Look To Brody's First For Your 1959 Fashions

NEW LOOK FROM NEW YORK—Graceful, wearable clothes are back in force in New York spring fashion collections. Sketched are typical examples of the new, natural silhouette from leading designers: Edward Abbott's kimono-sleeve shirt-waist dress; Nettie Rosenstein's flattering, full-skirted dress; Monte-Sano's checked suit with easy short jacket; Ben Gershel's low-necked, short-sleeved coat; Townley's cardigan suit and Talmack's gay cocktail dress.

Feminine Figure Back In Style

By DOROTHY ROE
Designers throughout the world are rediscovering the natural shape of the feminine figure this spring — and there may well be dancing in the streets.

There's a return to the well-loved classics in daytime dress as 1959 fashions take shape. On both sides of the Atlantic and all the way across America the trend is toward normal or slightly lifted waistlines, easy jackets, skirt with room enough for movement and a revival of such long-standing favorites as the shirtwaist dress, the coat dress, the full-skirted cocktail dress and even the fitted suit.

New York designers, previewing Eastern fashions for the visiting press, make it clear that they are tired of distorted silhouettes and that they have heeded public demands for clothes that are flattering, wearable and don't go out of style after one season.

No More Sacks
There is hardly a hint of the recent fashion fads in the new spring collections. Last year's sack dress is gone if not forgotten, with only a few die-hards among the designers showing unbelted styles. Also departed is the trapeze, while the Empire silhouette has been so modified as to be unobjectionable to the severest critic. There are many lifted waistlines, it's true, but in each case the natural waistline also is defined.

Suits have slender but carefully shaped skirts, brief, easy jackets and skirt belts at the normal waistline. There are even a few classic fitted styles, and a scattering of suits with three-quarter length loose jackets, known as walking suits.

Hemlines cover the knees and necklines grow more revealing. The low-necked, short-sleeved suit is a top fashion of the season. Collars grow bigger and so do sleeves, giving a look of more width above the waist.

Shirtwaist Dresses
There are plenty of full skirts in the new collections, for the benefit of women whose figures need a little skillful camouflage. Most popular full-skirted fashion is the classic shirtwaist dress, the all-American favorite, which is shown in sheer fabrics for late-day wear as well as in light wools and cottons for daytime occasions.

Costs for the most part are loose and enveloping, easy to slip on over suits or full-skirted dresses.

There's a wider, trimmer look in shoulders, though no return to the padded football shoulders of World War II. But all women need not look round-shouldered to be in fashion this spring.

Belt manufacturers are happy again, as belts, sashes and cummerbunds are much in evidence on costumes for all occasions.

Wide, contoured leather belts are back with a bang, as are almost all other versions — and they are worn at the natural waistline.

The dress-and-jacket costume again is a favorite in all collections, with the jacket short and unbuttoned as a rule, the dress slender and belted at the normal waistline.

It's a season when women can go shopping without fear, and be sure of finding the kind of clothes that won't cause hysteria among the onlookers.

'Art And Literature' Is Subject Of Program

"Art and Literature" was the subject Dr. Edgar Hirschberg of East Carolina College used for the program of the Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. James Worsley with Mrs. N. C. Brooks and Mrs. K. T. Futrelle as assisting hostesses.

For the illustrated talk Dr. Hirschberg used copies of the Art Magazine "Horizon" for background material for several topics discussed. This magazine was highly recommended to the appreciative group after a question and answer period.

The president, Mrs. R. R. Rogers, presided over the business session. Mrs. A. A. Hines reported on the Christmas project. Members were asked to consider plans for a tour of Tryon Palace in the Spring.

In closing, a New Year's wish was read by Mrs. Rogers.

Mrs. Branscom Bridge Hostess

Mrs. Wayne Branscom was hostess on Wednesday night to members of her bridge club and other guests at her home in Forest Acres. Three tables were placed for the games in the living room where seasonal decorations were used.

During the games the hostess passed Cokes and snacks and later in the evening strawberry shortcake with ice cream and coffee was served.

Mrs. Edwin Reeves was presented the prize for highest score, second high went to Mrs. Carl Whitlock and the consolation to Mrs. Richard Arnold. Completing the guest list were Mesdames Fray Schutte, Gay Gnagey, Joseph House, and from Kingston Mesdames W. H. Spivey, W. R. Growthers, B. M. Miller, Vernon Ball, Bill Rose.

Mt. Pleasant HD Club Has Meet

Mrs. J. K. Hathaway and Mrs. P. A. McLawhorn were hostesses at the January meeting of the Mt. Pleasant Home Demonstration Club. Mrs. Hathaway presided and Mrs. McLawhorn led the devotional.

Leader reports were given by Mrs. J. R. Gowans and Mrs. C. H. Hagan on Gardens and Home Management, respectively.

Mrs. Helen Mohan, assistant Home Economics Agent, led in a "Study of the Yearbook" by first of all explaining the meaning of the club emblem. The new yearbook has been reviewed.

A social hour followed the conclusion of the demonstration and refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Church Women Hold Session

FOUNTAIN — The December meeting of the Women of the Fountain Presbyterian Church was held in the church following prayer meeting on Tuesday night.

Mrs. Hardy Johnson conducted the Bible Study on "A Loving Church." The program was concluded with the reading of selection, "Recieve For A Happy New Year."

During the business meeting, the members voted to invite the Women of Groupe 11 to meet in the Fountain Church in January, 1960 for the annual conference.

The meeting was adjourned with the praying of The Lord's Prayer.

Surprise Party

GRIFTON—On Monday night Mrs. M. B. Hodges entertained at a surprise birthday party for her husband at their home on Highland Drive.

The home for the evening was decorated throughout in a pink and green color note. In the living room a gift epergne filled with pink flowers and fruit was noted. In the dining room the table was overlaid with a pale pink satin cloth; at one end the silver punch bowl was placed and at an opposite corner a silver epergne with lavender and pink pom poms, fern and bunches of grapes. The birthday cake with the decorations of pink and green was cut and served by Mrs. W. I. Bisette. Mrs. L. L. Mewborn poured punch and guests served themselves nuts and mints.

Bridge was played at five tables after the refreshment hour and Mrs. Robert Mewborn and Mark Phillips were given high score prizes. Guests included Mrs. Drew Harper Jr., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hodges, Mr. Hodges' sister, Mrs. Robert Exum of Snow Hill, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Quinerly, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Gower, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Bisette, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Mewborn, Mrs. Thurman Williams, Mrs. Robert Mewborn, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Cobb, and Mr. Bill Daws.

Miss Cooper Talks To Club

BETHEL—Mrs. A. L. Whitley and Mrs. Carey Hammond were joint hostesses to the Book Exchange Club Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Whitley on Pitt Street with 16 members and Miss Carolyn Cooper, as a guest, present.

Mrs. J. R. Highsmith called the meeting to order and Mrs. W. C. House called the roll and read the minutes.

At the end of the business session the hostesses served cherry tarts topped with cream, toasted nuts and hot coffee.

Mrs. Whitley introduced Miss Cooper as guest speaker for the occasion. Miss Cooper's topic was "Great Men and Women of the Past." Five of these were discussed. They were Alexander Graham Bell, scientist and inventor, born in Edinburg in the year 1847; Miss Jane Adams, born in Cedarville, Ill. in 1860 (she was a social worker, writer and lecturer); Thomas A. Edison, electrician, born in Milan, Ohio in 1847; Subb, who played an important part in drugs; and Stephen Girard, an American philanthropist, who was born near Bordeaux, France, in 1750.

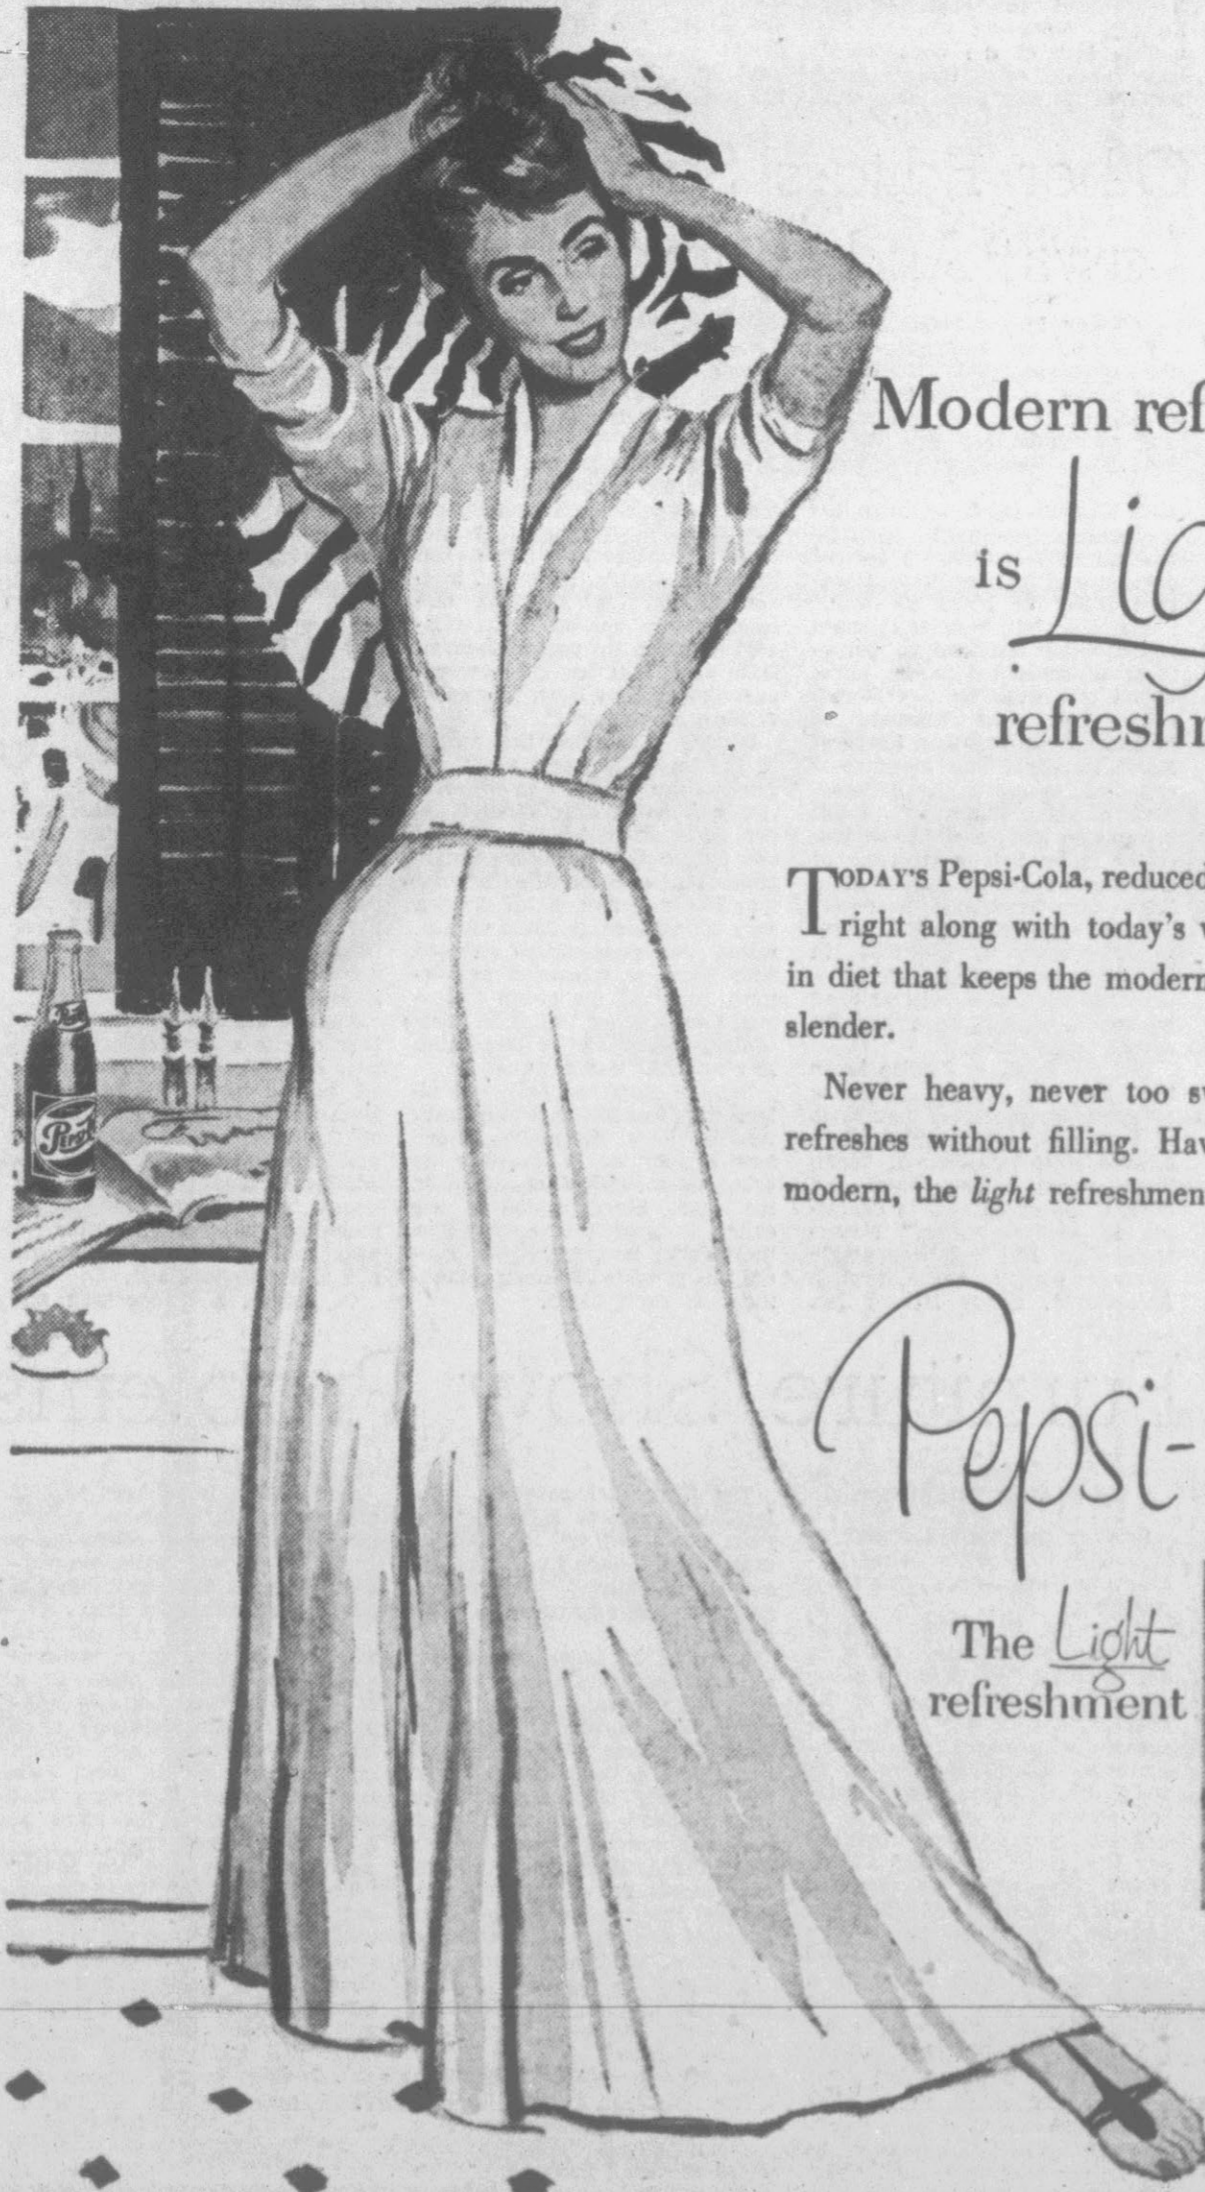

Book Club Has Evening Meet

GRIFTON — The Grifton Book Club met with Mrs. Thurman Williams Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Richard Nelson. Spring flowers decorated the living room where the meeting took place. Mrs. G. L. Tucker presided at the business hour.

Mrs. Robert Mewborn spoke for the program committee and a continuation of personalities in the world of Religion, Education, Science, Stage and Television Sports, Architecture, Politics. Writing will be the study for the coming year. After the business session guests were invited into the dining room for coffee, fruit cake and whipped cream. Attending were Miss Bert Johnson, Mesdames Tucker, Mewborn, Alton Chapman, Bryan Davis, H. P. Quinerly, Tom Gower, C. R. Cobb.

EYE A PEE!

