Ever precious Blanche,

Whatever I write I can scarcely read, so I have asked Walter Raleigh to transcribe my letter so that it will be more legible.

Elisa and Harold left Sunday. and Polly, who was here for a week, left on Saturday. My son returned from Vietnam on Friday and spent the weekend before going on to Chapel Hill for his daughter's graduation. For the first time in many years four of my children were gathered about me.

I continue to lose weight and strength.

I thank you most sincerely for being all that you are and have been and still are to me.

I am too feeble to write more. With more love than my words can express, I am
Devotedly,
Llewellyn.
