East Carolina College Confers Degrees On 905; Largest Class

East Carolina College conferred degrees upon its largest graduating class in the first out-door commencement exercises in the college's history.

A record total of 905 students received the degrees from Dr. John D. Messick, president of East Carolina, in academic ceremonies before an audience estimated at 8,500 people. Dr. Messick was assisted by Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, dean of the college, in conferring 157 master of arts, 141 bachelor of arts, two bachelor of music and 605 bachelor of science degrees.

Prior to the conferring of degrees and presentation of diplomas, U. S. Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr., urged each of the graduates to make his life "a stepping-stone rather than a stumbling block." To do so, he told the graduates, "... You must faithfully obey these four injunctions: Learn always; Labor hard; Laugh often; Love much."

Senator Ervin said, "The world of the mind is an illimitable land whose boundaries are as vast as the universe itself, and thought is called us at all times to the undiscovered countries lying beyond the next visible range of mountains."

"Let books be your friends... Observe mankind through the eyes of charity... Study nature... Cling to the ancient landmarks of truth, but be ever ready to test the soundness of a new idea."

In calling on the graduates to labor hard, the Senator said, "Science joins religion in declaring that work is absolutely indispensable to the maximum development of the individual, and that idleness is as deadly to the human spirit as cancer is to the human body... All honest toil is ennobling, and in order to be either good or happy, you must always be a laborer, with your brain or your hand, or both."

Equally important in making life a stepping-stone, Senator Ervin claimed, is the willingness to laugh often.

"A sense of humor is not simply a voice of gladness which speaks to us in our seasons of gaiety. It is the invaluable capacity to find happiness under adverse circumstances by putting the emphasis on the rose rather than the thorn.

"Humor... is a balm that brings health to the troubled minds and souls of men and women, and gives them the vision to see the things of life in their true proportions."

Ervin cited the place North Carolinians have created for Zebulon B. Vance, soldier, statesman and orator who represents the state in Statuary Hall in the national capitol.

"North Carolina loved Vance above all her sons and honored his memory by placing his statue among those of the country's most distinguished men because his merry heart brought cheer and courage to her people in their most tragic hours. He actually laughed his way into the abiding affections of North Carolinians, raising their spirits in the dark days of the War Between the States and giving them mirth in the darker days of Reconstruction."

The state's senior senator concluded by calling upon his audience to "forget self in the service of others, for, by so doing, you will find life, even if you lose it."

Dr. Cleveland J. Bradner, Jr., director of religious activities at East Carolina, opened the formal ceremonies with an invocation. Two selections by the college choir, directed by Dr. Carl Hjortvang, followed the invocation.

The East Carolina band, directed by Herbert Carter, gave a program of music preceding the graduation ceremonies and played the processional and recessional for the academic procession of graduates, faculty and staff members, and special guests of the college.

A special feature of the program was a ceremony in which 11 cadets of the college's Air Force ROTC unit were commissioned as second lieutenants in the United States Air Force. They were commissioned by Lt. Col. Edward J. Maloney, professor of air science.

Students who received the commissions are Eugene M. Brown and Thomas R. Gainer of Greenville; Thomas A. Farlow, Sanford; Jackson A. Henley, Asheboro; Charles C. Hoffman and John P. Spooze, Jr., Alexandria, Va.; Harrell E. Mabe, Prospect Hill; Gene G. Mercer, Black Creek; Calvin E. Mills, Apex; Graydon W. Tripp, Winterville; and Eugene L. Whitefield, Durham. Gainer and Henley were cited as Distinguished Air Force ROTC Graduates.

Pitt Countians who were candidates for degrees, are:

M.A.—Nancy Clementine Allen, Worth Eugene Baker, M. Ann Bynum Byrd, William Cherry Cobb, Jr., John Charles Coughlan, Betty Tyson Forrest, Walter Alexander Hasty, Jr., Ferne Lorraine Highsmith, Catherine Smith Joyner, Chetsten Benjamin Kendall, Thomas Ray Lupton, Norma S. Expect Budget Bill Wrap-Up Ahead

RALEIGH (AP) — Committee work on a record-breaking state budget bill for the next biennium is expected to be completed this week as the Legislature heads into the homestretch toward adjournment.

The Joint Appropriations subcommittee will meet tonight to take action on bills to appropriate nearly 48 million dollars for construction work by state agencies and institutions.

The 27-member subcommittee wound up work Friday on a huge budget bill to appropriate 927 million dollars to operate state agencies and institutions during the next two fiscal years.

The capital improvement bills facing action tonight include bond issues totaling 33 1/2 million dollars to be submitted for approval by the people, the issuance of more than nine million in bonds without a vote of the people, and direct appropriation of the remainder.

The bills call for spending about five million more than the original capital improvement program of $42,765,000 recommended by Gov. Hodges and the Advisory Budget Commission.

Sen. William Copeland of Hertford, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the subcommittee hopes to present its budget recommendations to the full committee Tuesday if the report is prepared in time.

Legislative observers look for work on the budget bill this week, with the measure likely reaching the floor of the House or Senate early next week.

Adjournment is not too far off when the budget measure comes out of committee. Some lawmakers feel the Legislature can wind up its work sometime the second week in June.

Meanwhile, House Finance Committee is expected to vote Wednesday on a state-wide local option dog racing bill, which would allow counties to vote on the question of legalizing racing and pari-mutuel betting. The measure is aimed at reopening dog tracks in Currituck and Carteret counties.

Lively Senate debate is expected Wednesday on a bill to outlaw the use of chemical MH-30 on controlling tobacco suckers.

Farmville Man Wounded Today

FARMVILLE — F. W. Satterthwaite, assistant factory manager for the A. C. Monk Tobacco Company and a prominent Farmville resident, was seriously wounded this morning in a shooting incident in downtown Farmville.

According to Police Chief P. L. T. Lucas, Satterthwaite was struck in the mouth, the head and the chest by bullets said to have been fired by Jack Blount, operator of a Farmville poolroom. Blount is being held in Pitt County jail.

Chief Lucas said Satterthwaite was at Marvin Speight's service station when the shooting began. He added that five shots were fired from a .22 caliber pistol, but only three struck Satterthwaite.

Blount was arrested shortly after the incident by Chief Lucas and Officer G. L. Bailey of the Farmville Police Department. He was taken to the county jail where he will be held pending outcome of Satterthwaite's condition.

Chief Lucas said Blount would make no statement this morning and that he had not had an opportunity to question persons who witnessed the incident.

Satterthwaite's condition this morning was reported as "serious, but not critical."

From Around The World A Flow Of Tribute Goes To Dulles; Rites Wednesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — From around the world came an outpouring of tribute today to John Foster Dulles. And in the capitals of the free nations, diplomats arranged to fly here for last rites for a fallen leader of resistance to Communist expansion.

Ravaged by cancer and stricken by pneumonia, the 71-year-old former U.S. secretary of state died in his sleep at 7:49 a.m. Sunday.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Washington National Cathedral.

Because of Dulles' long dominance of free nations' strategy in dealing with the Soviet Union, his passing seemed to many to mark the end of an era.

The men who knew Dulles best had no doubt that one of his own great regrets was that final illness had made him a spectator from afar rather than the active field general as the West's foreign ministers strove in Geneva for some progress toward a settlement with the Kremlin and a true peace.

But though he was absent from the parley Dulles was still a dominant influence through continuing policies worked out under his leadership.

In recognition of that Dulles role the Western diplomatic chiefs were pulling out of the parley en masse to attend the funeral services.

Accompanying Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, who took over that office from his former chief, were British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville.

There was talk in Geneva that their adversary in the Geneva conference, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, might also make the journey.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer will attend, as will Japan's Foreign Minister Aichi-ro Fumiyama.

The free world's lineup of diplomatic top men will be filled out by Italian Foreign Minister Giuseppe Pella.

For more than a week Dulles' passing had been expected from day to day but the sense of shock was still evident in the mass outpouring of tributes at home and abroad.

President Eisenhower received the news at his farm home in Gettysburg, Pa.

In a statement which he personally penciled, Eisenhower described Dulles as a true friend and "one of the truly great men of our time."

The President ordered flags on U.S. buildings throughout the world flown at half staff for the next three days, and canceled all his own official appointments for that period.

He ordered an official funeral — rather than the still more formal state ceremonies — for the man on whom he had relied for foreign policy throughout his six years in office.

The major difference between a state funeral and official rites is that in the former the body lies in state at the capitol. Such a service usually is reserved for a president or vice president and the unknowns of wartime service.

Dulles' body will rest at the National Cathedral — Episcopal — for 24 hours before the funeral service is held there.

An honor guard from the armed services will stand vigil there, and burial will be with full military honors at Arlington National Cemetery.

Dulles served as a captain and major in World War I.

The funeral at the cathedral will be in the Presbyterian rites. Dulles, a son of a Presbyterian minister, was a ruling elder of the Presbyterian Church.

Catholic strongly condemned in an editorial Sunday the use of National Guardsmen in the Henderson strike.

It termed use of the troops as a "travesty on justice and an open case for worker violence. And by 'worker' we do not mean the strike-breaking scabs," the editorial said.

The newspaper called for arbitration by "an informed panel of honest citizens."

John D. Cooper Jr., president of the mills, said all is in readiness for the third shift to begin. He added, "I expect a full set of workers, but as to whether I will have a full set I won't know until it starts."

Adj. Gen. Capus Wayne announced today that Air National Guard units from Charlotte will see duty here beginning June 7. They will relieve Army National Guardsmen for a two week period. The Charlotte units are attached to the 145th Fighter Group at Morris Field.

The opening of the "graveyard" shift tonight will mark the first time the mill has been on full operation since last Nov. 17 when the strike began.

Judge Fountain Is Presiding Here

Judge George M. Fountain of Tarboro is presiding over a one-week civil term of Pitt County Superior Court which opened this morning.

The term, which follows a mixed term held last week, is scheduled to continue through Thursday.

Federal Authorities Dropping Mississippi Lynching Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal authorities today announced their withdrawal from the kidnap-killer case of Mack Charles Parker. The results of their lengthy investigation will be turned over to the state of Mississippi.

Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers said the evidence obtained by the FBI after a masked mob snatched Parker from the Pearl River County jail at Poplarville, Miss., April 25 and killed him, failed to show any violation of federal statutes.

In view of this, Rogers today directed the FBI to deliver to Mississippi's Gov. J. P. Coleman at Jackson "a summary of information relative to facts and evidence obtained during the FBI's investigation."

It was left up to Coleman to determine whether any prosecution under state law is possible.

Parker, a 23-year-old Negro was on the eve of being tried on a charge of raping a pregnant white woman when he was abducted. His body was found May 4 in the Pearl River swamps near Bogalusa, La., by FBI agents and Mississippi highway patrolmen. He had been shot twice.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover ordered his agents into the case shortly after the abduction. This was a two-way investigation under the Lindbergh kidnaping law covering abductions in which state lines are crossed, and under the federal civil rights statutes relating to collusion on the part of local police authorities.

The attorney general said today the federal investigation "clearly established that the persons responsible for the death of Parker had not violated the federal kidnapping statute and no other successful federal prosecution could be maintained."

This means the FBI found no evidence that local authorities had cooperated in any way with the mob, and that the mob members never crossed a state line after carrying out their lynching.

The Pearl River is the Mississippi-Louisiana boundary in that area and the body was found on the Mississippi side opposite Bogalusa.

The FBI director said the FBI laboratories here and all of the bureau's facilities "are fully available to Mississippi authorities in the event additional assistance is needed for prosecution of state violations in the Parker case."

VISITING ALBANIA

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet TU104 jetliner today took Premier Nikita Khrushchev off for his first visit to Albania. Some 500 persons, including 45 ambassadors and 30 Albanians, were at the airport to see Khrushchev off. He will spend two weeks in the little Communist country on the Adriatic.

Pat Whitehurst Weds In Delaware

NEW CASTLE, Del.—The marriage of Miss Pat Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Whitehurst of Greenville, N. C., to John Garrett Pierce Jr., son of Mrs. Rita G. Pierce and the late John G. Pierce Sr. of Wilmington Manor, New Castle, Del., took place in the Asbury Methodist Church yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Brooks Reynolds.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Rubin Edwards of Asheville, N. C. Her maid of honor was Miss Peggy Jones of Greenville, N. C. Bridesmaids were Miss Alma Whitehurst, sister of the bride, and Miss Carole Pierce, sister of the bridegroom.

