Transformer Vault Being Constructed Says Bloxam

A sidewalk transformer vault is being constructed on Fifth St. between Washington and Greene Sts., Utilities Superintendent Leonard Bloxam said today.

The new vault will be in with an extension of the city's underground electrical system. Bloxam said the vault will serve Guaranty Bank's new building, the City Hall and other buildings in the area. It eventually will be tied in by underground lines with a vault located near the telephone building on Pitt St.

In addition to the sidewalk vault, conduit is to be laid under the street and a manhole will have to be constructed in the street.

Third Shift Is Begun At Henderson

Few Strikers At Scene, No Violence; Union Chaplain Back On Job

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP)—The Harriet - Henderson Cotton Mills are back on a three-shift operation for the first time since about 1,000 employees—members of the Textile Workers Union of America—struck last Nov. 17.

The third shift was started Monday night without incident. Only a few persons were on hand as new workers drove through lines of National Guard troops to enter the gates of the two plants. The few strikers who watched didn't even yell.

There has been sporadic violence since the mills resumed limited operations in February. However, National Guardsmen have kept the city relatively quiet since their arrival May 12 on orders of Gov. Luther Hodges.

Boyd Payton, Carolina director of the TWUA, said that so far only 71 union members of a membership of more than 1,000 have returned to work.

Union Chaplain Roy Faulkner reported to work on the morning shift Monday. Payton said strikers were upset by his action, but that morale remained high. "Our people are as determined as they have ever been before," Payton said.

The union official said Faulkner is the first member of the 10-man negotiation committee to cross the picket line.

Meanwhile, Gov. Hodges requested yesterday that Henderson and Vance County officials provide funds to employ 150 or 200 law enforcement officers, Hodges said this would permit a reduction in the National Guard troops patrolling the area.

The governor said the cost of keeping the Guardsmen in the city the first week was $28,500.

"There does not appear to be an early end" to the strike, Hodges said, and apparently Guardsmen and extra officers will be required for an indefinite period.

While third shift workers entered the mills Monday night, a handful of newsmen and several strikers sitting on the porches of their homes watched.

Guardsmen, using a portable public address system, read portions of a recent court order which limited picketing and prohibited assembly around the mill gates.

Company President John D. Cooper Jr. said he expected 150 workers for the beginning of the third shift, including some union strikers.

The TWUA called out its membership when the company refused to renew a 14-year-old arbitration clause.

Foreign Ministers Prepare For Opening Secret Sessions Friday

GENEVA (AP)—With secret Big Four talks on Germany scheduled to start Friday, U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter urged Russia today to negotiate a Berlin settlement which would unite that divided city under its own constitution pending German unification.

A spokesman for Communist East Germany's delegation declared at once that discussions of German questions by the Big Four could only be held when East and West German representatives were present.

"Official talks of the four foreign ministers on German questions without German representatives would not bring any success," the spokesman said.

"It would not be possible for the four to make formal decisions on German questions without the Germans being present."

The West German delegation made no immediate comment on the announcement. But Western German officials have said they favor any type of Big Four negotiations that might lead to progress on the German question.

Only a brief conference session was planned this afternoon before all four foreign ministers flew to Washington for the funeral of John Foster Dulles.

Meanwhile, Western diplomats reported that American, British, French and West German experts are dusting off and updating the 10-year agreement for Big Four control of divided Berlin. The idea is to adapt it to serve as a basis for a new accord.

Voting Machine Measure Killed

RALEIGH (AP)—A bill under which the state would have shared with the counties the cost of purchasing voting machines was killed today by the House Committee on Elections and Election Laws.

The vote to report the bill unfavorably came on a motion by Rep. Thurston Arledge of Polk who questioned whether costs of elections are cut by the use of machines.

The committee had seemed favorably disposed toward the bill after hearing from Reps. Marcel Buchanan of Jackson and Ralph Strayhorn of Durham, who served on a special study group which recommended the legislation. The State Board of Elections had suggested state aid for voting machines purchases.

Under the bill, the state would have paid half the cost of the machines, purchased under 10-year time payment plans by the counties.

Arledge made a substitute motion for an unfavorable report after Rep. Boyce A. Whitmire of Henderson moved to report the bill favorably. Arledge asserted his county has found that elections cost "just as much, if not more" where machines are used.

Counties already can buy the equipment, Arledge pointed out. "All this does is dump part of the load on the state," he maintained. Rep. Pat Taylor of Anson said it would cost 4 million dollars to put voting machines in all the state's precincts. The state's share, under the bill, would be two million, he noted.

"I think we ought to give it some thought. We are talking about a lot of money here," said Taylor. "I think it would affect the large counties of the state now more than the small ones."

East German officials, clearly with Soviet consent, are circulating informally a plan for a new Berlin deal that calls for Western recognition of the East German regime's authority in and around parts of the city.

Informants stressed the Western powers have yet to agree on precise proposals to offer the Soviets. A lot depends on the readiness the Soviets show for negotiating a workable and acceptable deal. Publicly the West still stands on its call for free elections to unite West and East Berlin just as the Soviets officially still demand that West Berlin be made a demilitarized city unprotected by Western garrisons.

President thinking—as outlined by Western and Communist sources—suggests that West and East may be able to meet on a number of points.

Some examples: Control of access routes — The West reluctantly would recognize the East Germans as Soviet agents along the air, land and water lanes to Berlin. But the U.S.S.R. would have to guarantee the Western rights of access. The Communists don't like the "agents" idea.

A U.N. role in Berlin — The Western powers already have asked Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld what part the world organization could play. He has said it would be as observers only in the city and along the routes to Berlin. The Reds would accept U.N. observers in West Berlin but not at traffic control points.

The U.S.-British-French garrisons in West Berlin — The West would consider token cuts in their total forces of 12,000-15,000 men. The Communists want only token troops to remain.

Subversive spying and propaganda activities in Berlin — The West would agree to stop this sort of thing and might agree to remove the RIAS radio station from the American sector. The East Germans say they will make a corresponding reduction in anti-Western activities in East Berlin. Air flights into Berlin—The West wants the right of unrestricted numbers of flights. The Reds would like to curtail the number of flights and set a ceiling on the height the planes may fly.

The conference Monday produced another Soviet blast at Western military activities and another rebuke in reply from U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko accused the Western powers of converting West Germany "into a runway for atomic bombers and a launching site for rockets." Herter retorted that Communist East Germany is rearming at a greater pace than West Germany.

British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd also rejected Gromyko's charges and called on Soviet to make "constructive suggestions" for narrowing differences between the East and West.

Dulles Begins Last Journey As World Leaders Gather

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles begins his last trip today.

His body, in its heavy casket, was to be carried from his home by six armed forces bearers, and taken in a hearse to the Washington National Cathedral.

Many officials of the diplomatic world in which Dulles traveled so extensively arranged to meet the procession at the cathedral.

Dulles' body will lie in state there for 24 hours, with an armed service honor guard in attendance. Funeral services will be held Wednesday and a procession will follow to Arlington National Cemetery, across the Potomac in Virginia.

High political leaders of the world began to gather for the final tribute to the man who was secretary of state for six years.

The Soviet Union's Andrei Gromyko, one of Dulles' chief adversaries in the cold war, announced plans to fly to Washington today for the funeral.

He arranged to leave the foreign ministers' conference in Geneva at the same time as Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd. Gromyko will travel in a separate plane.

West Germany's 83-year-old Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was to fly here today, a rare gesture of respect to a man of another country who held a lesser office.

A great outpouring of words, praise and condolences came from almost every quarter of the world, even from the citadel of communism, Moscow.

Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan said "Dulles was a very great statesman. He was very intelligent. He was a strong partisan advocate. We like strong men. We do not like uncertain ones."

"I am very sorry that he is dead. Not only I, but the whole Soviet government are sorry."

Moscow radio beamed an English broadcast to Southeast Asia.

describing Dulles' life and adding "John Foster Dulles was an outstanding government leader of the United States, one of the leaders of American foreign policy."

President Eisenhower will attend the cathedral services at 2 p.m. Wednesday, and also the burial at Arlington. Full military honors, with a 19-gun salute, will be rendered.

The cathedral, though Episcopalian, is open to all denominations. Dulles was a leading Presbyterian layman, a ruling elder of the church.

Services will be conducted by Dr. Roswell P. Barnes of New York, secretary of the World Council of Churches, assisted by Dr. Paul Wolfe of New York's Brick Presbyterian church, and Dr. Edward L. R. Elson of Washington's National Presbyterian church.

The services at the cathedral will be open to the public, but space will be limited because of the great number of dignitaries and officials attending.

Chemstrand Plans Lab In Triangle

RALEIGH (AP)—The Chemstrand Corp., one of the world's largest producers of chemical fibers, plans to move its basic research to North Carolina's Research Triangle Park.

Gov. Hodges and the company announced Tuesday it will build a multi-million dollar research laboratory in the park.

The announcement brought expressions of delight from state and local officials and several Tar Heel congressmen.

"It is a great day for North Carolina," said Watis Hill of Durham, chairman of the board of governors of the Research Triangle Institute.

Work on the laboratory will start shortly, the company said. First research activities are scheduled to begin late next year. By 1963 more than 400 persons will be employed.

Hodges said he was "very greatly thrilled" over the announcement.

Dr. David W. Chaney, the company's director of research, said the Triangle Park site was chosen because it is near the heart of the Southern textile industry and within easy reach of the research facilities of three great universities at Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill. These are the University of North Carolina, Duke University and North Carolina State College.

Chemstrand's research facilities now are at Decatur, Ga., where it has a plant in which it manufactures acrylic fiber. The company also operates a nylon plant at Pensacola, Fla.

Although basic research will be moved here, the present facilities at Decatur will be utilized by other technical personnel of the company, Chaney stated.

Disturbed Court, Two Locked Up

Two elderly Negro men were put behind bars for two and one-half hours yesterday morning after they were held in contempt of court.

The two Negroes, Moses Payton 71, of 408 15th St. and Zeb Blount 66, of 408 15th St. were ordered locked up by Judge Charles Whedbee because the two men were talking and disturbing the court proceedings.

The two men were released at 1:30 p.m. and warned not to cause any disturbance in the court room again.

GET-AND-GO GONE

RALEIGH (AP)—Retiring as general secretary of the North Carolina Baptist Convention, 66-year-old Dr. M. A. Higgins told a meeting in his honor: "My get and go has got up and went. But I really don't mind when I think of all the places my get up has been."

File Secret Assault Charge Against Man In Shooting

FARMVILLE—Farmville police today placed a charge of secret assault with intent to kill against a 61-year-old poolroom operator, as a result of the wounding of a prominent Farmville resident yesterday morning.

The charge was placed against Jack Blount by Chief of Police L. T. Lucas who said Blount admitted gunning down F. W. Satterthwaite outside a service station in the Farmville business district. Satterthwaite, shot in the mouth, the head and the chest, is receiving treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital for the bullet wounds.

Blount is being held at Pitt County Jail where he was taken yesterday morning after being arrested by Chief Lucas and Officer G. L. Bailey of the Farmville Police Department. The chief said Blount would be held without bond, pending recovery of Satterthwaite.

According to Chief Lucas, Blount has made no statement about the shooting, other than admitting he did it. Investigation has shown, however, the chief said, that Blount approached Satterthwaite at Marvin Speight's Service Station, told a bystander to move out of the way and opened fire on Satterthwaite.

Satterthwaite was struck three times in the volley of five bullets which Chief Lucas said were fired by Blount. The pistol, a .22 caliber model, was taken from Blount at the time of his arrest, which came within 30 minutes after the shooting.

Chief Lucas added that investigation by Farmville officers showed that the pistol was stolen from Paul Tripp's Service Station, in Farmville, between 7:30 and 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

Satterthwaite was reported to have spent a "good night" at the hospital, where he was taken after the shooting. His condition is still listed as "serious, but not critical," according to law enforcement personnel.

According to Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson, Blount is a native of the Ayden section who has lived in Farmville for about ten years. The sheriff added that Blount's father was a physician in the Ayden community before his death. Blount is not married.

Satterthwaite is a native of the Pataolus community but has made his home for many years in Farmville where he is assistant factory manager for the A. C. Monk tobacco company. He is a deacon in the Farmville Baptist Church. The homes of Blount and Satterthwaite are on opposite sides of the 300 block of Farmville's Main Street.

Pilots Hear Health Director

Dr. Georgia V. Mills, director of Pitt County Health Department, told members of the Pilot Club last night in supper session at the Quinley Manor, that the local Mental Health Clinic served 10 eastern counties and needed cooperation of the whole community to clear up mental health problems and to keep 25% of our people out of institutions within the next few years.

Community resources must be mobilized—the family, the school, the public health department, the welfare department, the church and civic groups—before we can expect to produce appreciable decreases in mental illness rates or increases in emotional fitness.

New ideas in classroom emotional atmosphere that will produce subconscious learning and influence good mental health were listed as pleasantness versus grumpiness, positive recognition of activity versus negative concentration on errors, lapses or blunders, trying hard versus getting by, self-acceptance versus guilt and self-blame, cooperative learning versus forced effort.

She stated that while previously doctors or school administrators or welfare agencies formerly recommended children for mental health treatment that now parents were coming to realize that children could be assisted in eliminating problems and frustrations and in some cases the children themselves asked for interviews.

She announced that the dedication of the Mental Health Clinic will be held in June when the plaque in honor of the late Dr. Walter Humbert will be unveiled. Staff for the local center include Dr. Joseph D. Franzoni, psychiatrist, Mrs. David Proctor, psychiatric social worker, and Paul Curtis.

Pilot members brought toys and educational games for use in the playroom of the Mental Health Clinic and presented them to Dr. Mills at the conclusion of the program.

Dr. Mills was introduced by Mrs. Ann DeLaMater, chairman of the community service committee.

Eight members of the local club will attend Charter Night of newly organized Pilot Club at the Wilson Country Club Thursday night, headed by Mrs. Ann Phillips, local president.

Mrs. Mildred Derrick was given the attendance prize, presented by Mrs. Sue Howell, chairman of the membership committee. Open classifications were read by Mrs. Howell and each member given a list for future reference as to occupational vacancies.

Happy birthday was sung to Jane Hadley and a birthday card signed by each member.

Two guests were welcomed: Mrs. Virginia Perkins Lang, guest of Mrs. Elizabeth Mallory, and Mrs. Helen Snyder, guest of Mrs. Ann DeLaMater.

Invocation was pronounced by Mrs. Olivera Rouse and Miss Annie Moore, vice-president, was in charge of the meeting.

The next meeting to be held on June 22 will be a picnic on the lawn at the home of Mrs. Edna McMillen, 104 North Library, with Mrs. Marion Biggs, assisting hostess.

Yearbooks for the May 1959 to May 1960 club year were distributed with the following officers designated: President, Mrs. Ann Phillips; first vice-president, Miss Annie Moore; second vice-president, Mrs. Lucy Bell; recording secretary, Jane Hadley; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Ruth Bing; treasurer, Mrs. Martha Jorgensen; directors, Mrs. Kara Lynn Pennell, Mrs. Joan Warren, and Mrs. Sue Howell.

