Who Attempts Novel

DR. ELIZABETH UTTERBACK . . . is adding a novel to her collection of works which include short stories and poems. (Photo by Martha Pierce)

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Woman's Writer

Giving to others through creative writing, sharing a love of music with many—these keys to successful living mark the life of Dr. Elizabeth Utterback, president of the local American Association of University Women.

Dr. Utterback lists creative writing as one of her many hobbies and she has written about 100 short stories and poems. She is currently writing a novel.

"Bird on Momma's Hat," a humorous short story by Dr. Utterback, will appear in "Progressive Farmer" in September. About 15 of her short stories have been published in "Progressive Farmer" and they will soon be compiled in a book of short stories.

According to Dr. Utterback, one of the most important things to keep in mind when writing is to write about people and incidents you really know something about.

"I begin by taking some little incident I know of, or one someone has told me about," she notes.

The theater is one of the loves of Dr. Utterback. She makes trips to New York City several times a year to see the new plays and is co-producer of a college production each year. Her venture abroad last summer to attend Birmingham University in Stratford, England, gave her an opportunity to see all of the plays given in Stratford and to meet the actors and actresses.

Although not a sports fan, Dr. Utterback has taught English to juniors and seniors and English Literature to prospective teachers. Her teaching career has also taken her through the classrooms of Columbia University and Brooklyn College.

It is a sincere belief of Dr. Utterback that people who teach should live in different places so that they may have a more varied background.

Dr. Utterback received her A. B. degree from Western Kentucky State College, her M. A. from George Peabody, and her Doctorate from Columbia University.

"I think the people in Greenville are lovely," describes this adaptable authoress who has liked every place she has ever lived.

Promotes Woman's Status

"I'm awfully pleased that East Carolina College has been recognized by the American Association of University Women," comments Dr. Utterback. "Now women graduates of E.C.C. can join the A.A.U.W."

Only 300 schools in America have been chosen as accredited by the A.A.U.W. The only requirement for membership into the club is that a person be graduated from an accredited university.

Promoting woman's status in our educational system is the purpose of the A.A.U.W. and to carry out their part, Greenville's club awards $650 each year to an outstanding woman student of E.C.C. for further study.

Money for this annual project is made by the children's play put on for about 2000 county children each year.

They're Not Concerned With Costs

It is fairly obvious now that at least a few Superior Court judges in North Carolina are beginning a campaign to get all the courtrooms in the state air conditioned.

How far they get with the move, and what tactics they use to accomplish their goal remains to be seen.

A few weeks ago in Hertford County Judge W. J. Bundy of Greenville took to task the commissioners of that county for not providing an air conditioned courtroom. A few days ago Judge W. H. S. Burgwyn, holding court in Moore County, denounced the commissioners of that county for not providing air conditioning in the courtroom.

Judge Burgwyn went so far as to order the County Commissioners of Moore County summoned for jury with the declaration: "This place needs air conditioning and they ought to know it. They can come and suffer the heat and noise and gnats right along with the rest of us."

Later, when he learned two of the commissioners were out of town, the judge changed his mind about calling the commissioners for jurors.

He didn't hesitate, however, to take a poke at county commissioners in general, by declaring them "too chinchee to spend a few dollars" for air conditioning courtrooms.

Maybe that's the way for judges to get their courtrooms air conditioned. Maybe if they raise enough Cain with enough County Commissioners they'll get the job done.

It should be remembered, however, that most courtrooms in Eastern North Carolina counties are used at most only a few weeks during the really hot months of the year because no terms of court are scheduled during the busy farming season.

Why spent tax dollars for something that will be used so seldom? Does one week of Superior Court during the hot months justify the spending of several thousands of taxpayers' money for air conditioning the courtroom?

County Commissioners are responsible to the people of their respective counties to administer public money in a prudent manner, guarding against waste of taxpayers' money, and getting value received for the people for every dollar spent. On top of that, the majority of county governments in North Carolina already are hard pressed to meet necessary expenses year after year without pushing tax rates out of sight.

While the judges might want air conditioned courtrooms, they should be realistic about the matter. Air Conditioned courtrooms in many cases would amount to seldom-used luxuries that the counties could ill afford.

Pitt Deeply Affected By Reciprocal Trade

Extension of the reciprocal trade legislation for another four years continues in the hands of the President a measure that for the past 24 years has proved effective in stimulating the American economy through favorable trade agreements with foreign nations.

Although the bill was highly controversial when it first went to Congress, the compromise which has worked out between the houses of Congress will prove an effective measure for continuing the export of millions of dollars worth of American goods annually to other nations.

The reciprocal trade agreements have been important to many individuals in the United States who considered themselves far removed from export trade and foreign markets. Over the years, for example, reciprocal trade agreements have been of utmost importance to tobacco farmers of Eastern North Carolina.

Negotiations permitted by the legislation have opened a number of foreign markets to American flue-cured tobacco. Without reciprocal trade agreements, the export of flue-cured tobacco would have been curtailed much more sharply than has been the case since World War II.

Continuation of foreign sales of American tobacco is of utmost importance to tobacco growers of this section. Extension of the reciprocal trade agreements in itself will not guarantee future sales of U.S. tobacco abroad, but failure to extend the agreements would surely have reduced foreign sales.

Though Pitt County may consider itself far removed from reciprocal trade agreements and foreign trade, the existence of a reciprocal trade program for the United States during the past 24 years has been a major factor in the tobacco economy of this county. Continuation of the program in the years to come will likewise have a healthy influence on the local economy.

Progress Story Like Fairy Tale

By LYNN NISBET

MENTAL HEALTH — The story of the progress in the care and treatment of mental patients in North Carolina reads almost like a fairy tale. Cold statistics cannot present the picture, but the figures are impressive.

The State maintains four big hospitals for the treatment of the mentally ill and three training schools for mentally defective or retarded, all under supervision of the State Hospitals board of Control.

Total dollar value of these properties or the aggregate cash investment for capital improvements since the hospital at Raleigh was first opened a century ago cannot be accurately determined. Since January 1, 1947, when the big renovation program was undertaken out of war-time accumulated surplus, the State has appropriated for buildings and equipment (including the Butler land) a little less than $52 million. Pending requests for additional investment approximate $7 million. Conservative estimates of the real value of all the properties involved is around $100 million.

Exact amounts spent for operation of these institutions could be obtained by checking legislative appropriations for the past hundred years. The information isn't worth the effort. Some idea of the overall expenditures may be obtained from the fact that the 1957 General Assembly appropriated for maintenance and operation for the current biennium, which will end next June 30, the sum of $28,740,119—almost $40,000 a day.

While it is true that facilities are inadequate for maximum treatment, and services rendered fall below 100 per cent efficiency level, North Carolinians have no reason to be ashamed of their total effort, based on income and resources, to take care of the mentally sick or retarded.

PER CAPITA — The appropriation of State tax money for operation of the institutions represents about half the total per capita cost of caring for the patients. The rest comes from collections from families of patients able to pay all or part of the cost and from "profits" in produce from institutional farms and workshops. A charge of $90 per month for hospital care is made and collected from patients able to pay. That is less than actual cost, and the hospital board is presently studying a revised schedule of charges to more nearly recover the cost from those able to pay for the services rendered.

Theory back of that survey of costs is that government, at county, State or federal level, perhaps has responsibility to provide facilities for medical care which private enterprise cannot afford — but government has no obligation to give these services away for free, except to indigents certified by the welfare departments.

DISTRIBUTION — There are four big hospitals for white patients at Raleigh, Morganton and Butler and one for Negroes at Goldsboro. The training schools for mentally retarded are at Butler and Caswell for whites, at Goldsboro for Negroes.

Average population at the treatment hospitals is slightly above 10,000, at the training schools presently about 2,600 — with planned accommodations for 400 additional at Butler and Goldsboro each for a total of some 3,500.

Dr. J. W. Murdoch, general superintendent of the mental hospital system, says that on basis of national average as determined by surveys, North Carolina might be expected to need accommodations for some 20,000 mentally ill and not less than 6,000 mental defectives.

DIVIDENDS — There has been almost complete revolution in the policy of mental hospitals and in the attitude of the public toward them since the end of World War II. The concept of asylums, which afforded only custodial care, has given place to policies of treatment and training. The new plan is more expensive, but undoubtedly it is paying handsome dividends.

It is still true that too much space in mental hospitals is being occupied by hopeless seniles who cannot respond to treatment. But emphasis is on curative treatment rather than custodial care, and the number of patients paroled or discharged is approaching the number of new admissions. That is because more attention is being given to patients when they first enter, through study of case history, classification for treatment and use of newly discovered tranquilizing drugs.

Development of tranquilizing drugs has been fantastic and romantic. One hospital spent an additional $40,000 for drugs and saved an estimated $75,000 in broken windows, torn sheets and dismantled plumbing — not to mention the tremendous saving in time and custodial care of patients.

Return on investment in training schools for mentally retarded is difficult to evaluate. Members of the advisory budget commission who visited at the institution last month were delighted with the progress in treatment of mental illness. They were much less enthusiastic about expenditures for elaborate, almost luxurious, equipment in the new training schools at Butler and Goldsboro, where hope for cure or rehabilitation is almost nil and chances for training are definitely limited by inherent mental incapacity.

Hey, Whatcha Doin' Down There?

Some Of This And That

Out in Denver the sack dress has won another battle for survival — Mrs. Doris Lukman now has permission to wear her chemise to work.

Mrs. Lukman went home in tears recently after her supervisor — also female — at the Finance Center made some barbed remarks about her new chemise.

The supervisor's superior lawyer got Mrs. Lukman on the phone and asked her to return to work. The disappointing supervisor was transferred to another job.

SEEN ON EVANS STREET — A comely young girl walking down the street in "short" Bermuda shorts with three boys following her at a fairly reasonable pace — but not too far to be inconspicuous to anyone but the girl.

Recently a woman called the police station and informed officers a neighbor was allowing her chickens to run loose and that they were getting more vegetables out of her garden than she was.

A short time later police investigated the complaint and evidently found one or more of the fowls shot. The owner of the roosting chickens complained that her neighbor had no right to take the matter into her own hands.

Officers had no choice. They charged the one neighbor with damage to personal property (for fowl shooting) and the other neighbor for allowing chickens to run loose.

The man complained that someone had taken his wallet from his pants' pocket, removed a sizable amount of cash and returned it "dry." All this is supposed to have happened while he was awake and riding around town with some "friends."

An Ashokic policeman is not happy these days but it has nothing to do with his occupation, rather one of his "outside" interests.

Here's why —

It seems the policeman ordered some peafowl eggs. After receiving the eggs he set them under an obliging hen who reportedly cared for them as if they were her own.

Time passed and nothing, worth bragging about, happened. Days passed and even the hen, so the story goes, was getting a little impatient.

Finally the police officer sat down and wrote a letter to the company that he ordered the eggs from. In the letter he wanted to know if the peahens who layed the eggs had been associating with any peacocks lately.

Other Editors Saying --- Jury Duty A Privilege

(Raleigh Times)

A news story from Carthage reports that Superior Court Judge W.H.S. Burgwyn has ordered the Moore County commissioners subpoenaed for jury service "so they can see for themselves how hot it is."

The story continued: "This place needs air-conditioning and they ought to know it," stated the blunt spoken jurist, perspiring in his judicial robes. "They can come and suffer the heat and noise and gnats right along with the rest of us."

If this story is correct, Judge Burgwyn has placed himself in the position of using jury duty to punish some men for not doing something the judge feels they should have done. Of course the judge was irritated, for the news story said he was "perspiring in his judicial robes," though the word "sweating" might have been more appropriate than the more genteel "perspiring."

If the judge was not seeking to punish these county commissioners with jury service, he could have been using jury service to point out an obligation to them. That isn't right, either.

Jury service must be used only as a means of permitting a citizen to do part of his full duty. Jury service is in reality one of the times when a man may do guard duty for his country, and guard duty in the armed services is never used as punishment.

If Judge Burgwyn or any other jurist is perspiring or even sweating in a non-air-conditioned courtroom, let him peel off his judicial robes. If that doesn't suffice so

No Proposal Can Please Everyone

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — How to keep itself from turning into a rumpus room. That was the United Nations' main problem today, despite President Eisenhower's appearance there with a Mideast stability program.

Since the 81-nation General Assembly had plenty of fish to fry — and the Soviet Union and the West had already built the fire — Eisenhower's quick departure after his speech was all that was needed to let the sizzling begin.

Perhaps no previous Assembly meeting has been preceded by such gloomy forecasts — so far as anticipated concrete or treatable results go. The program looks like two weeks of noise and heat and little light.

No matter what kind of program Eisenhower offered it could not expect universal approval because of the conflict of interests between this country and the Soviet Union and even among the Mideast Arabs themselves.

The same goes for any program the Soviets offer. Perhaps the best that can be expected is that this Assembly will set up a commission to study proposals or dump the whole thing on the regular Assembly session starting in September.

Eisenhower got good mileage last time he went before the Assembly. That was in 1953 when he offered his atom-for-peace plan. It put the Soviets on the defensive.

This time the United States faces Soviet charges of aggression for sending American troops into Lebanon, a move which not only stirred up the Soviets and

Opinions In Brief

He who fears criticism is hopeless. Only those who do things are criticized. The idler is lost sight of in the march of events but the doer is watched and criticized. To hesitate for fear of criticism loses the battle, while the doer marches on to victory and triumph. Indecision is a great harbinger; but to hesitate for fear of criticism is cowardly, but if the cause is right, be not afraid of criticism; advocate it, and if need be, fight for it. — Thomas Jefferson.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

FIRMNESS IN LOVE

The difference between young people and their parents is not a matter of ability or earnestness of purpose. The difference—and it is often hard for us to see this—lies in the matter of judgment.