Richard V. Wilkinson of Wilmington Manor was best man. Ushers were Earl White, Joseph Raciti, Robert Gravatt and Howard M. Gravatt, all of New Castle.

Flower girl was Sharon Ann Swift and ringbearer, Edward H. Swift Jr., niece and nephew of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal wedding gown of imported Chantilly lace in rosepoint design, fashioned with pointed basque bodice, sabrina neckline edged with floral motifs in iridescent sequins and pearls, and long sleeves tapered to points over the hands. The bouffant skirt featured a cascade of front ruffles alternating in lace and crystal pleated tulle. An overlay of lace edged in wide pleated tulle formed a chapel train. Her three tiered fingertip veil of French illusion was attached to a Swedish crown of iridescent sequins and pearls on matching lace. The bride's bouquet was white roses centered with a white orchid.

Her maid of honor was gowned in a formal dress of blue nylon net combined with lace. The fitted bodice was styled with off-shoulder neckline, an overlay of lace caught high in drape effect was over cascading net ruffles of the voluminous floor length skirt. She wore a matching half-hat with halo veil and elbow length mitts.

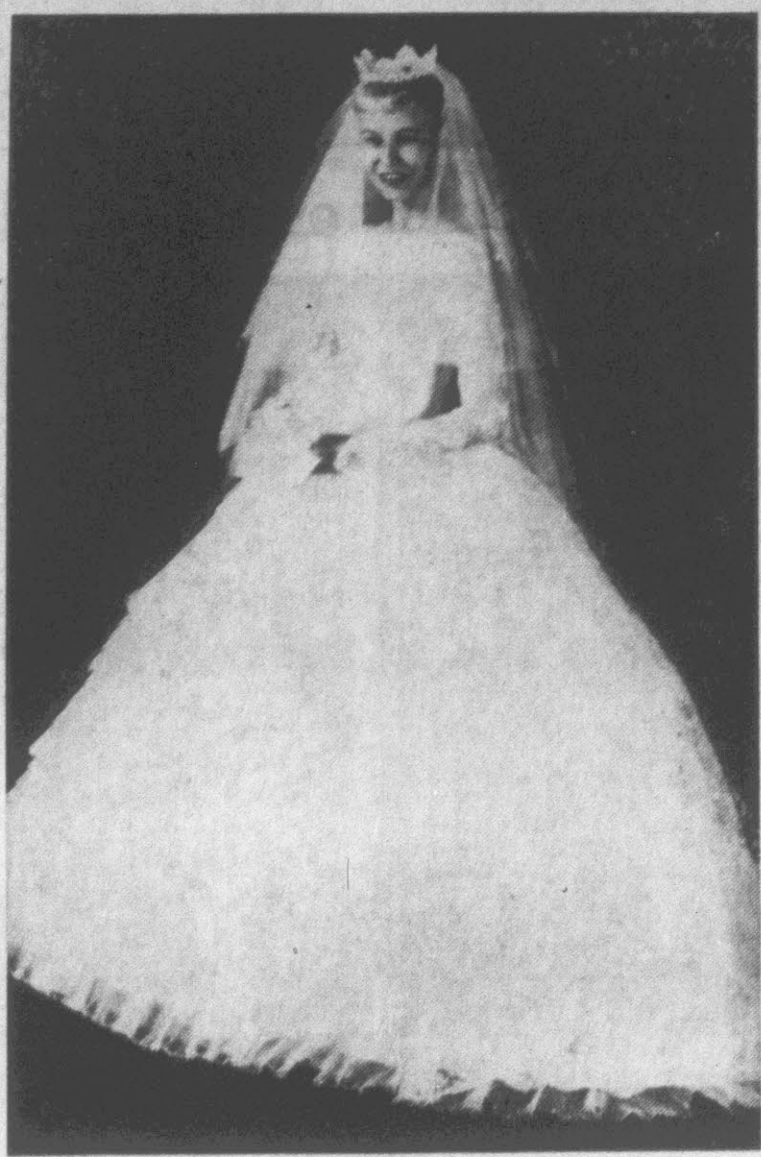

Her bridesmaids' dresses and accessories were in Paris pink designed like the honor attendant's.

The attendants carried lace fans faced with French carnations. The flower girl carried a basket of mixed flowers.

The bride's mother was dressed in navy blue pure silk with white accessories. Her corsage was a cluster of white orchids.

The bridegroom's mother chose a pink pure silk dress with white accessories. Her corsage was also a cluster of white orchids.

The reception was held at Howard Johnson's located on the Du Pont Highway at Haze's Corner. A buffet dinner was served. Music was furnished by a four piece band.

The bride's going-away dress was a navy blue Italian silk sheath with matching jacket. Her accessories were white and she wore the white orchid lifted from her bouquet.

Showers for the bride were given by Miss Peggy Jones, Mrs. Dempsey Holland and Mrs. Edward Swift.

The bride is a graduate of Stokes High School in North Carolina.

Mr. Pierce graduated from William Penn High School in New Castle and is attending East Carolina College in North Carolina, majoring in Physical Education.

He is a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity and also plays football and baseball for E.C.C.

The couple will make their home at 106 W. Franklin Ave., Wilmington Manor, New Castle, for the summer after returning from an extended honeymoon.

'The New American Look In Living'-- To Be Discussed

RALEIGH — "The New American Look in Living" will be discussed by Miss Beth Peterson, home economist of the Du Pont Company's Extension Division, during Farm Home Week at State College, June 9-12. Miss Peterson is an authority on chemical developments as they affect clothing and fashions.

According to Miss Julia McIver, clothing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, Miss Peterson will show some of the newest dress fabrics from the research laboratory. She will discuss how the women have spurred industry to produce better things for modern living which has resulted in a high standard of living today.

Miss McIver says that on Wednesday afternoon, June 10, Home Demonstration women will attend a special program in Reynolds coliseum. Two North Carolina beauties will be featured in a program titled, "The Way To Charm and Beauty." Mrs. Billie Cook and Mrs. Lulog Ogburn Medlin, former "Miss North Carolina" will represent the Nancy Taylor Finishing and Modeling School in Raleigh.

Plans have now been completed for Farm Home Week and between 1,200 and 2,000 women are expected to attend.

Women Return From Meeting

Mrs. J. C. Galloway Jr., Mrs. Harvey H. Tripp, and Mrs. J. H. B. Moore of the Greenville Woman's Club, and Mrs. Gordon Goodman and Mrs. Hoyt Naron of the Jr. Woman's Club have returned from Pinehurst where they attended the annual convention of the N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Moore was installed as chairman of Art for the Federation for the next two years.

Both the press book and scrapbook of the Jr. Woman's Club, which have received blue ribbons in the district, were on display at the convention.

Gardners Have Bridge Buffet

AYDEN—On Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Alton Gardner were hosts at their home, "Sunny Lawn," at a bridge buffet dinner. The home was decorated with varied colored roses.

As the guests arrived they were served tomato juice cocktails by Miss Jeanette Gardner. They were then invited into the dining room and served buffet style a turkey dinner. The dining room table was covered with a Schiaparelli lace cloth over green, centercandelabra with pink roses, carnations and gypsophelia and burning pink tapers. Guests were seated at auxiliary tables centered with pink rose buds. Lemon cream pie was served as dessert.

After dinner, several progressions of bridge were played. Latt Pursor received a tie rack for high score for men and Corey Stokes was given a desk set for consolation. Mrs. Woodrow Wooten received a large potted begonia and coteus for ladies high, while Mrs. Bill Joyner was given a smaller potted begonia for the low score prize.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Bissette and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Jackson of Grifton, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Joyner of Vanceboro, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Wooten of Land, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Brunson of Land, Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Wallace of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. Corey Stokes and Mr. and Mrs. Latt Pursor of Ayden.

HD Club Meets

BETHEL — Tuesday afternoon Mrs. F. C. James entertained the Home Demonstration Book Club in her home on Bethel-Tarboro Road.

During a short business session conducted by Mrs. Z. T. Harris, it was decided that the club meet at 3:30 p.m. from this month through August. This was followed by a devotional and program given by Mrs. R. B. Edmondson. Her scripture reading was taken from Matthew 3. Excerpts from four chapters in the book "Guide to Confident Living" by Norman V. Peale were also given. She brought out the fact that power is generated through prayer, and when one prays he or she must believe, because faith possesses a tremendous amount of power.

The 20 books were reviewed.

During the social hour, toasted nuts, strawberry shortcake, sweet pickles and iced tea were served to the nine guests present. Mrs. R. R. James entertained the group with a quiz game.

Bridge Party Honors Friends

BETHEL—Wednesday afternoon Miss Camille Staton, Mesdames S. C. Whitehurst, Wadie Ward, Vance Bunting, W. Jasper Smith, T. R. Andrews, W. M. Mizelle and K. E. Manning were guests of Mrs. F. F. Pollard at a game of bridge.

After the second progression a hostess plate with bottled drinks was served.

At the conclusion of the game, Mrs. Z. V. Bunting, high score winner, was awarded a prize.

Miss Mayo Given Party

Mrs. Irving Roberson entertained with a social hour at her home Saturday evening, honoring Nurtia Mayo, bride-elect of June. Upon arrival, Miss Mayo was presented a corsage of pink sweetheart roses to match her chosen jade blue full-skirted party dress.

The hostess and the honoree directed the guests through the dining room where refreshments of punch, personalized bridal cake, sandwiches, mints and nuts were served. Mrs. Ed. Thornburg presided at the punch bowl and Mrs. Ethel Crawford cut the cake.

The appointed table was covered with an Irish lace table cloth, centered with green and white arrangements, flanked by white burning tapers.

The hostess presented a piece of china to Miss Mayo in her chosen pattern.

Parade Of Mortar Boards Has Begun Over Campuses Of N. C.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The parade of mortar boards has begun over the college campuses of North Carolina. The first commencement programs of the spring were held Sunday.

And by June 6, when Duke University confers its degrees, thousands of diplomas will be handed out at the various institutions.

North Carolina State, with retiring Chancellor Carey H. Boston conferring 1,181 degrees, started the ball rolling before 10,000 onlookers in Raleigh. President William C. Friday of the Consolidated University of North Carolina told State graduates the university hopes they will use their strength and ability to insure its future.

Sen. B. Everett Jordan told 163 graduates at Western Carolina in Cullowhee that the balance of power between the states and federal government is the "best safeguard of representative government." He also appealed to the graduates to live in North Carolina and take an active part in its government.

North Carolina's other U.S. senator, Sam J. Ervin Jr., told East Carolina grads to follow a 4-way play of learn, labor, laugh and love in making life "a stepping stone" rather than a "stumbling block." In outdoor festivities before 8,500, 905 sheepskins were awarded in Greenville.

"We are indebted to the Russians," State Treasurer Edwin Gill told Appalachian State graduates, "for focusing our attention afresh on the educational process." In an address at Boone, Gill added that this country should not attempt to remake its schools in the image of the Soviets.

The titular head of 800,000 Southern Presbyterians, Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson of Richmond, Va., told Montreat College graduates that Southern solutions

FORCE FEEDING THREAT

NAIROBI (AP) — Eighty-two Mau Mau fanatics on hunger strike at Hola Detention Camp will be fed forcibly if they go on refusing to eat, the Kenya government announced today. The men began the strike May 12 after prison guards were stationed as meal-time supervisors to prevent the prisoners from using their maize ration for making alcohol.

Advocate Liberalization Of Public Welfare Work

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Liberalization of the public assistance program—to care for needy persons who do not come within existing categories—was advocated today before the nation's social workers.

Either abolition of all categories or the addition of one to fill the gaps of the present federally-aided program is needed, said Ellen Winston, commissioner of the North Carolina State Board of Public Welfare.

Mrs. Winston addressed the National Conference on Social Welfare.

Abolition of all categories may, and should, come in time, she said. But meanwhile aid is given under the headings of the needy aged, the needy blind, dependent children and persons completely and totally disabled.

These categories, Mrs. Winston said, do not take care of the family in need because of the temporary illness of its breadwinner, or in other situations in which a family's income suddenly vanishes.

