

President Hopeful Public Pressure To Open Schools

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — President Eisenhower hopes public pressure will force reopening of closed schools in Arkansas and Virginia—and so has ordered federal legal action withheld “at this time.”

The President’s position in the school shutdown controversy over racial integration was set forth at the summer White House late yesterday.

After a 40-minute meeting with Eisenhower, Atty. Gen. Rogers told a news conference in connection with the wait-and-see policy the President approved: “I think it is clear to anybody that to just try to solve this problem by legal methods alone, just by law suits, is not very satisfactory.”

For that reason, Rogers said in a prepared statement the administration “is withholding a decision as to appropriate legal moves at this time.”

Rogers, the government’s chief law enforcement officer, made it clear there is likely to be federal legal action later if the schools closed in protest against the Supreme Court go-ahead on integration are not opened.

Rogers also talked of announced Justice Department plans to enlist the help of U.S. marshals for preservation of law and order in communities where there is resistance to admittance of Negroes to white schools.

But he did not rule out use of federal troops again if the marshals should find themselves unable to check violence such as broke out in Little Rock, Ark., a year ago. That violence caused Eisenhower to dispatch troops to Little Rock’s Central High School.

In Little Rock, Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus commented: “I have always maintained that the use of federal troops is illegal. They know it is illegal and that is why they are trying to avoid it.”

Faubus ordered four Little Rock high schools closed shortly after the Supreme Court last Friday called for integration to proceed without delay at Central High. One Virginia school has also been shut down.

Reflecting the hope of the President and himself that public pressure will bring about reopening of the schools without legal intervention by the federal government, Rogers said in his statement: “I advised the President that the Department of Justice had received reports from both Arkansas and Virginia that the schools were being reopened.”

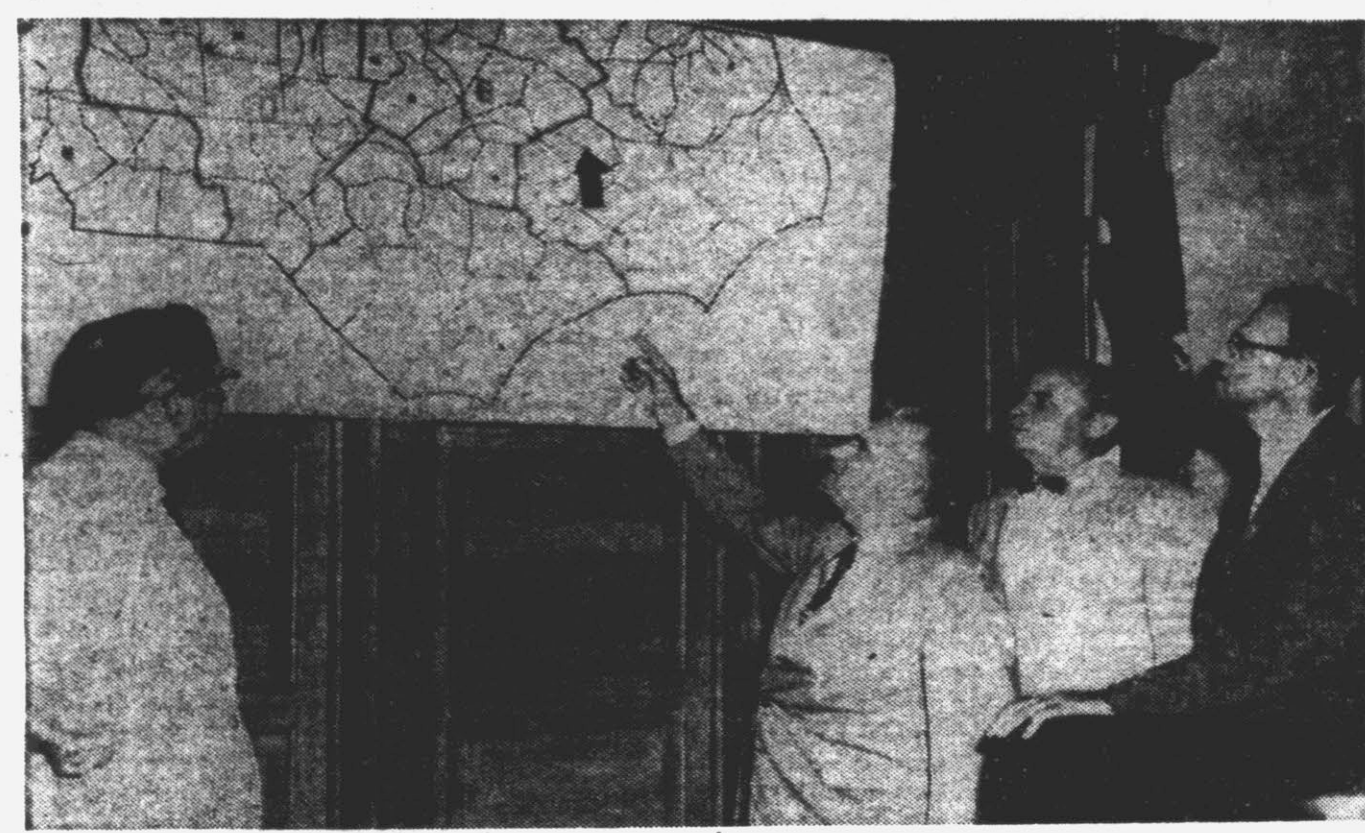

“It seems inconceivable that a state or community would rather close its public schools than comply with the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The reports received from the communities involved indicate that the serious impact of what it means to have the public schools closed is beginning to be keenly felt and its significance more fully appreciated.”

Rogers declined to provide any clue as to just what kind of legal action the federal government may take if the schools are not reopened without it.

In Virginia, Gov. J. Lindsay Almond Jr. commented when told of the administration hope that public pressure will force opening of the schools: “It is the old familiar technique of divide and conquer.”

Then in a reference to Russia’s Premier, Almond added: “I am sure this would meet with the full applause and approbation of Mr. Khrushchev.”

Pitt Slated To Care For 65,000 Evacuees In War

POINTING OUT PITT COUNTY'S PLACE IN CIVIL DEFENSE SURVIVAL PLANNING . . . Colonel Dawson Explains To Rose, Smith and Nicholson.

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer

County and municipal government officials and other Civil Defense personnel from throughout Pitt County were told last night that Pitt would be expected to provide support for 65,000 evacuees from other counties in the event of a nuclear attack on civilian and military targets in North Carolina.

The figures were revealed as a key point in the county's Civil Defense survival plan outlined by representatives of North Carolina Civil Defense Headquarters in Raleigh. The evacuees would come from Wayne, Carteret and Pamlico counties.

According to Colonel W. H. Dawson, State Logistics Coordinator, Pitt County would receive and care for evacuees from target areas as a “support county” in the state's overall Civil Defense planning. He said Pitt did not have any military targets and could not expect to be selected as a likely center of attack, in the event of war.

He added, however, that in the event of attack, the county could expect casualties from radiation effects. That would not preclude participation as a support county, however, and facilities would have to be provided for 47,500 Wayne County residents and 18,000 residents of Carteret and Pamlico counties.

Each of the three counties which would send evacuees to Pitt County have been designated as potential military targets. Seymour Johnson Air Force Base is located in Wayne County, near Goldsboro, and Cherry Point Marine Corps Air Station has facilities, personnel and dependents in Carteret and Pamlico counties.

Colonel Dawson appeared at the meeting with Major Ronald E. Smith, State Area Planner, and Nick Nicholson, deputy director of the state's Civil Defense program. County Civil Defense Director J. H. Rose of Greenville presided at the meeting which was attended by about 45 county and municipal government officials and Civil Defense workers.

Prior to presentation of overall state planning by Colonel Dawson, Rose said that emergency communications plans for Pitt County have already been completed. He said that in case all telephones in the county are knocked out in either military or natural disasters, a short-wave radio net utilizing 12 radio-equipped cars has been established. A 12-telephone network, for official calls, has also been set up in case telephones remain in working order.

The radio network outlined by Rose calls for cars to be stationed at Calico, Falkland School, Stokes (Congleton's Store), Ballard's Crossroads (Crawford's Service Station), Fountain Town Hall, Grimesland Town Hall, Griffon Police Department, Ayden Police Department, Winterville Police Department, Farmville Police Department, Bethel Police Department and Greenville Police Department.

The radio net has already been tested and is satisfactory, Rose said. Other tests will be conducted periodically.

Telephone communications plans call for 12 phones to be located at strategic points in the county. They include Calico, Falkland School, Congleton's Store, Crawford's Service Station, Fountain Town Hall, Grimesland, Griffon, Ayden, Winterville, Farmville, Bethel and Greenville.

It Is No Holiday For Little Rock Youngsters

By ADREN COOPER
and CLIFTON WELLS

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — For the kids, it's no holiday—and certainly not for the parents.

The proclamation that closed four high schools has not clogged the streets with boisterous teenagers. Most of them remain at home, waiting and wondering.

Sure, it's an extension of summer vacation, but the youngsters talk in terms of how soon they can resume their education—and they speak in restrained, serious tones.

Most concerned are students only one or two years away from a diploma.

“I just can't believe it's happening,” said Mrs. Weldon Wallace, mother of 17-year-old Bob Wallace, a senior at Central High.

It seems superfluous to say that the great majority of students and parents are opposed to racially integrated schools—and the only choice now seems to be between integration and private schools.

Mrs. Wallace, a nurse, said, “He did want to finish at Central, but he heard that the school might not be accredited and it has upset him quite a bit. He wants to go to college and he might have to go to Phoenix (Ariz.) and live with my folks. Maybe I'll go with him and work out there—we've made no definite plans.”

Bob normally works after school and during the summer at a grocery store and he is continuing his job for the present.

Would he attend Central if classes are continued with Negroes and whites in the classrooms?

“He told me that he could go back to Central,” Mrs. Wallace said. “He told me that he could cope with the situation, although the crowds outside bothered him some last year.”

Only a small percentage of students have made definite plans for transfers. In most cases, there is no place to go. A few plan to attend private schools in other states—obviously a financial hardship for most parents, a few talked about moving to other cities to live with relatives, and some rural students who paid tuition to attend Little Rock Central will return to the rural schools.

