Castro Defends Purge By Execution In Replying To American Criticism

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — Rebel leader Fidel Castro contends the executions springing from his civil war victory are necessary to purify Cuba after six years of dictatorial rule.

The future course of the revolutionary purge was a subject of conflicting statements, but Castro made clear in a speech Tuesday night he considers the shooting of "war criminals" justified.

Amid mounting criticism abroad, rebel firing squads have executed more than 150 persons on charges of murder, torture and other high crimes during the regime of President Fulgencio Batista, who fled two weeks ago.

Castro, now chief of the Cuban armed forces, took note of an adverse reaction within the United States in his speech to the Havana Lions Club.

Bowling Is Girl's Best Exercise

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

IS BOWLING a girl's sport? That's the question that bothers one teen-ager whose mother says it is not a ladylike sport for her offspring.

It all depends on one's point of view. Estimates are that more than a half million young people in the country, girls and boys, now engage in the sport. Its acceptance really depends on one's own community, so if a girl lives in an area where girls fish, water ski, roller skate and ice skate, there may be no parental barrier to bowling. On the other hand, if all the girls go to sewing bees and knit and crochet in their spare time, a girl bowler may look a little rough around the edges.

Bowling has been popular in many countries, and widely accepted as a dignified sport. In Germany, the sport of bowling was engaged in even at village dances and baptisms. Wealthy burghers had bowling alleys on their estates. The Egyptians are supposed to have played the game before 5200 B. C., judging by implements found in excavated graves. The first indoor bowling alley opened in London in 1455 A. D., so bowling is no fly-by-night pastime.

It is such a popular game with a young Connecticut crowd that they've even organized a game called "snowpins," a mixed-up-crazy game that involves rolling a large snowball into seven pins. The main idea is to get exercise.

Young people who do not know how to bowl may learn how at any of the bowling centers where free instruction is offered. Footwork and timing are considered the main assets of a good bowler, and there are dividends—invitational championships and world series. This year several teen-agers competed in the main event at Chicago.

Are there advantages to be had for girl bowlers? Here are some gleaned from girls who like the sport:

"I was 20 pounds overweight before I started to bowl. It was mainly because I did nothing but sit home and nibble and munch goodies," says a 19-year-old.

"My whole family loves to bowl," says a 16-year-old girl. "Mom, Dad and my two younger brothers and I have a lot of fun competing with each other."

"It's a good way to make friends with your fellow workers. Organize teams and meet once a week," says a stenographer.

"There is no other form of recreation where I live, so the boys and girls get together at the bowling lanes," says another youngster. "Our parents set the curfew so there is no criticism of our

Your Children Need After-School Snacks

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, MD

ALMOST EVERY CHILD wants something to eat when he comes home from school in the afternoon. Teen-age youngsters especially are famished by mid-afternoon. They raid the ice-box, the cookie jar, the breadbox, and sometimes they eat up what you had planned to serve the family for dinner. These snacks often interfere with appetites for dinner, especially if the snacks are mostly sweets. Then the youngster passes up the good nourishing food you have prepared for him and you begin to worry about his health.

This is a little problem that exists in nine families out of ten all across the country. Some families just live with it, nagging sometimes when mother becomes especially annoyed. Some families try to forbid food in the mid-afternoon, others supply a bowl of fruit and hope the youngsters will be satisfied with that—usually they are not.

Why not just face the facts. Kids are hungry after school, but you also want them to eat enough good body building foods to keep them in robust health.

Plan Ahead
Prepare for an after school meal. Label one shelf in your refrigerator "Mabel" or "Tom". Every morning when you are cleaning up after breakfast put something that taste good and activities."

One girl volunteered that she had to give up bowling because she was becoming "a better bowler than my steady date." When he catches up, she'll go back to it, says this clever girl.

that is good for him — not cake that the child likes and something or pie or heavy sweets but good protein food, cheese, hard boiled eggs or maybe even deviled eggs, a piece of cold meat. Add a piece or two of fruit and something to drink, either milk or fruit juice. Make that shelf something the youngsters look forward to. Explain to him why you don't want him to fill up on sweets just a little while before dinner. He will cooperate especially if he enjoys the food you fix for him.

If he eats a little less at dinner there is nothing to worry about, because the food he has had in the afternoon was as good for him as the dinner food.

Appreciation
Every last one of us likes to have others do things for us. It makes us all feel good inside to know that someone cares enough about us to go to trouble for us. Your teen-ager will appreciate your efforts and you can often improve your relationship with your often rebellious adolescent by going to some trouble to fix him a good after school snack.

Of course you may find that you are appreciated not only by your own child but by the neighborhood as well. Not only the trouble of preparing the food, but the expense can become considerable. If you find you're feeding an army, put a little box and simply say the expense is getting you down and you would appreciate a few contributions. Let them give you what they'd otherwise spend in the corner drugstore. They'll do it and your child will be the envy of the crowd for having such a swell mother.

Mrs. Davis Guest Speaker

Mrs. E. E. Davis of Beaufort, Spiritual Life Secretary of the New Bern District, spoke to the W.S.C.S. of St. James Methodist Church Monday night on the importance of prayer in every Christian's life.

She began by saying that she counted her age by the date of her spiritual birth. Her message to the women was inspiring and she spoke from her personal experience as to the power of prayer. Some people think, she stated, that to be a real Christian meant a long face and a sad countenance and also to give up what they now enjoy. But instead it meant everything to gain because the scale of values changed and the things we once loved were not so important, that the love of God in our hearts would cause all things to fall in their proper places.

Mrs. Davis quoted from Bishop Ralph Cushman's famous poem, "I Met God in the Morning," and recommended early morning as the best time for meditation. It's worth getting up earlier, she said, than our regular schedule to talk to God, for no one knows what lies ahead for us in the day and when we will need a spiritual courage that can come only from God.

Mrs. Davis mentioned that Jesus chose Judas as one of his disciples and because he betrayed Jesus people think of him as the meanest man who ever lived. There are so many ways she said in which we betray him too. She closed her message with the thought that a real Christian is a real happy person because they have the love of God in their heart.

Dr. Bradner Speaks To Club

The Lector Club met at the home of Mrs. Amos Leggett on Tuesday, January 6th. The meeting was opened by Mrs. Harold Forbes, vice-president, who welcomed the guests, Mrs. Jack Silvers, and Dr. Bradner.

During the short business session, the club members voted to contribute to the Pitt County United Fund.

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Leggett, who introduced Dr. Cleveland Bradner, Director of Religious Activities, East Carolina College. Dr. Bradner's subject was "Religious Literature." He pointed out that everyone often read a book of a religious nature and considered it good literature value because it is about religion, when actually the book is of no literary value and has no real religious significance. Some of the best sellers during past years have been books in this category, for example, "The Robe" by Lloyd C. Douglas, and "The Gauntlet" by James Street.

Dr. Bradner remarked that many books written about religion contain "fairy tales" rather than good literature to challenge the reader's intellectual capacities. He also stated that the public's interest in good literature would bring about better books being written about religion.

Dr. Bradner's talk was very interesting, and was received with enthusiasm by the club members.

The hostess then served a sweet course with coffee. Books were exchanged and the meeting was adjourned.

Mrs. J. Brantley Speight, international relations chairman, briefed the group on an important "World Affairs" conference scheduled for February 11-12 to be held in Chapel Hill.

The newly edited home demonstration magazine was discussed in addition to routine business.

The meeting was adjourned by the group praying the club collect. During the social hour Mrs. Worthington invited the members to the tea table for refreshments.

Paula Learns To Type

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, MD

A TYPEWRITER can be a great boon to learning and, contrary to what you might think, it can even improve the handwriting.

Paula was in third grade. She was an average student. Paula read quite well but her handwriting and her spelling were pretty awful. She was timid and shy and was overcome with embarrassment when she had to recite in class.

One weekend she had a composition to write. Paula hated compositions. She could think up things to say all right, but getting it on paper was such a chore she just never bothered to write down all she had to say. Paula was alone in the house for several hours Saturday morning. She sneaked into her father's study, put a piece of paper in his typewriter and began her composition about "My Dog Pat."

Dad had shown her something about how to use the machine and she managed quite well. She used the "hunt and peck" system of finding the letters. It was fun. She wrote two whole pages. The finished product wouldn't have won any typing prizes but in Paula's eyes it looked wonderful — so much better than her laborious handwriting.

When mother came home Paula was just finishing. She was on top of the world. She had written that composition early and she knew it was the best one she had ever done. Also the paper was a masterpiece of neatness.

Mother read the composition. She was amazed and tremendously pleased and of course said so. On Monday Paula took her composition to school. The teacher was delighted and asked the child if she would like to read it to the class. To the teacher's surprise Paula said "yes". Paula read it without embarrassment and with obvious pleasure. Later it was tacked up on the bulletin board.

This seemed a turning point for the child. Here was something she could do. She gained confidence in herself and was willing to try. Even the handwriting suddenly became more legible and the papers done in school were less messy.

Many other children profit from the use of a typewriter. It is so much easier to type than to struggle with a pen or pencil. Children enjoy typing, are freer to get on paper those racing ideas. The child's increased morale inspires him to work more effectively at other subjects.

Garden Club Hears Mrs. Bryant

Mrs. R. L. Bryant, District Director, was guest speaker of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club which met at the home of Mrs. Robert Wilfong Tuesday morning.

Upon arrival the members and guests were welcomed by Mrs. Wilfong and invited into the dining room for coffee and accompaniments. Of focal interest was an arrangement of white gladioli centering the dining room table.

