President To Talk With Ministers On Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Christian A. Herter will discuss the Geneva conference negotiations with the foreign ministers of Russia, Britain and France.

The President and Herter today arranged a White House conference for 10:30 a.m., EDT, Thursday.

They will meet with the Soviet Union's Andrei Gromyko, Britain's Selwyn Lloyd and France's Maurice Couve de Murville.

Herter and the other three foreign ministers flew to Washington from Geneva for the funeral of John Foster Dulles today.

Western diplomats had seen the visit as an opportunity for such a conference as the foreign ministers arrived at the airport.

The Geneva negotiations have been pretty much on dead center in efforts to resolve East-West differences.

Announcement of plans for the White House conference came shortly after disclosure that Eisenhower will be host at a luncheon Thursday for the foreign ministers and high officials and dignitaries of other countries who are here for the Dulles funeral.

The President met for 45 minutes this morning with West Germany's Konrad Adenauer, also here for the funeral.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, announced plans for the luncheon.

Before the conference with Adenauer the President had a 30-minute conference with Australia's Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, who was in this country on other business as well as to attend the Dulles funeral. Menzies favors an East-West summit meeting.

Italy's Foreign Minister Giuseppe Pella, flew in shortly after midnight for the funeral.

Others in Washington or on the way included the foreign ministers of Belgium, Austria and Japan, and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Nationalist Chinese generalissimo.

Paul Henri Spaak, secretary general of the North Atlantic

Treaty Organization, also was on hand to pay tribute to Dulles, whom he called "a great secretary of state and a great man."

Later in the morning Foreign Minister J. M. A. H. Luns of the Netherlands flew in with his Austrian counterpart, Leopold Figl.

First of today's contingent was Gromyko, full of praise for Dulles, his old adversary at the conference table. He described the former secretary of state, dead of cancer at 71, as "an outstanding statesman, outstanding diplomat."

Gromyko, who made the trip from Geneva by commercial airliner, flew in from New York.

A little over half an hour behind him U.S. Secretary of State

Christian A. Herter flew in by Military Air Transport plane with British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville as passengers.

Herter said the Geneva East-West talks have "made only small progress."

"It is my hope that in the negotiating sessions that lie ahead sufficient progress can be made to justify the United States in going to a summit conference," he said.

Lloyd steered clear of world politics.

"It is sad that the occasion for this visit to Washington should be the funeral of my friend and colleague, John Foster Dulles," he said.

Couve de Murville expressed sorrow on his own part and that of his government. He said his tribute will be paid "in the spirit of that long friendship which unites France and the United States, and to the strengthening of which the late secretary of state contributed so much."

During the 18-hour flight Herter, Lloyd and De Murville reviewed prospects for persuading the Soviet Union to offer enough concessions at Geneva to insure a German settlement.

Asst. Secretary of State Andrew Berding, a passenger aboard the plane, told newsmen the three

Tobacco Price Stabilizing Bill Backers Meet To Map Strategy For House Action

WASHINGTON (AP)—Backers of a bill to stabilize tobacco prices meet today to map out strategy for winning House approval.

The Senate has passed a similar bill but strong opposition is reported to have developed among House members and along party lines.

A showdown on the issue was postponed recently by House Democratic leaders.

A number of Republicans representing tobacco districts were said to have been invited to the meeting today.

Chairman Watkins M. Abbt (D-Va.) of the House Agriculture Tobacco subcommittee said the idea is to plan strategy.

"We want to plan how we should go about getting the bill through the House," he said. "We are hopeful it can be brought up Monday under suspension of the rules." Such House procedure requires two-thirds vote of those present for passage, and no amendments can be offered.

The bill, offered by Rep. W. Pat Jennings (D-Va.), is designed to keep prices stabilized and to aid in disposal of tobacco overseas. Representatives of the industry have contended the present prices are losing foreign markets at a time when world production is increasing.

Abbt said he believes prospects for passage are good.

"I'm bound to believe the House will pass it—it's a good bill and a step in the right direction. The whole purpose is to protect our export trade."

The American Farm Bureau has opposed the bill and has recommended instead a two year freeze on prices.

"The only difference between their proposal and ours," Abbt said, "is that theirs is for two years and ours is permanent. Congress, of course, can change the program any time it sees fit, but we don't want to be compelled to change by adopting only a two-year freeze."

Meanwhile, Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-NC) said Tuesday he was confident Congress will not allow Agriculture Secretary Benson to take action that Jordan said would destroy the tobacco price-support program.

"I am confident Congress will not allow him to get a stranglehold in spite of his efforts to destroy the tobacco program," Jordan said.

Jordan introduced the bill passed by the Senate. Jordan's bill also had the backing of the industry.

Lawmakers In Middle On MH-30

RALEIGH (AP) — The hottest farm issue yet to develop for the 1959 General Assembly today was expected to ignite debate on the Senate floor.

The burning question before the senators was whether to outlaw the use of maleic hydrazide, commonly called MH-30, a chemical used to control the growth of tobacco suckers.

Sen. D. J. Rose of Wayne, Senate Agriculture Committee chairman, introduced the bill to make use of the chemical a misdemeanor, and to impose curbs on its sale and advertising. Rose steered the measure out of his committee with a favorable vote despite mounting opposition.

The proposal set rank and file farmers against leaders of farm organizations and left the lawmakers in the middle.

While the growers described MH-30 as a boon which cut labor costs and raised production, tobacco marketing experts contended the chemical harms leaf quality and threatens the loss of foreign markets. Buying companies went on record with the opinion that MH-30 has a harmful effect on tobacco aroma and flavor, and declared they would avoid such leaf if possible.

The U.S. Rubber Co., manufacturer of maleic hydrazide, staged a concentrated campaign against the bill. The firm brought forward spokesmen who asserted that proper use of the chemical would not hurt quality. The company called for an educational approach to teach farmers how to apply MH-30.

Pension Fund Up For 3rd Reading

RALEIGH (AP) — The House was expected to give third reading approval today to a bill calling for an insurance premium tax to finance a firemen's pension fund.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. J. Y. Jordan of Buncombe, passed the House on second reading Tuesday 90-21 after an amendment was approved to exempt policies sold in unprotected areas.

The bill would levy a 1 per cent premium tax on fire and lightning policies to help finance the pension fund.

Jordan said he was compelled to oppose the amendment offered by Rep. Charles Hostetter of Hoke. He added, "I'm doing it on the advice of counsel. They are of the opinion that the amendment will kill the bill (if it is tested before the state Supreme Court)."

The high court threw out a 1957 pension fund act on the grounds that it violated the Constitution by exempting certain insurance companies from the premium tax.

The House already has passed and sent to the Senate a bill to set up the machinery act for the pension fund.

A third measure, now before the Appropriations Committee, would draw out of the general fund the money collected under the premium tax.

Bills Killed

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's educational structure held today in the face of a two-pronged attack which would have sworn power from the superintendent of public instruction and placed laymen on the textbook commission.

The House Education Committee killed the two bills during a business-like 90-minute meeting.

A 20-17 roll call vote did away with a bill by Rep. Watts Hill of Durham and others to make the appointed State Board of Education superior to the elected superintendent of public instruction.

A heavier voice majority stamped out Lenoir Rep. Rachel Davis' proposal to place laymen on the Textbook Commission in an effort to find books with less social overtones in subjects dealing with social studies.

Greensboro To Combine White, Negro School

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Greensboro School Board has approved a plan to combine a Negro and a white school into a single unit.

The board said Tuesday night that at the close of the school term next week, children at Pearson Street (Negro) School will be assigned to the white Caldwell School.

Both schools are in the same block and adjacent to one another. Parents of several Negro children have a case pending in U.S. District Court asking reassignment of their children to Caldwell School.

Under the plan, the children now at Caldwell are expected to be reassigned there. However, a board spokesman said that parents of children of either race may ask for reassignment to another school under the state's school laws.

School Supt. P. J. Weaver said the Negro parents' case was not a factor in prompting the merger.

The board voted to take the step, he said, because both buildings are on the same campus and because enrollment is increasing at the Pearson Street school while dropping at the white school.

About 300 pupils attend the Caldwell school. The Negro school has an enrollment of 220.

"This is a community in transition," Weaver said.

The superintendent added that both buildings will be utilized in the new operation.

There has been token desegregation at some schools in Greensboro, and in Charlotte and Winston-Salem during the past two years. A total of 11 Negro children have attended previously all-white schools in the three cities during the two terms.

A school at Goldsboro attended by children of Air Force personnel also is desegregated.

Nikita Thru Missile Ba

MOSCOW (AP)—Nikita Khrushchev says the Soviet Union is ready to set up rocket bases in Albania and Bulgaria to match any the United States may establish in Italy or Greece.

The Soviet premier, visiting Albania, repeated an earlier Soviet proposal for a ban on nuclear weapons in the Balkan peninsula to make it "a peninsula of peace without any missiles or nuclear weapons."

He warned Italy and Greece that U.S. rockets based on their territory "will attract our rockets as a magnet."

"These bases are clearly spearheaded against the Soviet Union, against Albania and other Socialist (Communist) countries," he said in a speech Tuesday in Tirana, the Albanian capital.

Reveals 3-Phase Commencement

A three-phase commencement program at Junius H. Rose High School was announced today by Principal O. E. Dowd.

The commencement activities will begin Friday at 8 p.m. with the annual Class and Awards Night. The Rev. Thomas M. Davis will preach the Baccalaureate Sermon Sunday night at 8 o'clock, and diplomas will be presented to 111 seniors in exercises beginning at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Each of the three programs will be conducted in the high school gymnasium.

Senior Class President Louis Arthur will preside at the Class and Awards Night program which will include short addresses by Larry Carawan and Dorothy Davis, scholastic leaders of the class. Dowd and Superintendent J. H. Rose will present awards to the seniors.

Dr. E. B. Aycock, chairman of the Greenville City Board of Education, and Dowd will present diplomas to the graduates.

Low Bid Entered By Kinston Firm

RALEIGH — A low bid of $18,659 was entered yesterday by Barrus Construction Co. of Kinston for the contract to widen, resurface and install curbs and gutters on 0.49 miles of Greene Street in the Meadowbrook section of Greenville.

The section of Greene Street involved in the project runs from Moore Street to a point approximately 250 feet north of Morgan Street.

Third Delay In Satellite-Firing

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP)—Technical difficulties have forced a third postponement of firing of Discoverer III into north-south orbit with four mice passengers.

The postponement came Tuesday after six hours and 15 minutes of delays blamed on the weather and technical troubles.

Foreign Aid Program Has Nudge To Economic Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's foreign aid program had a strong nudge today in the direction of economic rather than military assistance.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee provided the change of emphasis as it approved late Tuesday a foreign aid authorization bill cut $266,800,000 below President Eisenhower's request for $3,980,000,000.

