Questions Load Teen Mailbag

By VIVIAN BROWN "My father has remarried and I don't like my stepmother. She is trying to be so nice that I am suspicious of her. I don't think she rings true." That's a letter from a 16-year-old. Your father is older, and should be wiser than you, so perhaps he is a better judge of your stepmother than you would suspect. Perhaps the only reason you dislike her is because she is new in the home. Why don't you wait and see how things develop? And if there is an 18-year-old unmarried girl in the world who doesn't have this problem, it's because she is allergic to cars: Car Problem "My boy friend is very nice, but he insists on parking the car during an evening date. My family do not approve of it, and have told me that if he parks against my wishes, I should insist that he take me home, and never see him again. He does park against my wishes but I do not want my family to know. Do you think he is a bad boy?" I would not condemn every boy just because he wanted to "park," although a great many had characters fall into that category. If he insists on parking, try to analyze why he does: (1) Do you invite him into your house after an evening date? (2) Is there a place you can be alone and can talk, such as the front porch? (3) Is he afraid to park the car near your home because of your parents? Many boys who are in love like a small period of time alone with their girl, and if there is no other way to have a talk, they may choose their own parking ground. There are many undesirable characters, however, who take advantage of these instances. "My girl friend has been engaged only one month, and she is going to be married in two months. My parents say that I must be engaged for one year before I get married. Don't you think it is silly once you are engaged to wait that long to get married?" It does seem so, but in some cases there are reasons why it is worthwhile to wait. Perhaps your parents feel that neither of you is quite ready for marriage, and while they have permitted the engagement, they still feel you should know each other better before you go further in the relationship. Hand-Me-Downs "Do you think a girl of 17 should still be wearing hand-me-downs from older sisters? I have never had a real dress of my own, and the dresses I inherit from my sisters are pretty old by the time I get them." I feel sorry for you because I think you have a real problem. I don't think you should continue wearing hand-me-downs, unless you can have something of your own, occasionally. I do think that you should try to improve your own situation, however. Can you afford to buy material and make your own clothes? If your mother has a sewing machine, that should be simple. If you develop a little talent you may learn how to dress up big-sisters' dresses too, so they look new. Belts, collars, cuffs, scarfs all help when you are rejuvenating costumes. "How much should you spend on a party for 24 people? I do not have very much money, and the custom in our crowd is to ask everyone for food during the holidays. What can I possibly serve that would keep the menu within reasonable limits?" A big bowl of chili and a big bowl of cole slaw plus a gelatin dessert may do the trick. Or what about an enormous bowl of corn chowder and saltine crackers, followed by spaghetti and tomato sauce? The idea is to give them something filling, and tasty, and your problem is solved. GOOD ENTRANCE Be careful of how your front door looks. It doesn't take long to wash and wax it and the wax is a protection against weather elements. While you are at it wash and iron the curtain. It takes very little time for a curtain for a door to dry and while it is doing so you can shine the glass part of your door. An extra egg white in the refrigerator? Add it to the egg whites for a meringue for a pie to make the topping extra high; don't forget to beat in two extra tablespoons of sugar for the extra egg, and add a few extra grains of salt.

"After being out of the United States for two years, it's a delightful welcome to meet so many nice and helpful people as here in Greenville," she commented. Continuing, she added that, "There is a complete contrast in climate between Greenville and Venezuela. There the weather is springlike all year round, where here it's freezing, but so invigorating." Miss Munoz left yesterday to join her family in California, but plans to return in March.

County Agent Speaks To Home Dept.

The growing and care of azaleas and camellias was the subject of the talk given by S. C. Winchester, County Agricultural Agent, to the Home Department of the Greenville Woman's Club on Friday. Showing slides as he discussed the plants, Winchester said that azaleas and camellias have become popular plants, but azaleas are more difficult to grow. Continuing, he said, "Camellias will grow in almost any kind of situation, but azaleas are better adapted to wooded areas where there is some shade. Freezing does not hurt the plants, as is commonly thought; the damage is done by rapid thawing, so early morning shade is good for both plants." Camellia buds, however, are more easily damaged by frost than azalea buds. Giving directions for planting, Winchester stated, "Either do the job right or not at all," as it is important to plant correctly. "A common fault is to plant too deep," as both azaleas and camellias have shallow root systems. Good drainage is also important, as is a well prepared bed. Discussing the problems associated with growing, the agent said that bulletins on various plants and home ground improvements are available at his office, and invited members to call for them. When asked about growing azaleas and camellias from cuttings, Winchester told how to make a small "greenhouse" in which to plant the cuttings. Following the talk, Mrs. Ed Ricks, president of the Home Department, expressed the appreciation of the 23 members present, and welcomed the two new members, Mrs. Preston Cannon and Mrs. Sam Brooks, and guest, Mrs. B. R. Jackson. Mrs. H. R. Rogers, program chairman, reminded the group that the February meeting would be an evening meeting, an "Old Fashioned Party" with husbands as guests.

French Designer Likes New Fashions

NEW YORK (AP) — Every French designer should be required to make periodic trips to America, says Mme. Yvonne Minassian, a petite and knowing blonde who has been with the House of Dior in Paris since its inception.

I talked with Yvonne during the first afternoon's showings of New York spring fashions, staged for 200 members of the nation's fashion press.

As the fresh, youthful — and mass-produced — fashions paraded down the runway, the Frenchwoman's eyes sparkled with appreciation.

"The things are charming," she said. "Anyone would like to wear them. Here in America they work on trends that are needed, I think, while in Paris they just design."

What America will wear next spring was evidenced in the day's showings by such designers as Anne Fogarty, Nettie Rosenstein and Wilson Folmar of the House of Edward Abbott. Yvonne applauded as the new Fogarty designs appeared — fresh, flattering shirtwaist dresses in gay silk prints, capsule sheaths in flannels and linens, sheer, full-skirted date dresses for the young in heart.

When it was announced that these dresses retailed at from $40 up, Yvonne gasped: "How lucky you are, you Americans!"

This alert ambassador of French fashion gives full credit to American know-how in making smart, wearable clothes available to the public at prices within the average budget. But she isn't selling French fashion short.

"I can see in many of these so-beautiful dresses inspirations from the last Paris collections," she said. "But they have been adapted so skillfully to the American taste. They are not copies. This I do not mean, but the original feeling perhaps was born in Paris."

Yvonne is happily and recently married, has a young stepson to whom she is devoted, spends summer vacations at her villa in the south of France, takes winter vacations in Switzerland, and comes to America at every opportunity.

"One must come here to keep up with the world — and to know what to sell American buyers," she says.

Daily Care Pays Off When You Own A Horse

By VIVIAN BROWN AP Newsfeatures Writer

A horse is a real joy, as many a teen-ager knows, but if you take on the responsibility of owning a horse, be prepared to give it proper attention. If you can't care for it, stick to the riding stables or horses that belong to friends.

Some young people enjoy riding, want their own horse, but when faced with caring for the animal, they are overwhelmed — it conflicts with their other pleasures, and sometimes their school activities.

Work involved in owning a horse includes rising early in the morning to feed it and clean the stall, exercising it sometimes when the snow is on the ground, grooming it especially in spring when the long winter hair is still with the animal.

But there are wonderful rewards — The early morning chores will bring peaches to the complexion, give you good healthful exercise and a big appetite.

If you are below car driving license age, the horse can be your means of transportation, a boon to steady dating, as two 15-year-olds who lived five miles apart found out.

You can show your horse in shows, and get a special thrill out of performing with your very own steed, as you wear some charming clothes — velvet cap, riding adhpurs and chic jacket.

