

Negro Schools Of Greene County To Reopen Monday

By JIMMY ELLIS, Reflector Staff Writer. SNOW HILL—Greene County's six Negro schools, closed since Tuesday by a student strike, will reopen Monday morning.

More than 2,800 students will return to their classes as a result of a mass meeting of about 250 Negro parents and bus drivers last night at Greene County Training School. The training school, only Negro high school in the county has been the center of the four-day-old controversy.

did not return until 21 minutes later, when leaders of the meeting were preparing to call for a vote on a motion to reopen the schools. The voting was suspended while the bus drivers were offered a chance to "make any comments you want to make."

The motion to reopen Monday morning was restated and the vote was taken. Two earlier attempts to get motions before the group failed. One failed because the man who made it, identified as the Rev. A. L. Miller of Kinston who reportedly has a church in Snow Hill, stated it improperly. The other, by the Rev. Mr. Canty, was never stated completely because of requests for more discussion.

Extension Of City Zoning Power May Be Requested

A local bill, giving Greenville zoning authority one mile outside the city limits, would be introduced in the Legislature if Planning-Zoning Commission recommendations are followed.

The commission's recommendation will go to the City Council for final approval. Then city officials may ask one of the county's representatives to introduce the bill.

Ledyard Ross, that re-zoning would not be required to construct a proposed dental clinic in a residential area. Stallworth appeared before the board on behalf of Dr. Ross who is now studying orthodontia.

Currie Believes State Will Get Tax Withholding Plan

RALEIGH (AP)—State Revenue Commissioner James S. Currie believes North Carolina will eventually have a state income tax withholding plan.

1960, taxpayers would still have to file 1959 income tax returns. Consequently, the state would wind up getting a big portion of two years' taxes in one year.

and forward the money to the revenue department every three months. He noted this would give them some additional working capital.

Given Big Voice In Research Work

WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. Herbert York, 37, director of defense research and engineering, has been given power to overrule all other defense agencies and services in the space weapon and missile field.

Employees could benefit, he said, in that they would withhold taxes on a week to week basis.

Report Bloody Clashes In Iraq

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—The Syrian press reported today that 132 Iraqis were killed and hundreds injured in fresh bloody clashes between Pan-Arab Nationalist and Communist supporters of Maj. Gen. Abdul Karim Kassem's newly reshuffled Baghdad government.

Republicans Swing Verbal Axes In Lincoln - Day Addresses

Republican speakers swung sharp verbal axes Thursday night as they chipped away at Democratic policies in Lincoln Day speeches across the nation.

He said: "When it comes to personal rights for all Americans, no Republican owes a debt—political, financial or moral—to any one group, any one faction, any one system or organization. The compromises are all on their side. The implied promise and the part performance is all theirs."

following that course—that is, trying to raise taxes." Republican National Chairman Meade Aclorn told an audience at Silver Spring, Md., the Democrats are befuddled by the complexities of the future. He said the Democratic solution for everything is bigger government, more spending, more taxes and more controls.

At Bridgeport, Conn., Charles C. Finucane, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, hit what he called the "absurd slander" by Democrats that Eisenhower is not in command of the government but is a custodial type of chief executive. He said he knew Eisenhower to be the nation's leader in every sense of the word.

Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-NJ) said at West Orange, N.J., that Congress should limit federal spending to programs which have real priority. At Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Sen. John M. Butler (R-Md.), cautioned that excessive spending means higher taxes—which he said would curtail freedom just as if the government put citizens to enforced labor one day out of every three or four.

Ice Jams, More Rain Threatening

Huge ice jams and more rains were potential danger marks today in flood menaced sections of Indiana as overflows in northern Ohio subsided.

Wet weather dampened the two states as well as most other sections in the eastern half of the nation.

The major flood peril appeared ended on the upper Wabash River above Delphi, Ind., after driving thousands of persons from their homes. West Terre Haute was in line as the next major target of the flood waters.

Sandbagging crews, including National Guardsmen, worked through the night in a steady drizzle at West Terre Haute building a temporary dike along Sugar Creek, a Wabash River tributary, instead of trying to patch a 300-foot break in the permanent levee. Some 150 homes were evacuated. The town of 3,300 was declared a state of emergency by town officials.

It's impossible for them to say they will get a bond issue.

They are already planning a bond issue and it's a matter of time. You are already taking ours (by having us) running down to Snow Hill every day.

"They really want to do some of the things we want. We should think of the children. Think, and if you think that sacrificing your children's education is better, then all right. But they can't guarantee us anything without a bond issue.

"We ought to be realistic. They can't go beyond the state on education laws. I ain't trying to aid and abet on either side, but think on both sides."

Resolution Calls For Study Of State's Highway Set-Up

RALEIGH (AP)—Agitation over the organization of the State Highway Commission resulted today in a resolution calling for a study of the state highway setup.

Rep. Marcellus Buchanan tossed in the House hopper the resolution which calls for appointment of a nine-member legislative commission to study and make recommendations with respect to the organization and function of the State Highway Commission.

Dulles Operated Upon Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles today underwent a successful operation for hernia.

The resolution pointed out that the 1957 General Assembly reorganized the State Highway Commission, reducing its membership from 14 to 7. This reorganization also resulted from the recommendations of a study commission.

Buchanan said he was not trying to decide whether the Highway Commission should have many members, as in the past, or fewer, as at present. Public hearings by the Study Commission could settle how the people feel on the question, he added.

White said tissue and fluid were removed during the operation "for microscopic examination."

Applicants May File For Coroner

Pitt County Commissioners will continue to accept applications for the post of county coroner until March 2, Chairman R. L. Martin said today.

The elective office was vacated a week ago by the death of Griffin H. Rouse, coroner since 1942. Martin said this morning that commissioners had intended to fill the vacancy at a special meeting Monday but have since decided to postpone action until their regular meeting in March. He added that applications may be filed with Mrs. Blair Wheelless, clerk to the board.

White indicated no word had come from the doctors on the results of the examination of tissues and fluids.

BOYS WIN OUT

MEDINA, Ohio (AP)—With people who judge high school piebaking contests here, it's boys—two to one. First and second places in the Medina High School piebaking contest this year went to male students. A girl finished third.

Heaton told newsmen Tuesday he found Dulles "worn out" and in need of a rest. The secretary still is suffering from the colon inflammation which hit him Nov. 30. Heaton said he wants to try to clear that up too, with medication and rest.

VALENTINE GIFT . . . Candy or flowers are approved.

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Valentine's Day comes as a surprise to some young men who have never given it a thought. It is uppermost in the mind, however, of their lady loves, who probably have been busy counting gifts instead of sleep before going off to sleep. A girl would be startled to know that her boy-friend was reminded by his mother that "tomorrow is Valentine's Day and I hope you are giving Suzie a remembrance."

A heart-shaped box of chocolates or flowers are the symbols of romance usually on that first Valentine's Day. It's become traditional, almost. And we note to the girl who doesn't put the proper oomph into accepting the little gift.

As Valentine's Day is the time to put on your best sweetheart manners, don't disillusion the young man by stuffing yourself with the chocolates in his presence. Control yourself. He'll want you to open the box, if he's the typical male—men being great candy eaters, but he doesn't want you to gobble it up like a turkey. Eat the candy daintily. Take a piece with its frill, remove the candy and bite into it. If you don't like it, put it in the frill and throw it away. Never touch or squeeze, break or bite into a piece of candy to see what is inside. Choose a piece and stick with it until you eat or dispose of it.

Mrs. W. C. Clay was hostess at an attractive bridge party last evening. The Valentine idea was carried out in the decorations and table appointments. High score prize was won by Miss Gladys Moore and low score prize went to Miss Helen Gray Jones. The hostess, assisted by her daughter, Margaret, served a tempting salad course. The guests were Misses Carolyn Fullilove, Sarah Scott, Shell McArthur, Jane Lyster, Helen Gray Jones, Gless Pickren, Lillian Purvis, Dorothy Swinson, Gladys Moore, Maybelle Mitchell, Rachael Scarborough, Clem Bridges, Grace Hunter, Lotta Veazy, Louise Galphin, Margaret Ann Lowe and Ada Hill, Mrs. C. A. Bowen and Mrs. T. H. Boykin.

Couple Shares Birthday Honors

GRIFTON—On Saturday night Mrs. F. L. Cox entertained at a surprise birthday dinner honoring her husband and Mrs. Ralph Epps. The dinner table was decorated with pink carnations and pink candles in a crystal epergne. Shrimp cocktails, steaks and a salad were served and later the decorated cake in white with the pink and green festoons was cut and served with cherry ice cream.

Miss Smith Gives Program

Miss Mary Thomas Smith presented a program on "Educational Institutions in the South" to the George B. Singletary Chapter of the U.D.C. Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. V. C. Fleming Sr. She read a memorial in memory of Mrs. J. T. Gaylord written by Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. Ernest Willard. The meeting was concluded with silent prayer for Mrs. Gaylord led by Mrs. Harvey. Special guests for the meeting were Mrs. Sallie Irons and Miss Mary Grace Gaylord.

Miss Sustek Has Birthday

GRIFTON—On Saturday afternoon little Miss Carol Sustek was feted on the occasion of her third birthday by her mother, Mrs. George Sustek at their home on Pitt Street.

Guests took part in an hour of games and singing and were later invited into the dining room where the table was overlaid with a white linen cloth and as a center piece the cake decorated in pink and green. The cake was served with ice cream and nuts. Mrs. Bill Linke assisted Mrs. Sustek in the afternoon's activities.

Favors of hats, balloons and noise makers were given to the guests who included Joan Nelson, Ann Troutman, Alma Parker, Shirley Stenquist, Holly Gnagey, Beth Gnagey, Douglas Edwards, Steve Lewis and Edwin Linke.