Mrs. W. J. Stell presided during the business meeting.

Reports from the various committee chairmen were heard.

The Club voted to accept the recommendations of the Executive Board concerning the Spring Fair which will be held in Lakewood Pines on April 17.

Mrs. W. A. Wright and Mrs. H.

R. Billica were named as General Co-Chairmen for the Fair. The following committee chairmen were appointed: Mrs. L. O. Crawford, Finance; Mrs. R. G. Hunt, Publicity; Mrs. R. E. Wilfong, Plant Sale; and Mrs. J. T. Barnhill, Food.

Mrs. R. S. Lowe was unanimously voted in as a new member.

After the adjournment of the business meeting, Mrs. A. L. Whitehurst introduced and presented an Orchid corsage as a gift from the club to Mrs. R. L. Bryant of Sarasota, who is director of District 10. She spoke on the organization and objectives of Garden Clubbing. Mrs. Bryant praised the Lakewood Pines Garden Club on its excellent record, especially in the field of Garden therapy.

Method: Wash and core apples; Pare off a 1-inch strip of skin from top of each apple. Stuff core of each apple with 1 to 2 tablespoons mince-meat or as much as you can pack down tightly. Place apples in baking pan. Place sugar and water in a small saucepan over low heat; stir until sugar dissolves; bring to simmering. Pour syrup over apples. Bake, uncovered, in moderate (375 degrees) oven until apples are tender when pierced in center—about 1 hour; baste apples with syrup every 10 or 15 minutes. Remove apples. Mrs. T. B. Brown had charge of the devotional. After the members had sung "We've A Story To Tell To The Nations," Mrs. Brown read from Matthew 28:16-20 and Acts 1:6-8.

Miss Wahl spoke to the group on a topic which had as its theme revitalizing the old religions—Islam, Hinduism, and Buddhism. She pointed out that Islam is a religion of submission; Hinduism is a way of life; and Buddhism is a religion of compassion.

In the absence of the secretary, Miss Frances Daniels called the roll and read the minutes of the previous meeting.

In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Hendrix gave the monthly report of the treasurer.

The president reported that she had informed Mrs. Sam Underwood that the Guild would support Dr. Bessie McNeil in her summer missionary program.

Mrs. T. B. Brown, Spiritual Life Chairman, announced that a school of prayer was being held in Washington during the week of January 12-15 and was being led by Mrs. Louise Eggleston, one of the South's most consecrated and youthful workers. She encouraged attendance by any members who could attend.

Mrs. Dall reported that a new picture of Tim, the Guild's orphan, had been received.

In the absence of Miss Elizabeth Walker, the president reported that Miss Walker had delivered Tim's Christmas gifts to the Methodist Home for Children. However, Tim had left the day before to spend Christmas with his mother who resides in Durham. His gifts were left in his cottage for him to find upon his return.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Mildred Manning, Mrs. Kemp Baldwin, Mrs. A. R. House, Mrs. Charles Blanchard, and Mrs. Margaret Farley. They served coconut snowballs, salted nuts, and coffee.

Groundwork In Long-Range Plans

If Greenville's School enrollment reaches the 7,000 mark in the next 12 years as Superintendent J. H. Rose has told the Board of Education it will, Greenville will have to invest several million dollars in new school facilities during that period to meet the needs of the increased enrollment.

It is well that the Board of Education has set wheels turning to formulate long range building plans to meet this enrollment increase.

An enrollment of 7,000 students in local public schools by 1971 will represent an increase of approximately 45 per cent over the enrollment for the present school year. Even if Greenville prevents classrooms from becoming more crowded than they are today, there will have to be a corresponding increase in the number of classrooms and non-classroom school facilities during that period of time.

In addition to careful planning for these new facilities themselves, there must also be careful planning of the method of financing these new facilities as they are needed. By preparing a long range construction program as the Board of Education has now set about to do, citizens of Greenville will know what they will have to provide in the way of new schools to take care of the increased number of pupils. They will also have some idea of what they may expect in the way of bond issues and related taxes to defray the cost of the building program.

A dozen years is not too far in advance to plan for the school expansion program of a city like Greenville. Certainly the plans will have to be modified and revised annually to meet the changes in conditions, but with a master plan to work from, Greenville can be reasonably assured of having sufficient school facilities to meet the demands made upon its school system.

If the people of Greenville can be told what new school facilities will be needed by 1961, 1965, 1968 and 1970, the approximate cost of these facilities and how they may be financed, they will be in a better position to see that the needs are met at the proper time.

The Greenville Board of Education is on the right track with new long planning for the construction of new facilities. It is our hope that the Board will project and make available to the people of Greenville as long range a building program as is reasonably feasible. At a later date it might incorporate into such an outline the additional projected needs of the local school system in terms of additional teachers, operating costs, salary supplements and other expense items which must be defrayed through local rather than state tax funds.

Over a long period of years citizens of Greenville have seen to it that the city has an outstanding public school system. If they are made aware of the long range as well as the immediate needs of the local school system, we are confident they will continue to see that those needs are met.

Comforting Note In Johnson Leadership

Citizens of the nation should be thankful that a vast majority of their senators elected to follow the leadership Sen. Lyndon Johnson and his common-sense group rather than those of the ilk of Douglas, Humphrey, Chase and Javits.

While the new Senate rule on limitation of debate may not be to the liking of many Southern Democrats, it is certainly much more to their liking than was the proposal by Sen Douglas that a simple majority vote be required to limit debate on a matter. The new rule whereby two-thirds of the Senators present and voting are required to limit debate, is, from a practical standpoint, very close to the old rule which required two-thirds of the total membership to limit debate.

And if the vote on the rule change is any indication it will be difficult for Douglas and company to muster the necessary two-thirds of the senators present and voting to shut off debate of any matter before the Senate.

A good many things may be read into the meaning of this first test of strength in the new session of the Senate, depending on the individual viewpoint. Whatever the viewpoint, however, it must be conceded that Majority Leader Johnson has shown clearly his position of strength to withstand many challenges during the session. It is also evident that although Congress is heavily Democratic, it is not likely to be led by the nose by some of its more liberal members. And, lastly, though the number of Northern Democrats has increased sharply since the last session, the Southern bloc still asserts a great deal of power and authority.

Professionalism Of Sen. Johnson

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Liberals looked amateurish compared with the professionalism of Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas who outmaneuvered their efforts to make it much easier to smash a filibuster.

To make a long story short: When the showdown came they didn't have the votes, Johnson did. Knowing the thoroughness of Johnson, it seems safe to say he had his votes lined up beforehand and the liberals didn't. What happened would indicate one of two things about the fight they made:

1. Either they were overly optimistic on the support they'd get from the rest of the Senate and didn't make a nose count, or —

2. They knew their chance was slim but decided to go ahead and fight anyway for the sake of the record and to get at least some concessions.

Under the old Senate Rule No. 22 a filibuster could be stopped only by a two-thirds vote of all the senators, or 66 of the 98 senators. A filibuster is a prolonged talking spree whose sole purpose is to prevent some bill or measure from coming to a vote.

Such a two-thirds vote is tremendously difficult to get in the Senate, where so many members traditionally cherish the right — which any one of them might want to use someday — to block a distasteful measure.

In addition, the rule provided no means at all — not even that big two-thirds vote — for stopping a filibuster against a motion to change the rule.

The liberals set out to get the rule changed right at the start of this session of Congress last Wednesday. They wanted it changed to let a simple majority — 50 of the 98 members — stop a filibuster.

But Johnson, leader of the majority Democrats, grabbed the floor right from the start. This was his right, as leader. And he beat the liberals to the punch by proposing that Rule No. 22 be changed this way:

To let a filibuster be stopped — not by the full two-thirds vote of 66 of the 98 senators or by 50 of the 98 — but by a simple two-thirds vote of just those senators present on the floor at voting time.

This may seem lots easier to get. In actual practice, it probably wouldn't be, because on anything so important as breaking a filibuster, most of the senators would be present anyway.

But it was a concession to the liberals. Southern Democrats, who have used the filibuster to block civil rights legislation, didn't like the concessions. It was more than they wanted to yield. It was less than the liberals wanted.