"If we neglect the person who is temporarily ill," she added, "we may contribute to his complete breakdown so that eventually the family qualifies for aid to the permanently and totally disabled."

Another loophole, she said, may encourage child desertion. This is the jobless father whose unemployment insurance has run out.

"If he receives aid," Mrs. Winston said, "it is grudgingly given and grossly inadequate in most cases. But if he deserts his family he makes his children eligible for aid to dependent children. Small wonder that desertion is today the most important reason for the need for aid to dependent children."

Rickover Claims No 'Handcuffs'; And Tells Why

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, who is known almost as much for ignoring protocol as for developing nuclear propulsion, has given Congress another lesson in handling superiors.

Rickover, testifying at a closed session of a House Appropriations subcommittee, began by assuring questioners he was not "under wraps" or "handcuffed."

He said he had not read the current Navy directive on testifying before congressional committees, and continued: "I have never followed any directive in testifying to Congress."

"Once one of my seniors called me before I was due to testify and told me what his policy was. I said, 'Fine, thank you very much. When I testify I will say that, this is what you told me to say.'"

"He said, 'Oh, no; you mustn't say that.'"

"I said, 'Didn't you tell me?' "Since that time I have never been directed."

Rep. Daniel J. Flood (D-Pa.) told Rickover he had suggested to Air Force officials they borrow Rickover to head up the controversial nuclear aircraft project and "they said they would be glad to have you."

"That would be a dire fate, sir," Rickover replied.

Flood then suggested, "Go and build it for the Navy. What do you think about it?"

"What do you think about running for congressman from two districts?" Rickover shot back.

His testimony was made public today.

Students Honor Principal Sugg

FARMVILLE — Students at H. B. Sugg School in Farmville this morning paid tribute to the man for whom their school is named and who is retiring this year after 42 years of service in public education.

The program included a parade through the Farmville business district and a schoolwide assembly program at which testimonials to Professor Sugg were presented. The retiring principal rode at the head of the parade which also included the Sugg High School Band and all students in the school.

County and Farmville school officials, and leading Negro educators from throughout Eastern North Carolina, will join tomorrow night to honor Professor Sugg with a banquet in the high school gymnasium. The banquet will begin at 6:30.

Professor Sugg was presented with an engraved gold watch at the high school's commencement exercises Friday night. The watch presented by the Farmville District School Committee, included the inscription, "Presented to H. B. Sugg by the Farmville School Board for loyal service, 1918-1959."

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N. C.

Some Regrets As Season Of Television Is Closing

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—As the television season draws to a close I don't recall any personal triumphs connected with it. But I do have some regrets. For example: I regret that I was not conducting this column a week ago when "NBC Kaleidoscope" presented "Our Man in the Mediterranean."

So that I could have praised it as one of the best shows of the year. In an age when a reporter's workmanlike attitude is sometimes mistaken for profundity, David Brinkley and his camera crew calmly, dryly — and profoundly — examined the westward course of so-called civilization through eight Mediterranean countries.

Brinkley wryly observed the efforts of man to leave his imprint from the sands of Cairo to the sands of Cannes in a program that transcended the old categories of "travelogue" or "news report."

Charles Van Doren, the wise and pleasant host of "NBC Kaleidoscope," rightly pointed out that Brinkley is a prose stylist. He is a first-rate writer who has the good fortune to speak clearly.

NBC should send its man Brinkley more places to bring us further reports that make us feel we have had a beneficial journey. Failing that, let's have a summer repeat of "Our Man in the Mediterranean," please.

I regret that I haven't paid more attention to "The Voice of Firestone" on ABC-TV this season. The oldest and in fact the only straight program of serious music left on television, it has offered some excellent entertainment this year.

I regret that the future of Edward R. Murrow's conversational program, "Small World," is uncertain next season. Television will be a poorer medium if it does not return.

I regret that "Desilu Playhouse" not only lasted this season but seems fated to return for another. When you recall the great days of "Studio One" from New York and then think of some of the twaddle "Desilu Playhouse" has perpetrated on the public this season under the name of drama, you ask yourself what is happening to television?

Stray Dog Pack Inquiries Slated

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Several St. Louis County agencies plan investigations into the stray dog problem today as a result of a fatal attack on a little boy by a dog pack Saturday.

Mark Douglas Draper, 2½, son of insurance man Douglas G. Draper, was killed near his suburban Hazelwood home.

Shortly after the incident dozens of armed men searched the area for stray dogs. Police asked them to disperse, fearing an accident or the slaying of a harmless pet.

The boy's body was found by a neighbor, Mel Jones, in a field between the two homes. The pack of 8 to 10 dogs charged Jones but he beat them off with an iron pipe.

The St. Louis County Animal Protective Assn., which received the bodies of 11 dead dogs and two captured ones, said all but one were "a mangy foul lot—obviously strays and nearly wild."

Jones, who pulled the boy's chewed body away from the snarling pack, identified five of the dead dogs as the boy's assailants.

The father of the victim said he had reported packs of dogs in the neighborhood. He said he had thought about shooting at them but didn't want to cause any trouble.

CARPETS USED FOR YEARS — — LOOK NEW

There is an easy way of keeping carpets new looking without periodically cleaning wall-to-wall.

It's simple. All you do is apply Blue Lustre Carpet and Upholstery Cleaner to spots and traffic paths as they appear. Blue Lustre leaves nap open and fluffy. Carpets may be used for years without necessity of an overall cleaning if Blue Lustre is applied to areas as needed.

Home-Grown Industries Deserve Aid

Pitt County, making significant strides in its efforts to attract more industries, more year-round jobs and larger annual payrolls for its people, should not overlook the potential of the home-grown variety of industry which means so much to every community.

Like other counties, Pitt has its home-grown industries. Some are large, some are small. Some have been in our midst for decades and are more or less taken for granted. Some have been in existence only a few years, and year by year new ones are being started.

For the most part these home-grown industries create only a few new jobs each when they begin. Some have tremendous growth potential which is never realized because of limited financial backing, inadequate support or any of many other reasons. Others have limited potential, but prove to be sound, steady, even though small in the number of new jobs they provide in the area.

Collectively, however, these home-grown industries provide a large number of jobs throughout Pitt County, and they likewise play an important role in the overall economy of the county.

The more such industries an area has, the more diversified they are, and the more they are encouraged, the broader the base of the area's economic situation. They serve not only to strengthen, but also to elevate the economic level of the area.

Most Pitt County communities now have their own organizations working in cooperation with the county-wide Development Commission. These individual groups are or should be aware of the home-grown industries which already exist in their respective communities. These groups also are aware of opportunities for development of new small industries locally

Delighted Over Larger Outlays

By LYNN NISBET

HAPPY — Rep. John Umstead of Orange is among the happiest people around the Legislature. As chairman of the Hospitals Board of Control and as a trustee of the University he has been especially concerned about appropriations for these agencies. While the bills have not been enacted into law, action of committees gives positive assurance that the mental hospitals will get just about all they asked for and the University will get better than 95 per cent of its requests. Umstead also advocated higher salaries for teachers than appear likely, but he philosophically comments "You can't expect everything."

RETIREMENT — Sen. Grady Shelton of Edgecombe is one of a growing number of people greatly concerned about the non-chalant extension of judicial retirement benefits to other than judges. Unlike most State officers and employees the judges of the Superior Court and Justices of the Supreme Court make no contributions to the retirement fund, yet they can retire on formula including age, tenure and physical ability at two-thirds of the annual salary they were drawing at time of retirement. They are subject to recall for emergency duty, for which extra compensation is allowed.

The 1957 session extended judicial retirement benefits to the Attorney General and provided that prior service as solicitor, attorney general or judge would count in the tenure qualification. Bills are pending in the current session to bring solicitors, members of the Utilities Commission and the Industrial Commission under provisions of judicial retirement — two-thirds of salary at retirement without contribution from the beneficiaries.

FRANKENSTEIN — The fear is expressed in some quarters that unbridled extension of "judicial" privileges to officers whose judicial connection is incidental may create a Frankenstein monster.

Retirement benefits in the Teachers and State Employees Retirement System are based on actual statistics and joint participation of the employing State and the individual beneficiary. The benefits are only what the premiums paid justify. This system has been liberalized by nearly every Legislature since 1941 when it was established, by increasing benefits, reducing eligibility requirements and otherwise. For example, some elderly teachers who were past the age of 60 when the act was passed have been given retirement pay. This and a few other instances might be classed as "pensions". For most part the regular retirement system is a sound insurance program.

In addition to pending bills for including solicitors, industrial and utilities commissioners in the non-participating retirement pay there is one to make some features of the judicial retirement act retroactive to January 1, 1956. Sponsors of this bill cite the need of certain actual or hypothetical needy cases of widows of judges.

All of these liberalizing measures have substantial support in the General Assembly. Objectors are reluctant to speak out lest they be accused of hurting some potential recipient. Some of these objectors privately complain they are being pressured on personal grounds to approve what they sincerely believe to be unwise legislation. And they wonder where it will end. The bill to include members of the Industrial Commission (SB-326) makes it applicable to commissioners who have previously retired, as well as to present members, under some conditions.

POTPOURRI — Rep. Charles Hostetler of Hoke found himself on the losing side of nearly every vote in the House the other day. "I know how a Republican in Hoke must feel," he said. Legislators from every section naturally think their part of the state is the best and they are disposed to brag about it. Far eastern coastal members have given several parties which featured seafoods, and the mountain men had to agree that oysters, shrimp and salt water fish made good eating. Then the western boys gave a party at which mountain trout was the featured dish. The eastern and mid-state guests had to concede that was fine eating, too.

It is estimated that there are more than 30,000 farm ponds in North Carolina, representing an investment of $85 million. Besides affording water supply for irrigation and other farm projects, these ponds yield almost half a million pounds of fish. Wildlife experts say that with proper management the yield in food fish could be seven or eight times that much. Elective officers are looking with envy at the vote-getting record of William P. Saunders as a trustee of the University. The C&D director got every one of the 61 votes cast in the joint nominating committee — and he insists that he didn't ask anybody to vote for him or otherwise wage a campaign for election.

which could help boost the economy of the community and thereby help boost the economy of the county as a whole.

Offering assistance to existing home-grown industries, and seeking to develop new ones should be one of the primary purposes of any community economic development group. And in Pitt County there is a tremendous potential for further development of our home-grown industries.

It is a matter which should be given attention by both our county-wide development commission and also by the individual groups in each of the communities of the county.

Dulles Gave All He Had To Assigned Task

John Foster Dulles, whose death the nation mourns today, will be remembered by those of this generation as the Secretary of State who was almost constantly the center of controversy, who stayed on the go, and the Secretary whose aggressiveness was the foremost characteristic of his career.

Dulles, ranked by many as the greatest Secretary of State in modern times, likewise was the object of some of the most severe criticism ever leveled at a man who was in charge of the nation's foreign affairs.

More than most men who held the important post before him, Dulles was more completely in charge of the foreign policies of the United States than any other Secretary of State. It was due, of course, to the fact that he enjoyed the complete confidence of the President. Time and again during his career he led the United States to the brink of war and away with his determined, tough policy toward the Soviet Union.

How great his contribution to world peace in a troubled time, how effective his policies in dealing with difficult world affairs, the historians will decide in years to come. But during his active career as Secretary of State, he was respected by admirers and critics alike for his aggressiveness and for his untiring and complete devotion to the task of administering the foreign policies of the United States.

He gave all he had to the task assigned him, disregarding his own welfare and exhibiting a capacity for work of which few men are capable. John Foster Dulles was a man who will be sorely missed by the people of this nation, and particularly by their President.

Hard Time For U.S. Securities

By RALPH ROBEY

From the point of view of final safety there are no securities better than those of the United States Government. There is no question but that at maturity they will be paid in full. And currently the rate of return, four per cent or a little better, is good for a top grade investment. Nevertheless, the market for U.S. securities is having a hard time.

For example, government bonds have been making new lows almost every week recently and several issues are in the low eighties. In the latest Treasury financing, an offer for exchange of maturing securities, some 31 per cent of the holders selected to take cash rather than new certificates yielding 4.05 per cent. This was the second highest rate of attrition in recent years. In May 1955 there was 32 per cent attrition, and last January there was a refinancing in which the attrition was 22 per cent. At that time the Treasury had to return to the market almost immediately to replenish its cash holdings. This time the Treasury has announced that such replenishment will not be necessary.