Horses are like people too. If you aren't good to them they'll be mean, and if you treat them gently, they'll return your favors in kind.

It seems incredible that anyone could be unkind to a horse, or any other animal for that matter, but some morons are. Little horses like the 13 Hafflingers just imported to this country, the first of their breed to set foot on these shores, are so beautiful, they are

Opera Gives Most Ambitious Work

By GEORGE E. PERRY

The Grass Roots Opera Company made their annual appearance in Greenville last evening with their performance of Mozart's "Don Giovanni," given before a large crowd in McGinnis Auditorium. Of all operas which this company has presented here, this work is certainly the most ambitious (perhaps a little too much so for this group, for Mozart above all others demands musicianship, a quality obtained only through experience), but notwithstanding the few handicaps and resultant flaws which are present in all but the leading opera companies—and occasionally even in them—this opera considered generally to be Mozart's greatest, received a reasonably intelligent and competent performance.

As was the case last year, the leads stood out head and shoulders above the rest. Hayden Blanchard, as Don Ottavio, seemed to be the star of the show. This year, in contrast to last, he had a role which gave him a chance to show off his voice to good advantage. His several arias were nicely lyric, his projection was such that he was always audible, and his diction was clear. The nasality of the upper register, which I mentioned in last year's review, seems to be disappearing, and in this way and others this promising singer is well on the road to being a notable tenor. What he lacks in histrionic ability, he makes up for with his voice. Martha Stotler, sung by Donna Anna, was well cast. Vocally and historically she seems to have a more professional flare than the rest of the principals, and these two points in her favor made for a convincing reenactment of her role. Naomi Blake, as Zerlina, had the coloratura role of the evening, and like Miss Stotler, was well cast. She used her voice well, and gave the part just the right amount of the flirtatious.

The other more important members of the cast, if not measuring up to the standards set by these three, did their parts believably, if less excitingly. Anthony Tamburello, as Leporello, has a pleasing enough voice with generous coloring, but his projection kept its level down to a point where at times he was almost inaudible, especially in the lower register. The same might be said about Gert E. Muser, who sang Don Giovanni, except that his projection was better, and only occasionally did he get drowned out by the piano.

The costumes, especially of the leads, were well executed and quite pleasing, but by these qualities, the costumes of the lesser roles were made to appear unnecessarily drab. The sets were clever, especially those for the cemetery and the palace. They were simple, yet adequate; but perhaps their modesty made them appear a bit incongruous with the costumes.

I was sorry to note that Fred Popper was no longer the director; for last year, due largely to him, I am sure, the performance possessed for the first time a noticeable degree of assuredness. Last night there seemed to be a lack of momentum, which might have been caused by a lack of this assuredness.

But I have said before, and I repeat, this company should be praised for their efforts in bringing opera to the people—almost European in custom—and for all the flaws and faults which are everpresent (there and in everything else). I know of no other group which deserves to be so warmly congratulated for this type of endeavor as does the Grass Roots Opera Company. Not only are more people hearing opera through this medium, but potential singers in the operatic field are getting invaluable experience, which is the surest way of assuring the continuance of professional opera in America.

Women In The Church

By MARY FOWLER

"World Day of Prayer" will be observed by Christian women in 144 countries around the world on Friday, February 13. In the U.S.A., the sponsoring group is United Church Women, a department of the National Council. The purpose of the day "is not only to unite all Christians in a bond of prayer, but to make offerings for Christian interdenominational missions at home and abroad." Offerings for World Day of Prayer are divided between the Divisions of Home Missions and of Foreign Missions of the National Council of Churches. At home, funds help agricultural migrants and their children and low income farm families, as well as Indian-Americans. They also maintain a chaplain at the government hospital in Anchorage, Alaska. Abroad, students, nurses and staff from four colleges in India, Ewha College in Korea and two in Japan are aided, as are women and children through leadership projects in Asia and Africa. These include education for Christian leadership, rehabilitation and village improvement, Christian broadcasting, and Christian literature for new literates.

The Mary Johnson Hospital in Manila—one of overseas Methodism's best known institutions — recently observed the fiftieth anniversary of its service to the Filipino leaders. "Dedication Day," the high point of the observance, drew distinguished Filipino leaders to the hospital, including President Carlos P. Garcia, who was principal speaker. Another leading participant was Senator Teodoro, who will lead a fund-raising drive for Mary Johnson. The Senator was born at the hospital. Established by missionaries of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the former Methodist Episcopal Church, Mary Johnson today is the only hospital in Manila's Tondo section, which has a population of more than 350,000. In a single year, its 146 beds care for 4,520 patients, and its outpatient department treats almost 40,000 persons. Burned out by bombings in World War II, Mary Johnson Hospital was rebuilt in the late 1940's. A new building was dedicated in 1950. Positions of top responsibilities in the hospital, formerly held by missionaries, now are held by trained Filipinos. Mary Johnson's School of Nursing also is 50 years old. From it, almost 600 nurses have gone out to serve the health needs of the Philippines.

Castro Raises Doubts On Future

How long will it be before Cuba's revolutionary hero, Fidel Castro, succumbs to the lure of power and assumes the role of a new Batista?

In keeping with his avowed democratic beliefs, Castro says "never"; but we wonder.

To our way of thinking, democratic processes do not begin with hastily-conducted military trials and executions. As of yesterday, about fifty of Batista's followers had been executed without open trials.

Associated Press accounts say Castro was asked why the Batista followers were being executed without open trials. The new "boss" just shrugged it off. "There were not so many . . . two or three dozen criminals," he responded. They were judged, he said, adding that "if anyone killed 15 or 20 people, he has no right to live."

This from a lawyer?

Grim tales of cruelty and atrocities are told of the Batista regime's secret police; they resemble stories coming out of most lands where rule is by force and terror. But this can be no excuse for counter-measures by a "believer in democracy" which are equally extreme in their disregard for individual rights and the sharing of the burden of guilt.

As things shape up today, an island on our doorstep seems on the brink of a particularly horrible kind of blood bath. Nearly 3,000 Batista supporters are awaiting trial by appointed judges who may be expected to "do the right thing" by their enemies.

Off hand, we don't think a life insurance company would do much soliciting of business from any of the 3,000 prisoners.

Castro protests the provisional government is being guided by public opinion . . . an argument probably heard during the reign of La Guillotine in France many years ago.

Ridding his land of a dictator remains to the credit of a very young man. But the heady wine of power has intoxicated older and more experienced men than Fidel Castro; and once tasted, it's hard to put the cup aside.

Can he do it? Or will his proclaimed democratic ideals fall by the wayside?

Hole In Air Defenses Uncovered By Cubans

We've been told, repeatedly, that the United States was ringed by far-seeing radar eyes backed up by itchy-fingered interceptors of the Air Defense Command.

From time to time we've read stories of "unidentified" planes receiving fast check-ups by alerted pilots. It was all part of a very deadly game in which one slip-up could be tragic.

This kind of picture was very reassuring to people who remembered the story of Pearl Harbor; the story of a radar operator who reported a flight of aircraft and was told to "forget it" . . . to our everlasting dismay.

Last week complacency was punctured by another story, that of an armed Cuban bomber that flew within striking distance of the missile test center on Cape Canaveral without being challenged.

The Cuban airmen, seeking asylum in the United States, said they knew how to fly the authorized route up the East Coast; but it was a complete surprise to the defense system when the Cuban plane asked for landing instructions at Daytona Beach Municipal Airport.