Supt. Virgil Blossom said that out of 2,071 students enrolled at Central, only 54 had requested transcripts of the grades (indicating a transfer) and only 44 had done so among the 731 enrolled at Hall High. There apparently have been no transfers from among the 179 at Tech High, or the 717 at Horace Mann High School.

Judy's mother was pessimistic about this prospect and said she was considering sending Judy to live with relatives in Houston, Tex.

“I didn't get very worked up about it until this week,” said Mrs. Green. “I thought they would open them by this week. But even during the past school year, Hall and Tech are white schools and Horace Mann is all-Negro.”

Some students expressed confidence in Gov. Orval E. Faubus' ability to solve the dilemma.

“It's awful dull,” said Judy Green, a senior at Hall. “No football, no nothing.”

Judy's daughter of Little Rock, a junior at Central, said she wouldn't return to the school if it remains integrated.

“I wouldn't go through that again,” she said. “Please say that I'm not against Negroes—just against the nine at Central—and those others who are trying to open them by this week. But even if the schools open there's going to be trouble. It can't be right.”

Fred Dunaway, 19, a senior, said: “I have been working most of the time. I plan to wait and see what the governor does—I'm with him.”

“Since there is no place else to go, I suppose I'll go back to Central,” said Martha Sue Dilbeck, a 16-year-old junior and daughter of city detective John C. Dilbeck. “I've found plenty to do—playing the piano quite a bit of the time. I do want to go back to school.”

Elizabeth Dolan, 17, a junior at Central, said she wouldn't return to the school if it remains integrated.

Walkouts Begin At Ford Plants

DETROIT (AP) — United Auto Workers at Ford plants across the country began walking off the job at a 10 a.m. strike deadline today, even as the union said there had been an attractive offer which might solve the dispute.

UAW President Walter Reuther told newsmen that the company had added something new. He said the strike machinery was in motion and that the union had no way of holding its workers on the job past the strike hour.

Ford reported nine of its 86 plants were shut down by walkouts before the strike deadline. The rest were affected as the talks went on.

John S. Bugas, Ford vice president in charge of industrial relations, told newsmen he would not describe Ford's latest move as a new offer but rather “a refining and modifying process in the past few days.”

Carl Stellato, president of the 50,000-man Ford Local 600, biggest unit in the UAW, left the bargaining session to address a mass meeting at the huge Ford Rouge plant in suburban Dearborn.

Stellato told newsmen the strike was on and said he had received reports that walkouts were beginning at Rouge.

Stellato told newsmen that the company had proposed a settlement of the retroactive pay issue, one of the major points at issue in the long negotiations, by offering to make its contract effective as of July 1. Ford workers had been without a contract since the old pact ran out June 1 and the union had demanded that any new agreement be retroactive to that date.

Stellato also said Ford had offered to increase its basic pension to from $2.35 to $2.25 for each year of service. It also offered to continue the annual improvement factor which gives workers six cents an hour of 2 1/2 per cent of their hourly wage, whichever is greater.

The improvement factor is related to technological advance due to automation and other developments.

Stellato said another unsolved issue is plantwide seniority. This is the set under which the union maintains that a man employed as a sweeper in one department of a factory should have seniority in another department in the same factory if his own department is abolished.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N. C.

BOARD CHAIRMAN AND HOME DEMONSTRATION PERSONNEL AFTER CHANGES LAST NIGHT . . . Wooten, Mrs. May, Mrs. Mohan, And Mrs. Langley (all seated), With Mrs. Little and Miss Stevens

New Home Agent Announced For Pitt

Two veteran Home Demonstration workers were named last night to fill vacancies on the staff of the Pitt County Home Demonstration Agent's office.

Mrs. Sue B. May, a former Pitt County Home Agent, was elected to succeed Mrs. Little Little, who is resigning November 30 as Home Agent, and Mrs. Helen McDonald Mohan, who has been an assistant agent in Chowan County for two years, was named to succeed Miss Margaret Lee Stevens, who is resigning November 15.

Mrs. Little and Miss Stevens tendered their resignations last night at a special meeting of the Board of County Commissioners. Both will move to Raleigh, Mrs. Little as a result of a transfer and promotion for her husband, and Miss Stevens because of her impending marriage.

Mrs. May, who will take over December 1, was Home Agent for Pitt County from December, 1950, until November 15, 1954, when she was succeeded by Mrs. Little. She is a resident of Winterville and has a total of six-and-a-half years experience in Home Demonstration work.

Mrs. Mohan, who will begin her duties November 16, will come to Pitt County from Proctor, Vermont, where she taught Home Economics from January through June of this year. Prior to moving to Vermont, she was an assistant agent in Chowan County for two years after graduation from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina in 1955.

Both of the new workers were recommended to the Board of Commissioners by Miss Lorna Langley, North eastern District Home Demonstration Agent, and Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, representative of the Executive Board of Pitt County Home Demonstration Clubs.

In making the recommendations, Miss Langley told the commissioners, “Pitt County has had agents second to none and those of us in the Extension Service are very proud of the caliber of work done by Mrs. Little and Miss Stevens. Pitt's program is a very extensive one, and we are extremely regretful that Mrs. Little and Miss Stevens are both leaving.”

She added, however, that the recommendations for Mrs. May and Mrs. Mohan “are without qualifications.”

Mrs. Little has been a member of the Home Demonstration staff since August, 1953, when she became an assistant agent to Mrs. May. Prior to her appointment here, she had been Home Agent in Stanley County for two-and-a-half years, and she has also been a teacher.

Mrs. Mohan is a native of Moore County and a graduate of Carthage High School. While at the Woman's College she was a classmate of Miss Stevens who has been an assistant agent here for nearly three years. Mrs. Mohan's husband will enroll at East Carolina College in December.

In tendering her resignation, Mrs. Little told the commissioners, “It is difficult to find words to make this resignation final. The five years we have been in Pitt County have been fine ones.”

Mrs. Little's husband, Blanton Little, is a reviewing appraiser for the Prudential Insurance Company of America and is being transferred to the company's Raleigh office.

Miss Stevens will be married in late November to Orden Babson, an East Carolina graduate who is now assistant secretary of the North Carolina Oil Jobbers Association with offices in Raleigh. While on the Home Demonstration Agent's staff, Miss Stevens' primary duties were with 4-H Club activities throughout the county.

Board Chairman Woodrow Wooten termed the resignations of the two women as “a great loss to Pitt County.” He also commended both Mrs. Little and Miss Stevens for the records they had made.

Formal acceptance of the resignations was “with regret.”

Burden In Rising Cost Of Prisons

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina faces a burden of mounting costs unless something can be done about rising prison population, Gov. Hodges declared yesterday.

The governor and the Advisory Board Commission got a preview of increasing prison costs as the state's prison population, which is overcrowded with more than 11,300 inmates, he explained, and another rise of 800 to 1,000 is expected in the next two years.

Most of the amount would go for construction of prison facilities, Bailey said. The present prison system capacity of 10,800 is overcrowded with more than 11,300 inmates, he explained, and another rise of 800 to 1,000 is expected in the next two years.

Gov. Hodges pointed out that a prison population of 17,000 is forecast in the next 10 years. The cost will be a terrific burden unless we can work out something,” he added.

Chairman George Randall of the State Board of Paroles offered a step toward a solution. He said hiring additional parole officers would make it possible to release prisoners eligible for parole who must now remain in prison.

Randall included seven new parole supervisors in a proposed improvements budget of $155,621 for the 1959-61 biennium.

Keeping a man in prison costs the state more than $1,000 a year, but a prisoner on parole costs the state only $142 per year, Randall explained.

The Board of Paroles now has 21 parole officers, supervising some 1,900 paroled prisoners, he reported.

Bailey said wider use of a work release law passed by the 1957 Legislature would help reduce prison population. It allows a prisoner to serve his time at nights and on weekends, while continuing his normal employment.

Judges have been conservative about using the new law, Bailey said. “I still have faith that it will work,” he added. It has worked effectively in the Greensboro area and in Raleigh, he asserted.

Nationalists Again Deliver Goods To Besieged Islands

TIAPAI, Formosa (AP) — The Chinese Nationalists succeeded today in delivering two more shiploads of supplies to the besieged Quemoy islands through a hail of Communist fire.

The Nationalist Defense Ministry said two LSTs unloaded all their cargo without suffering damage.

The ships were escorted across Formosa Strait by Nationalist warships and by vessels of the U.S. 7th Fleet, which remained outside the three-mile limit as usual.

The giant American aircraft carrier, Essex, arrived in Formosa waters after steaming a quarter of the way around the world from the 6th Fleet off Lebanon.

The 65,000-ton Essex is slated to replace one of the four attack carriers already in the 7th Fleet.

Red shelling went into its 26th day and apparently is aimed now at knocking out Quemoy's artillery, which has been trying to silence Red guns on the mainland.

The Defense Ministry said the 1,861 Communist shells that hit overnight were mostly of deeper penetration quality than the anti-personnel fragmentation shells used earlier.

The Reds now are using Soviet-made 203mm. and 212mm. guns instead of the 152mm. weapons previously aimed at Quemoy, ordnance experts reported.

The larger guns apparently were brought up in an effort to blast “the concrete underground emplacements which have for the most part withstood the Red fire.”

The cargo landing followed by a similar successful supply mission by one LST yesterday. It was unloaded in 20 minutes. Apparently loaded amphibious vehicles were driven off the ships. This was in sharp contrast to supply missions last week which failed to get ashore more than a fraction of their load in 40 minutes under shellfire.

Nearby Little Quemoy also received supplies from another parachute drop without Red fighter interference.

On Formosa opposition continued to the U.S.-Communist Chinese talks in Warsaw in which a settlement of Formosa Strait tension is being sought.

The Foreign Affairs and National Defense committees of the Control Yuan, highest Nationalist supervisory body, came out with a resolution opposing the talks.

Greenville Mart Has $56.43 Day

Yesterday for the second consecutive day, the Greenvilles market averaged over $56 per 100 pounds sold.

The market purchased 978,638 pounds of tobacco for $553,204.20, averaging $56.43. Monday's average was $56.80.

Prices on today's market are firm and high, according to early reports.

“Every single grade, from the lowest to the top quality, was selling at very high prices all day,” Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee reported.

Edwards To Talk To Farm Bureau

Alonso Edwards, executive vice-president of the N. C. Farm Bureau will report on his observations of the tobacco situation in Europe and other areas at a Farm Bureau meeting Friday night.