'Tis said that two pieces of cucumber peel can give your eyes a great lift, especially if they are tired from overwork or lack of sleep. Models peel off two slices of the cucumber skin large enough to cover the eyes fully. They lie down with the peel on their eyes for five minutes, and claim that the peel can change a dim view into a clear-eyed one.

—And What About Our River Port?

Assertion by the State Ports Authority that an inland port at Fayetteville would fit in nicely with its plans for port development brings up an important question:

What about other inland ports in the Eastern part of the state?

In Fayetteville's case the Ports Authority reportedly has told local officials to have a survey made of a proposed port site, and if the Authority approves the construction of the port.

Is it the plan of the State Ports Authority now to build a series of inland ports to use as feeder points for its deep water operations at Morehead City and Wilmington? Or is Fayetteville receiving special treatment from the Ports Authority in preference to other localities of this section of the state which already have port facilities of some sort.

The Reflector continues to hold the view it has previously expressed that small inland ports in Eastern North Carolina would be important assets to build the state's two deep water ports. We question, however, whether the Ports Authority should undertake to build inland ports entirely with state funds. It might prove far more advantageous to North Carolina if state funds to be made available for inland ports are appropriated on some sort of matching basis whereby eligible cities and counties interested in developing port facilities might receive state help if they put local funds into such a project.

Greenville and Pitt County have an inland port on Hardee's Creek operated for a brief period during the early '40s. The first boat came to the port with cargo in October, 1940, but because of the shortage of shipping during World War II operations ceased in 1942 and the port has been inactive since that time.

The authorized 14 foot channel from Washington to Hardee's Creek gradually filled through the years of inactivity and according to the U. S. Corps of Engineers the controlling depth along this part of the river in January of last year was only 7.1 feet at mean low water. However, no later than August the district engineer's office in Wilmington gave assurance to Congressman Herbert Bonner that if commitments for sufficient volume of commerce over the Tar are received, the office would be glad to request maintenance funds for restoring the channel to its proper depth.

In the interest of furthering the economic development of this area through the use of water transportation, the Tar River Ports Authority and the governing boards of Greenville and Pitt County should look into this apparent new attitude to the State Ports Authority toward the development of inland ports.

If state funds are to be made available for the development of inland ports, Pitt County should certainly make every effort to see that the inland port facilities it once enjoyed are again activated.

Claims Overlap For Speakership

By LYNN NISBET

SPEAKERS — It is not yet certain whether Addison Hewlett of New Hanover or Carl Venters of Onslow will be Speaker of 1959 House of Representatives. Each of the candidates and some of their most ardent supporters think they know, but since they have different opinions about it the public will have to wait for the Democratic caucus on the night of February 3 to be sure.

Overlapping claims of positive commitments from members total more than the entire membership of the House, including the four Republicans. Governor Hodges was asked at his latest news conference if he anticipated more than 120 Representatives, in view of these overlapping claims. "No," replied the Governor, "but if this means that they expect reapportionment membership in line with the constitution I would be in favor of it."

Discussion the other night about who had previously served as Speakers and where they came from sent your reporter to the library. Here is the record for the 20th century to date:

- 1901 — Walter Moore of Jackson.
- 1903 — Sam Gattis of Orange.
- 1905 — Owne Gulon of Craven.
- 1907 — E. J. Justice of Guilford.
- 1909 — A. W. Graham of Granville.
- 1911 — W. Carey Dowd of Mecklenburg.
- 1913 — George W. Connor of Wilson. Soon after the session adjourned Connor was made a Superior Court Judge, and for the special session in 1914 Walter (Pete) Murphy of Rowan was elected Speaker.
- 1915 — Emmett Woolen of Lenoir was elected Speaker. He was killed in an automobile accident very early in the session and Thomas C. (Tom) Bowie of Ashe was elected and presided over most of the session. This gave Governor Locke Craig the distinction of being the only chief executive in modern times to have four Speakers during his term.
- 1917 — Walter Murphy of Rowan. (Only man to be twice elected Speaker).
- 1919 — Dennis Brummitt of Granville.
- 1921 — Harry Grier of Iredell.
- 1923 — John G. Dawson of Lenoir.
- 1925 — Edgar W. Pharr of Mecklenburg.
- 1927 — R. T. (Dick) Fountain of Edgecombe.
- 1929 — A. H. (Sandy) Graham of Orange.
- 1931 — Willis Smith of Wake.
- 1933 — R. L. (Reg) Harris of Person.
- 1935 — Robert Grady Johnson of Fender.
- 1937 — R. Gregg Cherry of Gaston.
- 1939 — D. L. (Libby) Ward of Craven.
- 1941 — O. M. Mull of Cleveland.
- 1943 — John H. Kerr Jr., of Warren.
- 1945 — O. L. Richardson of Union.
- 1947 — Thomas J. Pearsall of Nash.
- 1949 — Kerr Craige Ramsay of Rowan.
- 1951 — W. Frank Taylor of Wayne.
- 1953 — Eugene T. Bost Jr., of Cabarrus.
- 1955 — Larry I. Moore of Wilson.

1957 — J. Kemp Doughton of Alleghany.

NOTES — It is interesting to note that recognized legislative leadership has come mostly from the smaller counties. Only four of the 31 Speakers of this century came from counties generally classes as big or metropolitan—two from Mecklenburg, one each from Guilford and Wake. Also for most of them the Speakership was the end of the road, so far as political prestige was concerned.

Gregg Cherry was the only Speaker to become Governor. Fountain and Graham moved up to Lieutenant Governor and tried but failed for the post. Graham served two terms as chairman of the highway commission. Harris also was elected Lieutenant Governor several years after he served as Speaker. George Connor went from the Superior bench to the Supreme Court. Dennis Brummitt was several times elected Attorney General, and Willis Smith was elected to the United States Senate.

Other ex-Speakers rendered valuable service in various capacities at the bar and in business. A number of them returned to the General Assembly as Representatives or Senators. The record would indicate, however, that so far as political prestige goes the House Speakership is the top of the stack rather than a stepping stone.

PURPOSE — A group of business men representing very substantial sources of State government revenue, belabored the pro and con arguments ament the proposed temporary news room being constructed on the east portico of the 120-year-old capitol building. All of them regretted necessity (?) for doing anything that would detract from the architectural beauty of the old building. The main question, however, was whether the capitol should be maintained as a historical shrine or a functional utility. There was unanimous agreement it could not be both.

FUNCTIONAL — Opinion was almost unanimous that until the State can provide another building with adequate facilities for the General Assembly, the present capitol should be adapted as nearly as possible to current needs. Nobody present could remember of his own knowledge but two or three oldsters recalled that older folks had told them years ago about complaints when central steam heating was installed to replace original fireplaces, when electricity was substituted for candle lights, and when the iron fence was removed from around Capitol Square. Several of those present could remember the furor occasioned when tree surgeons took out some of the growth on the capitol grounds.

Tryon Palace, first permanent capitol of North Carolina, is being restored as a historic shrine, but not for functional purposes. Maybe the State capitol at Raleigh, built nearly half a century after Tryon's palace was burned, should also be maintained as a shrine or a museum, if and only when it is no longer needed for functional activities of State government. Meantime, emphasis should be on utility rather than history or architectural perfection, in opinion of these business men who represent a lot of tax money.

Looking Ahead To The White House Meeting

Many Americans are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the conference Saturday between Russia's First Deputy Premier Mikoyan and President Eisenhower.

Does Mikoyan have any new concrete proposal from the Kremlin for settlement of the Berlin question? Will he provide further evidence that Soviet leaders are backing down from their ultimatum of November that the Western powers abandon Berlin or face the possibility of war?

While these questions remain unanswered until after the conference, there can be little doubt now that Mikoyan has access to the top policy planning in Moscow. One incident during his recent visit here has indicated as much.

Several days ago Mikoyan was asked about former Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov who was exiled some time ago to an insignificant post as ambassador to Outer Mongolia. Mikoyan said in response to the question that Molotov soon would receive a more responsible position although it would be one which would not involve the making of policy.

At mid-week, the Kremlin announced the Molotov would leave his Outer Mongolian post to become the Soviet Union's new ambassador to The Netherlands.

Whether this was part of a Soviet plan to impress the United States with smiling Mikoyan, or whether it was mere coincidence is a moot question. It lends credence to the suggestion that Mikoyan is in fact as well as in title the second in command in the Soviet Union.

It also suggests that he might well be carrying in his pocket some new proposal which will be placed before President Eisenhower when the two confer at the White House Saturday.

The High Cost Of 'Sentiment'

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The sentimental gesture of the House to reward Rep. Joseph Martin of Massachusetts—after he was booted out of his job as Republican leader—may cost the taxpayers up to $40,000 a year.

Leaders in Congress cost money. The salary of the 74-year-old Martin, like that of any other senator or representative, is $22,500 a year. Congress voted itself that pay in 1955. It has also voted itself various kinds of expense money.

But as leader of the House Republicans, which he had been for 20 years, Martin got some extras: A Cadillac, a chauffeur, and about $26,000 more for office help than is allowed the ordinary congressman.

He lost those extras last week when his fellow Republicans—apparently because they thought he was slowing up—bounced him as their leader and replaced him with Rep. Charles Halleck of Indiana. Halleck is 53.

The thought of Martin, with a reduced office staff and having to journey to work like an ordinary member of Congress, appeared too much for both Democrats and Republicans in the House. They voted Monday to give him back his extras.

Halleck, as the new Republican House leader, will, of course, also have a limousine, a chauffeur, and approximately $26,000 extra for additional office help.

But Martin and Halleck aren't the only Capitol leaders who get a car and chauffeur for themselves. Others who do are: Vice President Nixon, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack, House Clerk Ralph R. Roberts, House Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson, Republican Senate Leader Everett Dirksen, Senate Speaker F. W. (Tempore) Carl Hayden, Senate Secretary Felton Johnson, and Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Joseph C. Duke. Vice President Nixon and Speaker Rayburn get a salary of $35,000 each, plus $10,000 for expenses. While Nixon, as vice president, gets $101,000 a year for office expenses, Rayburn gets $53,000.

An ordinary House member gets $35,000 for office help, if there are fewer than 500,000 people in his district, and $40,000 if there are more than 500,000 in his district.

A House member also gets this extra expense money: $2.50 for office machinery like adding machines; free mailing privileges for ordinary letters; $400 for air mail and special delivery stamps; up to 3,000 minutes of long distance telephoning; 20,000 telegraph words free; $1,200 for stationery; plus $150 a month for the expense of having an office back in his home district.

This writer could not obtain a corresponding breakdown for members of the Senate on office expenses. A request for the information was turned down flatly at the Senate Appropriations Committee, at the Senate Disbursing Office, and by Senate Disbursing Office, and by Senate Secretary Johnston. I was told this was pretty much of a secret.

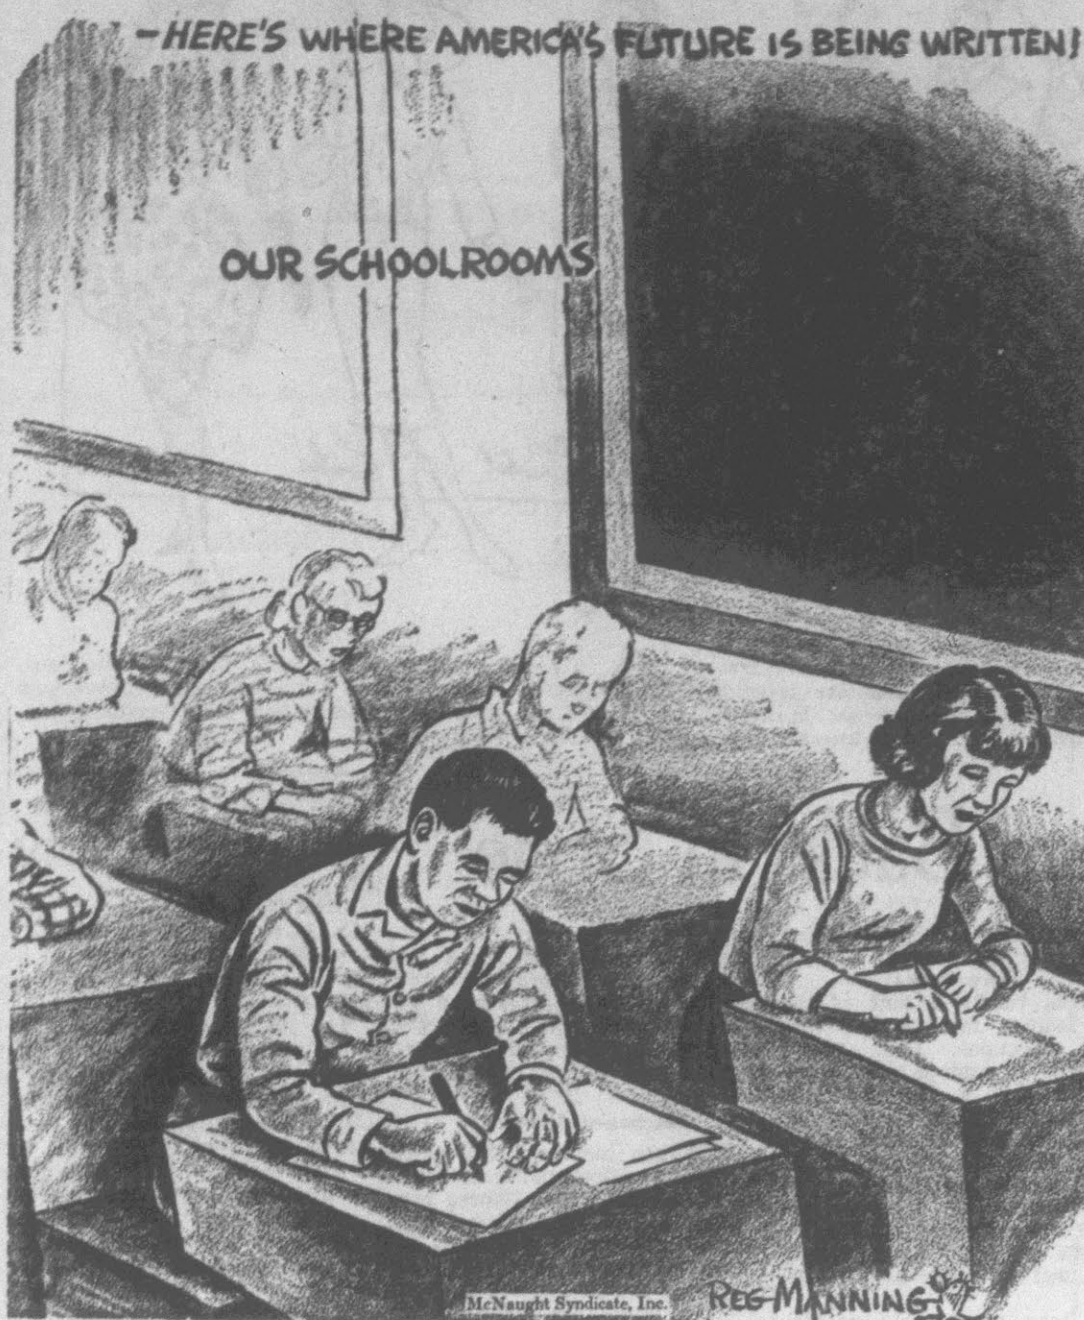

A protest that taxpayers' money was involved and they were entitled to the information got nowhere, Johnston is not a senator but a Senate employee.

But senators and representatives are allowed to deduct $3,000 a year from their $22,500 salary for personal living expenses because they have to maintain two homes: One here and one back in their own state.

Members of Congress can pay 7½ per cent of their salary into a pension fund. A member of either house who has served at least five years and reached age 62 can retire on a pension of $3,000 a year. One who has served 30 years can get a pension of $18,000.

Whatever benefits members of Congress get were voted by themselves. There has long been the

Awaiting Prized Honor

Apparently news of a Pitt County prisoner's complaint of a "fat back" diet while in the county jail found its way to Essex County officials in New Jersey.

An Associated Press story from Newark the other day said Essex County officials had decided to cut cake from the penitentiary menu.

Cake will no longer be available, the story said. Neither will any other kind of dessert.

The county told Warden Geoffrey Berrien that slicing off cake and things would save $11,000 a year.

Too bad local prisoners didn't know about the cake serving business in Essex County. No doubt some of the boys would have applied for transfers if news of it had come this way before it was abolished.

Tonight Pitt County's Outstanding Young Man of 1958 will receive the Jaycee's Distinguished Service Award.

The award will be presented at the club's annual Bosses Night banquet to be held at the Moose Lodge.