The measure, subject to both House and Senate action and to a change of figures in a later appropriation bill, would authorize new spending of $3,642,000,000 plus about 21 million dollars of left-over funds.

The cut was only slightly below last year's authorization of $3,656,400,000.

The over-all reduction, however, does not tell the full story the committee plainly intended to convey to the administration.

It raised by 100 million dollars Eisenhower's proposed 700-million-dollar allocation for loans to help develop backward countries.

And—counter to the trend of foreign aid votes in the House in recent years — it made major cuts in military items.

It was understood the committee also agreed to emphasize in its report that the military reductions are to be made primarily in arms aid to Latin American and other countries not considered to be the potential firing line — as are the NATO countries, South Korea and Nationalist China.

Eisenhower's general military aid item was cut by 160 million dollars — from $1,600,000,000 to $1,440,000,000.

The related defense support item, for cash aid to countries straining their budgets through their military efforts, was slashed from 835 million to 75 million dollars.

The President's contingency fund, to be used on his authority in emergencies, was cut from 200 to 100 million.

One economic aid item, providing for grants, not loans, was trimmed. This is the special assistance fund, cut $21,800,000 from Eisenhower's recommendation, to an even 250 million.

But the committee voted the full 179½ million dollars Eisenhower had recommended for technical assistance—the "know-how" program to help underdeveloped countries get started on economic improvements.

Actual funds for foreign aid are provided in separate appropriations legislation. These cannot exceed, but may well cut below, the figures in the authorization bill Congress finally passes.

Chairman Thomas E. Morgan foreign aid program, called the committee-approved bill a sound one and said he would try to arrange a House vote the second (D-Pa.), who has favored a strong week in June.

Farmville Man Served Warrants

Warrants charging secret assault with intent to kill and larceny of a pistol have been served on Jack Blount, 61-year-old Farmville man, who is being held in Pitt County Jail.

Blount is charged as the assailant of F. W. Satterthwaite of Farmville who is in Pitt Memorial Hospital recovering from three bullet wounds. Satterthwaite was wounded Monday morning in a shooting incident at a service station in the Farmville business district.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said this morning that the warrants were drawn in Farmville Municipal Court. The sheriff added that Blount is being held without bond, pending recovery of Satterthwaite.

Dulles Going To Final Rest Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles, admired by his free world friends and respected by his Communist foes in the cold war, goes to a final rest today after six turbulent years as secretary of state.

Solemn services in Washington's huge National Cathedral. A horse-drawn caisson into Arlington National Cemetery. The muffled drums. The burial services. The echo of taps across the monument-covered hills.

Thus went the plans for the official funeral which President Eisenhower arranged to attend along with representatives from nations large and small. With them Dulles had worked to preserve the world's peace until cancer ended his career and caused his death Sunday at the age of 71.

Ordinary citizens of his own country also honored Dulles as they streamed by the thousands past his mahogany casket, lying in state in a chapel of the cathedral. Through the night they came to see, to pause, perhaps to pray in the flower-banked chapel.

The nation shares in the final rites to be telecast at 3:30 p.m. EDT from the cemetery by the NBC and CBS networks.

The Senate adjourned for the day so its members could attend as a group. House leaders announced a recess at the time of the funeral.

Top officials from many lands flocked to Washington to pay their final respects. West Germany's chancellor Konrad Adenauer arrived Tuesday night.

A plane from Geneva carried Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, French Foreign Minister Maurice Douve de Murville and Britain's Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd from the Big Four conference on Germany, adjourned two days for the occasion.

The Soviet Union's Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, an opponent of Dulles over the conference table, flew in a commercial plane.

Diplomats, the 23 honorary pallbearers composed of prominent citizens and a special honor guard of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were to take their seats as the hour approached.

Solicitors On Full-Time Basis Is Given Brush-Off

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Senate killed Tuesday a bill to put district solicitors on a full-time basis and increase their salaries.

It was the first court reform proposal to be tested on the floor of the House or Senate. Other proposals dealing with court reforms are before committees.

The Senate voted 24-21 to table the bill, which would have placed solicitors under supervision of the attorney general and prohibited them from private law practice.

The proposal was recommended by a State Bar Assn. committee headed by Sen. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg. Bell argued strongly for the bill.

Sen. Bunn Frank of Brunswick contended it would cost the state $214,000 in the next biennium to prevent good lawyers from practicing and would fail to solve the problem of unequal work load for solicitors.

After tabling the measure, the Senate applied the legislative clincher, which would require a two-thirds majority before the Senate could reconsider the bill.

In other legislative developments:

A Senate Judiciary committee gave a favorable report to a bill to double minimum personal injury insurance requirements under the Motor Vehicles Financial Responsibility Act. This would require insurance for a minimum of $10,000 against injury to a single person and $20,000 for two or more persons.

The House Committee on Elections and Election Laws killed a bill under which the state would have helped counter in the purchase of voting machines.

N. C. Textbooks Hotly Debated In H

By BUNNY HARRIS

Reflector Raleigh Bureau

RALEIGH — Four child's textbooks may be "deadly dull" but they have turned the 1959 Legislature into a battleground.

The current fight is being fought in the House Education Committee which has heard shouts of "subversion" on the one hand and protests of "censorship" on the other.

And pushing to the foreground two basic charges:

The first, that a bill dealing with the Textbook Commission rises out of conflict between Dr. Charles Carroll as Superintendent of Public Instruction and Dallas Herring as chairman of the State Board of Education.

Sparking the controversy is a bill introduced by Dr. Rachel Davis of Lenoir which would revise the membership of the Textbook Commission.

At the present time, the Commission is composed only of professional educators — school superintendents, principals and teachers. The bill would permit only eight of its members to be professional educators. The remaining four would be laymen.

This commission only recommends which textbooks should be used in the public schools. The Board of Education can accept or reject their recommendations since it makes the actual adoptions.

But since the voice of the Commission carries considerable weight, its members are looking upon the bill as a slur on their ability and professional integrity — and fear that laymen on the Commission would attempt to censor textbooks which may run counter to personal beliefs or prejudices. A.B. Gibson, chairman of the Commission and superintendent of schools at Laurinburg, maintains that the Textbook Commission must stay clear of "political pressures."

He pointed to the DAR's examination of textbooks — 51 out of the 165 which they examined were approved.

"The one's which they rejected read like 'Who's Who in American Literature,'" he said. "And Alabama just banned a little book on rabbits because one rabbit was white and the other was black."

This fear of attempted censorship and of political pressures resurfaced over and over in Gibson's comments.

He added: "If we cannot stand a little controversy in our schools, we are doomed as a free people because we do not believe in our teachers, or our children or our

With Farm Women

By MAIDRED MORRIS
(Items this week from Hoke, Buncombe, Hyde, McDowell, Greenville, and Stokes Counties).

Upholstery Workshop
The inside of an upholstered chair is no longer a mystery to the Home Demonstration Club women in Hoke County.

Recently five chairs were stripped down to the wooden frames at a workshop. New webbing was put in and the springs were re-tied. New stuffing and padding were used and each chair covered with muslin.

Each woman present made sure she understood each step so that she could teach others in her community. With the final top cover of fresh upholstery material, the chairs looked like new.

According to Miss Josephine Hall, home economics agent, approximately $75 was saved on the five chairs by using the "do it yourself" method.

Conserved Products
Home Demonstration women in Buncombe County can now judge their own conserved products after attending a training meeting. Food conservation leaders actually judged canned goods of vegetables, fruits, pickles, jams, jellies, and preserves. Emphasis was placed on processing temperatures, length of processing time, and use of a pressure cooker as ways of improving standards of conserved products.

Mrs. Mary Ray, home economics agent, says the women are now more conscious of the quality of their conserved products.

Sewing On Ocracoke
Although there is no home economics taught on Ocracoke Island, the girls are learning to sew. Mrs. Jean Ballance, home economics agent in Hyde County, instructs the girls in sewing several times during the year when she visits the island.

The high school girls have recently completed their third lesson and have improved much since their first lesson. One hundred per cent of the girls in grades 6 through 12 attended the classes.

Supplements Income
"If it were necessary I could earn a living using things I have learned through Home Demonstration work," says Mrs. C. M. Woody of McDowell County.

Mrs. Woody supplements her income by chair caning and split bottoming chairs. She learned caning at a workshop three years ago. Since that time she has perfect her skill. Mrs. Bobby English, home economics agent, says Mrs. Woody has put all the information she has received into practice and is helping her friends and neighbors.

Home Beautification Contest
The 1959 Home Beautification Contest in Edgecombe County has 105 participants. Miss Nancy Lewis, assistant home economics agent, says all families are busy improving their yards.

The J. R. Moore and A. H. Lowrance families have undertaken complete now landscaping projects. They involve moving the drive and parking area, hauling in topsoil, grading, leveling and seeding the lawn with recommended grass, es, planting new trees, and screening off part of the yard.

All the families are working hard to beautify their homes.

Your Shopping Dollar
How do you spend your shopping dollar? Home Demonstration Club women in Stokes County now know how to save on their shopping.

Mrs. Gladys Jones, home economics agent, says the women made a list of the ways they could save. The list included: know one's family, take inventory of home supplies and make shopping list, careful consideration of specials, and consider the cost per serving between home conserved foods, fresh, canned, frozen, and dried foods.

Senior Class Given Dance

ROBERSONVILLE—Mrs. Irving Respass of Plymouth and Mrs. Jackie Marslander of Williamston, sisters of Miss Grace Coltrain of Robersonville, entertained the members of the senior class of R. H. S. at a dance Friday night. During intermission assorted sandwiches, potato chips, cookies, mints, nuts and lemonade were served from a table covered with a white cloth centered with an arrangement of roses.

Church Supper

A supper will be held at the Educational Building at Bethany Free Will Baptist Church, Rt. 1, Winterville, Thursday night beginning at 6:30. Stewed and fried fish will be served.

Bowen-Allen Say Wedding Vows

Miss Linda Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pate Allen of Rt. 2, Farmville, became the bride of Kenneth Ray Bowen, son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Bowen of Ormondville, Sunday afternoon in the Ballards Presbyterian Church. Edwin S. Coates officiated with Clifton Rice assisting.

Nuptial music was furnished by Ralph Bowen, organist, and Pat-ty Roberts, soloist. Selections played with "The Rosary," "Al-ways," "Because," "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," Melody of Love," "Indian Love Call," and "Loves Old Sweet Song." Traditional wedding marches were used.

Miss Roberts of Farmville sang "O Promise Me" before the ceremony. The Wedding Prayer was sung as the benediction.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original design created by her mother. The bodice was of Chantilly lace over bridal satin. The neckline was outlined with lace medallions and framed in sequins. It fea-

Garden Club Has Supper

Gay with artistically arranged spring flowers, the home of Mrs. Vance Perkins was the setting for the Greenville Garden Club supper on Friday of last week. Fried chicken, potato salad, snap beans, relishes and lemon tarts were served by the hostesses assisting Mrs. Perkins, Mesdames S. L. Daughtridge, A. C. Howard, J. C. Galloway Jr., J. H. B. Moore, C. C. Hilton, C. M. Jones and L. L. Rivers.