NEW LEADERS . . . Yesterday morning the installation of officers of the Newcomers Club was held at the home of Mrs. Worth Baker. Those elected were, left to right, Mrs. Bernard MaGee, president; Mrs. Walter Whitehurst, vice-president; Mrs. Richard G. Phillips, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. James M. Grulke, membership chairman; Mrs. Walter M. Thomas, hostess chairman; and Mrs. James A. Kleinert, telephone chairman. (Photo by Peggy Smith)

The Newcomers Club met yesterday for cards and installation of officers at the home of Mrs. Worth Baker on Jefferson Drive. The home was decorated in a Valentine motif.

There will be a coffee hour with refreshments after the meeting. All members of the Woman's Club are invited but are asked to please make reservations with the hostesses, or with the president, Mrs. P. E. Wells. Members of the Greenville Garden Club may bring guests, if reservations are made.

Hostesses for the occasion will be Mrs. Preston Cannon, chairman, Mesdames J. R. Carrington, Marie Clark, Norman Garrison, J. R. Jackson, M. W. Maxwell, Claude Gaskins, Martin Swartz, George Staples, and Misses Eunice McGee and Mamie R. Tunstall.

Members of the Executive Board of the Greenville Garden Club will meet for a brief business session at the club at 9:30 prior to the meeting.

Mrs. William Warren Taylor Jr. poured the lemonade while the guest of honor cut a two-tiered red and white cake. Pickles, mints and other salted nuts were served. During the intermission the many presents were unwrapped and displayed on the gift table.

The 100 guests included friends from Tarboro, Hamilton, Williamston, Everetts, Bethel, Bear Grass and Robersonville.

John Harris To Talk At Garden Club Meet

John H. Harris, specialist in Horticulture of the Extension Service of North Carolina State College, will speak to the Greenville Garden Club at their next meeting on Tuesday, February 17, at 10 a.m. at the Woman's Club.

His main topic will be "The Culture of Roses," but it is hoped there will be time for members to ask questions on other forms of horticulture as Harris is well known for his work in landscape designing and as a regular speaker on radio on Saturday mornings.

The Falkland P. T. A. met Wednesday night with the president, Mrs. David Moore, presiding. Mrs. Levi Wooten gave the devotional, "The Role of Parents and Teachers in Character Development of Children."

Albert Bennett of Greenville sang "How Great Thou Art" with Mrs. Glenn Scott as pianist. Ellen Baker from the fourth grade sang "God Bless America."

The president read a Founder's Day poem, after which the business agenda was presented. As next year's project, the organization voted to purchase some of the needed supplementary reading materials for the school.

Announcement was made of the forthcoming study course to be given March 2 and March 5. Dr. Keith Holmes of East Carolina College will conduct the study. Mrs. Louis Smith was winner of the door prize.

Mrs. Mary Mayo's first grade won the room attendance record.

Mrs. David Parker was highest scorer for the evening. Other players were Mr. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis, Mrs. Becky Worthington, Mrs. Conrad Hart, Mr. John Glenn and the hostess.

Mrs. Parker and Miss Smith were remembered with gifts from the guests.

Co-Hostesses Fete Members

The Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club met in the home of Mrs. A. A. Hines Tuesday afternoon for its monthly meeting with Mrs. T. W. Rouse and Miss Mamie Ruth Tunstall as co-hostesses.

The house was decorated with floral arrangements throughout, and from a table decorated with the Valentine motif and burning tapers coffee was poured by Mrs. R. P. Rogers and cake was served by Miss Tunstall to the members and guests.

Mrs. W. C. Harris, a member of the department and a writer of poetry, having received national recognition as well as other awards for her work, was the guest speaker.

She explained to the group the moods and experiences that prompted her to write. She then read a varied number of her poems. Proceeding the program, Mrs. Rogers, the president, presided over a short business session. She announced that final plans would be made at the next meeting for the tour of Tryon Palace.

School Verdicts Will Come Fast

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A quick series of decisions Monday should determine whether Warren County will integrate its white high school next week, and under what circumstances.

Talk of a possible boycott of the school by some students and the unsettled status of the teachers contributed to the haze that hung over the Warren County situation today.

This much was clear. Unless Chief Judge Simon Sobeloff of the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals Monday grants the north-west Virginia county a delay of integration until fall, the Warren County High School at Front Royal must be reopened Wednesday to its former students and to 22 Negroes.

If that occurs, Warren County would be the fourth locality in the state to integrate public schools this month. Thirty Negro students are attending 10 integrated schools in Norfolk, Arlington and Alexandria. Race mixing, accepted by Virginia only after the state was stripped of all legal defenses, is proceeding without incident.

Warren County High was shut last September under a now-defunct state anti-integration law. Since then, 780 of the 1,050 students enrolled at the facility have been educated privately by the Warren County Educational Foundation.

It's Just No Go For Roe And Doe

CHARLOTTE (AP)—It's no go for John Doe and Richard Roe in their suit — at least in Superior Court—against the city council's police union ban.

Judge Susie Sharp dismissed the suit Thursday by the two alias-using city police officers and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO.

The court does not deal with anonymous parties, the state's only woman Superior Court judge declared.

The plaintiff's attorney, Robert S. Cahoon of Greensboro, declared he would appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Cahoon said the two officers feared to identify themselves because they might be fired by the council, which outlawed the union last month.

The union says the council action infringes on rights of policemen.

Judge Sharp denied Cahoon permission to make the union sole plaintiff in the case, but added he could try bringing another action.

Old 'Standards' On Library Trash Heap

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Has the Wizard of Oz lost his magic? To some grownups in Florida, he has.

These same grownups have grounded boy's best friend, Tom Swift. They have relegated the Girl Scout series to the trash pile and vowed they never again want to look upon Horatio Alger or hear about the Lone Ranger.

It's part of a movement to ban outdated and "poorly written" children's books. The state librarian, Dorothy Dodd, started the campaign with an advisory to all public libraries.

She listed 17 titles now published and eight series out of print that should be withdrawn from circulation.

"Kids don't like that fanciful stuff any more," said Dr. Frank B. Sessa, chairman of the Miami Public Library. "They want books about missiles and atomic submarines."

In her letter suggesting the removal of the books, Miss Dodd said the series-type "are poorly written, untrue to life, sensational, foolishly sentimental and consequently unwholesome for the children in your community."

Included on the list was Uncle Wiggily, a book Mrs. Edmonds said was requested only once in 25 years.

Uncle Wiggily, however, has a

The 'Bad Boy Of Music' Is Dead

NEW YORK (AP)—George Antheil, modern American composer and self-styled "Bad Boy of Music," died at his home Thursday night.

Antheil, 58, created a sensation here and in Paris in the mid-1920s with his avant-garde "Ballet Mechanique."

The cause of death was not announced.

Antheil's early works depicted the jazz age and the age of steel. In "Ballet Mechanique" he made use of xylophones, electric bells, a player piano and airplane propellers.

Born in Trenton, N.J., Antheil began to study piano at 6. Four years later, he started lessons in composition with Constantin von Sternberg in Philadelphia. He continued composition work with Ernest Bloch.

A Philadelphia concert manager called for a soloist of the "fiery ultramodern variety." Antheil practiced on the piano for 36 hours straight, got the job and went on a concert tour of Europe.

On that tour he was dubbed the "bad boy" composer-pianist of America. Years later, he titled his autobiography "Bad Boy of Music."

The association has an office in Raleigh. William L. Dawkins is executive secretary, and Sen. John R. Jordan, Jr., is general counsel.

Constitution Is Given To Nepal

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—King Mahendra proclaimed a democratic constitution for Nepal Thursday, the first in history for the 8 1/2 million people of the Himalayan kingdom sandwiched between India and Red-ruled Tibet.

Patterned on the British system, the constitution provides for a constitutional monarchy with a two-house Parliament, an independent judiciary and a Cabinet responsible to the lower house. It also establishes a sort of privy council, called the Rashtriya Parishad, to provide a regency during the minority of a monarch or when the king is otherwise unable to govern.

Welfare Checks 'Biggest Income'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The largest single source of income in 84 of Texas' 254 counties now is welfare checks.

Alvin Burger, Texas Research League director, Thursday told the Texas Bankers Assn. his staff now was studying "how well the various welfare programs are doing the job of getting aided families back onto a self-supporting basis."

The Texas Research League is a private fact-finding and survey-making organization.

Volunteer Hard Man To Stop

SHEFFIELD LAKE, Ohio (AP)—Volunteer fireman Charles Miller, enroute to a fire, was involved in a crash with another car crossed a ditch on the opposite side of the road, and hit a tree.

Miller got out, hailed a passing milk truck and proceeded to the fire.

STEPPING OUT

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Police can't figure how four men who walked out of the Oshrin Hospital in Tucson made such a clean getaway. They were dressed in bathrobes and cowboy hats.

That Launching Not Scheduled

STONEHAM, Mass. (AP)—The unscheduled "launching" of a 24-foot boat damaged two automobiles and sent a motorist to the hospital.

When Ulric G. LaChapelle Jr., 32, lost control of his car, it bounced off a utility pole, shot into a driveway and plowed into a cradle-trailer on which the boat was being built.

PILFERER

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—A fireman of five years seniority was charged here after he admitted turning in two false alarms within 17 minutes. He was accused of rifling fellow workers' lockers while they were out looking for non-existent blazes.

Wrong Doorbell For Soliciting

DETROIT (AP)—Arnold A. Perkins, 39, rang the doorbell to ask for funds for the Salvation Army. It was the wrong doorbell. Salvation Army Capt. William Roberts, 36, invited Perkins in and called police. He had noticed Perkins was dressed in a fake uniform.

Perkins was charged with attempting to obtain money under false pretenses.

Left Her Engine Running, And—

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP)—Mrs. Henrietta Graves left her automobile engine running Thursday when she stopped for an errand. She also left her 17-month-old daughter, Layra, on the seat.

But Layra didn't stay there. She crawled to the floor, pressed the accelerator and the car lurched forward, smashing the wall of a motel.

Damage: a lump on Layra's head, $1,500 to the motel and $250 to the car.

No Simple, Overnight Remedies

Greene County's unfortunate school problem is one which fundamentally must be solved by the Negro and white citizens of Greene County.

It is a matter which can best and most quickly be solved in an atmosphere of amicable race relations rather than in an atmosphere of racial tension and animosities.