The meeting will be held in the Pitt County Court House beginning at 7:30.

Pitt Farm Bureau President George D. Cox said the public is invited to attend the meeting.

Mixed Reaction To Proposed Special Session

RALEIGH (AP) — Mixed reaction has come from some legislators on the idea of holding a special session of the General Assembly in January to clear the way for the regular session beginning in February.

Gov. Hodges is considering calling the early session to clear away the business of electing officers and naming committees in advance of the regular session.

This would put the lawmakers in position to begin business as soon as the regular session opens. At the proposed early session the legislators also could be given various study commission reports to look over and study prior to the regular session.

Rep. Charles Hostetler of Hoke said the plan “sounds sensible to me.”

Rep. Brantly Womble of Wake said, “I don't think much of it. This thing of rushing legislation is bad for the state and people.”

Rep. W. C. Harris of Wake said, “It sounds like it's worth a try.”

Farmville Market Has $55.47 Day

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market's 1958 sales average began a general increase this week, reflecting a trend noted through the Eastern Belt.

According to Sales Supervisor Charles S. Edwards, the average for the year jumped to $54.34 after yesterday's sale of 471,772 pounds of tobacco for a total of $261,692.66. Yesterday's average on the market was $55.47, Edwards said.

Monday's sale, one of the biggest of the season, saw 739,332 pounds of tobacco sold for a total of $425,054.71 and an average of $57.49, Edwards added.

30 Years Ago Today

September 17, 1923

With partially disrupted telephone, telegraph, highway and railway service, Greenville and vicinity today began to check up on the damage wrought by the heavy rain and windstorm which gripped this section yesterday and last night. The Atlantic Coast Line reported no service between Kingston and Weldon owing to weakened road beds and washouts. The Norfolk and Southern declined to assure any service between this city, Raleigh and Norfolk before late this afternoon. Possibly the greatest damage resulted in the breaking of the dam at the Country Club. Thousands of gallons of water today poured across the Ayden and Farmville highways completely paralyzing all traffic between Greenville and these two points.

Home Making To Be Featured

The art of home making is being brought into many homes in the state by Alice Strawn of the East Carolina College Home Economics Department, who is currently appearing in a series of radio broadcasts sponsored by the college.

"Home Economics and You," to be presented each week through January 5, is now being broadcast on taped recordings over fifteen stations throughout the state. In a practical way Miss Strawn discusses meals, fashions, short cuts in housekeeping, buying food for the family, home decorations, entertaining guests, and other topics. On several roundtable sessions her students in home economics appear with her.

A faculty member at East Carolina College for the past ten years, she has served as resident teacher-trainer in home economics education. Her students are now teaching in scores of public schools in North Carolina, and she has aided many young people become home economists, teachers, and home makers.

Miss Strawn is currently serving as vice president of the Home Economics Section of the National Education Association.

She knows both the theory and practice of home making. In Greenville she owns and manages her home on Elm Street, where she lives with her mother.

An estimated 4,000 Pitt County citizens have an important duty to perform on Saturday, September 27.

They will be responsible for making a half-million dollar decision for all the 65,000 people who live in Pitt County.

The estimated 4,000 citizens who will make the decision are those who registered for the special bond issue referendum which will determine whether Pitt Memorial Hospital is expanded.

The other 17,000 or so people of the county who normally are eligible to vote in elections forfeited their right to cast a ballot in the special election because they did not register during the prescribed period.

It is unfortunate that only approximately 20 per cent of the normal voting population of Pitt was sufficiently interested in the proposal to register for the special election. It, too, is a sad commentary on interest in such important public affairs when one realizes that approximately 10 per cent of the normal registration of voters will be able to determine the outcome of the special election.

Pitt County needs the expanded hospital facilities that will be provided if the bond issue is passed. Though its present facilities have been in use only slightly more than six years, they already are inadequate to meet the needs of the people of this county.

The proposed expansion program will add approximately 75 beds to the existing hospital. Of equal importance, it will add additional operating rooms, recovery rooms, plus better equipment and facilities

College Costs Straining State

By LYNN NISBET
COLLEGES — A meeting is scheduled for next month at Statesville to determine the method of administering Mitchell College after it passes from Presbyterian Church control to the status of a privately managed college. Local people raised enough money to carry on for awhile at least, after church support was withdrawn.

The status of Flora MacDonald College at Red Springs is less satisfactory to local people. The Presbyterian Synod is moving out of the picture there and will put Flora MacDonald, Peace at Raleigh and Presbyterian Junior at Maxton into the new consolidated four year college to be built at Laurinburg. Flora MacDonald alumni went to court but failed to block the merger. The future of Peace is uncertain, but Raleigh hopes operation will be continued under some plan.

The State of North Carolina is confronted with grave problems connected with expansion and maintenance of tax supported colleges. One facet of the overall question is whether to continue expansion at Chapel Hill, Raleigh and Greenville, or to reduce demands on these institutions by establishing two-year colleges.

Changing economic conditions, especially the industrial development boom, have enhanced long existing problems at Pembroke and the several Negro teacher training colleges. Admission of white students to the former all-Indian school and the capable administration of President Walter Gale have eased one aspect of the situation at Pembroke and created an entirely new problem. The question now is whether to continue the college as largely a commuter institution, thus virtually freezing enrollment at around 400, or provide dormitories for campus residents and permit enrollment to grow to 1500 or more.

TEACHERS — The approaching saturation point in supply of Negro school teachers required transfer of emphasis in curriculum at the teacher colleges. Winston-Salem filled the gap with an excellent nurse-training program, and the other schools offer broader courses in business and technical subjects. As the state moves from an over-whelming farm-life economy into closer balance between agriculture and industry, demand for technical courses in all the schools and colleges is accelerated.

Some thought has been given to inaugurating craft and trade courses at Fayetteville Teacher College. It is not the idea to abandon teacher training courses at any of the institutions, throughout the existing hospital.

If, through the proposed bond issue, Pitt County provides one third of the estimated $1,500,000 cost of the expansion program, the other two-thirds of the cost will be met through state and federal agencies.

It is a bargain Pitt County can ill afford to turn down . . . particularly in view of the pressing needs for expanding and improved hospital facilities for the county.

The Reflector urges the approximately 4,000 citizens who are registered for the special election to go to the polls on September 27 and vote in favor of the proposed bond issue.

Upon the shoulders of these 4,000 citizens rests the responsibility for speaking for the entire citizenry of the county.

Ingenious Inventions Still Rely On Humans

Man, in spite of all his ingenious inventions, will never be able to replace himself as the operating brain which controls the machinery.

The tragic rail disaster in New Jersey Monday is just another in the long series of examples which prove the point.

The railroad over which the ill-fated commuter train passed was equipped with the most modern safety devices. There were signal lights to warn that the draw span was open, special clutching devices on the tracks to stop the train, and other safety features to prevent such an accident.

Yet the accident happened . . . and an estimated 40 lives were lost.

Maybe one of the devices failed to work properly. Only a thorough investigation by highly specialized engineers will tell. Or maybe it was the controlling brain on the train—the engineer—who faltered in his actions for a split second and let the train cars hurtle into the river.

Out of man's inventive genius have come many things that make life easier, better and safer. With machines, devices, inventions, man is able to do many things he could not do otherwise. But man still remains the controlling brain which operates the machines, the vastly complicated devices. Without a controlling factor, the machines are powerless to perform the functions for which they are designed.

Some times we look with awe at our inventive genius and the intricate devices it brings about. They possess the power to make life better, or make life miserable, depending upon how they are used. But upon reflection, we know that the inventions themselves are powerless. Whether they are effective for good or evil depends entirely upon the use which is made of them by the controlling brain . . . the man who uses them.

UN Assembly's Dismal Outlook

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dismal describes the outlook for the three-month meeting of the United Nations General Assembly, that began yesterday.

Its biggest immediate problem: the Red Chinese attack on the Quemoy and Matsu islands and the American refusal to let the Reds take them by force. Secretary of State Dulles and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko will tackle over this. Only an optimist can expect a solution in the U.N.

For, meanwhile, the American and Red Chinese ambassadors to Poland will be discussing the same thing in Warsaw.

Nothing is likely to happen in the U.N. anyway until there's time to see what happens in Warsaw.

And nothing is likely to happen in Warsaw unless the American government is willing to make big concessions to the Chinese Communists.

But Dulles and President Eisenhower got themselves into a kind of box on concessions.

First, they indicated they might make concessions to the Reds if they combed their hair right. But then Eisenhower said letting the Reds shoot their way into Quemoy and Matsu without fighting them would be appeasement.

It would still be appeasement if this country let the Reds have the islands on the promise they wouldn't shoot their way in if they got them for free.

No doubt the Soviet Union will make a renewed effort to get Red China a seat in the U.N.

But the United States, which acts as if the Red Chinese didn't exist — even though it still may have to fight them and is willing to negotiate with them — has blocked a U.N. seat for them before.

It will maneuver to do so again. It probably has enough friends in the U.N. to get the Assembly once again to sidetrack this issue for a later date and another year.

But there's a chilling side to all this: while Quemoy, Matsu, Chiang Kai-shek, and his enemies, the Red Chinese, are widely debated in the U.N., the actual crisis around those offshore islands still remains and could burst into war.

But other things face the U.N. too, and with just about the same small chance of solution. For instance: disarmament. There'll be some debate but any real progress in that field more likely will come from direct American-Soviet talks.

There's the question of getting American troops out of Lebanon, where they landed July 15 at the request of President Chamoun. The British troops out of Jordan, where they landed two days later at King Hussein's request.

The world reaction to the entry of American forces in the Middle East was so bad from the beginning that this country has seemed willing to withdraw if it could be done gracefully.

Gen. Fuad Chehab has since been elected president and will take office Sept. 24. By then or soon after, at Chehab's request, the last of the American troops should have departed.

Not so with the British troops in Jordan, where King Hussein sits on a shaky throne. He's shown no signs of wanting to see his British protectors depart. And it's hard to see what the U.N. can do to nudge them out.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

WOULD HE BE WELCOME?

People sometimes make the assertion that if Jesus Christ were to return to earth today He would not be welcome in our churches, and certainly not in our most exclusive clubs.