Mrs. P. E. Wells, president of the Greenville Garden Club, thanked the members for their cooperation during the year and reminded them that Garden Therapy was part of the work of the club that could be continued during the summer. She announced two new officers, Mrs. Ralph Brimley as recording secretary and Mrs. M. W. Maxwell as treasurer.

It was reported that the Greenville Garden Club has contacted the legislators in favor of the Highway Billboard Control Bill which comes up for a hearing on Wednesday, May 27.

Members See Demonstration

A demonstration on "Color Coordination" was the topic of the recent meeting of the Sweet Gum Grove Home Demonstration Club. The devotion by Mrs. Margaret Tetterton opened the meeting.

A Master Plan, Mrs. Sue B. May, Home Demonstration Agent, told the members was the main consideration in color coordination. Colors which blend with or accent the original color chosen could be used throughout a house without tiring of the master color. Light colors tend to make a room appear larger while darker colors give the appearance of less space. By using the same color in two small adjoining rooms one can give the impression of spaciousness.

Mrs. John Whichard gave the group some interesting tips on "Freeze It To Save." Mrs. J. C. Meeks gave a report on "Vegetables and Fruits" and a report on the celebration of National Home Demonstration Week in the county and locally was given by Mrs. Eric Whichard.

During the business session, plans were made for the recreational meeting to be a "Hamburger Cookout" at the Community Building in June.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. L. Barnhill and Mrs. Eric Whichard.

Miss Powell Shower Honoree

Miss Margaret Rose Powell, a June Bride, was guest of honor at a miscellaneous shower given by Miss Mamie Chandler on Saturday afternoon.

After an hour of informal conversation reminiscent of college days, gifts were opened and displayed by Miss Powell.

Classmates and college friends who shared in this occasion were: Barbara Davenport, Jan Flory, Nancy Fisher, Brona Foster, Jane Carroll, Ann Howie, Sue Flanagan, Barbara Wilson; and Mrs. Malena Powell, of Bethel. Barbara Miskelly, a student at East Carolina, assisted Miss Chandler in serving refreshments.

tured long tapered sleeves which ended in points over the hands. Tiny self-covered buttons were used on the bodice back and the sleeves. Her shoulder length veil of French illusion was attached to a crown of iridescent sequins over satin. The bride's bouquet was of white carnations.

Mrs. Hildon Ellis, sister of the bride, acted as matron of honor. Miss Annette Haddock of Greenville and Miss Doris Boyd of Greenville and Miss Myrtle Boyd of Belhaven, cousins of the bride, were bridesmaids.

Mrs. Ellis wore a blue crystal-lette dress with full street length skirt. She wore a picture hat of the same material as the dress. She carried an arrangement of carnations.

The other attendants wore dresses in pink designed like that of the matron of honor. Their bouquets were also identical.

Billy Bowen, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were William Allen, brother of the bride, and Billy Caraway.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a sheath dress of baby blue lace over sheen, with matching lace hat. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore a rose lace dress with matching lace hat. She wore a white carnation corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride couple received in the church vestibule.

For a wedding trip to the western part of North Carolina, the new Mrs. Bowen wore a melon-colored dress trimmed in white pique with white accessories and a corsage lifted from the bride's bouquet.

Upon their return, the couple will reside on East Horne Ave., Farmville.

The bride graduated from Maury High School and is now employed by the Formica Flak-board plant in Farmville.

Rehearsal Party
After the rehearsal Saturday night, the parents of the bride entertained at a cake cutting in the recreation hall of the church. The appointed table was covered with a white linen cloth. An arrangement of mixed summer flowers centered the table with lighted candles on either end.

After the bride couple cut the first slice, the mother of the bride groom served the cake to the guests. Punch, mints and nuts were served.

ROBERSONVILLE—Mrs. W. L. Swindell was hostess to the Homemakers' Club recently at the South Broad Street home of her daughter, Mrs. John Tyler.

For the occasion the living room was decorated with two vases of yellow roses.

The president, Mrs. Walter Roberson, called the meeting to order and a brief business session followed. Cards of thanks for flowers were read and plans were made for the next meeting.

During the social hour Mrs. Lester Roebuck won the measuring contest and Mrs. Harvey Roberson received the prize for the life saver game. Mrs. Hattie Hardy was the most adept in numbers. Other prizes were given to Mrs. W. T. House and Mrs. Lena Roberson.

The hostess served potato chips, crackers, salted peanuts, cookies, candy and cold drinks.

Research Park Gets Another Boost

Location of a huge basic research laboratory in North Carolina's Research Triangle is another major step in realizing the dream of Gov. Hodges and other leaders instrumental in founding the Research Park several years ago.

The announcement that Chemstrand Corp., one of the largest producers of chemical fibers, will locate its basic research laboratory in the Research Triangle adds to the importance of North Carolina's new research center both from the standpoint of the state and also from the standpoint of outside industry. It is certain to attract the attention of other large industries of the nation to the facilities which are offered in the North Carolina Research Triangle. It also adds to the importance of North Carolina as a hub of a broad area undergoing vast industrial development.

Research, both basic and applied, has become one of the most important phases of operations with many of the nation's largest industries. It is an operation which is being constantly expanded and one which has become literally the backbone of many large industrial concerns.

The fact that North Carolina has set its sights on attracting the research facilities of both large and small corporations to its Research Triangle is destined to play a major role in furthering the industrial development of the state. By cultivating in the heart of the state a major research center for industries,

Thorough Study Of Court Section

By LYNN NISBET
THOROUGH — The court section of the new constitution has been studied as thoroughly as almost any matter ever presented to the North Carolina Legislature. A 30-member committee of the N.C. Bar Association devoted more than three years to it, and that committee was enlarged for 18 months by an equal number of laymen. A constitutional commission of 15 members appointed by the Governor pursuant to resolution of the 1957 session spent the better part of two years rewriting the constitution. The different versions presented by these study groups were freely discussed at joint meetings of the full Senate and House committees, 23 Senators and 33 Representatives.

After two months of such open discussion, the court section (Article IV) was turned over to a subcommittee of 15 — 5 Senators and 10 Representatives — to codify, consolidate and reconcile the divergent proposals. The subcommittee worked for many days and nights and brought back a revised text to the full committee Tuesday of last week. That new text has been batted around by the joint committee for a total of eight or ten hours — and there remains substantial disagreement among committee members. Further amendments, additions and deletions have been made in the subcommittee product.

It is the hope of the respective chairmen to get an accepted draft of the full new constitution adopted by each committee separately in time to get it printed and reported as a committee substitute early next week — not later than June 3. That historic record would indicate that the proposed text has been as thoroughly studied as possible and represents the composite thinking of more than 100 very able men.

INCOMPLETE — Despite the thoroughness of the 56 members of the two committees who have heard the explanations and had opportunity to discuss and ask questions, the presentation of the constitution still must be made to the full membership of the House and Senate.

An affirmative vote of three-fifths of the entire membership in each house is required to submit a constitutional text to the people. That means 30 Senators and 72 Representatives must vote for it. In other words, if every member of the committee supports the approved text (and that is very doubtful), they must get 7 more Senators and 39 more Representatives to join them before the matter can be passed on for popular vote. If every one of the 50 Senators approves and only 71 Representatives, it will fail, also if every one of the 120 Representatives votes yes, and 21 Senators say "no," the North Carolina will also be assured of pilot plants and probably full production facilities elsewhere within its borders to manufacture items which result from the research which goes on within its borders.

The huge Chemstrand laboratory will, in itself, be another large industry for North Carolina. Of even greater long range importance, however, is the fact that it adds impetus to North Carolina's Research Triangle as a location for the research laboratories of some of the nation's largest industrial concerns.

Keep Eyes On The Ball During Home Stretch

During the legislative home stretch—the pressure of business, the confusion in the rush toward adjournment — is the period in which most poor legislation gets written into law.

It is a natural consequence having to do a tremendous amount of giving attention to major items and having little time to devote to minor items.

North Carolina's legislature apparently is not in the home stretch of the 1959 session. The Joint Appropriations Subcommittee is ready to report to the full committee, and that usually signifies the beginning of the end of a session. During the next two to three weeks before adjournment, legislators in Raleigh will have to give the vast majority of their time to resolving the major money matters for the next biennium. Most other issues will be relegated to a secondary role and will receive less attention than they would have earlier in the session.

Because of this, the danger of poorly written bills, hastily proposed legislation being written into law during the final weeks of the session.

As the 1959 session moves into its final weeks, the citizens as well as the legislators should give more careful attention to the "little matters" which come up for consideration. Otherwise poorly written laws will be adopted and hastily conceived — and altogether impractical compromises may be reached for the sake of getting through the heavy work load which must be handled.

The next few weeks will be the most crucial period of the 1959 session. It is a period in which both the legislators and the citizens must be on their toes to see that no legislation detrimental to the state or its people gets written into law for lack of proper attention.

Held In High Respect By His Friends, Foes

Statesmen from around the world gathered today along with officials and rank and file citizens of the United States to pay their last tribute to John Foster Dulles who for the past six years made and administered this nation's foreign policy.

Though often a controversial figure in high American circles, former Secretary Dulles apparently enjoyed the high esteem of top officials of other nations. His closest allies and his most adamant opponents in the field of international affairs have issued glowing tributes to the hard-working, tough Secretary of State since his death.

Although during his career he was the object of high praise and severe criticism, it is evident that John Foster Dulles was held in high respect by those who liked him and also by those who didn't like him. He was a man of action, a man of decision, and a man who remained steadfast to what he felt right even in the face of heavy odds.

Of such characteristics are great men made.

Important Day To Sec. Dulles

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wednesday, May 27, had been an important day on the calendar of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. He never dreamed how truly important it would be in a more personal sense.

It was to have been the cold war's day of crisis and showdown with the Soviet Union over Berlin. But there is no crisis.

Instead, it is the day of Dulles' funeral with his old-time antagonist and opposite number, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, flying the ocean to pay his last respects to him.

Last Nov. 27 Premier Nikita Khrushchev gave the Western Big Three — the United States, Britain and France — six months to get their troops out of West Berlin or face a showdown. That placed the six months' deadline at May 27.

It meant a new crisis, but only the latest of many, for Dulles who was still the busy, bustling and seemingly indestructible secretary of state. He had no reason then to suspect May 27 would be his own personal deadline.

On the contrary, he immediately began a long, diplomatic battle against the Soviet demand to "free" Berlin. He was firm against abandoning the West Berliners but he was not defiant. This time he thought it better not to be.

Rather he was conciliatory. He made tremendous efforts to line up the West for a stand against the Soviet pressure.