What are the reasons for such difficulties? First is the widespread expectation of inflation. This, perhaps, is best shown by the behavior of the stock market. While the bond market has been making new lows, the stock market has been making new highs. This is normal procedure in the face of inflation. The reason is that common stocks are supposed to give at least some protection against inflation; bonds do not. In other words, stocks are presumed to rise with the price level and bonds do not.

Second, the volume of necessary Treasury borrowing is enormous. This year the Federal Government is running a deficit of some $13 billion and there still is the prospect of another deficit next year. Throwing any such total of securities into the market is certain to make interest rates advance. When interest rates advance it is inevitable that outstanding issues decline in price. This is not a reflection on the soundness of the security; it is a purely mathematical result. The extent of the decline will depend upon the maturity of the issue — the longer the maturity the greater the decline — and that has been taking place in the market for many months.

Third, the demand for credit from other sources has been increasing. Consumers are buying more on time, business is borrowing more to help it finance improved sales and higher inventories, and states and localities are offering more securities to carry out their spending programs. In the aggregate these demands total more than current savings, and that puts pressure on interest rates. The Federal Reserve System could ease this situation by pumping more reserves into the commercial banking system, but that would enhance the possibility of inflation, and there's no reason to assume the Reserve System will move in this direction.

Finally, under the law there is a limit as to how high an interest rate the Federal Government can pay. Specifically, on any security of five years or longer maturity it can not offer more than 4 1/2 per cent. Of course this law could be changed, but that would not be of any great help. The total government debt at present is about $285 billion. A substantial proportion of this is medium and long term. If the Treasury were to offer a higher interest rate all of these issues would decline in price — decline enough to bring their yield to that of the new issue.

This means that it would not solve the problems of the government bond market to increase the rate of interest. What, then, is the method for eliminating this headache?

We Must End Fear of Inflation It is fairly clear cut. We must balance the budget and thereby make it possible for the Treasury to stop borrowing so much. We must have basic tax rate reform in order to encourage and make possible, a larger volume of saving. We must put an end to the expectation of inflation. To do this it is necessary for the Federal Reserve System to continue to hold a tight rein on credit expansion, and wage increases which lift the costs of production must not be granted.

This is an entirely feasible program. It will take courage and statesmanship but it can be carried out if there is the will on the part of the public, the Congress, business management, and labor leaders.

Strength For Today

BEYOND OUR KNOWLEDGE

Life! We were considering it yesterday—remember?

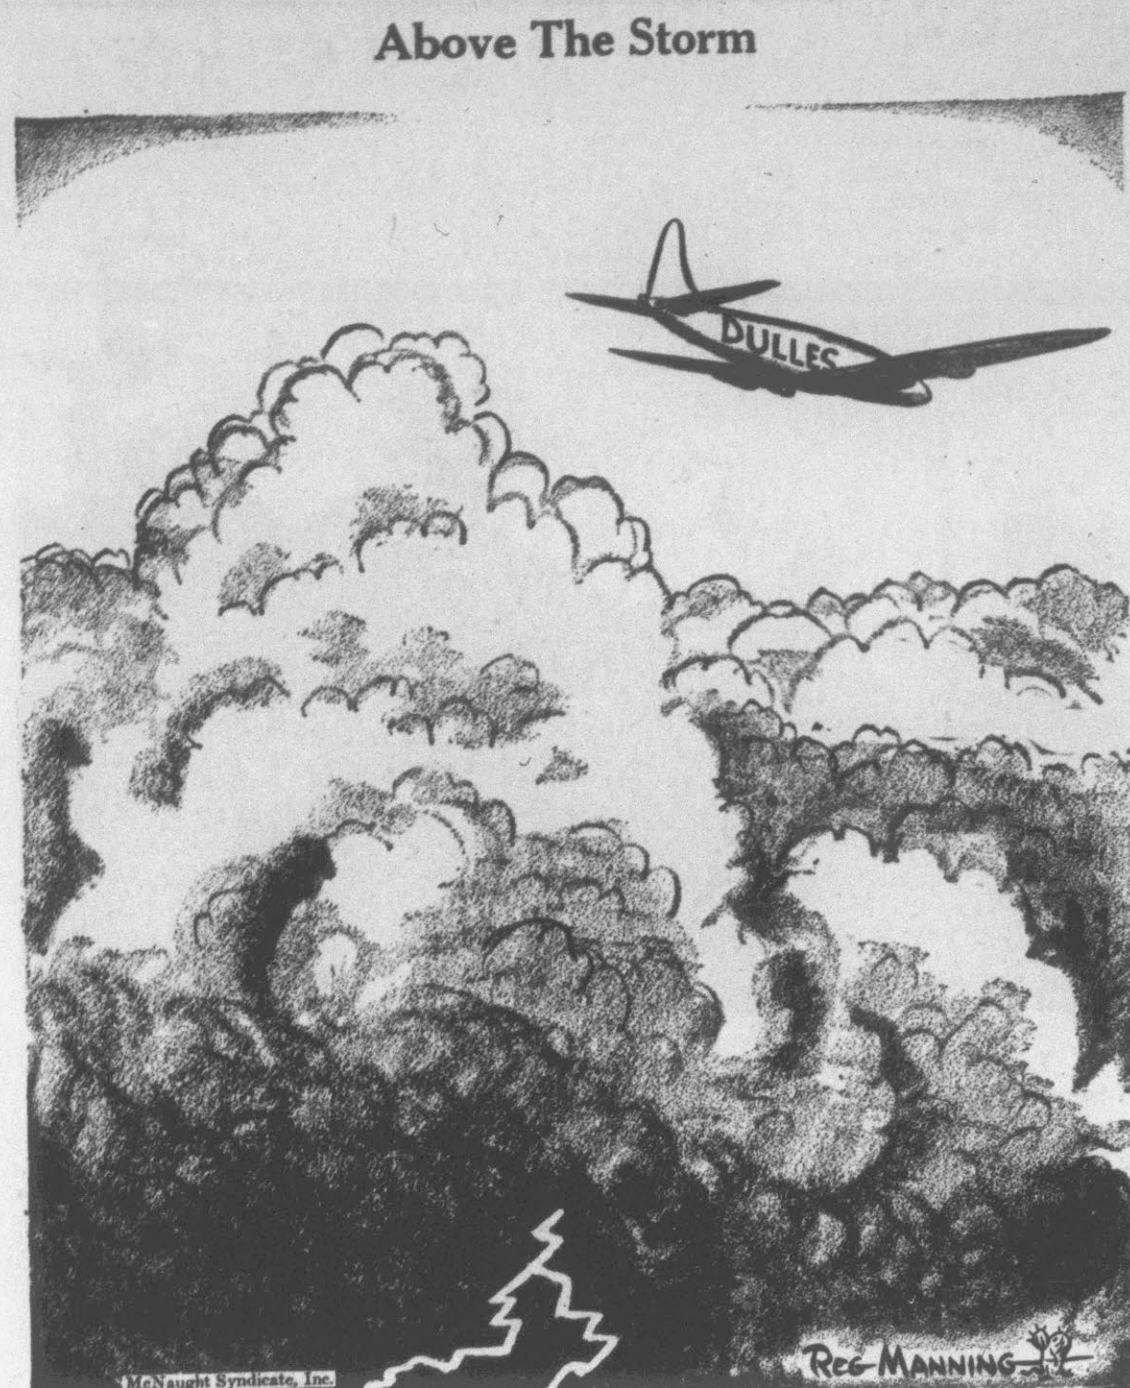

What is life? No one knows save that it is a vast and vital force which pervades the planet on which we live, and, as we look out at other distances, we have the conviction that life is there also.

One thing we do know about life that it comes from God. There may be a few atheists in the world, but they are few indeed. Most people have some belief in a Creative power. Sensible people all assume that there is some source for this thing called life. A Power creates it and a Power confers it.

The Bible speaks frequently about being born of God. Rationalists may try to thrust this statement aside, but it is hard to move it out of the thinking of sensible people. God is the great giver of life. In the beginning it was a world He created, its creatures, the heavens, and last and greatest of all, Man, now the creation accomplished. God keeps on pouring life into His universe. Not only are people born physically, they are born spiritually. They are also born mentally with their thinking suddenly taking on vitality and carrying them on to real achievement.

It is a marvelous thing to get the feel of what is going on around about us. The Creator God is still at work conferring life. Our universe is a living universe. Our own dull lives are constantly being assailed by power which, if we so permit, will cause us to live abundantly.

Gossip, Spice Of Life

NEW YORK (AP) — I don't know how gossip got its bad name, but I'm coming out in favor of it, foursquare.

Most people, if they were frank, if they'd drop hypocritical pretense, would agree with me. I'll bet. After all, gossip is simply the receipt of the mulling over and the transmission of information. Where would we be without it? Does the nature of the information taint the listener? Does the invention of the atom bomb make the scientist a murderer?

Anyway, isn't it a question of semantics? If four old buddies sitting on the front porch sip lemonade and chew up the neighborhood, why call that gossip? Why not call it news analysis? Aren't they, like Walter Lippmann or Ed Murrow, trying to understand the world around them, trying to satisfy a basic curiosity?

Isn't gossip in its broadest sense the basic drive behind every good reporter, research scientist or counter spy? Personally, I find that nothing brightens or uplifts or adds a dash of color to a dull day than a choice bit of gossip.

If Charlie Jones, who lives

three doors down the street, belts his wife. I want to know about it. I find such information stimulating. If, it develops, the boss' secretary is shopping for a trousseau and baby clothes at the same time, I do not feel degraded hearing about it or even asking for more information.

Gossip, after all, provides the excitement in the drab lives of the rest of us who can't afford to or lack the temerity to do the things people get gossiped about. If you know a man who shouts down his mother-in-law after two beers, don't protect me from the news. It may be inspirational.

Have you ever seen greater esprit de corps or a greater sense of vitality in the office that exists in the group of gossips buzzing around the water cooler? Gossip is a vintage champagne. It makes life worth living and a dull job worth working. It management were really enlightened, they'd plant more gossip for employees to dissect. It could reduce absenteeism.

When you get right down to it, gossip is the basic appeal of Shakespeare and the soap operas. True, the poetry and human insight of Hamlet helps but aren't you also titillated by the ju-ey family scandal? Soap operas give you a new scandal or crisis every day but the trouble with soap operas is they give you too many facts. They leave nothing to challenge the imagination. And nothing kills gossip like all the facts. Real, active, dynamic gossip needs a little elbow-room, a tiny area of ignorance and mystery to grow on.

But to achieve respectability, gossip needs a set of ground rules. If you hear a nasty bit of gossip about an enemy or competitor and you pass it on to your wife and three best friends, that's acceptable. But further circulation is malicious. You, as the circulator, are suspect, of course.

Coloring the gossip you hear by say, 40 per cent, is just ordinary, garden variety, healthy American, idle gossip. More than 40 per cent, it's malicious.

I don't say there should be government controls but completely free enterprise operating in gossip can be inefficient and chaotic. If four people hear the same choice bit at the same time and all four are sworn to secrecy, none should be allowed to spread the word in less than, say, an hour. A common release date binding on all contractual parties give everybody an equal chance to enrich the news and avoids a stampede to the nearest phone booth.

Gossip, I say, but let's be fair about it; let's do it in the American way.

Opinions In Brief

"This year the cost of operating the Department of Agriculture for all purposes is estimated to be approximately $6,500 million. Yet the estimated net income of all American farmers come for this year is a little more than $13 billion. Those facts ought to attract the attention of every Member of the Senate." — Sen. Homer Gapehart, (Ind.)

"Springtime note to parents: a boy is growing up when he stops memorizing ballplayers' batting averages and starts memorizing movie actresses' measurements." — Greenville (S.C.) Piedmont.

"To amateur gardeners: If it grows like a weed, it probably is." — Greenville (S.C.) Piedmont.