A federal aviation spokesman was quoted as saying apparently the Air Force doesn't believe the enemy would bomb the Cape . . . and the further north one goes, the tighter the air defense becomes.

This is presumably true, but the spectre of a bombing plane working its way undetected as far as Daytona Beach is a pretty haunting thought. The possibilities for real mischief resulting from this one weak link in the nation's watch along its aerial frontier are many.

If the ICBM facilities at Cape Canaveral are not considered worthy of enemy sneak attack, there is an installation at Savannah River (minutes away for the faster jets) which would be of interest.

The story of the Cuban bombing plane's surprise arrival was publicly told last Thursday. If remedial measures were not instituted by the following day then there is a laxity in the nation's system of air defense which we cannot afford.

Unspectacular, Busy Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — This will be a busy, interesting and probably productive Congress. It is unlikely to seem spectacular if only because very little ever does in the grinding legislative mill.

It will be self-conscious, perhaps just a little less conservative than the previous Congress and, despite plenty of conflict, its personal relations with President Eisenhower may not curdle very much.

Democrats and Republicans in this Congress can not help being self-conscious; its two-year term will be drawing to a close at the time of the 1960 elections when voters choose a new Congress and a new president.

Both groups know their performance these next two years will be a major factor in the election outcome — for themselves and their party — and that the next president may be chosen from this Congress.

It hardly seems in the cars for this heavily Democratic Congress to get into feuding, name-calling and bitterness with Eisenhower in his last two White House years.

During his first six years his relations with Congress members have been unusually polite and restrained, except in political campaigns. There does not seem any reason to change.

For this reason, without resorting to slambang, the Democrats were still able to win control of Congress in three successive elections while Eisenhower himself remained highly popular.

Nevertheless, there will be broad conflicts between Eisenhower and the Democrats in Congress on the programs he wants and the kind they want.

Some people thought, after last November's elections, that this

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
REAL LIFE
There were multitudes of Christian believers for whom religion is little more than going to church, paying their dues, uttering a brief but earnest prayer when in deep trouble, and hoping that death will not end all.

How different such a concept from the stirring faith set forth in the New Testament! How anemic such a variety of religion really is! Jesus Christ did not come into the world to improve human life but to transform it. When people really get religion, all things become new for them. Stanley Jones is one of the great saints of the Christian church. In one of his books he writes: "When I walked out into the world this morning after I made my self-surrender, I thought I had never before seen the world; the trees clapped their hands and all nature was atingle with joy and beauty. For the first time I knew that the earth was mine. I had inherited it. The gospel begins with a demand for self-renunciation and ends in a self-affirmation and in a world affirmation."

Jesus declared to Nicodemus that he must be born again. Sometimes we think this Nicodemus must have been an unusual person who required unusual treatment. He was precisely like you and me. What he needed, you and I need. The declaration of Jesus, "Ye must be born again," was meant for you and me as much as for that ancient figure.
Religion is something vastly more significant than going through a few motions. It is life conferred, infused.

Amazing Memory Is His

About a year ago, the Rev. L. O. Leet of Dallas, Texas, was in Dunn for stewardship and evangelism crusade.

His host pastor was the Rev. Jack Daniell, now pastor of the Farmville Christian Church and a man with a sort of personal interest in the Leet Crusade which opens tomorrow night at St. James Methodist Church. The Rev. Mr. Daniell's interest stems from his past association with the Texas minister and the impressions which were formed.

Now, no doubt, there were several things the Rev. Mr. Leet did in Dunn a year ago which were especially impressive, but one of them sticks out in the memory of the Rev. Mr. Daniell. He mentioned it Sunday.

According to the Rev. Mr. Daniell, the visiting minister was introduced to about 70 Dunn residents who were assisting with the crusade there and who were attending a special crusade dinner. Later, when the dinner program began, the Rev. Mr. Daniell, instead of formally introducing the guest minister to the group, let the Rev. Mr. Leet introduce the group to his pianist, Mr. Idalee McCullar.

The Rev. Mr. Leet did just that — and Hoover Adams, editor of Dunn's "Daily Record," pointed out in a column the next day that the Rev. Mr. Leet "stood up and called the name of every person present, children and adults alike. Nobody prompted him, nobody gave him any cues whatever and only once did he even pause in the process."

The Rev. Mr. Daniell, who appeared on WNCN's "Circuit Rider" program Sunday afternoon, called it an amazing demonstration of mnemonics, the art of memory. Editor Adams, who isn't usually given to falling overboard about anything, went a step farther in describing it.

"Throughout the years," Adams wrote, "we have read about, seen and interviewed a number of the so-called mental marvels. . . . But the Rev. Mr. Leet did a stunt last night that even surpassed Dunninger. . . . We've been living in Dunn all of our life and, frankly, we couldn't have called all those 70

Other Editors Saying - - Reading For Pleasure

(Hickory (N.C.) Daily Record)

The nationwide discussion as to why children aren't being taught to read well, seems to have started again after dying down for several months. Right now, the spotlight is on Stoneham, Mass., because a Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Michael Scarpitto, newly arrived from Joliet, Ill., has put into operation a reading-for-pleasure plan that is said to be proving practicable and popular.

Every pupil from the first grade through high school is expected to read books of particular interest to the boy or girl. Parents and teachers are asked to keep records of the books read by the pupil. Youngsters in the first three grades were requested to ask their parents to spend an hour or so every evening helping their enthusiastic offspring to improve their reading habits.

The teachers cooperated by making artistic wall charts for recording the number of outside books read, and the children cooperated by availing themselves of library cards. Parents turned up with a will in doing their part. And the public library left no publisher unturned in amassing the formidable lists of books suggested by Dr. Scarpitto and the Stoneham teaching staff.

No. 8, 1957, was the "kickoff" date. With one month gone, the 2,800 Stoneham students had borrowed, and read, more than 14,000 books. And all on their own time. By school closing in June, the total had zoomed to more than 96,000 books. To this, during the summer, when youngsters are traditionally in a "no-more-teachers, no-more-books" frame of mind, the boys and girls of Stoneham added almost 16,000 more books to their reading experience and sent the grand total soaring to a lofty 112,000.

The propensity to read good books has continued at high rate this new school year. By-products of the reading program have been legion and, in some instances, strange. It was expected of course, that reading grades would go up. They did, to a dramatic degree. And, as pupils read better, and comprehended more deeply what they were reading, other grades — mathematics, history, etc. — took a turn for the better. It looks like Dr. Scarpitto has started something that school superintendents everywhere should copy.

More Look-Aheads In Business

By ELMER ROESSNER
Here are more business look-aheads, based on analyses of developing trends:
Newspaper ad shift. During the New York newspaper strike, stores that had developed personality and character in earlier advertising fared well but those that depend on price and item promotions did poorly. Since merchants all over the country are studying this phenomenon, more can be expected to lay greater stress on character advertising. Some will use more such advertising during the slack months, even if it means borrowing from Christmas budgets.

Higher tolls. Other toll authorities will follow the example of the New York State Thruway Authority in increasing rates this year. Reason: wages and maintenance costs are rising.
New filters. All major tobacco companies are continuing research into cigarette filters, and several new ones are likely to appear this year. While the cancer scare has subsided, manufacturers are fearful that it will flare up again.
OILS, EDIBLE AND NOT
Cheaper edible oils. Lard prices have skidded recently and may fall further as larger pig crops approach marketing size. Cheaper lard will tend to weaken prices of cottonseed, soy and corn oils.
Colder fuel oil. Colder than usual winter weather is increasing consumption of heating oils, and threats of a strike are causing users to increase stocks of fuel oils, setting the stage for sharp price increases.
More inflation. The value of the dollar will drop more this year. Congress appears to be determined to increase military spending without increasing taxes, threatening an inflationary deficit, and the inflationary rise in wages and prices is getting under way again.