Eventually, he proposed that the West and the Soviet Union talk things over. Out of this proposal came the present talks in Geneva, between the Western foreign ministers and Gromyko, to find a peaceful solution to the Berlin dispute.

Dulles helped shape those talks and plan them. They began three weeks ago. They have accomplished absolutely nothing except to get over the May 27 deadline without crisis.

They may go on for weeks. In the end there may be crisis.

By DON SCHLIENZ He Cast A Long Shadow

On driving to work Tuesday morn I encountered the relatively rare sight of flags in front of the court house and post office at half-staff.

Having been preoccupied with the glories of a morning in Carolina, the sight briefly raised a question in my mind until recalling the President had ordered it for his trusted friend John Foster Dulles.

Later, reflecting on the honor paid to a former non-elected government official, it shaped up as a good reminder that the late Mr. Dulles was not just a Washington figure. His shadow was long.

His thoughts and words affected the day-to-day lives of us all in every crossroads and hamlet of America.

In casual conversation about a Secretary of State most of us are prone to remember his influence in far-away lands; but his role in the life of, say, Greenville or Farmville is largely overlooked.

A note from the Fleet Home Town News Center advised it is bringing its files up to date in order to give better coverage on Navy and Marine Corps personnel from this area.

Promptly answered with the desired data, it stirred the thought

Other Editors Saying Right Shoe On The Foot

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch)
Money — federal, state or local — alone will not overcome what threatens to be the worst weakness of American education in the decades ahead, the shortage of teachers and the inadequacy of many of those employed as teachers. So the Ford Foundation has performed an outstanding service in granting more than $9,000,000 to nine institutions of higher learning for a "breakthrough" in teacher training, quantitatively and qualitatively.

Our teacher trouble, the directors of the Ford program agree, stems from the "relatively poor quality of instruction for future teachers in many places, the neglect of subject matter in favor of undue concentration on teaching methods the relative lack of attention to the importance of practice . . . in developing the art of teaching, and barriers presented by state teacher-certification requirements to improve educational programs."

Courageous teachers before now have pointed out that education's worst enemies may be educationists, that teachers' colleges can be the worst breeders of poor teachers, and that those who have a vested interest in a system which cannot stand on its merits have anchored it in the statute books of many states.

To challenge this system, the Ford Foundation has enlisted Barnard, Brown, Chicago, Claremont, Duke, George Peabody, Harvard, Stanford and Wisconsin.

The new teacher-training pro-

our armed services are presumably preparing for the enlistment rush that follows graduation time.

Offhand, I can think of few decisions a young grad could make that might better serve him (or her) if said graduate was uncertain about going to college, the course of study to pursue, or a choice of career.

For one thing, it provides time in which to look things over before making that important and highly personal decision as to the future. For another, it removes some of the uncertainty about being called by Selective Service at a less opportune time.

If college follows that interlude in uniform, that little bit of added maturity is invaluable. Shrug off that cry of "so much time lost", at that age, one has more time than anything else.

(No, the recruiters haven't even given me a book of matches.)

I'm told there is a matter of "status" among the very small fry as to where the innoculating needle strikes.

The mother of a four-year-old tells me there had never before been any trouble about her offspring taking his "shots" until he lately began associating with six-year-olds.

When they began telling of preschool immunizations in THE ARM, he began to sit up and take notice.

So when four-year-old was informed he was getting a "shot", he told the world it would be in his arm, too.

His biggest artillery barrage of wails and tears failed to sway the nurse.

To his everlasting disgrace, the needle was embedded in . . . in his . . . well, in the gluteal region.

"Status" isn't easy to achieve.

Quote

"Canada is a young nation which can absorb many thousands, yes millions, of industrious young people from other nations. But the vote-catching expansion of welfare state schemes does not make for national economy; it is increasing the national costs rapidly as more and more people, including comparatively recent newcomers, take advantage of receiving something for nothing. Or, should we say something which someone else pays for." — Langley (B. C., Canada) Advance.

"That was the worst week of my life," he said. "You see, a stammerer can look down a whole long sentence and see the word that's going to throw him. Sure enough, when he comes to it, it does throw him."

How did he overcome it? "By accepting every time somebody asked me to make a speech, he said. 'Every time you make a talk, it throws that old trouble back just a little further.'"

After nearly 30 years, and thousands of public appearances J. Q. no longer has to order the chicken salad sandwich.

Speak, Speak, Speak

By RYLMAN MORIN
NEW YORK (AP) — "For years," said the man from Texas, "I ordered chicken salad sandwiches, which I hate, because it was the only item on the menu I could pronounce without stammering."

John Quincy Mahaffey, editor of the Texarkana Gazette, is a gifted practitioner of the art of elocution speaking, much in demand. He stands there, mesmerizing an audience, weaving his ancient witchcraft. Nobody moves except when he makes them laugh, which is often.

Afterward, a few remember that J. Q. has a speech impediment.

Or rather, he uses it to enhance what he wants to say. Stammering no longer terrorizes him.

Years ago, however, it throttled him to such a point he thought he might have to give up being a newspaper reporter. He couldn't ask questions. He would "freeze," completely unable to talk.

His managing editor heard him struggling on the telephone one day and passed the word around the office, "Don't let Jake talk long-distance — ever. He's unbalancing my budget."

Day after day, J. Q. despairingly settled for the chicken salad sandwich. "Once or twice," he said, "I made a stab at ordering the pliminto-and-egg. But I never made it."

Then the turning-point came. It came in a hotel barber shop through a face full of lather.

Will Rogers, the cowboy humorist, arrived in Texarkana on a fund-raising tour. J. Q. was assigned to meet him and get a story, a funny story, of course.

All the way to the airport, he kept repeating, "My name is Mahaffey and I'm a reporter. My name is Mahaffey and I'm a reporter." It came out smooth as silk.

But when he saw Rogers, he froze again. The words stuck in his throat. In panic, he followed Rogers to the hotel and called him on the telephone. Rogers answered it himself. J. Q. couldn't even say "hello." He hung up, completely shattered now.

A moment later, Rogers came downstairs and went to the barber shop. J. Q. followed him and sat there, struggled to speak. Suddenly, the barber looked at J. Q. and said "Next — you, your next." J. Q. only shook his head.

At that point, Rogers sat up in the chair and beckoned to J. Q.

"Old country boy," he said, "you've been following me all morning so you must want something. Now you sit over here and tell me what it is you want."

J. Q. sat on a high stool beside the barber chair. He managed to fight his way through the words. "My name is Mahaffey and—" Silently, he pulled out a reporter's note book.

"And you want to know what I'm going to do? And what I think about Rogers? And a few quotes?" said Rogers. J. Q. nodded.

The cowboy talked and talked. J. Q. got his story, a great story. When he was finished, Rogers said "You know, old country boy, you don't have to be afraid. Because anybody who amounts to anything will know before you open your mouth that you suffer. And the others aren't worth talking to, anyway."

This is not quite the end of the story. J. Q. did not emerge overnight as the William Jennings Bryan of Texarkana. But what he did do, and to his own immense astonishment, was to accept a speaking engagement not long afterward!

"That was the worst week of my life," he said. "You see, a stammerer can look down a whole long sentence and see the word that's going to throw him. Sure enough, when he comes to it, it does throw him."

How did he overcome it? "By accepting every time somebody asked me to make a speech, he said. 'Every time you make a talk, it throws that old trouble back just a little further.'"

After nearly 30 years, and thousands of public appearances J. Q. no longer has to order the chicken salad sandwich.

Good Sales But Not Spectacular

By ELMER ROESSNER
Retail sales in the first quarter of this year, as calculated by the Department of Commerce, were 8 per cent above the first quarter of 1958.

That's good, but it's not spectacular when you recall that in that part of last year business was scraping bottom.

And amazing though it seems, two groups of stores did poorer in the first quarter of this year than in the same quarter a depressed year ago. These are meat markets, down 10 per cent, and men's, boys' clothing and furnishings stores, down 3 per cent.

The decline in meat markets intake may have been somewhat lower prices. The drop in apparel group is less easily explained, especially since the group made 8 per cent more sales in March, 1959, than it did in March, 1958.

BIG GAINS IN BUILDING, CARS
Except for these two groups, most other classifications did very well. Lumberyards, prospered by the rise in housing construction, sold 18 per cent more than a year ago. Auto dealers were up 17 per cent, and auto accessory dealers were close behind, up 14 per cent.

Although the furnishing category cited above showed a drop, shoe stores showed a gain of 14 per cent, and women's ready-to-wear stores, a rise of 12 per cent. Variety stores gained 13 per cent and mail-order and liquor stores each were up 10 points. The other groups made lesser gains.

The Commerce figures also show some spectacular March-to-March rises, which was not unexpected because March, 1958, was near the bottom of the recession and March, 1959, was part of the current recovery romp.

FLORISTS UP 69 PERCENT
The biggest gain was by florists, up an amazing 69 per cent. Weather conditions may have been a factor, but this datum suggests that when business is dying nobody sends flowers. The biggest loss was by typewriter stores, which suggests that when recessions strike, many people either buy typewriters to write novels, or to write home for money. The suggestion, however, is undoubtedly false. The truth is that typewriter replacement is a postponable expense during recessions.

The second-largest March-to-March gain was by stationery stores, most of which now sell more greeting cards than stationery. Their sales were up 29 per cent. Sales by lumberyards and paint, glass and wallpaper were up 23 per cent; new car sales were up 27 per cent; variety stores were up 23 per cent; and shoe stores, fuel oil dealers and optical goods stores were each up 22 per cent.

Furriers and fur shops showed an increase of 19 per cent; farm equipment dealers showed 16 per cent. The other groups showed less, although not every store is represented in the figures.

Although meat markets showed a 10 per cent decline from a year ago, the food group on the whole was even with last March. That looks as if food prices in the current boom are no higher than they were in the last recession.

MAINE WANTS LABOR DAY
MONDAY
The Big H bill has been signed by Gov. Clinton A. Clauson (D.) of Maine.

This bill changes Labor Day from the first to the second Monday in September in that state in 1961. Other New England states, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania make the same change.

The canny State of Maine wants to extend the summer vacation season a week. However, travel authorities, rather than Labor Day, ends the vacation season.

Dulles Thought Big And Enjoyed Great Confidence

Editor's Note: This is the last of three articles on the life and times of John Foster Dulles, whose unparalleled career as secretary of state was cut short by cancer.

By ED CREAGH

WASHINGTON (AP)—John Foster Dulles thought in big terms and often talked in big terms. He did not underestimate himself. He had, and radiated, a serene confidence that the ship of state would sail well if he was in charge of the navigating.

"When is Dulles going to quit?" was a question frequently put to State Department correspondents in the middle years of Dulles' regime.

"When they carry him out in a coffin," was the usual answer, as accurate as it was callous.

