

Eisenhower, Macmillan Agree On Formula To Offer Summit Talk

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan agreed today on a formula for offering to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev the prospect of a summit conference later this year.

A proposed draft of the summit meeting plan was dispatched immediately to the French and German governments and the other NATO allies for their reaction. The formula, when fully approved, will be included in a new note to Moscow on negotiations over the Berlin crisis and German problems generally. The Western powers had already agreed to propose a foreign ministers meeting at Geneva beginning May 11—and hold out at least the possibility of a follow-up summit conference.

Today's agreement was announced by U. S. and British press officers immediately after it was reached. Presidential press secretary James C. Hagerty, with British spokesman Peter Hope at his elbow, reported to newsmen on the progress of the Eisenhower-Macmillan discussions at Camp David in these words:

"Both Hope and I can say that there is complete agreement between our two governments that we are looking to negotiations as a means of settling controversies in Europe, that we have agreed on the general line on which we think the reply to the Soviet note dealing with the matter of a summit meeting should be formulated. "We are now communicating our proposals to the French and German governments and to our NATO allies for their consideration."

The agreement was disclosed less than two hours after Eisenhower and Macmillan began the second day of their talks at Camp David, in the nearby Catoctin Mountains of Maryland. The announcement apparently was made so quickly because the U. S. and British delegations wanted to counter news of disagreement over the approach to the summit issue which came out of the talks late Friday.

The U. S. - British difference, which had developed sharply after Macmillan's visit to Moscow a month ago, was well known in advance of the Camp David conference. But it came into the personal discussions of Eisenhower and Macmillan in the course of their seven hours of discussion Friday.

Hagerty repeatedly refused to tell the nature of the agreement reached. He said he could not go beyond his statement.

It was known, however, that Eisenhower had told associates he intended to stand firm on his view that he was prepared to go to a summit conference but it should be justified by developments in the meantime.

Macmillan had come to the United States hoping to persuade him, according to all accounts, to make a firm pledge for a summit meeting this summer.

With the agreement on the summit issue out of the way, Eisenhower and Macmillan were ready to turn to other topics, such as suspension of nuclear weapons tests.

The general European situation also was open to review.

More British and American officials came from Washington, by helicopter, for the latter phases. Eisenhower and Macmillan, with their regular advisors, were joined by Sir Anthony Rumbold, an assistant undersecretary of the British Foreign Office in charge of European affairs and high level East-West talks.

Rumbold's presence, along with such regular counselors such as Acting U. S. Secretary of State Christian Herter and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, spotlighted the problem of working out some agreeable arrangement on the summit issue.

Macmillan wants to give Khrushchev definite notice of unconditional Western readiness for a summit meeting. Eisenhower is standing firm on his position that a summit conference should be held only if developments in a prior foreign ministers meeting justified it.

The talks were resumed in pleasant spring weather, the same kind in which Eisenhower and Macmillan flew by helicopter Friday from Washington.

White House Press Secretary James Hagerty telephoned word of the opening of today's discussions from Camp David to the press center in Gettysburg.

Moving into the second day of their Camp David conference, the Allied leaders also were expected to discuss military arrangements in support of their determination to maintain the Western position in Berlin despite Soviet pressures. Dep. Secretary of Defense Donald A. Quarles was summoned from Washington to participate in the Berlin crisis talks. Also asked to the Catoctin Mountain conference room were John A. McCone, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, and presidential science advisor James R. Killian.

On the British side Macmillan asked Con O'Neill, assistant secretary in the London Foreign Office, and Sir Patrick Dean, Foreign Office deputy undersecretary for defense matters, to come from Washington.

Acting Secretary of State John Foster Dulles is represented at the conference by acting Secretary Christian A. Herter. Macmillan's chief advisor is Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd.

Aside from Berlin and German problems, it was evident that Eisenhower and Macmillan were planning to discuss the deadlocked negotiations with the Soviet Union on a nuclear test ban.

This is among the issues on which the two do not see eye-to-eye.

Macmillan suggested to Khrushchev a month ago in Moscow some new ideas on a test ban. The ideas have not been officially disclosed, but Eisenhower told a recent news conference he was not convinced they were practical.

Divergencies of view about offering Khrushchev a summit conference were reported to have emerged during Friday's opening round of discussions.

Plan A Welcome For Champions

East Carolina College's national swimming champions will be welcomed home tonight with an informal celebration at Memorial Gymnasium.

College officials said this morning the team is expected to arrive on the campus about 8 p.m. and will be escorted to the gymnasium. Persons expected to participate in the welcoming are representatives of the administration and Student Government Association, the college band and individual students.