CHEAPER JUICE
Frozen juice price dip. The rise in frozen Florida orange concentrates appears ended. Shippers are shaving prices and these cuts will soon be reflected at retail. However, another freeze down South could stiffen prices again.
Greaseless auto. Greasing the car may soon become unnecessary. Grease fittings have decreased 51 per cent since 1951 and one authority, Esso's W. M. Drout, Jr., predicts that the greaseless car will be here in three to five years.
Higher minimum wages. Congressional sentiment seems to be growing for another boost in the minimum wage, now $1 an hour. Proponents want $1.25 a compromise at $1.10 is likely.
OLD PROMOTER BLAMES RECESSION ON INFLATION
The Old Promoter was swinging his gold-headed cane with an air of authority when he walked in today.

"I'm just about to take on all the New Dealish economists," he announced. "They keep saying that a little bit of inflation helps keep prosperity up. I think inflation creates recessions."
Look at the 1957-58 bump. Because everybody expected more inflation, manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers built up their inventories. They were hedging against price rises.
"Eventually, they had bought up their limits. That caused a sharp drop in buying in the fall of 1957. That led to layoffs and to the recession."
"If we didn't have inflation, there would be less fear of higher prices, less incentive to build up inventories, hence less danger of sudden cutbacks in buying."
"We said he had an interesting point there, handed him a cigar and went back to work."

"Snow is one big thing; but it is also many tiny tableaux that demand to be transfixed in a line of poetry before they are forgotten."—Charlotte News.

Critic Of Our Women

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — "It's a woman's country this — in a blatant way," said Siobhan McKenna.

But the Irish actress feels that European women in some ways have more real power — and are more content with their lot — than American women.

Miss McKenna flew here from Dublin to appear on TV in "What Every Woman Knows."

This soapy little drama has probably ruined more masculine lives than the three-martini business lunch. It upholds the thesis, dear to all women, that behind every successful dunderhead lies the guiding hand of a shy but firm wife. Partly as a result of this play, wives have been thrusting their sticky little paws for two generations into areas of men's lives they really know nothing about.

What is the difference in this respect between European and American women?

"The European woman is more subtle in maneuvering her man into the kind of action that will make him a great man or at least a better man, without him realizing it," said Miss McKenna.

"The European woman seems to be a quiet little mouse with no great brainpower. She never seems to push herself, but suddenly you find out that it is she who has the ideas in the family — and her husband executes them."

Miss McKenna doubts that the wider public activity of American women really makes them much more powerful.

"The European wife is just as influential, if not more so," she observed. "But she doesn't appear in public so much. She prefers to stay behind the scenes and let her husband take the spotlight. She prefers to be the woman the man comes home to."

The American wife, Miss McKenna admits, is much more adept at entertaining her husband's boss.
"I'm not so sure that this works as well as separating the home from the office. A man has to have his independence. His home should stay his kingdom. It should be an island of calm to him — not just another salesroom for his career," she said.

The Irish actress, who has hazel-green eyes, an unruly mop of dark brown hair and looks like a freckled elf, is also dubious about the advantage of the American wife's household gadgets.

"I feel most of these modern aids in the kitchen are more trouble than they are worth," she said. "They take so much time to clean."

The European woman has more of a sense of repose. Her time is more of her own even though she lacks many time-saving gadgets.

Miss McKenna expressed belief a European woman puts up more readily with failure on the husband's part because "she feels she is partly to blame herself."

"In Ireland you find women who are happy married to men who would be called ne'er-do-wells here. It doesn't matter to these wives that they have to go out and find the work," she said.

"It seems to me that the spiritual union is more important than whether your husband is a success."
Asked her own philosophy of life, Siobhan said:
"Never let the guilt wear off your world."

Miss McKenna is married to Irish actor Dennis O'Dea. They have a son, Donnacha, 10.

Nixon Indirectly Invites Defense Program Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon has indirectly invited a sweeping inquiry into President Eisenhower's defense program. The Democrats are ready to give it a thorough going-over.

Nixon, who has sat in on preparation of the budget, has told fellow Republicans he is satisfied Eisenhower's military proposals will stand up under the most minute examination by the Democratic-controlled Congress.

It is Nixon's belief, as relayed by those with whom he has discussed the matter, that Eisenhower's planned program will keep over-all U. S. military power ahead of the Soviet Union, so that there will be no future "black-mail gap" in relative defense strength despite a current Soviet lead in missiles.

Eisenhower has said the new 77-billion-dollar budget he will send to Congress next Monday will include seven billion dollars for all types of missiles and related armament.

Relative missile strength is one of the issues the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, headed by Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, expects to investigate as soon as Congress is fully organized.

The Senate Space Committee, also headed by Johnson, already is surveying U. S. and Russian accomplishments in the space field. Eisenhower's budget is expected to call for a 700-million-dollar outlay to develop space craft.

Nixon has conceded that this country is behind in both the missile and satellite fields. But he has told associates he is confident the rate of American development now exceeds that of the Soviets.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, challenged Nixon in the Senate Monday to the United States is afraid of Russia in intercontinental missiles, Nixon made no public reply.

Symington told the Senate "There seems to be a continuing effort on the part of high officials in this administration to lull the people into a state of complacency not justified by the facts."

On the other hand, Nixon was said to have told his colleagues that while it would be a great mistake to overestimate U. S. strength, it would be unfortunate if that strength were underestimated and an impression of weakness given to the world.

Boys Lose Habeas Corpus Bid, But Outwardly Bored By It All

WADESBORO, N.C. (AP)—Two Negro boys, the center of a civil rights controversy concerning their kissing incident with three white girls, have lost their habeas corpus bid for freedom from reform school.

But, to judge from their courtroom appearance Monday, the youngsters couldn't care less. One of them fell asleep on the other's shoulder during impassioned testimony in their behalf by a National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People official.

David (Fuzzy) Simpson, 8, and James Hanover Thompson, 10, well-scrubbed, neatly attired and on excellent behavior, sat through the 2½-hour hearing quietly but with apparent boredom.

Superior Court Judge Walter E. Johnston ruled that they had not been illegally taken into custody nor illegally sent to reform school.

But NAACP lawyer Conrad J. Lynn of New York said he would appeal the case, a case in which North Carolina Asst. Atty. Gen. Ralph Moody has accused the NAACP of trying "to make guinea pigs out of them."

Just before denying freedom from the boys, Judge Johnston shuffled through the records of Juvenile Judge J. Hampton Price of Monroe, who handled the case. "He finds as a fact they are delinquent and in need of the protection of the state," Johnston remarked. "This court is bound by that judgment. There is no evidence offered that these findings are not correct."

At that point, Judge Johnston took note of the racial furor touched off by the case. "There has been so much publicity in this matter that it might be important that people know they have not been convicted or sent to prison."

The judge read a list of delinquencies—mostly theft and breaking and entering—from the boys' records, the latest entry being the kissing incident.

"It was perhaps unfortunate that that matter (the earlier delinquencies) has not been made clear to all persons."

He turned toward a row of newsmen and photographers (whose courtroom picture-taking he had banned) and said, "We look to another institution for that purpose."

There were only two witnesses, Price and Union County NAACP President Robert F. Williams, but they presented a striking contrast in viewpoints. Judge Price twice used the term "nigger" in his testimony, while Williams sprinkled the record with such phrases as "this social jungle called Dixie" and "up in free New York."

