Hold-The-Liners Gird For All Out Battle In House

RALEIGH (AP) — Administration hold-the-line forces are preparing to wage an all-out battle in the House Tuesday in an effort to defeat a teacher pay amendment tacked on to the state's big biennial appropriations bill.

The expected showdown is the big news as legislators gather in Raleigh today to begin the 19th week of the session.

House and Senate will get the week under way to holding their customary Monday night sessions.

By a 58-53 vote, the House approved an amendment Friday adding 10 million dollars for teacher pay increases to the 1959-61 appropriations bill. The action threw the budget out of kilter, raised the possibility of new taxes and dashed hopes of a June 13 adjournment.

Rep. Clyde Harriss of Rowan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said today, "We're certainly going to make a noble effort to defeat the amendment."

Harriss pointed out he would like to see teachers get more money but said "it's going to take time to bring teacher salaries up to par."

Former State Sen. Joe Eagles Jr. of Wilson, Gov. Hodges' legislative liaison man, said, "We consider the budget that came out of the Joint Appropriations Committee sound and are defending it."

Rep. Carroll Holmes of Perquimans, who offered the teacher pay amendment, has indicated he will try to amend the revenue bill when it comes to the House floor early this week by removing sales tax exemptions on food.

After tacking on the amendment Friday, the House passed the bill on second reading and then placed it on the calendar for third reading Tuesday.

As approved by the committee, the budget called for spending 927 million to operate the state's agencies and institutions during the next two fiscal years.

This included sufficient funds to give teachers a 5 per cent pay raise. The bill would have fallen about 1½ million short of expected revenues, but it was felt no new taxes would be necessary to meet the program.

Court reform and revenue are other issues that will get plenty of legislative attention this week.

The House is scheduled to take up the issue of court reform and a revised state constitution Tuesday. Instead of considering these two bills, the House could elect to act on the combined constitution and court reform legislation which was passed by the Senate Friday.

Also on the House calendar for Tuesday are two bills calling for nearly 48 million dollars in capital improvements at state institutions. The Senate passed the bills Friday.

X-15 Glides

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE Calif. (AP) — The rocket ship X-15, expected some day to carry man 100 miles high at 4,000 miles an hour, successfully made its first glide test today.

A brief announcement said everything went as planned.

This means the ship was dropped at 38,000 feet from a B-52 mother plane, glided for four or five minutes, and landed on a dry lake bed.

Veteran engineer-test pilot Scott Crossfield was at the controls.

The dart-like black craft carried no fuel, and landed on special skids.

It has made four previous captive flights, locked under the B-52's wing.

The glide test had been delayed by various failures of electronic equipment.

Later this year the X-15 will undergo tests with jet engines. Next year all-out flight with rocket engines is planned.

Summer Session At ECC Opens; Big Attendance

East Carolina College opened its 1959 summer session this morning. Indications are that enrollment will show a peak attendance. Registration for late arrivals will continue through Thursday, June 11, at 4:30 p.m., Registrar Robert L. Holt has announced.

Class work in sixteen departments of instruction will begin tomorrow morning at 8 a.m. In addition, a series of workshops, clinics, conferences, and science institutes; a summer music camp and a sports camp; a travel-study tour of the eastern part of the United States and Canada; and other special events are included on the summer program.

After a between-terms holiday, the campus came alive yesterday, when students began arriving at the college to receive dormitory assignments.

By nine o'clock this morning, the Wright building was crowded with students preparing their class schedules and attending to other requirements of registration. Teachers in all departments of instruction, and representatives from the offices of the registrar and the business manager are on duty in the Wright building today to assist students entering the college.

More than 100 high school graduates spent part of the day at the college taking college entrance tests. A number of these students plan to enter East Carolina this summer; others are taking the tests to establish their eligibility to enroll for the fall quarter.

The faculty of the summer session includes approximately 125 members of the regular teaching staff of the college. Also participating in the summer program will be a large group of consultants, lecturers, directors of seminars, and others who will assist in the special events of the session.