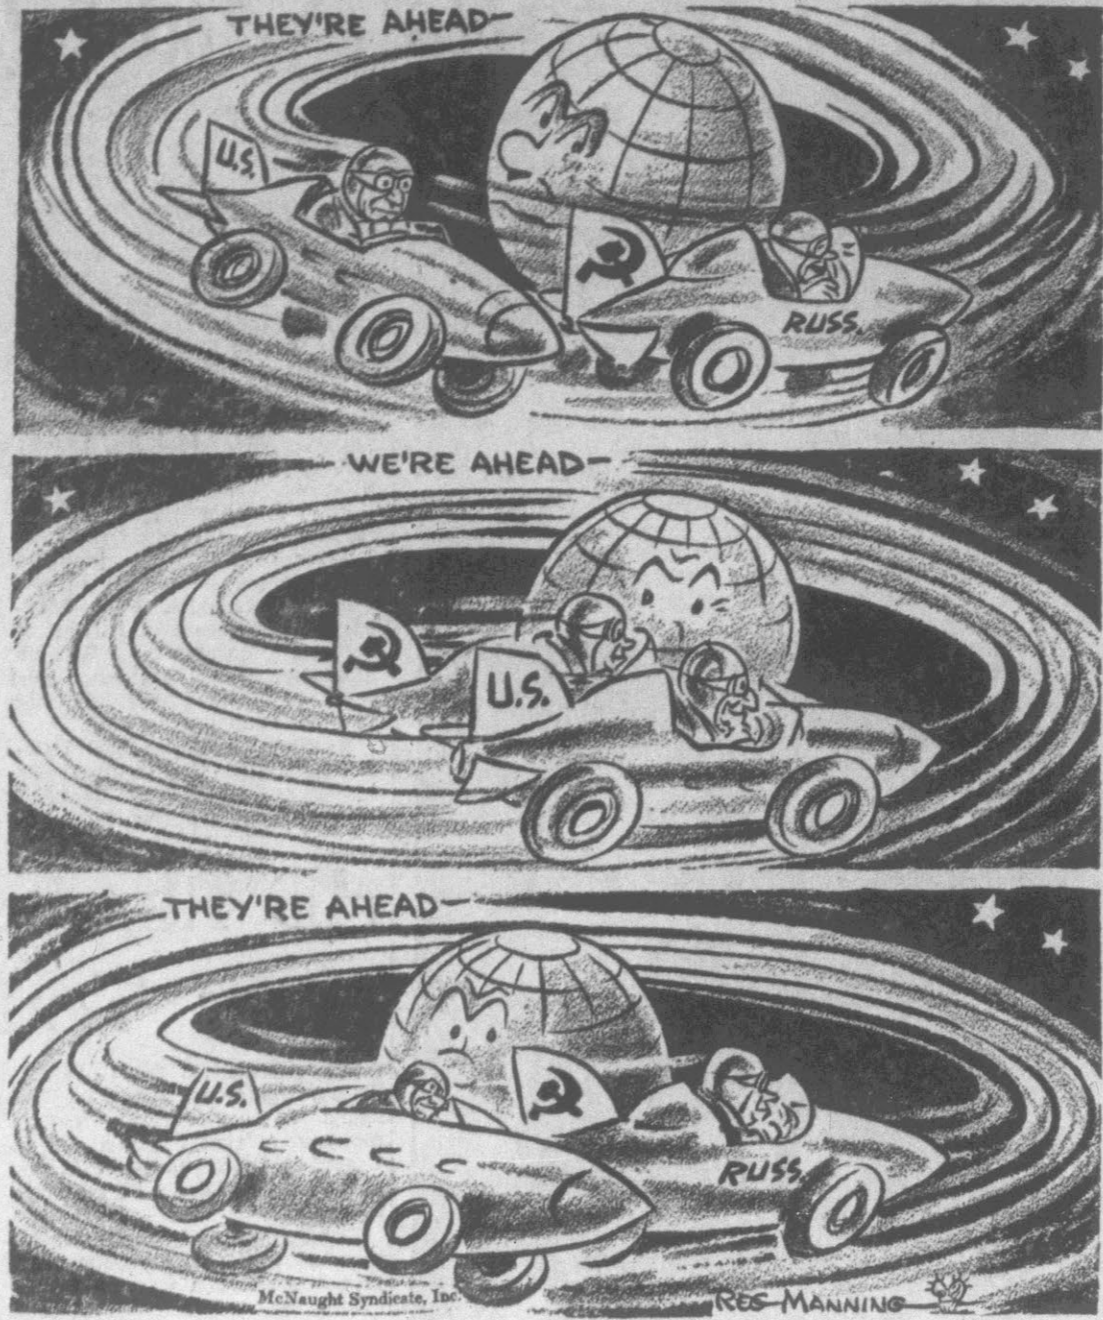

But Johnson, whose job is to try to keep all the Democratic senators working together during the year on legislation he wants passed, is a master at compromise. What he proposed about the rule's change was enough of a compromise to win the votes it needed for adoption.

From the time Johnson made his proposal, the liberals had almost impossible going. The reason: Johnson had made a concession that wouldn't antagonize the Southern too much and would satisfy most other senators who thought Rule No. 22 ought to be softened a bit but not too much.

The result: The liberals were voted down on one attempt after another to get the rules changed to their liking, thus paving the way for overwhelming adoption of Johnson's proposal.

There's no doubt the liberals did a lot of homework: Research on the history of Rule No. 22 and the filibuster. But in the terribly important field of practical politics votes — whatever they did wasn't enough.

Harry Can Pin It Down

A who named Harry, who's a good friend of mine from down in Dog's Head, was telling me about Cuba and Fidel Castro the other day.

Harry was sipping slowly from the bottle. He offered me some but I'm a Coke drinker. Harry always seems to have pocket change and a bottle of super market wine despite the fact that he doesn't work. He claims he has a weak heart and avoids work "because of my doctor's orders."

He won't take money from the unemployment bureau. "I got principles," he says. "When the Democrats get back in office maybe I will. But not from no republicans." (I spell republicans without a capital at his request.)

Harry is about 45, short and frail, with alert grey eyes. His hair is greying and I've never seen him wear anything but a World War II army jacket and a pair of pin-striped blue trousers. He seems to have been everywhere, although I'm still a little suspicious because he has a rather raw Carolina country manner of speech.

About the only things Harry can do, I guess, is drink wine and philosophize about the world in general. But he can do both of those things uniquely. Here is a sample of his comments. I've tried to preserve his word order.

"That country is a chopping block for pigs. Castro is the top pig now. Batista was the top pig before. He chopped up those tan people down there and made himself a bunch of money — did you ever see that picture of Batista with the tommy gun well, Castro is the top pig now. He isn't no different. You listen to the radio. He's already started killing those tan people . . ."

"It's a magnificent place, down there. I been down there. It looks like heaven with grass growing out of it and flowers and hills; and they built little white villages down in the bosoms of those hills against the green . . .

"Castro's a trouble-making kid. He's not but 32. All he's ever done was raise hell. Look, I read he killed 75 people yesterday. Zip-Zip-Zip — just like that. Everybody had a trial, he said. Listen, he said two years ago his government would ought to nationalize all U.S.-financed businesses and take over all properties Batista's government had formed . . ."

"He's a fanatic. His plans for government are a fanatic's plans. How else you think he'd be able to get all those wild people with him He may change, of course . . ."

"I don't say Castro's bad for Cuba. Trouble with Batista is that he got fat. Like Caesar. Have you seen a picture of him I don't think Castro will get fat. He's got a lean and hungry look."

Other Editors Saying - - People Must Demand It

(The Greensboro Daily News)

Superior Court Judge J. Braxton Craven of Morganton, in a speech in his home town, pinpoints the principal mission of the N.C. Bar Association's committee on court reform:

If you ran Drexel Furniture Company for one year like we run the courts of North Carolina, in my considered opinion it would be bankrupt. Furniture might still be coming out at the end of the production line in reasonably good quality, but there wouldn't be any money in the bank.

All that is proposed is, generally speaking, that the courts be permitted by the people of North Carolina to set the judicial house in order and to make their own house rules. There is not one single solitary word or sentence in any of the reports, nor is there such a word or sentence in the proposed revision to the Constitution, that diminishes the power of the Legislature of North Carolina over the substantive law of North Carolina.

Judge Craven's plea points to the one thread of purpose running through the court reform program: The need for pinpointing responsibility. "It would be funny," he notes, "if it were not so tragic, that the people of North Carolina have vested in their courts judicial power—the awful power to take life, liberty and property—but have thus far withheld from the courts the power to make their own rules by which they exercise the power vested in them over property and life itself." Then he adds:

It is about like saying to the Kiwanis Club tonight that it has the power to change all the municipal laws of Morganton and abolish taxes but that it does not have the power to decide when and where it shall meet to do so, or whether it shall have a luncheon or a dinner meeting.

Judge Craven's remarks offer the clearest explanation so far rendered of the need for court reform in North Carolina.

It is not in the quality of judicial decisions. It is not substantive law.

The trouble lies in the housekeeping duties of the courts — the shockingly overloaded and jammed-up dockets, the cases which hang fire for months and even years, the slow grinding out of justice which unduly taxes the well-to-do litigant and overwhelms the poor.

An example of this slow-moving justice came to light recently in a simple automobile accident case. Only insurance damages were involved, but the litigant finally won the case commented in these terms: "Why was it necessary to wait five months to try the case? The amount involved was less than $800. By the time the case finally reached court everybody involved, even the police officer, had forgotten some of the details of the accident. A case of this kind, it seems to me, could be settled in a matter of weeks."

This single example could be duplicated 100 times. The attorneys, of course, will answer that

Acting Career Is Hard

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Ever years for the glamorous life of an actress.

Well, take it from Barbara Bel Geddes, who has made a success on stage, screen and television, there is more hard work than glamor in a theatrical career. "When I first started," she recalled, "I thought it would be all fun — like appearing in a high school play. I didn't realize the discipline involved."

"You have to treat yourself like an athlete. You're always in training. You have to save yourself for those hours on the stage or before the cameras, when you'll need every bit of energy you possess."

Barbara is the daughter of the noted designer, Norman Bel Geddes.

Although Barbara enjoys Hollywood, she feels a Broadway star has one big advantage over a movie star.

"A stage star, unlike a film star, has privacy after she finishes her day's work. People don't bother her."

"I like that. After a show, I like to go home and live my own life. I like to put on a comfortable pair of shoes and breathe."

"The theater is in the theater. You don't have to take it home with you."

Barbara, who is hazel-eyed and flaxen-haired, likes to dress casually in a skirt and close fitting blouse, open at the collar. She usually wears neither lipstick nor rouge.