Dad and Mother go storming around the house declaring that this generation of young people has gone completely to the dogs. The youngsters ask themselves how people can be as dumb as the present generation of parents. Hence tension, accusation and counter accusation, wringing of hands, and a torrent of abuse from both sides.

It's hard for both Dad and Mother and for the kids to see that what is involved is judgment. Adults have no better brains

Vast Power In Reserve Wealth

By ELMER ROESSNER

Your reporter's first boss was greatly worried that women would eventually control all the wealth of the country. From time to time he assigned reporters to gather statistics to show that, through trusts and inheritances, women were gaining constantly larger shares of the wealth.

Eventually he died, leaving his own estate to his widow.

If he was alive today, he might be worried about the rising control of the wealth in the hands of funds, foundations and other impersonal controllers of vast sums.

One of the biggest blocs of wealth is controlled by life insurance companies. Their reserves are currently in excess of $80 billion.

Some of this is in cash but most of it is in stocks, bonds, mortgages and other securities. Insurance companies rarely if ever participate actively in the corporations in which they have invested, engage in proxy fights or use their holdings to kick out a management group. However, if they are dissatisfied with the management of a corporation, they usually dispose of their securities. Since this can depress the value of the company, most managements are fairly sensitive to insurance company wishes, or what they imagine those wishes to be.

In investing their reserves in mortgages, insurance companies exercise enormous economic power. Withdrawal from a housing project can scuttle it. By selective mortgage investments insurance companies can help one section of town flourish and cause another to wither.

BANK SAVINGS LARGER

Time deposits in banks are even larger, more than $85 billion. Banks exercise controls much the same way as insurance companies.

In addition, there is more than $12 billion in savings and loan associations and almost $4 billion in credit unions. However, these funds are largely invested in small mortgages or small loans, and little economic control is exercised.

Another potential source of control are the do-good funds and foundations. An incomplete listing in the World Almanac puts assets at more than $3 billion. These funds usually avoid exercising economic controls. The $999,000,000 Ford Foundation, the largest of them all, cannot vote its Ford stock under agreement with the Ford Company.

However, the Samuel H. Kress Foundation recently engaged in a proxy fight for control of S.H. Kress & Co. and succeeded in getting four directors on a seven-man board.

EMPLOYEE FUNDS GROWING

In recent years there has been a great increase in pension and profit-sharing funds, some of which are under joint control with unions.

One estimate puts the total assets of noninsured private pension plans at more than $20 billion. This does not include $3 billion more in insured funds which are part of life insurance reserves.

A recent survey by Commerce Clearing House indicates that pension and profit sharing plans have 39 per cent preferred stock and the rest in other securities.

In addition, there are billions in other welfare funds, in funds of colleges and universities, funds held by religious organizations, and perhaps a lot more.

When trustees of these funds do exercise the power of the invested dollar, their actions are usually benign. They want the enterprises they have invested in — and the entire economy — to prosper.

Nevertheless, the funds constitute great concentrations of power and a few, acting together, could bring great pressures to bear on economics, politics or the American ideology.

Watch This Miss

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—"Show me a man who won't run away when a girl says, 'I love you,'" remarked Ron Jaffe, "and I'll show you a man who's married to somebody else."

Miss Jaffe, who is pretty dark-haired and only 26 years old, is being groomed as the literary discovery of the 1958 fall season.

"My ambition is to be a famous novelist—to be No. 1 on the fiction list," she said.

She may make it this year with her first novel, "The Best of Everything," to be published next month. Some 30,000 advance copies already have been sold, and producer Jerry Wald has snapped up the movie rights for $100,000.

Rona, a bright and determined daughter of well-do-do parents, was graduated from Radcliffe at 19. She got a job in a publishing firm, wrote and sold eight short stories in the next few years. Last summer, during a visit to Hollywood, she heard producer Wald say he was looking for "a modern Kitty Foyle."

"Kitty Foyle," by Christopher Morley, was one of the most successful novels ever written about the "poor working girl."

"I decided then and there I'd write it," Rona said. So she came back to Manhattan, quit her job and settled down to write the realistic story not of one, but of five working girls.

"I had been living with my parents," she said. "But I moved into another apartment to be by myself. I wanted to be frank, and knew I couldn't write it unless I was alone with the people who were going to get the shock of their lives when they found out what their little Frankenstein had written."

"I set myself a goal of five pages every day. I wrote the book in exactly five months and five days plus"—she smiled archly—"the suffering of 26 years."

Magazine editors read the novel in galley proof, gulped, and decided against serializing it. Their verdict: Too spicy. But producer Wald read only 150 pages, then plunked down his $100,000 gladly. The paperback edition rights sold for twice the advance received by "The Best of Everything."

Miss Jaffe, who has been used to the best of everything all her life, plans no big splurge with her money.

"I already have an apartment, a mink jacket and a sports car," she said, nonchalantly. "I think I'll buy stocks and bonds."

She said working girls today have two major problems—loneliness, and the fact their values change so much they find it difficult to find happiness.

"What they really want isn't a career but someone to love who loves them," she says.

"But they get more and more sophisticated, demanding, cynical, mature. They're looking for something more than the boy next door."

"The more you demand, the harder it is to find happiness. And every time you meet a guy who breaks your heart you get a little tougher."

"But the bachelor is just as much a problem as the glamorous older married man to the working girl."

"The thing I hate most in the world is liars—men liars, because they are more dangerous. No lie by another woman could really hurt another woman much. But there are lots of lies a man could tell that might hurt her—if she believed them."

"I have a very high opinion of men, and want to live up to it. That's why I'm so hard on them."

Miss Jaffe feels she can't be completely happy herself unless she has two careers—writing and marriage.

"I'd like a man I can respect and who will respect me and my interests. He will have to be enough of a man in his own right not to feel he has to run me down."

A look of early sorrow crossed Rona's child-wise face.

"What defeats a woman — anything does — is not to be loved," she said. "I've had a lot of things happen to you in this life if you work hard."

"But one thing you can't do. You can't make another person love you."

Emergency Session Of UN Indicates World 'Scared'

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The emergency session of the U.N. indicates the world's statesmen have had a scare.

"Sober" was the word used more than any other here to describe yesterday's opening session on the Arab East. All fully appreciated the gravity of the crisis and the possible consequences from it.

The emergency session now boils down to a three-way contest over the future of Arab nationalism.

The United States is hopeful that this force — President Eisenhower called it "a great surge" can be persuaded to provide the energy for a stable community of Arab nations. To this end, the United States has pledged support to whatever feasible economic goals the Arabs may feel suit their needs.

The Soviet Union, moving cautiously in a dangerous situation, says it too is in favor of economic betterment of a long-neglected, backward area. But many of its policies have left little doubt that communism would prefer to keep the area in ferment and off balance.

The third contestant is Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic. He cannot yet be absolved of the suspicion that he sees Cairo — and himself — as the eventual master of an enormous strategic slice of the world. Nasser's chief source of ammunition is the force of Arab nationalism. Up to now he has been the only champion it has had to cling to. It provides him with his slogans, generates great emotional force him. For many Arab nationalists there has been nowhere to look but to Cairo.

The U.S. President has made a gesture to that nationalist feeling. It was a hesitant, groping gesture, acknowledging the common Arab memory of past glory and the common yearning for future self-respect. To back it up, the United States offered to support an economic program offering bright prospects for the area.

General reaction to the President's proposals was favorable, sometimes cautiously favorable, except among the Arabs themselves. And the United States purpose was not to impress the rest of the world, but to impress the Arabs.

Comment in Cairo was brusque and defensively hostile. Nasser still was using the Soviets as a potential bludgeon against the West. But in private, Arabs at the U.N., including U.A.R. representatives, indicated they were watching and waiting for developments. Apparently they want something more.

The Arabs are aware of the meaning of the fateful contest. A key question is whether the area someday will come under Soviet economic or political domination.

It would be difficult to find a bona fide Arab nationalist leader who wants to see Soviet influence make significant gains. Even Nasser, for all his propaganda and his continued flirtation with Moscow, continues to fear the Communists.

President Eisenhower now has reached for a safety valve. He has made a start toward relieving the dangerous pressure. What remains now is for the United States to build a climate of confidence in American intentions before economic aid. Even before economic aid, the U.S. must build a psychological aid. If that climate can be created, the Communists will have suffered an important defeat.

The Arabs hint they are ready to listen.

Will Ask Larger Sum For Schools

MARS HILL, N.C. (AP)—Dr. Charles F. Carroll, state superintendent of public instruction, says the 1959 General Assembly will be asked to boost appropriations for public school operations.

Carroll told the annual conference of North Carolina public school superintendents here yesterday the state will have to meet expanding educational requirements.

He did not mention figures in referring to the increased appropriation request.

Carroll also told the superintendents their greatest opportunity in school administration "is the interpretation of public education."

He urged the school officials to "get the people of North Carolina to commit themselves totally to education and to give education the priority to which it is entitled."

Another speaker, Dr. William C. Friday, president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, said the university cannot be considered apart from the public schools.

"The two are bound into a partnership," he said. "They have a common responsibility for developing and educating the youth of our state."

A panel discussion of ways to improve instruction highlighted today's conference session.

Sees No Pill To Match H-Bombs

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP)—An American scientist warned today that no antiradiation pill ever will be a match for the H-bomb.

At the same time a French scientist expressed doubt that pills thus far developed are as protective against atomic rays as their makers believe.

Earlier this week Dr. David G. Doherty of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory reported to the International Congress on Radiation Research on a cheap pill which he said could reduce injury from a given amount of radiation by 50 per cent.

Today Dr. Walter Gordy of Duke University cautioned against giving people the "false hope" that they can be immunized against radiations such as would be loosed upon them in all-out hydrogen warfare.

In any event, Gordy said, "they can always make the H-bomb bigger faster than they can make the pill bigger." He said the only good protection against nuclear war is peace.

Dr. Raymond Latarjet of Paris also cautioned against expecting too much from such pills. Doherty had said his Oak Ridge pill would double the dose of radiation a person could take without increasing the damaging effects.

Jordan Tense; Hussein Is Given Little Chance

By REINHOLD ENSZ
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—"Visit the Holy Land," says the poster in the censor's office in Amman, Jordan.

The phrase evokes thoughts of good will. But there is little of that in the Jordan part of the Holy Land today. Hatred and fear are the emotions of the hour.

"I have never seen the Jordanians so tense," says a long-time resident of the Hashemite kingdom. He was referring to the gripping problem of Jordan's King Hussein and his government. There seems little doubt Hussein would have been toppled soon after the Iraq revolution if British paratroopers had not landed in Amman.

Now, despite the troops, Jordanians are asking themselves: How long can he last?

"I give him about eight months, even with the troops here," says one experienced Western diplomat in Amman. "Something has to or give sooner or later." Hussein hasn't been able to combat the compelling calls for Arab unity which issue from Nasser's Cairo. Nor has he been able to do much about the poverty that grips his desert land.

Jordan is a country that has no industry and no oil. Its boundaries, carved out artificially after World War I and by the Arab-Israeli war, have left it without a Mediterranean seaport or much of anything else that a country needs. About half a million Arab refugees from Israel-held territory are crowded into Jordan, living on United Nations handouts.

"The Middle East problem will never be eliminated until the question of Israel is solved," is a sentence that drops readily from Jordanian officials. The same feeling, put more bluntly, comes just as readily from other, less cautious Arabs.

Middle East," says these Arabs, "until the Jews have been pushed into the sea." Anti-Jew feeling in Jordan is fierce and public. "The Germans," an Amman shopkeeper told this correspondent the other day, "are the most popular foreigners in this part of the world because of the way they treated the Jews. Put 'Made in Germany' on a product and you've got it sold."

CHAPTER 15

"Are you perfectly serious, Colin?" asked Ralph Campbell.

"Perfectly, Father. I've already arranged to buy the house. It needs a good deal of repair work. It hasn't been lived in for seven years, you see. But I should be able to move in by the end of March."

"But why do you want to leave Quail Wings? I know I have said things in haste that may have offended you. Pay them no mind. I am an old man, set in my ways, understand you. But I respect your right to think as you do."

"Thank you, sir." The two men looked deeply into each other's eyes. "I will always remember that."

"Now that you are not marrying Jeannie Dare, why should you want to move?"

"I've always loved the mountains. Father. They mean something special to me — I can't explain it myself. And this house is a jewel. The whole setting, the way of life it promises, is what I want. Remember, I'll be at Quail Wings every day that court is in session. You'll see a good deal of me."

"One other thing, Colin. Isn't this a bad time to start a new venture? In my soberer moments, I know well enough that as more and more states secede, the chances of war increase."

"All the more reason, to my mind, to do as much as you can get while you want beforehand. I know well enough that if war comes — much as I believe it needn't, much as I'm convinced it would solve nothing — I will be drawn into it. Well, then, I'd like to have as much from life as I can now."

"Won't it be rather lonely there for you?"

"Lonely! Why, no. I've always been bored to death with most Denbury social affairs. You know that. I much prefer the company of the mountain people. And some day, I hope I'll marry." "Who did the vision of Ann Stewart sitting before the fireplace on Christmas day come into his mind? She was Lind's wife."

"Have you spoken to Zack and Nell? Are they ready to go there?"

"They'd love it, they say. I am moving them up there next week so they can help out the house in order. They're sorry to leave Dab, of course. But they can come here to see him from time to time. Dab was their only son."

"They won't be enough for you. Tell you what: I'll make you a present of Dab and that little girl he married last summer. What's her name?"

"Elva. That's wonderfully kind of you, Father. Zack and Nell will be overjoyed. Colin rose. "I have an appointment in Wetherly with Mrs. Stewart and her lawyer. I must be off. Thank you again, Father, for your understanding and your generosity."