Navy Makes First Mail Delivery By Missile From A Sub At Sea

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The Navy today made the first successful delivery of U.S. mail by a guided missile. The missile was fired from a submarine at sea to the Navy's auxiliary air station at Mayport, Fla., at the mouth of the St. John's River near Jacksonville.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield announced the successful delivery at a hastily called press conference an hour and a half after a Navy Regulus I was brought in to Mayport.

The distance traveled by the missile was not disclosed. The Navy would say only that the 60-foot missile was fired from international waters off the coast — meaning more than three miles out.

The cargo of 3,000 letters included one addressed to President Eisenhower.

Other messages in the cargo, all from Postmater General Summerfield, were for members of the Cabinet, members of Congress, justices of the Supreme Court, the governors of all American states and territories, and the postmasters general of the 99 other nations which are members of the Universal Postal Union.

The missile was fired at 10:10 a.m. and landed safely at 10:32 a.m., the department said.

Summerfield, describing the event in a telephone conversation with the Washington Evening Star, said it was a dramatic sight.

He reported the wheeled missile made a perfect landing on the runway, trailing a parachute to slow it down.

The weight of the payload was not immediately disclosed but Summerfield said postal workers were ready for it.

They unloaded the mail, processed it and sped it on its way.

Bus Smashes Into Tree, 16 Farm Laborers Killed

PHOENIX Ariz. (AP)—Sixteen farm laborers were killed and 32 others were injured when a crudely fashioned bus crashed into a tree and exploded near Phoenix today.

The highway patrol, which had difficulty determining the number of charred and cremated bodies in the twisted wreckage, listed these figures as official but said there may be more dead.

All the victims were Mexican nationals.

Many of the injured were reported in serious condition with burns and broken bones.

The patrol quoted the driver, Nato Manuel Gloria Jr., as saying he dozed at the wheel. Gloria said he had been feeling sleepy and was going to stop at an intersection 100 yards ahead to turn the driving over to his assistant.

The driver escaped serious injury.

The workers were en route from a labor office at Mesa, Ariz., to garlic fields at Tolleson, west of Phoenix.

The truck, which had been converted into a bus with sides and a top, left a main suburban thoroughfare just south of the Phoenix city limits, plowed through a ditch and smashed into a tree.

Patrolmen said the head-on crash burst the vehicle's fuel line and caused an explosion.

Elmer Charbeneau, who lives near the scene, said an explosion awakened him.

"It sounded like a loud clap of thunder," he said. "I ran to the window and saw flames spread over the entire bed of the bus. Then I heard screaming.

"By the time I got there, most of those who could get out were wandering in a nearby field or were stretched out in the ditch."

The converted truck had only one exit, a single door at the rear.

Those who escaped appeared to be in a state of shock. They wandered about the field aimlessly.

Two survivors told of the scramble to get out the only door, and how the laborers had to fight their way around a big water barrel and a pile of suitcases.

Leopold Martinez, 28, said he was sitting near the door when he felt the crash. "It knocked me to the floor. The whole bed was afire," he said.

"Three or four men jumped over me and out the door. I crawled to the door and rolled out into the ditch.

"Some of the men were asleep on the floor under the benches. They never had a chance to get out."

The accident was the worst traffic crash in Arizona history.

Suspect Russians Plan Quick Push For Summit Talk

GENEVA (AP) — The Big-Four conference went into its fifth week today amid signs that the Soviet Union would press the Western powers for quick agreement on a summit conference.

Foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France met with the Soviet's Andrei Gromyko at his headquarters here in late afternoon after holding a strategy conference among themselves. They were reported gloomy about prospects for a Berlin agreement after a weekend declaration by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that he would not accept any arrangement which would "perpetuate the occupation regime in West Berlin."

This seemed to rule out a formal accord sought by the West to guarantee the Western position in the Red-encircled city. Some diplomats thought it would not necessarily bar an understanding that the Soviet Union would refrain from any threat or use of force to try to squeeze the Western powers out of Berlin.