There is some truth in this statement. Undoubtedly, the Christian church is far from living up to the high standards which Christ set for it. Clubs, as a rule, are interested in making things pleasant and comfortable for their members. So because of their very nature, Christ might indeed not be welcome in these exclusive sets.

And yet, after all is said and done, there is a lot of loose talk about the so-called hypocrisy of the church and the lack of spirituality on the part of its members. Modern Christians come in for a lot of criticism they do not deserve. They deserve plenty. But sometimes the criticism is not deserved.

But sometimes the criticism they get is neither the criticism they deserve or need.

Personally, I think Christ would be rather widely recognized and quite generally welcomed in the churches if He were to appear on the earth again. About the clubs, I am not so sure, for the thoughts of people when they are in their clubs are not particularly about matters of religious significance. But let us stop kicking humanity about and upbraiding it. The human race might indeed be capable of a lot more in wisdom and courage than we think, if it came right up against the most difficult of difficult situations.

Maybe if Christ were to return and walk into your church or mine he would receive a heartier welcome than we should think.

Wrong Kind Of Engine Purr

By JIMMY ELLIS

Today We Have Variety

A growing favorite among fund-raising activities for church youth groups is washing cars.

The usual price is a buck per car, with the proceeds going into fellowship treasuries. Everybody pays, including the preacher.

One group hit a snag last week, however. At check-up time, after washing 17 cars, only $16.75 was found in the cash box. Somebody started asking questions about the missing quarter.

One member confessed: He had been home when a customer drove up in a small foreign car and ordered a wash job. When it came time to pay, the fellow doing the washing said he didn't have the heart to charge the full price for a half-size automobile.

The satisfied customer paid

75 cents.

Switching subjects:

At least one of the national football forecasting organizations is predicting South Carolina will upset Duke this weekend, but by only one point.

In other games involving Big Four teams, the forecasters say that Carolina will beat State by three points and that Maryland will trounce Wake Forest by at least 13. In the other Atlantic Coast Conference game scheduled for Saturday, the wise men say that Clemson is 20 points better than Virginia.

One other forecasting group says that Duke is six points better than South Carolina, the Tar Heels are seven points better than State, Maryland is 14 points better than Wake Forest and Clemson is 14 points better than Virginia.

There is no prediction by either group concerning the East Carolina-Presbyterian game, although we understand that some of the state's football writers were greatly impressed by the Pirates' 12-0 win over Emory and Henry. At least one of the writers says that weak teams don't whitewash Emory and Henry, even in the Wasps' lean years.

And, speaking of the Pirates' victory over Emory and Henry, we wondered if some of last Saturday's empty seats won't be filled this Saturday. They should be.

And switching subjects again:

White House Correspondent Bill Costello of the Mutual Broadcasting System says the Pentagon has printed a 72-page directive for all its employees on how to solicit charity funds without interrupting normal working schedules.

Costello's colleague, Fulton Lewis, Jr., claims that Washington officials are so touchy about accepting gifts that White House cooks won't even take green stamps when they go out on their shopping trips.

The tragic death of George Stinewiss in Monday's train wreck near Elizabeth, New Jersey, recalled a more pleasant occasion when Stinewiss was in Greenville.

That was last February when he was here to make business calls on local tobacco firms, and to visit with some of his former University of North Carolina classmates. It was a full two days for the man who is the only person to ever captain two major athletic teams in one year at UNC.

Despite his full schedule Stinewiss took about an hour to chat with local reporters about the prospects of baseball and the effects of other sports on the game. He was a good man to work with.

At this spot, St. Paul escaped from the city, having been let down the wall in a basket.

Back--- 2,000 Years

By RELMAN MORIN
Snapshots from a traveler's album:

It is only a short walk, but it crosses 2000 years and brings you back to a strange and moving story.

You leave the modern section of Damascus, the hotels, theaters and department stores, and walk toward the east. The pavement ends. Soon you come to a narrow street. There are no signs, but without asking, you know its name.

"Go into the street called Straight."

It runs straight as an arrow through the bazaar to the crumbling remains of the city's old east wall. How old? Nobody knows. Damascus, they say, is the oldest inhabited city in the world. This street, surely, must have been seen by the ancient Egyptians, and by forgotten kings even before them.

"And inquire in the house of Judas."

In that house, the story says, a man named Saul lay sighthless, stunned by what he had seen. Nobody knows what it was.

You try to picture how the street looked at that time. Probably very much as it does today.

It is narrow and choked with people. A man in long, loose robes rides past on a little white donkey. A dark-eyed woman veils her face. Day and night, they mill through the street, buying, bartering, haggling, or merely gossiping with craftsmen and storekeepers.

The shops are open-fronted, without windows or doors. From the goldsmith's shop comes the tinkle of his hammer, shaping a bangle for a lady's wrist. There are stone cutters and carpenters, cobblers, tailors, leather-workers and merchants, jammed close together in a great, buzzing honeycomb. The air smells of spice, fruit and ancient dust.

You can buy everything here — gold, silver, precious gems, a sardonic's armor, a spitted lamb or a yellow melon.

It is a very worldly street.

"And inquire for one called Saul of Tarsus."

It is a very mysterious story and after nearly 2000 years, men still puzzle over the meaning, and dispute the truth of it.

On the road to Damascus, the Bible says, Saul heard a voice, calling his name. Some powerful force swept over him. It left him blind and helpless. They had to lead him by the hand into the street called Straight.

For three days, he lay there stunned, unable to eat or drink.

Was it a hallucination, something Saul of Tarsus imagined? The road to Damascus passes through bleak and forbidding mountains. Heat waves rise from the tortuous rocks. The mirage floats across the desert floor. It would be easy to "see" strange things here in the heat of days.

Yet, the historical record seems clear.

This man had been a destroyer, savage and implacable. The Disciples themselves were afraid of him. Then, in that blinding moment on the desert, he changed and the story says he became a totally different man — "All that heard him were amazed."

You walk along the street called Straight, remembering the story, and wondering.

But this is not all. You come to the east end of the street.

There stands the ruin of the old Roman gate. The story says that, after his mysterious transformation, Saul's enemies determined to kill him.

And they watched the gates, day and night. Then the Disciples took him by night and let him down by the wall in a basket." So he escaped.

Not far from the Roman gate, at a segment of the old wall, there is a kind of shrine and a sign.

At this spot, St. Paul escaped from the city, having been let down the wall in a basket.

Opinions In Brief

"Prosperity is only an instrument to be used, not a deity to be worshipped." — Cal. Coolidge.

Strangely, among owners of models in unsatisfactory condition, there was only a weak association between purchases and interest in new features, despite the fact that other studies have shown them to be a particularly deliberate group of buyers.

Dr. Eva Mueller, who conducted this part of the research, found that "innovation-minded" families were much more interested in new appliances than others.

These, she found, generally are middle-aged persons, married and parents; those with incomes of $5,000 a year or more; those with recent or expected income increases; those with their own home and four major appliances; those who believe it's a "good time to buy," and those who have friends who own and are enthusiastic about new appliances.

The book discusses other marketing problems including such tidbits as a chapter on changing consumption in Indian Guatemala.

Buyer Motivation--All Mixed Up

By ELMER ROESSNER

Why do people buy? If you knew the full answer, you could become rich.

You wouldn't have to design a product and launch a promotion to cash in on your knowledge. You could sell the knowledge itself.

Advertising agencies, market analysts, universities and other institutions spend a guessed half-billion dollars a year trying to find out what causes wallets and purses to open. They find a fact here, a fact there. But you couldn't build a summer house on the foundation laid so far.

Some progress has been made recently.

PAPPA DOESN'T ALWAYS KNOW BEST

Here are some recent steps forward:

Prof. Mirra Komarovsky, of Barnard College, reports that husbands and wives share buying decisions in middle-class families. But in the lower brackets, she found, there is no range of choice: all purchases are economic necessities and the wife makes them. In the higher brackets, husband and wife make decisions in their own field but, Dr. Komarovsky found the husband's decisions are of relatively greater importance.

Meanwhile, George H. Brown, a Ford marketing research manager, has reported that while husbands are usually first to mention the purchase of a new car, wives often try to dissuade them.

Wives place less value on having a new car than husbands, he said. Wives often resist buying a new car, or hold out for a lower priced make.

"In my opinion, this resistance reflects a difference between husband and wife in hierarchy of values, rather than opposition to a new car on the basis of safety or some other inherent factor," he told a behavior conference at Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Furnishing the home, saving money, providing for the children are goals which are valued somewhat more highly by the wife. 'Often,' he said, 'the husband believes the family can afford a new car, but the wife doesn't know where the money will come from."

NEWNESS A CLUE — SOMETIMES

More and somewhat deeper light on the problem has been thrown by a study newly published as a book: "Consumer Behavior: Research on Consumer Reactions," edited by Lincoln H. Clark and published by Harper and Brothers, New York.

This is based largely on studies conducted by University of Michigan researchers. They found that new products and new features were a strong incentive to purchase, but only when the buyer was ready to buy.

They asked a random sample of 855 families about their interest in new features of refrigerators and other household goods. A year later they checked these families' purchases.

Those interested in new features bought three times as many new refrigerators than those without interest, even though the former had late-model refrigerators.

at the start of the survey. Strangely, among owners of models in unsatisfactory condition, there was only a weak association between purchases and interest in new features, despite the fact that other studies have shown them to be a particularly deliberate group of buyers.

Dr. Eva Mueller, who conducted this part of the research, found that "innovation-minded" families were much more interested in new appliances than others.

These, she found, generally are middle-aged persons, married and parents; those with incomes of $5,000 a year or more; those with recent or expected income increases; those with their own home and four major appliances; those who believe it's a "good time to buy," and those who have friends who own and are enthusiastic about new appliances.

The book discusses other marketing problems including such tidbits as a chapter on changing consumption in Indian Guatemala.

Curriculum Study For Martin PTA

ROBERSONVILLE — "Changes in Curriculum to Meet the Changing Times" is to be the subject for discussion at the county-wide workshop sponsored by the Martin County Council of Parents and Teachers on Tuesday, September 23rd, at 4:30 p.m. at the William High School. All parents, teachers and patrons of the P.T.A. interested in attending will notify or call the president or the principal of his P.T.A. school unit by Friday, September 19th. Dinner tickets must be reserved at $1.25 per plate.