"When I'm in a play," she explained, "I get sick of looking in the mirror as I put on makeup."

She is fond of outdoor sports, and looks like the outdoor type. One of the worst problems of the acting profession, Barbara said, is the endless waiting.

"You can't just sit down and do a job by yourself as a painter does," she continued. "You have to wait for so many people. You have to wait for the playwright, the producer, the director, and the public."

"But there is one wonderful thing about acting. It never really bores you."

Barbara is a woman who isn't sure just where she lives, she and her husband, Windsor Lewis, the stage director, have a 60-acre farm in Putnam County, New York; a 100-acre farm in County Galway, Ireland; and right now they are dwelling in a small house on the East Side in Manhattan.

In this menage they have two daughters, three turtles, two hamsters, a miniature marmoset monkey, two golden retrievers, a Maltese dog, two cats and 20 fish.

"By the time I get them all fed in the morning," said Barbara, "it's time to start preparing them lunch."

they needed five months to prepare the case properly. But too often the matter does not concern necessary delay. It involves, simply, the convenience of the lawyer rather than the public or the litigants.

Under the N.C. Bar Association's reform program the very officers of the courts who now have too little responsibility for housekeeping duties would be invested directly with that obligation.

Certainly, as Judge Craven notes, that would mean no hands-on augmentation of judicial power for the judges. In the usual sense, it would mean more hard work. "As a matter of fact," he notes, "we may as well face it, the judges personally would be a little better off if the Bell Plan never comes to flower."

The same, of course, goes for the judicial profession as a whole. Many of its members will fight any and all changes, because they know they will have to prepare their cases sooner, cut out the delay until "good" judges arrive and otherwise meet standards of a vastly more efficient court system.

Thus it is clear that if the bar association's program comes to fruit, it will come because ordinary citizens are aroused about their courts and want to see them improved. Vested interests will not take the lead.

Only the people will succeed in getting court reform.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

DON'T UNDERESTIMATE

In his first letter to the Corinthians, St. Paul wrote of himself, "I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God."

If St. Paul was unfit for Christian work, we might wonder, then, who could ever be considered fit? But Paul answers this question immediately for his next words are, "But by the grace of God I am what I am." His great missionary work was going forward, Paul asserted, despite his own unworthiness, by the grace of God.

To underestimate our own value for God's work is to underestimate God's power. It was suggested to a member of our church that he try to bring some new neighbors to church with him.

"Who am I," he asked, "to be telling other people that they should come to church?"

"The question is not who you are," was the reply, "but rather, who is God, that you should fail to try to bring these people to His church?"

Elsewhere in the same letter to the Corinthians, St. Paul wrote, "But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty."

God's power is always greater than our weakness. Let us stop thinking about our weakness and think instead of His strength. Let us put out of our minds our sins and mistakes, and remember that through Him we have forgiveness, and in Him security as we walk life's pathway.

By ELMER ROESSNER

One industry is very happy to see wages go up except, of course, in its own plants. It is the vending machine industry.

Every time wages go up, workers have more coins to drop into vending machine slots. But far more important is the fact that every time pay rises, vending machines become more economical.

This differential is no more dramatically illustrated than in the New York subway. At the attended subway newsstands, what are usually referred to as nickel candy bars are 6 cents. A few feet away the identical bars are sold by machines for 5 cents.

Vending machines now sell 15 out of every 100 packs of cigarettes, 25 out of every 100 soft drinks and 20 out of every 100 candy bars in the United States. COIN-IN-SLOT CAFETERIAS

At the moment, vending machines are rapidly spreading in a new field: the robot selling of hot food.

In the four years since late 1955, when the first machines to vend hot foods were introduced, sales of packaged hot foods jumped from zero to $18,500,000 in 1958, estimates Robert Z. Greene, president of Rowe Manufacturing Co., a major manufacturer of automatic vending equipment.

In five years, he predicts, sales will reach $50,000,000 to $100,000,000. Both vending machine manufacturers and food processors are working on ways to sell more types of hot foods.

Batteries of food vending machines, constituting a rounded cafeteria service, are now used in plants and factories, offering hot and cold dishes, drinks, desserts, candies and cigarettes. HOT TAMALES

Foods already packaged for serving hot from vending machines include tamales with chili, turtle soup, chop suey, cheese ravioli, beef stews, chicken gumbo, spaghetti and meat balls, corned beef hash and chili con carne. Best seller by a wide margin: pork and beans.

Nine nationally known companies and many smaller ones are competing for the vending market sales. Mr. Greene said. The latest industry directory lists 28 suppliers of coffee, 31 suppliers of pastry and other baked goods, 21 suppliers of soups, and 15 of other specialties, ranging from cheese to steaks.

There are now about 50 automatic food installations, feeding more than 500,000 workers a day.

An industry estimate is that there are now 19,900 hot food machines, 23,000 sandwich and pastry machines, 57,500 machines selling cookies and crackers, 65,500 coffee and other hot drink machines, 3,000 fruit juice machines, 33,000 milk vending machines, 31,500 ice-cream machines, 865,000 bottle machines and 94,500 cup machines for soft drinks.

These made sales of just under $1 billion last year.

A recent development is the use of vending machines in school lunch programs. A hot food vending machine is being tried at the Freehold, N.J., Intermediate School, where 75 to 100 pupils get hot soups and main dishes from coin machines. The vending machines, which offer eight hot dishes, succeed because the school is too small to support a cafeteria.

The machines require cooks, truckers and service workers, but manpower requirements are far below that of cafeterias. In a plant, for example, only a few hours of labor are required to service a robot cafeteria operating 24 hours a day. But a cafeteria with a "live" staff might require payroll costs of 150, 200 or more hours a day. And the rising cost of those hours is booming the vending machine industry.

Tahiti No Paradise For Movie-Makers

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I've been to tougher locations in this country—on mountaintops in the Rockies and places that were infested with rattlesnakes. But at least they were never billed as paradise."

This sums up Edmond O'Brien's disillusionment after a three-month stay in Tahiti for a film location. The legendary land of Gauguin canvases isn't paradise, the actor sighed, not by a long shot.

French moviemakers tabbed Oscar winner O'Brien for an expensive movie of the South Seas, "The Ambitious." Oddly enough, they admired his work in a Jayne Mansfield movie, "The Girl Can't Help It," and sent him a script. He accepted, finding the role a rare combination of Wally Berry and Humphrey Bogart.

The location in Tahiti sounded like a dream. The first inkling that it wasn't came when he applied for a visa here. The French official commented, "don't expect too much."

Added O'Brien: "I didn't know how right he was until I got down there. As scenery, Tahiti itself was a disappointment. In the first place, there isn't a white beach on the island. The natives fish, but you seldom see them swim; the lagoons are lined with coral that can cut you to ribbons.

"Tahiti seems to have attracted all of the worst that Western Civilization could have brought in. The place is filled with castaways of all kinds—Americans who have sought an escape from competition, Australian millionaires and ex-millionaires who discovered women late in life. The natives hate the French, who they feel have treated them with little regard, and everyone hates the Chinese, who control the island's economy.

"The weather was murder. The average humidity was 84, and on some islands, 89. I sweated right through a mattress every night. There were no studios, so we had to shoot our interiors where we could. One place had a tin roof, and you can imagine how that was, combined with our lights for the color camera."

Transportation to Tahiti is a problem, he said. Air service comes about every two weeks, and to reach the island he had to travel 5,000 miles out of his way.

Commuters Getting Some Needed Help

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY
CHICAGO (AP)—Here's a hopeful piece of news for you, Mr. Commuter.

Many people in high places are thinking of ways to help you. Their main concern is to keep on moving you from your home station to the big city and back again.

It's a bad situation and the prospect is even worse. Motor vehicle traffic is approaching the saturation point in the scores of cities. And the main trend in the nation's growing population is toward the huge urban centers.

So 29 men—1 railroad presidents and 13 mayors and other city officials—got together Tuesday to exchange ideas on how to solve the commuter problem. Most of the railroads contend they make no profit in operating the commuter lines.

Here are some of the suggestions:

- Government subsidies.
- New equipment to lure motorists back to the rails.
- A federal agency to buy equipment and lease it to the rail lines or to lend them money to buy modern rolling stock.
- Elimination of the federal tax on commutation tickets.

Provision for deducting commutation fares from federal income taxes.

Giving the railroads a better break on their taxes, allowing them more freedom in setting fares, adding or removing trains and closing unprofitable stations.

A new U. S. transportation policy that would encourage the growth of railroads.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York, one of the conferees, said the problem is regional and should be handled on a regional basis. He proposed the creation of a tri-state—New York, New Jersey, Connecticut—transportation agency.

One of the basic points in his plan is this:

"A sharing of mass transit deficits, where they occur, among all the jurisdictions of government that have a stake."

That means local, state and federal governments.

Some Eastern interests advocated federal subsidies at the one-day meeting. Midwesterners generally opposed them.

A committee of 12 was appointed to meet within the next 30 days to start work on a program.

Railroad president members of the committee are George Alpert of the New Haven, Ben W. Heineman of the Northwestern, Wayne Johnston of the Illinois Central, A. B. Perlman of the New York Central and James M. Symes of the Pennsylvania.

Mayors on the committee are John B. Hynes of Boston, Richard J. Daley of Chicago, Anthony J. Celebrezze of Cleveland, Frank P. Zedler of Milwaukee, Wagner Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia and Raymond R. Tucker of St. Louis.