The winner of the coveted award doesn't know now that he is to receive it, because DSA winners are chosen by a secret committee.

Only they will know recipient, until the very moment the winner is announced by Tully D. Blair, president of Security Life and Trust Co. from Winston-Salem.

W. M. (Booger) Scales, Jr. has been the most active man in town for the past few days as he made preparations for the banquet.

Named last year's DSA winner, Scales was chosen by Jaycee President John Ray Hardy to serve as chairman of this year's program.

He is being assisted by Frank Diener and W. C. Taylor, Jr.

In addition to the big award, President Hardy will present special awards to club members who have done exceptional jobs as project chairman.

Who will be the DSA winner? Your guess is as good as the next man's.

Who ever it is, doesn't have to be a Jaycee, although he has to be in the Jaycee age group—from 21 to 36.

Other than that, the only thing on which you can base your guess is who has done the most civic good within the community for the past year.

Other Editors Saying - - Laws And Bombings Opinions In Brief

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Congress can anticipate more than a few proposals at this session aimed at making bombings of schools, churches, and synagogues punishable by federal law. Two Republican senators from New York, Jacob Javits and Kenneth Keating have introduced a seven-bill package making such bombings a federal offense and banning hate literature from the mails as well.

A similar bill, broader in some respects but confined to bombings, is scheduled to be introduced this week by two Democrats, Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts and Sam Ervin of North Carolina. This measure is expected to carry the endorsement of about 40 senators. A bill introduced last year was designed to make a federal crime of shipping explosives across state lines for terroristic purposes. The bill would have justified immediate entry by the FBI in bombing cases by setting up a presumption that explosives used in bombings had been brought across state lines.

But the Dept. of Justice takes the view that ordinarily crimes of violence, including bombings of buildings, are subject to exclusive state jurisdiction, "even if they are a conspiracy and even if the conspiracy is operating in several states." Nevertheless the FBI has been active in recent bombing cases, through Director J. Edgar Hoover has said that there had been no indication of federal law violations. Agents and technical experts were sent to Atlanta, scene of the October 12 bombing of a Jewish temple, at the express orders of President Eisenhower.

Laboratory facilities have been made available and cooperation extended by covering out-of-state leads of interest to state and local law groups. However, Hoover insisted that bombing outrages outrages public opinion, a coordinating effort on the part of federal, state and local law enforcement agencies, and by stern treatment of the perpetrators.

Without discussing the merits of the case, one can point out some of the difficulty in prosecution by local law authorities under local laws in the case of one of the five men arrested in connection with the Atlanta bombing. The foreman of an Atlanta jury trying George Allen Bright, whom the prosecution charged with being a vehement anti-Semite, reported the group "hopelessly deadlocked" after 22 hours of deliberation and on December 10 a mistrial was declared.

But the jury had only two alternatives: acquittal or the death penalty. It is reasonable to see how a jury could hesitate to bring in a verdict of death in the case. Stern measures are called for, of course. Perhaps the federal law, if such is passed, will provide for stern punishment in such cases.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

QUITE POSSIBLE

Some time ago I referred to a friend of mine who speaks with the angels. My observation was that, like most people, I would, under ordinary circumstances, declare such a person to be psychotic or insane. I did not feel that in the case of this man I would be justified in such a judgment.

For we are all different. Whether one is a Swedeborgian or not, certainly every open-minded person must confess that Emanuel Swedenborg was one of the best, most sincere, and most unusual men that ever lived. He claimed to talk with the angels, and here are millions—including the present writer—who believe he did (and I am not a Swedeborgian).

Of course, a Swedeborgian appears only once in a millennium. But there are some souls who appear so finely attuned to the spiritual world that they have contacts with it which the rest of us do not enjoy. In speaking of my friend who talks with the angels, I made the observation that some people seem to have, as it were, one foot in this world and another in the world from which they came.

Whether this adequately explains such rare souls, one cannot say with confidence. But let us be hesitant about ascribing insanity or ignorance or perversity about spiritual matters. There is indeed more truth in heaven and earth than is contained in your philosophy and mine. People may be vastly different from us and yet right and better—hard to believe (and take) but quite possible.

Charity Under Stress

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Curbstone comments of a Pavement Plato:

"It is not a matter for the state," murmured Frank Chionchio, "It is for God to decide."

The question at issue was what was to be done with Jean Iavarone, accused of kidnaping the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chionchio 2½ hours after her birth in a Brooklyn hospital.

To the consternation of officials neither young lawyer Chionchio nor his wife wanted to press charges against widowed Mrs. Iavarone, mother of eight children herself, after a tip to police led to the discovery of their daughter in her home, not far from Brooklyn police headquarters.

The young couple who had borne themselves with a dignity beyond hysteria during their long ordeal, were not interested in punishing the kidnaper. They were only happy and grateful they had their baby back, alive and well.

This attitude was incomprehensible to the forces of the law, who had thrown from 500 to 700 men into a ten-day-and-night, street-by-street search for the stolen infant.

To Chionchio, 28, a lawyer for the Port of New York Authority, Mrs. Iavarone, 43, was "a poor, sick woman" unable to comprehend the enormity of the crime or the suffering it had caused.

Only after considerable pressure by legal officials, during which it was pointed out that he himself could be held as a material witness in the case, did he reluctantly sign a complaint against Mrs. Iavarone.

Even then, as he left the conference the young father murmured stubbornly: "It is not a matter for the state. It is for God to decide."

To many, the attitude of Mr. and Mrs. Chionchio must seem incredibly naive. The instinct for revenge and retribution is overwhelmingly strong in most of us, and when someone hurts us we want to hurt them back just as soon as we are able to.

We pay lip service to the ideals of forgiveness, turning the other cheek, and doing unto one another as we would have them do unto us. But in our daily life we often don't live up to these ideals. We turn to the older law of fang and claw. It is inconceivable, certainly for most of us, to think that Mrs. Iavarone, if proved both sane and guilty, should go unpunished by the laws of man.

But it is unimportant whether Mr. and Mrs. Chionchio are right or wrong. In an angry world, surely sicker and just as confused in many ways as the woman who stole their baby, their Christian charity under stress stands as a bright beacon of true faith.

Instead of retaliation, they have responded to this blow against their happiness and family security with forgiveness, a reach for understanding, and a desire that a higher Judge decide the case.

It is an example of humanity at its best, as rare as it is inspiring.

Furniture Show Problems Rise

By ELMER ROESSNER

One of the most competitive industries in America — the furniture business — is having show problems.

Currently, the biggest one of the year, the Chicago show, is on. It will be followed by other shows in various sections of the country, and these will be interspersed with other shows of importance to furniture dealers, giftware shows, curtain and drapery shows and so on.

That's the problem. Dealers say that if they attended all the shows, they would be spending all their time traveling between Chicago, Grand Rapids, High Point, N. C., Los Angeles and other cities, making two visits a year to some, four to others, and would have no time left to sell the stuff they ordered.

ONE SHOW A YEAR

In recent years there has been a great deal of dealer agitation for one show a year or, at least, one new line each year, preferably brought out in the slack winter months.

The first is impossible. The furniture industry is one of the most scattered in the United States. Only some food lines and some specialized enterprises, such as well-digging, are more dispersed.

It would be impossible to get all manufacturers to one center, such as Chicago, at the same time. The Furniture Mart, the Navy Pier and all other exhibition places in town couldn't hold the displays. Shipping samples from all parts of the country and back again would bankrupt many smaller manufacturers. And Chicago hotels are so jammed during the January shows that thousands of dealers vow they'll never return. They always do.

It might be possible to have only one line per manufacturer each year but it is improbable of acceptance.

TOO MUCH COMPETITION

One reason is that the industry is too highly competitive. It is an industry made up of thousands of small producers, a few medium size ones and only one real giant.

Competition is so keen that if one manufacturer shows a new piece that attracts attention, a dozen others will have competitive items at the next show, a few weeks or months away.

It has even been charged that when one manufacturer has produced an exciting piece at a show, competitors will buy samples, change the hardware or a bit of trim, and take orders on the sample as their own product, taking a chance that they can produce the piece at a slightly reduced price.

Freight rates are the major reason the industry is so dispersed and so competitive. If the industry were centered, say, in Grand Rapids as the auto industry is in Detroit, materials would have to be shipped in from all over the country, at high cost, and the finished pieces would have to be shipped out again, once more at high rates.

HOME-TOWNSMEN PROSPER

Small manufacturers in every metropolitan area can set up plants and by buying and selling locally, produce furniture at less than it can be made in Grand Rapids and shipped, say, to Pasadena.

The auto industry was like that once. But making autos has become a vastly complicated operation, employing thousands of skills. Once a handful of specialists could put out a competitive car, just as today a handful of skilled men can produce furniture competitive with that put out by the larger companies.

The public has benefited doubtless. First, the regional nature of the furniture industry has produced a wide choice of designs. The rise of California style furniture in recent years is only one example.

Second, competition has kept prices down. John Snow, executive vice president of the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers, and Hal Spunger, vice president of Dunbar Furniture, told a Michigan University group that in the last ten years furniture prices had risen an aggregate of 7 per cent while prices of other consumer goods had gone up 25 to 30 per cent.

Poaching Of Ivory Hunters Threatens Kenya Herds

NIARABI, Kenya (AP) — The carcass of a huge elephant lay in the brush in a pool of blood. The trunk lay nearby. The head and tusks were missing.

Poachers had killed another elephant for the valuable ivory.

This illegal hunting has become so widespread in this East African nation that the government is gravely concerned.

Poachers slaughter elephants with poisoned arrows when they go to water holes to drink. A game patrol found 1,200 elephant carcasses in an area of 500 square miles in the Tsavo National Park in one occasion.

Another popular way of killing the huge mammals is to dig a rectangular hole in the ground, just big enough to fit the elephant. When the animal comes along and crashes through a covering of brushwood, it finds itself trapped in a made-to-measure coffin. It is then hacked to death.

Thousands of these pits were dug in the 8,000-square-mile park before poaching was stamped out. Between the pits were wire nooses to snare giraffes and a variety of small game with bush fences to direct the animals into the traps.

War Declared

To halt destruction of big game, Kenya's greatest tourist attraction, the government allocated $173,600 to the national parks, earmarking most of it for war on the poachers.

In the Tsavo park traps were set for poachers. Police aircraft were used for spotting. Poaching penalties were increased.

Today, for the first time in its history, the park is virtually free of poachers and the field forces have switched to other areas.

During the Tsavo drive 429 persons were convicted of poaching offenses, 25,219 pounds of ivory were recovered and a number of poachers' hideouts were destroyed. Despite the operations, however, it is estimated that during the same period more than 100,000 pounds — $280,000 worth — of ivory found its way to the black market.

Now the government is thinking of switching the attack to the 10,000-square-mile Marsabit National Reserve, a land of great deserts and mountains where elephants of spectacular size are being hunted mercilessly by local tribesmen and bands of armed poachers from over the border in Abyssinia.

Cold And Snow From The Rockies To Midcontinent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wintry weather, with cold and snow, spread from the northern Rockies into the midcontinent today, ending a brief spell of fairly mild weather.

The arctic air covered the Northern and Central Plains and the upper and mid-Mississippi Valley. It headed eastward and was expected to cover most areas, excluding the eastern seaboard and Southeast states.

Snow accompanied the outbreak of cold along the eastern slopes of the Rockies, with falls in eastern Colorado, Wyoming and western Nebraska. Highways west of Denver were closed. Gusty winds whirled the snow, cutting visibility. Drifts nearly two feet deep were reported in the Golden, Colo., area and a foot deep in Cheyenne, Wyo. Four inches of snow was indicated in the region. Lighter falls were reported in the Upper Mississippi Valley and in the Lake Superior region.

Files Closed On Eight Holdups

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The FBI says it has closed the files on North Carolina's eight bank holdups in 1958.

The last robbery on the list in which no arrest had been made was checked off with the capture in Pine Bluff, Ark., Monday of John S. Kessler.

Kessler was wanted in connection with the $7,207 robbery of a branch of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., here Aug. 4. He will be tried in Arkansas on armed robbery charges before he can be turned over to federal authorities here.

The other bank robberies: Summit Avenue branch of the Bank of Greensboro at Greensboro, $29,906, Jan. 21; Stokesdale Commercial Bank, $18,426, May 20; Farmer's Market branch of the Security National Bank at Raleigh, $352, July 11; branch of State Bank of Laurinburg, $7,608, Aug. 24; branch of Guilford National Bank at Greensboro, $48,275, Aug. 28; branch of Bank of Ahoskie, $7,793, Aug. 29; Tar Heel Bank and Trust Co., Winston, $6,934, Sept. 26.

Consolidated School Is Delayed By New Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — Construction of a new Hyde County consolidated high school must wait until clear title has been obtained to the 15.15-acre school site.

The State Supreme Court overturned Wednesday an order by Superior Court Judge Malcolm Paul which would have allowed the county to proceed with the building on the 3.04 acres to which it holds title. Contention proceedings are in progress to obtain the remainder.

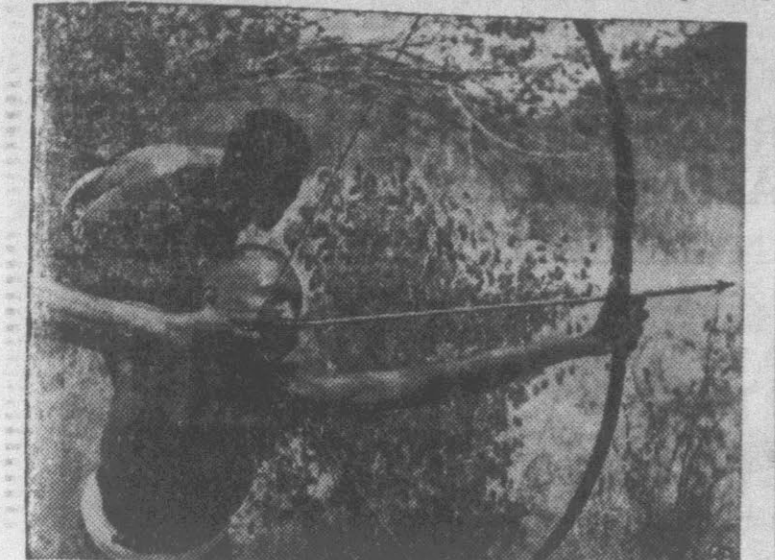

The decision in the school case, which has brought lengthy litigation, was one of 33 handed down by the court.

Others included:

A ruling that property of former Tar Heel Congressman J. Walter Lambeth may be sold to pay alimony awarded to his wife.

A new trial for Raymond Wilder Bertrand, a Ft. Bragg soldier convicted in Robeson County on seduction charges and sentenced to five years in prison. The court said Judge Clawson Williams made statements which apparently left the jury with the impression it should convict Bertrand.

A new charge for Robert J. Grundler to appeal from the life sentence for rape he received in New Hanover Superior Court. Grundler, a 21-year-old Marine, first gave notice of appeal, then withdrew it. Later, his attorneys

Lions Also Victims

It is also investigating trouble in the 1,250-square-mile Amboseli National Reserve where it is reported the lion population, one of East Africa's greatest tourist attractions, has become dangerous.

Low roving bands of young Masai warriors spear them "for mischief."

Last year 149,600 people, many of them visitors from Europe and the United States, visited Kenya's National Parks. The number is expected to increase owing to the organization of $700 two-week car trips, with air flights to and from Britain thrown in, for thousands of middle class families.

There is growing world interest in the few remaining haunts of big game. All over Africa the numbers of wild animals have been diminishing continually since the coming of the white man.

Short Trial Due Slip Of Tongue

HONOLULU (AP)—A slip of a lawyer's tongue ended a damage suit trial here even before it got started.

Attorney Myer Symonds, questioning the first prospective juror, asked if she had ever been insured by an insurance company.

The opposing lawyer challenged the question and the judge declared a mistrial.

Symonds said later he had intended to ask whether the juror had ever been employed by an insurance company.

BAD TEACHER

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Judge Alfred W. Whitehurst sentenced an adult here to a year in jail and a fine of $50 for teaching young boys how to turn in false fire alarms without leaving fingerprints. The city estimates it has answered 25 false alarms in ten months at a cost of $50 each.

Band Subs For Bugle At Post

HONOLULU (AP)—The insistent notes of the bugle no longer resound from the 27th Infantry regiment from bed each morning.

Instead, the soldiers at Schofield Barracks are serenaded by the regimental band at 5:50 a.m.

The music is still pretty brassy, the Army said.

Youth Sentenced To Long Term

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A 17-year-old High Point youth, convicted of killing his brother and an uncle in separate slayings, was under combined sentences of from 33 to 42 years in prison today.