Efforts were also being made this morning to determine the route the team is traveling from Muncie, Ind., to Greenville. It is expected to be determined in time, an escort will be provided the team into Greenville and to the campus.

No Coverage In Nuclear Conflict

LONDON (AP) — Europe's major insurance companies have taken guard against the threat of nuclear war.

One paragraph in thousands of European house insurance policies tells the story. "Excluded from the guarantee against damage," it says, "are those (disasters) due to effects direct or indirect of explosions, of heat or radiations coming from a transmutation of the nucleus and/or radioactivity . . . etc., etc."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A draft call for 6,000 men in May has been issued by the Army. The monthly quota is the lowest since the same number was called up in January, 1956.

West First To File As Candidate For Mayor

Mayor S. Eugene West today became the first candidate to file for the city's top elective post.

The mayor paid his filing fee at the City Clerk's office late this morning and thus became the first man to seek election as mayor by popular vote since the board of alderman days.

"During the past two years I feel that considerable progress has been shown concerning the future planning and advancement of our city," Mayor West said in announcing his candidacy. "Plans are now in progress for joint participation of the State Highway Commission and the city to improve our street system so that our traffic can move freely with a minimum amount of congestion. I would certainly like to see this carried through."

"I am also in favor of a reasonable amount of industry being located in Greenville to take up the slack in our surplus labor."

"As I have stated several times before, I sincerely believe in honest, progressive and impartial city government. It is my desire to keep petty politics out of our city administration."

Mayor West, 45 years old, is vice president of the P. S. West Construction Co. He is married to the former Vivian Smith of Greenville and has been a resident of this city for the past 12 years. The Wests reside at 1101 E. Tenth St. They have no children.

The mayor is a charter member of Hooker Memorial Christian Church and a member of the church board. He is a member of the Elks Lodge, Rotary Club and the Moose Lodge.

West was a successful candidate for the City Council when the new council-manager form of government replaced the old board of aldermen system in 1953. He was re-elected in 1955 and 1957. West served as mayor pro-tem for his first four years on the council. He was elevated to the mayor's office in 1957 and has served in that post for the past two years.

Prior to this year the voters have elected five candidates for the City Council every two years.

Incidentally, It's Springtime

SPRING'S HERE—It's Spring, man. Pretty girls and flowers are popping out all over the place. So it was a little bit cloudy today; that didn't discourage Rose High's Homecoming Queen Kathryn Oakes from gathering a few jonquils. Besides, Photographer Stuart Savage set the whole thing up yesterday—when it was still winter, but the sun was shining. The new season began at 3:55 this morning, by the way.

Dedicating New Reserve Center In City Tomorrow

A Greenville native who lost his life in combat action during World War II will be honored here tomorrow at dedication ceremonies for a new United States Army Reserve Training Center.

The training center is named for the late First Lt. Preston C. Clark, who was killed in action November 17, 1944, near Aachen, Germany. The dedication will begin at 2 p.m. at the training center site on U. S. 13 by-pass North of Greenville.

Senator Robert Lee Humber will be principal speaker at the ceremonies. North Carolina Army Sector Commander Col. Thomas G. Keithly will preside at the formal naming and dedication of the new facility.

Also scheduled to appear on tomorrow's program are Greenville Mayor S. Eugene West, who will extend an official welcome; the Rev. John Drake, who will pronounce the invocation and benediction; and Lt. Col. Beverly Brockdorff, Greenville Area Commander, who will introduce the speakers.

Music will be furnished by the Junius H. Rose High School Band, and members of the VFW Ladies Auxiliary will serve refreshments during an open house, to be held after the dedication.

Selection of Lieutenant Clark as the man for whom the training center is named was by a committee appointed last fall by Regular Army personnel assigned to Greenville Area headquarters. The committee included Judge Dink James, Senator Humber, Pace Fuller, Mrs. W. M. Clark and W. L. Whedbee.

Lieutenant Clark graduated from Greenville High School in June, 1940, and was employed locally until he enlisted in military service on January 7, 1941. He served in the United States until February 11, 1944, when his unit, Battery A, 113th Field Artillery Battalion, 30th Division, was sent to England.

On June 12, Lieutenant Clark landed in Normandy where he was over for bravery in the D-Day invasion. He received a battlefield commission as a second lieutenant on August 19, 1944, and was killed in action on the Siegfried Line North of Aachen less than three months later.

His decorations for bravery in combat include both the Silver Star and Bronze Star. He was awarded the Purple Heart posthumously, and his military record also includes presentation of five battle stars for participation in five major campaigns of World War II.

A resume of Lieutenant Clark's military record is listed on a bronze plaque placed in the entrance hall of the training center.