Dulles didn't quit until he knew he was too ill to go on. And even from his sickbed he continued to counsel President Eisenhower, who visited him frequently, and State Department officials who also came to see him.

Dulles came to power—and it was real, H-bomb era power that he wielded, not just advice to the White House—on a tide of optimism.

Think back to 1953. The Korean War was still going on, to nobody's satisfaction. Harry Truman's secretary of state, Dean Acheson, was under attack from all sides. The cold war was smoldering like an imminent volcano. It could have been argued—and was—that the time had come for a change.

Dulles was in the thick of the 1952 presidential campaign. He blasted the Truman-Acheson policy as negative and even immoral. He said "containment" of communism behind its existent borders was not enough. There had to be, he said, a new dynamic approach. And he was eager to supply it.

Political sides may change but the cruel facts of life go on. Impartial observers have noted no great shift of American foreign policy since Dulles took office. With the one big exception that, since 1953, no American soldier has been involved in a shooting war.

There have been near misses. Dulles has been assailed by Democratic critics for "brinkmanship"—for bringing his country dangerously close to war. Some of these same critics have accused him of dithering—of failure to provide the firm foreign policy he once promised.

This is nothing new. No secretary of state within memory has escaped the fate of being damned if he did and damned if he didn't. Dulles may be come to have some sympathy for Acheson, who came in for more abuse than most.

Dulles' ambition, dating back to his youth, was to be secretary of state. He didn't make it until the age when most men are thinking about retirement. The word retirement never seemed to cross Dulles' mind. He was always thinking ahead, planning ahead. He knew, naturally, that someday he would have to turn over the reins to someone else. But he wasn't going to until he had to.

And when the time came he hand-picked his successor, former Massachusetts Gov. Christian A. Herter, who had picked up what he could from Dulles—not always a man to share his thinking with others—as under secretary of state.

Things are different around that vast State Department building now. Herter is a team man. He doesn't lack confidence in himself but, with a staff of specialists at his beck and call, he relies less on his own knowledge and intuition than Dulles did.

Dulles seemed to thrive on crises. And his six years of tenure gave him much to thrive on. The Communist offensive appeared to slacken at times but always pressed onward to new gains in Indochina, the Near East and elsewhere.

Also it was Dulles—more than anyone else, probably—who had the job of holding the Western alliance together against the constant Red threat.

This didn't always make him a popular figure in Europe, any more than it did in all circles at home. He came frequently under attack in Britain, for instance, especially when this country put its foot down on the British-French-Israeli invasion of the Suez Canal zone.

Dulles was not the most modest of men but he bore up under this and many another tornado of criticism. As a highly successful international lawyer, he was not accustomed to failure—ore even to acknowledging it when it happened. Besides, he had the unerring support of his boss, Dwight D. Eisenhower, who repeatedly called him the world's foremost expert on international affairs.

By appointment of New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Dulles served in the Senate for a time before becoming secretary of state. He decided against running for election to the post but changed his mind—to his later regret—and lost resoundingly.

One reason for his defeat may have been an offhand remark he made in upstate New York during the campaign. He referred to some of the big city voters who were pretty solidly lined up against him, and told his audience in terms which later were interpreted as contemptuous: "I only wish you could see their faces."

Whatever Dulles meant by this, it did not go down well with New York City minority groups. They voted solidly against him, and he never sought elective office again.

But to achieve his ambition, being secretary of state, Dulles did not need to run for office.

He did campaign for Eisenhower in 1952 and it was no surprise to anybody when Eisenhower announced Dulles as his first cabinet appointee.

Dulles loved his job, worked at it day and night, traveled some 100,000 miles a year.

Of him it could be said, to use the Woodrow Wilson campaign slogan: "He kept us out of war."

It is for the future to determine whether his policies, frequently taking into account the risk of war, were as sound as he and Eisenhower thought they were.

Sam's Hobby Is In Artistic Feud

LOS ANGELES (AP)—They're feuding now because of Sam Rodilla's remarkable hobby.

"I had it in my mind to do something big and I did."

That's the way Sam often explained why he spent 30 years building an aggregation of towers, walls, fountains and pathways—all from scrap material—in the Watts district of Los Angeles.

"The Watts towers" they're called. One is 104 feet high.

Art critics and municipal authorities are squabbling over what to do with them.

"Inspections show these structures are dangerous and should be torn down," said H. L. Manley, of the Department of Building and Safety.

But Kenneth Ross, general manager of the Municipal Arts Department, says, "This is a unique and distinctive work of art and a masterpiece of primitive sculpture. It must be preserved."

Sam's towers were constructed without preconceived design. He started in 1921 by building a framework of rods. He placed wire mesh around this and then applied his own special mixture of cement.

For decoration there are imprints of hands, tools and corn cobs along with 75,000 sea shells and thousands of pieces of bright crockery or tile. An estimated 7,000 sacks of cement and truckloads of broken bottles went into the project.

The property was purchased by film editor William Cartwright and actor Nicholas King with the idea of preserving a work of primitive art.

Sam, now 81, a tile setter by trade, was born in Rome and came to Los Angeles as a boy. It is believed that he's living in the northern California town of Martinez—far from the clamor of art vs. safety.

Recover Checks, Thanks To A Tip

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A grateful convict's tip led officers to the recovery Monday of $2,000 in checks donated to the United Fund.

One man was arrested on a city larceny complaint. Police said he told them he had found another man to alter the stolen checks.

But before he could, police explained, the rewrite man was convicted and sent to the state prison for burglary.

Once there, the convict's wife became destitute and was helped by a United Fund agency. It was too much for the convict.

"Because he was grateful," said detective Dan Cochran, "the prisoner tipped us off on the check altering scheme."

The famed American magician Harry Houdini was first a trapeze performer.

Council Agrees To Lie Detector

SOUTH KINGSTON, R.I. (AP)—The five members of the town council have agreed to put their honesty to a lie detector test.

They volunteered to submit to the test after a row Monday night over drainage pipe purchases.

The question: "During your time in office have you ever been aware or been part of a dishonest transaction involving town monies over which the council has control?"

Tolerance In Traffic Said Truck Driver's Concern

By BEN PHLEGAR
 AP Automotive Writer
 DETROIT (AP)—This weekend when you nose out into Memorial Day traffic and see a big truck ahead, don't groan or say unkind things. The truck driver is just as interested as you are in seeing that you get where you're going.

At least that's the word from five of the nation's top truck drivers who were here this week to make a set of safety films.

"The main thing a truck driver must learn," said Leo Ford of Durham, N.C., "is to be tolerant. You can't get mad at another driver."

Hubert Kennedy, who wrestles the big ones around the streets of Cincinnati, says "I try to treat every car like it had my family in it. I try to think for them."

Their sentiments were echoed by Hayter C. Brown Jr. of Harrisonburg, Va.; Floyd Brown of Milwaukee and Bob Rudesill of Minneapolis—all driving champions in some special class of big truck.

Of the five, H. C. Brown does the most over-the-road driving at the moment. He hustles from Newmarket, Va. to New York City and back three times a week—a 700 mile round trip—and drives 120,000 miles a year.

"Most car drivers on the highway are surprisingly good," he says, "but one of their biggest problems is to know just how to pass one of our trucks."

"Most of them creep up too close. They have to pull way out into the road to see around."

"Our trucks are supposed to stay at least 500 feet apart. A car wouldn't have to stay that far back, but the driver should stay back far enough so that he can pull out just a little and see around. He should make sure the road ahead is clear and of course he shouldn't try to pass on a hill or a curve."

The five drivers emphasized how much their companies now stress helpfulness. They are asked to stop and give assistance to a stranded motorist if he's out of gas or has a flat.

One thing they have been asked to stop doing is giving a wave of the hand or a blink of their lights to indicate the road ahead is clear.

"We found that sometimes the motorist got into trouble anyway and then he'd put the blame on us by saying we told him everything was clear," said one of the drivers.

"I think it would do every car driver good to drive one of these rigs a little bit," said Kennedy. "Then he might appreciate more what we are trying to do. As it is, some folks expect us to be able to thread a needle with one."

Egypt is about as large as Texas and New Mexico combined.

North Carolina's National Guard Now Preparing For Summer Camp

RALEIGH — The next few days will be busy ones for some 11,900 officers and men of the North Carolina Army and Air National Guard as they make final preparations for their summer field training. This announcement was made today by State Adjutant General Capus Waynick.

Field training this year will be conducted under the supervision of three major commands at four separate training sites and during different periods through the months of June, July and August.

The 30th (Old Hickory) Infantry Division, reorganized on 1 April 1969 as a Pentomic Division, and commanded by Brigadier General Edward F. Griffin of Louisburg, will train for the fifth straight year at Fort Bragg from the 7th through the 21st of June.

Case Solved?

CHICAGO (AP)—The Tribune said today the Federal Bureau of Investigation has solved the Mack Charles Parker lynching and has turned the names of the asserted killers over to Gov. James R. Coleman of Mississippi.

The Tribune, in a copyright dispatch from Washington, said it learned from "informed sources on Capitol Hill" that approximately 10 men were involved. All are reported to be from communities and the rural area surrounding Poplarville, Miss. The story did not identify the men.

The FBI declined comment on the Tribune's story. The Department of Justice announced at Washington Monday it had withdrawn from the case because no evidence had been found of a federal law violation.

Parker, 23, a Negro truck driver, was kidnapped from the jail the night of April 25, two days before he was scheduled to go on trial on charges of raping a 24-year-old pregnant white mother.

Council Opposes Tape-Recordings

KEANSBURG, N. J. (AP) — Councilman Louis Collichio brought his tape recorder to the town meeting again Tuesday night.

He's been using the recordings for a weekly newspaper column.

As usual Mayor James Gravany and Councilman Martin Lohsen asked Collichio to turn the machine off. They've claimed the recordings can be edited to give a distorted picture.

Collichio kept the machine on. So Lohsen turned on an electric razor and held it by the microphone to drown out other sounds of the meeting. When the session adjourned, he used the razor to shave.

Terms Assembly 'Strike-Breaker'

WASHINGTON (AP)—A union leader charged Tuesday the North Carolina General Assembly was "deliberately assisting" the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills, Henderson, N.C., break a 6-month-old strike.

William Pollock, general president of the striking Textile Workers Union of America, said that was the way he interpreted Assembly action in putting $750,000 additional funds in the state's contingency and emergency fund.

Pollock said the money would guarantee keeping the National Guard in Henderson until Nov. 2 at an estimated cost of $6,000 a day.

"This is a titanic sum for a state body to appropriate to police an industrial dispute," Pollock said, "especially in view of the fact that the North Carolina Legislature is skimping and clinging to pennies when schools, welfare boards and other social agencies are desperately fighting for meager state aid."

Pollock said the Legislature's action was "a strange way to reward Cooper (Mill President John D. Cooper Jr.) for his double-cross of Gov. Luther Hodges, who arranged a settlement of the 6-month-old strike only to have Cooper repudiate the agreement after it had been accepted by the strikers."