Second Choice..... by Pap'

George (Sparky) Anderson was so confident that he could make the big show and make it BIG, that he passed up fat bonuses to sign with the Dodgers for $3,000 and the chance to develop naturally in the minors. He was just out of a Los Angeles high school in 1953 and possessed with a burning desire to play with the Dodgers. That dream became even more exciting when the Dodgers deserted Brooklyn for his native Los Angeles.

Anderson had established himself as the best second baseman in the minors. Competent baseball men put their stamp of approval on him, indicating that he is ready for the majors. The Dodgers found themselves in a quandary with this brilliant prospect and no place to use him. It seems that a young fellow named Charley Neal had taken over the second base spot and was not giving up the job. And then, too, the Dodgers had Junior Gilliam, another capable

Joe Moya Paces Rose High Quint To 55-40 Win

Rose High School's cagers wrapped up their third Northeastern Conference basketball victory of the season here last night romping over the visiting Roanoke Rapids Yellow Jackets, 55-40.

Joe Moya, Greenville's most assistant point-baker, rifled the nets for 24 points in pacing the locals to their third consecutive conference win of the year.

Steve Noble tossed in 18 and Howard Garner added 7 to aid Moya in the assault against the visitors.

Davis had 10 to pace Roanoke Rapids.

Greenville jumped off to an early 9-7 lead in the first period of play, which was a bit ragged, and then rolled off 16 points in the second quarter while Roanoke Rapids could muster only 6.

By halftime, the score was 23-15 in favor of the Jackets.

East Carolina Squad Plays Guilford Here Thursday; Won Earlier Game

TarHeels And Wolfpack In Battle Of Ranking Tonight

RALEIGH (AP) — About 12,400 basketball-happy fans will jam into Reynolds Coliseum here tonight for an Atlantic Coast Conference game billed as a battle of the rankings.

Once beaten North Carolina State, the No. 1 team in the nation in this week's Associated Press poll, clashes with arch-rival North Carolina, ranked third.

There are many in this section of the country who feel the two squads should be listed one-two in the ratings. The game should settle most of the arguments as to which should be on top.

"I've never seen a game with so much interest in the 13 years I've been at State," said Wolfpack Coach Everett Case.

While Case and North Carolina's Frank McGuire work their strategy in the conference headliner, Maryland will be entertaining Georgetown and Wake Forest will take on South Carolina at Winston-Salem.

Youngkin led Duke scoring with 13 points. Walt Gibbons of Clemson was high man with 16.

Virginia's height and fast break proved too much for its Southern Conference foe, John Haner, a 6-3 Madison, W.Va., junior, led the assault with 24 points. The victory broke a seven-game losing streak for the Cavaliers.

Case sends his Wolfpack against North Carolina holding a 10-7 edge over McGuire in a rivalry that goes back to 1953.

Commenting on State's No. 1 ranking, Case said, "We've had better teams overall and in personnel, but from the standpoint of desire and hustle we haven't had a better team.

The only blot on the Wolfpack's record is a two-point overtime loss to Kansas State. North Carolina was beaten by Michigan State in the Dixie Classic semifinals.

McGuire says the Tar Heels may use control ball "if we decide the crowd is too much of an advantage for State and their seniors to have too much experience."

Case said he wasn't worried. "We've won all our big games with control type ball," he added.

East Carolina's basketball squad returns to Memorial Gymnasium for a home game Thursday night, hosting Guilford College. The game is a North State contest.

East Carolina took the Quaker crew with ease in opening its season. Saturday night's game which the Bucs won from Elon 70-44 was one of the team's best games of the year.

Plaster, 6-8 center, was top rebound man last year and is acclaimed as a much improved man this season.

Rounding out the starting lineup will be Captain Nick Nichols at one forward post and guards Ike Riddick and Charlie Adams. Adams, the club's top scorer this year, hit 26 points in the Elon game for a high point of the season. Nichols, Leaksville senior, follows in the scoring department.

Coach Porter said earlier this week that his club showed more teamwork in the Elon game. The Pirates, rated 10 points favorites over the Quakers, will be hosting a scrappy team. The visitors boast a hustling and dangerous team, but do not have the height of most North State clubs.

East Carolina has a big road trip coming up this weekend in meeting Lenoir Rhyne's Bears, defending champions, in Hickory Saturday night and moving over to Cullowhee to meet top-leading Western Carolina on next Monday night. ECC will be back home on Jan. 30 for a return match with Western Carolina.

Blaik Resignation Surprise At Point

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Army today began the long quest for a new football coach and athletic director while failing to throw a clue on the mystery of why a coach on top of the world should abruptly quit.

Earl (Red) Blaik, fresh from an undefeated season and the toast of the coaching set for his "lonely end" offense last year, resigned Tuesday, effective Feb. 15, his 62nd birthday, after 18 years with Army.

His only reason: "This is the proper time to withdraw from college sports, as to overstay a coaching career is unthinkable."

To a man, Army brass said they were caught completely flatfooted.

One high West Point officer said "We were so surprised that we have no one else in mind. We're wide open for all applications."

There are several theories about Blaik's resignation.

It has been said he has a bad stomach and the steadily increasing pressures of the game are getting to be too much. It has also been said he was at the end of his rope trying to convince the brass Army should play post-season bowl games and thus gain additional prestige. And it has been said he wanted to be able to have prospective players tutored before taking the entrance examinations just as Navy has been doing.

The last two offer the most logical reasons. At the end of last season, when Army compiled a record of eight victories, no defeats and one tie, the Cadets were certain bowl timber. But the policy of higher ups was against it.

As for the tutoring of players before entrance, the NCAA acknowledged last week that the service academies had special problems and therefore could see no harm in the tutoring. It is possible Blaik pointed this out to the brass, got a turnaround and decided to call it quits.

After expressing his regrets at leaving the Academy, and pointing out the strong position of Army sports, Blaik said:

"At the present time, there is no personal commitment to any future plan, though within a reasonable time I shall accept one of several opportunities either in television or business. Right now, Mrs. Blaik and I are going to take a short vacation."

Six North State Teams In Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Six North State Conference basketball squads swing into action tonight in a four-game slate.

The schedule has Lenoir Rhyne at Catawba, Western Carolina at Appalachian, High Point at Pfeiffer and Pembroke at Elon.

Western Carolina racked up its fifth straight conference victory Tuesday night in a 50-28 rout of Guilford.

High Point, meanwhile, was dumped by Newberry of South Carolina's Little Four 77-66. Danny Sewell pumped in 24 points for High Point but Newberry's Charlie Gallagher accounted for 42.

Hogan Bassey To Defend Title

LONDON (AP) — World Featherweight Champion Hogan Bassey of Liverpool will defend his title against Davey Moore in Los Angeles March 18, promoter George Parnassus said today.

The original date was Feb. 25 but the illness of one of Bassey's managers caused the postponement.

No Promotions, So Quinn Bolted

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — The only thing that eluded John Quinn in his 14 years as general manager of the Milwaukee Braves was a promotion.

Tuesday, after twice being passed over when bigger, better paying jobs became available in the Braves' front office, Quinn bolted to the Phillies at a healthy increase in salary.

His title will be the same as it was with the Braves—vice president and general manager. His pay will jump from $22,500 to around $35,000.

Quinn termed the change "the biggest decision I ever made in my life."

Before Quinn took the Braves in 1945, they hadn't won a National League pennant in 31 years and hadn't finished in the first division in 10.

Under his able direction, the Braves won a world championship, three NL pennants and finished in the first division 12 times. They also developed a farm system second to none.

The resignation of the rail-thin, 50-year-old Boston Irishman with craggy features left in its wake genuine sorrow among Braves' personnel.

"He made us what we are today," said one front office employee. "He won't be easy to replace."

Pancho Says He Is Still Good For Five More Years

MELBOURNE (AP) — Pancho Gonzalez says he is good for another five years as king of professional tennis.

His most likely successor? He picks sensational Peruvian Alex Olmedo.

"I don't see anybody around who I think can beat me," the tall, swarthy Mexican-American said today while enjoying the fruits of a straight set victory over his chief rival, Lew Hoad.

"I may have slowed up half a step and at times my incentive may not be too keen but when I get hungry and want to win a match, I can still do it."

Gonzalez proved that Tuesday night before a sellout crowd of 8,000 at the Olympic Velodrome. Playing fierce, killer tennis he smashed Hoad 8-6, 6-2, 6-3 to go into the Victorian pro final against Australian's Frank Sedgman tonight.

Hoad had beaten him in their last meeting in Rome four months ago and was favored by those who had seen the young, blond Australian crush Tony Trabert in the quarter-finals.

High Point's Sewell Is Top Conference Scorer

GREENSBORO (AP) — Danny Sewell, High Point College's smooth-performing junior, is the North State Conference's No. 1 scorer on a phenomenal display of shooting.

Sewell, according to the conference's service bureau, tops the circuit on an average of 23.4 points per contest against eight collegiate foes.

However, what is even more sensational is the fact that Sewell has had an almost unbelievable field goal shooting average in forging into the leadership.

In the eight games, Sewell has taken 107 shots from the floor, and has hit on 78 of those efforts for a tremendous accuracy mark of 72.8 per cent.

Trailing Sewell in averages is Dick Whitis of Lenoir Rhyne with 22.5 points per contest for 10 games. Don King of Appalachian is third with a 21.8 average and Eddie Burke of Elon rounds out the 20-point-plus performers with a 20.2 average.

Whitis is No. 1 in total points scored with 225; King is second with 216.