The plaque was provided by joint action of the Greenville City Council and the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

The training center itself contains about 28,000 square feet of floor space in a main building and a two-bay maintenance shed. Outdoor facilities on the four-and-a-half acre site include two parking areas which can be converted to use as drill areas.

Included in the main building are four classrooms, for use by reserve units assigned to the training center; office space for the units and Regular Army personnel; and an assembly hall where unit formations are held.

The training center is staffed by eight members of the Regular Army detachment and five civilians. They work with approximately 140 Army Reservists who are members of Detachment 1, 3015th USAR Reception Station, and the 398th Engineer Field Maintenance Company.

Full-time personnel who are assigned to the center include Lt. Col. Brockdorff, Lt. Col. F. F. O'Haran, Master Sgt. Charles F. Johnson, Master Sgt. George G. Kohlhaase, SFC Richard E. Davis, SFC John H. Schnauffer, SFC Robert C. Mullin, and Sgt. Perry Reeves Jr.

Civilian personnel at the center are Clinton C. Joyner, Billie W. House, Herman H. Avery, James A. Murphy and Joseph E. Sawyer. Representatives of North Carolina Sector headquarters who are expected to be present for the ceremonies include Col. John Frick, senior Army advisor to the 108th USAR Division; Lt. Col. Lawrence Meeks, Executive Officer of the sector command; and Lt. Col. Eric Edgerton, operations and training officer for North Carolina. Sub-area commanders from Rocky Mount, Wilmington and New Bern are also expected to be present.

He even indicated that any Soviet attempt to throw out the Allies might mean nuclear war. And he poked hard at Khrushchev, who kept insisting on a summit conference to settle things, that such a conference was useless until the Soviet leader began showing more signs of willingness to negotiate.

Whether or not Khrushchev took this as a real nudge, only he knows. But at least in recent weeks he has talked less belligerently, put more stress on the value of negotiations, and repeatedly said he wasn't setting a deadline or laying down an ultimatum.

Then last Monday night, as if responding to increasing reasonableness from Khrushchev, Eisenhower, in his nationwide broadcast carefully avoided any sign of belligerency or irritation.

He went further than he ever had before, although laying down some conditions, in suggesting not only that a summit conference was possible but that it could be held this summer.

Thursday Khrushchev called a giant news conference. He too sounded reasonable and praised Eisenhower for his reasonableness.

Talked His Way Out Of A Holdup

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSBERG

Literary and artistic event of the week is publication last Monday of the new—March—issue of HORIZON, self-styled Magazine of the Arts and rapidly becoming Your's Editor's favorite . . . For the literary folks, Malcolm Cowley's article on the new novelists, "Ten Authors in Pursuit of One Subject," is a first-rate account by an excellent critic of the reasons why he is not particularly impressed with ten recent first novels by such young writers as Richard Frede, Shirley Ann Grau, Jonathan Kozol and J. P. Donleavy, all of whom have made quite a stir among the critics. But Mr. Cowley is unhappy about them because he detects a lack of seriousness in the themes their work is concerned with—even though they are pretty specific about having subjects. The major subject of all of them, he maintains, is Sex. And the minor subject is Driving Automobiles. Fast. We recommend Mr. Cowley's MIKOYAN'S IDEA?

MOSCOW (AP)—White bread wrapped in printed wax paper—"enriched bread made from the best flour"—appeared this week in Moscow. Probably nobody could prove it but it could be a result of Anastas I. Mikoyan's recent American visit. After his first American visit in the 1930s corn flakes went on the market here—as kornflakes.

The age-old question of who wrote Shakespeare's plays anyway, if he didn't? is investigated thoroughly in a new book by R. C. Churchill, SHAKESPEARE AND HIS BETTERS: A History and a Criticism of the Attempts Which Have Been Made to Prove That Shakespeare's Works Were Written by Others. (All those capitals are part of the title—not ours) . . . Mr. Churchill considers the candidates for authorship, including the Earls of Oxford and Southampton, Francis Bacon, Queen Elizabeth, Chris Marlowe and Sir Walter Raleigh—and they're not all—and concludes that nobody has been able to prove that Shakespeare didn't write the plays after all. The book is reviewed in the Times this week by James McManaway, consultant for the Folger Shakespeare Library and probably America's most knowledgeable authority on The Bard. He quotes Dryden concerning the genuineness of Shakespeare's greatness—back 200 years ago the English poet said that Shakespeare was "the man who of all modern, and perhaps ancient poets, had the largest and most comprehensive soul." And we'll go along with that one, too.

On The College

Hunter Blakely, Secretary of the Division of Higher Education of the Board of Christian Education, has this to say about Russia's challenge to American higher education, in an article in the April Presbyterian Survey: College professors make from three to five times as much money in Russia as they do in America, their salaries ranging from $85,000 to $50,000 a year—something for our Legislators to think about these days . . .