A prosperous little village, Wetherly was the funnel through which the timber, crops and furs of the mountain people poured down to the coast. To a lesser extent, it was also a distribution center where mountaineers might find merchandise from the coast. The residents of Hobbs Creek came to Wetherly, usually on foot, when they needed sugar, salt, spices or any other article they were unable to make or produce. They usually traded by barter.

Of the three Wetherly merchants, two made a decent living and one, William Bodine, was accumulating some wealth. No matter what anyone wanted to buy, he had it to sell. He combined shrewdness, often carried to the point of trickery, with a deceptively affable personality.

When Colin, with the deed to the Pollard place in his pocket, and Ann Stewart emerged from the lawyer's office, the idlers were lounging on the verandah of the Wetherly Inn guffawing at some activity in a vacant lot across the way.

Colin turned to see what caused so much amusement. A middle-aged man, who walked with a decided limp, was instructing eight gawky youths in the art of drilling. All carried green sticks over their shoulders in lieu of bayonets.

"Fix bayonets," the middle-aged man commanded.

"Why that's Jason Maxwell, the carpenter," Ann said.

"Why on earth is he trying to drill those boys?" Colin asked.

"From what I hear," Ann said, "Jason has always wanted to be a soldier. He's read every book he could get his hands on about war and soldiering. Now he's sure that war is coming and he's convinced these boys they'd better be ready for it."

They stopped to watch for a moment. Jason Maxwell waved his hand toward a patch of weeds and shouted to his company. "The Yankees are here! Charge!"

The boys started across the field at a shambling run. Only three remembered to lower their "bayonets" into proper position. Suddenly one of the three tripped over his stick and lurched into the man ahead of him. Both sprawled to the ground. Jason Maxwell screamed and pulled at his hair. The men watching laughed hysterically.

Colin took Ann's elbow and they walked on. Suddenly he said to her, "This was play — what we saw. But if war comes, how many awkward boys exactly like these will be slaughtered like cattle because they don't know what they're doing? It makes me sick to think of it."

"Do you think war will come, Colin?"

"Yes, I'm afraid it will."

"What will you do if it does?"

"I don't think I'll have much choice. Now we argue pro and con. But when the time comes we'll all be swept into it as helplessly as leaves in a storm."

She was silent a moment. Then she said, "You sound so hopeless; yet moving into Campbell Hill, as you call it, to start a new life in a new place is a hopeful act."

Colin turned to look at her. Her lovely brown eyes were fixed him in inquiry. "That's the human condition, Ann. We seem to go on hoping even when there's no hope."

Ann paled and lowered her eyes. "Yes, we do."

"Hey, Ann, Judge!" Ling Stewart called them. He had brought Ann into town and gone off on his business while they transacted theirs. "Everything settled?" he asked.

"You now address the proud squire of Campbell Hill," Colin said. "Hatch, the contractor, has told me it won't take more than two months to make all the necessary repairs. I won't be able to stay away from the place for more than a few days at a time!"

"Anytime you want to stay the night or drop in for a meal, just come by."

"Thanks, Ling. That's very kind of you, but Nell and Zack will be there after next week and they'll be able to take care of me. I'll come by though, you can be sure of that."

Colin saw them to their trap at a hitching post down the street, and waved to them as they rode off. He had felt happy, even joyous, all afternoon, through the driest, dustiest financial and legal details. Now he felt alone, empty. And he knew why.

Ann had gone — gone home with her husband to their two children, he reminded himself fiercely. Slowly, she had crept into his dreams, then his waking thoughts, now his daydreams. He had fallen into the habit of contrasting her with Jeannie, originally; then, with Jeannie originally; then, with Jeannie dismissed entirely from his dreams and plans, he had thought of Ann in an almost abstract way as a gracious, warm and loving woman, the ideal wife and mother. Then she had appeared in his dreams, not as the ideal wife of Ling Stewart and mother of his sons, but as his own beloved Ann.

After their talk on Christmas day, he found himself thinking of her constantly, of her courage, sweetness and beauty. Now thinking of her was not enough. He wanted to be with her. And what would he do when her mere presence did not suffice?

Someone else has guessed that Colin is in love with Ann and confronts him with the fact. There's a dramatic episode of "The Land is Bright" tomorrow.

Lou Costello Enjoys Venture In Dramatics

By BOB THOMAS
AP Motion Picture Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"When I saw Martin and Lewis break up, I thought it was a mistake. Now they're as big as ever doing singles. Maybe the same could happen to me."

This was Lou Costello's comment on his owl breaking away from a long-time comedy team. And it appears that Lou's own fortunes are prospering now that he has made the split from Bud Abbott.

Tonight Lou makes his live debut as a single at the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas. He's going back to where he got his start—playing comedy sketches ("Clean ones, mind you") in a Minsky's burlesque show. But it's not a matter of retrogression on Lou's part. He's drawing many, many times what he earned as a young comic amid the bumps and grinds.

Recently he completed two filmed shows for the new TV season. He plays a light comedy in a G. E. Theater segment and a straight drama in a Wagon Train adventure.

"That's right—straight drama," he emphasized. "This is a Lou Costello nobody has ever seen before. I play it with a heavy beard and all—and not a laugh in the whole show."

Initial reports of his work are so enthusiastic that other producers are interested. He is being wooed to play Debbie Reynolds' father in her next MGM feature.

All this, plus his TV guestings with Steve Allen and others and the chance he may revive the old radio show "I Pays to Be Ignorant."

Unlike the Martin and Lewis split, Bud and Lou broke up amicably. The reason was simply that no one was buying Abbott and Costello. So they decided to separate and see if they could improve their fortunes alone. Bud chose to rest on his laurels. Not Lou.

He's busier than he was in the heyday of the A&C teaming. And happy too.

"I never felt so good in my life," he enthused. "When I used to come home from the studio while we were doing the comedies, I was mentally and physically exhausted. Nobody knew it, but I was almost sick. All those pratfalls! They take a lot out of you. I'd go to the studio feeling tired the next morning."

"But when I did those two dramatic shows, I felt terrific. I could hardly wait to get to work each day. Think what I've been missing all these years!"

Rude Awakening From Lightning

TITUSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—A thunderstorm that struck as 81-year-old John E. Williams dozed in a chair at his home gave him a rude and rough awakening.

A lightning bolt which Williams said sounded "like a ton of dynamite" struck nearby about 5 p.m. Boards from the ceiling fell on him. A newspaper he was holding in his hand caught fire.

Williams stuffed the newspaper into a stove and climbed out of the house through a window. A son who lives nearby helped light a fire that broke out in the lean-to kitchen that had collapsed in ruins.

The house was wrecked by the bolt. Williams said he wasn't hurt.

Claim An Island Broke Up Pair

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An island—Cyprus to be exact—came between actress Barbara Payton and her fourth husband, says her attorney.

Miss Payton, 31, sued George A. Provas, 31, for divorce yesterday, charging cruelty. They married in 1955.

Her attorney Milton M. Golden explained: "You see, Barbara has an English background, while Provas is of Greek descent. They just couldn't reconcile their diverging viewpoints on how the Greek-Turkish-English dispute should be settled."

Like The Price, however, Dotto was an instantaneous success. Both The Price is Right and Dotto were extended into one night a week shows after becoming successful as daytime programs. Kennedy, making his first big bid to become a network TV star, got his break with The Big Game in a nighttime spot. Previously he was an emcee in local radio and television. He changed his name because two quiz emcees named Narz were too many.

Three Emcees Linked By More Than Their Careers

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Narz, Tom Kennedy and Bill Cullen have closer bonds than simply being masters of ceremonies of network television quiz shows. They're related. Now let's see if we can get this straight.

Tom Kennedy, who was born Jim Narz, is Jack's younger brother. Bill Cullen married the sister of Jack Narz's wife. That makes Jack and Bill brothers-in-law. What it makes Bill in relation to Tom (or Jim) would be a good question for a quiz show.

In any event, they're friends—and business competitors. It's difficult to say how many network TV hours a week now are taken up with quiz shows. But it is accurate to say that Narz, Cullen and Kennedy are taking up a goodly chunk of 13 half-hour programs weekly.

Narz is the emcee of Dotto Monday through Friday on CBS-TV and Tuesday evenings on NBC-TV. Cullen is the host of The Price is Right Monday through Friday and Thursday evenings on NBC-TV. And on Friday evenings on NBC-TV Kennedy is the emcee of The Big Game.

None of the three owes a debt to the others for being on network television; all made it on their own. Cullen is indebted to Jack Narz, however, for his happy marriage. This is how it happened:

A few years ago, when Cullen was a radio announcer, he went to the West Coast to work for a time. Narz invited him to his home one evening with a group of people and suggested that his wife include her sister. "After they were introduced," Narz recalls, "they had no time for anybody but each other." Before long Narz found himself Cullen's brother-in-law.

Cullen made The Price is Right an instantaneous success in December 1956. Narz took a chance when he launched Dotto last January, for he left some profitable West Coast TV commercial as-

Rocket To Tell Its Own Story Of Lunar Voyage

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A rocket's own story of its trip toward the moon is scheduled to unfold in an auditorium here. Informed sources say the Air Force will fire its first rocket at the moon next Sunday from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Once the rocket flashes into space, its scientific devices will tell the Air Force hopes, send back information about the historic journey. Half a dozen stations around the world will start tracking it. They are in Manchester, England; Singapore; India; Hawaii; Florida; and California. Their raw information will be flashed here by code to be fed into electronic computers and correlated. The findings will be announced simultaneously in Washington, Cape Canaveral and here. The tracking hub is in the heart of the Ramo-Wooldrige Corp. complex, where the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division makes its headquarters. As soon as progress reports and other data from the rocket are compiled in Ramo-Wooldrige's space technological laboratories, they will be announced in a news headquarters set up in a Ramo-Wooldrige building. The news center—a big auditorium—will be dominated by a lined screen called a Prob-o-graph. On this giant chart, a moving line will disclose the rocket's expected 25,000-mile-a-hour approach to the vicinity of the moon. There will be at least four progress reports a day.

Camera News

GOOD CATCH—This study of a Florida lobsterman by Joe J. Marx of Loveland, Ohio, made the big time from a small 2 1/2 ounce camera. It won first prize in the first Minox photo contest. The second annual contest is now open.

By IRVING DESFOR AP Newsfeatures

There's a boom in the tiny camera field. And I don't mean 35mm cameras. They've long since won their fight for recognition and respectability as one of photography's every day tools. I'm talking about the sub or ultra-miniature cameras which give you actually thumb-nail size pictures on 16mm or smaller film. The number and variety of these cameras and their accessories and equipment have assumed such proportions lately as to command attention. Especially when you run across as vocal and as enthusiastic a devotee as Joe J. Marx of Loveland, Ohio. Having copped a grand prize months ago in the first national contest for sub-miniature cameras, has evangelistic spirit really soared. As a result, he is president of a brand new home town "Sub-Club" with recruits from friends in business and the professions.

I'm relieved to learn that Joe isn't an ultra-miniature fanatic to the degree of ignoring more normal size cameras. In fact, he owns a Rolleiflex and a 35mm camera. When he enters 16" x 20" prints in the competitions of his regular camera club, the reasonable assumption is that they were made by the "larger" size cameras. "But when the judges and other members learn that my prize-winning pictures were made with a sub-miniature camera," he cheerfully recalled, "I kill 'em! They won't believe it... so I show them the original. "Actually, it's because I just learned a trick in enlarging these tiny negatives. I diffuse them through my wife's nylon stockings... discarded ones, of course. This gives a soft, hazy artistic effect. As Picasso has proven in his art, sharp detail isn't everything. Mood and feeling can be more important." The principal argument for tiny

Wants Gambling Legal In Idaho

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—State Sen. A. M. Derr, who wants to legalize gambling in Idaho but says he's not a gambler himself, holds a slim margin for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. Unofficial returns from all but 8 of the 808 precincts reporting in Tuesday's primary election give Derr 25,598 votes and his nearest contender, State Sen. Max Hanson of Fairfield, 25,434. Neither concedes and the winner will not be determined until the official canvass Aug. 23. Even then there may be a recount because it's so close.

The Republican candidate is Gov. Robert E. Smylie, he was unopposed. But he opposes gambling. Derr said during the campaign that he had been told he was favored to win in betting circles by odds of 6-1. Did he take any of that money? "No," Derr replied. "I'm not a gambling man—not even poker."

Mansfield Says Congress Will Back Mid-East Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont) said today President Eisenhower will have overwhelming congressional support for any immediate and bold steps to carry out his six-point Middle East program.

Mansfield, assistant majority leader of the Senate, said the President should follow through on his address yesterday to the United Nations General Assembly "with hard and fast proposals to implement each of his suggestions."

The senator, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in an interview: "The President is on the right track and the peoples of the world will applaud our support of expanded U. N. police forces to keep the peace, multilateral aid for economic development and technical assistance and all the rest. "Resolutions should be pressed immediately in the United Nations for approval of the program in concrete form. If any of them need congressional implementation, I am sure the President can count on overwhelming support from Democrats and Republicans alike."

If this is done, Mansfield said, the pressure from peoples all over the world will be felt by the Soviet Union.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore), a critic of Eisenhower Middle East policy in the past, said he was

Hot, Muggy Day; She Jumped In

PITTSBURGH (AP)—It was one of those hot, muggy days. Gloria Loden, a 20-year-old University of Pittsburgh coed, said she wanted to cool off.

She jumped into the Allegheny River and refused to come out when workmen and police pleaded with her. A patrolman finally dived in and fished her from the water.

She was treated for shock and taken to St. Francis Hospital for observation.