Committee chairman include: coordinating committee, Miss Annie Moore; club action, Mrs. Sue Howell; Club Service, Mrs. Elizabeth Mallory; community service and scrapbook, Mrs. Ann DeLaMater; public affairs, Miss Lelia Higgs; publicity, Miss Grace Smith; birthday bank, Mrs. Martha Jorgensen, and parliamentary, Mrs. Marion Biggs.

Mrs. Peter Marshall Visits Home In City

Mrs. Peter Marshall of Washington, D. C. and Ralph Hardee Rives of the University of Virginia Charlottesville, were guests in the home of Mrs. Helen White Hawes Sunday. Mrs. Hawes entertained at a buffet supper honoring the guests.

Mrs. Marshall, known to readers as Catherine Marshall, is the author of the book, "A Man Called Peter," based on the life of the late Dr. Peter Marshall, who at the time of his death ten years ago was the pastor of the historical New York Avenue Presbyterian Church in Washington and the Chaplain of the United States Senate.

This well-known book reached the "Best-seller" list within ten days after its publication and remained there for more than three years. In 1955 it was made into a motion picture.

Among Mrs. Marshall's recent literary achievements have been "To Live Again," "The First Easter," and "The Prayers of Peter Marshall." In 1953, Mrs. Marshall declared: "... the God I know is a realist and he expects us to be realists, too."

She was given the Woman's National Press Club award as Woman of the Year of the field of literature in 1953. This award was made in recognition of "... her literary achievements and her contribution to the awakening of national interest in spiritual welfare."

Mrs. Marshall intends to come to the mountains of western North Carolina and Tennessee within a few weeks to begin work on a novel which will be based on life in the Smoky Mountains at the turn of the century.

In the summer of 1958 Rives and Mrs. Marshall met while attending a session at the University of Oxford. Rives, who has the Bachelor of Science and Master of Arts degree from East Carolina College, has been an instructor in the Department of Speech and Drama at the University for three years.

Ever Growing In Size And Service

The 905 degrees conferred by East Carolina College in its commencement exercises Sunday is further evidence of the service that the institution is rendering to North Carolina.

The list of ECC graduates in the class of 1959 probably contains a considerably higher percentage of North Carolinians than any of the other larger state supported institutions. It also contains the names of more young men and women who will be taking their places in public school classrooms throughout the state next year than the list of graduates from any other institution in the state.

Another striking thing about the class of 1959 at ECC is that the number of graduates this year is almost equal to what the total enrollment of ECC was ten or 12 years ago.

In the past decade East Carolina College has grown by leaps and bounds. Its growth in enrollment has been surpassed only by the demands made upon it by the young people of this and other sections of North Carolina who are seeking a college education. In spite of its tremendous growth in enrollment, ECC has been forced almost every year during the past ten to turn away students simply because it did not have accommodations for them.

Its growth has been limited not by the desire of young people to attend the college, but by the physical plant which it had. That too has been expanded rapidly in the past decade, but even so, it has not kept pace because funds for expansion of the physical plant have been limited to some degree.

East Carolina has long since passed the period in which it could accurately be termed a "small college." It is a big college and its potential for service and growth have by no means been reached.

Each year it renders a greater service to North Carolina and each year the demands upon it for further expansion of its services grow.

It is only natural, therefore, that in its 50th annual commencement exercises, East Carolina College should realize a new record in the number of degrees it granted. In its 50th year of service to North Carolina, the college also has reached a new high in services it renders to the state.

Not Much Rivalry On The Senatorial Front

It's not unusual that a year before a gubernatorial election the list of potential or hopeful candidates for the office to become rather long as is the case now.

Between now and late this year when the campaign lines really shape up some of those now off mentioned probably will drop from the picture. Others, whose names are not mentioned now in connection with the gubernatorial race, may come to the fore.

The most surprising thing about the whole 1960 political picture as it now shapes up is that the field is full of gubernatorial hopefuls, and there is hardly a mention of senatorial candidates.

When Everett Jordan was appointed to the Senate to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. W. Kerr Scott, there was a great cry in opposition to the appointment. In the midst of the confusion and for a while thereafter there were predictions that Sen. Jordan would face stiff opposition in 1960 in seeking election to that office. So far, that opposition—at least in terms of a specific candidate—has failed to materialize.

Meanwhile the list of potential gubernatorial candidates offer an impressive review of proven politicians from across North Carolina. Such a list includes Terry Sanford, of Fayetteville, John Larkins of Trenton, House Speaker Addison Hewlett, Lt. Governor Luther Barnhardt, State Treasurer Edwin Gill, and occasionally the name of Rep. Alton Lennon, a former senator, is mentioned.

It would be unusual indeed if come 1960 all the high powered politicians were in a gubernatorial race battling against each other, while the high office of United States Senator went uncontested to a man who was appointed to fill an unexpired term. Particularly is this true in North Carolina where in recent years it has been the exception rather than the rule when an appointee to the Senate has succeeded in retaining his post when seeking a full term on his own hook.

North Carolina's political picture will undergo many changes between now and early 1960 when the campaign lines are finally drawn. Suffice it to say, however, that the pictures, even though changing, are interesting.

Died In World He Never Made

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Foster Dulles died in a world he never made. The forces which shook and shaped it were in motion before he became secretary of state. He spent his six years in office trying to control them.

It may have been a matter of regret to him that, before his death Sunday, he had really set nothing. But for six years he managed to preserve peace and hold communism behind the frontiers it had when he became secretary.

That may have been the most any man in his time could have done.

There were really two worlds in the days of his growing up: the troubled rest of the world, saturated in feuds, and the American world, impregnable and self-sufficient in isolation.

That was when distance meant safety and survival lay in aloneness. The two oceans gave America time to prepare for any attack and staying out of foreign alliances meant avoiding grief. It wasn't an American dream that didn't last long.

All of it was to change before cancer finished him. Missiles have made the oceans look no more difficult than a country creek.

There were still the two worlds in 1907 when Dulles was 19 and took his first dip into foreign affairs — the field which was to dominate his life, his vision and his energy — by going to the Hague peace conference.

Within 10 years after that communism in Russia began the march which was to change the history of mankind. It may not have seemed so at the time, for it took two wars to drag America out of isolation and melt two worlds into one.

He had had a hand in the melting over the years — as adviser to Democratic presidents and secretaries of state — but until he took office in 1953 he never was in a position to direct policy or make it.

By that time America was deep in foreign entanglement, military and economic, made necessary by the cold war and the realization that communism could gorge itself in disunity.

Then suddenly after Dulles took office there piled up on him a series of events never encountered by any American secretary of state.

Forty-four days after Dulles was sworn in Joseph Stalin died. Within a few months the Soviet Union exploded its first hydrogen bomb. Within a few years it was boasting of missiles that could carry hydrogen warheads across the ocean in minutes.

This was a new and terrible power never possessed by any American enemy. In a few years time had lost its meaning, distance evaporated, and America had to accommodate itself to the idea of annihilation without warning.

Diplomacy had always been an international mine-field but never so sensitive, so savage or so loaded with the flowers of doom as the one Dulles had to pick his way through.

With Stalin went the sullen, humorless face of communism. Stalin's had been a hand of iron, dripping blood. His successors put on the soft glove. They smiled.

They talked peace. With more imagination than their old boss they began to make progress in fields closed to Stalin whose tactics frightened nations as well as babies in the Middle East, Asia, Africa.