The strike of Negro students which forced the closing of Greene County's Negro schools is regrettable in that it may serve as an impediment to the rapid replacement of inadequate school facilities which brought the problem to a head. On the other hand, the action which brought the school inadequacies into vivid focus could prove the stimulus needed to stir Greene citizens out of the apathetic attitude toward school facilities which was responsible for the existence of such inadequacies.

If the word of Negro leaders in Greene County can be taken at face value, they are not seeking integration of the schools. They are merely seeking adequate school facilities of their own on a par with those provided for the white children of the county. And certainly most North Carolinians would agree that they are entitled to such facilities.

But the Greene County problem will not be solved merely by the uttering of a few words which will create new and adequate facilities for Negro children. It is much more complex than that.

The problem brought to a head by the student strike did not come about overnight. It has been many years in the making. The fact that Greene County has spent in the past decade more than half of its school construction for Negro facilities would indicate some effort has been made to overcome the inadequacies. Yet such a division has proved insufficient to overcome the inadequacies. Thus the complex problem goes back more than a decade and perhaps over a much longer span of time.

If the crux of the problem lies in the adequacy of facilities, it cannot be overcome in a short span of time. Funds for new Negro school facilities in Greene must be obtained through one or more bond issues. And although the Board of Education had been making plans for a new bond issue before the strike occurred, it takes time to bring about a referendum for a bond issue, and then there is the hurdle of voter approval for such an issue. Once the program is that far along, there is the time-consuming task of actually constructing new buildings.

Greene County citizens alone can provide the solution to the problem. And they can provide the solution only through united and cooperative efforts on the part of both the white and Negro citizens of the county. It will take patience and understanding on both sides. And even under the most favorable conditions, it will take considerable time.

What Greene County failed to do for its Negro students over a long period of years now must be overcome with all possible haste. At the same time the thread-bare patience with which the Negro citizens endured the inadequacies of their school facilities must be re-woven to endure while the problems are being overcome.

For the sake of Greene County as a whole, every citizen of the county, white and Negro, must face squarely and frankly the complexities of the problem which that county faces, and reasonable solutions as deliberately and as rapidly as possible.

There's Precedent For Required Salk Shots

From the standpoint of public health in North Carolina there is no question about wisdom of requiring youngsters to be vaccinated against polio before entering public schools of the state.

The Salk vaccine has proved its worth since it became available. It has the endorsement of leading medical and health officials and organizations throughout the nation as well as in our own state. It has sharply curtailed the number of polio cases in the past few years and moreover it has lessened the effects of the disease in those who have contracted it after having the vaccine.

In spite of the effectiveness of the vaccine, and the efforts of state and county health departments to have all youngsters receive the vaccine, there remain in this state many thousands of youngsters who have not been vaccinated against polio. Unless some requirement for obtaining the vaccine is made, it is quite likely that we will continue to have thousands of youngsters without the protection the vaccine can afford. If that happens, we will be needlessly endangering the lives of thousands of the children of this state.

There is certainly ample precedent for the compulsory polio vaccine requirement for entering the public schools of the state. And in the interest of the youngsters of the state, the General Assembly should enact legislation which will assure that each youngster entering public schools has been vaccinated against polio.

Sees Illness As Routine Problem

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State John Foster Dulles approaches illness like a conference with the Soviets: it will be a problem, but he has his plans made and it won't last forever, and when it is over he will have other problems.

Despite physical setbacks which would have floored other and younger men, President Eisenhower, 68, and Dulles, 70, have treated their serious illnesses like temporary discomforts.

Eisenhower, who has had a heart attack and an intestinal operation, and Dulles, who has had surgery for cancer and now faces a hernia operation, seem to look upon the secretary's latest hospitalization with great optimism.

The White House has denied not only firmly but picturesquely speculation that Eisenhower has been discussing with his associates the possible retirement of Dulles.

Eisenhower's press secretary, James Hagerty, is the one who gave picturesqueness to the denial although his figures of speech were mixed: "I can say it (the speculation) was completely cockeyed, doubled in spades."

Before he went into the hospital this week Dulles gave the impression his hernia operation wouldn't set him back for long.

In his note to Eisenhower asking hospital leave, Dulles said "I'd like to devote a few weeks to physical recuperation" and, since he'd be in the hospital while he added, he could use the time thinking about the West Berlin problem still to be settled with the U.S.S.R.

Dulles brushed off any idea that he might really be out of circulation by telling the President: "I would be available for consultation with you and my associates and would expect, after a few weeks, to resume fully the duties of my office."

This left no doubt that Dulles, even though in the hospital or recuperating at home, planned still to be the State Department's No. 1 man.

It's possible his plans for dealing with the Soviets — over their demands that the Allies pull their troops out of West Berlin and leave it a free city — can go on pretty well if —

It's an "if" that can't be overlooked, no matter how great the optimism in the administration. "The 'if' is that Dulles is away up in years, illness has piled up on him, and he has worn himself down in his service as secretary. Therefore it's possible he will not respond physically as well as he and Eisenhower appear to think he will.

But until that happens — if it happens — it is pretty clear that anyone sitting in for Dulles, like Under Secretary of State Christian Herter, will be completely overshadowed by Dulles, and that Dulles will continue to do the thinking for the State Department.

Opinions In Brief

"The recent debate in the U. S. over 'right-to-work' laws, which would prohibit union shop contracts between employers and employees, leaves Europeans a bit mystified and somewhat perspicuous. The reason is simply that while most European countries have thriving and powerful trade-union movements, they have largely avoided the type of labor contract that forces a worker to join a union before he gets a job (closed shop) or after he obtains one (union shop). In every country, strong pressure to join a union is, of course, applied by fellow workers, but this is something different from the kind of legal coercion that exists in the U. S." — Fortune Magazine.

"President Eisenhower has horned in ahead of the state with a proposal to increase the federal gas tax by two or three cents. Should the Congress follow this suggestion before the state acts, or should it appear the federal tax will be increased, another increase by the state might have hard sledding in the North Carolina legislature." — We The People.

"The almighty dollar commands a lot of respect, but it doesn't go as far as politeness." — Cuero (Texas) Record.

"Fable for today — The Army closed a training post without a peep from the politicians." — Memphis Press-Scimitar.

Big Test For Golden Boy

By ALVIN TAYLOR

An Occupational Hazard

Newspapering has its occupational hazards!

Staffer Billy Arnold took a trip to the draft board office yesterday to find out how many draftees will leave for induction on March 10.

There would be four leaving on that date, the clerk told him and, oh yes, one Billy Arnold would be among them. Seems the card was in the mail which would verify the whole thing.

Sadly Billy came back to the Reflector office to write the story which will determine his fate for the next couple of years.

The Reflector staffer has been working with the newspaper office and since he was 13 years old when he drew a sports cartoon. In college, he worked first as a sports writer then as sports editor for the Reflector.

At the beginning of the winter quarter at East Carolina Billy began work as a full-time staff writer taking the few courses needed to complete his college work.

He will have all the credits he needs for graduation at the end of the quarter (Feb. 27) and Uncle Sam will be waiting with open arms.

Planning on a trip to Mars? Well, you'd better be sure you know just which way to go before pressing the button that will shoot your ship into space.

"As things stand now, a space-man would be lucky to get within 50,000 miles of Mars," reports Product Engineering magazine.

"Though measurements of planet distances and locations have been refined over the years, they still are not accurate enough," the magazine states. "Much still remains to be learned about the exact densities, orbits about the sun, gravitational influence and even the size of planets before successful space flight can be achieved."

All I can say is, the space ship manufacturers had better not turn a certain writer who fills this space on occasions loose in one of the creations. Seems this fellow even has trouble finding his way around Pitt County!

The article goes on to say that another problem to be solved before these flights begin is what kind of vehicle spacemen will use. "Finding such a vehicle is like trying to build a car that will run unattended for years."

Let's don't turn the problem over to the auto manufacturers. The 1960 space ship model, which scientist say won't need tail fins and the like in airless outer space anyway, would be a victim of planned obsolescence before it passed the moon.

Other Editors Saying ... Plan Is Discriminatory

(Henderson Dispatch)
What is known as an incentive plan for providing additional finances for North Carolina's public schools is discriminatory. It is already being opposed by the State Grange on that basis.

This proposed program would have the State provide, say, ten million dollars for school purposes. It would be distributed to those counties which vote bond issues on their own account. That would mean that some of them could qualify and others could not.

Take Vance, for example. Except for small amounts of bonds that could be sold as representative of the school obligations paid off the previous year, there would be little that could be done. This is because bonds already outstanding all but take up the legal limit permitted for the purpose on the basis of property valuation.

There are probably other small counties that would fare equally as badly, regardless of their needs. The big counties, with tremendous valuations, have left a wide margin that could be levied upon to enable them to qualify for this type of State aid.

Should the incentive plan be approved by the Legislature, it would be the taking of a leaf from Federal government policy. Congress has voted tremendous sums for various purposes, to be made available to States and their political sub-divisions where equal amounts are supplied locally. That is an encouragement to both debt and spending on the part of the Federal establishment and the States alike.

Before too much additional outlay is made for new housing facilities for the schools, it might be well to study the idea of operating the schools on a year-around basis. That would be a radical departure from traditional custom, but no more radical than spending ourselves into bankruptcy. Even this would cost as putting out millions of dollars that would not be fairly distributed among the counties by the State.

If the State is to assume financial responsibility for the schools, it should do so, whatever the need and whatever the cost, so far as necessary, on a basis that would give equal treatment to all the counties as to their school population and requirements. The Legislature cannot in justice afford to enact a discriminatory procedure.

This is but one of probably many schemes that will be offered in the current session before it ends. Almost certainly some of them will become law and others will not. Ability of the State and the counties to provide the money should be a major factor in such legislation as may be approved at this sitting of the lawmakers.

REINTERPRET!