Joe Ladd of Lenoir Rhyne trails Sewell in shooting accuracy with a 57.9 percentage.

Charlie Adams of East Carolina has hit 22 of 24 attempts from the free throw line for a 92 per cent figure in that department. Bill Reese of Lenoir Rhyne trails Sewell with 34 for 91.2 per cent. Tony Carr terra of Elon tops the rebounders with an average of 14.4 per game. Jack Frauson of Western Carolina is second with a 13.1 average.

Roque Maravilla Meeting Sonny Ray Tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — Roque Maravilla of Boise, Idaho, a 22-year-old light heavyweight with 18 knockouts to his credit, tonight makes his national TV boxing debut against the No. 5 contender, Sonny Ray.

Ray, a 23-year-old counter-puncher and body-pummeller who came up through Chicago's small clubs, has won 8 of his last 9 bouts and is a 2-1 favorite.

In his last outing Nov. 14, Ray made an impressive but losing battle with the No. 1 rated contender, Tony Anthony, in Madison Square Garden. He also is the only fighter ever to defeat Jesse Bowdry, doing it three times.

Maravilla lost two of five starts in 1958, including a defeat by Eddie Cotton in his last time out, Dec. 11, in Boise. Cotton is among Ray's victims. Ray has a 19-6-5 record, including 7 knockouts.

Maravilla has 18 knockouts in a 29-4-2 record.

Soon To Start On New Stadium

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Dodgers are going to break ground within a month on their new baseball stadium in Chavez Ravine.

The State Supreme Court gave the go ahead to owner Walter O'Malley Tuesday when it unanimously ruled his contract with the city of Los Angeles for the Chavez Ravine site is valid.

O'Malley called the decision "the first shutout of the season."

The high court's ruling was in a taxpayer's suit brought by attorney Phil Silver. His suit challenged the transfer of the land to the Dodgers because a clause in the deed by which the city obtained the property from the federal government stipulated it be used for public purposes.

Silver said he will appeal to the United States Supreme Court for a review, but he admitted the highest court might not entertain his petition on the ground it does not have jurisdiction.

"If the U. S. Supreme Court turns me down for a hearing, then I guess O'Malley has won and can build in Chavez Ravine," said Silver.

City Atty. Roger Arnebergh said he can envision nothing that would block plans for the stadium now. He said the Dodgers can petition now to have the property rezoned.

Blinded Popular Singer Adapted Braille To Music

By DICK SINNOTT

BOSTON, Mass. (AP) — Her name was Bede Best and when she sang with Joe Rines' orchestra at the St. Regis Hotel in New York 25 years ago, young men would stop, look, listen and sigh. A petite brunette, she could belt out a song like a Louisville slugger. Her favorites were "I Only Have Eyes for You" and "With My Eyes Wide Open."

But these tunes belied the tragedy in her heart. For in 1934 Bede Best was going blind. One eye was sightless, the other had 40 per cent vision. Eventually, doctors said, she would live in a world of darkness.

Later she sang with Carl Ravazza's orchestra, but the band business soon became too difficult. There was always the fear she would stumble and fall as she made her way through a clutter of instruments en route to a microphone.

An offer came from "Al Pierce and His Gang" and Bede found a niche in radio. Then came the Emory Deutch Variety Show, but her sight continued to fail her.

It was time to return home to Boston and here she made her way as a pianist at local night spots. She married, had a son, and for a while Bede, now Mrs. Elizabeth U. Walker, found happiness.

But misfortune shadowed her. Her husband died, her mother became an invalid and Bede's sight sank to five per cent. A corneal transplant operation was unsuccessful.

Bede began learning Braille, the system of raised dots on paper that which enables the blind to read by touch. As she mastered the system she discovered how cumbersome it was for the sightless and how difficult it must be for those who wanted to compose or play popular music.

She appealed to Lawrence Berk, who had played piano with the Rines group, and now is director of the Berklee School of Music. The two decided to work on a method of simplifying the teaching of popular music and jazz to the blind.

They developed new symbols they say can easily be learned by anyone who has mastered Braille. The symbols, using the Braille cell system, give the melody line, the chords and time values simultaneously.

The blind person who has memorized his piano keyboard thus is able to "read" the corresponding Braille symbols for the notes that comprise the tune and can also memorize the chords which provide the accompanying harmony.

Students using Braille to learn music composition often had to use two 9x13 inch sheets to learn a few bars of music. It required 15 sheets to learn a chorus. The sightless attempting such a chore often would become discouraged, lose interest, give up in despair.

Bede and Berk worked out a system that boiled down an entire song to one sheet. It features new principles of harmony and encourages improvisation.

Their system will become part of the curriculum at Berklee next September. It will be offered to the blind at reasonable tuition rates. Students in the class will be encouraged to become teachers themselves.

And at the head of the class—a Berklee instructor—will be Mrs. Walker, who as Bede Best lost her sight, but never her courage.

Soviet Affairs Advisor To Talk

Barrett M. Reed, Soviet Affairs Advisor, Office of Plans, United States Information Agency, will discuss at East Carolina College tonight the literary, social, and political implications of Boris Pasternak's novel "Dr. Zhivago."

The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Austin auditorium and will be open to the public.

The novel is an outstanding work by the Russian writer who won the Nobel Prize for Literature, first accepted it, and then refused it. "Dr. Zhivago", now being widely read outside of Russia, is at present at the top of best-seller lists in this country.

Reed, a foreign service officer for the past ten years, is regarded as extremely well informed on Soviet Affairs. He has acted as intelligence research analyst, Soviet Affairs, Department of State, and as third secretary of the U. S. Embassy in Moscow. In 1955 he became associated with the Office of Plans, USIA, in which he now serves as Advisor on Soviet Affairs.

President John D. Messick of East Carolina College will act as moderator at Wednesday's meeting, according to plans announced by Dr. George A. Douglas of the faculty, who is in charge of arrangements for Mr. Reed's visit to the campus.

Lost Control Of Car, Overtakes

A 75-year-old Negro man lost control of his 1953 automobile last night at the intersection of Grand and Dickinson Avenues and ran into the guy wire of a utilities pole, turning the auto over.

Elijah Harris, of Rt. 4, Box 234, Greenville, told police that an approaching car's headlights blinded him momentarily, causing him to lose control of the car. Harris' car was damaged approximately $400. There was no damage to the pole.

Julie Newman Is Making Her TV Debut On Sunday

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — "Men," says Julie Newman, "have much greater imaginations than we have beauty—bless their hearts."

A man would have to have quite an imagination indeed to outdo the beauty of Miss Newman, an actress of curvaceous pulchritude who currently is playing on Broadway in "The Marriage-Go-Round."

Next Sunday she makes her television debut on "Omnibus" in a satiric comedy on Hollywood life written by S. J. Perelman and entitled "Malice in Wonderland."

"I play an actress, an extra-type girl who's a little larger than life and overwhelms her blind date, a psychiatrist played by Keenan Wynn," said Miss Newman. "In a way it's the part of a Hollywood sex-goddess."

Why is it, a fellow asked her, that the movies have developed quite a few "sex goddess" types and television has not developed even one?

"Sex has a lot to do with lights," said Miss Newman. Black is not a color that expresses sex. On television you simply black and white—most of the time. For instance, I'm wearing black today. If I wanted to convey an impression of sexiness on anyone I'd have worn beige."

She was doing mighty well in black, the man said.

"Not that I'm aware of," she replied. "Maybe when color sets are in more general use television finally will develop a sex-goddess."

For the Sunday "Omnibus," Perelman fashioned three of his short stories into a comic satire. The production will be directed by James Lee.

"The Twentieth Century" begins a two-part series on juvenile delinquency Sunday that traces the story of a typical delinquent and new rehabilitation effort being undertaken in New Jersey.

Graham's Eyes Undergo Tests

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham was undergoing further tests today as Mayo Clinic specialists studied the serious eye ailment that brought an abrupt halt to the churchman's Southern tour.

The survey included a general physical examination to determine possible cause of a ruptured blood vessel behind the retina, which has cut Graham's vision 50 per cent in the left eye. He said it causes no pain.

An early diagnosis by the evangelist's doctor father-in-law, Dr. Nelson Bell, Montreat, N. C., called the malady both rare and serious. Dr. Bell said the condition had arisen from excessive work.

Grady Wilson, Graham associate who accompanied him here, said no report was expected before Friday.

Resuming Mass Treason Trials

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's mass treason trial of opponents of the government's white supremacy policy gets under way again Jan. 19.