Dulles, like President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson, had learned how to handle Stalin's tactics: with iron equal to his own. But now Dulles had to adapt himself to the new Soviet approach, more effective, twice as deadly.

For a while this was after the summit conference of 1953 — he seemed to see improvement. It didn't last long. Like Truman and Acheson, he froze solid again. He remained that way to the end.

But the new tactics — together with the missiles and the hydrogen bomb — gave the Soviets power, both talking and real, that not even Truman and Acheson had to cope with.

Dulles' foreign policy was neither original nor creative. It seemed based on the belief that if war could be avoided and if communism could be held tight in its present bottle it might, as he once said, undergo favorable changes.

He didn't live long enough to find out if he was right. He had too good a sense of history to pretend to be a positive prophet. In his last moments the most he could do was hope for the best in the belief he had done his best.

Only time could give the answer to questions which, since he was a thinking man, must have been on his mind often.

Were his years as secretary the golden years of opportunity for the West in the cold war and had he made the most of them? Or had he failed to understand them? Or were these years just a minor interval in a long struggle?

Rather Unique Advantage

Your columnist has observed another advantage of the little foreign cars over the bigger shinier ones which come out of Detroit.

Of course you have to be sort of a screwball driver for this dubious advantage to do you any good.

On a trip to Morehead recently we observed a man and his family scooting along the highway in his little French-made auto.

He darted around several cars just making it back in to the right lane in the face of oncoming traffic numerous times.

Finally the little car started around once too often. We held our breath as it pulled alongside a longer car doing a full 60 miles per hour — and another car was bearing down in the left lane. It was obvious the little car wouldn't make it. We steeled ourselves for the awful crash that was bound to come.

But the two big cars moved over as far as they could, to the very edge of the pavement. Lo and behold, there was just enough room between the two big ones for the little foreign car. As the oncoming vehicle moved past, the little car shot past the one on the right and pulled back into the right lane.

So there is another advantage to owning a small car. Of course, we don't know what would have happened to the man driving the French car and his family if either of the other two vehicles hadn't given him all the room they could — or if the oncoming vehicle had been a tractor-trailer.

Kids are a durable bunch. We

Other Editors Saying ... Right To Happiness

(Charleston (S.C.) News & Courier)

Some people nowadays believe they have a constitutional right to happiness. They haven't any such right, of course. The Bill of Rights no more includes a right to happiness than it includes a right to color television or a hotel credit card. Americans have been guaranteed a right to the pursuit of happiness. The mad chase to overtake happiness makes crazy, mixed up kids of many adults.

What is happiness? Is it a gimmick? Is it a fish-tailed sports car in the driveway of a $40,000 splitlevel? Is it the confidence that comes from a figure kept trim by means of an electric vibrating machine? Some Americans apparently believe that happiness is glamor through gadgetry. That's wholly mistaken. It's the huckster notion of happiness — the notion that happiness has a price tag. Happiness won't come through "living it up." Certainly, the mechanical and electronic devices of modern living are useful aids in a complex society. But the possession of costly machines and high-priced goods doesn't cheer the inner man.

An older generation of Americans better understood the nature of happiness and how it is created. Robert E. Lee said that duty is the most sublime word in the English language. No more and no less can be expected of a man. It is in the realization and performance of duty that happiness originated. Today the notion seems a corny to many of our countrymen.

No reason exists why Americans should be permanently confused about happiness. Nor is there any necessity for people to pore over how-to-live books. The facts about happiness are at hand. Adults who have the responsibilities of parenthood should know happiness. Happiness as a parent isn't the result of material gifts from one's children. On the contrary, a parent's happiness comes from being on the giving, not the receiving end, of a relationship.

The great, underlying fact of human existence is that adults must completely attain that condition called happiness when they have done what they know to be their duty. Generations of parents, soldiers, judges and statesmen have known this to be true.

Americans, therefore, should take care to implant in youngsters an accurate understanding of happiness. Most definitely, happiness isn't a new convertible at 19 or a whooping allowance for clothes and entertainment. Happiness is a by-product of the passion for duty. This is the passion that should be encouraged in this country.

Individuals, like nations, cannot afford to devote all effort to easy living — not without failing to mature and gain strength. Individuals who learn to put duty first in their daily lives have the inner resources to meet all challenges.

Patsy To Liquor-Makers Abroad

By ELMER ROESSNER

The United States plays patsy to the liquor distillers of the world. Foreign countries pour in their bottled potions without limit, yet raise barriers against American whiskeys.

Of the world's major international markets, only the United Kingdom permits the unrestricted entry of U.S. whiskey. The Bourbon Institute reports. Throughout the rest of the world, quotas and tariffs block the spirits of corn.

The usual reason for keeping U.S. whiskey out is the "balance of payments." Foreign countries say that if they allowed the free importation of American whiskeys, they would run short of dollars to pay for it.

PROTECTIONISM ABROAD That's nonsense in most instances. In some impoverished countries, of course, economies can be strengthened by forbidding all except critically needed imports. But in the prosperous countries these seems to be adequate buying power for a nip of corn squeezings now and then — if the politicians aren't too concerned about protecting the native and British distillers.

Don't be fooled by the title "Bourbon Institute." It is not an academy of bourbon imbibers, but a creation of Schenley Industries. Its figures are no less valid.

They show that in almost all countries that bar bourbon, Scotch is readily obtainable. While the Institute doesn't say so, that looks as if the British trade emissaries have outsmarted ours.

DISCRIMINATION. THAT'S WHAT! Institute figures show that France, which ships $23,000,000 at Sanitary Fish Market on the sound at Morehead the other weekend. Bottles of horseradish are kept on each table there for the benefit of those who like the red hot-stuff with their seafood.

A little girl, perhaps two years old, wandered off from her folks to a vacant table. There was the bottle of horseradish complete with a spoon. The little girl picked up the spoon and licked off enough horseradish to send the average man leaping in the water behind the restaurant.

Did it bother her? Not a bit. She smiled and smacked her lips as a waitress angrily snatched the spoon away from her and took it to the kitchen for a washing.

East Carolina College graduation has come and gone and we must say some of the grads are apparently impatient.

For instance there was the car sitting on the college campus yesterday complete with boat behind. Was a graduate going fishing immediately after he grabbed his diploma?

Then there was this other car which had been all decorated up with the usual signs friends put on the cars of newly weds.

Did a grad get married Sunday afternoon and then head for the college for graduation? Or was he or she or they planning to marry just after graduation? Or was it just a couple of non-grad newly weds who were not in any hurry to go anywhere?

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

There was an old saying among the western miners: Never abandon a mine shaft until you've gone fifty feet farther.

It's amazing how many fortunes were actually stumbled upon, or found by some chance incident. One man who later became one of the richest men in the whole westland picked up a rock one day to hurl at a languid mule he was trying to drive into a corral. He noticed the stone's unusual appearance. Sure enough it was loaded with precious metal. Others staked out claims anywhere at all just to get one staked out, and sometimes — not always by any means, but sometimes — they turned out to be valuable.

Normal Folk In Suburbs

By SAUL PETT
NEW YORK (AP)—Why is it so many people are attacking the suburbs these days?

I have the impression that every time a novelist, social critic, bearded lecturer, campus rebel or tweedy philosopher tries to explain what's wrong with America he finds that individualism is dying and conformity is in the saddle, and it's all the fault of the suburbs.

What a federal case they've made out against us! And all because we wanted a piece of lawn that didn't belong to a city park and a small view of the sky not hazy with smog.