Former Carrier Delayed Mail

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Richard A. Conrad, a former substitute mail carrier, was arrested last February when postal inspectors found 4,800 pieces of mail dating back to October 1957 in his car. Conrad pleaded guilty yesterday to delaying the mail. He was fined $400 and placed on three years probation. U. S. Dist. Judge Wallace S. Courley stipulated that Conrad stay away from alcoholic beverages during the probationary period.

"proud to be an American in the light of the speech before the General Assembly."

"The President," Morse told the Senate, "laid down a program that will stand to the everlasting credit of our foreign policy."

He too called for concrete steps to push it through the U. N.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn), another frequent critic of the administration, called Eisenhower's proposals a program "for our own government, the United Nations, and, I might say, for Congress, and I personally support it."

Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R-Ind) led the Republican rosters. He called Eisenhower's presentation one of the greatest speeches he ever had heard. In the House too, Eisenhower's Middle East proposals drew bipartisan support. Among those praising it were Representatives John M. Vorys (R-Ohio) and Henry S. Reuss (D-Wis). Vorys is a senior Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

On Town Council For 46 Years

DILLWYN, Va. (AP) — Folks hereabouts say maybe Radford Bennett Ranson may hold a national record. He has been on the town council for 46 years. The American Municipal Assn. says it knows of no longer service. If so, it is in spite of Ranson. Once he decided against running because of the press of private business. Voters elected him anyway.

Valve Left Open, Carrier Damaged

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Repairmen today were cleaning machinery and electrical equipment aboard the attack carrier Ticonderoga, damaged Tuesday when sea water poured into the main engine room. The water entered a valve that had failed to close, flooding the compartment. Crewmen escaped uninjured. The 42,000-ton ship is out of action until repairs are completed. An investigation is being made to determine the extent of damage and cause of the accident.

Heart Specialist Cycled 14 Miles

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP)—Dr. Dudley White, 72, cut a blue ribbon yesterday, mounted his bicycle and spryly pedaled seven miles to the opposite end of this island and back again. Dr. White, heart specialist who treated President Eisenhower, considers bicycling one of the finest kinds of exercises. The ribbon cutting marked dedication of a short strip of the commonwealth's first state-financed cycle path. About 25 enthusiasts of various ages followed him over the 14-mile route.

Best Navy Chow Aboard Carrier

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The best chow in the Navy can be found aboard the carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt and at the Naval Station at Guantanamo, Cuba. That's the word from the Navy's Ney Memorial Awards Committee, a group of officers and officials of the Executive Stewards' and Caterers' Assn. who judged the competition.

Plays Fair, And Got 37 Speeders

WACO, Tex. (AP)—Police Chief Jesse Gunterman said he liked to play fair, and besides folks were saying his radar speed check was a sneaky affair. So he just put up a big sign on Bosque Boulevard saying, "Radar Speed Check." And five blocks away he put up his radar contraption. The first day the sign was up police caught 37 speedsters, biggest haul to date.

Canada is the only American nation whose national sovereignty was not established by revolution.

camera, naturally, is portability. A camera no bigger than a pack of cigarettes can be carried at all times, ready for any picture situation. Improved films, improved processing equipment and methods and specialization by recognized photo finishing plants have combined to improve the quality of finished pictures to an acceptable level. The whole subject has been thoroughly covered in a current publication, "Ultra-Miniature Photography" by Joseph D. Cooper (Amphoto Publishers, N.Y.). The author covers the same topic in a monthly column for Modern Photography magazine but his regular work takes in far more territory. He is executive assistant to the Deputy Postmaster General of the U.S.

But back to Joe and a few persons. "Marx-lama!" "I tote my Minox like I carry my wallet... always. With such a tiny camera, you don't feel or look like a tourist. "Always keep the camera set for instant shooting. With the short focus lenses in these cameras, one setting will give a clear picture from six feet to infinity. Be alert for good pictures and shoot... no matter where or when. After your first shot, then you can shift your focus or vary your speed or exposure for greater accuracy. And come in closer and still closer till your subject fills the whole frame. "Think of your camera as a pistol. You wouldn't let your finger get in front of it so don't let it get in front of the lens. And body movement would spoil your pistol aim just as it ruins a picture. "Get human interest... ever in scenic shots. If you want a pretty scenic, you can buy it on a postcard but human interest is your own."

Even In Prison, Suspect Fraud

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — State and federal officers are investigating a scheme through which six Folsom Prison inmates are reported to have received tax refunds on nonexistent 1957 earnings.

Richard A. McGee, state director of corrections, said at least one of the convicts had been in prison since 1952. Tentative estimates are that the fraudulent refunds totaled $1,600. The convicts' names were not released.

Warden Robert A. Heinze of Folsom said federal internal revenue agents will check all refunds made to prisoners this year.

The scheme involved filling in a W2 form, used by employers to report earnings and withholding tax, and reporting earnings up to $300.

The phony forms were attached to regular income tax returns and forwarded to the Internal Revenue Service. The refund claims were based on statements that income tax was deducted for the first few months of the year, and the income stopped when the man went to prison, thus entitling the convict to a refund of money taken out for taxes.

Namiko, digs into a huge watermelon and enjoys every bite of it.

Some 800 American high school boys and girls are getting a good look at 23 foreign lands this summer. At the same time, a thousand young students from 30 countries are in the United States. Like their American counterparts, these young visitors are mingling with the people, studying customs, seeing sights and staying in homes.

These boys and girls are part of a high school student exchange program started by the American Field Service in 1950. It has been growing each year. The program is designed to foster a better understanding of all peoples and promote international good will.

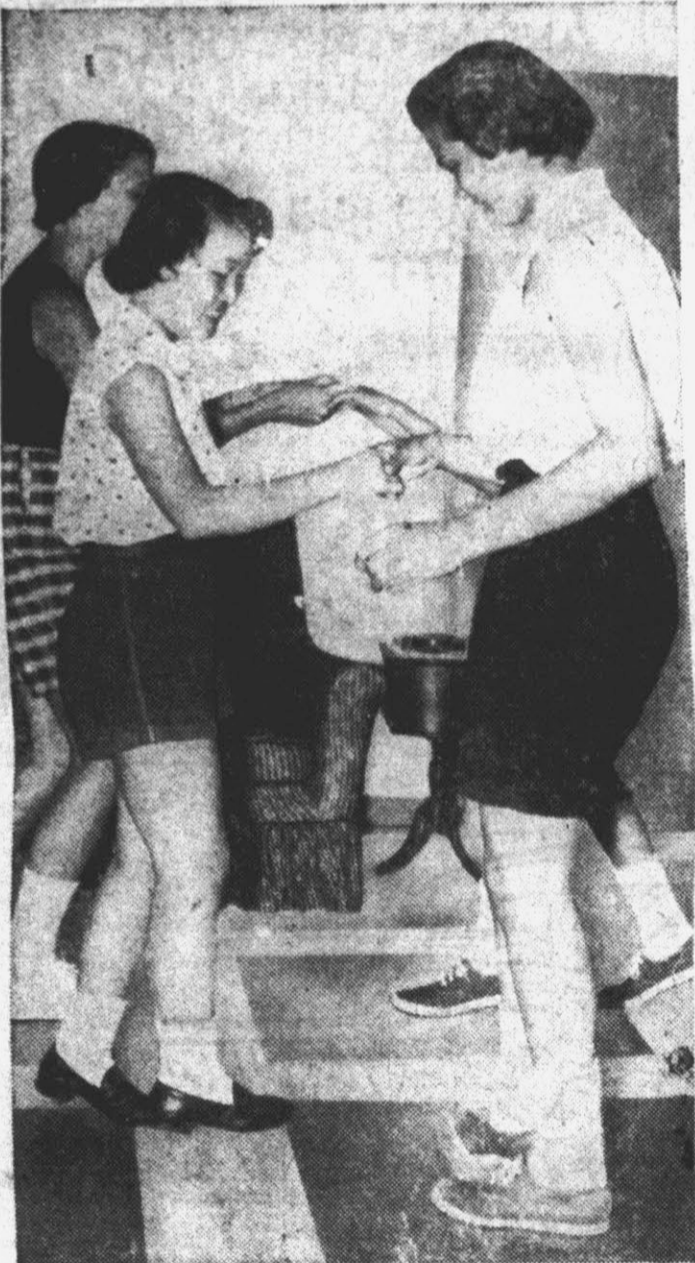

Two of the exchange students are pictured here, a Japanese high school girl in the United States, and an American girl in Japan.

Susan Arensberg, the American girl, is 16, comes from Pittsburgh. She is spending the summer as a guest of the Miyazaki family in the northern residential district of Tokyo. She is one of 24 U. S. high school students who are now in Japan.

Namiko Shima, the Japanese youngster, is shown during her stay in Pittsburgh. She spent a weekend at the home of Mrs. Marie Lewis and her family in suburban Wilkesburg. Before coming to Pittsburgh she studied at the Thomas Cooley High School in Detroit.

Susan is radiant in her yukata, a summer cotton kimono, and fan.

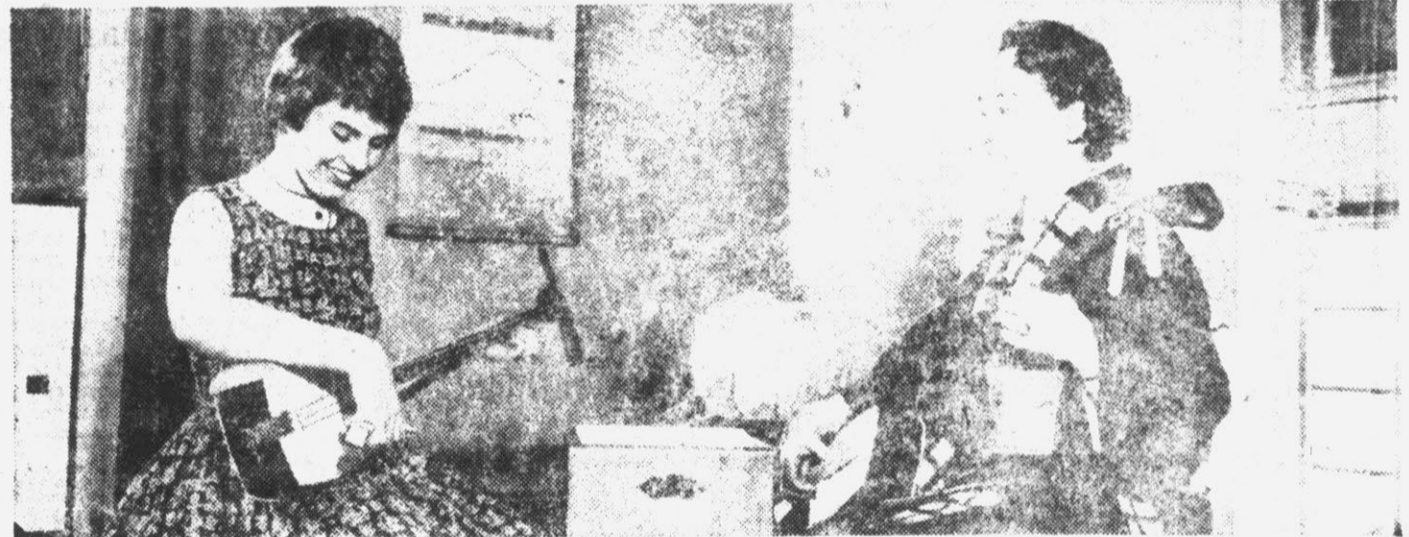

She gets into the swing of things. Martha Lewis shows her a few new rock 'n' roll steps.

