's snow storms.

One rule of Buddha he was forced to break was the one about money. But he handled it infrequently—to purchase books or on monthly visits to the barber shop to have his hair cropped as short as possible.

Those barber shop visits were about his only trips off campus. He usually kept to his room, studying, meditating or praying.

His college schedule did not interfere with his sunrise and sunset devotions, and the only special arrangement necessary was an 11 a.m. meal—the monk's one major meal had to be eaten before noon.

Prasiddh's tuition is provided by the Asian Foundation. The young monk had learned English before coming to America and did well with the liberal arts courses at St. John's.

But he has decided to give up the system of "great books" and seminars used at St. John's and continue his studies at a college with a more conventional curriculum.

He plans to transfer to American University in Washington and concentrate on the study of religions.

When he returns to the temples of Thailand he will teach his 300 fellow monks about other religions and about Western civilization and philosophy.

Plan Action For Radioactivity

RALEIGH (AP)—Teamwork of federal, state and local officials would be required to assure protection in the event of accidents involving radioactive materials.

Steps to follow should such an accident occur in North Carolina were discussed yesterday at a meeting of state and local leaders with representatives of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's Savannah River, S.C., plant.

Gov. Hodges and heads of state agencies were joined by representatives of statewide law enforcement officers' associations at the luncheon and conference at North Carolina State College. The session was held on the 13th anniversary of the dropping of the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan.

Increasing peacetime use of atomic energy, requiring more frequent transportation of radioactive materials, has raised the chances of radiation hazards, said Manager R. C. Blair of the Savannah River operations office.

The Atomic Energy Commission and other agencies have surrounded handling of radioactive material with elaborate safeguards, he stressed. At the same time, Blair said preparations must be made to cope with the possibility of radiation incidents.

A radiological assistance plan set up by the Atomic Energy Commission calls for a team of radiation safety experts at the Savannah River plant to be ready to give aid to local and state officials in South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Inflation Here
 Now, Housewife
 Will Tell You

Editor's Note — Is the stock market right about more inflation being a sure thing? How much more? What can be done about it? In the following article, first in a series of three, Sam Dawson, AP business news analyst, discusses the impact on the consumer.

By SAM DAWSON
 AP Business News Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) — Ask the housewife and she'll tell you more inflation is already here.

She isn't talking about what she doesn't buy — the higher priced ton of steel or pound of copper. She's talking about what the family pays out — the higher prices for meat, the increased cost of her husband's getting to work, the bigger bills for keeping the children healthy, the latest rent boost.

Ask the businessman and he'll tell you more inflation is a real threat. He's talking about the increases in the price of metals and other basic materials, the higher wage scales — all pushing him toward raising his prices to you.

Ask the economist and he'll tell you more inflation isn't a sure thing yet but a tossup.

He concedes the threat from the increase in the money supply which seems sure as the government borrows more and more from the commercial banks. But he also notes that while there's likely to be too much money around, there aren't too few goods for it to chase — the capacity to make more goods is already in place waiting for demand to call it into production.

Inflation is no economic theory for the consumer. It hits him where he lives. For him it simply means that the cost of living goes up.

If more inflation is really coming for sure, your present income won't buy as much. If inflation is big enough, your income won't buy what you need, let alone what you'd like to have if you could.

If you're lucky enough to get your income boosted along with the cost of living, you're likely to end up in the same old rut anyway — just keeping even with what in time can become a losing game.

For the consumer a new threat of inflation comes on top of what looks bad enough right now. By official figures what $1 would buy 10 years ago and $1.20 would buy last year, it takes $1.24 to buy now. If you talk about what a buck would buy in 1939 you have to talk now about what $2 will buy.

Food prices average 8 per cent higher than last year. The Agriculture Department says 60 per cent of the increase is due to farmers' getting higher prices and 40 per cent to marketing concerns' getting more. Meat prices seem high in the store. Well, live hogs are bringing 11 per cent more now than last summer; beef on the hoof 22 per cent more.