The latest attack comes from Dr. I. I. Rabi, eminent Columbia University physicist. Scientists, he says, should be "odd balls" and "curious types." When a scientist goes suburban, Rabi says, he becomes a victim of a commuting schedule, has to leave the lab at a fixed time, rushes home to fix his leaky cesspool and that night his conversation concerns only cesspools.

Dr. Rabi misses a profound point. The suburbanite could, if he dared, get home later. But what makes him scurry home is fear—fear of his wife, whether she's an apartment wife or a house wife. He's afraid to miss dinner.

Dinner, as every male mouse knows, is based on a complicated mechanism and precise timing and painful planning, like a three-stage rocket or Bach fugue, and it won't keep, and if the children eat without father they will develop psychic trauma, and if they wait late to eat a soggy, semipossibly dinner with father they'll miss piano practice or do their home work poorly or miss the school dance, and how are we ever going to catch the Russians with a nation of underfed emotional misfits?

Dinner, not the suburb, is the villain, and men scamper home for it in the cities as well as the suburbs. Dinner is the emotional core of a woman's life. Missing it is the ultimate hurt.

I even suspect that many marriages wrecked by infidelity would still be intact if only the faithless one managed to get home in time for dinner.

But to the larger point. There is just as much conformity and mass thinking and colorless talk in the cities as in the suburbs.

A hi-fi bore is just as dull and imitative in an apartment as in a house, except in an apartment there's always the hope that the man downstairs will rap on the steam pipe.

I have seen as many city women blossoms out simultaneously in tattered pants and as many city living rooms cluttered with cheap mobiles and Japanese prints as plague the decor in the suburbs.

At an avant garde art gallery or precious off-Broadway play, I have seen as many slavish clouds worshipping what is new and different and therefore tasteful as I've seen in a suburban hardware store. I've heard as little independent thinking in the city as in a suburban town meeting or PTA session.

I have sat in city apartments with men of learning, of science and medicine, and heard the wives complain about the diaper service and the men complain about the taxes and how they wished they had more time to "keep up with the literature," which means the stock market pages.

Bohemians can get lost easier in a big city. But we suburbanites have our eccentricities, too many bums and frustrated artists and rummies and neurotics and I just don't see where we have anything to be ashamed of compared to city people.

Strength For Today

But many shafts were sunk and then abandoned. Frequently they were abandoned in too much haste, and later someone else came along and made a fortune out of what a less patient man could not stick with long enough to make it pay. As mining technique improved, it was often found profitable to go to deserted mining areas and work over the "trailings" which years before had been discarded as waste.

Don't abandon a shaft until you have gone fifty feet farther. And herein lies a principle. Don't give up people, projects, ideals, religious convictions and a host of other precious things until you have gone fifty feet farther. It is in patience that we possess our souls.

Faubus And Three Segregationists Meet Defeat In Little Rock Voting

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Gov. Orval E. Faubus met a major defeat Monday in Little Rock's integration feud with the recall of three segregationists from the school board.

Faubus had put himself squarely behind the segregationists in the recall election which sprung from an uprising of a group of citizens over the firing of 44 teachers.

All three of them were defeated, including the board's president Ed I. McKinley who was ousted by a vote of 13,347 to 11,855.

At the same time the three moderates, who said they prefer some integration to no schools, won a vote of confidence by retaining their seats.

It is now up to the Pulaski County Board of Education to fill the vacancies. The board's five members, all political unknowns here, have kept their own counsel as to their plans.

Faubus twice went on television in the closing days of the bitter campaign to plead for retention of the segregationists. He called the controversy over firing of the teachers a smokescreen for integration.

The governor urged the ouster of the three moderate members. Their supporters had started the recall movement. The moderates walked out of a board meeting May 5 when the segregationists began their teacher purge.

Two days later a group of business and professional men organized a movement to stop the teacher purge. They pledged themselves to recall the three segregationists.

Today Robert W. Laster, Little Rock traffic judge and the worst-beaten of the segregationists said: "Well it looks like the people want integrated schools, doesn't it?"

The other two segregationists, McKinley and Ben Rowland, were silent. So was Faubus who was reported at the governor's mansion to be at Stuttgart, Ark.

Laster was recalled by a 14,062 to 11,148 vote and Rowland, by 13,691 to 11,528.

Everett Tucker Jr., leader of the moderates, retained his seat by a 13,323 to 12,094 vote. Ted Lamb had the hardest battle among the moderates but ran up a 12,973 to 12,562 favorable vote.

The third moderate, Russell Matson, kept his seat by a 12,963 to 12,326 edge.

The six school board members were elected last December after the former members bought up the contract of Supt. Virgil T. Blossom and then quit themselves.

From the start the board was split in bitter dispute. The three who attempted the teacher purge were pledged to support Faubus in his fight with the federal government over integration. The other three had been denounced by the governor as integrationists.

Tucker, Lamb and Matson denied they were integrationists.

Faubus closed the four public high schools last fall under laws he had sponsored at a special legislative session a few months before.

The closing was endorsed by a 3 to 1 vote at an election.

Faubus called out the National Guard in the fall of 1957 to stop nine Negroes from attending Central High School. He said he had done it to prevent violence but federal courts ordered him to stop interfering with integration. President Eisenhower then moved in federal troops to enforce it the rest of the school year.

The two factions in the recall battle never debated the issue in the two and one-half week campaign, primarily because they disagreed on what it was.

The Committee to Stop This Outrageous Purge (STOP) insisted the sole issue was the firing of the teachers. The Committee to Retain Our Segregated Schools (CROSS) said integration was the real issue.

Dr. Drew Agar, a thin, slightly built internist and the father of several school-age children, was picked to lead STOP. He had never been in politics. Nor had he taken part in the school integration fight before.

Today he simply said: "I've done my bit. I'm a doctor, not a civic leader. I intend to go back to my civilian pursuits."

Early In Life, Dulles Fixed Goal As Secretary Of State

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles on John Foster Dulles by an Associated Press writer who knew him as a lawyer, a senator, a campaigner, and finally as the chief architect of American foreign policy in perhaps the most crucial period of world history.

By ED CREAGH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some boys want to be firemen when they grow up. Some want to be atomic scientists.

John Foster Dulles, after a brief flirtation with the idea of becoming a locomotive engineer, fixed his eyes firmly on the job of secretary of state. He made it at the age of 64 and loved every minute of it—until fatal illness struck him down.

Nothing short of his imminent death discouraged Dulles.

He was in agonizing pain on his last trip to Europe. But he kept going, usually with the familiar smile on his lips, sometimes with a lawyer's hard-bargaining glint in his eyes, endlessly seeking a shield against the horror of nuclear war.

It will be for history to say how successful his efforts were. But Dulles' warm friend, President Eisenhower, who relied wholeheartedly on his advice, has noted time and again that no American soldier died in combat since the Korean War was stopped in 1953. Dulles never lacked critics. He brought lightning down on his head from Moscow to Oshkosh, even before he took office, by threatening "massive retaliation" if the Communists started a limited war.

Again he was criticized for making known through a Life magazine article that this country had more than once been steered to the brink of war—a risk he felt had to be taken if Communist aggression was to be kept in check.

And yet when Dulles became ill, and the seriousness of his condition was widely suspected, his prestige soared throughout the Western world—and not for sentimental reasons only. He had, after all, more experience in dealing with the Russians than most other Western leaders. If he was stubborn and unyielding, at least he had courage and know-how. And he had the ear of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

No president in memory has relied as heavily on a secretary of state as Eisenhower relied on Dulles. Dulles didn't have to sell his policies to Eisenhower. The President accepted them, and gratefully, on faith. He never passed up an opportunity to praise Dulles.