Local Scene

Look Magazine for March 17 has a feature on A SOUTHERN MODERATE SPEAKS, by Brooks Hays, the ex-Arkansas Congressman's story, just published by UNC Press out of Chapel Hill . . . At E.C.C., the Greenville Little Theatre production of BUS STOP, the play Marilyn Monroe made famous as a movie, went into rehearsal last week and is scheduled for production April 16, 17 and 18 at Austin Auditorium, E.C.C. . . . Also scheduled for April is the Musical, KISS ME KATE, with a star-studded cast . . . ROMEO AND JULIET is going into rehearsal soon, scheduled for performance early in May as part of the Community Arts Festival . . . Next week at the local cinema, starting Sunday, the 22nd: the movie version of John Vandrunen's Broadway stage hit, BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE, with Jimmy Stewart and Kim Kovak . . .

CONSORT FOR VICTORIA. By Vaughan Wilkins. New York: Doubleday & Co., 1939.

The title CONSORT FOR VICTORIA is misleading. The book is not about Victoria and Albert at all though she appears briefly, in the prologue and the epilogue and he participates in the final scenes, but adds very little to them. This book, called "a romantic novel about Queen Victoria and Prince Albert" on the dust jacket, is really a melodrama full of spies, attempted murders, recognition scenes, and the very long arm of coincidence. The madly complicated plot revolves around Ernest of Hanover's alleged attempt to prevent Queen Victoria from marrying Albert of Saxe-Coburg by calling Albert's legitimacy into question. Dealing with a cabal of such proportions would seem to be a difficult matter and one best undertaken by well-trained agents, but Vaughan Wilkins dusts off these familiar figures of spy novels, the beautiful, intelligent young woman and the handsome, rich, well-connected major who just happen to stumble upon the secret. They are well able to foil Ernest of Hanover's nefarious schemes. CONSORT FOR VICTORIA has nothing to offer the reader that Steve Canyon doesn't have too, and with pictures.

Publication Carries Morrison Article On Type Of Spanish Music

Robert R. Morrison, faculty member of the department of foreign languages, in an article in the March issue of "Hispania" directs attention toward the zarzuela, a genre of music in which a number of recording companies have recently become interested because of its melodic appeal.

Mr. Morrison briefly defines the zarzuela, traces its history, and then discusses in detail some of the long-playing recordings which have recently made this type of music available to the public.

The zarzuela, he explains, is a combination of dialogue, song, and dance somewhat similar to the operetta. With a history going

Christian Science Announcements

The effectiveness of prayer in healing the sick will be stressed at Christian Science services Sunday in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Matter."

From the Gospel according to St. Mark will be read the healing by Christ Jesus of the young lad who had "a dumb spirit." The account ends with Jesus' comment to his disciples, " . . . This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting" (Mark 9:29).

Also emphasizing the power of prayer are passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, including the following (13:9): "To enter into the heart of prayer, the door of the erring senses must be closed. Lips must be mute and materialism silent, that man may have audience with Spirit, the divine Principle. Love, which destroys all error."

Gunman Insisted On Bar Service

DETROIT (AP)—A customer at an East Side bar became angry when he was refused service because he was drunk.

The man drew a gun and took $79 from the till and six patrons. Then he ordered the waitress to give him a beer and drinks for the house. She did.

Everybody Learns How To Wait

Waiting--- In the bus station

The retail store

The grocery store

The classroom

By ROSALIE MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

Something everyone learns very early in life is that waiting is part of living. People spend a good part of their time waiting for something, for somebody, during the span of the day or night.

Learning how to wait is less easily achieved.

The child's impatience for Santa Claus is just the beginning; that impatience finds a dozen new fields for development through the years.

Servicemen laugh at the old story of "Hurry up and wait" they knew at first hand. There are some who say that in learning patience (while waiting) they avoided subsequent frustrations.

But wherever they go, whatever they do, people ultimately must wait.

The art of waiting is part of the firemen's job. At the local fire station the firemen spend much of their time cleaning the building, keeping the equipment in top condition, going to classes and drilling at the fire tower. After their particular duties are performed, they also pass the time by playing cards or watching television.

Another phase of waiting is that of people who travel. These people are constantly confronted with the problem of waiting for their particular bus to arrive at the station. Travelers may spend much of their time reading magazines, talking to other passengers on the buses, or just sitting.

Local stores are other examples of places where people stand or look around, while the sales clerks linger nearby to accept the money for purchases and wrap articles. Also, at times, customers have to wait until sales clerks are available to serve them.