But food prices are moved up or down as much by weather and marketing problems as by pure monetary inflation. It's in other fields that the consumer may be hurt next.

The recession didn't bring the general drop in prices that many expected, so any new inflation would start from a high level.

The average consumer spends 14 per cent of his income on durable goods. Their average price reached a record high in November 1957 at 110.9 per cent of the 1947-49 average, and it slipped back only to 109.5 per cent in June — before the rise in metal prices which bring the new threat.

Soft goods prices reached a peak last November at 117.4 per cent of the 1947-49 average and slipped only to 116.5 per cent by this June.

Food prices are today's villain. These seem likely to ease in the months ahead. But standing in the wings are threatening rises in other prices now — in durables, and in the cost of the services you've come to demand.

And if monetary inflation really takes hold, prices could rise all along the line.

Tomorrow: What will more inflation do to business and its recovery?

Legal Pleas Exhausted, Slated To Die Tonight

OSISING, N.Y. (AP) — John Angelo LaMarca, his legal pleas exhausted in the kidnap-killing of little Peter Weinberger, is scheduled to die tonight in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair.

The 33-year-old LaMarca's final hope is last-minute action by Gov. Averell Harriman. Harriman has not acted on a mercy plea which LaMarca made about a year ago. But the governor could step in any time before the execution.

At New Haven, Conn., yesterday Judge Carrol C. Hincks of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals turned down a final move by defense counsel.

LaMarca, father of two young children, snatched 33-day-old Peter from his carriage outside the Weinberger's Westbury, N.Y., home July 4, 1956. Ransom notes became a grim mockery when it was learned that LaMarca, panicking, left the baby to die in a lonely, bright and honey-suckle patch the second day of the kidnaping. He was not arrested until Aug. 23.

At his trial, LaMarca, a mechanic, told of being motivated by a need for money to get out of debt, of snatching the baby on impulse. A defense contention that he was insane at the time fell flat with a jury of fathers, which convicted him Dec. 7, 1956, without recommending mercy.

LaMarca's appeals extended all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court. After yesterday's turndown, the sixth in nearly two years, his lawyer, Nancy Carley, said no legal recourse remains.

LaMarca's wife Donna, 33, said: "I just can't believe my husband will die. How can they send an insane man to the chair? No man who is a father can let another child die unless he was crazy."

Mrs. LaMarca told of taking the children to see their father at Sing Sing Sunday. "They got along fine," she said. "He told them to do well in school and take care of me. Vivian is too young to understand what's going on, but Vincent knows what's happening."

An Artist Can Work, And Play, Too: Heifetz

By BOB THOMAS
AP Motion Picture Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—On the issue of whether a boy should stay indoors and study the violin or be out playing with the other kids, Jascha Heifetz offers this suggestion:

"Why can't he study the violin and play outside as well? The trouble today is that there is too much play. Everything is too easy. It is the same as in the new automobiles with their power steering and power everything. There is little left for the driver to do."

"There is plenty of time in life to play and also to work. In the old country, we managed it. We worked six days a week. And on the seventh day, we had to make an accounting of what we had accomplished the other six."

These comments helped to explain why the violin virtuoso is undertaking to teach his ideas of discipline and technique to a class of students for the first time in his life. From October to January, he will have twice-weekly sessions with eight young violinists and 10 auditors in the extension division of UCLA.

"There will be no curricula, no grades or anything like that," Heifetz explained at his hilltop home in Beverly Hills. "I will simply try to tell the students the tricks and methods I have learned over the years."

"They will all be advanced students and even the auditors must be players; I wouldn't have the patience to teach beginners. I have done some coaching with individual players in the past and have found the experience gratifying. This is the first time that I have undertaken a class. I guess it is because of my old teacher. Once he pointed at me and said, 'You were meant to teach.' I suppose I am obeying him now."