Williams, who filed the petition of habeas corpus, described his efforts in behalf of the youngsters since the incident last Oct. 29 and said his activity included a fundraising trip to New York. He said he acted at the request of the boys' mothers.

Judge Price said the boys had been before him eight or nine times before the kissing incident, which occurred while they were on probation. He said his earlier record did not show the earlier incidents "because they were so young. I kept reprimanding them, hoping they would get on the right track."

Juveniles are not treated as criminals under North Carolina law and their delinquencies are not legally crimes.

NAACP attorney Frank R. Freeves of Washington argued that the boys were picked up on a warrant as if they were criminals.

Consequently, Reeves continued, "They were not lawfully before the court, not lawfully tried, not lawfully committed, and therefore not lawfully held in custody."

State Atty. Gen. Malcolm Seawell, who repeatedly had stated that the boys' hearing was not a criminal proceeding and they had not been convicted, replied: "All that North Carolina has done has been for the benefit of these children."

Justice Dept. Organizes For Rackets Fight

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department has created four regional offices to assemble data in connection with a long-range nationwide program to combat syndicated crime and organized racketeering.

Reporting this today, department officials said field offices are now functioning in New York City, Chicago, Los Angeles and Miami.

It is understood that in some areas under the jurisdiction of these offices, grand juries have been convened or will be called shortly to assist investigators in assembling information.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Malcolm Anderson, who heads the Justice Department's Criminal Division, is the over-all director of the program. Milton Wessel, 34-year-old former assistant U. S. attorney in New York City, is coordinating the country-wide information. Officials are not discussing what general results have been obtained.

Boy Buried By Big Landslide

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Under searchlight glare from a Coast Guard boat, police and firemen dug frantically into a landslide in the Golden Gate Monday night for a missing 16-year-old boy, Bill Stolter. The search will be resumed today.

His girl friend, with whom he had been climbing up a cliff from a beach, told police they saw a mass of earth and rock hurtling down on them from above.

"I jumped one way and he jumped the other — he just jumped the wrong way," said Margaret Valentine, 15.

She was covered with mud and suffered from bruises when she panted to the top of the cliff and hailed a passerby to report Stolter's disappearance down the 350-foot cliff.

TELEVISION STORYLINE

By Billy Arnold

Sports fans—who seldom have any reason to gripe, so far as television coverage is concerned—were treated to another sort of spectacular this past weekend when NBC presented the Pro Football All-Star game in color.

The contest was well-handled by NBC. The camera work, it seemed to me, the most daring and the most rewarding of the year. On some occasions, the camera would boom down into a pile-up close enough to show the fillings in somebody's big ugly mouth; At other times, it would pull back to scan the beautiful Los Angeles Coliseum, packed with fans; And at half-time, it did a nice job of eyeing a long line of major-league who were doing a kick-step at mid-field.

And the football players did their part, too. The lead bumped from the East to the West right down until the final moments of play. The East finally won out, 28-21.

I'M NOT SURE whether I'm seeing things or not, but it seems to me I've watched a frayed-at-the-edges Hollywood throbber called CLAUDIA about four thousand times during the past week. I know for a fact that I saw it one night as a late show on a local channel. And it popped up again as a Sunday afternoon feature a day or so later. Oh, well, that's nothing new—and you can take that any number of ways.

SPEAKING OF THINGS That aren't new, I get quite a kick out of watching channel 7's Sunday morning embryonic westerns. They are funnier than Jackie Gleason and Arthur Godfrey put together.

Rescuers Reach Wreck In Arctic

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Rescuers reached the shattered hulk of an Air Force plane high on an Alaskan glacier Monday and began the task of bringing out the bodies of nine crewmen.

The crippled C124 failed to clear a 5,200-foot mountain range late Sunday as it came in, with two of four engines out, for an emergency landing at Homer, on the tip of the Kenai Peninsula. The giant plane was demolished as it struck Petrol Glacier between the 3,000 and 4,000 foot levels.

The Globemaster from Travis Air Force Base, Calif., had disappeared into clouds while being escorted across the Gulf of Alaska by Coast Guard amphibians.

A massive air-sea search ended when a civilian pilot spotted the wreckage Monday morning. Helicopters lifted a rescue team to the spot.

The C124 took off from McChord AFB in Washington about noon Saturday on a flight to Kodiak, Alaska. It carried more than 17 tons of classified military cargo.

500-Pound Mine Netted By Boat

GALILEE, R.I. (AP)—The four-man crew of the fishing dragger "Bob N' Barry" didn't like the extra 500 pounds in a 1,500 pound catch.

In fact, the crew made a run for port because of the extra 500 pounds picked up with 1,000 pounds of cod.

The extra weight? A magnetic mine—live—similar to the type used by the United States during World War II.

The mine, containing 300 pounds of explosives, was pulled aboard five miles east of Block Island, Ashore, the mine was taken care of by a Navy demolition team.

Postpones High Study Of Mars

PARIS (AP)—French balloonist Audouin Dollfus today gave up hope for another two years of making a 20-mile-high study of Mars.

The 34-year-old scientist had been waiting a month for a windless day to make the ascent with the aid of 98 balloons. But the winds in the lower atmosphere did not abate and the planet now is too far away for a valuable study.

Steady Customer In Holdup Game

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)—This kind of steady customer you can have. He walked into the House hold Finance Co. office at the Princeton shopping center Monday and right away the secretary, Miss Joyce Anderson, recognized him.

"Are you here for the same thing this time?" she asked.

That he was, the man replied. Then Miss Anderson gave him all the money in the cash register, $217. She remembered the face. Last Dec. 30 the same man held up the office at gunpoint and escaped with $329.

Governor Didn't Have A Chance

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—Gov. George Docking didn't get to dance at his inaugural ball Monday night.

There wasn't room.

More than 2,000 persons jammed the ballroom so tightly that only part of the 300-member procession got inside behind the governor and Mrs. Docking.

The Dockings squeezed on through the crowd and went home.

When James Harrison (Babe) McCarthy returned to his alma mater, Mississippi State, as head coach of basketball, he brought with him a bit of insurance in the form of a towering young player from Middle Tennessee, named Bailey Howell. McCarthy had played high school basketball but didn't even go out for the team at State. After college, McCarthy coached at Baldwin High School and his team won a state championship. When the war came along McCarthy signed up with the Air Force and wound up coaching a service team at the Memphis base. After a spell of coaching at a junior high school and refereeing Southeastern Conference basketball games, he took a job with an oil company. In 1955, C. B. Dudley, athletic director at Mississippi State, prevailed upon McCarthy to coach his old school in an effort to build up the college game.

Coach McCarthy was fortunate in landing Howell, a boyish-looking, 6-foot-7 youngster with great potential. At Middle Tennessee record of 1,137 points. A town of 350, Middleton had only a rural school that had never been a power in state basketball circles but scouts knew of Howell and some 20 schools had offered him scholarships. Howell's interest in Mississippi State stemmed from the fact that his friend, Don Mott, who had been attending the Martin branch of the University of Tennessee, wanted to transfer to State. McCarthy gave both of them scholarships.

"I'm overboard on Howell," said Coach McCarthy, "but that's because he's the greatest kid I ever saw. They say I'll be just another coach when Howell is through here, and that might be true. There may be other players who can do a thing or two better than he can do, but I don't know of a better all-around performer."

Harry Cooper New British Champion

LONDON (AP)—Newly crowned British heavyweight champion Harry Cooper today hoisted his price for tackling world champion Floyd Patterson to $140,000.