So far as waiting in stores is concerned, few things compare with waiting to check-out purchases at food stores. Every shopper knows that waiting to check-out may take more time than that spent at the cashier's desk or in selecting foods.

A less-intense form of waiting is that of patrons of restaurants and snack bars. It is an everyday sort of proposition for them to spend a few minutes just waiting on each of their trips for coffee-break refreshments or meals.

Perhaps the most strained waiting of all, however, is that of school children. To them, nothing compares with the agonizing wait for report cards and grades—unless it's waiting for the last day of the school year.

Even then, their waiting is the same as any other person's waiting: They're just staying around, expecting something to happen.

Greenville Golf And Country Club Marks Birthday

SPECIAL GUESTS AT COUNTRY CLUB'S ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION — Luther Herring, S. T. White, David W. Mosier, J. Con Lanier, and Dr. M. B. Massey.

Greenville Golf and Country Club's 38th anniversary was observed last night with a club dinner at which past presidents, secretary-treasurers, golf champions and members of the present Board of Governors were honored.

The club was organized March 24, 1921, with 100 members. It now has a membership of more than 500 and facilities include an 18-hole course, the club house, a pro shop and locker room building, a wading pool for children and a swimming pool.

White, president of the club in 1928; Luther Herring, winner of the President's Cup in 1928; Dr. M. B. Massey, club champion in 1941 and 1943; and J. Con Lanier, secretary-treasurer from 1929 through 1946.

Other guests included past presidents Ken Phillips (1954), Dr. Dan Wright (1953), A. B. Stallworth, (1952), Howard Hodges, Jr., (1951)

L. S. Ficklen (1948), and Tom Smoot (1940-1944); President's Cup winners F. C. Bowles (1931) and Herbert Waldrop (1927 and 1952); past secretary-treasurers Howard Waldrop and J. Ed Waldrop; club golf champions Excel Webb, Don Conley, Jr., Bo Farley and Molt Massey, Jr., and present members of the Board of Governors, Howard Waldrop, Henry Coleman, Webb and Dr. Wright.

Resident professional Harold Thomas, greens superintendent Clem Stewart and club manager Al Denise were also guests.

Highlights in the club's history were recounted by Mosier and other guests during the dinner meeting.

Kiwanians Induct Three Members At Meeting

The Greenville Kiwanis Club at its weekly supper meeting last night, inducted three new members: J. B. Jackson, Dr. Badger Clark, and Edwin Baldree.

Kiwanis Education Chairman Hunter B. Keck, who inducted the new Kiwanians, gave a brief outline of Kiwanis and its history, and called on the candidates' wives to present the Kiwanis emblem pins. Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Baldree, "Sweetheart of Kiwanis," attached the emblems to the Kiwanians' lapels. Mrs. Tyson officiated for Mrs. Baldree, who was out of town. President John A. Collins Jr., who presided, welcomed the new members.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Thomas J. Canning, manager of the Farmville Pileboard plant, who discussed operation of the plant. He pointed out that the plant personnel are still testing production operations, and are satisfied with progress thus far. Canning explained automatic operations in production of Pileboard, adding that it is produced from raw materials purchased from Eastern North Carolina farmers. He invited the Kiwanians to visit the Farmville plant in a group. Vice-President Charles P. Gaskins, who had charge of the program, introduced the speaker. Guests of the club in addition to the wives of two of the new

Music Program Is Offered At Exchange Meet

Last night at the weekly supper meeting of the Greenville Exchange Club a musical program was given by Ronnie Knouse, Miss Shelby Jean Grady, and Miss Rose Rich, all of East Carolina College.

First, Knouse, accompanied by Miss Grady at the piano, sang several selections from the musical show, "Oklahoma"; then Miss Rich sang numbers from "Carousel". A duet was then sung, entitled "People Will Say We're In Love." Ed Harris was in charge of the program.

President John Hassell announced that next Friday will be an anniversary date for Exchange and that the members will bring their sons and daughters as their guests. A special birthday program has been planned and the food will be especially prepared for the youngsters.

Guest of the club last night was the Rev. Mr. Bill Hadden, new pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church.

Practice Assault Termed Success

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP)—A practice assault landing by more than 2,000 Second Division Marines was staged successfully here yesterday.

Waves of helicopters ferried the men from the Aircraft Carrier Boxer to inland positions while landing craft brought tanks, bulldozers and other heavy equipment ashore at Onslow Beach.

The assault climaxed a 10-week exercise at Puerto Rico.

Observing the operations were Adm. Arleigh Burke, chief of naval operations; Lt. Gen. E. A. Pollock, commander of Fleet Marine Force Atlantic; Maj. Gen. J. P. Riseley, Camp Lejeune commander; and Maj. Gen. J. C. Burger, commanding officer of the Second Division.