Mrs. James Bullock, president of the Council, will preside. Mr. J. C. Manning, superintendent of the Martin County Schools, will bring greetings and remarks. Dr. I. E. Ready, Director of Curriculum Study for the North Carolina State Board of Education, will bring the main address in the opening session. Dr. Ready has been for many years intensely interested in the curriculum for public schools. He was superintendent of the Roanoke Rapids City Schools before becoming Director of the Curriculum Study for the State Board of Education in 1957. The state study is being financed in part by the Vicks Corporation.

Following the opening session, dinner will be served at 6 o'clock in the Christian Church within walking distance from the high school. Then pertinent questions on curriculum will be asked preparatory to the down-to-work group sessions to be reassembled in classrooms at 7 o'clock in the high school. The three groups sessions with the resource person for each are as follows:

Primary—Miss Ann Holdford, supervisor of Edgecombe County and Tarboro City Schools.
Grammar—Homer A. Lassiter, Associate Division of Elementary and Secondary Education of the Dept. of Public Instruction.
High School—C. B. Martin, Superintendent of Tarboro City Schools.

Each and every parent in Martin County has a unique opportunity to share in learning more about the background of our present curriculum and in reevaluating the present curriculum to better meet the needs of our changing times. Among the number of questions to be asked are:

1. What can be said for and against incorporating kindergarten (for the five-year-old) in the public school system?
2. At what age shall a child start school?
3. Since reading is basic to all learning, should the county provide a summer reading program for those having difficulty?
4. Should foreign language study be introduced in the elementary schools?
5. How can some of the high school subjects be moved down to the eighth grade? Just what is

Fear Seven Dead In Crash Of B52

SOUTH ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A B52 jet bomber on a training mission crashed in flames on a farm last night. The copilot parachuted to safety. Seven other crew members were missing and presumed dead.

The giant plane, based at Loring Air Force Base, Limestone, Maine, missed the densely populated Minneapolis-St. Paul metropolitan district by three miles, and an oil refinery by a similar distance.

Exploding fuel tanks of the plane fired the house, barn and outbuildings on the August Kahl farm three miles south of here. Eight members of the Kahl family were hospitalized with burns, three in serious condition.

The plane was on a practice bombing mission to Minneapolis. Identification of the missing crewmen was withheld.

Capt. Jack Douglas Craft, 29, parachuted to safety. He said the plane "started to come apart in the air." He was hospitalized suffering from shock, cuts and bruises.

Witnesses reported seeing the plane streaking flame as it roared toward the ground. Fuel from the crash fired several acres of brush and grass.

Kahl, 51, his 8-year-old father Edward and his son Loren, 15, were severely burned. Mrs. Kahl and four daughters, 5 to 17, were treated for cuts and burns, but not hospitalized.

Although B52s are designed to carry atomic weapons, Col. Edwin Ambrosen, commander at the Twin Cities World-Chamberlain Air Force Base, said the smashed plane carried no armament.

Spanking Death Draws 50 Years

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Criminal Court Judge L. A. Grayson has sentenced a Tampa man to 50 years in state prison for what he called "the cruelest murder I have encountered"—the spanking death of the man's 6-year-old son.

The sentence was given yesterday to Robert Deatherage, who was convicted last month of second degree murder. Deatherage admitted he had spanked his son hard with a 20-inch board because he had wet his trousers. The boy died the following day.

Grayson said the sentence was one of the stiffest he'd ever delivered.

Proxmire Rated Top GOP Target

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican strategists apparently have decided their best chance of defeating a Democratic senator lies in an all-out effort against Sen. William Proxmire in Wisconsin.

Field reports to the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee have pictured Proxmire as the most vulnerable of 13 Democratic senators whose seats are at stake in November. Proxmire was elected last year after GOP Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy died.

Although the Republicans are reluctant to talk about it, their surveys are said to show no other contest giving their party what they regard as an even chance of picking up a seat from the Democrats.

Since they already have lost one seat in Maine, the GOP campaigners would have to hold the remaining 20 they have at stake and gain two others to be in a position to control the new Senate. In such circumstances they could do this with Vice President Nixon's tie-breaking vote.

Democrats outnumbered Republicans 49-47 before GOP Sen. Fredrick G. Payne was beaten in Maine.

Republican hopes of defeating Proxmire rest in uniting party strength behind Roland J. Steinle, their nominee, in a state that ordinarily is counted in the GOP column.

The Republicans have been perked up somewhat by canvasses elsewhere. These indicate to them that some of the seats they now hold may not be in as much danger as they believed after Payne went down in Maine.

Privately Republican lieutenants say they regard only six GOP seats as certainly safe—those in Nebraska, Ohio, North Dakota, Delaware, Wyoming and Vermont. They are only a little less certain, however, about Utah and Nevada. They are frankly worried about Indiana.

Reports from field workers indicate that GOP prospects have been looking up recently in Arizona, California, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Maryland, Minnesota, Pennsylvania and in West Virginia, where two GOP places are being contested.

There has been no such cheering news, however, from Michigan, where GOP Sen. Charles E. Potter apparently is fighting a tough, uphill battle.

Republican hopes of holding on to the seat Sen. Irving M. Ives is vacating in New York have been raised by nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as the party's candidate for governor, as well as the choice of Rep. Kenneth B. Keating as nominee for the Senate.

Queen Mary Tudor, "Bloody Mary," had 277 persons burned at the stake in England between 1553 and 1558.

Faubus Says Elements Of Clergy Are Leftist Inspired

By ROBERT E. FORD
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus yesterday attacked segments of the clergy as left-wingers and repeated his defiance of the federal government in Little Rock's seething integration dispute.

Faubus told a newsman, in reply to a question about some Presbyterian ministers' opposition to his policies, that he knew a large number of pastors in that church had been brainwashed by left-wingers and Communists. He added that he firmly believed some clergymen were supporters of Communist views.

Angered by the charge, a group of Arkansas Presbyterian ministers and laymen issued a denial and a demand for Faubus' apology.

At his news conference, Faubus reiterated that he would close court-integrated schools whenever he felt it necessary.

"I will not surrender to federal integration orders or the NAACP," Faubus declared. He closed Little Rock's four high schools after the U.S. Supreme Court last Friday ordered an immediate resumption of integration at Central High.

The governor said he looked skeptically on any attempts to

Substitutes

Persons interested in substitute teaching in the Greenville City Schools were asked today to place their names on a master list in the school offices.

Mrs. Ellen Carroll, supervisor for the city school system, said the list will be open to substitute teachers in all grades. Names may be placed on the list by phoning either 6189 or 6197, Mrs. Carroll said.

ECC To Meet Blue Hose Without James Speight

Fullback Out Of Action For Three Weeks

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

James Speight, on crutches and his foot swollen and bandaged heavily, said yesterday that he probably wouldn't be able to play football with his East Carolina team "for three weeks."

The 170-pound All-Conference fullback was injured in the opening minutes of play in last Saturday night's game with Emory and Henry. ECC pounded out a 12-0 victory without Speight in the lineup.

Speight said that his ankle was twisted by a tackler the first time he carried the ball Saturday night and that it was later stepped on. It was after that that he was taken from the game. He stayed on the bench throughout the first half of play, his shoe discarded, a huge knot on his foot.

Doctors sent him in to dress at halftime.

Monday his foot had swollen to almost twice its normal size and he was unable to walk on it.

Coach Jack Boone, who was building his offensive attack this season around the former Greenville high school star, has spent the early part of this week trying to fill the gap left by Speight's absence. The fullbacks who worked that position last weekend against Emory and Henry were Vernon Davis, Melvin Riff and David Rogers. They are expected to share the duties this coming weekend when Presbyterian College invades the ECC campus. There has also been some talk that Randall Holmes, a fullback converted to end, may be shifted back to fullback.

Others Returning

Three other ECC gridgers who were injured during the Emory and Henry contest are expected to return to the lineup this Saturday night to see at least limited action. End Howard Beale suffered rib injuries but is expected to play. Halfbacks Glenn Bass and Lee Atkinson were also hurt, but are thought to be recovering fast enough to see action against the Blue Hose.

Boone's probable lineup this Saturday night will probably see the same men—with the exception of Speight—in the backfield. Ralph Zehring will quarterback and Atkinson and Bass will be at halfback slots. More than likely, however, Boone will substitute heavily at the halfback posts, using Bobby Berry and Charlie Bishop frequently. Both Bishop and Perry played outstanding ball against the Emory and Henry club.

All three of the boys who will run at the fullback post this weekend are bigger than Speight. Vernon Davis is a 210-pound freshman from Clayton, Melvin Riff is a solid 185-pounder from Manteo. David Rogers is a 195-pound 19-year-old soph from Fairmont. In the line, Boone will use Beale and Bill Cain at ends. Davis, Thomas and Charles Vaughan will probably see action also at those posts, particularly if Beale works only part-time. At tackles, Ed Emory and Charles Cook will be regulars, and Henry Kwikowski and Perry Pearson will also see action. Guards will be Wayne Davis and Charles Gordon; center will be Lynn Barnett.

Presbyterian, a member of the Little Four in South Carolina, is the only club ECC managed to defeat in 1957. The Bucs trimmed the Blue Hose 7-6 in South Carolina in the last few minutes of the last game of the season. Presbyterian will be after revenge before the ECC fans this weekend.

The Blue Hose will be a hefty team to Greenville this Saturday night. The probable starting lineup released by PC Coach Frank Jones is as follows:

Ends—Ted Leahy, 210 and Paul Chastain, 180; tackles—Richie Shigley, 200 and James Walker, 210; guards—Tommy Boney, 180 and Don Bridges, 185; center—Mac Copeland, 205; quarterback—Bob Waters, 190; halfbacks—Tony Benson, 175 and Gordon Stanley, 175; fullback—Bob Matthews, 185.