Athur Miller Bowden was handed an 8-10 year term Wednesday after pleading guilty to second degree murder in the pistol death of his uncle, Pearson Bradburn, 49, last Easter Sunday in the hills of north Buncombe County.

Bowden already was under a 25-30 year sentence after pleading guilty at High Point to second degree murder in the shotgun death of his brother, Vance, 22, last July 30.

The youth admitted he shot his uncle on a hillside near the home where he was raised in the Reems Creek section near here. Officers quoted him as saying the shooting followed an hours-long drinking bout with the uncle.

In the slaying of his brother, Guilford officers testified at Arthur's trial that he shot his older brother following a lengthy argument and drinking bout.

Defense attorneys here said Arthur was "raised" by Bradburn after his parents separated and that Arthur had received "little moral training" from his uncle.

argument that, in order to get the highest-type citizens to run for Congress, the pay should not be so low as to discourage their running.

There are some additional expenses connected with Congress now. The Senate, which has one office building for its 98 members, next month will open a new one costing about $25,400,000, which includes furniture. It has a two-level underground garage for 156 cars and will provide every senator with at least five rooms in his office. Senators now have three to four.

The House, which has two office buildings for its 436 members, in 1962 will have three. The new one will cost over 64 million dollars.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Mrs. Emma Little's winter-long ailment has been diagnosed as the flue — with an "E."

Doctors had examined her but failed to turn up the cause of her headaches, nausea, loss of weight and weakness.

Then they found that people who visited her got sick, too.

A check of the furnace showed the flue-leaking carbon monoxide into the house.

Now the flue is all right and Mrs. Little is getting better.

THE 8TH CIRCLE A MASTER MYSTERY BY STANLEY ELLIN

Copyright, 1958, by Stanley Ellin; reprinted by permission of the novel's publisher, Random House; distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Ralph Harlingen, attorney for the accused man, is having difficulty persuading Murray Kirk to become involved in a case somewhat different from those the Conny-Kirk detective agency has made its business. It obligates Kirk to find evidence that Arnold Lundeen, a New York City policeman, isn't guilty of bribery.

Lundeen arrested an Eddie Schrade for bookmaking. When a grand jury began investigating the operations of a gambling syndicate and called Schrade as a witness, Eddie declared his arrest was a fake; that he was just a stand-in for the real culprit, an Ira Miller one of the Wykoff's.

The grand jury that he had paid Lundeen $1,000 to arrest Schrade in his place. Lundeen told the jury these charges were untrue, and was indicted for perjury. His fiancée, Ruth Vincent, hired Ralph Harlingen to defend him and Harlingen has turned to Kirk for aid . . .

CHAPTER 2

"Look," Ralph Harlingen said earnestly, "this might sound a little top-heavy, if it might sound something you've heard before, but I count myself a pretty good judge of human nature. And before I agreed to take Lundeen as a client I made it a point to have a long, long talk with him. Not just about the case, mind you. What I really wanted was to get deep down inside, to sort of poke and prod around to see the man underneath. And what I saw was all right. I wouldn't have touched the case if I didn't think so."

"Do you think that's what I'm worried about?" said Murray Kirk, "whether your man is a deserving case or not?"

"From what you said—"

"I didn't say anything about that. You ought to know, Mr. Harlingen, that an outfit like mine doesn't give a darn about a client's character. For that matter, neither do most of the lawyers I know. We'd all be out of business tomorrow, if we did." Murray shook his head. "That isn't the point at all. What I'm getting at is that your case is tied right in with this Wykoff business, and I don't like it. Wykoff's testified that he's been paying one million dollars a year in graft to the police for the past ten years. What does it mean, now that he's blown the lid off the deal? It means that the whole department is as sick and surly as a bagful of rattlesnakes, and it's not a bag I want to stick my hand into. Conny-Kirk has always gotten along with the police on a nice, quiet, live-and-let-live basis. We'll string along with that policy now."

"But it's my case," argued Harlingen. "If there's any trouble, I'm the one to take the responsibility. Maybe, but the ax would still fall on us."

"Oh, great," said Harlingen. "That's great. What you're telling me, then, is that if Lundeen wants his chance in court he'd better go to some big law office where they have the staff to handle it personally. That's what it comes down to, isn't it?"

"Why not? There are law offices that would be glad to handle it. You could work along with one of them for the experience."

"At my age?" Harlingen leaned forward toward Murray and spoke with slow intensity. "Do you know how old I am? I'm forty-five, man. Forty-five years old."

"What about it? You've still got a long time to go."

"Go where?" Harlingen demanded. "Ah, you don't understand. You don't understand at all. Don't you see that now that I found the guts to walk out on a job as the oldest office boy in town I can't crawl back into another one like it? That's what's at stake here. It's not just a matter of handling a case on my own. I know I can do a decent job on any case, if I have the chance. But I have to — well, it's terribly important for me to get the chance. That's the thing."

"For you, yes," said Murray wearily. "But I have to think of my agency's interests."

"That's definite?"

"Yes."

Harlingen hefted a pencil in his palm. Then he suddenly asked, "You wouldn't mind if I got in touch with you again about this, I suppose?"

"I'm in the office every afternoon," Murray said.

It was a routine Friday for Murray — out-of-town reports to collate, assignments to arrange, all punctuated by incessant phone calls — but a vague restlessness in him made it seem endless. At four o'clock he drew open the window curtains and stood looking down at what could be seen of New York five stories below. Umbrellas, the first sprinkling of packages done up in Christmas wrappings, the first Santa Claus of the season with the inevitable hand bell and tripod. He was calculating the chances of tossing a quarter into the collection pot from fifty feet above it, when the receptionist walked in and called him to attention.

"It's a young lady, Mr. Kirk. She says it's about an Arnold Lundeen."

Murray pocketed the quarter. "What would you say she was, Miss Whiteside? Wife, sister, or friend of the family?"

"Engaged to him, I guess." Miss Whiteside had the hauteur of a tearoom hostess, a passion for confession magazines, and a fine eye for detail. "She's wearing a ring."

"Anything else?"

"Well," said Miss Whiteside, "she's awfully pretty."

Her eye had not deceived her. The girl was more than pretty; she was astonishingly beautiful. Ebony-dark hair, long-lashed blue eyes, camellia skin. It was incredible that a cop, a dumb, dishonest cop, should ever have come into the possession of anything like this.

She sat down, placed a small overnight bag beside the chair, and opened her coat. It was a bulky tweed, the kind that Murray's late partner, Frank Conny, used to snarl at as Madison Avenue dowdy. "Whenever I see a fine-looking woman wearing stuff like that," he had complained, "I always find myself wondering what she's ashamed of."

"I'm Ruth Vincent," the girl said, "Arnold Lundeen's fiancée."

She sat primly on the edge of the chair, her hands clasped in her lap like an illustration of decorous good posture. "Mr. Harlingen called me this morning before he left town. He told me all about talking to you last night, but he said that maybe if I spoke to you personally — I mean, explained things from Arnold's point of view — you might change your mind. That's why I'm here."

"I see," Murray carefully arranged two pieces of paper on the desk, edge to edge. "How is it that Lundeen isn't here himself? Something wrong with him?"

"No, he's working today, and I'm not. An army friend of his got him a job in a diner, but it's way out on Long Island, near East Hampton, so he stays out there during the week."

"That sounds pretty inconvenient for all concerned, doesn't it?" Ruth Vincent said in a tight voice: "It's not easy for a policeman under suspension to get a job anywhere, Mr. Kirk."

"True enough. And what do you work at, Miss Vincent? Modeling?" He hesitated at the overnight bag, and the girl glanced down at it.

"Oh, that. No it's full of notes and papers I've been putting together at the library. I'm a teacher."

"A teacher?"

"Yes," said Ruth Vincent flatly.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean—"

"I know. It was meant to be flattering, except that it isn't."

"It should be."

"Why? Are you flattered any time a woman walks into this strange sedate office, sees the handsome, Brooks Brothers type of executive behind his desk, and says in that same tone, 'A detective?'"

"I don't know," Murray said. "It's never happened."

"I doubt that. Meanwhile, Mr. Kirk, take my word for it that I'm in the English Department at the Homestead School, a very highly regarded private school which, I've been told, hires its teachers for their ability. Don't mind if that sounds stuffy. It's a little something I memorized a long time ago."

"Mea culpa," said Murray cheerfully. "Mea maxima culpa. Miss Vincent, by any chance is there a kid named Megan Harlingen in your school?"

"Why, yes. She's Mr. Harlingen's daughter."

"I know. Is that how you met Harlingen? How he happened to get Lundeen's case?"

Reports On Student Teachers In Schools

Seniors at East Carolina College who are now participating in the winter-quarter student teaching program number 210 men and women. Under the direction of supervisors from the college faculty and of supervising teachers in the public schools, they are gaining experience in classrooms of 32 schools in Greenville and other towns in Eastern North Carolina.

Dr. J. L. Oppelt, director of student teaching at the college, has issued a report on the work of the 134 women and 76 men who are now teaching in the public schools.

This year's total of 210 seniors shows an increase for the winter quarter of 25 over last year's enrollment of 185. The number in 1957 for the same period was 143.

Sixty-six, or nearly a third of the seniors, have teaching assignments in the elementary grades, one through six. Dr. Oppelt's report shows. Ten are doing full-time work in junior high school and two are dividing their teaching responsibilities between the junior and the senior high school.

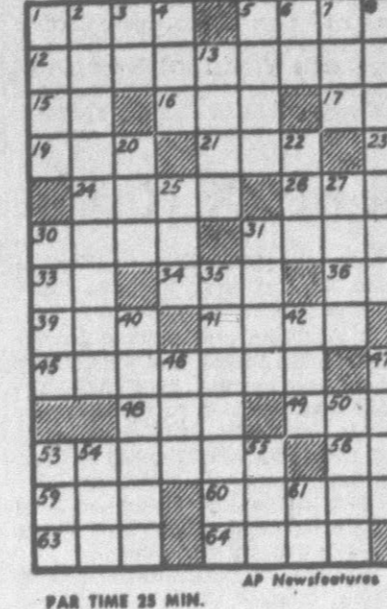

Those teaching high-school subjects include 132 men and women. They are acting as instructors in the following areas of the secondary school curriculum: art, business, English, foreign languages, industrial arts, mathematics, music, home economics, health, physical education, science, and the social studies. Dr. Oppelt states.

Schools where the student teachers are conducting classes include the Wahl-Coates Laboratory school on the campus, five Greenville city schools, nine high schools in Pitt County, junior high schools in Goldsboro and Rocky Mount, and high schools in Washington, Snow Hill, Williamston, Plymouth, Contentnea, Lucama, New Bern, Robersonville, Bath, Kinston, Tarboro, Maury, LaGrange, Goldsboro and Rocky Mount.

Survival Of 2 Sled Dogs Delights Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's press, radio and public erupted with ecstasies of delight today at the news that two of 15 sled dogs abandoned in the antarctic 11 months ago had been found alive.

"Two dogs survive," headlined Tokyo's big dailies in type normally reserved for the death of Stalin, the outbreak of war and similar events.

Radios blared the news hourly. Newspapers, radio stations and news agencies were flooded with calls for more information. There was as much rejoicing as there had been protest when the dogs were left behind last February.

A six-man advance party was flown by helicopter Wednesday night from the antarctic expedition ship Soya to reopen the deserted Japanese base on Ongul Island. Masamk Murayama, leader of the party, radioed back that the two dogs came bounding up, wagging their tails in greeting. He said they were in good condition.

Murayama's first message gave no word of the other 13 dogs, or of how the two had managed to survive.

The 15 sled dogs, members of the vanishing Japanese Karafuto breed, were left behind when heavy ice kept the Soya from reaching the base to restock it for the antarctic winter. Bad weather halted flying after removal of the 11 Japanese scientists who had staffed the base and nine other dogs.

The dogs left behind were tied up and had food for only a few weeks.

Ham Lewis, 33, appeared in city court and answered to the name of Morris Hoffman, charged with gaming and frequenting a gaming house.

Judge Charles Henchel looked down and said, "Isn't your name Lewis?" Lewis admitted his identity and was sentenced to five days in jail on a contempt of court charge.

A Roanoke hot dog stand proprietor has the answer to this question ready made. His menu is posted on the wall, but he hands an inquirer a lengthy menu in French from a famous Montreal restaurant. Old customers roar with laughter at the puzzled looks it brings.

Murayama's first message gave no word of the other 13 dogs, or of how the two had managed to survive.

Large Strike Of International Harvester Workers Nears End

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The nation's largest strike, involving 37,000 International Harvester Co. workers, appeared near an end today but a forecast of widespread walkouts in the oil industry darkened the labor picture. Negotiators for the Harvester Company and the striking United Auto Workers have reached an agreement on a three-year contract. The union's Harvester council meets Friday to vote on the terms and ratification appeared likely, ending the costly two-month strike. The walkout involved the big farm implement firm's 25 factories, transfer points and depots. On the debit side of the labor news, O. A. Knight, president of the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers, with a membership of 105,000 in the oil industry, said widespread strikes are likely to develop early next week. Knight's prediction came as federal mediators in Kansas City reported no progress in contract talks between the Sinclair Oil Co. and the union representing 9,500 of its workers. Strike notices which expire at midnight Saturday have been filed with Sinclair and most of the 600 individual oil plants with which the union has contracts. The Sinclair contract is the only one negotiated on a nationwide basis in the oil industry by the union but it usually sets the pattern for other contracts on a plant-by-plant basis. The union has asked for a wage hike of 25 cents an hour or 21 cents an hour plus fringe benefits. Sinclair has not offered a wage increase. The average wage now is $2.71 an hour. In other labor disputes, the nation's longest strike involves 13,000 employees in seven plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Federal mediators are meeting in Philadelphia with representatives of the company and the United Glass and Ceramic Workers Union in efforts to end the strike, which started last Oct. 6. Seniority rights and incentive pay are believed to be the major issues in dispute. Wages are not involved. In Los Angeles, 1,000 supermarkets have been closed since Jan. 1 by a strike-lockout. The strike is by the Retail Clerks Union and the lockout by the Food Employers Council, representing the store operators, in retaliation. The strike-lockout has idled 16,000 persons and has changed the shopping habits of housewives. They do their marketing at 4,500 grocery stores not affected by the lockout. The clerks have demanded a wage benefit package totaling $2.5 cents hourly spread over a five-year contract. The employers offered a 50-cent package offer. The clerks were paid $2.50 hourly under the old contract. In the Harvester settlement, a company spokesman said the strike cost the union about $2,600,000 in wages. A union spokesman estimated the UAW strike fund has paid about one million dollars weekly in strike benefits. The new contract calls for annual pay hikes of 6 cents an hour or 2 1/2 per cent, whichever is greater. Wages under the old contract averaged $2.55.

The Post Office Couldn't Deliver

FAIRMONT, W. Va. (AP)—The letter, written in a child's scrawling hand, was beyond the ability of the post office to deliver. It read: "Dear Daddy. Just a few lines to let you know we are all just fine. We was all to see Grandma about three weeks ago. How are you getting along up there? I hope it isn't as cold there as it is here. "Sissy and all the other kids are just fine and we all want you home for Christmas because without you it won't be one. Well, I'll love for now. Love, "P.S. Mommy still loves and misses you." The letter was addressed: "To my Daddy in Heaven, c-o God." Oil company distribution of free sizeable portion of its roads was Wisconsin. It labeled 5,000 miles of highway in 1917.

Call Of Wild Holds No Lure For Pet Deer

NO WILDLIFE FOR BAMBI—The pet deer of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Bowser prefers the quiet of the living room to the freedom of the forest. Bambi, who has lived with the Bowsers since 1957, likes to spend the evening on the couch watching television.

COLFAX, Calif. (AP)—Bambi relaxed on the couch, watching television and occasionally nibbling at a cigarette.

"She likes the blood and thunder programs," explained Mrs. Gene Bowser, referring to the family's pet deer.

Orphaned by a speeding automobile, Bambi has lived with the Bowsers since June, 1957.

Now she seems to prefer her couch, nightly TV, cigarettes, and regular meals to the freedom of the forest.

She can always go back. The kitchen door is left ajar for her and the back gate is open except during deer hunting season.

Last year Bambi went for a stroll and came home with a bullet wound in her back. The Bowsers' dog, Ponchie, nursed her back to health.

"He stayed with her in the yard, even out in the rain," said Mrs. Bowser. "He licked her wounds, and she finally recovered."

Bambi eats what the family eats, plus cucumbers, tomatoes, bananas, bread, grain and apples. She also nibbles on newspapers, magazines and one of her favorites, cigarettes.