"That's what we want for any fight against Patterson," manager Jim Wicks said. "It doesn't matter whether the fight is here or in the State—that is our figure."

But Cus D'Amato, Patterson's manager, was far from receptive to Wicks' demands when he was contacted in New York.

"For one thing," D'Amato snapped, "the defeat does not eliminate London. For another thing, many people are anxious to fight for the world heavyweight championship. None of them is in a position to dictate to the champion. Perhaps the one who makes the most concessions will wind up with the title bout."

The 24-year-old Cooper jumped into a contender's spot with a 15-round decision over Brian London at London's Earls Court Stadium Monday night.

It was one of the bloodiest heavyweight fights ever seen in the British ring.

Both fighters finished badly cut around the eyes—but Cooper's flashing left jab won him the title.

Cooper, a classic boxer, outclassed a brawling, mauling London. The Associated Press gave 11 rounds to Cooper, 4 to London.

British promoter Jack Solomons wants to match him now against European champion Ingemar Johansson of Sweden in a European title fight in London in June.

"We'll listen to every offer and take the one that brings the most cash," Wicks said.

Spiders Coach Has Pessimistic View

Richmond's Spiders haven't missed a Southern Conference basketball tournament since 1952, but Coach Les Hooker figures they'll have to perk up in a hurry to be sure of making the eight-team field this year.

Hooker quite probably is over-pessimistic. Only one of the conference's nine teams will fail to qualify for the tournament and two—Davidson and VMI—now are below Richmond in the standings. Sull, Richmond has won only two of seven league games, and Hooker thinks it'll take three or four victories to win a tournament spot. If so, where will the Spiders' other victories come from?

"You tell me," says Hooker. "I wish I knew. The way we look sometimes, I don't know anybody we could beat. We shoot like we don't know what the basket is up there for."

Davidson (1-3), which had lost two close conference decisions, won a close one, 75-70, from VMI (0-5) Monday night to begin press-rich Richmond for seventh place.

No Immediate Impact For IBC In Monopoly Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP)—Television fight fans likely will be able to watch the Wednesday and Friday night bouts for months to come despite a court-administered kayo of the International Boxing Club.

This was the curbstone opinion of some of the interested parties after the Supreme Court upheld Monday a district judge's anti-monopoly decree. The action effectively put the IBC of New York and Chicago out of business.

There was no immediate answer however, to the question of who will arrange the televised matches the IBC has been handling for years.

Another uncertainty was the status of IBC promotions already booked for future dates.

The court ruling also directed James D. Norris, a founder and former president of the IBC, and Arthur M. Wirtz, his associate, to sell the stock that gives them control of Madison Square Garden in New York.

Truman Gibson, who succeeded the ailing Norris as IBC president, said in London the IBC would begin to comply immediately with the court decision.

A 5-3 majority of the high court went down the line in support of the 1957 decree of Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan in New York which:

- Directed Norris and Wirtz, who controlled the IBC, to resign as officers of Madison Square Garden and within five years to unload their stock in the garden.
- Prohibited the Garden, Norris and Wirtz from promoting more than two championship fights a year for the next five years. Norris and Wirtz also own Chicago Stadium, the indoor arena in which many a champ has been crowned.
- Barred Norris, Wirtz and their enterprises from signing exclusive contracts with boxers or with the owners of other arenas for championship promotions.
- Made the Garden available for rent on reasonable terms.

Play Tonight

Greenville High School will host Roanoke Rapids here tonight in a regular Northeastern Conference basketball game at Rose High Gymnasium.

A jayvee ball game will begin at 6:30 and the varsity encounter will start at 8:00 p.m.

The contest, which was originally scheduled to be played at Roanoke Rapids, will be played here at the request of Roanoke Rapids officials. The new gymnasium, in which the game was supposed to have been played, is not yet complete.

Greenville will go into the contest with a 2-1 conference record, ranked seven-point favorites over the visitors.

Voted Best Cage Team Of Nation

By HUGH FULLERTON JR., Associated Press Sports Writer

Kentucky's basketball team finally lost a game last week and lost first place in the Associated Press weekly major college ratings as a result.

North Carolina State's Wolf Pack, usually a contender for national honors and winner of the Dixie Classic this season, edged out Kentucky's Wildcats in the poll of sports writers and broadcasters.

It was an extremely close vote with Coach Everett Case's Carolinians getting the edge in first and second place ballots. North Carolina State was rated first by 48 of 130 voters and Kentucky on 35, but in the point totals it was 1,067 to 1,035.

Points are tallied on the basis of 10 for each first place vote, 8 for second, 6 for third, etc. Voting is based on results through Jan. 10.

N.C. State followed its Dixie Classic triumph with victories over Virginia and Duke last week to run its season record to 11-1.

Kentucky, after winning 11 straight, stumbled last week and dropped a 75-66 decision to Vanderbilt, a team with an ordinary record, on the latter's court. That was enough to knock some of the glamor off the Wildcats, although they came back to win decisively from Louisiana State on Saturday.

North Carolina (9-1) retained third place with 813 points, topping Kansas State by only nine points. Carolina and N.C. State clash Wednesday at Raleigh in a game which should test the belief of many observers in that area that they should rate one-two in the nation.

Trailing the top four in the rankings this week were Auburn, Cincinnati, Bradley, Michigan State, St. John's and West Virginia.

Auburn and Cincinnati each moved up one place as Michigan State took its second defeat of the season. Bradley jumped two, from ninth to seventh, despite a one-point, double-overtime loss to Cincinnati—or maybe because of it.

Northwestern, upset by Indiana's defending Big Ten champion, tumbled from eighth place to eleventh and West Virginia moved up to fill the vacant spot in the top ten.

Top ten teams with first place votes and won - lost records through Saturday, Jan. 10 in parentheses (points on 10-9-3 etc.):

1. North Carolina State (48) (11-1) 1067
2. Kentucky (35) (12-1) 1035
3. North Carolina (4) (9-1) 813
4. Kansas State (13) (11-1) 804
5. Auburn (14) (10-0) 774
6. Cincinnati (4) (8-2) 685
7. Bradley (2) (9-1) 382
8. Michigan State (8-2) 344
9. St. John's (N.Y.) (10-1) 205
10. West Virginia (2) (12-3) 193
- The second ten: Northwestern (18); Mississippi State (2) 125; Marquette (1) 87; St. Bonaventure (4) 77; St. Louis (1) 57; Seattle 3; Oklahoma City 37; Portland 31; Indiana 28; California 21.

New Record For Tijuana Golfers

TLIJANA, Mex. (AP)—Golf's professional wanderers today headed for Bing Crosby's big show at Pebble Beach next weekend with a new name and a new record written into the books here.

The name was Ernie Vossler of Midland, Tex., and the record was the 72-hole score of 273 which netted him victory in the $20,000 Tijuana Open Monday.

Vossler knocked off a barrage of birdies en route to his second major tournament triumph, touring the par 36-36-72 Tijuana Country Club course in 36-32-68.

The sturdy, bespectacled Texan broke the tournament record by seven strokes. E. J. (Dutch) Harrison set the 280 mark a year ago. Harrison was unable to compete this year.

Vossler turned into a virtual rout what had shaped up as a mad scramble and a possible tie for a sudden-death playoff.

Four pros, Vossler, Tommy Bolt, John McMullin and Jay Hebert, were deadlocked as they turned into the final nine holes.

Former U.S. Open champion Jack Fleck placed third with a 68 for 276 and $1,400.