ECC Completes Land Purchase

Purchase of 44 acres of land in Greenville has been completed at East Carolina College, and the deed to the property is now held by the college. Vice President in charge of business F.D. Duncan, has announced. The cost of the property was $143,600.

Through the addition of this tract of land, the campus now includes a total of 180 acres, Duncan stated.

The newly acquired property is located in the Southern part of the city of Greenville and does not adjoin other land owned by the college. The tract lies immediately south of the Norfolk-Southern railroad and extends westward from the Elmhurst School to the New Bern highway.

The property will meet needs created by future additions to the physical plant of the college, Duncan said. No plans for its immediate use have been completed, he explained.

The tract was purchased from seven sisters whose surname before marriage was Hardee. They are Mrs. Marie Spain, Mrs. Doris Fussell, Mrs. Lillian Best, Mrs. Emma Dixon, Mrs. Margaret Sutton, Mrs. Jane Nash, and Mrs. Anne Wase.

New Buildings At ECC Are In Use

The New South Dining Hall and the annex to Music Hall, buildings recently completed at East Carolina College, are now in regular use by college personnel.

The dining hall, begun in April, 1958, was opened this week, and three meals a day are now being served there. Designed by C. Carter Williams, Raleigh architect, it was built and equipped at a cost of $166,650.

Completion of the building brings to four the number of dining halls on the campus. A fifth will be available when Paul Jones Hall for men, now under construction, is completed.

Located on the southwest part of the campus, the new building connects with the central kitchen of the college, in which meals for all four of the dining halls are prepared.

Hope To Recover Cone Of ICBM

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Air Force hurried a futuristic ICBM warhead far out over the Atlantic aboard a fiery Thor-Able rocket today and hoped to recover it intact for the first time in six launches.

The huge two-stage rocket, a modified combination of the inter-mediate range Thor and Vanguard appeared to perform perfectly during the 2½ minutes it was in sight after a spectacular blastoff.

A fleet of search ships and planes waited in rendezvous off Ascension Island 5,000 miles to the southeast ready to recover the elusive cone after it splashed into the sea.

A bright puff and then a tiny flash of light in rapid succession indicated that the second stage of the 80-foot launching vehicle had ignited.

Up to now the Air Force had failed to retrieve one of the tiny cones that are vital in aiding missile scientists to develop the ultimate nuclear warhead shield for such ICBM's of the future as the Titan and Minuteman.

Five previous flights in 10 months—three of them with tiny white mice aboard—all resulted in failure, although two of the Thor-Able's flew intercontinental range without a hitch.

The latest Thor-Able was equipped with an advanced guidance system—the same as in the massive Titan—to insure greater accuracy on the flight 80 miles in space.

Last Wednesday the Air Force made a first attempt to recover the operational type warhead of an Atlas ICBM, but the mission failed when the missile ran out of steam after only about 700 miles of a planned 4,500 mile shot.

Count 100 Fires Out Of Control

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—Approximately 100 forest fires are burning uncontrolled in the Lake of the Ozarks resort area, the State Forest Service said today.

Assistant Forester O. B. Capps said the fires are burning in the watershed of the Nangua River, one of the principal streams flowing into the lake. He said a few summer homes have been destroyed, but about 100 have been saved by fire-fighting crews.

Report Progress
In Paving Work

Several days of clear weather have given workmen a chance to make considerable progress on various paving projects, City Manager Leonard Bloxam said today.

Crews are attempting to finish up the curb and gutter on First St., the city manager said. In addition rough grading on E. Fourth, E. Third, Hickory and Laurel Sts. has been underway in preparation for paving. Curb and gutter has already been installed for those projects.

Next base material will be placed on those streets and finish grading done.

Similar work has been done on Willow St. between Harding and Library and on Watagua between Line and Myrtle.

"We hope to start laying asphalt next Wednesday if the weather continues good," Bloxam said.

A section of 14th St. between the Greene Mill Run bridge and Charles St. is ready for paving, Bloxam said. Curb and gutter was installed along the section earlier this year to bring the street to a uniform width.

The 14th St. work was financed by the State Highway Commission. First St. is being opened with bond money. The other projects are financed by Powell Bill funds with property owners participating in the cost.

The DEADLY LADY of MADAGASCAR

BY C.V. TERRY

CHAPTER 22

"No one told me Red Carter had living offspring," I said to his daughter.

"It's a well-kept secret, Richard," she said. "Forgive me if I couldn't share it until now."

"I gather tonight's business was successful. May I offer my congratulations, Captain Carter?"

"I'll endorse that, Captain," said Tom Hoyt.