"She cleans out the ash trays if we don't watch her," said Mrs. Bowser. "And she'll come up and take my cigarettes right out of my pocket." Bambi has even conquered her instinctive fear of fire.

State Geologist Speaks At ECC

Dr. Jasper L. Stuckey, state geologist for North Carolina, speaking at East Carolina College Tuesday night, discussed the location and the importance to the state of various geologic formations and minerals found in North Carolina.

The talk by the state geologist was sponsored by the East Carolina Chapter of Gamma Theta Upsilon, national honorary geography fraternity. He was introduced to an audience of geography students and guests of the fraternity by Dr. Robert E. Cramer of the college faculty.

Clay and shale deposits, Dr. Stuckey pointed out, are important to the economy of the state because they contribute to the brick and ceramic industries. He also located and commented on the value of such minerals as kaolin, feldspar, and mica.

Dr. Stuckey, concluding his talk, outlined for his audience types of professional employment open to those trained in geology.

The Kurfuerstendam, West Berlin's main thoroughfare, teams with traffic, at noon.

Many modern buildings have risen in recent years to cover the scars of war in West Berlin.

Shop on West Berlin side of Bernauer Strasse attracts many East Berliners who cross border to buy goods they cannot get in own sector, defying arrest by Communist police in doing so.

Berlin today is a city of many complexities, its 3,500,000 people torn by divided allegiances. In the eastern part, the Communists rule; in the western half, held by the Americans, French and British, the free world prevails. There are many sharp differences in the lives and ways of the city.

West Berlin's citizens eat well and dress well. Towering apartment houses, modern office buildings and new homes have replaced ruins like those that still scar East Berlin. The boulevards throb with the flow of sleek, gleaming cars. West Berlin has flowered into one of Europe's queen cities.

East Berlin, in contrast, looks grim and desolate. There is only a thin stream of weary pedestrians plodding by rows of bomb-shattered buildings. On the streets only a trickle of cars pass. Windows of stores only show shoddy goods. The divided city is pictured here.

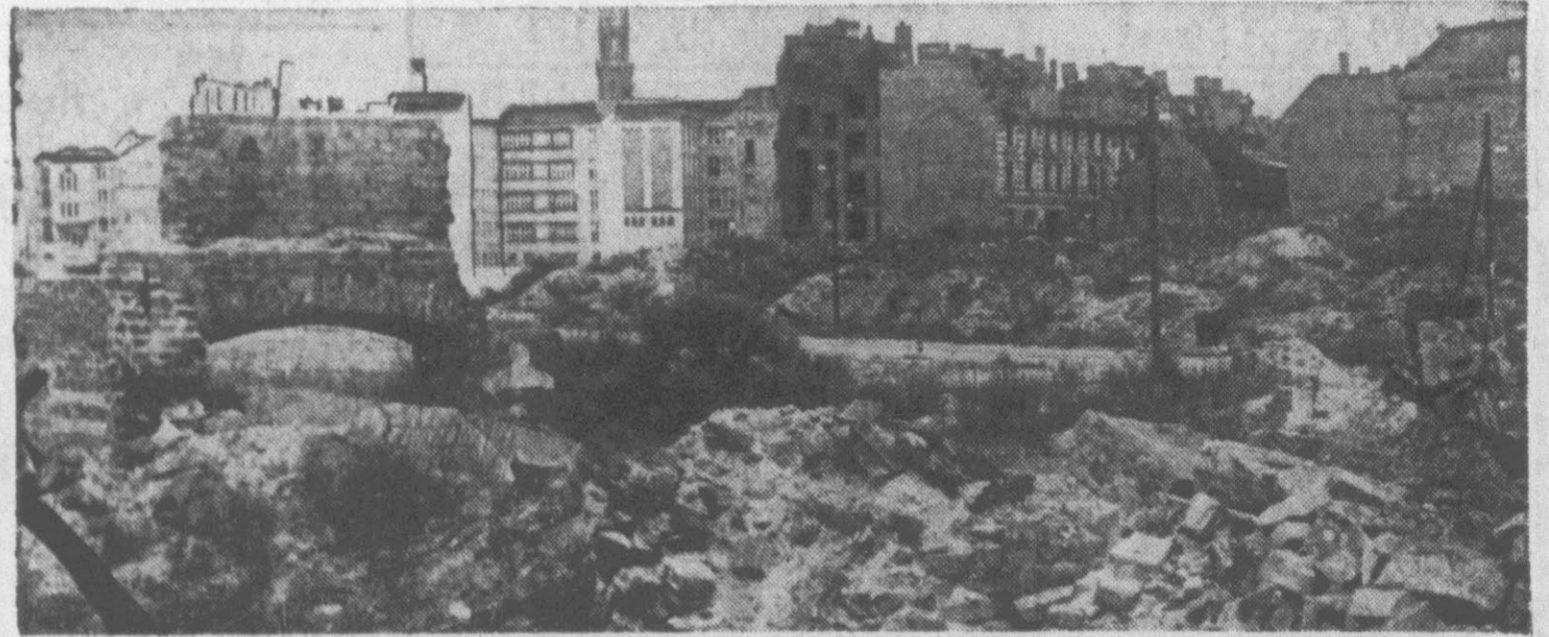

EAST BERLIN

East German workers, regimented into "fighting groups," strike a grim military note as they march along.

A lone cyclist rides along Stalin Allee, the Communists' pride of East Berlin, at noon.

In East Berlin there are acres of bomb ruins such as these stretching through the heart of the city.

Lady's flower stall on East Berlin side of Bernauer Strasse is one of few private enterprises left untouched by the Communists. Red propaganda posters decorate wall of closed shop.

Bible Words for Today

PSALM 73:16, 17. "When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me; until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I." (King James)

Line after line through more than half of this psalm its writer wrestles with what is sometimes spoken of as "the oldest problem in religion and philosophy,"—the problem of evil. In his case it takes the specific form of the question. How does it happen that so often good people have more than their share of suffering while wicked men prosper and are at ease?

And he tells us, in effect, that when he tried to figure the answer out, all he got was a headache; that it was when he went into the sanctuary of God,—when he went to church, as we would put it now—that he saw the fact of suffering and evil in a perspective which helped him to understand it.

What good does it do a man to go to church? Many goods could be pointed out. But perhaps the best good which comes of regular presence in the house of God is that for one hour each week a man can, so to speak, stand off at a distance from the rush and pressure of life, and see its many and varied components in clearer relation to each other and to the whole of life. Thus to "see life steadily, and see it whole" must be to get a glimpse of life as God can see it.

'Dr. Zhivago' Described As Hinging On Circumstances

Boris Pasternak's novel "Dr. Zhivago" could have been written only in the Soviet Union and probably only at the time when it was produced, Barrett M. Reed of the United States Information Agency told an audience at East Carolina College last night.

Mr. Reed, Soviet Affairs Advisor in the Office of Plans, USIA, addressed an audience of approximately 500 students, faculty members, and guests as he discussed some of the literary, social, and political implications of the internationally famous novel.

In the Soviet Union, he pointed out, the period between 1923, when Pasternak completed his "Dr. Zhivago," and 1956 was a "period of probing" by writers in the Soviet Union. Under Stalin, he explained, all orders had come from the top, initiative and enthusiasm were limited, fear was prevalent, and the intelligentsia were in a "straight jacket."

Beginning with 1953, he continued, writers felt encouraged toward greater creativity and originality and a number of interesting works, critical of some aspects of Soviet society, appeared. None of these, however, Mr. Reed stated, was absolutely opposed to the existing regime.

In offering his novel for publication, Pasternak may have been influenced, Mr. Reed continued, by the idea that in this period things were better for the writer.

His book, accepted for publication after Stalin's death, was later barred and has not been issued in Russia. Among reasons, the speaker said, are the facts that, though the book was not written to show what is wrong in Russia, the novel is "not optimistic about Soviet society" and Dr. Zhivago a "far cry from the hero required in Soviet literature."

In spite of the fact that Soviet literature is supposed to have political significance and to follow the Party line, Mr. Reed stated, Pasternak has never compromised himself nor written in the spirit of "socialist realism." His novel, he said, is essentially based on universal themes—love, life, longing—and deals with the importance of the individual, his thoughts, his feelings, and his free spirit.

The novel, he said, pictures life in Russia over a long and critical period marked by great social, political and economic changes. It has, he explained, an interesting story and background, but primarily it is a work of "thoughts, moods, and atmosphere."

The book is being read in the Soviet Union, according to reports of Russians attending the World's Fair, Mr. Reed said. Typed copies have made it available, he explained, to a number of readers.

Pasternak's courage in writing "Dr. Zhivago" may have an effect on other Russian authors, Mr. Reed stated. Indications, however, are that the present trend is toward demands for a greater conformity by Soviet writers.

Mr. Reed was introduced by Vice President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College. Dr. George A. Douglas, of the social studies department acted as chairman of the meeting.

GAS PIPELINE UNDERWAY—630 miles of gas line are involved in the North Carolina Natural Gas Corporation's extension into eastern North Carolina with the main line extending through Lumberton to Wilmington. A major lateral will go northeastward to terminals in Rocky Mount, New Bern and Washington. Distribution systems will be installed in 22 cities.

Seven From Pitt On Honors List

Top scholastic honors for the fall quarter, 1958, went to 58 of East Carolina College's 3,684 students. Their names have just been announced by Registrar Robert L. Holt, whose "All Ones" Honors List recognizes the fact that they received the highest possible marks in all courses in which they were enrolled.

Fifty-six are North Carolinians. One is from Virginia, and one from Alabama. Seven are from Pitt County: Lois Ann Z. Garren, Mrs. Kristina M. Swain, Jean Ann Waters and Peggy Hope Wood, Greenville; Betty Jean Mobley, Winterville; Mrs. Daisy Holmes Rogers, Farmville, and Barbara Stewart Whitchard, Bethel.

Their outstanding records entitle them to inclusion also on the Dean's List of students with superior scholastic standing and on the college Honor Roll.

Six Navy Men Die In Traffic Accident

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A Navy vehicle tore into a truck loaded with frozen orange juice Wednesday. Six young enlisted men were killed. Three others were injured.

The Navy men were riding in a carryall — similar to a station wagon — which collided with the truck at an intersection about 12 miles west of Pensacola.

State trooper G. L. Hill said the carryall ran a stop sign on a secondary road. The truck driver, Robert Albaugh, 30, Lynnwood, Calif., was not hurt.

The Navy said the nine men were members of a work party which was returning from Barin Field, near Foley, Ala., to their station at Whiting Field, near Pensacola. Barin, recently deactivated, and Whiting are auxiliaries of the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

The driver of the Navy vehicle was killed. He was Richard A. Saah, 20, son of Joseph George Saah, of Silver Spring, Md.

The Navy listed the other dead as William M. Hammond, 18, son of William Hammond, Floral Park, Long Island, N.Y.; Michael G. McMahon, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. McMahon, Madison, Wis.; Frederick E. Bates, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bates, Pasadena, Md.; Darcey C. Parella, 18, son of Lucille Parella, Cambridge, Md.; and Thomas J. Raggsdale, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Raggsdale, Gas City, Ind.

The injured were identified as Thomas E. Halley, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Halley, St. Louis, Mo.; Charles I. Trent, 19, son of Elizabeth Trent, Kansas City, Mo.; and Chester B. Sulenski, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Sulenski, Natrona, Pa.

Dark Leaf Growers To Have Their Say Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dark leaf tobacco growers get their say today about the kind of acreage allotment program they want for 1959. They generally don't want any reduction in the acres they can plant.

Their arguments will be placed before Agriculture Department officials seeking farm opinion before Secretary of Agriculture Benson decides on new tobacco acreage allotments. The deadline for this decision is Jan. 31.

Tobacco men say dark fired tobacco is a little more complicated problem than burley, which was discussed yesterday, even though the crop does not compare in size with burley.

Relatively, though, dark fired—grown chiefly in western Kentucky, western Tennessee and Virginia—is a more serious surplus than burley.

One reason for this, said Arthur Lloyd, director of the Burley and Dark Leaf Tobacco Export Assn., is a world-wide trend away from the use of dark tobacco.

Its biggest use is for snuff and chewing tobacco, and there is a decline everywhere in the popularity of these products. Many tobacco men believe that if Benson cuts burley he will cut dark fired acreage — or if burley isn't cut, dark fired won't be either.

The burley men talked all day yesterday with Joseph R. Williams head of the department's tobacco division.

Williams said there was no question that the burley surplus—more than 250 million pounds—would justify an acreage reduction by Benson. However, he cautioned the growers that this does not mean Benson will order a cut.

Windows Break Over And Over In Her House

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — "I'm so nervous I'm jumping out of my rocking chair at the slightest noise, expecting to hear more glass crash."

That is the reaction of Mrs. Charles Papineau, 80-year-old grandmother, at whose home 39 windows have been broken since a week ago Tuesday.

Police investigated, found no evidence of lawbreaking and withdrew.

John C. Parker, a self-styled authority on poltergeist — noisy ghosts—stepped in.

He said he wanted first to eliminate any possible scientific explanation.

He said he would install a recording thermometer in the bathroom of the 2½-story frame home.

Three windows have been broken in the bathroom. Parker said he wanted to check the possibility that temperature changes might have shattered the windows.

Mrs. Papineau and her 13-year-old grandson, Wayne, have both said they heard strange thumping noises just before windows crashed.

James M. Herrmann of Seaford, N.Y., whose home on Long Island experienced some unexplained bottle-top poppings about a year ago, told the Springfield, (Mass.) Union:

"The only thing to do is put your faith in God and try to go on. Don't be frightened that the things that are happening may not be explainable. Try as much as possible to control yourself and accept what is happening. Accept it as something being visited upon you."

GOT HIS DEER

WINCHESTER, Va. (AP)—Melvin Coleman didn't go hunting on opening day but he got a deer anyway—the expensive way. His car collided with and killed a full grown buck and went over an embankment. Damage was estimated at $1,200.

Church Leader Sets Unity Goal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The new head of the Protestant Episcopal Church says he hopes for religious unity among all Christians and a fully integrated society for Americans.

The Rt. Rev. Arthur Lichtenberger, 49, son of a Wisconsin grocer, was inducted as presiding bishop Wednesday in a ritual of pageantry and prayer in Washington cathedral.

He expressed his views in a sermon at the installation service and in a news conference which preceded it.

Bishop Lichtenberger is the 21st clergyman to hold the highest ecclesiastical and administrative office of the church founded in 1789.

Retiring Bishop Henry Knox Sherill inducted Bishop Lichtenberger.

At a news conference Bishop Lichtenberger called desegregation a moral issue but said the country should move "as quickly and quietly as we can into a fully integrated society." In doing this, he added, Americans should recognize "extremely difficult" situations existing in the South.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A Tucson resident told police he didn't mind young couples using his private road as a "lovers' lane." But, he added, some of them are loud kissers. They awaken his dogs, which bark and awaken his family.

Senator Jordan Suggests Social Security Change

By Sen. B. Everett Jordan

WASHINGTON — There is growing evidence that more changes are needed in our social security laws in spite of the revised program that went into effect earlier this month.

Under the revised program, benefits to those receiving social security payments have been increased by about seven per cent. This increase was, of course, badly needed, but we still have not come to grips with some of the major faults of the program's operations.

The section of the law dealing with the amount of outside income, a person receiving social security may earn is outdated and unrealistic.

Under existing law, a person who retires at the age of 65 is eligible to receive a maximum of $116 per month in social security payments. For women who retire at 62, the maximum is $92 per month. In addition to social security payments, any recipient is allowed to earn not more than $100. This allows a total income of $216 for men over 65 and $192 for women who retire at 62. It should be remembered that very few people receive the maximum benefits.

These figures speak for themselves, and it's plain enough that the total allowable income for people receiving social security is too small. The sharp increase in the cost of living in recent years forces a great many people receiving social security to live as paupers.

It seems to me that it is only fair that people who receive social security should be allowed to earn more outside income. The limitation on outside income was included in the original law to encourage people to retire at the eligible age in order to create more job opportunities for younger people.

The time has come when the limitation could be greatly increased without jeopardizing the earning potential of younger people. This is true for the simple reason that most people who are receiving social security really have a desire to live largely in retirement and earn only enough outside income to make ends meet. In many cases this means a parttime job or a job with limited duties, which is not in real competition with the full-time worker.

Such a revision in the law would also provide a way to make more purchasing power and a better standard of living available to those who are in retirement without an increase in government spending.

I receive a great many letters from retired people who have a sincere desire to remain active and earn more than is now permitted under the social security laws. It is unfair to deny these people a fair chance to do so.