Khrushchev said in Budapest before returning to Moscow that East-West accords "undoubtedly will be reached at the summit" even if no agreement is achieved by the foreign ministers.

The Soviet premier displayed confidence a summit meeting will materialize by advising the governments of Finland, Denmark, Sweden and Norway that he may have to postpone the Scandinavian tour he is scheduled to make in August.

Stefan Heymann, chief information officer of the East German government, told a group of Western newsmen flown to East Berlin from Geneva that the issues of Berlin and Germany "can only be solved at the summit."

"There can be no concrete agreement of any kind in Geneva," Heymann said.

It was the threat of a new blockade cutting traffic to the isolated city that made the Berlin crisis acute last year and forced the calling of the foreign ministers' conference in an effort to avoid a military showdown.

U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, Britain's Selwyn Lloyd and France's Maurice Couve de Murville seem to have run out of fresh ideas to propose to the Soviets. Gromyko hasn't come up with anything acceptable to the West.

Eastern diplomats in Geneva began taking an optimistic line over the weekend, talking of a quick, successful conclusion to the foreign ministers' talks with a summit conference to follow.

Western diplomats stuck to their reports that secret talks of the last 10 days have made little or no progress on Berlin. They are keeping a weatheer eye on talks opening in Moscow today between Khrushchev and East German leaders. They could provide a guide to Soviet policy at Geneva.

Car Demolished, Driver Injured During Pursuit

A car was demolished and its driver admitted to the hospital following a high speed chase by a highway patrolman on N.C. 43 West, Saturday night.

According to Highway Patrolman W. E. Williams, the driver of the car, Edgar Allen Jones of Bowling AFB, Washington, D.C., received head injuries when the car which he was operating skidded 252 feet and overturned two times while being pursued by the officer.

The owner of the vehicle, Arthur Lee Hodges of 401 Greenview Drive, was a passenger in the auto.

Patrolman Williams said he observed the car about three miles West of town weaving over the road at a high rate of speed. The patrolman gave chase. The officer said the car was clocked at 110 miles per hour at one point during the chase.

The wreck occurred as the vehicle rounded the curve about a tenth of a mile West of Pitt Memorial Hospital. The officer stated Jones lost control of his speed ing vehicle which then left the road and overturned.

Jones was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol, speeding in excess of 100 miles per hour, reckless driving and driving on the wrong side of the road. Hodges, the owner, was arrested for public drunkeness.

The wreck occurred about 10:25 p.m.

Deadly Chlorine Menacing Town

MCRAE, Ga. (AP) — Fear gripped this Georgia community today as wrecking crews began removing two derailed railroad tank cars containing 16,000 gallons of dangerous chlorine gas.

The main railroad line was cleared about 8:45 a.m. of debris left by the derailment of 19 Southern Railway freight cars. The wrecking crews concentrated on the two cars filled with the irritating and potentially suffocating gas.

The vice president of a chemical firm in Atlanta, William Mackie, pointed out that although clorine is highly dangerous, it is a slow moving gas and not difficult to escape. Moreover, it is not explosive,e xcept that daytime rising temperatures tend to increase the pressure under which it is confined in the tanks.

The grim pile of potential death lay beside a shattered warehouse one block north of Main street and 40 feet from U.S. 441 in this south-central Georgia town of about 3,500.

Army reserve and air patrol units cordoned off the area. Authorities broadcast messages urging residents to be calm.

A helicopter brought gas masks from Warner Robins Air Force Base. Bulldozers started moving the pulpwood.

"We're ready to evacuate," said Mayor George Callahan, "but there's no wind and we don't know which way to go."

Officials of the Olin-Mathison chemical Co. at McIntosh, Ala., arrived by plane to examine the situatiin.

A company official said it was possible for the chlorine in the two cars to contaminate an area in a one-mile radius. The chlorine is shipped in liquid form and turns into a gas when released. It is an essential part of many war gases.