We are constantly being called upon to reinterpret the conditions amid which we live. The open-minded scientist is at work on this sort of thing all the time. His great discoveries come out of the fact that he never admits that anything is impossible. He stands humbly before the facts of the natural world and keeps on asking questions. His most amazing discoveries come not as the result of his receiving definite answers to his questions but as the result of his being led into greater areas of truth.

Reinterpret! Reinterpret! Reinterpret! This is the whole of life and progress. The marriage problem is never settled. Millions of people are working on the problem all the time and out of their experience come new truth. We have certain fixed revelations in the field of religion, but we only appropriate these religious truths and use them to our benefit when we submit them to continued interpretation and reinterpretation.

Never say about any subject that you know enough about it. Remember that when you have learned everything you can, you have learned only a small part of the whole truth of anything. Our relations with our fellow men, our life under free government, our religious and philosophical beliefs, our ways of carrying on business — these things have to be constantly reinterpreted.

Gambit For Today

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Abner Joggie, president of the Acme Tiddlyworks Co., liked to open his own mail.

Running through a stack he came to an unusual letter. Unstamped, it merely bore a typed greeting: "To the nicest guy in the world."

Joggie opened the massive and found therein a small card adorned with crimson hearts and the following jingle:

"Roses are red, and violets are blue.

"You are our Valentine, Boss, we love you!"

The card was unsigned. Beaming with pleasure, Joggie handed it to Eloise Phleeb, his secretary. A look of utter unbelief came into her face.

"Did you send it?" asked Joggie.

"Me?" Miss Phleeb appeared horrified at the mere idea.

"You know, it's the first real Valentine I've received since I was in kindergarten," said Joggie.

"Who sent you one then?" inquired Miss Phleeb — and could have bitten off her tongue. She hadn't meant to say that. But the idea of anyone ever sending Joggie a Valentine did seem rather unbelievable. So did the thought of him having ever gone to kindergarten.

Preventing not to notice her discomfiture, Joggie said amiably: "Well, I sure do appreciate this card. I wonder if you could circulate it around the office and find out who is responsible for it."

Dutifully, Eloise took the card and canvassed the office. The reactions ranged from startled wonder to outright indignation. Everyone denied sending the card. All stoutly pleaded innocent.

When Miss Phleeb reported to her boss her inability to find his office admirer, somehow Joggie didn't seem too surprised.

"The best kindness is always anonymous," he murmured.

Shortly before quitting time the entire office staff was summoned. As each one entered, he was handed a one-pound heart-shaped box of candy.

In dazed silence they listened as Joggie arose and said: "Someone really touched my heart this morning with an unexpected gesture of remembrance. But I want you to know the feeling expressed was mutual."

"The box of candy you have been handed is for your wife or sweetheart. But the $10 bonus each of you will receive on your next paycheck is my Valentine to you. Thank you one and all."

That night at dinner Joggie recounted the incidents of the day to his wife. That durable woman was most surprised of all.

"I wonder who really sent you the Valentine?" she said.

"I sent it myself," replied Joggie. "Just as I'd have an excuse to give them the candy and the bonus."

Mrs. Joggie's mind reeled. Was this her husband speaking, or a stranger?

"Now I've got the whole office staff off balance," said Joggie cheerfully. "They're so puzzled it'll be six months before one of them will get up the courage to ask for a raise."

"I always did say there was room for sentiment in business — if you know how to use it!"

Asks Jesus About Commandments ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

A scribe who heard Jesus' answer to a man and praised it, came to Him, asking, "Which is the first commandment of all?"—Mark 12:28.

Christ's answer to him was that the first commandment was to love God; and the second was to "love thy neighbor as thyself."—Mark 12:29-31.

The scribe answered Him, "Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth; for there is one God; and there is none other but He."—Mark 12:32.

And Christ made answer to the scribe by telling him, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God."—Mark 12:34.

MEMORY VERSE—Mark 12:30-31.

The Golden Text

The soul's awakening.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Mark 12:30-31.

Great Commandment Designated

CHRIST SAID LOVE OF GOD IS FIRST, THEN LOVE OF NEIGHBOR

Scripture—Mark 12:28-34.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL. THIS LESSON is one that can be understood by everyone who studies it, from the youngest to the oldest. It should be especially helpful in our generation when there is so much crime committed by those who hate others. That means neighbors in other countries as well as our own, and includes the whole wide world. Wars are brought on by hatred, just as neighborhood quarrels are. They are promoted by the desire to avenge some wrong, whether fancied or real. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith, clergyman and editor, suggests that both younger and older pupils might be introduced to the lesson by the question: "Who has a right to command us?" Parents, of course give commands to the young; teachers in none other commandment greater than these."—Mark 12:28-31. Can we learn to love God in the way Christ said? We can teach ourselves if we turn dialkies and hatred out of our hearts. We must do to others as we wish them to do to us. The scribe, as I have said before in these lessons, was a high priest of the Jewish temple and a writer, as the name "scribe" indicates. He answered Jesus by saying: "Well, Master, Thou hast said the truth: for there is one God; and none other but He: And to love Him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices." When Jesus "saw that he answered discreetly, He said unto the schools have a right to command obedience of their pupils. A military officer has a right to command those under him and a traffic officer may command the driver of an automobile if the traffic law is violated. In our moral life we must not only obey the laws of our country but God's laws. What did Jesus say about obedience? A scribe came to Him, praising Him for his answer to a question he had been asked, and saying: "Which is the first commandment of all?" Jesus answered that the first was to love God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength. "And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is him, Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God. And no man after that durst ask Him any question."—Mark 12:32-34. These words of Christ's show us the way to the Christian life. It is not through lip service, which, I fear, many practice. It is rather through a great love of God and His Son, and also toward everyone who is our neighbor, not only in the usual sense of that word, but in a world-wide sense. They, too, are our neighbors. Even very small children have their loves or hates for playmates, school mates and adults. Let us teach the young from the very beginning of their lives that love, not dislike or hatred, is Jesus' way and should be ours. Oil Industry Faced By New Price Problems

By SAM DAWSON AP Business News Analyst NEW YORK (AP)—Cross currents in pricing beset the oil industry today — and threaten the consumer anew.

Added to the industry's problems are troublesome surpluses of some oil products, new competition from behind the Iron Curtain, another congressional onslaught on the depletion allowance for tax purposes, and increasing disputes over oil imports. The pricing hubbub finds crude oil quotations weakening in various parts of the world — but at the same time rising prices for some refinery products, and talk of still higher ones as more companies negotiate five per cent wage boosts for their employees. Many companies have seen two years now of waning profits as costs rose while demand didn't increase as expected. The industry's 1957 profits were down 1.4 per cent from 1956. But the slide last year was much steeper.

The first 30 oil companies to report 1958 results show 20 making lower profits after taxes than in 1957. Combined the net income of the 30 in 1958 was $1,312,877,000, a drop of 23.8 per cent from the $1,724,604,000 they made in 1957. The lucky 10 with better showings were small or in the middle bracket. A number of the others, however, are predicting that 1958 should be a better year for them — if the various problems are licked. The price they'll pay for crude oil has been cut in parts of Texas and New Mexico by some refineries. Several big producers have cut their selling price for crude oil in Venezuela. Rumors of similar cuts to come are being heard in parts of the Midwest.

Demand for oil products has risen each year since the war, but the rate of rise has slowed in the last two years. At the same time the industry's capacity to produce has continued to grow at home — and especially abroad. Various state authorities have cut back the amount that American wells are allowed to produce. And the federal government has tackled the problem of holding down oil imports — without notably pleasing either the oil importers or the American producers.

Recently the Communist countries have entered the picture with sale in this country of residual oil-heavy fuel oil for industry and shipping — and benzene, an oil product.

Light fuel oil, used in homes, has risen in price during the winter season of greatest demand. So has the price of kerosene. And even with that season now ebbing, some refiners are muttering that they can't absorb the cost of the new wage boosts either for fuel oil or gasoline.

Stocks of gasoline normally rise in winter, since the refineries must turn out unneeded gasoline to produce the heating oil they can sell. But supplies, though large, are seven per cent below those at this time a year ago. And if spring isn't too far behind, increased motoring is counted upon to bring stocks down to reasonable levels.

Profit margins are something else. It may take a marked pickup in demand to offset the rising operating costs.

Can't Help The Meter Problem

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—What's more disturbing than an interruption of thought while engrossed in some literary endeavor?

Or, in simpler words, Miss Anne Anderson is tired of dashing out of the library every hour to put a nickel in the parking meter. Miss Anderson sent a complaining letter to the public library saying the parking meter limitation does not permit proper concentration while reading. She asked librarian C. R. Graham if he couldn't figure out some way to allow readers an uninterrupted train of thought. The library board of trustees told her it couldn't do a thing — saying parking meters were out of its jurisdiction.

Said 'Spoiled' In Sunday School

OMAHA (AP) — Sunday School spoils children, theologian Dr. Marcus Barth said today. This is because all they hear for some time is "Mama loves me, papa loves me, teacher loves me, God loves me. Comes age 12 or 14; they discover other people in the world and all hell breaks loose" Dr. Barth remarked. Dr. Barth, a member of the federated theological faculty of the University of Chicago, gave his views in a talk prepared for a meeting of the Division of Christian Education of the National Council of Churches.

inadequate wiring in your home results in a lot more inconvenience than a wobbly auto ride. Your electrical appliances don't function properly. Proper illumination is difficult. Many people discover that such comforting appliances as air conditioners, electric ranges, automatic washers and dryers cannot be installed because of inadequate wiring. Russian And U.S. Cultural Exchange Plan Is Working

By JOHN SCALI — The United States and the Soviet Union have successfully carried out two-thirds of their big cultural exchange agreement without a major hitch. This historic agreement, signed about a year ago, is working so well that both sides are seriously considering extending it when it expires next January. A summary shows that more than 1,500 Soviet citizens and Americans have visited each other's country as part of 151 official delegations during the first 12 months. The swap of delegates has started a flow of private tourists.