Farmville Post Exceeded Goal

FARMVILLE — Post No. 151 of The American Legion has exceeded its membership incentive goal for 1959 according to information received here from State Headquarters of The American Legion in Raleigh.

John Hill Paylor, Commander of the Post, has received a letter from the Legion State Adjutant, Nash McKee, expressing thanks to the membership chairman, all Post Officers, and membership workers for their effort.

Rev. Shelton M. Hutchinson, of Charlotte, Department Commander of The American Legion, issued a statement of high praise for the local Post.

Commander Hutchinson said, "I am proud to congratulate the officers and members of Post No. 151 upon this notable achievement. All of the programs and services of the Legion are made possible through dues paid for membership and we appreciate the great part played by Post No. 151 of Farmville, N.C. Sincere thanks to every member of the Post who had a part in the membership work."

The incentive goal of Post No. 151 is 103 and the membership for 1959 to date is 108. Incentive Goals are assigned each Post by the State Headquarters and are based on last year's membership of the Post plus 2 per cent.

Destitute Man Strikes It Rich

LONDON (AP)—Percy Barstow, a London flophouse inmate with $1.40 to last him a week, learned Tuesday night he'd won 14,045 pounds ($42,126) on a football pool.

Barstow is 62, jobless, racked with pleurisy and worried by heart trouble.

He had staked 35 cents of the $7 a week he draws from government relief on forecasting the results of Britain's weekend football matches. And he came up a winner.

The ex-bricklayer doesn't get his winnings until Saturday so Tuesday night he celebrated with a 14-cent meat pie dinner.

Barstow will go to New Zealand to look up an old friend.

there was considerable sentiment against a return to the two-plateau system. He explained the "wild card" player, as in a poker game, this way: "If only one eligible substitute enters the field while the clock is stopped, he will not be recorded as an entry, except during an excess time out, such as when a player is hurt."

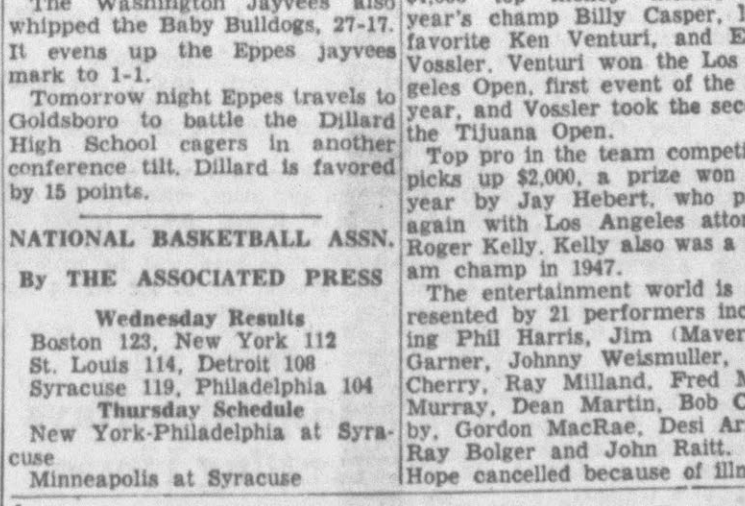

Such was the hope today of the men who write and rewrite the rule book, the National Collegiate Rules Committee. Their major changes, announced Wednesday after a three-day meeting:

1. Relaxation of the substitution rule. 2. Widening of the goal posts—for the first time in the history of the game — from the present inside-post distance of 18 feet 6 inches to 23 feet 4 inches, or the outside distance of 19-2 to 24. The posts remain 10 yards back of the goal line.

GOP Women Urged Help Convince Voters Opposition Is 'Too Divided'

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Republican National Committee's assistant chairman today called on GOP women to help party leaders convince voters that the Democratic party "is nothing more than a shifting coalition of diverse-minded officer-seekers."

"It is our job," said Mrs. Claire B. Williams, "to show the people of America that the opposition is too divided to rule the nation; too enchanted with dinosaur philosophies to warrant votes for the space age; too historically weak on the vital job of maintaining peace."

And by 1960, Mrs. Williams declared, "we must build a new and correct image of our own party by continually talking facts on our achievements."

In a speech prepared for delivery at a meeting here of the executive committee and board of directors of the National Federation of Republican Women, Mrs. Williams asserted:

"The opposition won in 1958 by sickly peddling falsehoods of fear and doubt about America's accomplishments, about our great and growing stature in the world, and about our bright potential for the future.

"In this context, the opposition in effect holds control of the new Congress with false credentials."

Mrs. Williams also charged that through the AFL-CIO's political arm, the Committee on Political Education, "labor controls or owns outright almost half of the members of the United States Congress."

"This," she continued, "can only happen where there is a vacuum. The vacuum in the Democratic party enabled COPE to move in and become the party itself."

Despite this, she said, the GOP has "provided a better shake for labor."

Turning to the Democratic party's stronghold, Mrs. Williams said, "I believe we could trigger a political explosion in the South simply by communicating the true facts on a thorough precinct basis. Standing here in Charlotte, in a border state, it is incomprehensible to me that Southerners do not recognize that the Republican party is the one through which their views will find truest expression."

The national committeewoman added that "the Southern vote should take the advice of Paul Butler (national Democratic chairman), Robert Meyner (governor New Jersey) and Paul Douglas (U.S. senator from Illinois). Those three Democrats have told their Southern party members to get lost. Instead, for some strange reason, Southerners are continuing to support a party dominated by the spendthrift northern coalition bent on bankrupting the nation."

The Republican women, who ended a three-day policy meeting today, were told by an administrative official Wednesday that the reasons for the party's defeat last year must be corrected "regardless of what is involved."

Corrective action, said Herbert B. Warburton, general counsel of the Post Office Department, "will involve personalities in the party structure."

Calling for a revitalized GOP, Warburton said the "dead wood should be weeded out where it exists. It should be done now so that no more damage can result that has already occurred."

BIG JOB—William L. Mitchell, 58, a career federal worker, is the new head of the Social Security Administration. He will direct the largest social insurance and social welfare operation of his kind in the world.

New Housing Boss Will Be In Middle Of Fight

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's new housing boss, Norman P. Mason, will step squarely into the middle of a first-class row shaping up between Congress and the administration. He says he doesn't mind at all.

Mason told a reporter today that "anyone with a little fighting spirit and red blood in his veins" should welcome the give and take that goes with presenting a controversial program to a critical Congress. That's the way democracy works, he said.

The controversy in this case: the extent of government housing programs under Eisenhower's efforts to hold down spending. Democratic critics have proposed more spending for housing.

Mason, now head of the Federal Housing Administration, was nominated by Eisenhower to head the parent Housing and Home Finance Agency. The 62-year-old Massachusetts Republican will change offices as soon as the Senate confirms his nomination.

The top HHFA post is being vacated by Albert M. Cole, who made it plain to newsmen he won't be at all sad to miss this year's give and take on Capitol Hill.

Cole will become an aluminum company executive.

Stepping into a hot spot is a repetition of history in Mason's case. He left his lumber business in North Chelmsford, Mass., in 1954 and took over at FHA after his predecessor was bounced.

Mason's assignment was to pick up the pieces after Congress turned up evidence that FHA did little to stop chiseling by some home improvement firms or to recover excess profits from builders of apartment projects who obtained loans for more than the projects cost.

The pieces were picked up. Small, stout and now gray, Mason was born in Willsboro, N.Y., Dec. 24, 1896. The family moved to Plattsburgh, N.Y., 14 years later, when his father set up a lumber and hardware business there.

Mason worked in the hardware store, signed on with the Navy in World War I, and married Helen Proctor, daughter of a North Chelmsford lumber dealer.

When his father died in 1923, Mason liquidated the Plattsburgh business and joined the William P. Proctor Lumber Co. in North Chelmsford. He was executive officer and treasurer of the Proctor firm for many years and was twice elected president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers Assn.

The Masons have a son and a daughter, both married, and four grandsons. The son, David, now owns the Proctor firm.

McKeldin Back In Law Offices

BALTIMORE (AP) — Theodore R. McKeldin, a Republican comet who blazed new trails across the political skies of Maryland in two terms as governor, returned to his law practice here today.

He hoped that it was only a temporary stopover between public jobs.

A Baltimore court, and then the Maryland Court of Appeals, are to decide soon whether he can run for mayor of Baltimore, a post he held from 1943 to 1947. The city primary is March 3 and the general election in May.

McKeldin was barred by the state constitution from seeking a third straight term as governor.

He turned over the office Wednesday to J. Millard Taves, 64, former state comptroller who led a Democratic landslide in Maryland last Nov. 4.

The energetic 58-year-old ex-governor, son of a Baltimore policeman, resumed his law practice with M. William Adelson while waiting out the court battles over his residency.

The state constitution required him to live in Annapolis during his eight years as governor. The Baltimore Charter requires that a majority candidate have lived in the city for 10 years preceding the general election. McKeldin maintained a home here while he was in Annapolis.

In 1962 he achieved national prominence when he was chosen to deliver the nominating address for Dwight Eisenhower at the Republican National Convention. He has been an ardent Eisenhower booster throughout his administration.

Wingless Relic Of Early Jet Age Stirs Memories

RELIC OF THE JET AGE—Jack Hardwick (right) shows newsmen Russ Leadsbrand controls of an A-10, wingless and alone in a field in El Monte, Calif. The A-10 was the first jet interceptor turned out by the United States.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pioneer of the jet age sits wingless, lonely and all but forgotten in a field in nearby El Monte.

It's a Bell P-59 Aircomet, the first jet interceptor turned out by the United States. It's believed to be the only survivor of 67 planes of its type built after Pearl Harbor.

The Aircomet is one of a number of old airplanes owned by Jack Hardwick, an Arcadia aircraft manufacturer and a former war-time combat pilot.

They are planes to stir the memories of World War II fliers — a P-40 Warhawk; a P-39 Aircobra; a P-47 Thunderbolt; a P-51 Mustang and a B-25 Mitchell bomber.

To Hardwick they are all old friends, familiar machines of a former day. He still puts them together and poses them from time to time for movie producers.

Now Only Relics

Not long ago, the planes were the hottest things of their day. Now they've become relics, far outdistanced in speed, performance and firing power.

The Aircomet, though, made history without becoming a crack performer. Disappointed builders found the jet fighter had almost no edge over propeller-driven aircraft.

The Aircomet, seldom trusted more than 45 minutes from base because of an astonishing appetite for fuel, was assigned the lowly task of a trainer.

Hardwick and his mechanics oc-asionally rev up the two turbojets just to hear them sing. He has never had it off the ground, although he thinks it would fly.

Hardwick joined the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1941. When the U.S. got into war, he enlisted in the American Air Force and ferried planes to North Africa and Italy.

Used as Props

Now he deals in airplanes and among other things has supplied aircraft for motion pictures and television.

Hardwick's heart is some place else, though. At Brackett Field in Pomona he keeps four airplanes. Two are P-38 Lightnings, which he grew to love in World War II. Another is a World War I Jenny, the fourth a modern Beechcraft Bonanza.

He likes to fly them all.

But, almost sadly, Hardwick says the day of the man in a military airplane is coming to a close.

Machine guns and cannon don't work any more, with fighters capable of flying 1,200 to 1,400 miles per hour. It takes rockets and missiles. Soon man will be back on the ground except for flying cargo and liaison.

"The day of the fighter pilot is over," Hardwick says.

Freedom Walk By Triple Killer

BALTIMORE (AP) — William Boyd Gilliam, 45, who had served nearly 17 years for a triple killing and would have been eligible for parole next fall, walked away from a work detail just outside the penitentiary Wednesday.

Gilliam was sentenced to 38 years for the gun and knife slayings of two women and a man in Baltimore County in January, 1942. He contended the slayings occurred when the three tried to rob him.

Warden Vernon L. Peppersack said Gilliam, a trusty since May, 1956, would have been up for parole in October.

LONG MEMORY

BRIDGETOWN, N. S. (AP) — John Fletcher Bath, celebrating his 101st birthday here, was active as a cattle buyer and seller in past years. He recalled that he once walked 115 miles to Halifax to sell a cow.

Stripper Asks Review Of Case

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Lawyers for baby-faced, shapely Candy Barr — blonde stripper convicted on a narcotics charge — will ask an appeals court to reconsider her case.

The State Court of Criminal Appeals Wednesday voted 2-1 to uphold her 15-year sentence. Convicted of marijuana possession, the young blonde is free on $15,000 bail.

Candy, whose real name is Juanita Dale Phillips, is reported to be appearing in a New Orleans, La., nightclub. Her attorneys told the court Candy was holding the marijuana for a friend.

On the west coast of Africa are "speaking drums" which sound oddly like voices.

Communist Press Plays Up North Carolina Case

ROME (AP) — Italy's Communist press is splashing its main pages with the story of the two American Negro boys sent to reform school after kissing a 6-year-old white girl.

Paese Sera of Rome, a Communist-line daily, spread a picture of David (Fuzzy) Simpson, 8, and James Hanover Thompson, 10, over five columns of page one. It was headed "Negro Children Condemned For a Kiss."

The paper devoted almost its entire back page to two more photographs, across seven columns of Simpson with his mother.

L'Unita, official newspaper of the Italian Communist party, also gave over much of its front and back pages to photographs and a report of Superior Court Judge Walter E. Johnston's refusal in Wadesboro, N. C., two days ago to release the two boys from a reformatory.

"He will grow up in jail" said the caption over the front-page picture of Simpson and his mother. On the back page were two pictures of the boys and their weeping mothers. The heading: "Two children and two mothers guilty of being Negroes."

Judge Johnston in rejecting a habeas corpus plea by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People said the two children had not been taken into custody illegally nor sent to the reform school illegally.

The judge said the boys are delinquents, with a record of eight or nine offenses before the kissing incident. Most of the previous complaints were of theft and breaking and entering.

TOOLS OF THE TRADE

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The new officers of the Tucson Professional Photographers Assn. lined up to have their picture taken — and found none of the 40 attending members had brought a camera.

Contrary to public opinion, more colds and sore throats get their start indoors rather than outside during cold weather.

Action Dictated By Irish Vote

DETROIT (AP) — The Irish vote is heavy in suburban Roseville.

With this in mind, Roseville's school board is going to change the date of an important school tax election.

"We can't afford," said board attorney Raymond Cashen, "to get the Irish mad at us."

Cashen, himself an Irishman, said the board inadvertently set the election for March 17, St. Patrick's Day, requiring the closing of all bars under election law.

Hospital X-Rays Trotting Horse

ST. ALBANS, Vt. (AP) — The patient walked rather awkwardly through a corridor of Kerbs Memorial Hospital Wednesday, starting patients and employees.

In this case the patient was a 5-year-old trotting horse named H-Bomb, a $10,000 winner at harness meets last year.

The hospital agreed to X-ray the horse because no veterinarians in the area had X-ray equipment.

Trainers had been treating the horse for a calcium deposit built up on the front leg but they could not determine the effectiveness of the treatment without X-rays.

Whatever the origin, it appears that all nations had drums very early in man's history.

Fast-Moving Mikoyan Leaves Even Newsmen A Little Bit Breathless

By THOMAS P. WHITNEY
NEW YORK (AP) — "That guy!" gasped the veteran West Coast reporter. "There was that one little kid with a big red baseball cap in the whole crowd. This Mikoyan no more gets out the door than he spots him and goes right over to pat him on the head. All the cameras went off at once."

The scene had taken place at Perino's restaurant on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles.

In Detroit an exhausted reporter at the end of a long day sank in his chair at the office: "If Mickey Mantle could only give the legs this guy has got. He must have walked 10 miles today through all those auto plants. And he's 63 years old too."

At the Lincoln Electric Co. plant in Cleveland Mikoyan stopped to chat with a worker who spoke a bit of Russian. After a brief but cordial exchange, Mikoyan extended his hand to give a warm clasp and said: "And please do remember to give my very best wishes to your father and mother."

At a news conference at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles a correspondent asked a ticklish question: "How is it that you have managed to survive through four governments of the Soviet Union when others have not?"

Without a flicker of an eyelash, Mikoyan quipped in reply: "Didn't I say before that I thought I was fortunate . . ."

All these and dozens of other incidents illustrate one fact about Anastas I. Mikoyan. He takes to political campaigning like a duck to water. He has a gift for doing exactly the right thing at the right time in order to win over his audience or grab the stage. He loves being in the limelight. And he doesn't mind an uphill struggle.

"You know if he were to stick around for a while I think he would get elected senator," joked a California businessman.