Idaho Reviving Sterilization Bill

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—Idaho is reviving a program which permits the state to sterilize certain mental patients.

State law permits a sterilization operation to be performed with consent of the patient or without his consent if officials obtain a court order.

Dr. Terrell O. Carver, state health administrator, said the state's mental institutions would submit names of candidates for the operation to the State Board of Health, which would hold hearings and review each case.

Dr. Carver said the candidates would be limited to those who "by reason of mental deficiency, sexual perversion or mental illness, are considered to be a menace to society," and who likely would transmit their condition to their children.

Nobody was surprised at Bo Farley winning his second club championship this weekend but the fashion in which he did it caught most followers off guard.

He shot a sizzling 71 on the opening day to take a six-hole lead and then his opponent conceded the match Sunday when he was nine down with only nine holes remaining.

"It was the easiest match that I had in the tournament," stated Farley. "Bob (Masten) got off to a bad start Saturday and was just unable to catch up."

Farley, soft-spoken coach and athletic director at Rose High, took his congratulations in stride Sunday. It was his second club championship and the veteran golfer was at his best.

No Bid To Texas

East Carolina's baseball team, North State Champions, left school this past weekend following exams. Still no word had been received from the NAIA and the trip to Texas.

Clarence Stasavich, football coach at Lenoir Rhyne and chairman of District 26, was to notify ECC officials last Wednesday but the call never came through and the Pirates have been in the dark for several days now.

"It's like a private dance—You can't go unless you're invited," stated head coach Jim Mallory.

Even if favorable word was received, it would probably be too late to make plans at this date. The members of the team have gone their various ways and the trip to Texas is little more than a week off.

The failure of East Carolina to receive a bid has left quite a few unsatisfied people in this area. It is seldom that a team goes undefeated in the North State Conference and ECC had little trouble with any of their foes, scoring 149 runs to their conference foes' 29.

Bucs Dominate All-Conference

ECC had the strongest pitching staff in the league with Ben Baker, Larry Crayton, and Johnny Ellen. The club also had three batters hitting above .300 and three others were just below the mark.

The strength of the Pirate club was shown by their domination of the All-Conference team. Al Vaughn (.284), second baseman, and pitcher Larry Crayton (.7-1) were unanimous choices. Outfielder Gary Pierce (.443) and shortstop Glenn Bass (.299) made the select group as did pitcher Ben Baker (5-0). It was quite a representation for East Carolina.

Pirates' 1959 team was considered "the best" fielded by Mallory. The reason that they were bypassed is unknown but it seems that an explanation is due. Only three losses marred the record and these were at the first of the season to UNC, U. of Indiana, and Camp Lejeune. The Bucs might have beaten any of the three with their play at the end of the season.

Greenville Loses Five

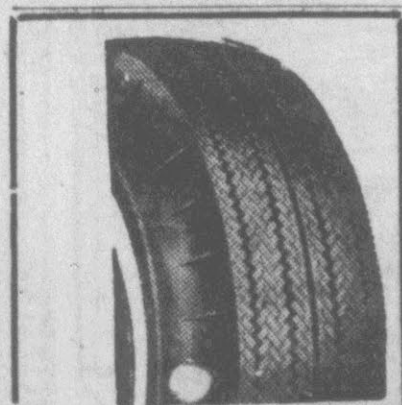

Rose High will lose five members of their 1959 baseball team but at least three of them plan to continue playing ball.

Merrill Bynum and Ronnie Finch will join Coach Jim Mallory's North State champions next year while Joe Moye plans to enter Carolina.

Bynum, a strong righthander, was the Phantoms' leading power hitter this year and also had a 5-3 pitching record. Finch, a southpaw, finished with a 5-1 mark. Bynum is playing American Legion ball with Kinston this summer and will double as a pitcher and also as an outfielder. Finch has a 3-0 record for Douglas Cross Roads in the Beaufort County Semi-Pro League.

Moye, a first-baseman, led the Greenville club in hitting with a hefty .491 mark. A consistent performer, Joe is playing Legion ball with Kinston this summer and then plans to give college ball a try next year.

Billy Cox and Steve Noble, the other seniors on the club, are still uncertain toward college plans.

Haddix Hurles Perfect Game For 12 Innings, Loses

Kiwanis Victory
In 9-Inning Tilt

Kiwanis escaped the North State loop cellar yesterday afternoon as they edged out winless VFW, 7-6, in nine innings.

Trailing 4-3, Kiwanis scored once in the final inning to send the game into extra innings. Both teams added two runs in the first extra frame and then the Kiwanis made their winning move in the third extra inning.

Cobb led off the inning with a single and Jordan followed with another bingle. With one out Nichols hit a hard infield grounder which was bobbled, allowing Cobb to score from third base with the winning run.

Ward received credit for Kiwanis' first win. He took over for Ashby in the seventh. Williams highlighted VFW's eleven hit attack as he slammed out three hits, including two doubles. Williams hurled the first six innings of play and then finished out the game in centerfield.

First baseman Fuller had four singles to aid the VFW attack. Jordan led the Kiwanis. Entering in the fourth inning, Jordan had a perfect day with three hits in three official trips to the plate.

Play shifts back to the Tar Heel loop this afternoon as Elks takes on defending champion, Pepsi-Cola. Greenville Tobacco Company will meet Exchange in tomorrow's game.

Raleigh's Losing Streak Snapped

Raleigh snapped a five-game losing streak and Durham saw its seven-game winning string broken in Carolina League games Tuesday night.

Winston-Salem came from behind with a five-run uprising in the sixth inning to hand second place Durham a 9-6 defeat. Fred Whitfield hit a three-run homer for Winston-Salem in the opening inning. Durham fought back to go ahead 6-4 with three runs in the fourth before Winston-Salem staged its rally.

Lefty Warren Hodgdon spaced 10 hits effectively and walked only two in pitching Raleigh to a 6-2 win over Burlington.

Joe Theis drove in four runs with a two-run double in the third and two-run homer in the fifth. Carl Yastrzemski accounted for the other runs with a single in the third and a double in the seventh. It was Hodgdon's fifth win without a loss.

Greensboro collected 11 hits off three Wilson pitchers to defeat the league-leading Tobs 6-4. With the score tied at 4-4, Glenn Merken homered in the seventh. John Zaze doubled to score another run. Wilson's first three runs came on homers by Ray Looney, Larry Elliott and Duncan Campbell.

Special Scouting
Course Planned

There will be a special called meeting of all senior patrol leaders, scoutmasters, Woodbadge men, and Scout-trained Junior Leaders at 7:30 Thursday night at the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church to plan a special training course for all Senior Patrol Leaders.

The special course is to be held at Camp Charles from June 28 through July 1, and will be the only training course on the council level for the balance of the year.

This long-term Senior Patrol Leader Training Course will be the first of its kind the Council has undertaken and the full support of every district is needed to make the course an outstanding event.

The purpose of the meeting Thursday is to hear ideas and to plan the course.

How good do you have to be? In all baseball history only seven pitchers ever have accomplished a perfect game, and none had to go more than nine innings. In all baseball history no one ever had pitched more than 10 hitless innings.

Yet Tuesday night, in the greatest pitching performance of all time, Harvey Haddix, Pittsburgh's slim southpaw, pitched 12 innings of perfect ball — and lost.

An error, a sacrifice, an intentional walk and the only hit Haddix allowed — a rule-book double by Joe Adcock — did it, giving Milwaukee's National League leading Braves a 2-0 victory in 13 innings.

Haddix, giving up just one hit, was a loser. Lew Burdette, giving up a dozen hits, was a winner. There was nothing to approach Haddix' heart-breaker, of course, but the other two games scheduled in the NL had their moments of drama, too.

At San Francisco, the Giants' king to second place by beating Los Angeles 4-1 on LeRoy Wagner's punch-hit, grand-slam home run with one out in the ninth. At Cincinnati, comeback guy Don Newcombe won his third in a row for the Reds, beating Philadelphia 2-1.

In the American League, Don Ferrarese, who drove in two runs and scored one with a record-tying three doubles, combined with reliever Jim Perry for a four-hit shutout as first place Cleveland placed Chicago with a 3-0 over the White Sox. Baltimore defeated Washington 6-5. Detroit rapped Kansas City 9-5 and Boston belted New York 12-2.

After Haddix, who enters the record book with a 12-inning no-hitter, had retired 36 men in order, Felix Mantilla reached base on Don Hoak's error leading off the 13th at Milwaukee. Ed Matthews followed with a sacrifice and Haddix then walked Hank Aaron, the majors' top hitter at .442, intentionally.

Adcock then put a high slider over the fence for an apparent home run. A jubilant Aaron, however, cut for the dugout after rounding second and was passed by Adcock. The Braves hustled Aaron back to the base path and he resumed his journey home for the second run, with Adcock credited with a double.

There was a controversy over the score, however. NL President Warren Giles announced he believes the score should be 1-0, with Mantilla's run closing out play. But until an official change is made, the score reads 2-0.

For Haddix (3-3) "It's just another loss—and they're not good." Burdette (8-2), the majors' top winner, didn't walk a man and struck out two (to Haddix' eight) for his second shutout. He had only two wobbly innings — the third, when the Pirates had three singles, and the ninth, when they collected two.

Wagner's homer, his first major league slam, came off Dodger reliever Art Fowler. Losing starter Sandy Koufax (0-1) had held the Giants to four hits for eight innings, then loaded the bases with two walks and Felipe Alou's single. Gordon Jones (2-2) was the winner in relief of Stu Miller.

Newk, (4-4) capped a two-run fourth inning for the Reds with a deciding single off loser Ruben Gomez (1-3). Newcombe, won 27 games as baseball's No. 1 pitcher in 1956, but has won only 22 since, blanked the Phils on three hits until Harry Anderson homered in the seventh.

Baseball History Written
By Slender Pirate Pitcher

By DAVE O'HARA

Associated Press Sports Writer
MILWAUKEE (AP) — A slender southpaw joined baseball's immortals today — wondering what a guy has to do to win.

Harvey Haddix of the Pittsburgh Pirates counted only another loss after turning in the most magnificent pitching performance in the history of the game.

Haddix, a 33-year-old veteran, hurled perfect ball, setting down 36 batters in order, against the heavy-hitting Milwaukee Braves Tuesday night — only to lose by a walk and a rule-book double.

A throwing error, a sacrifice, an intentional walk and a rule-book double spelled heartbreak for the 160-pounder.

Haddix became the first pitcher in major league history to hurl a perfect game beyond nine innings. And, despite the loss, he rewrote the record book with the longest no-hitter since Abner Doubleday founded the game.

A crowd of 19,194 was amazed as Haddix set down the Braves in 1-2-3 fashion for 12 innings. It appeared that even in this partisan metropolis that most fans were pulling for Haddix.