Police Chief E. L. Blume said "the people are all scared but we've advised them to keep calm and stay away from the chlorine tanks. We're just holding on and waiting to see what is decided."

The situation developed Sunday night when 16 freight cars and three diesel engines derailed near the center of town. The cars were part of a 66-car Southern Railway train southbound for Brunswick from Macon.

Support Brown For Demo Race

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The state Democratic Central Committee was on record today pledged to Gov. Edmund Brown for the party's presidential nomination in 1960.

The governor has said he does not seek the nomination. He said he plans to run as a favorite son in the primary just to keep control of the state's delegation to the national convention.

The unanimous resolution adopted by the central Committee Sunday however, made no mention of favorite son status for Brown. It urged him to enter the primary and pledged full support to his candidacy.

Deputy Sheriff Is Slain By Fugitive

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — A deputy sheriff was slain and another man wounded near here today by a fugitive who swapped gunfire with three different groups of a posse trying to track him down.

The fugitive, lying in wait in a wheat field, raised up and fired one shotgun blast from 10 feet away at Deputy Sheriff J. L. Powers. The buckshot struck the officer full in the face, killing him instantly.

The man, a Negro, then ran and eluded two men accompanying Powers.

A short time later, two more possemen surprised the fugitive in some woods. Once more he fired and his shot struck D. L. King in the lip and arm.

Still later, Capt. A. C. Morgan of the North Carolina Prisons Department came upon the man. They traded gunfire and the fugitive again eluded capture.

More than 200 persons—including sheriff's officers from Lee, Harnet, Moore and Chatham counties, State Highway Patrolmen and volunteers—poured into the area.

Bloodhounds and walkie-talkie radios were used in the manhunt.

Lee County Sheriff D. F. Holder said officers had no idea of the identity of the fugitive, believed to be a man sought since he wounded a farmer last week. The sheriff said there had been reports about the county that the man was an escaped prisoner, but he had no confirmation of that.

The search centered near the Swann Station community about 5 or 6 miles southeast of here.

Sheriff Holder said that Powers, Sanford Policeman Ralph Mathews and volunteer posseman Leon Ray Worley were methodically moving across the wheat field. Worley's attention was centered on a barn, Mathews was scanning one area of the field and Powers another when the officer was slain.

King was searching a wooded area with Tucker Summers when they encountered the fugitive. Summers was not hurt and King's wounds were described as not serious.

Capt. Morgan said the Negro man was wearing brown shirt, brown trousers and hunting jacket. The officer said the fugitive was very calm as they traded gunfire.

The search for the convict had been centered in the Swann Station area since last Wednesday when Vernon Elkins, 32, was wounded while operating a tractor. A shotgun blast, fired by a sniper, struck Elkins in the chest and right arm. He has been released from the hospital.

In recent days food has been reported stolen from several houses in the area.

Details of the shooting were not immediately available.

It was the second slaying of a North Carolina law enforcement officer within a week. Sheriff T. E. Bebber, 53, of Alexander County, was shot and killed at Taylorsville last Tuesday while attempting to question Willard Ellis, 38, after a domestic quarrel.

Vance Board To Reconsider Its Peace-Enforcing

RALEIGH (AP)—Vance County commissioners have agreed to look again at the possibility of the county hiring additional law enforcement officers to relieve National Guard troops on the scene of a long textile strike at Henderson.

Gov. Hodges reported to his news conference today that Chairman J. Furman Satterwhite of the Vance commissioners wired him of its decision to reconsider.

In the wire, Hodges said, Satterwhite notified him a special commissioners' meeting has been called June 10 to talk over the matter.

Hodges had been critical of the county's initial action, leaving the responsibility for order on the strike scene up to state authorities.

Governor Plugs For Budget Line

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Hodges plugged today for Tar Heel lawmakers to hold the budget line.

He told his news conference he hopes the House will reconsider and remove from the budget an additional 10 million dollars for school teacher pay.

"I am backing Chairman Clyde Harriss and the Appropriations Committee," Hodges said in answer to questions on his stand on the money matter.