Aid in fact in his seven-day, five-city coast-to-coast tour of America, Mikoyan was waging a real political campaign. He was running against the deep mistrust for the Soviet Union which by now is ingrained in the American mind. He was campaigning to establish a picture of a Soviet leader as a warm, friendly, humorous and human type of person. He was campaigning against trade restrictions, against suspicion of Soviet motives. The platform he was running on was peace and an end to the cold war, more trade and more contacts between the Soviet Union and America, and the concept of "let's talk things over even if we don't think we can settle anything."

The Mikoyan technique includes humor, frankness, reasonableness, a warmly human approach and unperturbed stolidity in the face of open hostility.

His sense of humor has made more impression than perhaps any other single element in his approach.

On Adlai Stevenson: "After our talk with him Khrushchev and I changed impressions. We decided here is a thinking American who desires to understand us better. He lacked a few million votes of becoming president. Perhaps if we had been approached we could have lent them to him."

On U.S. trade restrictions: "Among things permitted for export to the Soviet Union are laxatives. Thank you, but it is impossible to soften us up that way."

Seen at close quarters over a period of time, Mikoyan emerges as a man of enormous vitality and energy. This is not merely a matter of being able to walk miles, make one speech after another before tough audiences, and get by at times with only a few hours sleep. It is a question of having the bounding vigor which makes these things and the other responsibilities of Soviet statesmanship a creative opportunity and not just a chore.

Fighting Defense Of U. S. Missile Program Sighted

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and top Republican spokesmen appeared ready today with a fighting defense of the administration's space, missile and security programs.

Key leaders in the new and heavily Democratic Congress already have promised searching and critical investigations into all phases of the Eisenhower defense policies and programs.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon has indirectly invited such an investigation, and expressed to fellow Republicans confidence that the programs will stand up under the scrutiny.

Both the President and the new Republican Senate leader, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, defended the programs publicly Wednesday.

Eisenhower told a National Press Club luncheon that this country had "made remarkable progress" in the field of long-range missiles.

As to the Soviet's accomplishments in this field, he said "if we don't believe that they were somewhat ahead in certain phases, we would indeed be a little stupid, because they have been working at it for many years, and our urgent work in this field on the long-range missile has started only something like four years ago."

Eisenhower commented that he thinks it shows a lack of sense of balance "to disturb ourselves too much that we have not yet caught up with another great power and people with great technical skill in a particular item."

He said this country must have a balanced military program and be ready to meet any attack without knowing when, where or how it can start, and be ready to respond instantly.

"I think we are," he said. "We have made very remarkable progress."

About the time Eisenhower was speaking, Dirksen replied in the Senate to Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), who said Monday the administration is trying "to lull people into a state of complacency not justified by the facts."

Symington was secretary of the Air Force under former President Truman, and has been a frequent critic of defense policies.

Dirksen suggested that Symington or some other Truman administration spokesman should admit publicly that for six years, "while our missile programs were virtually nonexistent the Soviet program was going forward, full tilt."

This accounted for any lag behind the Soviets, Dirksen contended. He quoted statements of Dr. Werner von Braun, German-born Army missile expert, to support that contention.

Symington delayed a direct reply to Dirksen's speech until he could study them, but Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) said Republicans "are worried and trying to head off critical questions about security programs."

Disappearance By Family Of 4

MINERAL, Va. (AP) — "We are still checking leads, of course, but we have so far found only cold trails."

That's the way authorities sum up their investigation of the baffling disappearance of 29-year-old Carrol V. Jackson Jr. and his family Sunday night. The feed company employe, his wife, and their two small daughters vanished into thin air. The family car, with keys in the ignition, was found Monday on a country road in Louisa County, 40 miles west of Richmond.

Sheriff W. E. Proffitt calls the case a "probable kidnaping. I don't know what the kidnap motive would be unless some maniac was loose in the area," he said Wednesday.

Accounting the theory was the report that another family of four was forced off the road the same night near where the Jackson car was found. They told police a young man driving an old model car pulled in front of them and forced them to stop. However, they managed to drive around the old car and escaped.

Besides the husband, the missing family includes Mrs. Mildred Hill Jackson, 27; Susan Ann, 4, and Janet Carrol, 17 months.

Molybdenum Is Cast First Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists have produced the first casting of molybdenum, a metallic element which has excellent strength at high temperatures.

The Interior Department described this as a major metallurgical breakthrough of importance to space and missile programs.

Marling J. Ankeny, director of the Bureau of Mines, said scientists at the agency's Albany, Ore., laboratory had produced a simple cylindrical molybdenum casting. He said the metallurgists now are trying to improve techniques so intricate shapes can be created by the process.

He said such intricate items would advance the development of missiles, rockets and satellites, giving the missile engineer greater flexibility of design and a cheaper way to construct vital components.

The strength which molybdenum has at high temperatures is needed for certain applications in missile parts. The metal increases the hardness and strength of steel.

But its high melting point — 4,748 degrees Fahrenheit — destroyed the crucibles used in earlier attempts to cast it. By comparison, pure iron melts at 2,795 degrees.

Here is how the casting was made:

Under remote-control conditions, a high-density electric arc was used to melt a 30-pound charge of molybdenum in a water-cooled, copper-lined melting pot.

The intensely hot material was poured through a series of troughs into a rotating graphite cylinder that forced the metal to the walls of the rotating mold. There the metal consolidated, froze and produced a hollow molybdenum cylinder 4 1/2 inches wide and 8 inches long.

The United States has about 90 per cent of the world's known molybdenum reserves, most of it in Colorado, Utah, Arizona, California, New Mexico and Nevada.

January was several centuries old before it was moved to the position as first month in the Roman calendar. Previously the year began with March.

There It Was, A Growing Carpet

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. (AP) Mrs. Ronald Dean thought she had trouble a few weeks ago when during a cold spell, her washing machine froze up and flooded her living room.

Tuesday a neighbor asked Mrs. Dean if her living room rug was growing.

"I wondered if she'd lost her mind," Mrs. Dean said.

Her neighbor hadn't though. On the green carpet where the bird cage had stood, tiny bird seeds were sprouting.

Billy Graham Is Ordered To Rest

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP)—An eye ailment will force Billy Graham to take a month's rest and then curtail his future activities, says the evangelist's personal physician, Dr. Kenneth Gieser of Chicago.

Dr. Gieser said Wednesday night he and Mayo Clinic specialists had confirmed that Graham was suffering from a spastic swelling of blood vessels back of the retina of the left eye, cutting sight of that eye by about 50 per cent.

Grad. Wilson, a Graham associate, said the minister would take the rest ordered by the doctors after remaining here the rest of this week for further examination and treatment.

Wilson said the evangelist was still planning on the Australian revival crusade, with its start set back to Feb. 15. Where Graham would spend the month's rest has not been decided.

Wilson said the Australian program probably would be shortened somewhat. He added that a complete report on Graham's physical condition was not expected until later this week.

Declares Darwin Probable Victim

BALTIMORE (AP) — An Army scientist says Charles Darwin would be the victim of his own "survival of the fittest" concept if he were alive in this era of science.

Dr. Charles A. Wilber of the Army Chemical Center, Edgewood, Md., characterized the famed biologist as a hypochondriac whose dotting wife nursed his imaginary aches and pains, comforted him and entertained him with daily piano renditions and backgammon competition.

Wilber spoke Wednesday night

Some Fascinating Shots Of TV Camera 'Killed'

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK AP—Tom Galvin knows that some of life's most fascinating scenes end up on a film cutting room floor. If the nation's celebrities appear to best advantage on NBC-TV's "Today" program, they can thank Galvin, who has been carefully guarding their reputations as supervising film editor of the show since it went on the air seven years ago.

With the promise that no names would be revealed, Galvin took to reminiscing the other day. He recalled:

The filmed interview with a leading lady prominent in American politics who kept dozing while the TV reporter asked her questions. Galvin's gallant scissors made her appear wide awake.

The eminent poet who, when making a filmed commentary on his work, used language unpoetic and unfit for home consumption each time he muffed a line. When Galvin finished cutting, his remarks were both poetic and proper.

The renowned novelist who kept a glass of whisky under his chair and hoisted it frequently during a filmed interview in his home. Galvin's scissors made him look like a teetotaler.

The elder statesman who was seized by a violent and uncontrollable itch before the cameras. Galvin made sure he didn't scratch once on the home screen.

Galvin has been a celebrity watcher since 1925, when he became film editor for a newreel company at the age of 15. All his work with film has stood Galvin in good stead when viewing TV at home. When his highly trained eyes watch a filmed show, he can tell when it's exactly 11 seconds before the commercial break—and thus gets a head start for the beer in the refrigerator. "Ten Little Indians," visible on NBC-TV Sunday, is not a Western or a children's story, but an English murder mystery based on Agatha Christie's "And Then There Were None."

Nina Foch will co-star with Barry Jones in the mystery. The mystery, presented as a special, concerns 10 persons summoned mysteriously to an island off the English coast. Eight of them disappear mysteriously, and each time an Indian figurine topples from a mantle.

James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, learned to play the trumpet in a settlement house. It took him eight years to get past the fourth grade in school.

HOW'S THAT?
LAGRANGE, Ind. (AP)—Raymond Troyer considered his musical ability had been slurred when he telephoned this classified ad to the Lagrange Standard: "For Sale, trombone and boxer pups." The ad came out reading: "For sale, trombone and box of plugs."

Beer is a cockroach's delight, and sometimes its undoing. Dozens will tumble head first into an inch of beer in an abandoned glass and drown.

NEW HOME WITH DOME—The Pentelikon Observatory outside Athens nears completion. It will house the big Newall refractor donated by Cambridge University. Building is of marble from same quarries used for the Parthenon.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures
 This is the report of a bulb, a bug and a buddy.
 The bulb is a new flashbulb — the AG1, world's smallest. The bug was a 24-hour-virus type which prevented me from attending the bulb's debut. And the buddy is Ralph "Skipper" Miller, camera columnist for the New York World-Telegram & Sun and U.S. Camera magazine, who used a third pencil to make notes so that I could get out this report.
 The new flashbulb was unveiled by General Electric Co. at its research lab in Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio. Made entirely of glass, it's as big as the end segment of your little pinky, says "Skipper" Miller, but loaded with 7,000 lumen seconds of light power from 25 feet of zirconium packed into its jelly-bean-size lighthouse. It is so tiny, a half-dozen of them will fit into something only a trifle bigger than your ball-point pen but each one gives as much light as that obtained from the present smallest flash-bulb, the M2, which is four times larger.
 New camera designs, he predicts, are sure to take place. Undoubtedly, they will accommodate a clip of the new flashlamps in the handle of new, small flashguns in the same way that an automatic pistol takes a clip of bullets. A tiny, strong spring in the base of the clip will push a new flashbulb into firing position after each picture is taken. Then you can point your camera and go flash . . . flash . . . flash . . . for a half dozen pictures in a row.

 One of the differences, you will note, between this flashbulb and all the others we have known, is —no metal base! The base, like the body, is all glass and that's why its new designation is AG. The glass eliminates any chance for corrosion which sometimes causes one of the metal-base units to misfire. It also allows a reduction in price, lowering the cost of flashbulbs by one cent each.
 It is expected to find its greatest use with the simple, box-type cameras. It is also designed to work with Class M synchronized cameras at all shutter speeds and with "F", "X" and some focal plane shutters at speeds up to 1/80th of a second. As an example of its ability to throw light, a guide number of 50 is given for an M-type shutter at 1/30th second, using tungsten type Kodachrome. Tiny AG blue flashlamps give off 4,000 lumen seconds of light for daylight type color film.
 However, it is also recommended that shooting with color film should be confined to within 10 feet of the camera and, with black-and-white film, within 20 feet.
 According to GE researchers, this should solve one of the biggest problems of photographers. Surveys show that two-thirds of all amateur flash pictures are made at distances of 10 feet or less. And most flash pictures shot at greater distances would have been better if they had been shot closer. However, the greatest fault with close-up flash pictures has been overexposure.

 The new AG flashlamp, in a two-inch reflector, is just right for flash pictures of people at 6, 7 or 8-foot distances.
 When will this new lamp be available? Late spring or early summer is a good prediction, according to Miller. In the meantime equipment manufacturers will be designing new accessories around it.
 Speaking of flash photography, do you realize that just 28 years ago there were no flashbulbs at all? Till then, photographers took pictures by exploding flash-powder — a sort of gunpowder on the loose. Then they "bottled sunshine" and GE came out with its first flashbulb, the size of a modern 150-watt household lamp. Now that they've whittled it down to the size of the top of your pinky, we can really say we have light at our fingertips.

Church Vocation Conference Set

WILSON — Outstanding young people from the Christian Churches of North Carolina will come to the Atlantic Christian College campus this weekend to attend a Church Vocations Conference.
 Purpose of the conference, sponsored annually by the college and the North Carolina Christian Missionary Society, is to inform young people about church vocations.
 The conference was started four years ago in an attempt to interest more young people in the Church as a life-time vocation. All Protestant denominations have a shortage of church personnel.
 Allan R. Sharp, Acting Chairman of the Department of Religion and Philosophy at ACC, will serve as director of the conference which will open with registration Friday afternoon at 4 p.m.
 Main speaker for the conference will be Dr. J. Daniel Joyce, Minister of the Hanover Avenue Christian Church of Richmond, Va. Dr. Joyce is now serving as chairman of a theological study committee reporting to the World Convention of the Churches of Christ with headquarters in New York.

 Other institutions which received identical grants are Yale University, Harvard University, Columbia University, Princeton University, University of Chicago, New York University, Dartmouth College, University of Pennsylvania, and Stanford University.
 The grants represented a portion of the Foundation's aid-to-education program which during 1958 made grants totaling $150,000 to 66 colleges and universities.
 An "important" factor in determining which institutions should receive grants of $10,000 each, officials stated, was the fact that "a substantial proportion of the Chase Manhattan Bank's present and potential management personnel has received education and training from the institutions selected."
 The Foundation, a non-profit, charitable trust established by the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York for making philanthropic contributions, also announced a plan under which it will match a gift by any Chase Manhattan Bank employee to any qualified college, university or independent secondary school.

Helped Women, Shot As Reward
WARREN, Pa. (AP)—Richard J. Fairchild, 22, of Corry, told police he was driving to Warren Tuesday when he encountered two women motorists with a flat tire. Fairchild said he stopped and helped change the tire. After he was finished, he said one of the women said: "Here's your reward," and shot him with a rifle she took from her car.

 Fairchild is in fair condition in Warren General Hospital with a wound of the left shoulder as police investigate his story.

Some Would Broaden 'Work Release' Law

By REESE HART
 RALEIGH (AP) — Several Superior Court judges believe the General Assembly should consider the possibility of broadening the "work release" law to include certain felons.

The present law, enacted by the 1957 Legislature, contains a restriction which sharply limits the number of prisoners who can come under the plan.

Under the law, a judge may recommend when he passes sentence on a misdemeanant prisoner that he serve his sentence in all at nights and weekends and work during the daytime at his regular job. The law does not apply to felon prisoners.

A restriction specifies that if a misdemeanant has ever served six months or more he is not eligible to come under the plan. The original bill, supported by the State Prisons Department, would have permitted felons with sentences of up to two years to be brought under the plan. The bill was amended to remove this.

Of eight Superior Court judges and three lower court judges questioned by the Associated Press, nine said they had sentenced any defendant under the plan.

State Prisons Director W. F. Bailey said, "It might be that the law could be broadened now. The Legislature might be receptive to the idea."

Only 10 prisoners have been sentenced under the work release law. Of this number, two misbehaved and had to be removed from the plan, Bailey said.

The law has been in effect on a trial basis in five counties where the prison department has work release facilities. These are Wake, Mecklenburg, Guilford, Forsyth and Buncombe.

It has not proved successful enough to extend the facilities to other areas of the state, Bailey said. He added, "The weakness is not a lack of facilities."

Bob Giles, administrative aide to Gov. Hodges, said the law is applicable really only to first offenders and more often than not they are given a suspended sentence or fine.