"Call me Bonnie when we're together," she said, with a flashing smile that included us both.

"The name is still Bonnie," after my mother. My father and his captain call me Bonnie, in the English fashion. Until you're one of us, it must be Captain Carter before the crew. As you see, I'm in command here, now Quill is gone — and will be until we drop anchor in Rango Bay."

"Is that your father's strong-hold?" Tom asked boldly.

"Yes, Dr. Hoyt. I doubt if you'll find it on the Admiralty charts of Madagascar."

We stood aside as Mounded climbed the ladder, with a soured ship mate slung over one shoulder, and strode into the sick bay. Tom moved after them, with what I gathered was a certain relief. I was glad to observe that my doctor friend was as flabbergasted as I, despite his outer air of indifference.

"May I go to work, Captain?" he paused to ask.

Bonnie had given the wounded man a concerned glance. Now she nodded Tom a permission to follow. "Go, by all means," she said. "Enrique isn't seriously hurt. You'll find a few other fleabites you can patch; those new hands fought like terrors before they were bested."

"Did you lose many men?" I asked.

"Just two, save for Quill."

"Forgive me if I've yet to get my bearings," I told her. "But was Quill in command when tonight's mutiny began?"

"Yes, Richard. He was my father's right-hand man."

"And you were his first officer, so to speak?"

She nodded solemnly. "I've yet to be trusted with a command; that will come when we return to Rango Bay. Quill crossed half the world to fetch me — in the Star of Bengal."

"Did he command the Indianan as well?"

"Of course — with one of my father's crews."

"Was the Star of Bengal a cor-sair?"

"By no means. She's an honest merchantman, flying the flag of Portugal. Goa is her home port. We need many ships to transport our cargoes."

"I gather Bob McLane's in your employ?"

"We've made that Scotsman a Croesus, thanks to the plunder he's marketed in New York. Naturally, he does our bidding."

So my suspicions in New York had been accurate. Smelling out Sir Luke's plans, McLane had put Carter's men aboard the Pilgrim Venture — save for the second mate I lost off the Canaries. After letting us sail her to the Cape, they had simply chosen their moment to take over.

"Have you used this scheme before?" I ventured.

"Twice," said Bonnie, with the same easy smile. "Two years ago McLane helped us take the Speedy Return, of the old Speedland Company. Last year we took her sister ship, the Speedwell. So far, we've managed to cover the old spider's tracks." She took a long-legged stride toward me and laid a soothing hand on my shoulder. "Try not to look so puzzled, Richard. It's a rough trade you're signing for; there's but one way to play it — a clean sweep, all the way."

I swallowed hard and managed a travesty of a conspirator's grin. "Did you hope for a clean sweep tonight?"

"What else? The ship's ours. You and the doctor are about to join the brotherhood. We'll chalk up another price once we've ferreted out our passengers."

"If you mean Horace Jones?"

Moving to answer a call from amidships, she only half noted my last words. One of the sailors had just emerged from the hold to announce that the ship had been scouted to the bilges, with no sign of the quarry.

"Try the sail lockers, you chowderhead!" The order was a whip-lash, sending the man diving for cover.

"Is it Mr. James you're seeking, Bonnie?"

"So he calls himself," she told me, her voice still hot. "His real name is Sir Luke Metcalf."

"I'm afraid I don't follow," I lied — hoping the lie would ring true.

"He took that name when he came aboard. Metcalf wouldn't dare sail into Madagascar waters under his own name."

"Never mind his name," I said — glad that I could offer some proof of my new allegiance. "And you can call of the search. Your man and his valet jumped ship some time ago, by longboat."

"Damnation, Richard! What are you saying?"

Her disbelief persisted until I had led her to the rail and pointed to the painter that still hung from the stern window. When she was convinced that Metcalf and Jackdaw had indeed made good their escape, she turned icy-calm — contending herself with a single barked order that brought Hans to the foot of the quarter-deck ladder.

The Dutchman went white as she questioned him regarding the disposition of the longboats. He had been off watch when they were brought aboard; the second bosun, a Frenchman named Dumont, had been in charge of that operation — and, by an unlucky chance, Dumont was one of the buccaners who had lost his life in the mutiny.

Fearing that Hans might still be punished, I spoke up — knowing it might cost me my own head. "If Captain Carter pleases—"

Bonnie broke off her tongue-lashing and turned slowly toward me. "If brought the longboat under the rudder, Dr. Hoyt and I meant to use it later, to leave the ship. As I told you at the Cape, that was our original plan."

It was a risky statement — since Spenser, not I, had moved the longboat in the dusk. I waited breathless while she pondered it — lest some seaman on that watch bring out the fact that demolish my story forthwith. But no man spoke when Bonnie shrugged off the interruption.