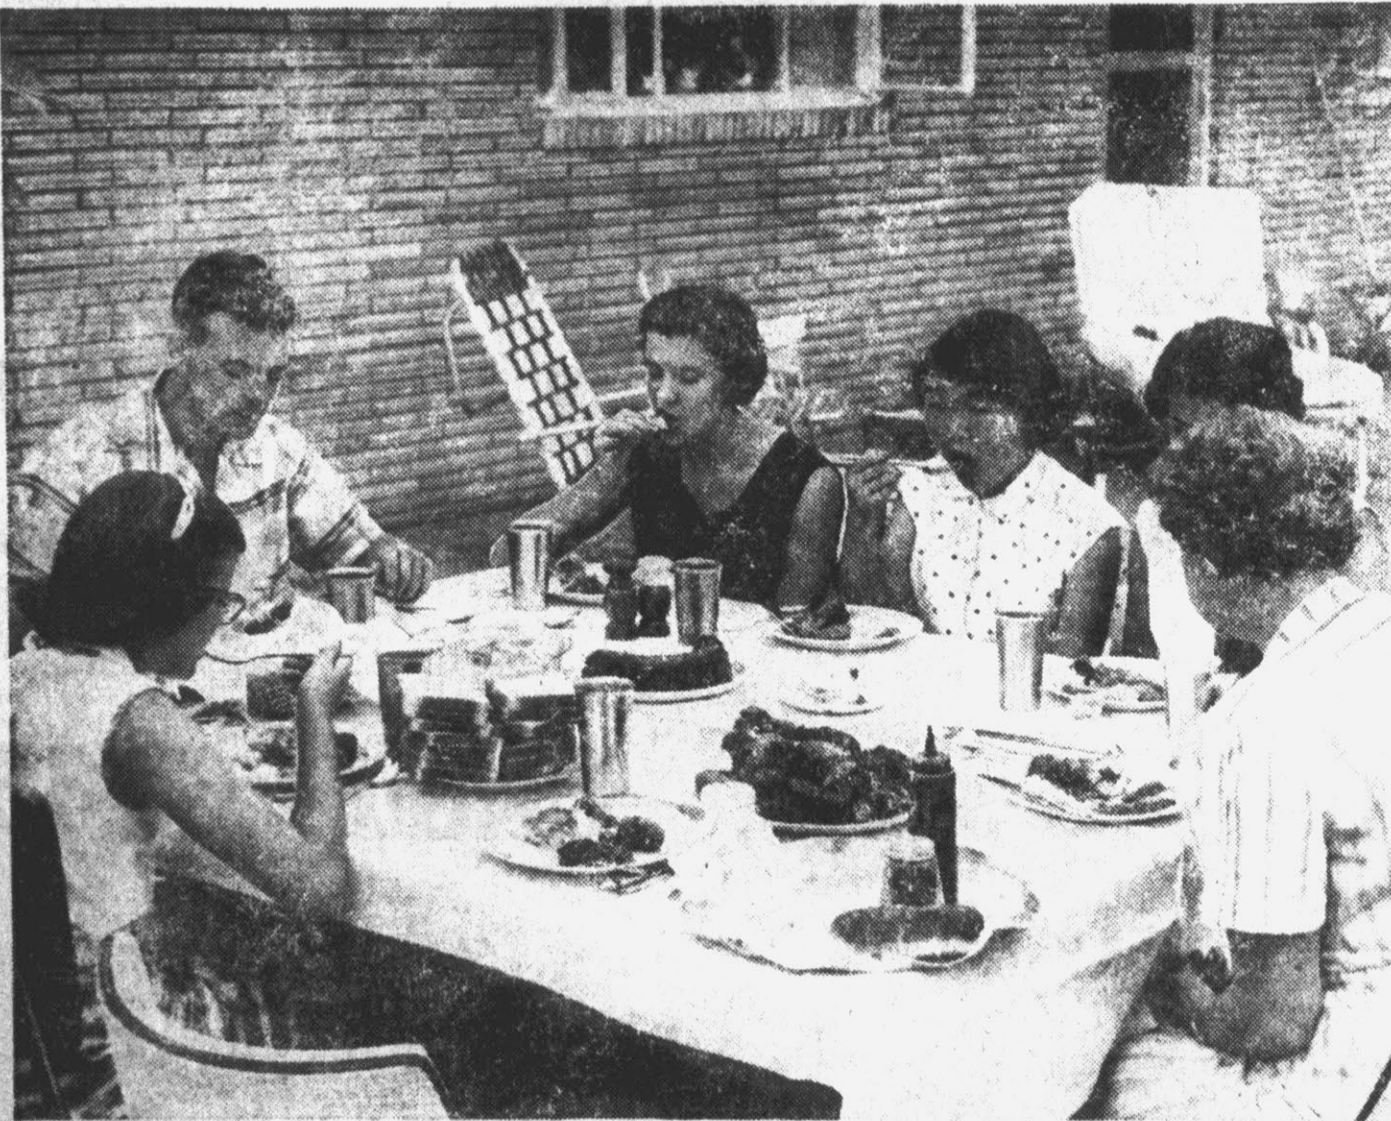

"This is a treat!" Namiko gets a hot dog from Martha Lewis. Roast chicken is on the grill.

She holds a 100-year-old Japanese doll prized by the Miyazakis. Kimiko, 16, right, was her "sister" during stay.

Susan has snack of Japanese soba (noodles) which became one of her favorite Japanese foods. Kimiko joins her.

Sister Did As Told; Boy Is Dead

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—In that unpredictable small boy manner, 13-year-old Steve Richards handed a loaded .22 rifle to his little sister and told her: "Go ahead—pull the trigger."

Eight-year-old Jeanne Richards did. Steve died almost instantly, shot in the heart.

Terms Fallout Biggest Danger

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Dr. Willard F. Libby, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, says fallout is the real danger in atomic and nuclear warfare.

"Cities can be washed off," Libby told a press conference yesterday. But, he added, the AEC still has found no practical methods of removing the top several inches of soil which soak up radioactive materials.

The commissioner said that it would take 10 years for the fallout from a stratospheric nuclear explosion to reach the earth.

He said he did not believe the fallout from the accumulation of all the high-altitude shots would be dangerous to the human race. "I don't think I care to comment on that," Dr. Libby said when asked if he knew of any Soviet experiments in exploding nuclear warheads from guided missiles in the stratosphere.

He also said he favored a limiting of nuclear weapons testing rather than a complete ban. "However, if we could get a complete agreement with the Russians that would be different," he said.

John L. Sullivan was heavyweight boxing champion from 1882 until 1892.

Goldfine Plans Fight Against Contempt Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bernard Goldfine intends to fight a contempt of Congress citation tendered against him for refusing to answer 22 House subcommittee questions about his financing dealings with a Boston company he owns.

Attorneys for the millionaire Boston industrialist promised the fight last night after the House voted the citation 369-3.

Goldfine, friend of presidential assistant Sherman Adams, refused to answer the questions on grounds they were not pertinent to the subcommittee's investigation of federal regulatory agencies.

Samuel M. Sears, Goldfine's chief attorney, said in Boston the contempt citation will be fought on the same grounds.

Although Goldfine balked at several subcommittee questions, he emphatically denied that his friendship with Adams got him preferred treatment from the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Trade Commission. Adams made similar denials.

If prosecuted and convicted Goldfine could receive up to one year in prison and a $1,000 fine. The decision whether to prosecute is up to the Justice Department. If it decides to do so, the case will be presented to federal grand jury.

In urging the House to back up its group's recommendation for a contempt citation, Oren Harris (D-Ark), chairman of the subcommittee that investigated Goldfine, asked:

"Is the Congress going to let an individual . . . say to the Congress: 'I'm going to decide whether the questions are relevant and

Professional Aids War On Skunks

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—The skunk tally is 13 certain and 3 probabilities in Sacramento's war between the people and the pole-cats.

"If we can get 'em at that rate we'll beat 'em," said City Poundmaster George Martin yesterday, the third day of the offensive.

The skunks, estimated at 800, have invaded a residential section in southwestern Sacramento.

The number of kills increased after the city hired a professional trapper.

Mohawks Are At Home On 'High Iron' Projects

By EDWARD NICKERSON
NEW YORK (AP) — The Mohawk Indian stood perched high above the ground, his golden brown skin shining in the morning sun, his black eyes scanning the horizon like a hunter in search of game. Then he spoke: "Hand me that wrench, will you?"

Aboriginal Menu At Tribal Meet

DADELL, Okla. (AP) — When 200 Indians got together for a tribal festival, there were several real American dishes that aren't served in many restaurants. They included tafaulla (Indian hominy), bananas shuck bread, and tanchakabona (cracked corn with pork).

An Effort, But Egg Is A Novelty

LODI, Calif. (AP) — It was a real effort but Samantha made it. Samantha is a hen owned by Kenneth Jackson of Lodi, Calif. Her claim for fame came recently when she laid an egg shaped like a small bowling pin.

Idaho farmers harvested 177,200 acres of potatoes last year. The Agricultural Marketing Service reports that Idaho plans are for 185,000 acres of potatoes in 1958.

The time — any day of the week. The place — midtown Manhattan. The Indian? It could have been Mike Dalbo, better known among the Mohawks as Tironiote or "Fallen Sky."

Mike wears a plastic helmet, not a set of feathers, and carries a lunch pail, not a tomahawk. His lofty perch is a girder of the new 52-story Union Carbide building and a number of his fellow Mohawks are helping to construct.

About 500 other Mohawks live in New York City with Mike, and almost all who are able spend their working lives as he does: riveting steel and swinging heavy girders into place at dizzying heights, building skyscrapers and bridges. High iron work, they call it.

When Manhattan was only a wooden island on an unknown shore, Mike's tribal forefathers ranged upstate New York as part of the great five nations — (later six) — federation known as the Iroquois.

Now that Manhattan is forested with skyscrapers instead of oaks and maples, these same Mohawks look about them and see proof everywhere of their contribution to its growth. They helped put up the RCA Building, the famous Empire State Building, the United Nations' Secretariat Building and they spanned the Hudson with the George Washington Bridge.

One day in 1886, contractors approached the Mohawks with a proposition. They wanted to span the St. Lawrence near Montreal and offered the Mohawks first crack at jobs on the project in return for rights to the necessary land. It was a deal — the Indians wanted the work and the bridge-builders were glad not to have to import a lot of sailors from coastal cities. In those days, sailors were among the few who had the nerve to work at high altitudes.

As the bridge went up, the old-time white riveters would often discover Mohawk laborers peering curiously over their shoulders — balanced easily on narrow girders high above the river. By the time the bridge was built, many of the Indians had learned riveting and other skills.

It was only natural that when there were other high iron jobs to be done, the Mohawks should come along and do them. When New York City had its skyscraper boom in the 1920s, a number of Indians settled down here to live. Now the Mohawks much intermarried with whites, live simply — about as other people of their income level live in Brooklyn where most of them settled.

Indian Lore Disappearing. The older Indians, like Tom Jocks, for instance, speak Iroquois on the job. Tom has an Indian name meaning "grapevine."

But his two sons, Louis and John, aged 21 and 24, don't even remember their tribal names and know very little Iroquois.

The Jocks family is a good example of how the tradition of working high iron is passed on while the old Indian language and close connections with the reservation began to fall by the wayside.

The Mohawks aren't the only high iron men. They are usually only a small percentage of those on any given job, but they seem to have a natural affinity for the work.

They aren't indifferent to danger, but height doesn't seem to phase them much.

Why? No one has ever given a satisfactory answer. Some say there is no mysterious altitude fearlessness — that the Mohawks are iron workers today because it's a good job and their forefathers happened to get started in that line. But at least one early historian indicates that something more than this is involved. John Lawson, an English surveyor and traveler in America, wrote in 1714 of the Indians of the Iroquois group: "They will walk over deep brooks, and creeks, on the smallest poles, and that without any fear or concern. Nay, an Indian will walk on the ridge of a barn or house and look down the gable-end, and spit upon the ground, as unconcerned as if he was walking on terra firma."

MODERN WARPATH—Tom Jocks, 47, and his son Louis, 21, both Mohawk Indians, put a girder in place high over Manhattan. The two are among the hundreds of Mohawks who work the 'high iron' in the New York vicinity.

Gun Club Offer Firmly Rejected

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — The offer of a segregationist group to field 600 rifle and pistol club members to prevent possible disorders when schools open next month has been rejected by the chairman of Arlington County's Board of Supervisors.

Chairman Ralph Kaul said he was confident county authorities "will be able to maintain law and order without any help from private interests." He said the board is making arrangements with neighboring Alexandria and Fairfax County for assistance should extra police be needed.

No Fresh Start, Found Hanging

BUCKNER, Mo. (AP) — Shannon Victor Lee Allison of Callaway, Minn., recently moved to Buckner to live with a sister. Mrs. Sharon Butler said her 15-year-old brother hoped to make a fresh start in school, leaving behind a poor scholastic record at Callaway. Yesterday, Shannon learned that he would have to transfer his school records to enroll in high school here. A few hours later, a cousin, James Butler, found Shannon's body hanging in a barn near the Butler home.

Cincinnati Keeping The Braves In Good Standing

By ED WILKS
The Reds are keeping the Milwaukee Braves in the black in that National League pennant race.

All-Stars Plan Outrun, Outpass Attack Tomorrow

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
CHICAGO (AP)—Using a double-unit backfield, the College All-Stars will try to outpass and outrun the Detroit Lions tomorrow night.

They have power and speed in such runners as John Sample of Maryland State and Kowalsky. They have exceptional passers in Hill, Tom Forrestal of Navy and Ninowski.

The Bucs now have won seven in a row—their longest success story since 1949, when they won eight straight.

Third-place San Francisco rapped St. Louis 11-2, and Los Angeles escaped the cellar (while Cincinnati tumbled in) by beating the Chicago Cubs 6-3 in the other NL games.

Joe Adcock's two-run 15th homer put the opener out of reach in a three-run first inning against Joe Nuxhall (9-9). The Braves then made it a rout with six in the eighth, with winning pitcher Juan Pizarro and Pafko each hitting two-run singles.

The Pirates rushed to a 6-0 lead in two innings on a pair of two-run homers by Bob Clemente and Bill Mazeroski's one-on shot off loser Jack Meyer (1-6). Ted Kluszewski hit two doubles and a triple.

Bob Smith won his first, in relief, but Vern Law had to get the final out after the Phils, who closed the gap on a pair of pinch-hit, three-run homers by Rip Reese and Bob Bowman, scored another three in the ninth, two on Willie-Jones' homer.

Rookie Jim Davenport, Valmy Thomas and Willie Mays homered for seven San Francisco runs while Ruben Gomez won his seventh with an eight-hitter. Wilmer Mizell (8-4) lost it.

The Dodgers, blowing a 5-0 lead, finally made it with one out in the ninth when Don Zimmer singled and Elmer Valo followed with a pinch double off losing reliever Don Elston (7-7). Fred Kipp (5-4) won it in relief.

Stanly Super Drugs Blanks Greenville Club

Despite Draw, Crawford Says He's No. 1

NEW YORK (AP)—For whatever it may be worth to world welterweight champion Virgil Akins, Mickey Crawford now regards himself as the No. 1 contender for the crown.

"Why shouldn't I?" scowled the Saginaw, Mich., boxer-artist today. "I know I won last night's fight with Gaspar Ortega. And even though they called it a draw, I still regard myself as No. 1 contender."

Well, what Crawford says may be true, but the chances are that his next battle will be with this same Ortega. They now have met twice. A month ago, Ortega won a split decision. Last night in Madison Square Garden they fought to a draw.

There's no doubt that the deadlock will work to Crawford's advantage. Ortega currently is No. 1 on the list for Virgil Akins' crown. He needed a victory over Crawford to cement his claims.