About 5,000 Americans visited the Soviet Union in the first year after the agreement. In return, 66 Soviet tourists, the first to visit this country since World War II, arrived late last year. Ambassador William Lacy, who negotiated the agreement with the Soviets after months of talks, said today the agreement has been a rousing success from an American standpoint. He said it has even greater potential for the future. "A more balanced picture of America is now being brought openly to Soviet citizens who have previously been subjected only to Communist propaganda which portrayed America as culturally and spiritually sterile," he said. More Americans than Soviets have been involved in exchanges thus far, but this is due primarily to a Soviet delay in arranging reciprocal tours of the United States. Statistics compiled thus far disclosed that 952 Americans, included in 81 separate projects, visited the U.S.S.R. during the first year. In return, 565 Soviets came to the United States as part of 70 delegations. Both the Soviet Union and the United States have shown the keenest interest in swapping experts in industrial fields. Forty-six Soviet industrial delegations have toured the United States while 40 American groups visited the Soviet Union. This swap included experts on steel, plastics, chemistry, electronics, electric power, and engineering. Six of nine projected agricultural exchanges have been carried out during the first year. In the cultural, entertainment and sports field, 23 American delegations have visited the Soviet Union in return for similar trips by 16 Soviet groups to the United States. In the education field, 18 American groups have traveled to Soviet universities and schools while 8 Soviet groups have come to the United States.

Seven In Court For Free-For-All

GREENSBORO (AP)—Two former college basketball players and five others go into court March 16 because of a free-for-all fight.

Police broke up the battle Wednesday night and arrested Lowell D. Davis, 24, a former Wake Forest player, and Clifford E. Dwyer, 25, a former North Carolina State player. Five Greensboro youths also arrested were Gilbert Hutchinson, David McCusiston, Larry Underwood, Tomb Humble and George D. Jones. Officers said the fight started after Hutchinson and Jones said they saw their wives in a car with Davis and Dwyer, both of Winston-Salem, followed them in another car, forced them to stop and began fighting. The other defendants joined the battle while the women looked on, police added.

Doubly Bad Day For Family Car

ORFORDVILLE, Wis. (AP)—It was a bad day for the Tollefson family car. At 12:22 a.m., with John Tollefson driving, the auto rolled into a ditch, badly damaging the left side of the car. At 2:32 p.m., Nancy Tollefson was at the wheel when the auto hit a telephone pole, badly damaging the right side.

Missile Warning System Priced

WASHINGTON (AP)—A proposed Air Force communications system to speed missile attack warnings from Alaska to the other 48 states probably will cost 30 million dollars. This was the preliminary estimate the Air Force today gave Sen. E. L. (Bob) Bartlett (D-Alaska). The project would provide a two-way link between the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System station at Clear, Alaska, and the other states.

Prison Inmate Is Killed In Fight

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"We had a fight" was all Jack Twining, 28, of Winston-Salem, N.C., said as he stood over a dying inmate at the Alcatraz Island penitentiary Thursday. The victim, Walter D. Mollett, 32, of St. Joseph, Mo., died of a skull fracture. Twining, serving 30 years from New Orleans for bank robbery, was placed in a segregation cell pending investigation. The prisoners met when serving terms at Atlanta Federal Penitentiary. Through transfers, they arrived here last June and July. Warden Paul J. Madigan said it was possible they had developed grudges. Mollett was slain in the prison dry cleaning plant, either he was knocked violently to the floor or against a pipe, Madigan said. The prisoners were alone and guards nearby apparently heard no outcries. Venezuela has two rich iron deposits in the wild interior. Both are worked under concession by two United States steel companies.

South Korea Relations With Japan Strained By Tokyo's Transfer Plan

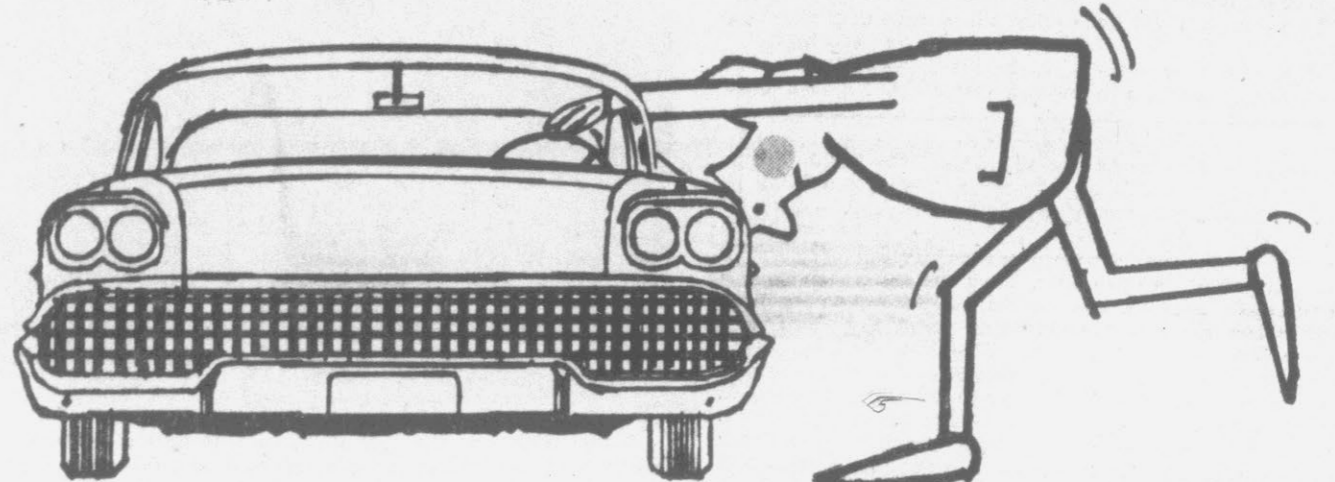

TOKYO (AP)—Japan agreed today to let poverty-stricken Koreans here go to Communist North Korea in defiance of a South Korean government warning that it would resist the transfer "with every power at its disposal." Presumably North Korea will charter ships to transport those cleared for repatriation. It is understood Japan will not furnish ships, and all Japanese companies whose ships operate between Japan and South Korea have canceled sailings because of the crisis. Rhee's government has charged that the 600,000 or more Koreans living in Japan — most of them poverty stricken and 95 per cent of them originally from South Korea — are being cajoled, threatened and bribed by North Korean sympathizers to go to the North. The South Koreans charge they will be sent into Red slavery. At the end of World War II there were about two million Koreans in Japan. About half had been brought here as laborers by the Japanese. In a mass repatriation directed by the occupation forces, about 1,300,000 went home. The overwhelming majority went to South Korea. The number involved in the present repatriation scheme has not been firmly established. Estimates range from 43,000 to 117,000. After a Red Cross screening, the figure may drop sharply. Most of those who have indicated a willingness to go to the Communist North said they were attracted by promise of work. The United States said it was maintaining a hands-off attitude in the dispute unless both sides ask her to act as a mediator and the chances of success were good. ICE WITH A PAST—Physicist Theodore Butkovich, III, Army center, holds ice core taken from Greenland icecap. The ancient core may hold bacteria and atmospheric bubbles dating back to year 1100.

ENTER-PHOBIA. This new ailment besets you when you try to get into other '59 cars. Do you back in? Crawl in? Fall in? It's hard to tell which. But Mercury has the right remedy: door openings are 6 inches wider. There's up to 2 inches more head clearance. You step in easily — without a twinge.

BACK-SEAT BOUNCE. The only cushioning many '59 cars could squeeze in over their high floor hump is a layer of spring and a jute pad. But Mercury's lowered hump made space for full cushioning.

PROBLEMS YOU'LL HAVE TO LIVE WITH IN EVERY NEW CAR EXCEPT MERCURY

CLOSE-TOGETHERNESS. Other '59 cars make friendships too close. But Mercury moved the dashboard forward for 9" more knee room. There's more leg room, more elbow room — more usable room all around.

DOOR-ITIS OF THE KNEE. Other '59 cars have jutting windshield posts that threaten to de-cap your knees! But Mercury moved that windshield post forward 2 inches. It's easy to step in without hitting your knee.

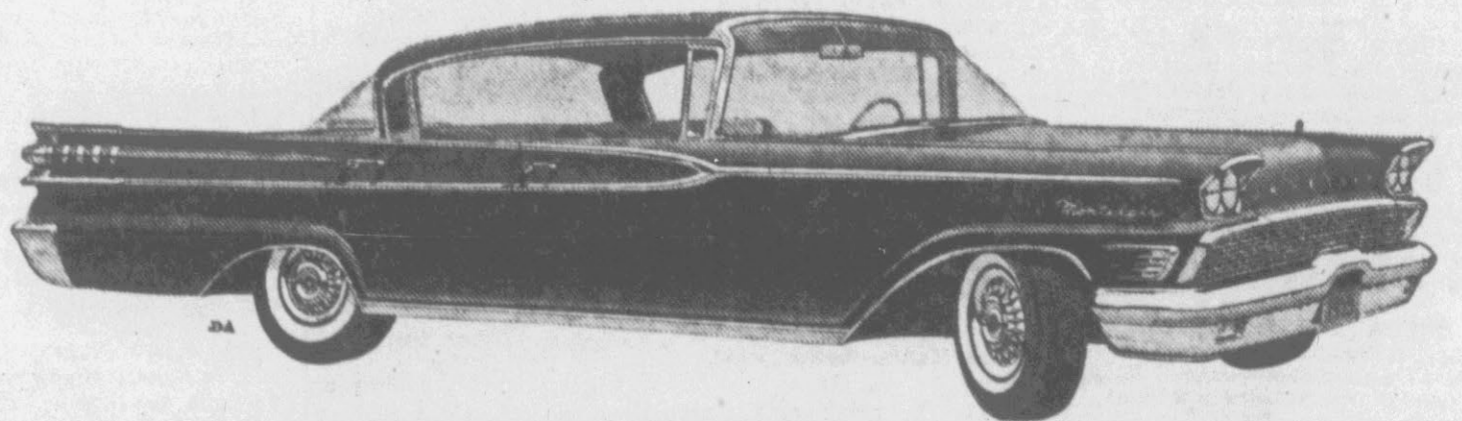

STORMY-WEATHER TWITCH. Wipers in other cars do not clear the center of the windshield, so you have to peek through 2 fan-shaped sections. But Mercury's wipers have an overlapping pattern — clear a five-foot swath — including the center. You drive relaxed in all kinds of weather.