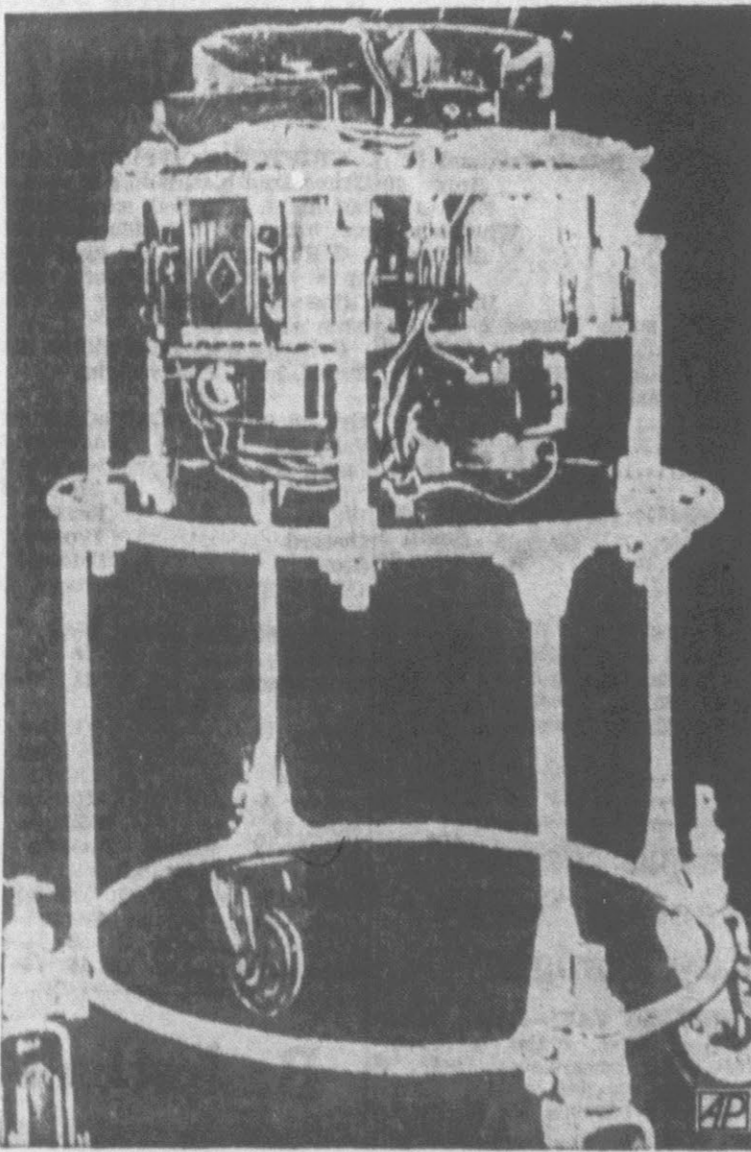

After more than two years of preparation, 30 of the original 156 defendants will be in the dock next Monday. Another 61 will go on trial April 20. Charges against the remaining 65 have been dropped.

All were arrested in December 1956. They still have had no chance to enter pleas to an indictment charging them with conspiring to overthrow the government by violence.

An important element of the government's case is the "Freedom Charter" adopted at a "Congress of the People" organized in June 1955 by the African National Congress and other nonwhite political organizations.

The "Freedom Charter" demands equal rights for all races, nationalization of South Africa's mineral wealth, banks and "monopoly industry," repeal of discriminatory laws, maintenance of world peace, and independence for all peoples of Africa.

On One Side, Ohio Laws; On The Other, The Amish

By PHIL GUNBY COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — On one side are Ohio's school officials, armed with state law. On the other are the Amish — a soil-tilling religious sect that came to Ohio from Pennsylvania almost 150 years ago — using the Bible as their shield. In the middle are the Amish youngsters, about whom the controversy rages. Schools and how long the youngsters go to school are the primary points of contention. State and county officials have inspected some of the Amish schools and claim they are not up to minimum Ohio standards. The state board of education has a resolution that puts the responsibility for enforcing state standards squarely on local superintendents. By a 19-2 vote, the board Monday called on the State Department of Education to give all possible assistance to local authorities in such enforcement.

And at Kenton in Hardin County, the county board of education has gone to Common Pleas Court to try closing two Amish schools for allegedly failing to meet minimum standards. School Supt. Frank Blackburn says an investigation of two Amish grade schools near Kenton disclosed that a number of state-prescribed courses are not being taught, and that three of the four teachers have only gone through the eighth grade. The Amish generally follow a policy of passive resistance, but in this case they found a champion in E. Guy Hammond, a 76-year-old semiretired attorney from Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. "I don't like to see people pushed around," says Hammond.

who was once president of a Cuyahoga Falls district of the reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints (Mormon). He filed a motion to strike out most of the county school board's contentions. It was overruled by Judge Arthur D. Tudor, who said the two questions involved in the Hardin County case are (1) do the Amish schools comply with state educational standards, and (2) what is their (the Amish) recourse in law. Hammond has 10 days to appeal. He did not appear in court. Attorney Carlos Faulkner, acting for the school board, said the only thing sought is an injunction against the Amish operating the schools as they do now. Two more Amish schools — in Holmes and Tuscarawas counties — were ruled to be below state standards at Monday's meeting of the state board of education. The sect originated in Switzerland almost three centuries ago when the Mennonite church's doctrine became too liberal for Jacob Amman. He established the Amish faction in 1693. Many of the Amish came to North America in the early 1700s. Ten children are not uncommon in an Amish family and most modern devices — including cars and electricity — are not used. Each church group is independent from the others and they differ to a considerable extent.

Article On Opera By East Carolina Faculty Member Published By Guild

George E. Perry, faculty member of the department of music at East Carolina College, contributed an article "Manon Lescaut: The Beginning of a Career" to the January 12 issue of "Opera News," the publication of the Metropolitan Opera Guild of New York. The issue deals mainly with Puccini and his opera "Manon Lescaut," which will be presented Saturday afternoon, January 17, at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and in a nation-wide broadcast over the CBS network. Mr. Perry's article discusses "Manon Lescaut" as "the link between Puccini's earlier and later styles" and describes the opera as "perhaps the richest in inspiration of all his works." Emphasizing Puccini's treatment of Manon, Mr. Perry states that the opera "begins the series of beautifully drawn heroines with their great capacity for love — Mimì, Tosca, Cio-Cio-San." An organist and pianist, Mr. Perry has been heard by audiences at the East Carolina College and in many towns of the state. As a music critic, he has for several years contributed to the Greenville Daily Reflector articles on city and campus music events.

Dr. Kathleen Stokes, faculty member of the department of social studies at East Carolina College, will discuss "The Middle East in International Affairs" at a meeting of the Kinston Branch of the American Association of University Women Tuesday, January 20. Arrangements for the meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. in the USO Building, Kinston, are being made by Mrs. Philip Merrill of Kinston, chairman of the International Relations Study Group of the Kinston AAUW. Dr. Stokes's discussion will be illustrated with slides shown by Dr. Kathleen E. Dunlop, also of the East Carolina social studies department. Dr. Dunlop, who studied in Turkey, Syria, Lebanon, Egypt, and other countries of the Middle East during 1957, will comment on countries she visited during this time.

Congressmen Criticize Killings By Castro

WASHINGTON (AP)—New congressional criticism was raised today against the wave of executions by Cuba's new revolutionary government. The new regime, apparently taken aback by the storm of criticism provoked in the United States and elsewhere by the firing squad shootings, announced Tuesday night the executions were being suspended. No date for their resumption was given. But a government spokesman said that when they are, newsmen as well as the general public will have the opportunity to watch the proceedings from military trial to execution. One House member said that if the executions continue without formal trials the regime of rebel chief Fidel Castro stands to "forfeit the respect of the whole Hemisphere." Castro, in a Havana speech Tuesday defended the firing squad sentences imposed on Cubans convicted of war crimes by military tribunals. He said the executions were ordered only for those whose death "is necessary to purify the nation." The number of those executed was estimated unofficially at 150. "It is regrettable that Castro is executing these gentlemen without real trials," said Sen. Homer Capehart (R-Ind), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and its Latin American Affairs subcommittee, told a reporter: "These (executions) appear to be the actions of a dictator or someone demanding revenge. It is a poor way to try to win support and confidence of the public." Another member of the same subcommittee, Sen. George Aiken (R-Vt.), said if the new regime continues widespread executions it "can lose a great deal of public support." Aiken said he was told on a visit to Cuba last year that the Batista government had engaged in torture and cruelties "and I suppose it's human nature to want to get even." Nevertheless, Aiken said, Castro should carry out what Aiken termed his public pledges for fair trials of political opponents. Rep. Charles O. Porter (D-Ore.), a specialist in Latin American affairs, said that considering the number of people involved in the revolution he doesn't regard the executions as a "blood bath"—a term used Monday by Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.). However, Porter added: "The whole purpose of the revolution is gainsaid if they have wholesale shootings without trials. They will forfeit the respect of the whole hemisphere." In his Havana speech, Castro, obviously stung by U.S. criticism of the shootings, accused the U.S. press of fault finding and asked: "Why didn't they attack when the Batista government was executing people en masse?" Earlier, Roberto Agramonte, Cuba's new foreign minister, also defended the death sentences imposed on Batista supporters convicted of war crimes by military tribunals. "If the military tribunals do not do what they are doing now, moving quickly to assure fast justice, the families of those who were murdered and tortured would take justice into their own hands and many innocent would fall with the accused." Rep. Porter took a somewhat similar view. "I'm sure the government is trying to follow due process of law," Porter told a reporter. "However, Castro has a situation which is pretty hard to control. There are a lot of people with pretty strong feelings." Porter suggested that the Inter-American Bar Assn. step in and supply the new government with eminent Latin American and North American jurists to advise in setting up a judicial system. A call for formal trials also was voiced by Chairman Thomas E. Morgan (D-Pa.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. "I can see that in the heat of a revolution, people could go on a killing rampage," Morgan said. "But I think that if they are going to do things right the new government ought to stop this lawless killing immediately and give everyone a fair trial with justice."