Actually, Crawford made him look bad through most of the fight and the Associated Press saw Mickey as victor, 6-4. That card agreed with Judge Joe Eppley's.

However, Judge Bill Recht saw Ortega the winner, 7-3. Referee Barney Felix called it all even, 4-4-2 in rounds, and 5-5 in points, again in that tilt.

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Four games are on tap for the second round of the State Softball tournament here tonight.

Stanley Super Drugs of Charlotte meets Burner n Futierouf Greensboro, Whitney Furniture of Winston-Salem plays Brock Ice Cream of Hendersonville, McLean Trucking of Winston-Salem goes against Minette Mills of Grover, and Sterling Jewelry of Fayetteville takes on Cannon Mills.

In the opening round last night, Stanley Drugs blanked Carolina Dairy of Greenville, 1-0; Whitney took a 3-0 win over Biers-Somers of Burlington; Minette edged Waco Heights of Raleigh, 3-2; and Cannon Mills defeated City Beverage of Winston-Salem, 4-2.

The Carolina Dairies club earned its berth in the state tournament by breezing through the Northeastern District tournament at Greenville. In that tournament, they captured eight victories out of nine ball games, racked up one no-hitter and several homers.

Coach Pete Caraway's Greenville club was lanced by pitcher Bill McHallich and hitters Brownie Tripp, Jerry Warren, and Bill Altman.

Greenville's club got four hits in last night's defeat, and committed no errors. Bill McHallich hurled for the Dairies, giving up only three hits. The only run scored by Stanley Drugs was a homerun in the third inning by the catcher.

Leading the Greenville hitting was shortstop Ike Riddick, who posted two doubles. McHallich singled and so did Blaney Moye.

The Dairies play tomorrow night against the winner of tonight's 6:00 ball game. It is possible that they might face Stanley Drugs again in that tilt.

Shaw Planning To Fire Up Eagle Club

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—New head coach Buck Shaw says he is trying to build a fire under the Philadelphia Eagles that City Fire Commissioner Frank McNamee, club president, can't extinguish with one of his fire engines.

Shaw, sixth Philadelphia coach in nine years, knows the men who run the Eagles haven't demonstrated patience as a virtue. But he isn't the least concerned.

Standing on the sidelines watching 45 players running through drills at this training site, the silver-haired coach commented: "I have a one-year contract. I'll do the best I can. If they are not happy with me or I'm not happy with them at the end of the year there will be no hard feelings. We'll part company."

With that out of the way he turned to a discussion of the job at hand, moulding a team capable of making loud noises in the National Football League's Eastern Division.

"Frankly, I've got quality on my first string offensive and defensive unit, but we lack depth. An injury to a key man puts us in real trouble. We're thin in a lot of spots and not rich in any position."

Shaw counted his assets. "I've got Norm Van Brocklin at quarterback. He's fine, in good shape and I know can do the job if we give him proper protection and good pass receivers. Not only is Van Brocklin one of the best passers ever to play in this league but he gives this club confidence. You can see the effect he has on the rest of the squad. They respect him."

"We hope," said the 59-year-old coach, "that veterans such as Bobby Walston, Pete Retzlaff and Tommy McDonald, Andy Nacrelli, a kid from Fordham, Bob Gunderman and old Pete Pihos if he comes back, will snap up Van Brocklin's passes."

One of the big changes in building up pass protection for Van Brocklin is the switch of Chuck Bednarik, an all-time great line backer, from defensive to offensive center.

A Look At Athletics

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles written by Dr. N. M. Jorgensen of East Carolina College Athletic Department, designed to better acquaint the reader with athletics, and, more specifically, ECC athletics.)

Previous to 1880 Athletics was largely student-sponsored. There were no highly paid coaches, no training tables, no very large amount of money involved and little faculty support. In 1884 a committee representing twenty-two of the leading institutions attempted to secure the agreement of the college authorities to a number of propositions, such as: That athletic instructors shall be appointed by the faculty and not by the students; that a standing committee of college representatives shall pass on the rules and regulations for conducting the contests. These principles were not generally accepted.

Although football grew in popularity in spite of conferences and restrictions, soon after 1900 it was threatened everywhere. Doctors, educators, and ministers spoke and wrote against it; an unusually large number of injuries and deaths resulted from the game. The arguments were that it had become a profession, not a sport, that it took too much time and interest from the studies, that its possible value was for only a few, that it was an "academic nuisance," and that the large gate receipts made it a commercial enterprise.

In the midst of this hostility a convention of delegates from the leading colleges met in 1905 to reform the game. The major result of the meeting was the forming of the National Collegiate Athletic Association which was empowered to make rules and regulations for all major sports played by the colleges. The association also controls the eligibility of the participants and endeavors to maintain athletics "on an ethical plane and high purpose of education." Football rules were revised so that the plays became more open, and penalties for the violations of the regulations were provided. With this new lease on life the game has increased rapidly in importance. Now it is not uncommon to have as many as 100,000 spectators attend a game.—N. M. Jorgensen.

Lenoir Playing In Teen-er Loop Semi-Final Round
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Lenoir, N.C., meets Struthers, Ohio, here today in the quarterfinals of the VFW Teener baseball tournament.

The survivor plays the defending champion, Panama Canal Zone. The winner of that game takes on Bossier City, La., for the title tomorrow.

Greensboro Star Planning On ECC
Larry Crayton, 19-year-old Prep School pitcher star from Greensboro, has decided to get his schooling at East Carolina College.

Coach Jim Mallory said this morning that Crayton told him by phone last night that he definitely plans to attend ECC.

Crayton has been one of the most-sought-after hurlers in North Carolina during the past three years. He established several records at Greensboro for outstanding mound work.

The lefthander is currently playing with the semi-pro Angler N.C. baseball team, which is in Wichita, Kansas, for the National Semi-Pro baseball tournament. He hurled for Dunn this summer before that club folded. He posted a 10-2 record for Dunn.

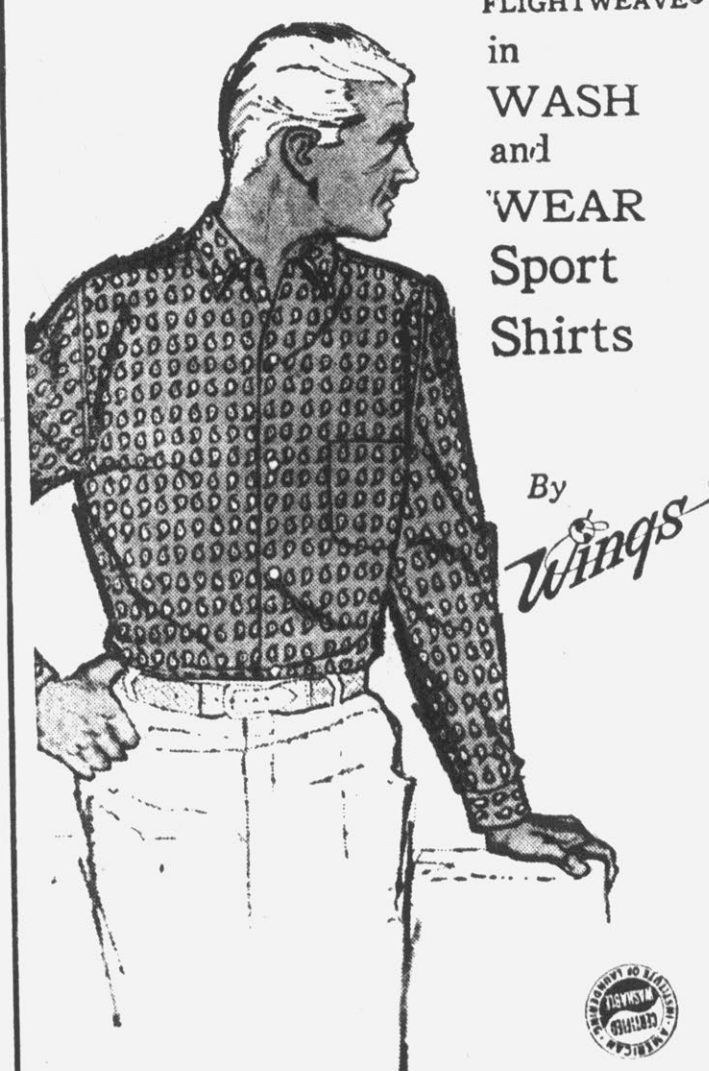

Mallory stated this morning that Crayton has been approached by many colleges and several major league teams. Due to his size, however, the professional clubs have not as yet seen fit to invest. Crayton stands 5-9 and weighs 165 pounds.

"Larry told me last night that unless some club offers him a real large sum of money, he definitely will come to ECC. He wants to go to school," Mallory said.

Arnold Palmer, 28, of Latrobe, Pa., made it seven victories in the last two years when he won the New York Boy's Club tournament at East Norwilek, N. Y.

1958 ECC Grid Slate Was Made For Fans

The East Carolina College 1958 football schedule, which opens September 13, has been drawn up this year with a special treat for local fans.

Athletic Director N. M. Jorgensen has managed to snare six home contests for Coach Jack Boone's Pirates for the coming campaign. The home games will feature Randolph-Macon, Western Carolina, Catawba, Guilford, Presbyterian, and Emory-Henry.

Two of those home games have been arranged to take place at 2:30 in the afternoon. In recent years, local fans have expressed a desire for afternoon football at ECC. The afternoon tilts will be with Western Carolina on October 18 and with Randolph-Macon on November 15. The WCC game will be Homecoming for the Buccaneers.

The first four games of the season will take place in Greenville.

Carolina Loop Heads Undecided

DURHAM (AP)—The Carolina League club owners still haven't decided whether they'll continue using the Shaughnessy playoffs at the end of the season.

Such playoffs, limited to the top four teams, call for sudden death elimination games with the two finalists playing a best-of-three series.

A proposal that all eight teams participate was rejected at a meeting of the owners here yesterday.

The group agreed to decide on the length of the playoffs among the first four teams after season standings are determined.

Senators, Orioles Had A Good Time Last Night

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

A couple of pasties had themselves a ball last night in the American League.

The Washington Senators, who hadn't beaten Whitey Ford in almost four years, rapped the New York Yankees' stubby southpaw ace but good in a five-run eighth for a 9-4 victory.

And the Baltimore Orioles, who had lost seven in a row to Frank Sullivan of Boston, beat the big right-hander for the first time since Sept. 9, 1956, with a 2-1 victory over the Red Sox.

These turn-arounds cut the Yankees' lead to 14 1/2 games over second-place Chicago and dumped Boston into a third-place tie with Detroit. The White Sox split a twin-night pair with Kansas City, winning 6-5 after an 11-inning 2-1 defeat. The Tigers swept two from Cleveland 6-2 and 3-2.

In the National League, the Milwaukee Braves took two from Cincinnati, 9-2 and 4-2, and moved 5 1/2 games ahead of Pittsburgh, although the second-place Pirates stretched their winning streak to seven with a 10-9 victory at Philadelphia. San Francisco rapped St. Louis 11-2 and Los Angeles defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-5.

Ford, now 14-6, last lost to Washington Sept. 20, 1954. He had won 12 in a row since, three this year. Roy Sievers, the defending champ, tied Mickey Mantle for the AL lead with his 33rd home run, a two-run shot in the fourth.

Eddie Yost and Clint Courtney also homered for the Nats. Courtney's also was a two-run blow, capping the big eighth that bagged it after Norm Siebern and Hank Bauer had hit successive homers for a 4-3 Yankee lead in the sixth. Truman Clevenger (7-6) won it in relief.

Gene Woodling drove in both Oriole runs, breaking up a 1-1 tie with a single in the fifth. Arnie Portocarrero (12-7) made it five straight over Boston with Billy O'Dell's relief help.

Harry Simpson's home run won the opener for the A's, ending Dick Donovan's winning string at six. Ned Garver won his 10th with a seven-hitter, although walking six.

The White Sox nailed the nightcap with two out in the ninth on Billy Goodman's base-loaded single off losing reliever Bob Grim. Bob Shaw won it in relief after the A's chased Jim Wilson in a five-run fourth capped by Roger Maris' grand-slam home run.

Herb Moford allowed only three hits in the nightcap at Cleveland. He gave up a home run to Vic Power and a double and RBI triple to Rocky Colavito, the Injun outfielder who worked three hitless, shutout innings of relief in his pitching debut. Coot Veal's sacrifice fly tagged Hoyt Wilhelm with his sixth defeat in the seventh inning.

The Tigers took the opener with seven consecutive hits in a five-run fifth inning.

Rose Football Practice

All boys interested in playing football for Rose High school during the 1958 football season (varsity) are asked to report to the Rose High Field House, tomorrow morning at 7:00.

Coach Bud Phillips said today that all boys should bring shorts and shoes for the workout. He also wished to inform all interested boys that insurance for gridgers this year will be $2.00.

Phillips will have 11 lettermen returning to his squad this season. His 1957 football team posted a record of 2-6.

Harris Has A Better Chance If Bout Is Long

ARROWHEAD SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—The longer the fight lasts, the better chance challenger Roy Harris believes he has to whip champion Floyd Patterson in their 15-round title fight Monday in Los Angeles.

The amiable, 25-year-old Texan, referring to his years as a barefoot brawler on his father's farm at Cut and Shoot, said:

"I always have grown stronger as a fight went along. I don't see where this 'un would be any different."

"Against Willie Pastrano. Bob Baker, against Willi Besmanoff, I was gettin' better as the rounds went on."

Trainer Bill Gore intimated Roy would box again today. He resumed glove drills yesterday after a two-day layoff. The rest appeared to do him good.

Ty Cobb Blasts Modern Baseball And Players

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Ty Cobb advocates greater use of the stolen base, thinks modern players don't show enough initiative and inventiveness, and blames the batters, not the pitchers, for the recent baseball epidemic.