MIDDLE-MAN CROUCH. That hump in the floor of other '59 cars is now larger than ever. It makes the man in the middle sit with his knee at his chin. But Mercury cut the hump in half! Now the middle man has room to stretch out.

ALL THIS AND ECONOMY, TOO. Mercury's quality construction means lower maintenance cost. The Monterey's special Economy V-8 engine means more miles-per-gallon. And don't forget Mercury's traditionally high resale value. In short, Mercury gives you more car for your money when you buy — more money for your car when you trade.

Tentative Pairings Ready For County Cage Tourney

GRIFTON-Pitt County Conference Commissioner Ed Bright today released the rather shaky pairings for the week-long Conference Tourney which begins at Rose High School Gymnasium tomorrow night.

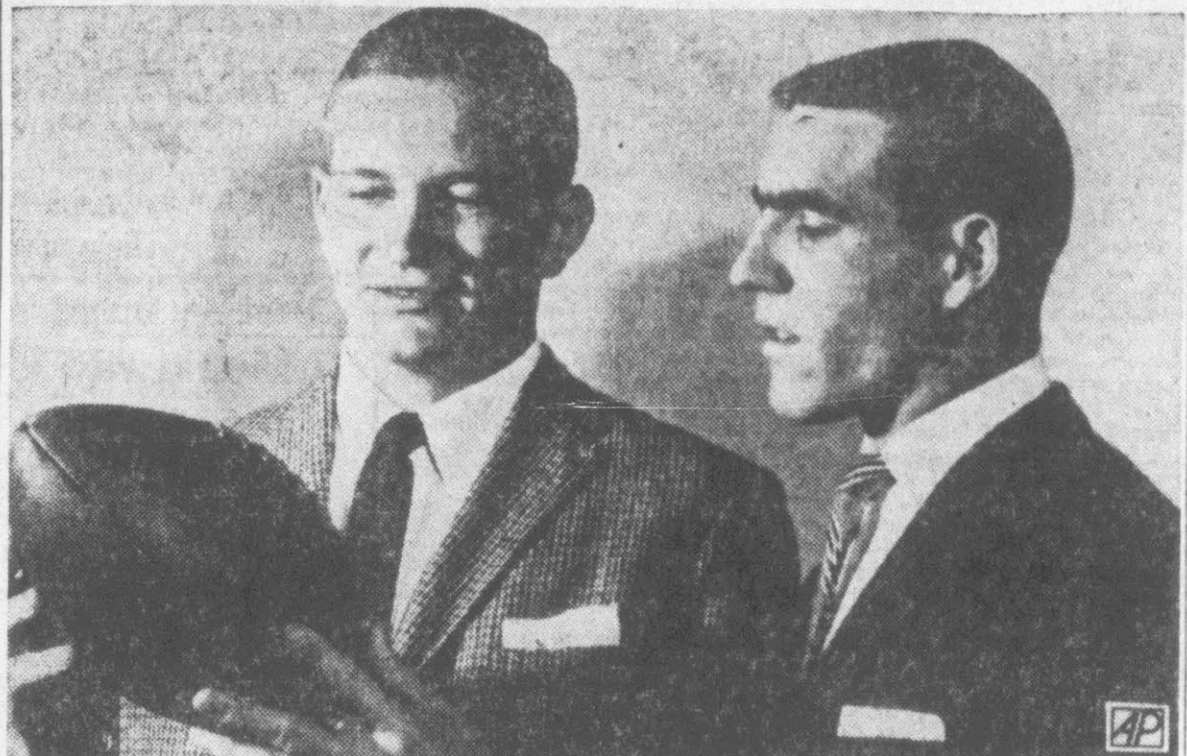

The tournament, which begins this Saturday night and extends through next Saturday night, will feature an average of three ball-games per night until the finish. The opening tilt will be played at Rose High School Gymnasium tomorrow night and the rest of the week's action will take place at East Carolina College's Memorial Gymnasium, except for Wednesday night. On Wednesday, the College will move into the gym for a regular-schedule tilt, forcing the tourney back to Rose Gym for the final time.

Pairings for tomorrow night's openers—based on the standings and subject to change, depending upon tonight's outcomes—will feature the eighth and ninth-place girls teams (Chicod and Bethel) in a clash at 8:30; the eighth and ninth boys clubs (Grimesland and Griffon) at 8:00; and the second and seventh-place girls clubs (Winterville and Ayden) at 9:30.

As of this morning, the standings in the loop are as listed below: GIRLS: Stokes - Pactolus 13-0, Winterville 11-4, Grimesland 8-4, Belvoir - Falkland 10-4, Griffon 8-6, Farmville 4-7, Ayden 2-9, Chicod 2-10, Bethel 1-14, Ayden 2-9. BOYS: Chicod 11-1, Winterville 12-3, Bethel 11-4, Farmville 8-3, Ayden 6-5, Belvoir - Falkland 4-11, Stokes - Pactolus 3-10, Grimesland 2-10, Griffon 2-12.

Two 'Comeback Cases' Meeting In Ring Tonight

NEW YORK (AP)—Friday the 13th, the first of three on the 1950 calendar, is an appropriate date for tonight's "battle of the comebacks" at Madison Square Garden.

W. Virginia And Madison Square Garden Don't Mix

By DON WEISS There's probably no logical reason for it, but in the last 18 years West Virginia's basketball teams and New York's Madison Square Garden have gone together like ice cream and catsup.

Manhattan toyed with Syracuse in the Garden opened, getting its drive from Frank Quarto, a 5-10, 150-pound bundle who scored 21 points and picked off 13 rebounds from boys a head taller.

North Carolina's winning streak went to nine against Wake Forest in an ACC tussle which broke out into a brawl when the Tar Heels' Lee Shaffer and the Deacons' Charlie Forte collided in a scramble for a loose ball with 30 seconds left and Carolina 11 points ahead.

Pro Objects To Amateur Traffic

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — It's time professional golfers stopped letting amateurs play in their tournaments, Lloyd Mangrum said in an interview today.

Managers of Apple Valley, Calif., said he plans to drop off the pro golf tour after the Tucson Open because the courses are too cluttered with players.

Both benches emptied to join the free-for-all and some of the 8,220 spectators joined in before police and college officials could break it up. Four Tar Heels hit in double figures with Joe Kepley getting 17, Shaffer and Doug Moe 16 apiece and York Larese 14.

George Krawjack scored 20 of his 22 points and Doug Hoffman 14 of his 18 tallies in the second half as Clemson beat Furman 73-64. Jack Whelan's 20 points led Holy Cross over American International 81-63, and Gary Phillips' 25 were tops as Houston spilled Loyola of New Orleans 71-54.

Scores As Grid Coach, And Also In Business Field

IOWA CITY, Iowa. (AP) — Forest Evashevski is a highly successful football coach. He apparently is equally as successful as a businessman.

His name showed up Thursday in two unrelated news stories. Evashevski, the football coach, appeared on the sports pages when the Iowa Board of Regents approved a $2,500 salary increase making him the highest paid coach in the Big Ten Conference at $20,000 a year.

Sid Flaherty was in New York with his newest young fighter, a 19-year-old welterweight from Portland, Ore., named Denny Moyer who boasted a string of 18 straight victories since turning professional. Moyer was making his first Madison Square Garden appearance against Indian Ortega, a seasoned veteran and the sixth ranked welterweight in this country.

Moyer didn't "choke up" and won a split decision over Ortega, a decision extremely popular with the ringside spectators. The crowd took to this handsome youngster. They liked the way he stood off Ortega's wild punching, yet went about his chores in businesslike fashion. With added experience and maturity, Moyer could climb to the top.

Coaches Dismayed Over Wild Melee In Tense Contest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—"It breaks my heart to see something like that happen," a melancholy Wake Forest Coach Bones McKinney said Thursday night after a tense North Carolina-Deacon basketball game erupted into a free-swimming melee. The Tar Heels won 75-66.

Before the game, McKinney promised some new court strategy to whip the high flying Tar Heels, trying to enhance their bid for national top-ranking currently held by Kentucky.

Coach Frank McGuire of the second-ranked Tar Heels would only say, "It's a dangerous thing." Until the final 30 seconds, it was a hard-fought contest between two old Atlantic Coast Conference rivals.

Wake's George Richie was high man for the night at 22 points. Virginia and Clemson took on Southern Conference foes last night. Virginia's Herb Bush scored 26 points as the Cavaliers overwhelmed Virginia Military 85-66. Meanwhile, Clemson got hot in the second half to down Furman's Paladins 73-64. George Krawjack knocking in 22 points as Clemson top man.

Pirates To Play Elon On Saturday

East Carolina will be seeking a victory over Elon in a North State conference basketball contest in Memorial Gymnasium, here, Saturday night. The Bucs will be bidding for one of the three top places in the loop, having won five straight victories and holding a record of eight wins in the last nine contests.

Toss-Up Tilt

WASHINGTON — Rose High School's cagers—currently on a hot streak which has boosted them from third place to a tie for first—journeys to Washington tonight for an important Northeastern Conference ballgame.

Washington, until last week, held a tie with Kinston for the league's No. 1 position. Odds makers give the Pam-Pack an equal chance tonight to dump the Phantoms out of their tie, now, with the Kinston club.

Fights

At present, Greenville has a 5-2 mark to maintain a tie for first place with the Kinston Red Devils.

Photographically, high school student today have many opportunities in their schools, homes and their outside activities to bring them pleasure and profit. All phases of school life are receiving greater pictorial attention in all publications than ever before and there's no one in a better position to put them on film than a student with an ever-ready camera. A teen-ager's world can best be captured in pictures by a perceptive participant... the teen-ager himself.