Mighty Cincinnati Almost Upset By 'Unknown' Team

By BEN OLAN, Associated Press Sports Writer

An unpublicized team from Denton, Tex., had the basketball world taking notice today following a stirring performance that resulted in a relatively poor night for Oscar Robertson and a near-upset of the Cincinnati Bearcats.

As it turned out, little North Texas State lost to sixth-ranked Cincinnati 64-56 in overtime. But not before the Bearcats had come within inches of defeat.

With only six seconds remaining and the score deadlocked 49-49 in regulation time, a shot by Rod Byrd of North Texas State hit the rim and bounced away.

Robertson was held to 19 points until he added seven free throws and one field goal in the overtime for 28 points.

Cincinnati was one among four teams in the top 10 to see action last night.

Kentucky, which dropped to second place behind North Carolina State in the latest poll, finished strong to beat Tulane 85-68. Kansas State (No. 4) clobbered Oklahoma 90-45 and Bradley (No. 7) outlasted Houston, 69-50.

Kansas State's victory left it in a two-way tie for the Big Eight lead with the Kansas Jayhawks, who swamped Iowa State 69-48.

In other Big Eight competition, Nebraska defeated Missouri 81-69 and Colorado, rebounding from a lopsided loss to Kansas State, turned back Oklahoma State 65-52.

Bradley's triumph enabled the Braves to move into sole possession of the runner-up position behind Cincinnati in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Bearcats hold the lead on the strength of their 85-84 success over Bradley in overtime Jan. 5.

Elsewhere in the Missouri Valley Conference, St. Louis got hot in the second half and beat Tulsa 76-61 and Wichita's Shockers led all the way to get past Drake 61-52.

Victories by Indiana, Illinois and Michigan in the Big 10 enabled each to tie for the conference lead, replacing vanquished Minnesota. Indiana beat the Gophers 63-59 on the strength of a 21-for 29 performance from the free throw line. Roger Taylor and Mannie Jackson had 24 points apiece as Illinois rode over Iowa 102-97 and Michigan, paced by John Tidwell's 37 points, defeated Wisconsin 84-74.

Idle Auburn remained atop the Southeastern Conference standing with 3-0. But Kentucky's triumph enabled the Wildcats to deadlock Georgia and Mississippi State for the runner-up spot at 3-1.

Georgia was not scheduled, but Miss. State walloped Vanderbilt 83-65. In other league games, Georgia Tech trampled Mississippi 89-70. Alabama beat Florida 82-77 and Tennessee defeated Louisiana State 65-58.

In the Southwest Conference, Texas A&M held off a late rally to edge Arkansas 63-62. Davidson nipped Virginia Military 75-70 in the Southern Conference.

In non-league encounters, Duquesne snapped a three-game losing streak with an 85-68 triumph over Loyola of Chicago and Furman outclassed South Carolina 87-63.

Fourth-Place Clemson To Meet Duke Tonight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clemson, enjoying first division tenancy for the first time in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball standings, hopes to extend its lead on fourth place against unpredictable Duke tonight.

A victory by the Blue Devils in the Durham game would dump the Tigers right back into the second division. Clemson managed to climb out only last Saturday by whipping Maryland 55-46.

Clemson goes into the contest with a 3-4 conference record. Duke, now holding fifth place, has two ACC wins against three defeats.

Cedar-dwelling Virginia will try its chances out of the loop tonight, taking on Washington & Lee.

The shooting accuracy that helped South Carolina defeat Virginia over the weekend deserted the Gamecocks at Greenville, S. C., Monday night. Past-improving Furman of the Southern Conference raced off with an 87-63 victory.

The Paladins, hitting on 55.6 per cent of their floor shots, ran up a 50-26 halftime lead. After picking up a 31-point lead in the last period, Furman used substitutes freely. South Carolina, meanwhile, was making good on only 25 per cent of its floor shots. Cookie Pericola accounted for 14 of the Gamecocks' points, 12 of them in the first half.

The big ACC clash comes Wednesday night at Raleigh when second-ranked North Carolina State meets North Carolina, listed No. 3 in the nation. Each has suffered only one defeat and that outside the conference.

Belmont Abbey's Crusaders Take Ninth Straight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Belmont Abbey's traveling Crusaders continue to rack up the basketball victories. Their ninth straight victim was Hampden-Sydney in a 67-58 thriller Monday night at the Virginia school.

The Abbey managed to remain undefeated in collegiate play after Hampden-Sydney rebounding ace Gul Sayres fouled out with 11 minutes to play.

The Abbey, trailing 33-41, pumped in 13 points in the next three minutes to grab the lead for good. Danny Doyle was high man for the winners with 20 points.

In a North State Conference affair at Elon College, the Christians staved off a late Guilford rally to win their first conference game of the season 71-64. Gilbert Watts poured in 20 points for Elon.

Tonight's action has Western Carolina at Guilford and High Point at Newberry.

Jim Shandy shifted his rifle easy as Mordecai Price approached him. "Hello, hoss," he said.
"Fear you been telling a heap of lies," Mordecai said.
It was hard doin' with rifles, close together as they were. Like a whole hide, Mordecai knew, but that wasn't stopping him none. He was ready and so was Shandy.
Hanging on a second like it was, there was no reason for Shandy to try to hide what he was feeling. Mordecai guessed he couldn't have if he'd tried. He saw how Shandy hated him and it wasn't no ordinary kind of thing, but such a force as twisted and knotted a man's guts.
Mordecai flopped his thumb up on the hammer of his rifle, Old Belcher.
"Don't recollect telling any lies about you," Shandy said. He eased off suddenly and went over to the trading counter, with his back toward Mordecai. Mordecai would n't have believed it. They didn't eat dirt that way, not men like Shandy.
Ree Simple came from behind Mordecai. He was grinning with his mouth but his eyes were looking hard at Mordecai, telling him there was something that needed talking about.
Mordecai figured it out as they walked off toward the junction of the rivers. Shandy hadn't eat dirt; he'd been so bad beat, he'd backed off for a minute, was all. Mordecai cursed Ree. "Shoved your stick in, didn't you? You had him in your sights!"
"Right across my arm, she was." Ree said, "cocked and looking into his stinking black heart. Did he take a deep breath or bat his eye, he was gone beaver."

"It was none of your business!" Ree gave Mordecai a sober look. "Just one time is all. Now it's up to you."
"He'll lie his way out of it!"
"Don't think so," said Ree. "And I ain't going to be your keeper no longer, Mord."
"You never was!" By Old Caleb, it was like when Fitz and Ree and Rhoda cooked up that small-pox business, not saying nothing to Mordecai about it, as if he was too oak-headed to be in on it or even know. Afterward, Rhoda said it was because they were afraid it wouldn't work, and didn't want the Rocky Mountain pack train to get all hopeful.
Now Ree was talking riddles. "I'm going back and finish it," Mordecai said.
"Up to you," Ree shrugged like a Frenchman.
They walked back to the trading counter, but Shandy wasn't in sight nowhere.
In the afternoon the Snakes and Bannocks picked up and skyguled within an hour's time. Where their smoke-dark lodges had made two big camps, there were now copped back grass, a few still smoking fire pits and the bones of their feasting.
Emil Frederick came down the river two hours later, camping upstream and on the opposite side from the rendezvous in order to have grass for his mules. All he could do now was go on down the Bighorn to Fort Cass with his trade goods. Things were aching hard inside him when he came over to call on the Rocky Mountain men, but he held a tight smile as if he was thinking that this was only a temporary defeat. He took the cup of whisky Jim Bridger offered him.
Mordecai went off to tell Rhoda Marsh goodbye. He could see her traps all neat and stacked against the back wall of the lodge. She heard him coming and stepped out, wearing her settlement clothes.
"I hear you're leaving in the morning," Mordecai said.
"Yes, Elisha says we'll go back by way of South Pass."
Mordecai wiped a smidgin of dust off the muzzle of Old Belcher. "Reverend Arwine is to marry us this evening."
Mordecai looked off toward the Bighorns. He wasn't casting aron for words; he'd already said them, and that ought to be the end of it.
What was the sense of telling this woman he wanted her like he never had wanted any woman, and likely never would again?
"I'm glad you didn't kill Shandy, Mordecai."
"Yup." Just a little delay, was all.
"What stopped you a while ago?"
"Ree." Ree wouldn't horn in again, though. He'd promised, along with all that mysterious talk about things being up to Mordecai now.
Rhoda was smiling, and as Mordecai watched her he thought he was beginning to get the hang of what Ree had been talking about. It struck Mordecai so hard and it was such a big idea that he unfolded it carefully, something like fanning out a grasshopper's wing real slow and easy so as not to hurt it or miss any of the colors.