Otherwise the game of baseball is being played not much differently from his day—with few allowances made for the lively ball. He believes such stars as Mickey Mantle, Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Willie Mays, Whitey Ford, Alvin Dark, Hank Aaron and Eddie Mathews would have been stars in the 1910's, '20's and '30's.

The 71-year-old Hall of Famer thinks the modern era of athletes is a pretty good crop but he adds that the old timers were more aggressive, and had more initiative, will to win and devotion to their work.

"I realize we are in a different era today," the remarkably erect, alert and rugged-looking Georgia Peach said in a recent visit to New York. "The home run now reigns supreme. The brainy, old-fashioned type of play has given way to the shuffling, swing-from-the-heels craze."

"I still insist there is room for more inside baseball, such as the bunt, the hit-and-run and the stolen base. These tactics have been almost completely discarded."

"Today's players are just as fast as we were, but they don't make as much use of their speed. They're reluctant to steal bases. Admittedly, the only stolen base that actually wins a game is the theft of home. But the steal of second and third can be made into a potent weapon if employed properly, even in a lop-sided game."

"I was always ready to steal a base, even when we were ahead by five or six runs. That was just to let the pitcher know I'd run anytime. Consequently, in a tight game, if I got on base, the pitcher became nervous. His attention was distracted from the batter. Don't you think that helped the fellow at the plate? We won many a ball game that way."

Cobb regards with amusement the attempts being made to discourage the knock-down pitch.

"Throwing at the hitter is nothing new," he said. "It's as old as baseball itself. It belongs in the game. I don't advocate throwing at a fellow's head. As a matter of fact, it's easier and more effective to throw at his feet. That loosens 'em up. They won't take a toe-hold once they're made to skip rope."

Cobb laughed out loud when asked to comment on the helmets being worn by batters today.

"Fellows like Hughie Jennings and Josh Clarke, who were great at getting hit, would use the helmet in good stead," he said. "I can just see them stick their heads out and get nicked on the helmet. I believe the helmet would have made 400 hitters out of some of the boys. You know, a single, a walk and hit-by-pitch a day. That could add up to .400 over the season."

Groat Praises Philly Pitching

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Dick Groat of the Pittsburgh Pirates sat in front of his locker before last night's game with the Philadelphia Phillies praising the club's pitching staff and bemoaning the lack of hitting.

"Boy," said Groat, "our pitching has been out of this world, fantastic. It's had to be. We aren't hitting a lick. We're winning a lot of low scoring games."

Frank Thomas, the club's big RBI man and home run star, and Bill Virdon, nodded assent. Then the three got up and headed for what they termed much-needed batting practice.

Groat's parting shot as he left the clubhouse was, "We'll snap out of it."

The Pittsburgh shortstop was right. The pennant contending Pirates snapped out of it and they couldn't have picked a better night.

That out of this world, fantastic pitching went to pot in a slam bang slugfest with the Philadelphia Phillies. Pittsburgh won it, 10-9, with a 16 hit attack, including three home runs, two triples and two doubles.

Everyone shared in the gun as six Pirates collected two hits each and big Ted Kluszewski bagged three, a triple and a pair of doubles.

Roberto Clemente, the Puerto Rican outfielder, was the big gun with a pair of home runs on successive times at bat in the first two innings.

Pitcairn Island, where the mutineers of the Bounty landed in 1790, now has a population of 193. Its area is two square miles.

Double Victory Gives Danville Big CL Margin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Danville imposed a twin black-out on High Point-Thomasville last night. Two victories, with the count 2-0 each time, gave the Leafs undisputed possession of the Carolina League lead.

Even so, the margin was only half a game. Greensboro edged Wilson 4-3 in a 10-inning contest to stay close to the top position it lost to Danville.

The three games were the only action. Rain forced postponement of doubleheaders for Raleigh at Burlington and Winston-Salem at Durham.

Marshall Renfro pitched one-hit ball for Danville's first win. Two unearned runs were all the Leafs needed to edge out the Hi-Toms. In the second game, winner Berl Tiefenthaler allowed the Hi-Toms four hits.

The double loss left the Hi-Toms in third place, 2 1/2 games behind Danville.

Jack Fisher, pitching for Wilson, held Greensboro to one hit for seven innings, then saw the Yanks overcome a three-run deficit to win in overtime.

Walter Alston Will Be Rehired In '59

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Walter Alston not only will finish the season as manager of the sagging Los Angeles Dodgers, but will be rehired next year, says Vice President Buzzy Bavasi.

And several rookies will join the Dodger lineup, Bavasi told a news conference yesterday.

"I talked it over with Walter today," he reported. "We decided something had to be done after last night's miserable showing. (Chicago won, 9-3.)"

Of the plans for rookies, he added: "We need some new faces. When we brought the Dodgers west we wanted the Los Angeles fans to see the 'Old Dodgers.'"

But the veterans simply aren't delivering, the manager added. Neither he nor Alston mentioned any Dodger regular for criticism.

"This is going to give us a good chance to build up the club," Alston commented. He said he plans to keep the same coaching staff.

Bavasi said the Dodger payroll is highest in the National League and that $500,000 has been spent in recent months acquiring young players for future use.

Alston was hired as manager in 1954 and won pennants in 1955 and 1956. His 1958 team beat the New York Yankees in the World Series.

How The Bears Nearly Killed Selves Off In What Is Now Croatan Forest

By T. M. DIGGS

Editor, New Bern Sun-Journal
Written for The Associated Press
NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)—Back in the days before the bears in Croatan National Forest began committing suicide, New Bern was known as the finest market in the state for wild game.

As recent as December of 1909 a New Bern newspaper reported that "every day one can be supplied with bear, deer, raccoon, opossum, rabbits, squirrels, turkeys, wild geese and ducks and other wild fowl by the different markets around town."

The wild game is no longer available on the markets. Rabbits, quail and deer have been holding their own pretty well insofar as sportsmen are concerned.

But along about 1935 and 1936 hunters who were loth to abandon their old ways and their hounds were forced to admit that bears had almost disappeared from the pocosins and swamps which were being incorporated in the Croatan National Forest. They became more numerous in 1937, and it remained for the late Tom Haywood, county commissioner and merchant at Croatan, to supply the reason.

Numbers of oldtimers who were residents of that section and delighted in hunting bears and in consuming bear meat gathered regularly at Haywood's store for discussions of everything from presidential possibilities and the worth of county commissioners to the more important matter of bear hunting. Ideas he gathered then led Haywood to the invention of the kicking machine which won him nationwide renown and scattered members of his self-kicking fraternity throughout the United States.

It didn't seem right for the bears to disappear, and hounds weren't worth their keep except that the oldtimers held a life-long attachment for them. An expedition was organized. Without a clue, the investigators faced a discouraging and difficult task. Determination drove them into the depth of the forest, to points which hadn't been visited by white men before.

In the seriousness of the situation, the bear hunters of the Croatan area summoned a specialist from Washington to accompany them. He boasted a long acquaintance with bears and their habits. The investigators were encouraged and all bear hunters were cheered by his presence.

In an almost impenetrable pocosin of water and small bushes entwined with bamboo vines the party came, near the end of a long and tiring day's hunt, to an immense pile of the bones of bears. It seemed a location at which there had been gathered the bones of all of the bears of the forest area. The bones were proof that something was happening to the bears of the section. Few could have survived.

But what was happening and why the bones should be gathered and piled in that particular place was a new problem more mystifying than the investigators had anticipated. They sat down and rubbed their chins and scratched their beards collectively and individually. The author rilly from Washington said he had never heard of a suicide pact among bears.

Then one of the investigators noticed, and called to the attention of the others, the fact that a giant sycamore tree leaned out over the edge of Catfish Lake and the pile of bones. Closer investigation showed that the bears had been climbing that tree. The white, slick bark bore the marks of their claws. There was speculation that the bears had been climbing the tree and jumping off.

The expedition was about to admit itself bested when, high on the underside of the overhanging sycamore, Haywood noticed a hole entering the trunk. He noticed more than that, and he called to the attention of the party the swarming of bees about the hole. Wild bees had colonized that natural home in the densest part of the forest. It was clear to the hunters that immense stores of Tupelo-gum honey were gathered there.

The solution to the entire problem came tumbling from the lips of the old-timers then. They knew the fondness of bears for honey. They saw as clearly as though the tragedy was being enacted before them, the big bears and the little bears and the middle-sized bears climbing that tree for the stores of honey. They saw them reach the proper height and reach around with their paws and, because of the size of the tree trunk, fail to touch the honey.

Then they saw the bear, cautiously at first, slip around the side of the trunk and hang directly at the point of the hole and the honey. The tree was well-scarred to reveal the tactic. It was when the bear reached for the coveted honey store that the tragedy occurred. He loosed one paw. Remaining claws ripped out of the bark. True to that instinct which lands a cat on her feet, the bear squirmed in mid-air.

Directly below were great cypress "knees" jutting up through the pile of bones. No bear could escape a fatal impact with those sharp "knees." The specialist was forced to admit it when it was pointed out to him.

Uncle Sam had placed a fine bunch of foresters in that section to look after the Croatan National Forest area. It wasn't difficult, said Haywood, to persuade them to cut those cypress knees down to the muck on the lake shore. The foresters used to smile and say nothing when the story was related to them, but that, Haywood said, was modesty on their part.

A few years later near Maysville, in the Croatan National Forest, Wade Midgett, one of the guides who lived at Hubert, ended the life of a 330-pound bear with his rifle after hunters saw the big animal surrounded by their hounds in the open ground. In 1939, J. D. Dudley of Maysville went to feed his hogs and found a 350-pound sow had been killed and torn up in the pen. He organized a posse which sat in trees about the pen at night, flashed a light on the bear when it returned the next night for the remainder of the hog, and opened fire on the bear.

At about the same time three New Bernians, fishing in Campbell's Creek near Aurora, were within 40 feet of a giant bear which climbed out of the water, stood upright and turned to snarl at them before dropping to its four feet to make its way off into the bushes. C. B. Thompson of New Bern estimated that bear to weigh between 400 and 500 pounds, and the late Dr. Raymond Pollock, who declared that he had never had a bigger thrill in his fishing experience, said the animal was even larger than Thompson's estimate.

Bear stories accumulated at about that time, but no one ever thought to learn the fate of the sycamore tree beehive.

Backs Up Cooley's Efforts

RALEIGH (AP)—The folks back home are strongly behind the efforts of Rep. Harold D. Cooley to save the parity concept of price support programs for farm commodities.

A telegram of appreciation and encouragement was sent to the Tar Heel congressman, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, by Gov. Hodges last night.

The governor sent the wire on the recommendation of his Farm Advisory Committee, which met with Hodges yesterday and reviewed the status of farm legislation in Congress.

They agreed that action is needed to protect the state's cotton acreage allotment, which will fall from 494,000 acres for this year to 395,000 acres in 1959 unless legislation is passed.

Hodges said some textile leaders have told him there is not enough white cotton on hand to keep the mills operating the rest of this year.

"We are sitting on the edge of a volcano in North Carolina," the governor warned.

Hodges said Cooley has advised him that a farm bill covering cotton cannot be brought to the House floor under general rules which would allow adoption of amendments by a simple majority vote. To do so, Hodges explained, would risk amendments crippling the parity programs. "City boys" in Congress are out to do away with the parity concept, he said.

Advisory committee members had praise for Cooley's stand. T.B. Upchurch of Raeford said Cooley has only been trying to protect the interests of North Carolina farmers.

An optimistic view was voiced by A. C. Edwards of Hookerton, executive vice president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation. "We'll come out of this thing with the parity concept still in effect," he predicted. "I think we'll get the legislation presented by Cooley's committee."

While he urged a fight for the parity programs, Gov. Hodges said Tar Heel farmers "must be realistic and continue to diversify at the same time." He suggested that more storage for corn and other grains is an immediate need which bankers could help solve.

Mr. Gladding expressed his appreciation for the excellent teamwork and cooperation of each employee, pointing out that each employee has contributed to this performance by accepting their responsibility for their own safety as well as the safety of their fellow employees.

If the plant continues to operate without a major injury for about 182 more days, employees will receive the Board of Directors' Award again.

Again Win Top Safety Award

KINSTON — The Du Pont Company's highest safety award, the Board of Directors' was won by the local plant for the third time it was announced today by W.E. Gladding, Plant Manager. The Kinston Plant qualified for this award at midnight on Friday, August 8, 1958.

The Company's Safety Award Plan is based on employees working a certain number of exposure hours without a time-losing or major injury. The Kinston Plant has now operated 434 days, or 4,230,000 exposure hours, without such an injury since May 31, 1957.

Mr. Gladding expressed his appreciation for the excellent teamwork and cooperation of each employee, pointing out that each employee has contributed to this performance by accepting their responsibility for their own safety as well as the safety of their fellow employees.

Opposite Twins 'Politically'

HONOLULU (AP) — Robert Cates, Oahu County Democratic chairman, and Edward Johnston, Oahu County Republican chairman, are opposites politically — but look-alikes in other ways.

Both are 40 years old, live in the same neighborhood, originally came from Illinois and arrived in Hawaii as servicemen. Both sell insurance and at one time worked for the same concern at adjoining desks. They served together on the board of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and each became active in local politics in 1954.

As an added "resemblance," each feels a little sorry for the other. Each thinks the other is in the wrong political party.

Unimpressive In Eyes Of A Judge

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — It was an unusual arrangement, all right, and it was done to impress two girl friends in the car, two teen-age boys told the judge.

But the girls said they weren't impressed, and neither was the judge.