Dulles and Eisenhower had much in common. For one thing, neither lost the small town touch.

Eisenhower grew up in Abilene, Kan., Dulles in Watertown, N.Y.

With his dark suits and his stoop-shoulder walk Dulles could have passed for a country lawyer. But like many a country lawyer he had a sharp, subtle mind—seasoned and enriched by years of practice in international law. This probably accounted for the fact that—to be blunt—not every body trusted Dulles. He had been known to give reporters background information, with the understanding they could publish it, and deny the next day that he had even talked with them.

Dulles, a minister's son and an outstanding Presbyterian layman, wouldn't consciously lie. What he probably had in mind was that he hadn't seen the newsmen "officially" and so he hadn't seen them at all. This distinction was sometimes embarrassing to the newsmen.

He was a member of the U.S. delegation to the Versailles peace conference after World War I. Later he served as chairman of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He helped organize the United Nations at San Francisco in 1945, and was an American delegate before he became secretary of state.

Dulles graduated at the head of his class from Princeton in 1908 and repeated the feat at Washington's George Washington Law School—sawing in an LL.D. degree from the Sorbonne in Paris.

By the time he was 31 Dulles was a full partner in the New York law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell. In time he became senior partner, and once offered a job to Republican political power Thomas E. Dewey. Dewey turned it down but later returned the compliment. It was through his friendship with Dewey that Dulles became Eisenhower's secretary of state.

'Hardluck Podres' Beating Jinx; Blanks Giants, 8-0

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Is this the year Johnny Podres finally gets the breaks and becomes a big winner?

The stocky southpaw is remembered as the youngster who pitched the Brooklyn Dodgers to their only world championship and as a one-time National League leader in shutouts and earned-run average. Yet he's been a tough luck guy more often than not.

He shut out the New York Yankees 2-0 with an eight-hitter in the seventh game of the 1955 World Series, and he led the NL with six shutouts and a 2.66 ERA in 1957 (after a hitch in the Navy). Last year, however, was his first without serious injury and he hit his major league high with 13 victories. But he also dipped to his low in defeats with 15-five by one run, two by a pair of runs—as the Dodgers finished seventh in Los Angeles.

Now he's back trying to beat the tough-luck jinx again, and at the moment he's the ace of the Dodger staff with a 5-2 record after pitching the best game of his career Monday for a two-hit, 6-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants. It was his third straight success.

Podres had a no-hitter for 7 1/3 innings, then gave up consecutive singles by Daryl Spencer and Bob Schmidt. The Dodgers' third double play saved his shutout.

That pushed Los Angeles within .002 percentage points of idle third place—Pittsburgh. Both are 3 1/2 games behind first place Milwaukee, beaten 7-3 at Philadelphia. The Chicago Cubs belted St. Louis 9-4 in the only other game scheduled.

Detroit defeated Kansas City 4-3 in the only American League game scheduled.

Podres, 26, got all the help he needed for his 14th shutout on a pair of two-run homers by Gil Hodges against losing lefty Mike McCormick. Dick Gray also homered as the Dodgers collected nine hits against the second place Giants.

Podres, regaining confidence in the change-up that made him the World Series hero in '55, faced only 29 batters, struck out seven and walked three. It was the third career shutout over the Giants by Podres, who has pitched seven three-hitters.

The Phils. held to four hits for six innings, chased Bob Buhl (2-3) in a five-run seventh. Gene Freese's pinch two-run double triggered the Phils into the lead in the big frame as they took the weekend series 3-2. Don Cardwell won his first in three decisions getting Ray Semproch's mopup help over the last two frames. They blanked the Braves on three hits through the last five innings.

The Cubs, who had lost four straight, three to the Cards, scored two in the first, then put it away at St. Louis on Jim Marshall's three-run homer in the second off losing reliever Ernie Broglio (0-3). Bobby Thomson and Dale Long also homered for the Cubs. Rookie Bob Anderson (3-3), who had lost three straight, won it with Bill Henry's three-innings of one-hit relief.

The Jaycees became the only undefeated team left in the North State loop yesterday as they knocked off previously unbeaten Lions, 9-1, at the Elm Street Park.

Register of the Lions and the Jaycees' Vincent hooked up in a scoreless pitching duel for three innings as the two league leaders battled it out.

The Jaycees broke the ice in the top half of the fourth with two runs and then the Lions defense fell apart in the sixth as the Jaycees pushed across seven runs.

Vincent's bid for a shutout was ruined in the bottom half of the sixth when a double by Hudson and a single by Joyner scored a run.

Jones connected with a double in the big sixth inning for the Jaycees but four Lion errors accounted for most of the runs.

The winners took advantage of four walks and singles by Vincent and Planagan for their tie-breaking runs in the fourth inning.

Kiwanis and VFW will be trying to escape the North State cellar this afternoon as they battle in the only Little League action. Action shifts back to the Tar Heel loop tomorrow with Elks meeting Pepsi-Cola.

Bynum And Harrison Earn All-Star Team Positions

ELIZABETH CITY — Pitcher Merrill Bynum and catcher Aubrey Harrison of Greenville's Rose High were named to the North-eastern All-Star team yesterday in a meeting of the coaches held in Elizabeth City.

The 14-man selection by the coaches saw Kinston and Jacksonville place four men each on the team while Greenville and conference champion Elizabeth City had two each.

Bynum doubled as a pitcher and outfielder this spring. He was the club's leading extra base hitter and finished with a .470 average. His pitching mark was 5-3.

The senior right-hander is playing legion ball with Kinston this summer and plans to enter East Carolina College next fall. He was also a member of the Rose High basketball team.

Bynum's battery mate, Aubrey Harrison, was the defensive spark for the Phantoms and was no slouch at the plate, batting over .300.

Harrison is just a freshman and has a lot of baseball left at Rose High.

Players selected were:

Pitchers Pat McDowell, Elizabeth City; Vic Garrison, Jacksonville, and Merrill Bynum, Greenville.

Catchers Benny Riddick, Elizabeth City and Bill Harrison, Greenville.

First-baseman James Hearn, Kinston; second-baseman Tillman King, Kinston; shortstop Donnie Rhyne, Jacksonville; third-baseman Bobby Gray, Roanoke Rapids; and utility infielder Pete Watkins, Kinston.

Tokyo Will Host 1964 Olympics

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—Tokyo today was chosen for the site of the 1964 Olympic Games and Innsbruck, Austria, for the winter games.

Tokyo will be the first oriental host to the international sporting competition.

Backers of Detroit, who have been trying to bring the games to the Michigan city for 20 years, were much disappointed at the Tokyo victory. But they said they would be back to try for the 1968 games.

Their heaviest competition then is likely to come from Vienna, Buenos Aires and Santiago, Chile.

The International Olympic Committee voted overwhelmingly for Innsbruck in the Austrian Alps only a few miles from the Brenner Pass. The Austrian resort won 49 of the 58 ballots, the other nine going to Calgary, in Canada.

Innsbruck lost by only one vote to Squaw Valley, Calif., in the 1955 voting for the 1960 games.

Tokyo was chosen on the first ballot, but the Olympic Committee refused to say at once how many votes each of the contenders received.

Vienna and Brussels had competed with Tokyo and Detroit.

Dr. J. B. Cummings, Chairman of the North State Athletic Committee and professor at East Carolina College, presided at the meeting.

Recognition was given to the teams winning the spring sports titles. They were East Carolina (Baseball and Tennis), Elton (Golf) and Catawba (Track).