Estimating Petroleum Needs Risky Business

By SAM DAWSON NEW YORK (AP) — Guessing how much oil the world is going to use in any particular period is a highly specialized job in the petroleum industry. Getting crude oil and its products to the point of demand on time is another. Both can affect your pocketbook. And politics and weather can influence both. Examples: 1. Closing of the Suez Canal due to international politics disrupted the normal flow of Mid East oil to western Europe. The result was a busy workout for U. S. oil producers, followed by higher prices for American consumers. 2. Unusually bitter weather of late in many parts of this nation is leading to a rise in fuel oil prices in some places and prospects of the same elsewhere. 3. Threats of an upcoming strike against some oil companies shortly also could mean some shortages, higher prices some places. Every day about 700 million gallons of oil products are delivered to consumers in the world this side the Iron Curtain. To get it to them the oil companies first take some educated guesses as to where the demand will be, and how much in each spot. Then they turn to fleets of ocean tankers, river barges, motor tank trucks, railroad tank cars, and pipelines. The last, being largely invisible, go mostly unnoticed in the United States. And, too, have they run a poor second to a much more extensive pipeline system, the 500,000 miles of natural gas lines. But oil pipelines continue to grow. Jersey Standard Oil reports in the forthcoming issue of its magazine, The Lamp. It notes particularly the significant increase in the number of pumping stations run by remote control. Pipelines themselves are going automatic. Volume of crude oil flowing from the well to the main pipelines can be measured automatically by meters. And pipelines are growing larger in diameter as well as in length. This allows control stations to be built as far as 200 miles apart, as against the former maximum of 50 miles. Five million barrels of crude oil and oil products now pour each day into thousands of separate, slow-moving streams, part of a network that covers 190,000 miles in this country.

They carry 77 per cent of the crude oil produced in the United States and 19 per cent of the refined products sold. Total ton-miles (a ton-mile is one ton of oil transported one mile) now account for around 17 per cent of all the freight hauled between U. S. cities. Oil product lines were slow growers. Until 1930 the pipelines carried crude oil almost exclusively. Then some short lines were built to carry products. By 1940 such lines were extended to carry about 6 per cent of the total supply. Since the war there has been rapid extension of this form of transportation. They are now found in most large industrial areas. The products range from bulk oil to fuel a transatlantic liner, to gasoline for the motorist, to a highly specialized lubricant used in a laboratory.

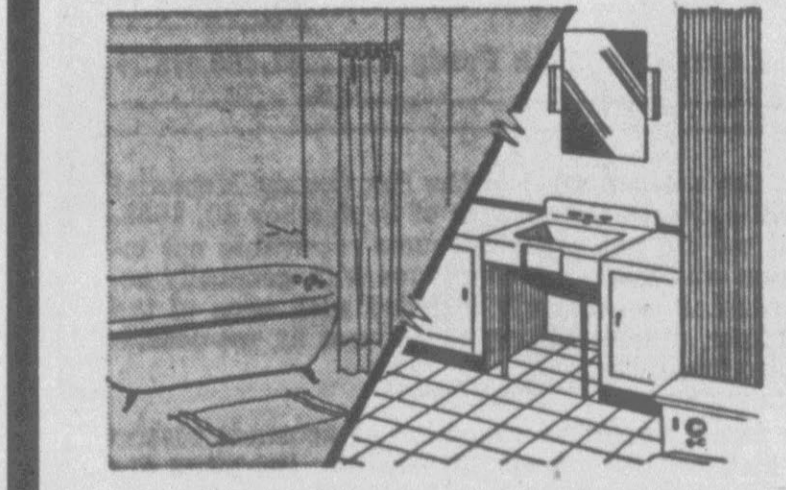

Writes Study Of Grass Roots Law

"Grass-roots International Law," a paper by Dr. John M. Howell, is included in "Proceedings of the American Society of International Law, 1958" and through reprints has just been made available to readers here. Dr. Howell was among principal speakers last April in Washington, D.C., at the Fifty-Second Annual Meeting of the Society, at which he presented the paper. Dr. Howell's study of "grass-roots" international law deals with the work during 1954 and 1955 of a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which held hearings in ten cities throughout this country. The purpose of the hearings was to get opinion from the general public on revision of the United Nations Charter.

Modern KOHLER Plumbing Fixtures Add Utility & Beauty To Your Home

BEFORE AND AFTER: Before remodeling, the bathroom looked old, without comfort or convenience. The old-style tub was difficult to get into, difficult to clean under and around. Little storage room was available.

WHEN REMODELED:—the same bathroom takes on an entirely new look. A new vanity, countertop lavatory, bathtub-shower combination, new tile, etc.—all stress comfort, convenience and ease-of-up-keep.

To make a small bathroom seem larger, color can help. Replace white fixtures with new color fixtures that blend with the rest of the room. Pastel colors will make the room look larger and brighter. An over-sized wall mirror above the lavatory seems to double the room size while providing extra convenience for grooming.

THE 8TH CIRCLE A MASTER MYSTERY BY STANLEY ELLIN

© Copyright, 1958, by Stanley Ellin; reprinted by permission of the novel's publisher, Random House; distributed by King Features Syndicate.

At noon on Thanksgiving Day, Murray Kirk was in the bathtub, immersed both in Gulliver's Travels and in water so hot that it was an exquisite agony to wiggle a toe in it. When the phone rang he tried to close his ears to it, then finally heaved himself from the tub and went into the bedroom to answer, dripping as he went.

The girl at the switchboard said: "I'm sorry, Mr. Kirk. I know you didn't want any calls put through today, but this gentleman's been at it since nine o'clock, and I finally had to tell him I'd see if you were in. Are you?"

"Who's the gentleman?"

"It's a Mr. Ralph Harlingen. He said you'd know him from the Rector Street office."

The name was a familiar one, because the Harlingen office was an old client. It was one of those overgrown law firms around Wall Street when ten senior partners and twenty juniors politely argued corporation cases for lush fees. The Comby-Kirk agency had handled its executive files for a long time.

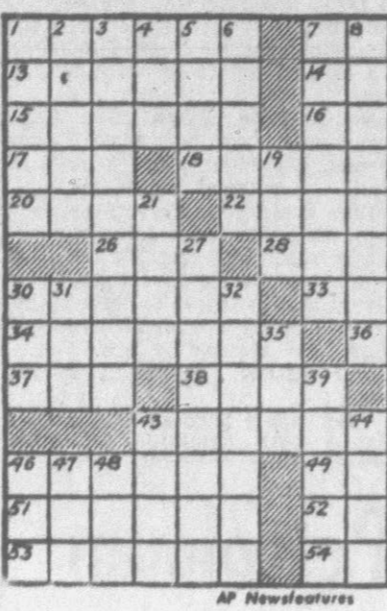

But Ralph Harlingen was one of the lowest juniors there, very small fry, indeed, and his only distinction, as far as Murray knew, came from the fact that his father was head man of the outfit. Murray had met him a few times

New York Faces Increased Taxes

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New York State will raise its gasoline tax by two cents a gallon within a few weeks. It also may increase the income tax and raise its tax on cigarettes.

That was the outlook today as the Legislature's Republican high command moved swiftly to carry out a call by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller for higher taxes to balance a record budget of nearly two billion dollars.

After weeks of hinging, Rockefeller disclosed Monday night he had decided the gasoline tax must be increased to six cents a gallon from four.

He had said previously there would be a 230-million-dollar deficit unless additional revenues were found.

He disclosed at a news conference that he also was considering: 1. A wide variety of ways of increasing the yield from the income tax — including a general boost in the tax rate, changes in exemption and a payroll withholding plan. 2. Either a one-cent or two-cent increase in the cigarette tax, now three cents a package.

Emergency Steps Avert Food Riot

NEW DELHI (AP) — Emergency government action today ended the danger of food riots in New Delhi.

The government opened shops selling American wheat and flour at subsidized prices after a week of shortage. Prices on the open market, which had climbed 25 per cent in a month, promptly dipped.

of investigation to be done, a lot of legwork. And when you're without a staff of any sort, there's just no way to cope. That's where you come in."

"Whoa," said Murray. "I'm not in yet."

Harlingen looked startled. "But I thought—"

"I know. But from my angle there are things about this kind of case I don't like."

"Oh, look. It's a plain and simple indictment for perjury in the first."

"Just how plain and simple?"

"Well, Lundeen's a patrolman, a plainclothes man attached to the Vice Squad. Some time ago he arrested a man named Schrade, Eddie Schrade, for bookmaking. Then, when the Wykoff scandal broke, Schrade was called before the grand jury where he said his arrest was a fake; he was just a stand-in for the real culprit, an Ira Miller, one of Wykoff's big shots."

"It takes two witnesses to make a perjury case."

"Miller's the other one. He told the grand jury he paid Lundeen a thousand dollars to arrest Schrade in his place, and when Lundeen wouldn't recant his testimony he was indicted. Of course, Miller and Schrade are the sort of hoodlums who'd swear their own mother into the electric chair. The whole thing smells of frame-up a mile away."

No Boyish Game, Gun Was Loaded

DETROIT, Mich. (AP) — Waitress Janet Bundy thought the little boy was playing when he slammed a gun on the restaurant counter and demanded money Monday night.

"I grabbed for the gun," said Miss Bundy, 20, of Detroit. "I thought it was a toy. But the boy grabbed it back first and fired a shot into the floor."

Now realizing it was the real thing, she grappled with the boy when he came around the counter.

"He broke away and ran out of the store swearing and cursing," she said.

She described the would-be robber as about 12 years old. He had two companions between 12 and 14 who fled with him.

Police recovered a .38 caliber bullet from the restaurant floor.

Most catfish are useful scavengers who help keep waters clean by lingering at the bottom and devouring the foul food dropped by fish who stay at the top of the stream or pool.