Other Editors Saying ... Money And Education

(Rocky Mount Telegram) Closely related with the pressing problem of finances in our school systems is the question of how our children are actually being educated. For the members of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers the basic problem is: "How do we educate the youth of today to be the responsible adults of tomorrow?" The PT members are more concerned with delinquency than dollars, more interest in children than in bond issues.

True, these objectives could never be reached unless the unpleasant subject of money was injected, for we must have school plants and facilities and faculties and other necessary elements—all of which cost money. But along with this financial end, one must consider how these facilities are going to be used, once they are obtained.

Delegates to the recent convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers in Denver were asked to name the most pressing educational problem. Some of the answers are interesting:

Educate our young people to the best of their ability. More discipline is needed and fewer thrills. Allegiance to life's true values should be taught. We must do more to make our children want to stay in school. Special programs for exceptional children, both the mentally retarded and the gifted.

Ironically, the matter of money cropped up. The delegates to the convention said many of the present problems in American education would disappear if teachers' pay was raised. Thus we see one instant in which the use of more money could conceivably eliminate some of the educational ills of today. There is no getting around it: our current problems are tied up with finances, and the key to the solution appears to be in getting the most mileage out of what appropriations we now are getting.

We could have unlimited funds for our school programs, but if these are not used wisely, we should just as well not have a program. Wise handling of our children, thoughtful educational procedures, these, too, are important.

More Look-Aheads For Business

By ELMER ROESSNER
More business look-aheads, based on tips and analysis:

Hope for steel peace. The public is showing a rare interest in labor-management negotiations and rare annoyance at both sides. This is boosting chances of a settlement because neither side wants to risk a stand that will provoke public support for restrictive legislation.

Higher nickel demand. Advance orders indicate total sales may be second only to record-making 1957.

More demands for import curbs. As high-wage American industries are priced out of more foreign markets, they will intensify demands that competitive foreign imports be restricted.

HOUSING PROSPECTS IMPROVE
More housing support. Strong Congressional action to support home-building legislation is likely.

New Dealish Democrats will use President Eisenhower's own call for Congressional speed-up to vote for a housing bill with more giveaways than he'll like.

Road-building slowdown. Because of higher prices, the government road-building program is lagging. Congress will be under pressure from contractors and land speculators to increase available funds for roads.

Aluminum boom. The possibility of higher steel prices — see "Hope for Steel Peace" above — is opening new markets for aluminum. Each rise in steel prices gives another edge to aluminum.

Measles vaccination. Medical sources say a breakthrough in devising a satisfactory preventive for measles is near.

Cosiltier carpets. Recent strength in wool prices makes it highly likely that wool carpeting prices will rise soon. Industry leaders are talking about it — but not with each other, of course.

Up: Orange concentrates. Prices of fresh oranges have been rising in Florida and this will soon be reflected in the prices freezers charge.

Ben-Hur's been here. Another licensing spree, similar to the Davy Crockett madness, is about the engulf us. The new movie based on the Lew Wallace classic is getting high-pressure exploitation and you will see Ben-Hur garments, Ben-Hur kosher sandwiches, Ben-Hur neckties and, perhaps, little boys flailing each other with Ben-Hur swords.

Cheaper almonds. For the first time in three years, there'll be a good American crop of almonds. More marzipan; more salted almonds on bars.

Better recording tape. Several manufacturers are spending large sums to improve recording tapes; some moving one-third as slow and others with additional channels are in laboratories, soon to emerge.

Looking At Sec. Herter

By ROGER BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass. — John Foster Dulles is a man of the highest character and a great student of law; in fact, he has been Senior Partner of the finest law firm in New York City, Sullivan & Cromwell, of which I have long had the honor of being a client.

Christian A. Herter is also a man of the highest possible character and a great student of history. He had been a most efficient Governor of Massachusetts, in which state I am proud to be a voter.

WHAT HISTORY TEACHES
We know that an able jurist like Mr. Dulles expects nations and individuals to carry out their agreements, and for this policy he has given his life. Mr. Herter expects history and events to repeat their actions, and upon this he bases his recommendations. Although he has always gone along with the "team" of which he was a member, he fearlessly states his belief. Mr. Dulles has referred to Russian agreements as "the crust of a pie to be broken"; while Mr. Herter has learned from history that progress has sometimes come even from broken agreements.

History shows that from the earliest days of Babylon, Phoenicia, Persia, Egypt, Greece, and England, the "underdog" has eventually won. As a result, the world has been better and legitimate investors have been safer. I recently returned from Africa where the natives are emerging from years of suppression, and where Democracy is fighting Colonialism. The same situation exists today in China, India, the East Indies, and perhaps the people of Russia are likewise awakening. I do not know Russia, although I have been to Europe many times. I do not believe in Communism, but probably Khrushchev and other Russian leaders do not believe in Communism either. They, however, have probably learned that such talk gives them followers and power.

History teaches that conflict has always existed between the "Haves," but possessions Progress has been initiated by the "Have-nots." Possessions have usually undermined the generations following. Suppression has resulted in revolt, from which the "Haves" have temporarily suffered but in the end have been better off. This certainly was true of our poor farmers who fought the British in our Revolutionary War. It was an revolutionary factor in our Civil War. Mr. Herter could show that a similar relationship applied in World War I and World War II. WHAT SHOULD WE DO NOW?

I have great respect for President Eisenhower and believe that we and the entire world are very fortunate to have him for our President. He, however, has been trained as an army officer to give orders and expect them to be carried out. I wonder how much study he has given to history? I believe in the present military policies of our government and the billions which are being spent on missiles and anti-missile missiles, atomic submarines, and other weapons. In fact, I have just returned from a visit to Cape Canaveral, where I was greatly impressed by the organization of loyal officers, scientists, and workers under the leadership of one of our greatest living generals, General Donald N. Yates. On the other hand, I wondered whether a World War III would be between the people of the United States and the people of Russia or only between our political leaders and those of Russia. Do we represent the masses of the Russian people? "Have nots?" I don't believe the people of either country want Communism; they believe in their hearts that it would not work or last.

I repeat that Secretary Herter will play with the "Team," but I believe his advice will be more liberally based upon history than has been Mr. Dulles' advice. I feel that Mr. Herter will ask the Team if it might not be better for us to give some of our foreign aid to the Russian people if they need food before this cold war is over. Mr. Herter, with his first name "Christian," cannot forget the struggling masses of all nations while we have millions of tons of food wasting in storage. I do not know the answer! My purpose today is merely to

N.C. Wildlife Is State's Fifth Largest Crop

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH — Dr. Fred Barka, low of State College has compiled some interesting statistics on the value of wildlife, sports fishing and hunting.

Wildlife is the state's fifth largest crop, amounting to more than $100 million a year and exceeded only by tobacco, cotton, livestock and forestry. Game and fish are important tourist attractions. Hunting and fishing provide over one million of our citizens some of their most wholesome recreation.

The State general fund derives more than $4 million a year in tax revenue from fishing and hunting, exclusive of license fees which go into a separate account.

There are 36,000 farm ponds in North Carolina, now yielding an estimated 3.5 million pounds of fish, and capable under proper management of producing twice that amount of food.

Development of inland fish and game resources depends almost entirely on proper use of land and water. Wildlife is closely connected with the agricultural economy of the state. About 85 percent of hunting in North Carolina is on privately owned farm lands.

A great deal of information has been accumulated through research but facilities are inadequate for getting it into hands of landowners. A bill is now pending to appropriate $100,000 a year for a wildlife specialist in the State College Agricultural Extension Service who would work through county farm agents in promoting wildlife resources.

The Bible Added Strength To Dulles' Convictions, Was Nearly Inflexible

EDITOR'S NOTE:

This is the first of three articles on the career and personality of John Foster Dulles. The writer, Creagh, knew Dulles for a number of years—as a U.S. senator, as his country's delegate to the United Nations, as a losing candidate for his Senate post, as a Republican consultant to the State Department under a Democratic administration, and finally as secretary of state in a crucial period of American history.

By ED CREAGH

Washington (AP) — "If Foster goes to heaven, which is a pretty good bet, he will immediately start negotiations with the devil to patch things up."

This is a direct quote from a man who worked closely with John Foster Dulles, the former secretary of state who died of cancer Sunday.

He might have added that Dulles would insist on God's terms, not the devil's, in any peace settlement.

Foster Dulles—people who knew him tended to drop the "John"—was a man of ironclad moral opinions. In his book — he was a staunch Presbyterian, and his book was the Bible — black was black and white was white.

This undoubtedly gave strength to his convictions. It is for history to say whether, as some of his critics suggest, it also made him too unbending and self-righteous to see the other side's point of view in international negotiations.

"Inflexible" was a word often applied to Dulles sometimes in praise and sometimes in blame. Nobody denied he had energy.

He flew the Atlantic and sometimes the Pacific the way most people take a streetcar. He visited 64 countries, traveling about 600,000 miles in the process, during his six years as secretary of state. He worked incredibly long hours—often in great pain as his fatal illness developed.

At his office and at his Washington home, Dulles was constantly on the job. In his State Department role he was the original do-it-yourself man. Administrative details he left to his helpers. Big foreign policy matters he handled himself. With a capital H.

He could do this because President Eisenhower had utmost confidence in him. The two were not especially close socially — Dulles it.

Summer Workshop On 'Facts About Alcohol'

East Carolina College will offer June 9-19 its annual workshop "Summer Studies in Facts about Alcohol." One of the most popular courses in the summer curriculum, the workshop will be presented this year for the ninth consecutive time. The North Carolina Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program is co-sponsor with the college.

"Facts about Alcohol" is planned especially for teachers and prospective teachers whose responsibilities include teaching about alcohol, sociological, psychological, and physiological problems arising from the use and misuse of beverage alcohol will be discussed.

Those who complete requirements will earn three quarter hours of credit on the senior-graduate level.

DUE FOR A JOLT
NORMAN, Okla., (AP) — A University of Oklahoma professor sent a copy of his research paper, "A History of Pressurized Flight," to a colleague at California Institute of Technology. Inadvertently enclosed was "Too Proud to Love," a confession story manuscript by his wife.

Film star Claudette Colbert was born Sept. 13, 1905, in Paris.

was not a member of Eisenhower's golf-playing set—but the President leaned on Dulles in matters of state and never failed to declare his faith and affection.

Dulles' personality is hard to describe. A British correspondent once referred to him as a "pawky chap." This Scottish expression has two meanings—either cunning and sly or saucy and lively.

Neither definition tells the whole story. Dulles was both blunt and subtle. He was, in his public days, a tallish, somewhat stooped man, ruddy of countenance, white-haired (he was 71 when he died), and endlessly active.

If any man was born to be a secretary of state, Dulles was.

He was a grandson of Gen. John Watson Foster, a Civil War soldier who was secretary of state for President Benjamin Harrison.

He cut his diplomatic teeth at the Hague Convention of 1907. He went there with grandfather Foster and saw international law in the making. At that time Dulles was a junior at Princeton University.

He seldom was away from foreign affairs for the rest of his life.

His great ambition was to follow in his grandfather's footsteps, and he did. Not without misadventure, to be sure. He was the sure choice for secretary of state in the cabinet of Thomas E. Dewey if Dewey had been elected president in 1944 or 1948.

But Dewey lost both times and Dulles, not without impatience, bided his time.

President Truman, who beat Dewey in 1948, named Dulles acting chairman of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations—to sit in for the then (and now) ailing Gen. George C. Marshall.

"A fine and generous gesture," said the firmly Republican Dulles of the Democratic President's action.

Truman gave other jobs to Dulles.

This reporter happened to be present one morning in 1950 when Dulles was appointed a special consultant to the State Department — again, under the Democrats.

All manner of confusion developed. Word of the appointment leaked out in advance. Truman's press secretary, the late Charles G. Ross, for some reason hadn't heard of it and therefore denied it.

Among topics to be considered in the course of study are Alcohol and the Human Body; Some Aspects in the Causation and Treatment of Alcoholism; Alcoholics Anonymous; and Educational Philosophy for Instruction about Alcohol.

Dulles knew better, and prowled around his New York town house like a frustrated cat. Finally the news of his appointment came over The Associated Press wire.

Dulles gave a hearty sigh and a carefully thought-out statement. He was back in action.

Action was what he loved. He was criticized in many quarters for his incessant travels. Some people thought he should stay in Washington, plan high policy and run the State Department instead of gadding off to Paris or Timbuktu.