The governor also said he considers provisions adequate for public welfare. He said he is "reliably informed" there will not necessarily be cuts in grants for old age assistance and aid to dependent children, as argued by advocates of increased funds for welfare.

"There is a tremendous amount of confusion and misinformation about welfare, a lot of emotion," said Hodges.

The House last Friday wrote in the 10 million for school teachers, but defeated an attempt to obtain slightly less than half a million for public welfare.

17-Year-Old Slain In County Saturday

WINTERVILLE — A 17-year-old Negro youth was shot and killed at his home located in the Reedy Branch section Saturday night.

The dead youth was identified by Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson as Robert Lee Whitehurst, a farm worker who lived on Rt. 1, Winterville.

Being held in Pitt County Jail on a murder charge in connection with the shooting is James Cherry, 21-year-old Negro also of Rt. 1, Winterville.

Sheriff Tyson said Cherry, who was arrested at a neighboring house Saturday evening, had admitted the shooting.

The sheriff said he had learned Whitehurst and Cherry had been to Greenville Saturday afternoon. The two began arguing and returned home. Investigation showed Whitehurst went to his home and Cherry left. Later Cherry returned with a shotgun, went to the back porch of Whitehurst's home and allegedly fired at Whitehust who was standing in the hall near the front door.

The blast struck Whitehurst in the chest and death was almost instant, Sheriff Tyson stated.

The shooting took place around 8:30.

The .12 gauge shot gun allegedly used in the shooting was found in a shelter on a farm owned by Cherry's employer.

Cherry was arrested by Sheriff Tyson and Deputy Loyd Manning. They were assisted in their investigation by Winterville Police. Also investigating was Coroner Withers Harvey.

Sheriff Tyson said Cherry would probably be tried at the June 22 term of Superior Court.

Big Gator Slain In Pamlico River

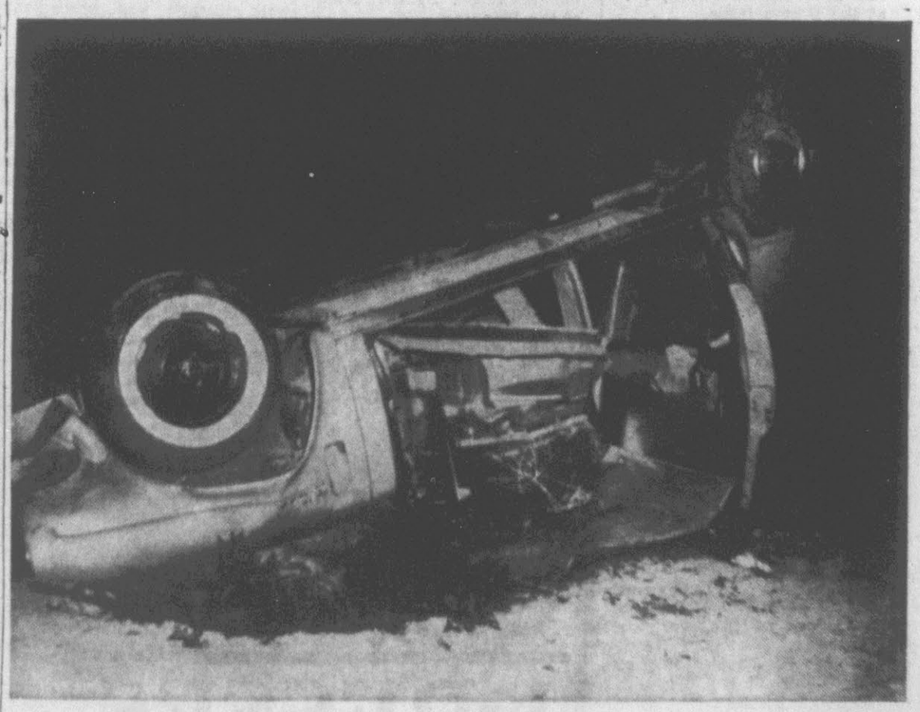
WASHINGTON — A dead alligator 11 feet, five inches long was pulled from Pamlico River here yesterday to climax a three-day hunt which began Friday when the reptile was seen near the Coast Guard's bouy yard on the edge of the Washington business district.