Reports Cloudy About Three Top Figures

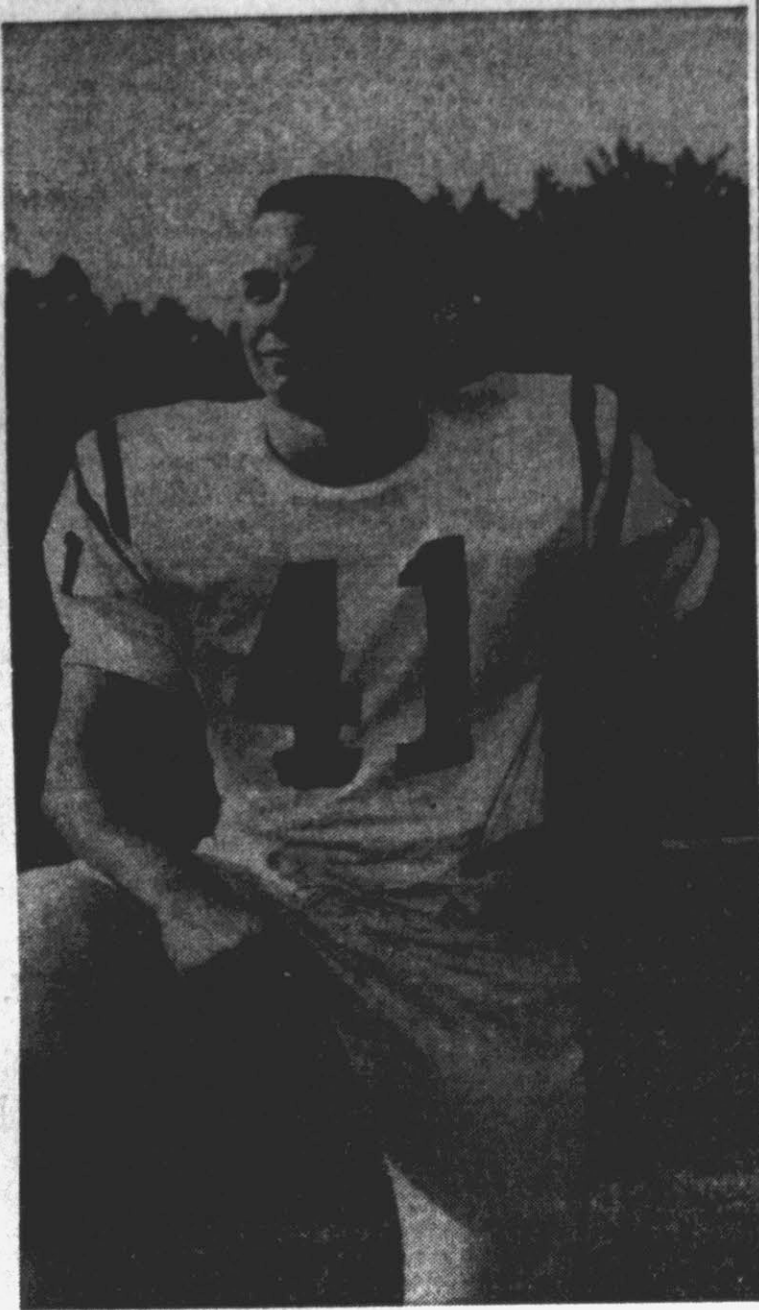

CHICAGO (AP) — Reports, rumors and denials today clouded the 1959 status of such major league figures as Fred Hutchinson, Birdie Tebbetts and Eddie Stanky.

If Hutchinson, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is headed for the same job with Baltimore, it's news to Orioles chief Paul Richards.

Reports that Tebbetts, ex-manager of Cincinnati, is going into an executive capacity with either St. Louis or Milwaukee, also brought denials.

And to top it all off, Cleveland coach Stanky would not confirm or deny a report that he will take over at St. Louis as director of player personnel.

Baseball officials and job-seekers are engaged in the greatest rumor spree since the closing days of World War II.

PC PASS CATCHER—Ed Vastine, end for the Presbyterian College Blue Hose will see action against ECC here this Saturday night.

Leo Says Bums Have To Field A Better Team

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The attendance honeymoon's over for the Los Angeles Dodgers "if they don't put a better team on the field next year."

The authority for the dismal outlook is Leo Durocher, manager of the Dodgers when they were the darlings of Brooklyn.

"Look," said Leo, whose ever readiness to talk earned him the nickname "The Lip," "the novelty of major league baseball will be a thing of the past after this season. I've got news for you—if the Dodgers don't produce next year, there's gonna be a lot of empty seats in the Coliseum."

Latest attendance figures show the Dodgers with 1,794,983 paid admissions, or about 700,000 over last year when they were in Brooklyn. The San Francisco Giants, pennant contenders until the final month of the National League race, have drawn 1,192,461, about a half-million over 1957.

Leo's comments on the Dodgers while a guest at a luncheon here yesterday were timely, but then, Leo was never one to lag. Buzzy Bavasi, general manager of the Dodgers, said yesterday he believed the Dodgers would be pennant contenders in 1959.

Leo, of course, wasn't aware of Bavasi's predictions. Bavasi, in fact, said the Dodgers blamed the Coliseum, with its distant right field fence, for part of their troubles.

"Even if the Dodgers had stayed in Brooklyn this year," Leo told newsmen, "they would never have been pennant contenders. They might have finished higher, but they wouldn't have been fighting for a pennant."

Burdette Has Shot At His Best Season

By ED WILKS

Lew Burdette, a betroubled World Series hero at the All-Star game, now has a shot at 20 victories and his winningest season in the majors.

The big right-hander who had only a 6-7 record in early July, has won 12 of 15 decisions since. And he's won seven of his last eight, with two shutouts and three one-run games for a 1.08 earned run average over the past month.

Burdette, whose best winning year was 1956, when he was 19-10, nailed his 18th last night as the Milwaukee Braves whipped the San Francisco 4-1 and cut their magic number for a second straight National League pennant to three.

Pittsburgh chopped its magic number for second place to two, beating St. Louis 3-1 after wrapping up a 2-1 victory in the completion of a game suspended Aug. 3. Cincinnati took a two-night pair from Los Angeles 5-3 and 7-5 in 10 innings. The Chicago Cubs beat Philadelphia 10-8 in 10.

In the American League, Detroit whipped New York 4-2, the Chicago White Sox defeated Baltimore 4-3 and Cleveland beat Washington 5-1.

Burdette gave up seven hits, one a fifth-inning homer by Bill White. The Braves beat Johnny Antonelli (15-13) with three in the seventh, when three errors followed Felix Mantilla's leadoff triple.

Rookie right-hander George Witt (9-2) backed up by Bob Skinner's RBI singles, became the first NL pitcher to win seven in a row this year as the Pirates finished last month's curfewed game. The Bucs six games behind Milwaukee, won the nightcap with Dick Stuart and Skinner driving in all the runs.

Each had three hits. Ron Kline (13-15) won it. Wilmer Mizell (10-13) and Bob Mabe (2-7) were the losers.

A pinch, two-run homer by Smoky Burgess won the nightcap for the Redlegs, who took the opener on home runs by Jerry Lynch, Pete Whisenant and rookie Dutch Dotterer that doomed the Dodgers to their first sub .500 season since 1944. Brooks Lawrence (8-12) and Tom Ackers (4-3) were the winners. Johnny Podres (13-14) and Johnny Klippstein (6-6) took the defeats.

A two-run single by Al Dark bagged it for the Cubs and gave rookie John Buzhardt his first major league decision. Rookie Don Erickson lost his first for the Phils.

TUESDAY'S FIGHTS
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
HONOLULU — Stan Harrington, 151, Hawaii, outpointed Joe Miceli, 149, New York, 10.

Sherm Lollar's 20th home run capped a tying, three-run third for the White Sox, who bagged it on Billy Goodman's single, a balk and Bubba Phillips' third single in the eighth. Dick Donovan (14-13) won it. Hoyt Wilhelm (2-10) was the loser.

Bell (11-8), who pitched six innings of no-hit ball against Boston in his last start, put down the Senators on a first-inning single by Herb Pless and a ninth-inning single by rookie Bob Allison. The Nats scored in the eighth on two walks and a sacrifice fly. Bell also was 4-for-4, driving in a run in a four-run seventh against loser Pete Ramos (14-15).

Phants, Kinston Battling On Rebound This Week

Both Greenville and Kinston will be on the rebound when the two high school clubs clash here Friday night in a Northeastern Conference ball game at ECC Stadium.

Both clubs were defeated last weekend. Rose High took a 19-6 licking from Northeastern foe Jacksonville, while Kinston was being drubbed 46-7 by a powerful Raleigh team.

The coming Friday night ball game will be Greenville's second in conference play and will be the first for Kinston in two previous games, the Red Devils have split.

1-1, winning over non-loop Jones Central in the opener and dropping the Raleigh tilt.

Teams Similar

In some ways, the two clubs are quite similar. Rose High will have a slight edge in experience, however, Coach Phillips has use of a lot of newcomers in early season workouts and in last week's Jacksonville game. Coach George Thompson, from Kinston, has a youthful club, full of inexperienced players.

Offensively, the clubs are most alike. Kinston boasts a potential passing attack and so does the Greenville club. Both teams, in getting licked last week, showed brief flurries of strong aerial possibilities that never quite clicked. Greenville completed five of 12 against Jacksonville for 57 yards gained. Kinston connected on three of six passes against Raleigh for 53 yards.

In Good Shape

One way in which the two clubs differ is in physical fitness. Kinston, according to reports, has several key players on the sidelines with injuries. The Kinston backfield was crippled without the use of a key halfback and the line was also missing one or two regulars against Raleigh. Greenville, on the other hand, has its full first string of two units in top shape, except for minor bruises and knots suffered against Jacksonville.

Greenville coaches made a point of stressing conditioning in early drills and one of the coaches made the comment last weekend, "they look like they're in good shape. They should be."

Evidence that the club was in good physical shape was the Phantoms' play against Jacksonville. The Greenville club grew stronger as the game progressed. After dropping behind 19-0 in the opening quarter, the Rose team continued to battle back and fought off any further Cardinal scoring. In the final quarter, Greenville mustered a score and had a 48-yard march in progress when the game ended.

Coach Bud Phillips has not yet announced his starting lineup for the Kinston match, but there is a possibility that some changes will be made. More than likely, however, he will stick to his method used last week more or less: against Jacksonville, he started his first unit but substituted frequently and used both his first and second unit inexchangably.

The first two days of this week have been used for play patterns and defensive work in the Phantoms' drill camp. Today, the club is expected to do some heavy work and more offensive patterns. Tomorrow, light equipment will probably be used while Coach Phillips gives his club the final briefing on the Red Devils.