A brief thunderstorm passed over County Stadium in the last of the fifth. Haddix already had a no-hitter. But no one paid much attention.

The storm passed overhead after a few raindrops and lightning flashes. Haddix continued on. His mound opponent, Lew Burdette, surrendered eight hits, but the Pirates couldn't push across a run in regulation time.

Then in the top of the 13th, it happened. Don Hoak tried to hurry a throw on Felix Mantilla's sharp grounder to third and fired into the dirt at first for an error.

Eddie Matthews, the major league home run king with 14, laid down a neat sacrifice. That forced Pittsburgh to intentionally walk Hank Aaron, the major's batting leader.

Joe Adcock, the Braves' part-time first baseman who plays only against southpaw pitching, stepped to the plate. Joe looked at a ball and then crashed a drive over the fence to the right of the 394-foot mark.

The first hit off Haddix confused the Braves. Mantilla scored, but Aaron touched second and then headed for the dugout. Apparently he thought the ball hadn't left the field.

Adcock passed Aaron on the basepath, touching third, before Hank remembered. Aaron went home, as Adcock was called out for passing a runner. Adcock was credited with a double and two runs batted in.

Yet, in defeat, Haddix was just plain great.

"He hit a high slider which I tried to keep down and away," Haddix said in explaining his pitching to Adcock. "It was a bad pitch. A high one. I made a few other mistakes, but I got away with them. I guess I should have walked Adcock."

Haddix, discouraged but not downhearted by the turn of events, said that he was concentrating on keeping the Braves from scoring.

He said he knew he had a no-hitter and a perfect game "from the first inning on. I couldn't remember walking a batter and I sure knew nobody had gotten a base hit."

Harvey admitted he tired in the last two or three innings, but thought he still had plenty of stuff going into the final 13th.

"It's just another loss — and they're not good," he said in summing up his third defeat in six decisions.

Spitball Pitcher
Ed Walsh Dies

POMFANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hall of Fame pitcher Ed Walsh is dead at 78 of cancer and the spitball pitch has lost a great advocate.

Big Ed—they called him the "Ironman" in his prime—opposed the ban on the spitball as long as he lived. Spitball pitching was his forte and he used it in the early 1900s to win 40 games one season for the Chicago White Sox.

He died Tuesday, less than two weeks after he celebrated his 78th birthday, bedridden.

"I got a few innings of living left," he told a caller then.

CHAPTER 7

"What a terrible death," a woman next to Mark was saying, touching her throat and shivering slightly. "And she was so young. And lovely. Last night I watched her dancing. To think that only last night . . . You can't be careful enough, can you?"

Inside his pickets Mark's hands formed fists. If he had not contacted Corinne Javal in his search for Timgad, she would be alive now.

"Was she driving up or down?"

"Up. Apparently her car spun several times before it crashed into the mountain."

If she had been on her way up, she could have been killed to prevent him from seeing him. If she had been on her way down, it could mean that she had discovered it was unsafe to meet him at the appointed spot, that she was being followed or had seen somebody else waiting for her. In either case he was certain that she had not been alone in the car.

Mark looked around the assembly of people. None of them seemed to be watching him. Yet it was possible that the murderer was among them. He hoped grimly that nothing in his face betrayed the shock of seeing Corinne dead.

I must behave as if I had never met her before, he told himself.

I shall go to the clubhouse, I shall play golf as if what has happened to Corinne does not concern me. But it was not easy, not easy at all, to behave as if nothing had happened, to walk up to the first tee, make a few practice swings, place his ball and drive, with the picture of Corinne slumped over the door of her car before his eyes. Yet it was precisely what he had to do, in case anybody was watching him. He was glad no caddy was available. Alone, he at least didn't have to control his face.

Don't think, he told himself. Don't try to figure out how it could have happened. Pretend to be unconcerned. Don't give yourself away. It's the only chance you have. Don't reflect now that, with her death, you have lost the one trace that led to Timgad. You have to start again from scratch. You have to find another lead. You will avenge her. But now concentrate on your game. And the ball, lying on the third green about five feet from the flag, became a challenge.

I shall sink it with one putt, he promised himself, and crouched down to take another look at the difficult angle, when, from somewhere, a small black dachshund burst on the green and was gone, Mark's ball in its mouth.

All his pent-up shock and frustration turned to fury and he ran after the dog, swinging his club and shouting for it to drop the ball. But the little dachshund only ran faster, with quite incredible speed for so small an animal.

Finally it ran into a clump of trees below the fairway. There it let go the ball and yapped triumphantly. The moment, though, that Mark bent to retrieve the ball, the dog growled and would have bitten him, had not a voice uttered a sharp command. Mark straightened up abruptly.

"Do you really think it is wise to let yourself be tricked from open view into possible ambush?" the same voice said in a slightly ironic tone.

A pair of bow-legged, hairy legs came into view. The man from the lobby of the Monte Carlo Beach Hotel, whose face Mark had not been able to see and had taken for an English tourist.

"Perrier! What in the world are you doing here?"

The inspector shifted his short pipe from one corner of his mouth to the other. He was a short, stockily built man, with a head shaped like a walnut and just as brown. He had round, velvety brown eyes which could look astonishingly feline.

"I got your message that you had gone to Monte Carlo to meet Corinne Javal just ten minutes after you had boarded the plane. I arrived here a couple of hours ago."

Mark had not been mistaken. He had been watched. "Then it was you who trailed me."

"Curiosity gets the better of me at times," Perrier was still speaking ironically. "I'm glad to hear you noticed it. I had almost convinced myself that you hadn't. You see how wrong it is to have preconceived opinions."

He picked up the dachshund, which was still standing guard over the ball, its long, thin tail wagging excitedly. "Neat trick, isn't it?" he said, as if unaware of Mark's embarrassment. "When I am in Paris, I live in St. Cloud, in a house that borders on the course. Though golf is my favorite relaxation, I'm sorry to say I'm not as good at it as I would like to be. I do hit a great many balls out of bounds. Fritz, here, goes for them like a bird dog. A very useful little animal."

"Corinne is dead," said Mark, "murdered before I had a chance to talk to her, before she could tell me who Timgad is."

Perrier took the pipe from between his lips and hit it gently against a stone. "I know. The people who discovered the accident came up here to phone the police. Quite ordinary people."

His mouth set and, for a while, he did not speak. Then he shrugged. Apparently he had accepted the fact that now the only trace that led to Timgad was lost. "I wouldn't have thought she'd risk getting so deeply involved that it became necessary for them to kill her."

His voice was a strange mixture of anger, disappointment and sadness. Mark looked at him in surprise. "You warned me of her. You didn't trust her. I didn't think you liked her."

The inspector laughed dryly. "What has that got to do with it? If I trusted all the people I like, the world would be a wonderful place. As it is, I would be the luckiest man on earth if I liked only those I can trust."

He stared past Mark, patting his dog absent-mindedly. "Obviously they had to prevent her from seeing you. She must have known too much." He thumped on a stone with his closed fist. "What would I give to know what she found out. To think that none of us could find a trace, and she . . ."

Suddenly Mark remembered the note, the threat to his life. He handed it to Perrier. "I received this when I woke up this morning."

Perrier pulled out a pair of old-fashioned, rimless spectacles, glanced at the piece of paper, then folded it and put it in his wallet. "We'll see if the typewriter can be checked." He sighed. "This confirms my belief. She talked, or nobody but me would have known where to find you."

"Yes," said Mark. "But since Corinne was prevented from telling me what she knew, there will be no reason now to kill me."

Perrier looked up. He shook his head. "If I were you, I wouldn't be so sure," he said.

Demos Urge Cutting Spending Bills To Avoid Veto

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional Democratic leaders reportedly are urging reluctant colleagues to pare down housing and airport spending bills. They want to avoid presidential vetoes.

Wrapped up in these two measures is the core of the political controversy between the majority of Democrats and President Eisenhower—budget balancing.

The two bills now are before Senate-House conference committees. Democrats from the big cities particularly want Congress to enact large-scale housing and airport programs to which they can point in their 1960 re-election races. If Eisenhower vetoes these bills and his action is sustained, these Democrats think Republican candidates will suffer.

On the other hand, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) and Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas were reported arguing that the Republicans thus far have developed budget balancing as the only major issue for 1960.

As reported by some of their colleagues, their argument is that if the Democrats trim the bills to minimum amounts they may be able to blunt this issue by getting presidential approval for the expenditures involved.

If this means less housing and airport development than some of the Democrats think is necessary, the leaders were said to have pointed to what they regard as the likelihood that their party will elect a president next year who would be willing to support an expansion of the programs in 1961.

For practical purposes, the committees trying to reach a compromise must stay within the framework of the different versions passed by the two houses.

As an instance, in passing the housing bill, the Senate approved an urban renewal program authorizing commitments of 350 million dollars a year for six years. That totals $2,100,000,000 in eventual expenditures. The House voted for a three year program geared at 500 million dollars annually.

If the compromise committee listens to Democratic leadership suggestions, it could agree on a three-year program authorizing 350 million in annual commitments. This would bring the long-range total down to $1,050,000,000, compared to the $1,350,000,000 Eisenhower asked for a six-year program.

Joe Venuti, composer-violinist with Paul Whiteman's orchestra for eight years, wrote "Ain't Doin' Bad Doin' Nothin'". He can't give a birthplace address because he was born at sea.

Chandler's Hope Nearly Dashed In Kentucky Vote

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Bert T. Combs had the door almost closed on Gov. A. B. Chandler's 1960 presidential hopes today by piling up a big lead for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Chandler's choice, Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield, was trailing by 31,842 votes with nearly half of the state's 3,784 precincts tabulated.

Waterfield said it was still a race, claiming he was ahead in the rural areas in Tuesday's election. Few ballots had been counted in his home area in extreme western Kentucky.

Offsetting this, however, was the fact that tabulations were equally slow in Combs' native eastern Kentucky hills.

It was one of the bitterest Democratic primaries in years, in many ways it resembled 16 years ago when Kentucky, normally in the Democratic corner, elected a Republican governor after a sharp split in the Democratic primary.

This year the Republicans chose former U.S. Rep. John Robison as their standard bearer in the November general election.

Chandler had counted on Waterfield to deliver him Kentucky's 30 votes at the Democratic presidential convention next year.

But a Combs victory could throw the votes behind Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, a close friend of former Sen. Earle C. Clements, chief sponsor of Combs.

With 1,724 of 3,784 precincts reporting, the vote was:

Combs, 168,979; Waterfield, 137,137.

Wilson W. Wyatt, Combs' running mate, held a lopsided margin over his closest pursuer for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor.

Returns from 1586 precincts showed:

Wyatt 145,929; J. B. Wells Jr., 32,536.

Both Combs and Waterfield lost previous bids for the gubernatorial nomination — Combs to Chandler in 1955 and Waterfield to Clements in 1947.