The alligator apparently died from effects of four rifle shots which were fired into him late Friday afternoon by Clarence Paul of the Washington Rescue Squad. The reptile was pulled from the river between the U.S. 17 bridge and oil docks on the South side of the river.

Tom Spencer, newseditor of the Washington Daily News, said this morning the reptile age was estimated to be 37-and-a-half years. He said the estimate was figured on the number of growth rings between the alligator's hind feet and tail tip.

Spencer added that the alligator is the first to be pulled from the river, although there have been reports of them in Chocowinity Bay, between Washington and Chocowinity. Spencer also said there have been no reports of property damage caused by alligators in the area.

Car Overturns, 2 Occupants Unhurt



THREE-HUNDRED AND SIXTY FEET OF SKID MARKS . . . lead to this wreck on the Old River Road. The driver and passenger escaped uninjured.

William B. Wilson, Jr. of 207 Raleigh Ave was charged with speeding in excess of 55-miles-per-hour, driving on the wrong side of the road, and failure to reduce speed when approaching a curve after his car overturned on the Old River Road at 11:00 o'clock Saturday night.

Accrding to investigating patrolman Howard Winslow, 360 feet of skid marks were found at the scene of the wreck. The Patrolman said they were not brake marks but marks caused by rounding the curve at high speed.

Winslow quoted the driver as saying he was approaching the curve when he met an oncoming vehicle which was in his traffic lane. He then pulled to the right to avoid the auto and lost control of his vehicle on the curve.

Neither Wilson or Jasper Clayton Cox, a passenger in the car was injured in the crash which demolished the car.

The accident occured near the intersection of the Belvoir Highway and the Old River Road behind the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Ike Asks Scrapping Of Interest Curbs On Bonds

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower today asked Congress to scrap the interest ceiling on government bonds, both long and short term. He also called for an increase in the national debt ceiling.

In a special message, Eisenhower said such steps are necessary for successful management of the public debt, now a record 286 billion dollars.

He said the Treasury Department will formally put before Congress requests for:

1. Removal of the current 3¼ per cent interest ceiling on savings bonds.

2. Elimination of the present 4¼ per cent interest limit on marketable bonds of more than five years maturity.

3. A hike in the permanent national debt ceiling from the current 283 billion dollars to 288 billion dollars, plus an increase in the temporary limit from the present 288 billion to 295 billion.

In the savings bond field, Eisenhower said the Treasury Department plans a new interest rate of 3¾ per cent on all series "E" and "H" bonds sold beginning June 1. That is an interest hike or a half of one per cent.

Eisenhower said further the Treasury Department plans an "improved interest rate" on all series "E" and "H" bonds now outstanding, as well as improved extension terms for outstanding "E" bonds when they mature.

"The public debt must be managed so as to safeguard the public credit," Eisenhower told Congress.

"It must be managed in a way that is consistent with economic growth and stability."

The President cited reasons why he believes removal of the interest ceiling on government bonds is necessary at this time.

Rapid growth in borrowing demands of corporations, individuals, state and local governments tends to diminish the amount of funds available for investment in direct federal government securities, he said.

Also, Eisenhower added, the bond market has been affected by recent preference among some buyers for common stocks.

The President noted that some bonds are priced in the market to yield more than 4¼ per cent.

Thus, he said, the current ceiling makes it virtually impossible to sell government bonds in the competitive market.

Eisenhower said the government must do more long-term borrowing in order to "avoid undue shortening of the public debt," which is inflationary.

"The achievement of a fiscal position that allows our revenues to cover our expenditures — as well as to produce some surplus for debt retirement — will improve substantially the environment in which debt management operates," Eisenhower said.