"Dumont's no less guilty," she said. "It was his task to report on the boats." She turned again on Hans, with her rage in control. "Perdition take Dumont! He's beyond punishment — and luckless that he knows."

She stamped toward the cabin door, recalling my presence just in time. "Come with me, Mr. Douglas," she said — in a tone that still held traces of cholera. "I must estimate last night's drift before I set our course. As you can see, a freeze is on its way."

I hesitated for a moment before following her into the captain's quarters, watching the dawn from the corners of my eyes to spy out any latent sign of hostility at this mark of favor. So far as I could judge, I had been accepted as a comrade; the discovery that my play-acting had been adequate did little to restore my peace of mind.

Bonnie sat over a map in Spenser's sanctum, as naturally as though she had dwelt there from the start of our voyage.

"We have little time to talk now, Richard," she said. "Ask me what you like. I'll answer fully — when I can. Some things must still be kept from you — until you take the oath. Only my father can administer it."

"I'm sure he'll have use for Tom Hoyt's surgical services," I told her, as steadily as I could. "Let's hope he'll want me, too."

"You'll be one of us soon enough," she said. "Leave that to me."

Dick Douglas has good reason to realize now that Red Carter is several moves ahead of him in this game that can end Dick's life. Continue the story here Monday.

Deductions That Can Spell Dollars In Filing Of Taxes

Paying Your Income Tax V: Figuring Your Deductions

Editor's note—Deductions—and how to calculate them—has mystified many a taxpayer pushing against the April 15 income tax deadline. This last of five articles on the income tax gives you some helpful hints on how to claim what's coming to you.

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—You'll save money on your 1958 income tax return if you can claim enough deductions. And some people can reduce their tax by subtracting for things like sick pay and dividend credits.

If you were home ill only seven days or less, the pay you get is taxable. You can't exclude it. If you were home sick more than seven days, you can exclude for every day thereafter up to $100 a week.

If you were laid up at home because of injury, or were hospitalized for as little as one day, you can start excluding your sick pay from the first day of absence, without waiting out the seven-day period that applies to illness alone.

Sick pay, technically, is an exclusion, not a deduction. You claim it on line six, page one, Form 1040.

You can't claim it on federal income taxes, estate and gift taxes, state inheritance taxes, collection taxes, fishing and hunting license fees, dog licenses, federal gasoline taxes, federal excise taxes on your personal expenditures for theater tickets, furs, jewelry, luggage, telephones, air, rail or bus tickets.

You can deduct for contributions to organizations set up for purposes that are charitable, religious, educational, scientific, or literary. Examples: Community Chest, Salvation Army, churches, Red Cross, cancer associations, tuberculosis societies, gifts but not dues to YMCA, YWHA, YWCA, YWHA, American Legion, societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

Contributions generally may not exceed 20 per cent of your income but 30 per cent is allowed if one-third of your contributions were to churches and to tax-exempt hospitals and educational institutions.

Medical expenses: You can claim them only by itemizing on Form 1040 and only that much of your medical expenses that is more than three per cent of your adjusted gross income. You arrive at your adjusted gross income on line 11, page 1, Form 1040. If you or your wife were 65 or over the 3½ per cent limit does not apply. For further details, see page 9 of your Form 1040 instruction sheet.

Casualty losses and theft: You can deduct the net amount of actual property loss from accident, fire, storm, or theft. These may be business or nonbusiness losses. For more details see page 10 of the instruction sheet.

Care of children and certain other dependents: You can deduct up to $600—if you are widowed, divorced or legally separated—for money spent to care for dependents who are under 12 or are physically or mentally unable to care for themselves. Under certain circumstances a working wife can claim this deduction — as outlined on page 10 of your Form 1040 instruction sheet.

This care must be necessary to allow you the taxpayer, to hold a job or seek one.

Education: You can deduct expenses for your education but only if it was to help you improve or keep up with the skills in your job. You can't deduct if the education was to help you get a better job or for personal purposes.

Miscellaneous: You may deduct for union dues, dues in professional societies, all-

Skyscraper For Paris Left Bank Now Scheduled

PARIS (AP)—The famed Paris Left Bank, which has always considered an attic a decent height for anyone, is to be invaded by a 52-story skyscraper.

it, but finally bowed to pressure and persuasion.

The skyscraper—tallest in Europe—is planned as the centerpiece for an ultramodern development project that will root out many of the richest but picturesque studios.

The main building will rise 500 feet, towering over the Paris skyline now limited to about 10 stories. But it still will play second fiddle to the Eiffel Tower's 963 feet.

A concession to the Left Bank will be 26 acres of new studios for painters, sculptors, artists and writers.