Giese Says Duke Is Just As Strong And Probably Faster

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke Coach Bill Murray can complain from here on out about lack of depth at tackle and guard but he won't get any sympathy from South Carolina's Warren Giese.

The Blue Devils, says Giese, are "as strong as last year and probably faster."

Giese figures the Duke squad this Saturday night will be experienced and well coached. "We can't possibly match them in depth at the important halfback spots."

best physical condition since he look over at South Carolina three years ago.

Both Duke and South Carolina shaped up well in yesterday's drills, working on defense.

At Virginia, Coach Dick Voris announced he would start former halfback Mike Scott at one of the ends for the opener at Clemson. Scott, a 188-pound senior, played in only one game last year, and that one in the backfield.

Clemson's Frank Howard, meanwhile, expressed pleasure with the way the Tigers are developing but added he'll know more after the Virginia game. "It takes real Saturday afternoon action against a Virginia opponent," said Howard. Giese, says his squad is in the have to go with."

Earle Edwards of North Carolina State said his squad is in top shape for the opener with North Carolina. The Wolfpack will see a new face in the Tar Heel backfield—sophomore Sonny Folckomer, an elusive runner from York, Pa. Folckomer has been working with the first unit since veteran Daley Goff went to the sidelines with an injured knee. He'll be out indefinitely.

Coach Paul Amen reported his Deacons are "tackling a little sharper but there is still room for improvement" before Saturday's game with Maryland. First unit guard Nick Patella was on the inactive list with a pulled leg muscle but he's expected to be ready for the opener.

CHAPTER 8

Unholstering both of his pistols, Bat Masterson shot the four pack horses so that they fell near the edge of the pit, making a bulwark behind which he and Pat Garrett would crouch.

They were desperate men, made so by the circumstances, but brave men because they stood their ground. Garrett crouched down beside Masterson and coolly, carefully laid out his rows of rifle cartridges.

Masterson and Garrett waited until the range closed and the thunder turned deafening, then began to fire, but the sound was completely lost. Both the men knew buffalo and their stamina and a heart shot at a hundred and fifty yards was good for a seventy yard run before the animal dropped.

Elizabeth had no idea how long the men had fired into the herd; hours at least, and still there was no let up, no pause in the wild stampede. The children clapped their hands over their ears and buried their faces in the dirt so they could not see the animals plunge on.

Toward evening the last of the herd passed, leaving the memory and terror of the run burned in each of them. When Pat Garrett worried off a chew of tobacco, his hands were shaking and he did not seem a bit ashamed of it.

"Lucky for us," he said, "that we only caught the straggling outer fringe of the main herd."

Elizabeth looked at him. "You mean there were more?"

"I don't guess there were more than six or seven thousand in that herd," Garrett said. "Would you guess that, Bat?"

"Not more," Masterson said. He looked at Tom Rettig. "Sorry I had to tell you, son. But you have sure been killed if you'd run off."

The thought sobered the boy, snubbed his anger, yet it remained strong in his eyes. Masterson put his hand on Tom Rettig's shoulder. "Son, we're going to have to look the truth in the face now, and it won't be a figure that, that, or the main part of it, passed east of here. Your pa was at there, and I don't count his chances too good for surviving it."

"You're lying," Tom Rettig said. Tears formed in his eyes. "You let my pa die."

"There was nothing Mr. Masterson could do," Elizabeth said.

Grief had its own unreasonable way with the boy; he refused to understand. "You could have found him and helped him like you did us!"

Masterson looked at him, his dark eyes kind. "It's hard to understand now, but you've got to get the truth of it straight in your mind. He blew out a long breath when he saw that he was not getting anywhere. He gave his attention to Elizabeth. 'Adobe Walls is closest, but there's no doctor there. Our best bet is Camp Supply, but it's five days walking.'"

"I'll manage it," she said. "Don't worry about me."

"A gal like you I sure wouldn't worry about," Masterson said, smiling. "You're plenty game, Elizabeth."

"What about my pa?" Tom Rettig asked. The girls watched, wide-eyed, not speaking.

Masterson and Garrett exchanged glances, then Masterson said, "Son, I told you that you got to face the truth. Now unless your pa dug himself a hole, he's dead. And I kind of figure your pa was the kind who'd lose his head in that case, there ain't no use in looking for him. No use at all."

The girls began to whimper, acknowledging that their father was dead. Tom Rettig eyed Bat Masterson with a stony expression. "You could have saved him," he said.

"No he couldn't," Garrett said. "You got to understand that."

The boy was not listening. "You didn't like my pa because he wouldn't swallow everything you said. That's why you let him die. I loved him and you're goin' to pay for what you done someday."

Masterson looked at the worn tips of his boots. "Boy, I'm sorry you feel that way. I'm sorry because you're wrong."

"To m!" Elizabeth snapped. "You've said enough!" Her expression was pinched and she was unsteady on her feet, yet she seemed determined to settle the issue. "You want to be a man, Tom, then take this like one."

The boy shook his head. "I'm not a man yet, but when I get to be one, I'm going to carry a gun." His iced eyes settled on Masterson. "Then I'm going to make you pay."

Elizabeth Rettig understood that this particular spot along the Mustang Creek was lost to her; she would not come back to it. All of her things were gone, and the rotting carcasses of buffalo and horses would make habitation within two miles of the place impossible. They walked until midnight, and then camped on the prairie.

"How's the arm?" Masterson asked Elizabeth.

"It hurts like blue blazes," she said, "but it'll be all right."

"We're going to make it right, Elizabeth."

The way he said it, flat out, like a statement, made her smile.

"When Paul left for Adobe Walls, Elizabeth said, 'I had a feeling that something was going to happen. And then when the wind started to blow, I knew I had been right.'"

"I know it ain't any of my business," Masterson said, "but have you got enough there to get you to Peoria?"

"I have nearly a hundred dollars," she said. "That isn't much, is it?"

"It'll take you to this Max fellow," Masterson said.

Elizabeth Rettig leaned forward and rested her chin on her knee. "I've been thinking about it and I can't figure out what's best. If I went back to Peoria, I'd only have Max Ludke when I got there. And Max would say, 'I told you so, and I wouldn't like that. But if I stay here, I'll have less than a hundred dollars to carry me through.'"

"You really thinking seriously about going back to Mustang Creek?" He asked it solemnly, as though the answer might be quite important.

"I wouldn't go back to the crossing," she said. "Maybe that place you said, where there were cottonwoods."

"That's right smack dab on the cattle trail," Masterson said. "Why don't you settle in Dodge? I reckon you could find decent work there."

"How ironic," she said. "Paul and I argued about not settling in town. Mr. Masterson, I don't know about town now. If Tom felt differently — you know — I'd consider Dodge City, but Tom's kind of sick. Mr. Masterson, sick in his heart, and in his thinking, I want him where he can get close to the earth, not breathe the dust man has stirred up in town."

She lay back, her arm resting on her stomach, and in spite of her belief to the contrary, her eyes closed and the pain eased away.

AEC Tests May Aid Arid Lands

ALBUQUERQUE (AP)—Atomic Energy Commission Chairman John T. McCone has described projected tests in New Mexico next year as "extremely important" to arid lands throughout the world.

He said yesterday that project Gnome involves the use of isotopes to trace underground rivers and water beds. He said it could have long-lasting effects on research projects throughout the world.

McCone also said proposed suspension of nuclear tests would result in an intensification of work on the peaceful use of the atom.

Teamsters OK Convention To Throw Off Monitors

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Teamsters Executive Board early today authorized a new convention of the giant union next February in an avowed move to rid itself of court-named supervising monitors.

The monitors quickly announced they will go to court to halt the move and to seek more authority for themselves in ordering what they consider needed reforms.

Teamsters President James R. Hoffa announced the union board's action and described it as an effort to end the monitoring. He said he expects to be re-elected president with little or no opposition.

But chief monitor Martin F. O'Donoghue said the Teamsters so far have failed to clean up corruption sufficiently for another convention so soon.

Hoffa was elected at a convention held a year ago, but it was attacked in court proceedings as rigged—a situation that led to the monitoring.

Godfrey Schmidt, another member of the monitor board, agreed with O'Donoghue, but the third member, L.N.D. Wells, a Teamsters lawyer, went along with Hoffa's convention plan and said the monitors were exceeding their authority in trying to stop it.

O'Donoghue said the monitors, over Wells' dissent, plan to carry their new plea before U.S. Dist. Judge F. Dickinson Lettis, probably later today. Union attorneys were prepared to fight the action, and were expected to appeal to higher courts if, after hearings, Judge Lettis rules for the monitors.

Hoffa has balked at many monitor directives. He has not yet put into effect new rules drafted by the monitors seeking to guarantee fair union elections and to bar criminals from union office. He has refused to fire smaller-fry Teamsters bosses accused of corruption and hoodlum tactics in hearings before the Senate Rackets Committee.

Once the monitors' petition is filed, Judge Lettis is expected to arrange a hearing in a week or so.

The legal battle is one that, if the monitors lose, will free Hoffa of outside supervision in running the 1½-million-member union. But it's one the monitors feel they must win if they are to be effective.

Barrier

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Man's first space journey has been indefinitely postponed. Too much radiation.

So says Dr. Albert R. Hibbs, chief of research analysis at Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. A band of radiation surrounding the earth is much more intense than was believed, he reported yesterday.

Dr. Hibbs, back from the international Astronautical Federation convention in Amsterdam, said the intensity was disclosed by the U. S. satellites Explorers I and II and reported in detail by Explorer IV.

He told a California Disaster office meeting: "Until we can set the boundaries for this radiation field, we cannot even estimate the amount of protective shielding which will be required to enable a man to travel safely through this extremely hostile environment."

Typhoon Helen Moves On Japan

TOKYO (AP)—Typhoon Helen, packing winds up to 120 miles per hour over a 300-mile area, slowly closed in on Japan today.

As a forest of Tokyo and other areas were hit by downpours of 1.8 inches of rain in one hour.

Navy Plane Snoops On Reds With Radar Eyes

FORMOSA (AP) — Every day, a big U.S. Navy plane lumbers out to sea and ranges at low level up and down Formosa Strait on a snooping mission.

For its 11-man crew, it's a grueling nine-hour patrol not far off the China coastline.

These Navy Neptunes, heavily equipped with radar, keep an electronic eye on what's going on along the coast and in the strait. They patrol at 1,000 feet altitude, sometimes dipping down to just 100 feet above the water to look over a suspicious vessel.