Although only 824 precincts had been counted in the Republican race for governor, Robison — had rolled up a lopsided lead over two opponents.

IN MEMORIAM

WILLIAM A. DARDEN JR.

With profound sorrow, the Officials of the Greenville Utilities Commission record the death of one of its most loyal employees—William A. Darden Jr. Mr. Darden became associated with the Commission on January 1, 1922, and remained continuously until his death on April 16, 1959, except for a period from July 1942 to January 1943 when he was granted a leave of absence to perform a service for his country in the rehabilitation of Pearl Harbor.

His duties as Distribution Manager and Engineer contributed materially to the progressive development and growth of Utilities Facilities of the City of Greenville and their successful operation over the years.

His was a generous service performed with a high degree of loyalty and devotion coupled with a sense of pride in successful attainment.

We have lost a faithful employee and friend, the community has lost a loyal citizen, and with the sense of loss is mingled deep sympathy for the members of his family.

Adopted by the Board of Commissioners of the Greenville Utilities Commission, May 12, 1959.

Europeans Talking That Dollar Potential Invalid

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Europeans today increasingly talk of the American dollar as a potential invalid.

The upsurge is spiced at the moment by the marked outflow of gold from the United States. In the last month some 234 million dollars of it has been bought by other nations — who have that

Oil Firm Plans Set Price Policy

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Gulf Oil Corp. announced Tuesday it will establish fair trade prices in North Carolina for its gasoline effective June 1.

The firm said Gulf stations in the entire state will be expected to sell Gulf products at a price set by the company.

The move follows a series of gas wars in Charlotte and other areas during which the price of gasoline fluctuated wildly. The last gas war, which ended only two weeks ago, saw the price of regular, brand-name gasoline drop as low as 20.9 cents a gallon in Charlotte.

The prices Gulf will put into effect June 1 are 19.9 cents a gallon for regular, 22.9 for medium-grade, and 25.9 for the best grade, exclusive of taxes.

To the motorist, this will mean prices of 29.9 cents, 32.9 cents, and 35.9 cents, respectively.

Gasoline bears a 7-cent state tax, a 3-cent federal tax, and a 1-cent inspection fee. Service stations generally absorb the inspection fee.

Gulf District Manager F. C. Rogers said the fair trade move was made because "Gulf feels the demoralization of the retail market in many sections of North Carolina has reached the point where it has adversely affected many independent dealers handling Gulf branded products as well as the reputation and good name of the company."

He said the fair trade prices were being instituted under provisions of the North Carolina Fair Trade Act and applicable federal statutes.

Better Sales Of Canned Undies

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—A marketing official says women go more for canned undies than those offered in flat transparent packages.

Donald Pioneer of the Canco Product Marketing Division of the American Can Co. reported Tuesday on the results of a five-week test in four Eastern supermarkets.

He told the Supermarket Institute that four different clothing articles sealed in opaque and rigid paper containers outsold those in flat packs by more than 2-1. The items were women's panties, brassieres, children's briefs and baby socks.

Gave Her Shoes, Jewels By Error

SAN ANSELMO, Calif. (AP) — Hazel Smith Johnson, 55, said today she gave her shoes to charity but she didn't mean to include her jewels.

She asked police to help her recover a diamond bracelet, a diamond bar pin and a diamond ring. She explained she stuffs her jewelry in old shoes for hiding. The items in question disappeared with a lot of shoes she gave to a charitable organization.

She said the missing jewelry was appraised at $2,200 in 1920.

Struck Out Beer In Fine Print

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Board of Supervisors hunted through the fine print in a hurry Tuesday and struck the word "beer" out of a catering contract.

Marguerite Pratt, a citizen, pointed out the board was about to permit the sale of beer in four city parks patronized almost exclusively by teenagers. But Rose Schuman, who is to manage the four concessions, said it wouldn't have made any difference.

"I have no license to sell beer," she said, "and I wouldn't sell it on a bet."

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market nudged ahead modestly early this afternoon on the slowest turnover of the week.

Leading issues rose from fractions to a point except for a few stronger gainers.

The market still appeared in a hesitant mood.

Rails were off slightly on average despite some sharp increases in earnings by various carriers.

The trend among steels and motors was moderately higher. The electronics and other space age stocks rebounded fairly well from recent losses. Chemicals, electrical equipments and building materials were mostly higher.

Coppers, aircrafts, oils and rubbers were mixed.

Zenith recovered about 5 points. Raytheon and General Tire moved up more than a point apiece.

Chrysler spurred well over a point while Ford and American Motors added fractions. General Motors was about unchanged.

International Harvester continued to respond to its record quarterly sales and earnings, adding another 2 points or so.

U. S. government bonds were steady in slow dealings over the counter.

School District Standard Raised

BELVOIR — Changes designed to raise academic standards in Belvoir-Parkland District schools were announced today by the district school committee and Principal E. N. Warren.

Under the new program, the number of units required for graduation will be increased from 17 to 18. More math and science courses will be offered on the high school and changes in required units will insure enrollment of students in the new courses.

The committee also ruled that English must be passed in the ninth and tenth grades, if a student is to advance to the next class.

Preliminary plans were made for purchase of an activity bus for use by school groups. Also made were plans to form the school's first band and the beginning of band instruction next year.

The Artistic Social Club is sponsoring a "Queen's Contest" Sunday night at 8 o'clock in the educational building at Corner Stone Baptist Church. The public is invited.

The Senior Choir of Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will meet at the church Thursday night at 8 o'clock for rehearsal.

Graham Jones died at his home Saturday night after a long illness. Funeral services will be held at Friendship Church Thursday at 3 p.m. H. R. Reeves, pastor, will officiate. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Minnie Jones, of the home; one son, Deacon Joe Jones of Ayden; two daughters, Nanie Louise Jones of the home, Bessie Jones of Philadelphia, and 10 grandchildren. Burial will be in the family cemetery in Greene county.

The regular meeting of Pride of the East Chapter No. 524 has been cancelled because Thursday night will be awards night at Eppees High School. All members interested in attending the district meeting June 8 should contact members of the Executive Board.

Willie G. Dupree died at his home near Snow Hill Monday night. Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at Moye's Chapel Baptist Church, with Rev. Mr. Jones officiating. Burial will be in Saints Delight Cemetery in Greene county. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sarah Dupree, of the home; two daughters, Addie and Daisy Dupree of the home; three sons, Freddie, Willie B. Jr., and Marshall Dupree of the home; one granddaughter; six brothers, Zeno and John Henry Dupree of Snow Hill, James, Fred, Hubert and Arthur Dupree of Farmville, and one sister, Mrs. Lillie Mae Hadlock of Farmville.

In Memoriam
In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Henry Freeman, who passed away five years ago, May 18, 1954. Though his smile is gone forever and his hands you cannot touch, we shall never lose the memory of the one we loved so much.
Your Loving Wife, Daughters and Sons,
The Freeman Family

Sycamore Hill Baptist Church will observe memorial services in honor of all deceased members of the church during the present administration next Sunday. All members of the church are asked to submit to the pastor, Rev. J. A. Nimmo, names of deceased members of the church that they would like to be honored in this memorial service, and all members are asked to worship in the services at 11:00 a.m. Sunday.

Payton Says Union Not Going To Quit Struggle

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP)—A shift Monday night to mark the union official said Tuesday night strikers are "determined to stay here and fight it out" in an effort to get a contract with the struck Harriet - Henderson Cotton Mills.

Boyd Payton, Carolina director for the Textile Workers Union of America, said "very few union members have left town."

Although the mill is now operating three full shifts, Payton said he hasn't given up hopes of negotiating a contract.

"We believe that with the pledges of support we have received," Payton declared, "we will be able to maintain our people here for a longer period than the state will be able to maintain the National Guard here."

He pointed out that financial aid has poured in from labor organizations throughout the United States and Canada.

Meanwhile, calm continued to prevail over the strike scene Tuesday night as Guardsmen patrolled the area.

Company President John D. Cooper Jr. said all but 33 of the 921 jobs in the bargaining group with the union have been filled. He added, "I expect to have these 33 filled this week."

Cases Heard In City Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

Judge Charles H. Whedbee disposed of 18 cases in Municipal Recorder's Court Monday. The charges ranged from public drunkenness, receiving stolen goods to assault with a deadly weapon.

Walter Reid, Negro, 508 Bonner's Lane, assault with a deadly weapon, 30 days on the roads, sentence to begin at end of other sentence, and he is to pay hospital bill and costs in the other case. For disorderly conduct, the court gave Reid 30 days on the roads, suspended on payment in court for use and benefit of Pitt Memorial Hospital $15. Dr. S. R. Bartlett Jr. $10, Dr. Herbert Hadley $5, and pay costs of this action.

William (Billy) Myers, Negro, 1505 Fleming St., receiving stolen property, 30 days on the roads, sentence to begin June 15, 1959; capias and commitment issued.

Non-support: Leroy Adams, address unknown to police, failed to appear and a capias was issued. Alex Duncan, Negro, 422 W. Third St., pay $10 a week for support beginning May 30, 1959, and pay each Saturday thereafter. Joe Savage, Negro, 208 S. Side St., pay $20 in court for support and make payment each week thereafter.

Assault on a female: Edward Langley, Negro, 1606 S. Railroad St., failed to appear and a capias was issued. Cary J. Tripp, 1300 Allen St., and disorderly conduct prosecuting witness taxed with court costs for malicious and frivolous prosecution, $16.

George Willoughby Jr., Negro, 1509 W. Fifth St., disorderly conduct, 30 days on roads; appealed. For being a public nuisance, the court gave him 90 days on roads, sentence to begin at end of sentence in other case; appealed.

Speeding: Bayden O. Keypley, High Point, waived reading of warrant and paid $16 costs. Charles G. Miles, Richmond, Va., waived reading of warrant and paid $16. Zack V. Taft, 1101 N. Overlook Dr., $16.

Walter Ben Kinton, Greenville Hotel, drunk (two charges) 30 days on roads in each. Sentences to be served concurrently. Walter D. Johnson, Negro, 706 Fleming St., 30 days on roads or pay $16.

Lorenzo Evans, Negro, R1 city, careless and reckless driving, $16.

A hearing was scheduled this afternoon for George G. Everett, accused of entering the home of J. D. Wiggins of Ahoskie last Thursday night.

The youth was arrested Tuesday afternoon as he left the Robert L. Vann school, where he was described as an outstanding junior student.

Officers said Doris Wiggins picked out Everett as the intruder who was surprised in her bedroom. The mate to a shoe lost in the room when the intruder fled through a window was found at Everett's home, the officers added.

Doris and her sister, Shirley, told officers they saw the youth when they switched on a light after hearing a noise.

Ahoskie policeman J. A. Bunch and SBI agent John Edwards said Everett admitted he entered the Wiggins home, but gave no reason for the action.