The youths were observed by a state highway patrolman as they drove 70 m.p.h. toward Mansfield on U. S. 308. One boy, 18, was in the back seat, leaning over the front seat and driving. His companion, 17, was on the right hand side of the front seat and operating the gas pedal.

Before suspending their driver's licenses, the judge asked, "Who was operating the brakes?" The youths forgot to arrange for that.

A Bigger America Lies Ahead

By SAM DAWSON
 AP Business News Analyst
 A bigger America—that's for sure. A better America—that's for us to decide. But chances are it will be better. And it might even be fantastic—for business right here at home as well as on space platforms and in colonies on the moon.
 Growth of American business in the space age can be charted from figures we have today. We know there will be more people and therefore more needs. We know that research going on today will be able to meet these needs—and doubtless a lot of desires which right now we don't even know we'll have.
 The business of meeting these demands and of spawning and then cultivating new desires—that's what the industrialist, the worker, the salesman will be up to when the next generation takes over.
 There will be more jobs, more income per family. There is sure to be more youngsters to feed and educate, more cars to crowd more highways, more oldsters for the travel, entertainment and health industries to cater to, and a still higher percentage of Americans owning their own homes.
 If you think the world of the consumer is already going electronic, antibiotic, nuclear and jet propelled—you haven't seen anything yet.
 A single meal in one pill could be on the market a generation hence.
 TV screens that hang on walls seem sure soon to be a salesman's item.
 Stop worrying about leaving the windows open when you go out. Windows that close when it rains are nearing the drafting boards.
 You're barely used to blankets that heat as the temperature falls, before it's time to get ready for ones that cool you off on a hot night.
 Radios powered by the sun are just around the corner, and maybe cars that steer themselves.
 These are a few of the new things ahead for businessmen to make and sell.
 Now for the reasons that America is going to get bigger and more crowded and therefore need so much more of the things you already use or know about.
 You have only to project into time the millions of youngsters already born but still under marriage age to know that there will be a lot more families and a lot more middle-aged productive workers 10 and 20 years from now. True, marriages and birth rates rise and fall as times turn exceptionally good or exceptionally bad.
 But remember, two million youths now turn 18 each year. Ten years hence there will be four million a year. And there's no reason to believe times will be bad in 1968.
 There are 114 million persons now of driving age, and based on the known figures of present population there will be 132 million within 10 years. The auto industry confidently expects that the present 6 million families having two cars will have swelled to 12 million by then.
 Industry leaders predict that just to take care of the greater population 15 years from now, with its added needs plus the added desires they intend to create, there will have to be 22 million more jobs. That will call for more business firms to make and distribute the growing total of production.
 At its average rate of over the last 15 years, the gross national product (the dollar value of the total output of goods and services) will go from its present 432 billion dollars annually to more than 700 billion dollars in the next 15 years.
 All that money kicking around sound exciting? Just stick around and maybe you'll have a bigger hunk than your present share of it.

Prince Of Idea From A Princess

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A Romanian princess advocates the return of the American male to his rightful place as head of the household.
 Princess Ileana, now Ileana Isarescu, American housewife and mother of six, believes it is the duty of the American women to see to it that the men accept this position. "There must be resumed the strength of family organization and authority. Let us women—it depends so much on us—try to bring about that model of a family for the sake of our children."
 The princess feels delinquency is mostly due to the falling apart of the family organization. The parents must set the example if they expect obedience from children.

Pilot In Debt To Ground Observer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A young jet fighter pilot from Lockbourne Air Force Base here is mighty glad the F. B. Wagner family of Pedro, Ohio, participates in Ground Observer Corps airplane spotting.
 First Lt. George Kersey bailed out of his F86L jet fighter shortly before it exploded over Lawrence County, Ohio. Medical aid reached Kersey quickly because Mrs. F. B. Wagner, wife of an Observer Corps supervisor, spotted his falling plane and parachute and notified Air Force authorities.
 The lieutenant is recovering from neck injuries in an Air Force hospital.

Judge Orders Jury 'Try Again' To Avoid Mistrial

JEFFERSON, Ga. (AP)—Judge last night when it was deadlocked after 3 hours and 20 minutes of deliberations.

Allen, a 37-year-old admitted bootlegger, was tried for murder in the robbery-slaying of Jefferson merchant Charles H. Drake Sr. The jury was sent to a motel

60. He was tagged as the finger-man and accomplice when Charles (Rocky) Rothschild confessed firing the shots that killed Drake in 1956.

Rothschild's confession cleared James Foster, 40-year-old house painter from Greer, S.C. Foster twice was convicted of the killing and sentenced to death.

Rothschild, 33-year-old former policeman from Cairo, Ill., testified that Allen told him Drake carried $5,000 cash. He also said Allen drove him to the Drake home and picked him up after the shooting.

Allen, currently serving a five-year federal liquor term, denied any part in the Drake slaying. In an unsworn statement permitted under Georgia law, he said he had never seen Rothschild until two years after Drake was killed.

In his closing argument, defense attorney William E. Spence termed the case against Allen the weakest he had ever seen. He argued that Rothschild was trying to get Allen convicted only to achieve Foster's release and that Rothschild then could repudiate his confession. He said Rothschild and Foster were partners in crime and that Rothschild confessed only to save his friend from the electric chair.

Harry W. Davis, a special prosecutor, urged the jury to return a straight verdict of guilty. Without a recommendation for mercy, a conviction would call for the death penalty.

He ridiculed the defense argument that Rothschild would repudiate his confession and said, "I don't believe any jury in this county would free Rothschild."

The judge, in his charge, told the jury three verdicts were possible; guilty, which would mean the death penalty; guilty with a recommendation for mercy, which would mean life in prison; or innocent.

The prosecution plan was to bring Rothschild to trial for murder after the Allen case concluded. Rothschild has said he will plead guilty. Georgia law permits the judge to accept the plea and fix the sentence or hold a jury trial.

After the Rothschild case is over, Foster is scheduled to get a new trial. He is expected to go free, presumably on a directed verdict of acquittal. Freed shortly after Rothschild's confession, Foster has been at the Allen trial every day.

Retired Chief To Fight Council

CHARLOTTE (AP)—"If I know my Charlotte people," says Frank N. Littlejohn, "there will be some vacancies on the city council next spring."

And the peppery, 73-year-old police chief, abruptly removed from office yesterday, adds that he will make every effort to unseat several councilmen.

Littlejohn submitted a letter to the council stating his intention to resign Sept. 1. The council voted 4-3 to accept the resignation immediately, although continuing his salary through Sept. 15.

By the same vote, the council named Capt. E. C. Selvey as acting chief. Littlejohn had recommended Asst. Chief John S. Hord.

Also brushed aside was a Littlejohn recommendation that a police officer be made clerk of Charlotte Recorder's Court. The council chose a clerk in the superior court clerk's office, L. Carl Cook.

Littlejohn, police chief since 1947, says the council action represents "a direct slap... I think my persecution at the moment can all be attributed to digging out the rotten court mess."

Littlejohn referred to alleged irregularities in Recorder's Court which resulted in a grand jury probe.

He charged that council members are "determined to tear down the police department; to destroy what I've spent 20 years trying to build."

Littlejohn, whose long police career has included many clashes with city government officials, says next spring's election will settle what he called the main issue.

"Are we going to have a decent city, or are we going to turn it over to slimy, venal politicians?"

Honored yesterday by the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce as its "Driver of the Year," he was asked to pass on his formula for safety. Said Miller: "Just decide that you never have the right of way."

Stratosphere Balloonists Crash; Big Test Postponed

ASHLAND, Wis. (AP) — The crash of a training balloon last night injured the balloon builder and an Air Force researcher who was preparing for a solo flight to test man's reaction to isolation in space. The test was postponed.

Capt. Grover Schock, 32, and Otto C. Winzen, 40, suffered extensive injuries when their open gondola plunged 100 or more feet to the earth after they cut loose from the balloon as it headed out over Lake Superior. They apparently released rather than be blown over the water in darkness. They smashed into a pasture half a mile inland when the parachute on the basket failed to open.

Their fall was witnessed by a police officer, a waiting ambulance crew and two men in a plane sent aloft to follow the balloon.

Mrs. G. E. Terwilliger, on whose farm the crash occurred, said, "There was a terrific thud when the gondola came down 100 yards from our house."

She said the balloon had been flying low, dragging a line that came close enough to grab.

"I saw the balloon pass behind a grove of trees and while it was out of sight I heard a loud report. Then the balloon climbed into the sky without the basket."

When she reached the scene, the open parachute was spread on the ground and Schock and Winzen were being placed in an ambulance.

Schock, a space biology specialist, was cut under the chin from one side of his face to the other. He also suffered back and possible internal injuries. He was in critical condition but showing improvement, according to Capt. George Ruff, an Air Force physician treating him at St. Joseph's Hospital here.

The physician said Schock could not be moved to determine the full extent of his injuries. Assigned to Holloman Air Force Base, N. M., Schock was raised in Galesburg, Ill.

Winzen is president of Winzen Research, Inc., Minneapolis, builder of plastic balloons for experimental purposes. He is in good condition, but suffered two broken ribs, a fractured right arm and back injuries. He will be hospitalized for several weeks.

M. Lee Lewis, former Navy balloonist employed by Winzen, said it was the first accident resulting in injuries during the 12-year history of plastic balloons.

The pair had ascended from St. Paul, Minn., 175 miles southwest of Ashland, yesterday morning. The flight was made so that Winzen could qualify Schock for a stratosphere takeoff.

Schock was scheduled to start his 20-mile-high flight tomorrow morning from an open pit mine near Crosby, Minn.

An Air Force officer said in Minneapolis that the flight had been postponed indefinitely, but will be carried out at some future date with a replacement for Schock if the officer is not able to make it.

Ahead $6 Before Police Drove Up

PHOENIX (AP) — Mary Molina, 11, picked out a vacant lot and rented parking space to motorists attending graduation ceremonies in Montgomery Stadium.

A resident complained to police that the lot was not blacktopped — as required by city ordinance — and the cars were kicking up dust.

The police arrived, and closed the parking lot operation. The $6 collected by Mary was held for "safekeeping of the owner of the lot, unknown at the time."

Banged Up His Own Car, Jailed

DIXON, Ill. (AP) — Arthur L. Wolf, 21, got so mad at his stalled car that he took a crank and smashed the windshield, headlights and side windows and was hammering on a fender when arrested.

The car gears had jammed on a parking lot.

Police Magistrate Lawrence E. Boos fined Wolf $25 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge and jailed him when he was unable to pay the fine.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market snapped out of the doldrums today with prices headed higher in early afternoon on stepped up trading.

Traders still were seeking low-priced stocks and specialties. There was an unusually large number of sizable blocks.

The market appeared to be headed for the first three-million share day since last week.

Gains were mostly fractions to a point. Losses were generally small.

Motors, steels, oils and rails worked higher. Metals and aircrafts were ragged.

American Motors was heavily traded and up almost a point at a new 1958 peak. Studebaker Packard hit the tape with blocks of 10,000 and 20,000 shares near midday and rose about 1/2.

Chrysler, Ford and General Motors also were up fractions, but less active.

Avco, yesterday's most active stock, opened on a 15,000 share block and posted a small gain.

Wilson Firm To Be General Contractors For Structure

Wilson Brothers and Company of Wilson will be general contractors for Guaranty Bank and Trust Company's new three-story home office building.

The bank's Executive Committee yesterday authorized bank officers to accept the Wilson firm's bid which had been under study since August 5. The committee also authorized acceptance of bids from C. E. Williams Plumbing and Heating Company of Greenville for plumbing, heating and air-conditioning, and from Dick's Electric Company of Wilson for electrical work.

Total cost of construction for the new building, which will be located opposite the Greenville City Hall, will be $408,318. That figure does not include costs of interior fixtures and furniture, for which bids were opened Tuesday; a vault; or land, according to President J. H. Waldrop.

Bids for the interior fixtures and furniture are still under study by bank officials and no contracts will be awarded until the study is completed, Waldrop said.

Jones Brothers' bid, coupled with bids for plumbing, heating, air-conditioning, and electrical work, was more than $4,000 lower than a bid from P. S. West Construction Company of Greenville and more than $9,000 lower than a bid from Dunn Building Supply Company of Greenville. Formal contracts with the low bidders will be signed next Wednesday morning and Waldrop said construction will begin immediately thereafter.

The new home office site will be on what is now a municipal parking lot opposite the City Hall. The location will include some parking facilities for customers, plus a drive-in banking window.

The bank's present headquarters location, on Evans Street, will be retained as a branch office of the system which presently has 17 units including four in Greenville.

Authorization for the bank's officers to accept the low bids came after members of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors had studied the base bids and alternate proposals with representatives of two Atlanta firms which are to direct the construction. Kruger, Incorporated, will be general supervisor for the project, and Norris and Company will handle architectural and engineering details.

Georgia-Florida Prices Weaken

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Prices continue to weaken on the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belt.

Volume, however, is holding fairly heavy. Capacity sales are recorded at an unusually large number of markets for this late in the season.

Prices dropped from $1 to $5 per hundred pounds yesterday. Most were in the $2 to $4 range, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported. The decline, continuing a trend noted each day this week, affected practically all offerings except a small amount of cutters.

Sales Tuesday grossed 8,952,205 pounds. The average price was a season low of $56.46 per hundred, a drop of $1.13 from Monday and three cents lower than that on the first day of sales. Season gross sales total 111,694,974 pounds for an average of $56.56.

Warehouses at High Springs, Jasper, Lake City and Madison, Fla., held final sales yesterday. Hahira, Ga., sales were scheduled to wind up today. Final sales will be held tomorrow at Adel, Nashville, Pearson, Sylvester and Valdosta, Ga., and Live Oak, Fla.