A bill was introduced which would enable a athlete to become eligible after 18 weeks instead of a year but was defeated.

The YMCA in Lexington was once again chosen as the site for the North State Basketball Tournament and money was allotted.

Moses Crutchfield, member of the Greensboro Daily News Sports staff, for the publishing of a brochure covering the North State sports.

The next North State meeting will be held in the fall.

CHAPTER 6

Only a few years older than I, thought Mark. Thirty, thirty-two, perhaps. He stepped forward to introduce himself to Fleur's brother.

"I am honored, Mr. Travers," Guy Constant acknowledged.

Like Fleur, his body was excellently proportioned but his face did not resemble hers in any way. It was a long, narrow face that, even when smiling, looked harsh.

Where the shape of her mouth betrayed generosity, his was set in a thin, almost bloodless line. His nose was slightly crooked and a little too large, and his dark eyes had a faraway, inward look.

"I didn't know I was so famous, or that anybody cared."

Mark returned the smile. "You don't really mean that."

"But I do. And it isn't modesty. If you want to know the truth, it's bitterness."

His voice was melodious and, like Fleur's, very soft.

"The public reads my books, yes, they come to my lectures, yes, but when I make a plea for the money which is so badly needed to expand my work, then, all of a sudden, they are no longer interested. They'd much rather buy themselves some snorkels and fins and do their own diving. They think more of the sport than of the science. And without my motion pictures, I assure you, they would neither buy my books nor pay to hear me lecture."

"I wonder," said Mark, "if you are right. I should think . . ."

but Guy Constant apparently never let the other finish.

"I'll be delighted to give you an interview," he said, "but not today. How about tomorrow? Because on Monday I have to be in Marseilles."

Mark realized that he had to give up all hope of seeing Fleur now, for Guy Constant was already ushering him past the group of old women as though they didn't exist, and hurrying him down the crude steps of the flowered terrace. But once they had reached Mark's car, he apologized.

"Forgive me for not introducing you, but I wanted to save them the embarrassment of not being properly dressed. Yes, indeed."

He laughed with gentle mockery. "All has to be very proper, very formal. Maybe you have heard that my grandmother was a Spanish aristocrat who created quite a scandal in her time by marrying a simple Mr. Constant. Well, they can't forget the past, or won't. But then, it's all they have. One must be tolerant."

It seemed to be a family trait to be very frank when it came to airing grievances. "Besides," said Guy Constant, and now his apologetic smile made him resemble Fleur, "they are all violently anti-American, for the simple reason that, for years, we have had to put the big house to Americans to make both ends meet. So don't mind anything they may, or may not say the next time you come. You came through the park, didn't you? Well, the other way is quicker. When did you say you'd come?"

"Whenever is most convenient for you."

"Three o'clock tomorrow afternoon."

"Fine. See you then."

Driving off, Mark glanced at the clock on the dashboard. Five minutes to ten. He would be late. At least twenty minutes late. Surprise made him frown sharply. How could he have risked being late in a situation like this, when the time element might be of the utmost importance? He knew only too well.

Because, like a high-school boy, he had let himself be attracted to a girl. Because she had set his imagination spinning, he had lost valuable time.

He braked sharply. Having paid no attention to where he was going, he had nearly passed the sharp curve that cut from the Moyenne-Corniche in the Route de la Turbie. Looking down to his right, he saw the medieval village of Roqueburne, with its famous castle, and recalled his enchantment when he had first visited it. His eyes wandered.

To the east lay the Italian border.

er. Genoa, he thought. Rome. He had always wanted to spend a year in Rome. Would Fleur like Rome?

He caught himself sharply. What was the matter with him that he included her in his plans, a girl he hardly knew? Again he saw her face, suddenly serious, resignation clouding her eyes.

She had to be encouraged to break away from her family—what an odd lot they were—to live her own life. Well, how was he going to do it if he didn't find Timagad?

He would not be a free man until he had done his small share in the fight against the terror that had killed his father, and had fulfilled his promise to Philippe.

He drove as fast as he could up the Mont Agel. Here the country was barren. Nothing but rubble and scree on either side of the narrow road which led in hairpin bends up to the golf course, Monaco's radio station and the fort where the Germans had entrenched themselves during the war. There were hardly any houses.

Why had Corinne Chaval chosen the links as the spot to meet him? He could hear her sultry voice as he had heard it yesterday over the telephone.

"You'll be surprised to know that I've taken up golf again, seriously. One meets such amusing people. I'll introduce you to one of them. And I like the view from the clubhouse. On a clear day you can see the Alps, all covered with snow. Yes, I play regularly, every day at ten o'clock. It's healthier and less expensive than gambling. You'd better come before my new friend leaves."

Another steep curve. Mark shifted into first gear, drove around the bend and was waved to a stop by a policeman. "Sorry, sir, there's been an accident. You can't pass until the photographers are through taking pictures."

There was quite a group of on-lookers—four policemen, a girl with two mules, a couple of soldiers, caddies from the golf links, although they were a mile away, people who had been stopped, like him, men and women in sports clothes, three boys, obviously German, wearing leather shorts, loaded with heavy knapsacks and an assortment of cameras, and a couple of Italians on a motorcycle.

What happened?

"They say her scarf strangled her," one of the soldiers answered. "The end must have caught in the wheel, see?"

He pointed to the left back wheel. A piece of Corinne's scarf was wound tightly around one of the spokes. Its torn end hung limp.

One was a small, fat man; the other was thin, tall, with sleepy eyes. A cigarette dangled from his lips. As he pushed past him, Mark could smell the man's sickeningly sweet hair lotion. "It's a wonder the car came to a halt at all," somebody was saying.

A bright red Jaguar blocked the road, its nose rammed into the mountain. Half-hanging over the low door, her head dangling, her face almost hidden by her silvery hair, lay a woman. Knotted around her neck was a long blue scarf. Mark's throat went dry.

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Even a dog is entitled to his day in court. A Long Island judge ordered one for Tinker Belle, a seven-month-old black and beige female mongrel.

William Molyneux Sr., 49, of Levittown, N.Y., claims Tinker Belle trampled his flowers. Police claim he refused to return her to her owner, Peter M. Sevilla Jr., 33, unless Sevilla agreed to take her to the pound. Molyneux has pleaded innocent to a charge of petty larceny. The case comes up next month. The dog was ordered brought into court then.

Little Progress In Filling Vacant Judgeship

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH — Not much progress has been made in the matter of filling the vacancy in judgeship of the Eastern District of North Carolina Federal court. It is expected that Attorney General William Rogers will recommend to President Eisenhower the appointment of Algernon Butler of Clinton, but the recommendation has not been made.

The situation involves factional Republican politics, as well as possible inter-party shenanigans involving the two Democratic Senators from North Carolina. It has some very interesting angles.

When Judge Don Gilliam announced some months ago he would retire this summer it became obvious that President Eisenhower would be called upon to appoint a new judge. Naturally, it was expected the appointee would be a Republican resident in the district. First question to arise was whether the Democratic majority in the Senate, especially the two Democratic Senators from North Carolina, would agree to confirm any Republican or seek to hold the place open until a Democratic President might come into office and name one of his own party members. It seemed to be pretty generally agreed that such delay would not be justified, because no Democrat can come into the presidency before January 20, 1961 — and prospects for that eventually admittedly are less than they appeared to be last year.

Next question was who the Republican in the state would endorse for the position. There were suggestions and abortive efforts to let Republican leaders in the district pick the nominee. They gave tentative endorsement to Julian Gaskill of Goldsboro, incumbent district attorney.

