Dear Blanche;

I am still happy over your heart warming letter which came last week. Yesterday I went to church which I had not done for three weeks. It was too much for me. In consequence I had a very bad day. My son-in-law hovered over me for hours of anxiety.

Last night my son in Richmond called me over long distance. He and your son exchanged letters. I think it was last year. So the two have an epistolary acquaintance which makes Walter Raleigh more anxious to meet your son.

I am still planning to leave here on the 8th, to go to Asheville to see my optometrist in Asheville. From Asheville I plan to fly to Richmond to be met by my son at the airport. My son and I will be in Enfield on April 18th, as originally planned. Unless providentially prevented, you may address me, c/o Prof. Walter R. Coppedge, Ph.D.

With love, I am
Devotedly,
Llewellyn