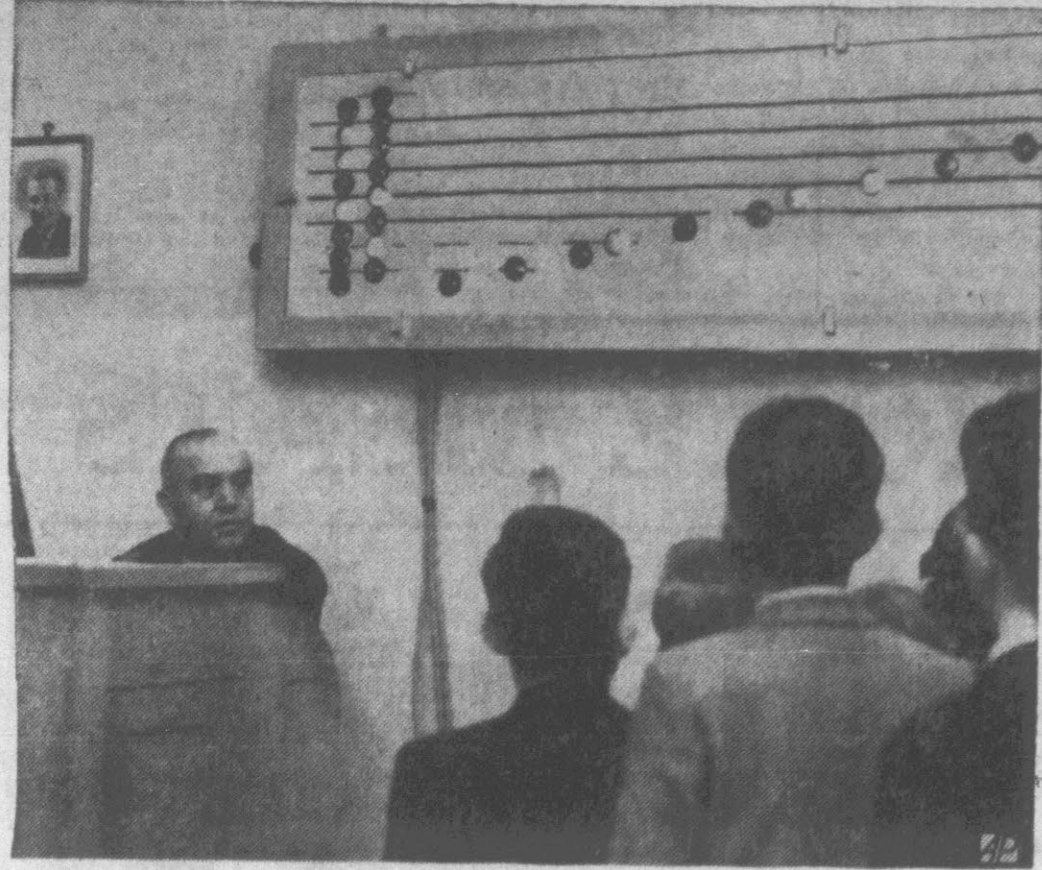

Several thousand first offenders are sentenced to prison each year, Bailey said. Some are for 30 and 60-day terms, others for longer sentences.

One of the purposes of the work release law as to make it possible for eligible misdemeanants with children to work at their regular jobs and support their families while serving terms at night and on weekends. This would relieve the Welfare Department, in many instances, of the task of providing support for the families.

Several Superior Court judges, questioned on the 1957 law by the Associated Press, offered the opinion that it might be well for the Legislature to consider the possibility of broadening it so that judges could use their discretion in certain felon cases.

These judges included Raymond Mallard of Tabor City, Clifton L. Moore of Burgaw, William Y. Bickett of Raleigh, Malcolm Paul of Washington, Walter J. Bone of Nashville and Walter E. Crisman of High Point. Judge Hubert E. Olive of Lexington said he didn't want to comment on it.

$3,725,000 for company properties. If the offer is rejected the city plans to issue revenue certificates to raise money and buy 242 buses, both new and used.

Urge To Merge Is Still Strong Despite Frown

By SAM DAWSON
 NEW YORK (AP) — The urge to merge has continued strong through the recession and the recovery. Rumors of still more corporate mergers are prime factors in motivating traders in the stock market.

Sometimes the government has frowned upon such plans — a federal judge has halted for the present at least the nuptials desired by Bethlehem Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

Sometimes the ardor of one or more companies who have been going together has cooled — the New York Central has stopped its merger talks with the Pennsylvania Railroad.

But the Central's president says his railway still has its eye out for any other heiress who might be ready to fall into its lap. And several other eastern roads are exploring the possibilities of various combinations.

A striking number of mergers have taken place in recent months. The Federal Trade Commission says it noted more than 900 industrial mergers or acquisitions of other types in 1956.

Only a few mergers get the frown of the Federal Government. The antimerger section of the antitrust law was made stricter in 1950, but since then only 40 antimerger cases have been filed.

The government acts when, as in the steel merger proposal, it believes there will be a harmful lessening of competition within the industry.

In all, this decade has seen about 2,000 corporate unions so far. Why is the merger urge still so strong?

During the recession there was some merging of companies seeking to survive. Some had run up enough of a loss to make them attractive to more prosperous companies who could use these losses to offset their own profits.

in figuring income taxes. Both the recession and the recovery, so far as it has gone, have increased the competition factor in many industries. Some mergers have grown out of a desire to get the excellent management or skilled engineers of another company.

A leading cause for mergers is to increase total capacity, in the belief that production can be made more efficient and competitive that way.

Some mergers have been sparked by a desire for more capacity in a specific area — Bethlehem Steel said it could move solidly into the Midwest markets if it acquired Youngstown.

Recession and recovery — the mild form of business cycles — stimulates the search for product diversification, since one line of goods may be moving well while another falters. Many postwar mergers have been based on this search for insurance.

Some mergers have come about because a manufacturing company wanted to take over a distributing or retailing concern and thus move into the consumer market for the goods it produced.

Others have been born of a yen to gain sources of supply of raw materials, thus insulating a company against fluctuations in supply or raids on such sources by competitors.

One characteristic of the mergers since World War II noted by many observers has been that most of them have been started by corporate managements themselves.

Before the turn of the century many were built by bankers into the big trusts that brought on the antitrust laws. Bankers also often sparked the mergers after World War I which flooded the stock market with new issues and fed the debacle of 1929.

New Endowment Fund Initiated

MOUNT OLIVE — The establishment of an endowment fund at Mount Olive Junior College to be known as the "Free Will Baptist Heritage Foundation" has been announced by President W. Burkette Raper. Plans for the fund were officially adopted by the Finance Committee of the Board of Directors in their winter meeting at Mount Olive.

Initial contributions to the Foundation have already reached $1,500, M. L. Johnson, treasurer of the College, revealed.

The Finance Committee, composed of Chairman Hardy Talton and W. P. Grant of Goldsboro, and Fred S. Powers of Timmonsville, South Carolina, also made plans for the building of a student center at the College during the spring and summer.

Other action of the Committee was to approve the participation of Mount Olive Junior College in the student loan program of the National Defense Education Act and to determine student fees for the 1956-57 school year. Tuition and board will be the same next year as this year, but the Committee voted an increase of $30 per year in general fees. Total expenses next year will be $397.50 per semester for boarding students and $205 for day students, President Raper disclosed.

Judge Moore suggested, "It might actually be well to let judges use their discretion in cases like that carry sentences up to 16 years." The man was convicted in a manslaughter case growing out of a motor vehicle accident. He was a skilled worker, who had a good job, several children and transportation to and from his work. Judge Moore felt that some prison sentence was needed and he gave the man a three to five-year term. He suspended it upon the condition that the defendant spend the nights and weekends in jail for one year. The man did this for about nine months and his sentence as terminated.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced toward another historic peak in active trading early this afternoon.

Key stocks rose from fractions to more than a point. Coppers, rails, steels, oils, drugs and selected issues did well. There was a scattering of losers.

The over-all advance was moderate but trading was quite heavy. American Metal Climax was up about 2 points. CIT Financial recouped about a point of recent losses on news that Ford Motor Co. will re-enter new car financing.

American Motors was off about a point. American Metal Climax opened on a 10,000-share block and later was up 1 3/4 to 30¢ on a huge block of 42,100 shares.

Jones & Laughlin was up a point or so as was Crucible. Acme and Allegheny Ludlum advanced fractionally.

Gains of more than a point were posted for Anaconda, Kennecott and Magna Copper.

Merk was about a point to the good while Pfizer rose well over a point.

Chrysler was about unchanged. Ford and Studebaker-Packard were firm. General Motors was ahead a fraction.

Other gainers of about a point included Goodyear, Western Union, Texas Co. and American Tobacco.

U.S. government bonds were slightly higher.

Johnson Holds Taut Party Rein As Committees Are Assigned

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) held a taut rein today on the Senate party organization.

With Johnson in full command as majority leader, Democrats parceled out their committee assignments Wednesday. Republicans are expected to have their assignments completed in time for approval by the Senate on Saturday. That would permit organization of individual committees next week.

In an agreement with Sen. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, Johnson won Senate approval of enlarging some of the important Senate committees and revamping their party ratios to conform with the new lineup of 64 Democrats and 34 Republicans.

Johnson's assignment of his party members appeared to reward some of the Democratic freshmen who supported his successful effort this week to compromise the fight over the senate's filibuster rule.

One of these, Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, got two major committee places, on Appropriations and Banking, an almost unprecedented attainment for a freshman. Sens. Thomas J. Dodd of Connecticut and Gale McGee of Wyoming, who supported Johnson's compromise, also drew Appropriations Committee assignments.

The Appropriations Committee, which handles all of the money bills, was enlarged to 27 members, more than a fourth of the Senate's total of 98.

Other Democrats added to the group included Sens. Alan Bible of Nevada, Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma, and John Stennis of Mississippi.

Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, a strong Johnson backer, won a coveted place on the Foreign Relations Committee. Other party vacancies on that group were filled by Sens. Albert Gore of Tennessee and Frank Lausche of Ohio.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, formerly a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, won a place on the tax-handling Finance Committee. McCarthy opposed Johnson's rules compromise. Sen. R. Vance Hartke of Indiana, who backed Johnson, and Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, also won places on this committee.

Three strong supporters of organized labor were assigned as new members of the Labor Committee. They were Sens. Joseph S. Clark Jr. of Pennsylvania, Jennings Randolph of West Virginia and Harrison A. Williams Jr. of New Jersey.

Georgia Segregation Bills Are Presented

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—A six-bill package "designed to strengthen our position in the fight to preserve segregated schools in Georgia," was placed before the General Assembly today by Gov. Ernest Vandiver.

In his debut speech to the Legislature, Vandiver said he "has no intention of turning Georgia schools and colleges over to the federal government for any purpose, anywhere, at any time during the next four years."

The six segregation proposals proposed by Vandiver would:

1. Authorize the governor to close a public school if it is ordered to be integrated, and to close the school attended by the pupil seeking integration.
2. Prohibit any political subdivision having an independent school system from levying ad valorem taxes to support mixed schools. This would keep such systems from attempting to operate their schools with local funds if state funds are cut off.
3. Permit the governor to designate legal counsel in school cases and to pay fees and expenses of counsel and court costs.
4. Set age limits on prospective university system students except where special dispensation is made. This would be a bar to one of the three Negro women who successfully brought a suit against Georgia State College of Business Administration. She is more than 40 years old.
5. Authorize the governor to close any unit of the university system in order to preserve the peace.
6. Allow taxpayers credit on their state income tax for contributions to private schools. This would facilitate the setting up of schools such as in Little Rock, Ark.

Demand Action To Halt Killings

WASHINGTON (AP)—Asst. Secretary of State Roy Rubottom was summoned before a congressional committee today to face a demand for U.S. action to halt Cuba's postrevolution wave of killings.

Chairman Wayne Hays (D-Ohio) of the Inquiring House Foreign Affairs subcommittee, said he wants to know "What the State Department is going to do to calm Castro down before he depopulates Cuba."

Fidel Castro led the revolution which deposed dictator Fulgencio Batista on New Year's Day.

Hays himself suggested tough U.S. economic measures against Cuba, short of sending in troops. He said they might include cutting off credit to Cuba or barring imports of sugar from the island.

"The United States cannot ignore mass murder now no matter where it is committed," Hays said. "This guy Castro is starting off in the same direction (as Batista), only worse."

But Rep. Alvin M. Bentley (R-Mich.), member of the subcommittee, said he didn't know what the United States could do about changing the way justice is handled in a foreign country. He did express hope that Cuba's government would provide fair trials.

The two spoke in interviews amid evidence of mounting congressional repugnance to the Cuban executions. In the Senate, Sen. Homer Capehart (R-Ind.) said the killings create "the spectacle of a bearded monster stalking through Cuba."

Castro declared in Havana Wednesday that far from calling off the executions, "to the contrary, we have given orders to shoot every one of these murderers." The reported execution toll was then 180 and still mounting.

Way Cleared For Non-Stop Flight From Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The way apparently has been cleared for an Eastern Air Lines non-stop flight service from Charlotte to Chicago.

President T. H. Davis of Piedmont Airlines, whose company had opposed EAL's request for a Charlotte-to-Chicago route that would have provided a stop in Cincinnati, which Piedmont also serves, said Wednesday Piedmont would not oppose a non-stop flight to the midwest.

With this opposition out of the way, EAL's Charlotte district manager, Henry McConnell, said his company would apply immediately to the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to institute the flight.

If the application is approved, McConnell said, service should start by April 1. Charlotte thus would be the terminal from which air passengers in the state could book direct flights to the midwest.

Airliner Missed Runway, Crashes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A big Eastern Air Lines plane carrying 50 passengers missed a runway at fog-shrouded Moutain International Airport here today and crashed into an adjacent wooded area.

No one was injured but most of the passengers, including two infants, were shaken up. The accident happened at 4:45 a.m. (EST).

The passengers, who fled through emergency doors and windows, were transferred to another plane to continue their trip from New York and Washington to Houston, Texas. The plane also carried a crew of five.

Sen. Kennedy In N. C. Tonight

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy, youthful Democrat from Massachusetts mentioned as a presidential candidate, will address the annual dinner meeting of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce tonight. He is expected to discuss labor reforms.

He will be introduced by Sen. Sam J. Ervin of North Carolina. Gov. Luther H. Hodges also will attend.

HOME FOR REFUGEES

ST. RAPHAEL, France (AP)—Through the aid of the World Council of Churches and other Protestant agencies a home for 108 White Russian refugees was opened here recently. It's the fourth of its type in this vicinity.

Evangelist Cites 'Church For Today'

THE REV. L. O. LEET AND MRS. IDALEE MCCULLAR... Visiting Ministers For Stewardship-Evangelism Crusade

The church "built on the conviction that Jesus is the son of the living God" was described last night as "the church for today" by the Rev. L. O. Leet in the first of 11 services planned in a Stewardship-Evangelism Crusade at St. James Methodist Church.

The crusade will continue through January 25 with nightly services, except on Saturdays, at 7:30 in the sanctuary of the church. The Rev. Mr. Leet, National Stewardship Evangelist for the Christian Churches of America, will preach at each of the nightly services and at morning services January 18 and January 25.

About 200 persons attended last night's crusade-opening service and heard the Rev. Mr. Leet say, "We are the physical instruments for God's work, and the church of the living Jesus Christ must have the physical instrument of the local church."

"Man is created in the image of God," he added, "and the human body is necessary for the physical transmission of spiritual things."

The Rev. Mr. Leet based his sermon on the 16th Chapter of Matthew, saying that the "rock" upon which Christ said he would build his church was the "inner conviction of the apostles that Jesus Christ the son of the living God."

The Rev. Mr. Leet was assisted in last night's service by the Rev. John Drake, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church and first of a series of guest ministers who will assist with the nightly services. The Rev. W. M. Howard of Jarvis Memorial Methodist will assist tonight's service when the Rev. Mr. Leet's sermon topic will be "The Faith For Today."

In addition to the visiting minister's sermon, last night's service also included vocal selections by Mrs. Idalee McCullar, director of music for the Leet Team. Mrs. McCullar will direct the crusade choir and other music for the remainder of the services.

Bank Teller Risked His Family But Plot Upset

NEW YORK (AP) — You're a bank teller. A telephone caller tells you to get $10,000 ready for a courier within a quarter of an hour or your wife and son will suffer. You have to make a fast decision.

James Valenti made his. He told his superiors and they nabbed an innocent messenger boy. But Valenti's hunch was right. It was all a complicated deal.

It happened Wednesday at the Hanover Bank near Grand Central Station. Valenti, 24, had to leave his cage to get a phone call.

A man's voice told him: "We're holding your wife, Angela, and son, James. A messenger will come in with an envelope. Put $10,000 in it and nothing will happen to them." The man hung up.

Valenti frantically dialed his home. There was no answer.

Valenti didn't know that a man had called his Brooklyn home and told his wife a phone company check was being made on the line and that she should ignore any rings for the next 13 minutes. He didn't know that his wife and their 2½-year-old son were going shopping anyway.

A uniformed messenger boy arrived at the bank. As he entered the bank with the envelope the surprised boy was seized by a bank guard.

The boy's employer explained that a "Mr. Carter" had the note sent to the bank. The man said he would await a reply in the Lincoln Building lobby. Police rushed to the Lincoln Building, nearby, but no man was found.