Merchant ships, some of them

Communist vessels, have grown accustomed to the big black planes. Crews often wave hello.

Of late, the Neptunes have been helping provide air cover for Nationalist Chinese supply convoys headed for Quemoy.

"With our radar," says Cmdr. Peter Grier of Baltimore, "we can keep a constant picture of the coast. We can tell any time anything moves and we report it to the convoy flagship."

"We can pick up torpedo boats or MIGs on our radar," says Grier. "We have no guns aboard so we are not out to tangle with anybody. If we run into someone we turn on our jets and take off."

Although not equipped with guns, they carry bombs.

The Neptune operates under orders to go no closer than 20 miles of the Red China coast.

"Our basic job is antisub work," says Grier. "We haven't spotted any subs yet. The strait isn't favorable for submarines to operate."

"We keep an eye on sampans and junks. We're interested in whether they are really fishing. We know that some of the junks have radar aboard. When we spot a ship we go down to 100 feet and inspect it. MIGs? We see them in the sky all the time. Occasionally they come down to look at us, but they have never made a real aggressive pass at us, yet."

Runaway Boy Is Critically Burned In Barn Fire

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — William Blake, 13, who said he ran away from home so he wouldn't be a financial burden to his stepfather, was burned critically yesterday when fire swept a barn where he was sleeping.

Flames cloaked the boy as he leaped from the hayloft at a farm 20 miles southeast of here, near Mansfield.

"I was asleep and then the fire was all over me in the hay," he mumbled through burned lips. "I was running away, but I wasn't having any trouble at home."

He pointed a burned arm toward his stepfather, John Crabtree. "I didn't want him spending all his money on me. He doesn't make much money."

Another runaway, Benny Pannell, 16, of Fort Worth, dragged him from the flaming loft and made him jump. Pannell wasn't burned.

Shirley Temple's Children On TV

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shirley Temple's three children will make their acting debut on one of the mother's television shows.

Susan, 10, her daughter by actor John Agar; Charles Black Jr., 6; and Lori Black, 3, appeared for the first time before motion picture cameras yesterday. They will be on a filmed Shirley Temple Storybook show Dec. 21.

Shirley, who made her own acting debut at 3, told newsmen: "The children are only here for one day. Then it's back to Atherton, Calif., and home. I just want them to get used to the idea that their mother is doing while she is away from them."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market eased moderately from its record highs in active trading early this afternoon. The average dipped slightly under the impact of expected profit taking. Even as most pivotal stocks showed minus signs, there was considerable strength in others. Losses of fractions to more than a point were the rule among leading issues. These were interspersed with gains in about the same range.

Ford and General Motors were active and fractionally higher. Despite the start of a big walk-out at Ford, optimism prevailed in Wall Street that this would be temporary and that negotiations, still in progress, would fend off crippling strike.

Oils and aluminum, both somewhat tardy in the prolonged market rise, showed strength. Steels, while a bit lower, pared their early declines. Tobacco, building materials, rails, utilities and mail orders showed minus signs. Chemicals, drugs and the nonferrous metal section were mixed.

Du Pont, a higher-priced blue chip, showed a loss of about 2. Down around a point were Good-year, Caterpillar and Eastman Kodak. Commonwealth Edison dipped more than a point.

Fractional losses were taken by U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, U.S. Rubber, Woolworth, American Smelting, Loew's, Westinghouse Electric, Southern Railway, U.S. Gypsum, Johns-Manville and American Tobacco.

As oils moved up, Royal Dutch, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Gulf Oil were all up a point or better.

Alcoa rose about 2 and Aluminum Ltd. about a point. Polaroid, Celanese and Union Carbide were ahead around a point.

Health Directors Ass'n Elections Set Dec. 2

Officers for a newly organized Northeastern Health Directors Association of North Carolina will be elected December 2, it was announced today by Dr. Georgia V. Mills, director of the Pitt County Health Department and pro-tem secretary-treasurer of the new group.

Dr. Mills and pro-tem president Dr. Joseph Campbell, Wilson County Health Director, were named to the temporary posts at a meeting last week of eight members of the association. The election meeting will be held in the Edgecombe County Health Department in Tarboro, site of last week's meeting.

In addition to Dr. Mills and Dr. Campbell, other health directors who attended last week's meeting included Dr. A. J. Holton, Franklin County Health Department; Dr. W. A. Browne, Edgecombe and Martin County Health departments; Dr. John Chamberlain, Nash County and Rocky Mount health departments; Dr. L. E. Kling, Beaufort and Pamlico County Health departments; and Dr. Isa Grant, Wake County Health department.

Invitations for membership in the association have been extended to all health directors in the area from Wake County East to the coast and from the Virginia state line South to all counties not included in the Southeastern Health Conference. Meetings will be on a quarterly basis, with one meeting in conjunction with the annual meeting of the North Carolina Public Health Association.

In addition to electing officers, members of the association will also have a proposed constitution present at the December 2 meeting.

Jack Spain Says Politics Behind High Court Move

"If there had been no politics in it," there would probably have been no Court order to integrate, declared Jack Spain of Greenville, administrative assistant of U.S. Senator Sam Ervin of North Carolina.

Speaking here before the Methodist Men of St. James Church last night, Spain pointed out that Chief Justice Earl Warren was known before appointment as a great politician, not a great jurist. Other jurists also lacked judicial experience, he said.

"I don't think integration is going to be the answer," but the Court is unlikely to reverse its decision, the speaker said. He cited a bill to curb powers of the Court which nearly passed the Senate this year, indicated that the Congress may assert itself to arrest the trend toward integration.

"In 1787 the delegates to our Constitutional Convention knew no man or group of men can be trusted with all power," Spain observed, adding that they wrote into our entire system of government checks and balances between federal and state governments, and between the three branches of each to prevent any one from dominating the nation.

"Both the Truman and the Eisenhower administration agreed that Nationalist China's last stand on Formosa must be defended against Communist dictators," he said.

Spain was introduced by Dr. Stanley Walker, president of the club, and was the guest of Marvin Suggs. His speech followed a supper of "country style steak" and was in turn followed by an extended question-and-answer period. He said his opinions were his own and not necessarily those of Sen. Ervin.

The meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of Joyner Memorial Library on the East Carolina College campus. United Fund President J. B. Kittrell Jr. urged all members of the organization's board of directors to be present for the meeting.

Arrest Two On Liquor Charges

A Negro man and woman were arrested here early this morning by Pitt County ABC officers H. B. Lilley and Walter M. Taylor.

Heleen Randolph, 31, of 210 West 15th Street and Matthew Morris, Jr., 40, of Greenville Route 3, were charged with possession and transportation of non-tax paid whiskey.

The arrests took place on 15th Street near the Randolph woman's house. Officers reported finding two and one-half gallons of illicit whiskey in a suitcase. The car in which the defendants were riding was seized and stored pending court action.

Court records show that the woman is presently on probation. In October, 1957, she was found guilty of violating the liquor laws and placed on probation for two years and given a six-months suspended sentence.

Morris was released under a $200 bond. Bond for the woman was $300.

Headquarters for all local Civil Defense activities will be on the first floor of the Greenville City Hall with six telephones available for use.

In the discussion of overall state planning, Colonel Dawson said North Carolina has seven "likely civilian targets," including Buncombe, Mecklenburg, Forsythe, Guilford, Durham, Wake and New Hanover counties. In addition, he said potential military targets include Edenton, Elizabeth City, Harvey Point, Cherry Point, Camp Lejeune, Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base.

Evacuation from the target areas is necessary, he said, because there is only one underground shelter in North Carolina. That shelter, Colonel Dawson added, belongs to one family, and other persons will not have any protection from radiation caused by nuclear and atomic bomb bursts.

"The extent of radiation damage is shown in figures computed during a mock attack in May," Colonel Dawson said. "We figured that nuclear attacks alone on three targets in the May test would cause 30,000 dead and 15,000 wounded. However, computations by engineers, who used wind directions and speeds, blast heights and other factors determined that an estimated 375,000 people would have been killed within a 30-day period from radiation effects."

"The May test was just that—a test—and nothing more. But, the real thing could happen any time and we have reason to believe that this country's potential enemies will use ground bursts for their airborne nuclear weapons in an attempt to create the greatest radiation problems," he added.

Survival plans are basically the same for each county, so far as organization is concerned, the colonel said. They call for local organization of 19 groups to assist in Civil Defense work, including warning, communication, engineering and public works, emergency information, manpower, fire, health protection, emergency medical care, welfare, police, religious affairs, radiological defense, rescue, transportation, supply, emergency training, facilities protection, warden service and continuity of government plans.

Each of the groups is composed of civilian personnel who will function in accordance with instructions from the Governor who will direct all state activities. In addition to the local groups, Colonel Dawson said the state has organized 14 mobile support regiments to move food, clothing, engineering equipment and supplies transportation, fire, police and other protective agencies to stricken areas.

"It will be a big job to handle 65,500 evacuees from the other counties . . . but you will not be alone in your problems," Colonel Dawson said. "Other areas in the state will be confronted with similar problems."

"War is not a pleasant thing under any circumstances and it will be more unpleasant and chaotic unless we prepare simple, practical and realistic plans for the care of all citizens in the state should our metropolitan areas be attacked and destroyed."

Objectives and community requirements society will place upon him as a man."

Wade appeared at the meeting as a result of local Legion investigations of possibilities of beginning a Boys' Club program in Greenville.

In his comments, Wade said objectives of Boys' Club work include a primary aim "to create standards of good ethics and good conduct, and to develop individual qualities of character, such as honesty, dependability, loyalty, trustfulness, reverence, obedience, self-respect, and respect for others."

He added, "The Boys' Club should supplement the guidance given in the home, and wherever possible, maintain a close relationship with the parents for mutual understanding of the boy's needs, and ways of helping him develop."

State Bank and Trust Company of Greenville has made application to the State Banking Commission and to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for the establishment of a teller's branch at West End Circle in Greenville.

Announcement of the proposed new facility was made today by John T. Marston, Jr., president of State Bank and Trust Company.

Hearing on the application before the State Banking Commission is scheduled for October 22. If the applications are approved, Marston said, work will begin as soon as practicable on a new building to house the new branch. The branch, he said, will contain both drive-in and walk-in facilities.