But Dulles, who could put on old-fashioned carpet slippers and be almost as comfortable in a transatlantic plane as in his own living room, wanted to be where the action was. And there he went.

Refugee Kurds Say 6,000 Of Tribesmen Battling Kassem

SEMDINLI, Turkey (AP)—Refugee Kurds say 6,000 of their tribe are opposing the forces of Premier Abdul Karim Kassem and their own leftist tribesmen in Iraq.

They are concentrated in the vicinity of the Mezar Pass on the Turkish-Iraqian border under the leadership of Sheikh Raschid.

Refugees who have fled into Turkey say religion, women, communism, kidnappings and feuds are all factors behind the fighting in the remote mountain passes near the borders of Turkey and Iraq. They say there have been at least two pitched battles near the Turkish border.

The Kurds are seminomadic tribesmen who live in parts of Iraq, Iran, Syria, Turkey and the Soviet Union. No accurate census has been taken, and estimates of their total number range from slightly under four million to seven million. Less than 100,000 live in the Soviet Union.

Here at the southeastern tip of Turkey, in villages one can reach only by trudging along steep paths at times less than a foot wide, Kurdish refugees gave their account of events in Iraq.

"The trouble started soon after Kassem came to power," said Kahn Abdul, a 55-year-old tribal chief with piercing blue eyes and the strong face of a Kurdish mountaineer.

"Kassem told all the sheiks and tribe leaders to come to Baghdad to show their obedience. Sheikh Raschid — our sheik — would not go."

In the regime of Nuri Said and King Faisal, before the 1958 revolution, Raschid was the most powerful of several leaders of Iraq's Kurds. Favored by the old regime, he was an aged and ultra-conservative Moslem who ruled his followers like a semidependent prince. He balked at yielding that power to Kassem.

Twice Kassem summoned him and twice he refused. Finally Raschid sent two of his grandsons, Kerim Khan and Hayya Beg, as emissaries. Both were jailed.

Their father, Khaliph Mahmud Beg, attacked a government gendarmerie station and captured several officers to be held as hostages for his sons. In return government forces attacked Mahmud Beg's village of Guder-Dalaner near Ruwandiz, seized his wives and six other children and carried them off to Baghdad.

This occurred in March. Pressure against the conservative Kurds increased, and late in April Sheikh Raschid ordered one of his tribes—the Biradost—into Turkey.

About 1,200 Kurds, most of them women and children, came into Turkey to stay.

Most of the young men did not stay. They turned back to join the 6,000 Kurds gathering around Sheik Raschid.

There are few more rugged inhabited places than this in the world. Houses are made of sun-baked mud, huddling in small valleys lined by towering mountains. The nearest hotel, and a rough one at that, is 160 miles away.

But the hardy Kurds settled in easily, 45 miles inside the Turkish border, in tents supplied by the Turkish Red Crescent organization.

In interviews with them it became apparent that while the main trouble in Iraq stemmed from Sheikh Raschid's refusal to submit to Kassem, there were many contributing causes.

One has been the opposition of the conservative sheiks to the leftward trend of Kassem's government. Khan Abdul said: "Communist rule in Iraq has become unbearable."

Kurds here were disturbed over a report the Iraqi government has brought 400 Russian women to live with the Barzanis. The Biradost tribesmen insist this is true, and name the area as that near Rawandis and Ankra Ergue.

Cases Heard In City Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Municipal Recorder's Court Friday, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Oscar E. Bostic, 154 W. Gum Rd., guilty of driving after his license was revoked and speeding.

The court gave him 30 days on the roads, sentence suspended on payment of $200 fine and $16 court costs. The judgment provides that he shall not operate a motor vehicle in North Carolina until December 22, 1960. The speeding case was combined with this case for trial.

Robert Lee Tyson, Negro, R6 city, indecent exposure, 12 months on the roads, suspended on condition that the defendant be of good behavior and not violate any law for two years, and he was placed on probation for two years. The court ordered the defendant to report to Dr. Franzoni for examination and treatment within seven days, and continue the treatments until discharged. Tyson paid $25, costs deducted.

Bobby R. Lewis, R4 city, improper passing, $25, costs deducted, and he was assigned to Driver Training Clinic, beginning May 26 and continuing for four weeks. For following too closely, prayer for judgment was continued on condition that he not operate a motor vehicle for 10 days, and in further compliance he was to surrender his license to the court clerk, with the special provision that Lewis be allowed to drive cars no more than 300 yards from the service station where he is employed.

Floyd Lee Burnett, Negro, 210 W. 15th St., larceny, two years on the roads, suspended on payment of $16 costs and be of good behavior, not violate any law for two years and be placed on probation two years.

Frank B. Short, Negro, 701 Douglas Ave., speeding 100 miles an hour, 30 days on the roads. No operator's license, prayer for judgment continued to, provided Short does not drive a motor vehicle in North Carolina for two years, and not ride in any motor vehicle except a public bus or taxi for six months.

Drunk: Jesse B. Williams, address unknown to police, case continued to; Willie Pitt, Negro, Bethel, 30 days or pay $16; Albert Smith, Negro, 300 Boyd Ave.,

Coalition Weaker, Still Effective

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP)—The once-powerful House coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats has lost its potency as a positive legislative force.

But it still packs a punch in a negative sort of way in that it can sustain a veto of legislation it can't stop outright.

The coalition came apart on the key voting last week when the House passed a general housing bill. Fewer than half the 100-odd Southern Democrats joined Republicans in an unsuccessful fight to tone down the measure and then kill it.

But the 45 Democrats and 115 Republicans who voted against the bill constituted more than enough to uphold an expected veto, on which a two-thirds vote would be needed for passage. Leaders of the coalition have various explanations for their loss of strength. In the first place, there are fewer Republicans in the House than in past years when the coalition ruled the roost. The GOP membership, including vacancies, is 153. A majority of the House is 219, which means that if all the Republicans vote together, they must pick up 66 Democratic votes to call the shots.

But the Republicans no longer are the cohesive force they used to be. On the final housing bill vote, 33 Republicans voted with the majority of the Democrats. On an earlier vote this year, six Republicans voted to override the President's veto of a rural electrification bill.

Lack of unity among the Southern Democrats is attributed by some coalition leaders to the growth of urban areas in the South. There are more "city members" in the South than in past years and bills dealing with such subjects as housing, airport development and public works have a strong appeal to them.

Southerners also have a deep interest in legislation dealing with the Tennessee Valley Authority and some aspects of the farm program. They need the votes of big city Democrats from time to time and find it advantageous to do a little trading with the Northerners.

Perhaps the dominant factor in breaking the rule of the coalition has been the ability of the Democratic leadership in the House to keep its members on the floor.

There are 283 Democrats in the House this year, including one vacancy, and they have been conspicuous by their regular attendance. On two votes this session, all but four of the Democrats were recorded.

With that kind of party discipline, the coalition doesn't have a chance. It is simply outnumbered.

A total of 370 students will receive degrees from the university.

Nazi Confesses 500 Slayings

FULDA, Germany (AP)—A former sergeant of the Nazi SS elite guard has admitted killing at least 500 concentration camp inmates in the last months of World War II, state prosecutor Robert Hafke said today.

Gottlieb Muzikant, 55, an SS medical corps sergeant, said he either strangled his victims or gave them fatal injections of air or insecticide, Hafke told newsmen.

He said that Muzikant made the admission when confronted in his jail cell with Dr. Claus Salomon, a Jewish inmate-doctor at the Melk concentration camp.

Muzikant was arrested last April 30 after witnesses in another war crimes trial described him as one of the most brutal men on the staff of the Mauthausen camp. He had been living here in seclusion as a worker.

The former sergeant reportedly said he killed the inmates, all of them on the sick list, under a camp directive ordering the killing of "useless eaters." All were killed in the Melk camp between February and April 1945.

The state prosecutor said Muzikant would probably go on trial in July.

NEW CHAMP—Lucian Bryan (left), a member of the tournament committee, is shown greeting new club champion Bo Farley. The Rose High prep coach shot tremendous golf over the weekend to win his second club title by defeating Bob Masten.

Farley And Wright Win Golf Club Championships

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Writer

Bo Farley, Rose High School coach and athletic director, regained the Greenville Golf and Country Club Championship over the weekend as he swamped Bob Masten, 9-8. Farley was champion in 1956.

The club's busy weekend also saw Millie Wright finish strong to upset Harriett White, winner for the past four years, in a "sudden death" match for the Women's Championship.

Farley Has 71

Farley, pressed in every match enroute to the crown, shot a sizzling 71 Saturday to leave Masten at the starting post and relieve the pressure which was anticipated for the final 18 holes on Sunday.

With his one-under-par score, the veteran coach had built up a six-hole lead by the first 18 holes of match play.

Masten, playing the best golf of his career prior to entering the championship match, was unable to come back yesterday and after the first 18 holes was nine down. The final insurance adjuster conceded to the new champ at the end of 27 holes.

Farley, playing championship golf all the way, had little trouble in gaining his second club title. After shooting his opening day 71, he was able to relax yesterday and had trouble on only one hole, the sixth, which he bogeyed.

Farley advanced to the championship flight by eliminating Ed Rhoden, J. B. Boyd, Bill Davenport and Molt Massey, Jr., a former club champion.

Masten reached the title match with victories over brother Ray, Don Conley Jr., Errell Webb and Henry Coleman.

Allen In Comeback

W. L. Allen, a six-time champion, made a brilliant comeback to defeat Ray Masten in a "sudden death" playoff to win the first flight.

Allen, five down going into the final nine holes, was unbeatable on the final nine as he won the first four holes off his younger opponent. By the regulation 36 holes of play, the two were knotted and forced into a "sudden death" playoff.

Allen, continuing his comeback performance, was on the green in two shots while Masten was having trouble getting in position. Allen's eight foot putt for an attempted eagle barely missed but he finished with a birdie while Masten had a par five.

Wright Is New Champ

Harriett White and Millie Wright had to play two extra holes before Wright emerged as the new Women's champion.

Playing an 18 hole match, Wright went into the final hole one down but won it and then went on to take the 20th hole and the crown.

White had the best shot off the tee on the 20th hole but Wright's second shot was truer and she putted the hole in two shots while White was taking three.

Other victories in the Women's division saw Annabell Sugg defeat Bernie Rawls in the first flight; Nettie Herring defeated Virginia Lanche in the second flight; Gloria Lee defeated Frances Dudley in the third flight and M. F. Garrett over Cal Bryan in the fourth flight.

The week's action in the Men's division saw George Lautares defeat Lucian Bryan for the second flight champion; Monty Coles edged Bob Powell in the third flight; and Erskine Duff defeated Bill Clark in the fourth flight.

David W. Moiser, president of the club, made the presentation of trophies yesterday afternoon following the final match.

Conley Shuts Out Former Teammates In 'Convincer'

Exchange, JCs Wrap Up Wins

By JOE REICHLER

Associated Press Sports Writer
Lanky Gene Conley finally has made believers out of the Milwaukee Braves.

It took the 6-8 right-hander more than a year to do it but the Braves must be convinced now. There is nothing more convincing than a shutout with the doubters as victims.

That's what the new Philadelphia pitching ace did Sunday. He shut out his former Braves' teammates 6-0, doling out six hits while handcuffing Henry Aaron without a safety. The fact that Hammerin' Hank rapped four hits in the eighth and Milwaukee won 8-3 didn't dampen Conley's superlative hurling.

Conley, traded by the Braves to the Phils just before the opening of the season, now has permitted only five earned runs in 42 1-3 innings. That's a spectacular 1.07 earned run average, the best in the National League.

Conley, once a highly prized Milwaukee starter, apparently forgot how to win last year. He was involved in six decisions with the Braves and lost them all. Manager Fred Haney lost all confidence in his giant moundman and used him sparingly during the last three months of the campaign. He pitched only 2 1-3 innings in August and September and saw action at all in the World Series against the New York Yankees.

Conley insisted all along he could win if given the opportunity. During the off season, while playing professional basketball with the Boston Celtics, the big fellow issued an ultimatum to the club. "Pitch me or trade me to a club that will pitch me," he challenged.