One of the profitable possibilities for high school photographers this year, as in previous years, is the National High School Photo Contest. Only this year the top awards have been increased to $400 each in four categories for the senior group (grades 11-12), while second and third prize winners get $300 and $200.

The high school students' in the Junior Division (grades 9-10) can aim for top prizes of $300, $200 and $100 each in the four picture groups which are: 1. All School Activities, including athletics. 2. People—all ages from babies on up, in all activities. 3. Pictorials and scenes in which people are incidental. 4. Animals and Pets.

Beside these major targets, there are more than 300 other cash prizes for those who fall short of the bulls-eyes. Deadline for entries is March 31 but a high school camera fan with some pictures to enter should carefully read all the rules in the contest first. One of the important points is that if there are any recognizable persons shown in a photograph, the photographer should have their names and addresses.

If that picture turns out to be a winner, the people shown must sign a release, permitting display of the photo. Getting proper identification of all people in all pictures is a good habit anyway, even if there is no intention of entering a photo contest.

This contest is limited only to black-and-white pictures—no color slides. Many times, it is an advantage to make an enlargement and then crop it drastically to eliminate everything but the center of interest. It may be surprising to find how many distracting details there often are in a picture which, when removed, improve it.

Campus photographers should be alert to imaginative ways of viewing all activities. After shooting a picture, see if there are other ways to add drama, mood or ingenuity. Look for unusual camera angles, a way to frame the subject, a reflection or a silhouette.

Off-beat pictures are also to be found in off-beat weather. The challenge of snow, sleet and rain, the mysteries of night and the sparkle of blacklighting all add interest to normal subject matter and cause judges to look twice. And that's the first step towards being a winner. None of this is too tough for our high school boys and girls. Any group that has the stamina for rock-n-roll has enough youthful enthusiasm to grab a camera and shoot prize winning photos.

With His Jibes, A 'Commercial'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Poet-writer Carl Sandburg took out last night against television commercials—then delivered a commercial of his own.

Departing from a talk in tribute to Abraham Lincoln, the 51-year-old Sandburg criticized TV commercials for what he said is their raucous quality and "extreme exaggerations."

He lumped TV, radio and the movies in his critical comments while addressing an audience at the Library of Congress that he was "not saying there is not priceless stuff in each" of those media.

Sandburg's point of departure on this theme was a remark that such great men as Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton and Lincoln did all right with books alone before the advent of TV, radio and other modern means of information and entertainment.

Speaking of "The tricks that are played on you on TV and radio," Sandburg was unsparring in his barbs at Madison Ave, the figurative capital of the advertising business. Calling it "Ulcer Gulch," he said its aim is to "make you think you want these things" that are pushed on the airways.

Then, with a piky grin, Sandburg said he had a commercial for his audience—he announced the publication next October of a paper back edition of his Pulitzer prize winning biography of Lincoln. Price—$2.98.

May Rendezvous In San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Friends here believe President and Mrs. Eisenhower plan a rendezvous in San Antonio among the scenes of their courtship.

Elaborate preparations at the hotel where Mrs. Eisenhower and her sister are staying and Mamie's assertion Thursday night that the President may visit here en route to or from Acapulco, Mexico, brought on the conjecture. The President is due in Acapulco for a Feb. 19 meeting with President Adolfo Lopez Mateos of Mexico.

Mrs. Eisenhower told friends the President indicated he may stop over either here or in Austin on his trip. The President was a young Army officer here when he and Mamie E. Doud announced their engagement.

Mrs. Eisenhower and her sister, Mrs. G. Gordon Moore of Washington, also a former San Antonio resident, arrived shortly after noon Thursday. They are en route to a vacation at Elizabeth Arden's Maine Chance beauty and health resort near Phoenix, Ariz.

Will Collect On His Abstentions

WAKEFIELD, Mass. (AP)—Donald T. Young, 23, stands to collect $10 from the town of Wakefield for abstaining from liquor and tobacco.

The money comes from the Jonathan Nichols Temperance and Tobacco Fund administered by the town.

Nichols set up the fund in 1883 to pay young men $10 for abstaining between the ages of 18 and 21. Young applied Thursday, the first to do so in five years. The fund was popular in the Victorian era but only 10 have applied in the past 44 years.

Animal Trainer Clawed By Lion

DETROIT (AP)—A lion clawed Clyde Beatty's arm Thursday night but the animal trainer completed his Shrine circus act before going to a hospital for treatment.

Six stitches were taken in Beatty's right arm. He suffered several scratches on his left arm.

Beatty was injured when Caesar, a 10-year-old African lion, knocked the trainer's sun and chair from his hands and slashed both arms with his claws.

"Fellow-citizens, we cannot escape history... The fiery trial through which we pass will light us down, in honor or dishonor, to the latest generation... The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present... We must think anew, and act anew. We must disenthrall ourselves." This quote could be out of a speech made yesterday—but it isn't. It's out of Abraham Lincoln's message to Congress, Dec. 1, 1862, and it's included in an inspiring article in last Sunday's Times Magazine by Carl Sandburg, Lincoln biographer and famous adopted North Carolinian. We recommend it to you as a fit way to celebrate Lincoln's birthday...

Grants
We don't want to confuse the word "grant" with the name of a Civil War General, so we hasten to tell you that we're talking about a new series of Ford Foundation grants that we've just heard about. Next Monday news will be officially released that the Foundation has granted—that word again—that very again—$150,000 to deserving novelists and poets, just to help them concentrate on their creative activities so they won't have to worry about money for the next couple of years. The president of the Foundation says that the new grants are designed to stimulate opportunities for artists "at a stage in their careers when time to concentrate on their talents gives promise of major contributions to their own artistic development and to contemporary American art." And to literature, too, we might add. Recipients of grants who are Southerners are Miss Flannery O'Connor, story writer and novelist from Milledgeville, Ga., and Miss Katherine Anne Porter of Lexington, Va., author of "Pale Horse, Pale Rider," among other lovely tales...

Russian Historian Says Columbus Followed Maps

By DENNIS NEED
LONDON (AP)—A Soviet historian says Christopher Columbus didn't discover America—but he doesn't claim a Russian did. Moscow radio said the historian's study of ancient documents showed that Columbus already had maps giving the position of some lands of the New World when he set out aboard the Santa Maria on his famous voyage in 1492.

Avers African Racial Problems Deeper Than U.S.

CHAPEL HILL (AP)—A U.S. State Department specialist on African affairs says a solution to the problem of racialism in Africa "will not be easy and will not come quickly." C. Vaughan Ferguson Jr., told the ninth annual World Affairs Conference here Thursday, "We Americans, in view of our unsolved difficulties, should be careful in our attitudes toward these areas of Africa."

Mine Shaft Fall Fatal For 2 Men

VIBURNUM, Mo. (AP)—Two men were killed and two critically hurt in a 100-foot fall to the bottom of a lead mine shaft Thursday. Killed were Junior Gilliam of Potosi and Don Hall of Fredericktown. Injured were Lloyd Francis of Dillard and Loy Bennett of Fredericktown. Bennett's right arm was severed.

Tears For All On Pushing Button

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—While dusting her mother's apartment Mrs. Claudette Puckett pushed a button on an object which looked like a tiny flashlight. The object, a small tear gas bomb, exploded and gas flooded the room. Mrs. Puckett and her two children, aged 4 and 3, fled unharmed but weeping.

Liberace Hopes Future Will Be More 'Normal'

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—"And then one day," said Walter Valentino Liberace, "I suddenly realized that according to the press I'd become a sort of phenomenon. And to me, being a phenomenon is the next thing to being a freak." The pianist known to millions simply as Liberace was talking about a stage of his life he hopes is dead forever. At 38 he believes that "I am being accepted as I want to be, as a performer and a human being."

Boy Charged In Four Break-Ins

Police yesterday charged a 10-year-old boy with breaking and entering and larceny in connection with four break-ins which occurred on Monday and Tuesday here. The youth was charged with having entered unlawfully Moore's Gulf Station, Ronnie's Doughnut Shop, Carolina Dairy, and Central Service Station and was charged with larceny in three of those cases. Police turned the case over to welfare authorities.

CHAPTER 27 The trip to Duchess Harbor had taken twenty minutes in Caxton's limousine. Bruno Manfredi shaved that to fifteen minutes by keeping a heavy foot on the gas, and a wary eye out for stray policemen along the way. When he turned off the highway into the road leading to the shore Murray Kirk slipped off his overcoat and shoes, and Bruno, observing this, said, "Now I see I really got myself into something. What are you supposed to be — Kirk of the Commandos?"

"The knot which had been withstood so far tightened in Murray's stomach. It pressed up against his diaphragm, and breathing became difficult. "That's me," he said. "Watch out when you get to the driveway. The garage is on this side and there were a couple of guys hanging around it last time. Best thing is to come in around the other side, and slow down when you're near the corner of the house, so I can jump off there."

He had the door already open as the car passed the corner of the house, and he jumped out, sidled and almost fell on ground which was icy-frozen and slick under a film of hoar-frost and then regained his balance and ran, crouching low, to the side of the building. Light showed behind the lowered Venetian blind in the window there, but the window itself was a foot above his head. He braced his hands on the sill and cautiously drew himself up until he was resting on his forearms, his stockings feet dangling free. Hanging there like that, he found that every sound around him was magnified and distorted. Everything became approaching footsteps: the wind flicking at the cuffs of his trousers was a restraining hand laid on him. It cost him an effort not to look around at the threatening unknown. Not that it would do any good to look, especially if something was there. In his position he was a perfect target — the classic sitting duck — for anything aimed his way. It was hard to gauge whether it was that chilling realization or the bitterness of the night air that was numbing him into helplessness while he strained to see through the slats of the blind.

It seemed an endless time before Bruno finally came into sight in the hall. Joe, the majordomo, was with him, shaking a doubting head, and then George Wykoff himself appeared, along with a man who might, from the looks of him, have been one of the nephews Mitchell Dowd had referred to. He towered a head over Wykoff, but he had the same vulpine features, the same sulky air about him.