Subsequently the top brass of the Republican state organization — William Cobb of Morganton, state chairman; J. E. Boyhill of Lenoir and Mrs. Louis Rogers of Charlotte, members of the national committee, proposed the name of Algernon Butler of Clinton, scion of a family long prominent in Republican circles and himself a veteran party warhorse. Since all three of the top officials live in the West, some Eastern partisans cried "foul." Several Eastern leaders are still scrapping for their privilege to recommend the judge.

It is learned on good authority that the usual FBI investigation of prospective high ranking Federal appointees has been confined to checking the record of Butler, without attention to any other suggested nominee. Also heard, from less responsible or informed sources, is that neither of the North Carolina Senators has been contacted with respect to probable confirmation of any judicial appointment. These same sources, however, note that Senator Sam Ervin, senior of U.S. Senator from North Carolina and a ranking member of the judiciary committee which will have to pass on the appointment, lives in the home town of Chairman Cobb, in an adjoining county to Committeeman Boyhill and in the same congressional district with Committeewoman Rogers. As a Democrat he has no political "cruck" with his Republican neighbors but he likes them personally. Opinion prevails that he is likely to go along with their recommendation — unless he can see a chance to get a Democrat named as judge.

For these reasons it appears likely that Algernon Butler will be the next judge of the Eastern North Carolina Federal Court district.

Man Arrested In Knife Attack

The operator of the Busy Bee Cafe was severely cut Monday allegedly by a man he had ordered out of the store earlier in the day.

George Nixon, 36, received cuts on the left arm, shoulder, back and chest, which required 26 stitches to close.

Police arrested Hubert Langley, 39-year-old Negro of 1717 South Pitt St. and charged him with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill in connection with the case.

Nixon told investigating officers he had told Langley to stay out of the restaurant earlier in the morning. The injured man said Langley returned around noon and the cutting took place in the kitchen.

Nixon was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

Langley was placed in City Jail.

Local Pastor At Lake Junaluska

Howard V. Boling, pastor of the Greenville Seventh-day Adventist Church, will leave today to join other Adventist ministers from North and South Carolina at Lake Junaluska to prepare for the church's annual two-state Bible Conference.

The Conference opens Sunday night, May 31. Members from all churches in the two-state area are expected to attend this year's conference. An attendance of 3,500 is anticipated during the course of the one-week convocation.

A ministers' planning council is scheduled for Friday and Saturday preceding the Bible Conference. This will be directed by Hubert V. Reed, Charlotte, president of the Carolina Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

Pastor Boling will attend this council to assist in planning the week-long conference. His return to Greenville will be about June 7.

TIRESOME OVERSIGHT

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Fred Halleman ended up with one spare newspaper after he took over his ailing son's paper route one morning. The father retraced the entire route before he realized the paper was the one for his house.

Considered Plan And Rejected It

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Hodges says he and his advisers considered a pay-as-you-go plan for collecting corporation income taxes and the idea "was not considered practical."

Hodges told his news conference Monday—in answer to questions—this was why he had not recommended the plan for corporations when he proposed the withholding method of collecting personal income taxes.

He emphasized, however, that "I don't want to affect anything that the General Assembly is doing."

The Senate Finance Committee voted last week to put corporations under the pay-as-you-go plan but later reversed its decision after administration forces allied against the corporations plan.

Asked how he felt about a dog racing bill to be voted on by the House Finance Committee Wednesday, Hodges said, "I have had nothing whatever to do with the bill one way or another."

He lauded a Joint Constitution subcommittee for working out a compromise plan for reorganizing the state's court system to provide a uniform court system to be administered by the chief justice of the State Supreme Court.

Hodges said, "I hope the General Assembly will accept it. I think the subcommittee has done a magnificent job."

Welfare Cut?

RALEIGH (AP)—A Moore County legislator has warned that unless more money is appropriated state welfare payments will be cut substantially.

Sen. Wilbur Currie declared Monday that North Carolina will lose close to four million dollars in federal matching funds if proposed cuts in spending for the State Department of Public Welfare are approved.

The Joint Appropriations subcommittee cut about $500,000 off the amount recommended by welfare assistance programs by a study group headed by Currie.

Currie said that under proposed spending, grants to needy old folks, dependent children and the permanently and totally disabled would be slashed as much as 10 per cent below current levels.

Do FALSE TEETH Rock, Slide or Slip?

"Tell those fish to keep bitin', boy. I'm coming down tomorrow!"

Man oh man! what a Long Distance call can bring! This one means fun, fresh air and biting fish — an angler's dream. Somebody is mighty glad his cronies picked up that phone and called.

Whatever your reason for calling Long Distance, you save when you call after 6 P.M., and all day Sundays, too. Save even more by calling station-to-station — that's when you will talk to anyone who answers the telephone you are calling. And remember, calling by number saves time.

Appointment Due To Pigeon Pitch

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—There's no one with endurance like the man who sells insurance, according to an old ditty, and Don Finen-game proves the point.

The young salesman had been trying for some time to make an appointment with advertising executive Charles L. Andes. No luck. The other day Finen-game had a pigeon messenger deliver a cage containing a pigeon to Andes' office.

On the outside of the cage was a letter outlining Finen-game's sales pitch.

The letter ended: "If you are interested in discussing our insurance programs further, just throw our representative out the window."

Andes did, the pigeon flew home and Finen-game got the appointment.

ABC Enforcers Raid Four Stills

Four 50-gallon stills were destroyed and a Washington, N. C. man was arrested yesterday afternoon by Pitt and Beaufort County ABC officers about seven miles west of Washington, on Aggie's Run.

According to Chief Pitt ABC officer J. M. Ward, 60 sticks of dynamite were used to destroy the four stills, the 1,650 gallons of mash which was found in forty 50-gallon barrels, and the 60-gallon gas-heated boiler.

Also found at the scene were 86 gallons of freshly run spirits, 10 cases of jars, two water pumps and five gas tubes.

Officers arrested Spencer Peel, 41-year-old Washington Negro on charges of operating the illegal distillery and possessing the non-tax-paid whiskey. He is scheduled for trial in Washington Records Court.

Ward said the still was in operation and from appearances, it was the first time it had been run. Assisting the Beaufort County officers were Ward, H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor, all of the Pitt ABC office.

Little Progress In Assault Probe

Police say little progress has been made in the case of an attempted rape of a white woman here early Monday morning.

According to investigation, Mrs. Roland Mayo, 305 Raleigh Ave. was attacked by a Negro man about 2:30 a.m. Monday morning while she was sleeping in her home.

Officers say the man gained entrance to the home and attempted to rape the woman who was sleeping alone in the house.

Officers said Mrs. Mayo told them the Negro was scared off when she told him she heard someone coming in the house. He then reportedly ran from the front door of the dwelling.

Bloodhounds brought in at daybreak were unable to find the assailant.

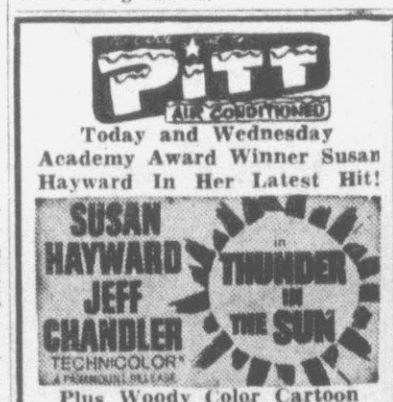

Doctors said this morning that Mrs. Mayo received several bruises and scratches about the head and several small scratches on her back but was in good condition today.

No other disturbance has been reported in the neighborhood and investigation in the case is continuing.