It seems Conley knew whereof he spoke. The split reduced Milwaukee's first place lead to three games over the runner-up San Francisco Giants, who defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1. Pittsburgh Avery rf. jumped from fifth to third place, sweeping a doubleheader from Cincinnati 2-1 and 5-4 in 10 innings. St. Louis whipped Chicago 7-3 for its seventh victory in its last eight games.

The New York Yankees split with Baltimore but remained in the American League's cellar because the seventh place Detroit Tigers also divided a pair. The Yankees won the opener 9-0 but the Orioles came back to win the nightcap 2-1. Cleveland nipped Detroit 3-2 before the Tigers won the second game, 6-3. Kansas City downed Chicago 8-6, dropping the White Sox a full game behind front running Cleveland. Washington whipped Boston 8-3.

The Anderson boys, Harry and Sparky, drove in two runs apiece in Conley's shutout triumph over the Braves. Philadelphia scored four runs in the first inning as Milwaukee starter Joey Jay failed to retire a batter. Aaron supported Carleton Willey's seven-hit pitching in the second game with a double and three singles that drove in three runs. He now is hitting .461.

Old-Timers Feature Indianapolis Lineup

INDIANAPOLIS, (AP)—Former winners Jimmy Bryan of Phoenix and Pat Flaherty of Chicago will start away back in the field Saturday when 33 cars blast away from the starting line in the 43rd 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The windup of 10-mile qualifications Sunday left Bryan in the middle of the seventh row, with 19 cars to pass before he can repeat last year's $105,000 victory.

Flaherty, returning for the first time since he took the 1956 Memorial Day event, qualified a shade faster than Bryan and will start in 18th place, in the sixth row.

Bryan nearly missed the program. His oil pump failed Friday and almost ruined the engine of the Belond Special that has won the last two 500s. Owner-builder George Sallih and his crew completely rebuilt the power plant and Bryan qualified Saturday.

The field qualified a little slower than last year's record average of 143.445 miles an hour. This year's average in the four qualifying sessions was 143.004.

The front half of the lineup is extremely fast, led by Johnny Thomson of Boyertown, Pa., who set a one-lap record of 146.532 on May 16. The last half, although manned by veteran drivers, includes ten cars with qualifying speeds that would not have made last year's lineup.

The final qualifying session was run without a single mishap. In an accident Saturday, rookie Earl Motter of Fresno, Calif., escaped injury when his car hit the outside retaining wall. That was the sixth wreck of the month at the old track.

The lineup in its final form was loaded with old timers who know every crack and bump in the speedway. A. J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., 24, will be the only driver under 30.

Five newcomers made the lineup and none of them is a downy-checked boy.

The fastest was Bobby Grim of Indianapolis, four-times champion of the nation's county fair tracks, who will sit in the second row with a qualifying speed of 144.225 miles an hour.

Other rookies who will hear "Gentlemen, start your engines" for the first time are Don Branson, Champaign, Ill.; Chuck Arnold, Stamford, Conn.; Richard (Red) Amick, Muncie, Ind.; and Jim McWhitey, Anderson, Ind.

Dulles Flew 559,998 Air Miles In Six Years

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles visited 46 countries while traveling 559,998 air miles as secretary of state during six turbulent years.

A fearless air traveler, he flew the equivalent of 22 times around the world, either on crisis missions, goodwill trips, or for strategy talks with scores of leaders.

During this time, he ranged all over Europe, much of the Middle East, Latin America, and became the first secretary of state ever to visit Asia. But, while secretary, he stopped short of the Iron Curtain.

In all this flying, he had only one faint brush with disaster—and that came on a routine June 8, 1957, flight from New York to Washington in a two-engine Navy transport.

One of the engines suddenly belched black smoke as the plane was coming in to land at the military air terminal. Swiftly, the pilot put the plane down in an emergency landing at Anacostia Naval Air Station, which was closer, before the engine caught fire.

Dulles sat unperturbed, chatting with the aide who nervously kept looking out the window trying to keep the secretary from knowing how frightened he was.

Dulles flew 114,833 miles during 1958—his flyingest year—mainly on missions to help the West forge a united front in dealing with the Soviets over the future of Germany and Berlin.

Dulles genuinely loved to fly. He could relax, away from the telephone, pondering his diplomatic problems with best results, he frequently told friends.

He studied his papers, frequently dictated to his secretary or discussed problems intensively with his aides while aloft.

Occasionally, he would take time off to read paper-back detective novels or to play bridge.

He apparently never worried about his personal safety and never hesitated to take off on a mission because of bad weather.

"Why should I worry?" he answered when a newsman asked him about this once, "The Air Force knows what it is doing."

This faith once led to an erratic flight. He took off from Washington in foggy weather for a speech in New York but wound up in Albany when his pilot couldn't land as planned. Dulles returned to Washington without giving the speech.

Dulles used to laugh at some of the gags comedians made up about his extensive flying.

But Dulles regarded the airplane as a logical, vital part of 20th century diplomacy.

He felt that a person-to-person chat, if it could be brought about the cost of a few hours flying time, was much to be preferred in settling differences than the old-fashioned way of sending cables and notes.

Assistantship At Ohio Univ.

Gayle Clapp of Greenville, senior at East Carolina College, has been granted a graduate assistantship at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio. She will work there toward a master's degree in physical education and will teach classes in swimming, dancing, and tennis.

Miss Clapp, who is a major in the East Carolina department of physical education, is a member of the college Physical Education Club, the Aquanymphs, Women's Swimming team, and the Aquatic Club. She is also Day Student Senator in the Student Government Association, and Chairman of Recreation in the Wesley Foundation, organization of Methodist students.

Report Beating By Large Group

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—Two Negro men reported a large group of white men stopped their car, ordered them out and beat them as they headed for a public lake to go fishing Sunday.

Circuit Solicitor Blanchard McLeod and Deputy Sheriff Robert A. Moore said two women and a 14-year-old boy in the Negroes' car fled into nearby woods and later made their way to Selma.

L. B. Carroll, 29, suffered a broken arm. John Foster, 17, was not seriously hurt. Carroll said one white man wielded a baseball bat.

Joan Crawford In Hollywood Again

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Joan Crawford is back in Hollywood to make a movie after a three-year absence. "I'm only here for four weeks," the actress said. She arrived Sunday by train.

Miss Crawford's husband, Pepsi-Cola executive Alfred N. Steele died in New York five weeks ago. After his death, Miss Crawford was elected a director of the company.

A romantic suspense novel by MARTHA ALBRAND

A SPY at MONTE CARLO

(c) Copyright, 1958, by The Curtis Publishing Company. (c) Copyright, 1959, by Martha Albrand. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The adventure that led a young American artist in Paris, Mark Travers, to the most challenging and desirable woman he had ever encountered began when his best friend, Philippe Langle, was murdered.

Philippe, a French diplomat working to effect peace in Algeria, was assassinated while he was endeavoring to meet Timgad, an underground leader of Algerian rebels. Philippe's dying words were "Find Timgad, Mark. Promise."

Mark got nowhere in his search for Timgad until Corinne Javal, one of the women in Philippe's life, said that Timgad had been seen in Monte Carlo. Mark flew to Monte Carlo, and immediately received a threatening note: "Unless you stop interfering in matters which are none of your concern, you will not survive."

Mark had reason to believe that only two persons knew of his coming to Monte Carlo — Inspector Perrier of the Surete and Corinne Javal. Could Corinne have put him on the spot? He was pondering that and awaiting a planned rendezvous with Corinne at 10 a.m., when he encountered a lovely ballerina, Fleur Constant, on a beach.

Forgetful of his date with Corinne and his danger, he asked Fleur to have lunch with him before they parted. The thought of her stirred Mark's memory of Guy Constant, the deep-sea explorer, whom he assumes to be her brother.

CHAPTER 5

Mark drove through a wide wrought-iron gate, over thick white gravel, to stop in front of an imposing building. Marble figures, depicting the muses, decorated a wide stone terrace.

"Sir?" A manservant was approaching him with unhurried steps.

"Would you ask Monsieur Constant if he would see me?" Mark searched his wallet for a card, found he had none and added, "Monsieur Constant, or any member of his family."

"Monsieur Constant? If you want to see him you will have to drive all the way to the end of the park. He lives in the cottage. It has its own road on the other side. In the cottage, thought Mark, possibly because he is less disturbed there. He looked up at the windows of the house, most of them still shuttered. Behind one of them Fleur would be wondering how she could escape this guarded splendor, to keep a date with a stranger at a tiny bistro.

A low stone wall, allowing a splendid view of the whole fairy-tale landscape, with Monaco's harbor like a toy in the distance, came to an abrupt stop after about five hundred yards. Mark found the road seemingly blocked by an almost solid wall of dark green cypresses, then discovered at its far end an opening large enough to drive the car through. It opened out onto rows of glass-covered flower and vegetable beds; below them could be seen the red tiles of a roof.

The cottage was a disappointment. It was a small, two-story house, badly in need of paint, with a narrow balcony that looked as if it might collapse any moment, running the whole length of the first floor. But when Mark drove around to the front he saw that it, too, had a terrace. This one was not of marble nor adorned by valuable statuary; instead, a profusion of flowers turned it into an unexpected spot of color. Among them sat a group of women.

If Guy Constant preferred the cottage to the villa, it was certainly not because it afforded greater peace, for their chatter filled the air with a steady, high humming sound. It stopped abruptly when Mark honked gently. One of the old ladies rose to meet him, and Mark thought with great surprise, But I know her. Where have I met her? Until he remembered Fleur, miming her English governess on the beach.

"What may I do for you? You've lost your way, haven't you?"

Yes, it was unmistakably Miss Pendlebury. The strong British accent confirmed it.

"If he's an American, send him away," a hoarse, cranky voice called out. "I don't like Americans."

"Hush, Inez. Hush."

Mark took too steps in the direction of the stairs that led up to the terrace. Where Miss Pendlebury was, Fleur couldn't be far away. "I would very much like to see Mr. Constant."

"May I ask if you have an appointment?"

"Oh, tell him to be off," said the same cranky voice. "Undoubtedly he's from the house. We've told them often enough to make their complaints in writing and to stop bothering us by coming down here."

Mark could see the owner of the indignant voice. Old, white-haired, with the face of a dried-up apple. She was shelling peas furiously, with a huge white cat lying placidly like a boa around her neck. He had to make an effort to resist the temptation to reach for pencil and pad to sketch her — legs spread wide, like a cook's, to make a nest for the peas on her lap, but her hands gloved as if she were going to a ball.

"Are you from the house?" asked Miss Pendlebury.

"I don't know what you mean." Mark smiled pleasantly. "I am from a Paris paper. I would like to interview Mr. Constant."

"He's a newspaperman," said Miss Pendlebury over her shoulder.

"He's an American nevertheless. I can hear it."

"That's enough now, Inez," said another voice with an unmistakable tone of authority. "Miss Pendlebury, doesn't the gentleman have a name?"

"I'm sorry. May I ask what your name is, sir?"

"Travers. Mark Travers."

Only now, as Miss Pendlebury withdrew, could Mark see the person who had spoken last. Like Inez and Miss Pendlebury, she was in her late sixties. And like them, in spite of the authority in her voice, she moved with a humility Mark had never encountered before. She was holding a book in her hand, which she put down now to address the old lady to whom she had been reading aloud.

"Madame, a Mr. Travers to see your grandson." She spoke Spanish, the clear, proud Spanish of the Castilians.

The old lady was lying in a long chair that had a piece of canvas attached to it at the top like a small baldachin. She pushed it back and sat up as if aware only now of the commotion Mark had caused.

"And why bother me, Juana? You know that I never interfere in the affairs of my grandson. Call Bransky."

"Monsieur Bransky is suffering from a sick headache."

"I told him not to eat eggs, but he won't believe me. Call the General, then."

"The General went to do the marketing."

"He should tidy up after himself. He has left his knitting lying around again." A small hand fluttered like a white butterfly through the air; then pointed, suddenly no longer trembling, to half a gray sock, hanging from the arm of an iron chair.

Fifty or sixty years from now Fleur would look like her grandmother. The youth craned from her face, it would still be beautiful with its delicate bone structure. Mark found himself wishing suddenly that he had shown more interest in her family when she had mentioned Grand-maman and the others.