Heifetz was earnest about the role of art in the world today.

"The government is finally realizing the power that artists can have in making friends for our country abroad," he said. "Art speaks for itself; if it is good, it is internationally recognized."

"But merely sending our artists to foreign countries is only the first step. More needs to be done. There is a head in the government for everything else—there should be one for art."

"The government must take steps to help and encourage artists. Look what happened in the days of the WPA or PWA or whatever it was. Then the government stepped in to support artists who could not make a living. They were able to continue writing, painting and playing music. And what a rich outpouring of art resulted because of it!"

Sure Enough, A Penny Was Inside

KANSAS CITY (AP)—The envelope bore an old 6-cent air mail stamp and the notation, in feminine handwriting: "There's a penny inside to pay the extra postage."

Sure enough, Kansas City postal clerks said, the coin could be felt through the envelope.

They sent the letter on to its destination, stamped "Postage due."

1959 Pageant Will Be Hertford Project

By F. ROY JOHNSON
Aheskie-Murfreesboro Roanoke-Chowan News

Winston, N.C. (AP)—Hertford County is preparing to launch a venture which may prove an exciting adventure for many of its citizens. When 1959 and the county's second centennial year rounds the corner the curtain will rise on an outdoor waterside pageant which will portray the rich contributions the area has made to North Carolina's history, culture and wealth.

It may well prove to be an adventure, for it will be written and produced in its entirety by local talent.

Russell P. Martin of Aheskie is directing the work to enlist assistance of people of the county's six townships and four towns. He says he has found a well balanced source of talent available for promotion, writing and staging.

He says the pageant will be no pre-cut affair playing up the ancestral parade of 20 decades. It instead will be a series of stories sparked with mystery, romance and industry which form the main links in the area's beginning and growth.

ferred one, and the dugout canoe carried travelers up to 50 miles a day. Peiguars, a widened canoe made by fitting boards down the middle, became the important vehicle for transportation of light cargoes. But some of the settlers made their way into Carolina on rafts of logs. Bits of record and tradition disclose that numerous families built their rafts on the Blackwater River some 30 miles west of Jamestown in Surry County, Va. They loaded on their personal belongings and livestock and floated down that stream to the Chowan River and oftentimes into Albemarle Sound. "Those with herds of livestock drove them overland."

After the foundation period, the pageant story will follow through with the county's growth and development. It will pay tribute to the heroes of the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. It will recognize its statesmen and other men who rose to great stature in the state and nation.

"It is quite an ambitious undertaking," Martin says; but he believes Hertford County has the story and the talent with which to produce a drama of general appeal.

Martin observes Hertford County's history is the same as that of North Carolina. The land area is a part of the original Albemarle County, later of Bertie Precinct and Bertie and Northampton counties.

This is an area where many of the early landmarks still stand. The Chowan River where cypress and gum trees seem to wade out onto the mud flats still retains its original natural beauty. Numerous colonial homes remain well preserved in Murfreesboro and neighboring communities.

The recorded story begins in 1585 when the English sailed inland from Roanoke Island and up the Chowan River and made a report on the friendly reception by Menato, an old Chowan Indian king, and his kingdom.

It picks up again in 1608 with some light on the mystery of the lost colonists who settled on Roanoke Island. Capt. John Smith of the Jamestown settlement quoted an Indian as saying "certain men . . . clothed like me" were at Ahanoak. Smith sent an expedition to investigate but for an unknown reason the explorers were "denied by the savages speech with them."

The Tuscaroras struck from the south in 1711 and their bloodthirsty warriors butchered settlers by the scores as they moved from plantation to plantation.

The Hertford area became the principal issue in the 40-year-long dividing line dispute between North Carolina and Virginia settling in 1711.

Friendly relations soon turned into hostility and the very life of the new colony was threatened by the Chowanoke War of 1675, but the Indians were defeated and put in a reservation along Bennett's Creek.