Was Ree hinting that if Mordecai put Shandy under, when it wasn't pure necessary, then Rhoda would be sure he was the hell-sparking savage she'd sometimes called him? But if he didn't do it, then she'd think... Just what would she think? That she'd managed to get in a lick of civilizing on a wild man during the trip from St. Louis? Or did it go some farther than that?
Mordecai had to think on it, and it wasn't the kind of thinking he was used to. Rhoda made it tougher for him, the way she was standing there like she might be inviting him to leave some ponies tied in front of her lodge.
Get away from that Injun thinking, dang it, Mordecai told himself.
He was still wrestling things around in his head, and Rhoda was waiting, when Old Gabe spoke from real close. "Mord!"
Ree was with him. Mordecai gave them the Indian sign to go away.
"Got to palaver a little," Old Gabe said. "Frederick just told us private — American hired Shandy, sure enough. The dirty fliesteating, underhand—" he looked at Rhoda and didn't finish.
"Seems I mentioned something about that myself," Mordecai said irritably, as he watched Rhoda go into her lodge and pull the door flap closed.
"We didn't believe you none," Old Gabe said. "We figured you was going to rub him out." The gaunt brown face peered hard at Mordecai.
Mordecai glanced at Ree. Ree was looking off into distance like he was already a thousand miles away.
"He's your Injun now, hoss," Mordecai said to Bridger.
Old Gabe nodded. "We figure to give him a pony and a bow and arrows and turn him loose. Some give him nothing, I ain't so sure but what that ain't the best way myself."
"Your Injun," Mordecai said.
He watched Ree and Old Gabe go back to the counter, and prett soon, followed by jeers and curses, Shandy started out of camp on a miserable pony, saddled. The Rocky Mountain men fired over his head.
Good enough. It was Injun punishment Shandy was getting. You could kill a man without disgracing him, but when you left him alive in scorn, that was something he never could wipe out.
Mordecai looked back at Rhoda's lodge. "What are you doing in there?"
"Just a minute!"
It was some more than a minute before she came out. Mordecai didn't have to do any more thinking then. He knew. She was dressed in beautifully decorated white doekin and her hair was braided once more. Her eyes were soft and shining.
Mordecai put Old Belcher down and went over to her.
After a while they saw the Reverends Slocum and Arwine coming up the slope. That Slocum, he wasn't such a bad hoss at that. Mordecai felt sorry for him.

Before modern underwater goggles came into use, fishermen off the coast of Greece poured oil on the waters to make it easier to see the bottom where they were diving to harpoon fish.

American Salesmanship

--100 Years Ago

Carol Pierce looks at old poster on display at Library of Congress in Washington where exhibit was held before it was sent on tour.

American businessmen in the mid-19th century had a lot of odd things to sell, and quaint ways of advertising them too.

Medicinal products of all kinds were widely advertised. These included a large number of so-called pain killers, pills, tonics, compounds, and the slogans were painted on fences, sides of barns, on big boulders, and filled the periodicals of the day. But there were also things like boot-pullers, electromagnetic garters, scientifically-built foot-baths, and a host of other curious and odd-named articles.

Some oldtime advertising posters are pictured here. They're part of an exhibit which is being sent across the country by the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. They were deposited with copyright registrations in the Library of Congress between 1837 and 1876.

Supreme Court To Review N.C. 'Trespass' Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—In what could be another key segregation test case, the Supreme Court is going to review the trespass conviction of six Negroes given 15-day jail terms for playing on a segregated golf course.

Rejecting a plea by North Carolina that it stay out of the dispute, the court agreed Monday to rule on the case involving a golf course owned by the city of Greensboro, N. C., but leased to a non-profit group.

In a brief urging the high court to dismiss the Negroes' appeal, North Carolina's Atty. Gen. Malcolm B. Seawell argued that the case involved no racial bias.

He said the Negroes refused to show they were eligible to play on the course, which Seawell said admits only members and their invited guests.

The Negroes, who either paid greens fees or tried to, contended that while persons were allowed to play merely by paying the greens fee, without any question and without being members.

The golf course is owned by Greensboro and is leased to the Gillespie Park Golf Club, Inc., a non-profit corporation.

U.S. District Judge Johnson H. Hayes of Wilkesboro, N.C., termed the lease a device to evade what he called "the city's duty not to discriminate against any of its citizens." Hayes issued an injunction against discrimination in use of the course.

However, the North Carolina Supreme Court affirmed the trespass conviction of the six Negroes and ruled it was not required to take judicial notice of the federal order.

C-of-C Board Voices 'Thanks' To Barnhill

The outgoing board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce expressed its appreciation to Retiring President John T. Barnhill last night.

At the final meeting of the year the board voted its appreciation for Barnhill's constructive leadership during the year "instilling a spirit of enthusiasm and cooperation in carrying out the work of the chamber."

Last night's meeting was the last one over which Barnhill will preside. The new board will take over next month along with the newly-elected president J. H. Moye.

The board also heard from Jim Butler whose committee is making plans for the Chamber's annual meeting. He reported that his committee will have another meeting soon at which final plans for the affair will be made.

The board also recommended to the new board that the Chamber's agricultural program be continued through 1959. That action was taken at the request of this year's Agriculture Committee.

During 1958 the Chamber was a co-sponsor of the Fat Stock Show and Sale, a sponsor of the Junior Purebred Judging contest at the Pitt County Fair and it awarded prizes to Negro 4-H Club members in the Swine and Poultry Chain projects. The Chamber was also a member of the Pitt Farm Bureau.

In addition the committee recommended a program to stimulate higher production of the county's major crops.

President Barnhill commended the Agriculture Committee as being "a working committee" all year.

New Enlistment Program Drawn

M-Sgt. Aubrey E. Kidd, Recruiting Sergeant for this area announced today a new system for enlistments that will guarantee an enlistee the type of Army job he wants if he meets certain qualifications.

Under the old system a person could enlist for any of the thirteen branches within the Army.

Sgt. Kidd stated that under the new program a person enlists for the type of job he or she wants to do in the Army. These jobs are separated into ten general categories: Combat, Electronics, Electrical Maintenance, Clerical, Graphics, General Technical and Special Assignments.

These general categories are further separated into as many as fifty separate jobs under each category. A person may now enlist for the general category and in many cases the specific category that he chooses. This is intended to insure that the person will get the type of job desired. This program is officially named "Career Option Program" and is open to all qualified volunteers.

Sgt. Kidd pointed out this does not affect the popular Specialists Graduate Program whereby a person may select his choice of over one hundred specialized Army Schools if qualified.