Maybe, when she had talked about "duties," she had referred less to her work than to these people here. Mark could not help looking at Madame Constant.

She was tiny, barely five feet, he guessed, yet she gave the impression of a tall woman. He moved slightly, to catch a better view of her, when he heard a small sound behind him, a sound somebody might make tiptoeing over gravel. But when he turned, he could see nobody. Maybe it had just been a cat or some small animal. Then the grandmother's voice cut into the sudden silence.

"Tell Inez to fetch Monsieur."

"I?" cried Inez. "Disturb . . ."

Before she could finish her sentence, the front door swung open. On the threshold stood a young man in a dark red dressing gown which had obviously seen better days. A parrot sat on his shoulder, batting his wings angrily, and screaming, "Silence, silence, silence!"

"I would like to inquire, if I may, what all this noise is about," the young man said. Then, as he saw Mark, the annoyance in his eyes changed to a conventional look of indifference.

Father Dies At Accident Scene

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—A father slumped dead in the street Sunday as he knelt to put a pillow beneath the head of his unconscious son. A doctor said the father, James E. Hinderliter, 40, apparently died of a heart attack.

Hinderliter had called the doctor after emerging from his house to see his son, James L., 15, lying in the street beside his motorcycle. The youth lost control of the cycle trying to avoid striking a dog.

The teen-ager was hospitalized with internal injuries.

Airplane Failed To Stay Aground

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—An airplane failed its Federal Aviation Agency tests Sunday because it didn't stay on the ground.

The plane, a homemade craft called the Cougar Kitten, was being put through taxi tests for FFA inspectors R. K. Beckelman and Albert Sanel.

Suddenly, the plane arched gracefully into the air, climbed about 20 feet, then crashed. Pilot and builder Robert E. Nesmith suffered a bruised shoulder.

Weekend Gayety Became Tragedy

FALLS CITY, Tex. (AP)—A weekend wedding party in this south Texas farming community turned from gayety to tragedy as the bridegroom's father died and his grandfather was charged with murder.

Sheriff Harper Morris said it happened this way:

After Harry Pawlick was married Saturday, his father, Henry

Pawlick, 48, gave a wedding party in the Community Hall.

The elder Pawlick decided his father, Leon Pawlick, 76, should attend the party. When he went to Leon Pawlick's farm home, he was struck in the stomach by a shotgun blast.

Morris said the pair had been feuding since an argument years ago over farming practices.

Bored Princess Again At Work

LONDON (AP)—The blonde English wife of an Indian prince got bored with all that palace life. She is selling washing machines in London.

"Just call me an ordinary girl," said the Maharani of Mysen-singh, once the mistress of a 20-room mansion, a big staff of servants and five automobiles.

"Forget the title, I'm Janet Hicks again."

The lovely 23-year-old was demonstrating a washing machine in a West End store. She pushed a shirt into the soap suds before a crowd of Cockney housewives.

"My days of luxury may be over, but I've never been happier," said Janet.

Miss Hicks and the maharaja met three years ago in an English hotel. He was a guest, she the receptionist. They were married after a whirlwind courtship.

Prince Dulu — as she called him — whisked her off to high life in Calcutta.

"It was just one long round of parties and idleness," said the reformed maharaja.

"It got so boring I wanted to take a job. But Dulu wouldn't hear of it."

"Now at least I'm doing something useful and earning my own living."

The beauty who gave up a palace now shares a small apartment with a girl friend. Her budget no longer allows her to buy rich clothes. Her hopes of being an actress have faded.

"I've given that up," she said, dropping the dripping shirt into a spin dryer. "I have no more illusions about the stage. It's a vastly overcrowded profession."

"Now I just want to live an ordinary, obscure life."

Miss Hicks is separated from the maharaja, but there has been no divorce.

"In the meantime, I'm just a working girl," she said.

She switched off the spin dryer and held up the shirt. The housewives drifted away.

VACATION PLANS

Have you been as thoughtful in planning your estate for your family's future as you have in planning your vacation?

Do you have a will? Suppose, traveling down the highway you and your wife are killed simultaneously so that it is not possible to determine who died first, who would inherit your property? Who would receive the proceeds of your life insurance? What would become of your children?

These are important questions. The answers may also have a substantial bearing on the size of death taxes which may then become payable. See your attorney about your will before you go on your vacation, and name the State Bank and Trust Company your executor.

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market advanced steadily but unsensationally in fairly active trading early this afternoon.

Gains of fractions to about a point were the general rule among key stocks. There were a few losers and also scattered losses.

The rise took off from Friday's moderate gain which put The Associated Press average at a new high by a narrow margin.

Rails resumed their upturn and joined industrials in the upward movement.

Coppers were spottily following reports of a decline in new orders. The steels were ahead despite reports that steel output is heading for a downturn.

Vick Chemical was up about 8 points on a few trades. There was talk of a stock split.

Polaroid dropped 3/4 to 12 1/2 on an opening block of 2,600 shares but later cut its net loss to a bit more than a point. Brokers said the stock seemed a victim of profit taking.

Bristol-Myers advanced more than 3 points on favorable Wall Street comment. Earnings have been good and a 3-for-1 stock split is effective in July.

U. S. government bonds were firm to slightly higher in slow dealings over the counter.

Kicked Lion In Sudden Impulse

DUDLEY, England, (AP) — Edward France climbed into a cage with three zoo lions Sunday and kicked one of the beasts on the nose.

France, a 17-year-old butcher's apprentice, said he acted on a sudden impulse. Fortunately the lions had just been fed. Keepers said otherwise he probably would have been killed.

"I thought I'm a pretty skinny meal, and I don't believe they'll bother me," France told a reporter afterward.

"But one of them looked up and began to smack his chops. He looked at me very closely and I thought 'skinny or not, I'd better get out of here.'"

France climbed back over the safety fence.

Report Several Marked To Die

NEW YORK (AP)—The Post said today that several men who attended the 1957 Apalachin, N.Y., crime convention have been marked for execution by gangland leaders.

Attributing the information to underworld sources, the paper said the doomed men were those likely to talk under police investigation.

"The pressure that brought the summary decision to permanently seal the lips of some of the Apalachin delegates came in federal indictments against 27 of them last Thursday on charges of obstructing justice," the Post declared.

Thirty-six other men who attended the meeting were named in the indictment as co-conspirators but not defendants.

The paper said the action "shook the security of the crime overlords. They haven't been so worried since Abe Reles began to sing about Murder, Inc., in the 1940's and sent seven men to the electric chair."

"The top boys have passed on the word to get rid of those most likely to talk."

E. Johnston Dees Portrait Presented

DEES PORTRAIT PRESENTED CITY . . . Mrs. Dees and her son Charles after Judge Whedbee and Solicitor Eli Bloom accepted the portrait for the city.

A portrait of the late E. Johnston Dees, Clerk of the Greenville Records Court for 11 years, was presented to the City this morning by his wife and young son, Judge Charles Whedbee, who accepted the gift for the city, said he felt it should hang in the court room behind the seat Dees had filled so well.

Dees was employed by the city as a policeman in 1939 and served in that capacity until 1942 when he joined the U. S. Marine Corps. After his discharge in 1948, Dees was appointed Clerk of Recorder's Court and had served in that capacity until his sudden death, March 18.

In accepting the portrait, Judge Whedbee said of Dees, "He was noted for his unflinching kindness to both the young and old, rich or poor." He commented that Dees was a devoted father and husband. Judge Whedbee said for many years during which he knew Dees, he never heard him speak an unkind word toward anyone.

Whedbee commented that Dees was a brave man and a dedicated man. He said Dees had demonstrated his bravery both as a police officer and as a Marine. Dees was dedicated to his job, Whedbee said, and never once refused to help someone in trouble. He never refused a request to work overtime in order to aid his fellow men, the Judge concluded.

The portrait was painted by Mrs. Donna Tabar, a local artist.

Cars Collided At Intersection

An estimated $300 damage resulted from a two car collision at the intersection of Greene and Third Sts. about 3:00 p.m. Saturday.

According to officers, cars driven by Mrs. H. L. Brady of Bethel and Leratta Oakley of Route 2, Farmville, were involved in the wreck.

Following investigation of the accident, police charged the Farmville woman with failure to stop for a red light.

No personal injuries were reported and damage to each auto was listed at $150.

make sure it gives a fair account of racial happenings in the South. Waring said the wire services are being subjected to "terrific pressure from the big powerful papers in the North" to play up racial discord below the Mason-Dixon Line.

He said Southern editors should not propagandize but owe it to their readers to give a fair outline of events in the South.

Newsman Told 'Paper Curtain' Hides Violence

COLUMBIA (AP)—Thomas R. Waring, editor of the Charleston News and Courier, says that there is a "paper curtain" which keeps the Southern viewpoint on school integration and other racial issues from being fully aired in national news media.

Waring told the South Carolina Associated Press News Council here Saturday that virtual terror walks the streets of many Northern cities because of racial antagonisms. But, he said, news of these incidents rarely reaches the South.

He urged Southern editors to scrutinize wire service news to Accidents And Violence Claim 18 Lives In N.C.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Highways, shootings, drownings and the unusual combined to push North Carolina's weekend violence toll to at least 18 dead.

A Ft. Bragg soldier, Pvt. Ira L. Jones, 24, of Memphis, Tenn., and Lewis Monroe Berrier Jr., 18, of Kernersville, were drowning victims as Tar Heels turned to swimming areas to combat sultry weather.

Willie James Wright of Matthews was fatally wounded in Charlotte, and Charlie Broadway, 42, of Oakboro was fatally beaten and shot.

Two Rt. 1, Pembroke residents were struck and killed by an Atlantic Coast Line train near Pembroke. They were identified as Parmelee Cummings, 24; and Demery Junior Oxendine, 20.

In the unusual, Charles Bradley Bradshaw, 46, Warsaw, and Hatie Matchell Baldwin, 38, Rt. 1, Holly Springs, were killed when struck by overturning cars after they were thrown from the vehicle. They died in separate accidents.

Dianne Salmon, 9-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Salmon of Sanford, died when she fell from a bed at her home.

Pedestrians killed were Walter Hoover Cowan, 30, Rt. 1, 700 S. Fill; and Walter Albert Trull, 40, Rt. 3, Marshville.

Victims of highway accidents included Weldon Finch, 21, Rt. 3, Rocky Ford, Ga.; Mrs. Richard Ryals, 23, Greensboro; Ellis Murray Jr., 40, Rt. 1, Beaufort; Betty Lou Craven, 27, Rt. 1, Asheville; Mary Jones, 23, Winston-Salem; Donald Thomas, 24, Rt. 1, Winston-Salem; and Horace Wayne Case, 16, Lynn.

Charge Theft Of Catcher's Mitt

Police arrested two teen-aged Negro boys Saturday and charged them with larceny of a baseball catcher's mitt from Globe Hardware.

The two youths, one 13 and the other 14, ran from the store with the mitt and ran into an alley going from Fourth to Fifth St. Officers apprehended the boys shortly thereafter.

Following their arrest, the boys were turned over to juvenile authorities for action.

Confiscate Large Bootleg Supply

Twelve gallons of non-tax-paid whiskey were confiscated early Sunday morning when Pitt County ABC officers and Federal ATF agents arrested an Ayden Negro in Craven County and charged him with possession of the illegal booze.

According to J. M. Ward, Chief Pitt ABC officer, Clarence Frazier of Ayden was arrested in a field in Craven County and charged by the federal officers with possession of the liquor. He is under $300 bond for appearance in the next term of Federal Court in New Bern.

Pitt officers also arrested Virginia Perkins, 37-year-old Negro of 1639 South Pitt St. when officers found a small quantity of illegal spirits in her possession.

She was released under $300 bond for appearance in court here this morning.

Assisting Ward in the raid were officers H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor.

Arrest Man For Assaulting Wife

A Negro man has been arrested on a charge of assaulting his wife. Deputy Sheriff Loyd Manning said this morning.

Charged with assault with a deadly weapon is David Cobb of Rt. 2, Ayden.

Manning quoted Cobb's wife, Mary Lee as saying she was struck with a bottle. She was treated for head injuries at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The deputy said Cobb was released under bond. He will receive a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Luther Moore.

Deputies Manning and Duke Andrews investigated.