Bruno was apparently having a hard time of it, but was playing his hand well. His manner was one of indifference, mild puzzlement, the manner of a man who finds himself the innocent victim of a misunderstanding between a corporation and a customer. He spoke casually, shrugged, looked at his receipt book with a frown — and then Wykoff turned away from him and headed directly toward the window from which Murray dangled.

That, Murray saw, was something he hadn't taken into account. The phone was on a table not five feet from the window. When Wykoff picked it up and dialed his back toward Murray. But as he started to speak he slowly turned, his eyes abstractedly fixed on the wall. Then slowly he turned away, nodded, replaced the phone. He must have called the utilities company, must have been satisfied by what he had been told. He gestured at Bruno, and Bruno, still magnificently unconcerned, still the man who could take a job or leave it, whichever suited the customer, followed Joe out of sight down the hall.

Murray let his feet down to the ground. To the best of his recollection there were two windows in the living room beyond it, and then there was the room with the desk in it. He counted his way along the side of the house and waited, watching the glow of light from the living-room windows and from the upstairs windows above them. In his mind's eye he saw Bruno at the head of the cellar stairs, moved with him downstairs, and followed as Bruno crossed the cellar to wherever the fuse box was.

When the lights went out Murray heaved himself up to the sill and pushed at the window frame. It slid up an inch and then stopped. He pushed harder, balancing precariously on his knees and using both hands, but either the frame was jammed or there was a safety catch holding it. If it was jammed — but there was no use thinking about that. The thing to do was try the catch first.

The outside of the sill was very narrow. It was hard finding a foothold on it after he had gotten himself up to a standing position there, and meanwhile Bruno must be well through his count of a hundred. Murray pulled the glass cutter from his pocket, ran it in a semicircle around the point where he calculated the catch would be, and worked the glass loose from the frame. He had calculated correctly, the catch was directly above the opening he had cut. He reached in and turned it, and with one heave pushed the window up the full way.

The room was a well of darkness. He lowered himself cautiously, lay into it, holding his breath as he passed through the invisible wall ordinarily provided by the electronic eye, half expecting the alarm to go off next to his ear. He reached in and turned it, and with one heave pushed the window up the full way. The room was a well of darkness. He lowered himself cautiously, lay into it, holding his breath as he passed through the invisible wall ordinarily provided by the electronic eye, half expecting the alarm to go off next to his ear. He reached in and turned it, and with one heave pushed the window up the full way.

He made his way toward the car, pressing the binder of papers to his chest. The rear door of the car was open — it took Bruno to realize that a door would have to be left open for this exigency — and he went through it, huddling out of sight on the floor there. The door left open behind him. Then Bruno came out of the house, thrusting his receipt book into his pocket, tossing the tool box on the back seat with a flourish, slamming the car door, getting into place behind the wheel, starting the motor.

The wheels pun on the icy road, the car lurched forward, found traction, and moved down the driveway, jouncing as it went over the small rise leading to the road away from George Wykoff. Bruno reached around and slapped Murray on top of the head.

"Tell me something," he said. "Is it true what they say about a guy's hair turning white if he's scared enough?"

Is the purloined ledger worth the risk of being socked with the charge of breaking and entering? "The Eighth Circle" continues here tomorrow.

Hard To Reach 17,000 Rebels

ALGIERS (AP) — The French high command estimated 17,000 nationalist rebel fighters are inside the boundaries of Algeria. A spokesman told newsmen Wednesday that while the number is insignificant compared with the 500,000 French troops in Algeria, the inaccessibility of rebel centers made them difficult to reach.

Venezuela Troops, Police Ready For Austerity Foes

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Troops and police stood guard today against the threats of Communists and rightists to disrupt the austerity inauguration of President Romulo Betancourt.

Betancourt, 50, a moderate leftist and political veteran, is Venezuela's first freely elected president in 10 years. The leader of the Democratic Action party, he is opposed by supporters of ousted dictator Marcos Perez Jimenez, Caracas who voted heavily for the leader of the junta which replaced Perez Jimenez, and the Reds.

Intelligence agents said the opposition planned street disorders during the inauguration, with women dressed in black to block traffic around the Capitol while demonstrators denounced the president.

The newspaper Pregon said free liquor was distributed in a big working class neighborhood to get gangs of youths drunk so they would roam the streets and cause trouble.

A demonstration reportedly arranged for midnight in the central El Silencio district of Caracas did not come off, however. Streets in the area were practically deserted. The district was the site of battles between police and rioters Tuesday night.

Betancourt ordered the inaugural ceremonies kept simple because of the legacy of unemployment and poverty from the ousted dictatorship. He dispensed with the usual parade, grand ball and banquet.

The most elaborate event was a formal reception Thursday night at the Foreign Ministry for foreign delegates to the inaugural. Only a small crowd turned out in the Plaza Bolivar to watch the guests in evening dress.

Betancourt made plain that he would not rush ahead with proposals by leftist and nationalistic elements that the foreign operators of the oil industry give Venezuela a much larger share of the profits.

"There will be no sudden decrees," he told the Caracas Journal, in an obvious reference to the outgoing junta's sudden 10 per cent raise in the income tax in December without prior consultation with the U. S., British and Dutch oil companies.

A youthful Communist who long ago turned his back on the party, Betancourt has spent more than 20 years off and on in exile. He was provisional president in 1945-8 after the overthrow of Gen. Isaias Medina.

In the presidential election last December he rolled up a huge vote in the provinces to defeat Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal, the former head of the junta, whose vote came largely from Caracas. Larrazabal left last weekend to become ambassador to Chile.

Nearly Lured To Watery Graves

SARNIA, Ont. (AP)—A former Royal Canadian Air Force ferry pilot said today his Sabre Jet and three others were almost diverted into a North Atlantic grave 2 1/2 years ago by a radio signal apparently coming from a Soviet ship.

The report has been circulating in Canada for several days. Defense Minister George Pearkes told a questioner in the House of Commons Thursday he was unable to confirm the report.

The pilot, Kenneth V. Hagarty of Sarnia, said in an interview he was at the controls of one of the planes following a radio beam into Kinloss, Scotland, when a new and stronger radio signal was superimposed on the beam.

The signal came from a different direction, he said, and nearly sent the whole flight winging north into the arctic.

The Sabres are short-range planes and transatlantic flights are worked out carefully.

The Sabres did not alter course and were able to distinguish enough of the Kinloss signal to complete the flight without trouble, he said, and the pilots were told not to mention the incident.

Hagarty said it was overcast and the pilots could see nothing below, but the Royal Air Force later sent out scout planes and sighted what they described as "foreign" ships in the area.

West To Draft German Formula

WASHINGTON (AP)—Western leaders expect to draft within the next month a new formula for German reunification. They hope it may promote serious negotiations with the Soviet Union for uniting East and West Germany.

The shape of the formula is still to be determined, but it is expected to push the Western request for free all-German elections somewhat into the background.

Many experts now believe that the unifying process could go on for as much as two years before nationwide elections were held. In the meantime practical steps in the economic and political field could be taken to bring the two Germanys closer together.

Diplomatic informants said today that the United States, Britain, France and West Germany are guided by two main tactical considerations in their German policies which is now under way.

Their primary aim is to test to the limit—without sacrificing vital Western interests—the possibility that the Soviet government may be ready for serious negotiations and compromises on the unity issue.

Their other concern is to demonstrate to the world a Western readiness to negotiate with initiative and flexibility.

Several Western concessions already have become known as a result of exchanges among the governments in Washington, London, Paris and Bonn. These concessions include:

1. A decision to propose in a forthcoming note to the Soviet government that German advisers participate in a prospective East-West foreign ministers conference.
2. A declared readiness—recently stated by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles—to have a foreign ministers conference with the Soviet Union without advance agreement on a detailed program of discussion. The only agreement required from the Soviet Union is to talk about all aspects of the German problem so that both sides could bring up any proposals they wish.
3. A decision that the reunification of Germany through free election—the formula to which the Western powers have clung for many years—is not the only possible way to obtain German unity.

Initiated by Dulles, this change broke down the West's rigid position on one of the crucial German issues.

Authorities said today that any merger plan acceptable to the West would require at some point all-German elections to choose a new unity government, but that the elections would not have to be a first step by any means.

Wants To Check Training Record

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (R-Maine) won't say yet whether she will again oppose giving a general's star to film actor Jimmy Stewart. She said she wants to check his training record again.

She contended two years ago that Stewart, a World War II combat pilot, had not kept up with training required of most reservists. Her objection was largely responsible for blocking Senate confirmation of Stewart's promotion from colonel to brigadier general in the Air Force Reserve.

President Eisenhower renewed Stewart's nomination Thursday.

A detachment of WAC's will be stationed at Fort Shafter near Honolulu for clerical and administrative duties at Pacific Army Headquarters.

Bridges Softens Critical Words On Highway Dept.

RALEIGH (AP)—State Auditor Paul Johnston, while Dixon's was to Highway Chairman J. Melville Broughton.

The controversy stemmed from a speech Bridges made to the Greensboro Lions Club Monday night. In answer to a question, he was quoted as saying, "They've just about trebled the accounting staff in the highway department but you still can't follow a transaction all the way through."

In his letter, Bridges said he had been quoted as using the phrases "impossible to trace" or "can't trace" in connection with following transactions through the highway accounting system. He said he had told the Lions Club it was difficult to trace the transactions.

Dixon declared that the state auditor's office had reviewed and approved all major changes in accounting systems and procedures. He said that while the new accounting system was being planned Bridges had written to State Budget Officer D. S. Coltrane on March 7, 1957, and told him "in consideration of an over-all picture the recommended program is sound and will greatly benefit all parties concerned."

The two letters were read to legislators at a joint meeting of the Senate and House Appropriations and Finance committees.

Bridges addressed his letter to State Director of Administration

Still Hoping For Heavy Weapons

JAKARTA (AP)—Premier Djuanda said today Indonesia still hopes to get heavy arms from the United States.

The U. S. government 10 days ago approved the shipment to Indonesia an estimated 10 million dollars worth of light weapons and vehicles, enough to equip 20 battalions.