"Greater flexibility of debt management action is required, however, under present day conditions if a reasonable schedule of maturities is to be maintained and the safeguards against inflation strengthened."

Couple Marries In Moose Lodge

Miss Arline Rose Marie Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August T. Schmidt of Greenville, became the bride of Leonard Harold Winerman, son of Mr. and Mrs Richard A. Winerman of Bradley Beach, N. J., Saturday evening at the Greenville Moose Club.

The Rev. William M. Howard, minister of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, performed the double ring ceremony.

Miss Nancy Jane Carroll of Farmville, accompanied by Mrs. Ester Kidd, sang "I Love You Truly" and "Through the Years."

The vows were spoken before an improvised altar of emerald greens, palms, huckleberry, flanked by seven branch candelabra and Easter lilies in tall standards. The pews were marked with satin bows and lilies.

Dressed in a floor-length princess gown of silk bombazine with Chantilly lace, the bride carried a formal bouquet of stephanotis and lilies-of-the-valley centered with a white orchid. Her gown was fashioned with a scooped neckline and three-quarter sleeves. Garlands of lace trimmed the bouffant skirt. A silk illusion veil was attached to a crown of matching lace that was re-embroidered with pearls.

Miss Sandra Bornstein of New York City, a former roommate of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a light blue waltz length gown of silk organza over taffeta, fashioned along princess lines, and a satin headband with the circular veil.

Bridesmaids were Miss Nan Williams of Farmville, Miss Nancy Clarke of Balboa Canal Zone, Miss Becky Worsley of Washington, and Miss Kathryne Johnson of Greenville. They wore dresses like that of the maid of honor. Their arm bouquets were of pink summer flowers tied with "Better Times" ribbon.

The mother of the bride wore a lavendar dress of imported silk organza trimmed with satin of the same color and a lace yoke. The mother of the bridegroom wore a pale pink silk chiffon dress with an underbodice of lace. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

The bride is a graduate of Balboa High School in the Canal Zone and Duke University. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pace College of New York and is now employed with Production Metals, Inc. in Miami, Fla.

A reception was held at the Moose Club immediately following the wedding. An imported heirloom cloth covered the bride's table and was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with natural flowers, flanked by a pair of decorated wedding bells filled with mints. On either end of the table were bone cherubs filled with dainty flowers. A toast to the bride and the bridegroom was drunk from antique champagne glasses.

The refreshment table was covered with a white satin cloth and centered with a tall silver bowl filled with a double larkspur blue delphinium, baby's breath and pink roses. At one end of the table a crystal punch bowl was encircled with southern smilax and orange blossoms.

Champagne punch, tidbits and cecorated petit fours were served.

For traveling, the bride chose an outfit of pure silk white and black sheath dress with matching black redingote. She wore white accessories with the white orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet. After a wedding trip to the Virgin Islands, the couple will reside at 125 North Shoe Drive, Miami Beach, Fla.

White House Needs Furniture

By EDWARD KITCH

CHICAGO (AP) — What the White House needs is some American furniture, says Chicagoan A. L. Margolis.

An authority on Early American furniture, Margolis returned from a visit to Washington, D. C., and said that he never before realized that the White House contains no examples of the pure artistry of the founding fathers.

"There may be some pieces of the real thing here and there, but if they are, they are overpowered by sideboards after Sheraton, chairs after Chippendale and everything after Hepplewhite," he said.

"There should be an Early American room," Margolis said. "It should be a room the school children can go into, not be herded past with a brief glimpse through a doorway."

Margolis, a furniture manufacturer, turned his production to Early American reproductions several years ago.

"We had been making contemporary furniture," he said, "but I felt and still feel, that we were moving too far from our origins."

"All households have their cleaning problems, even the White House, but it would be nice to have one room the children could walk through and where they would feel welcome," he said.

Wedding Bells For Mayo-Barnes, Ormond-Deifell

Mrs. Gerald Mack Mayo

ROCK RIDGE—Miss Linda Lee Barnes and Lieutenant Gerald Mack Mayo, USAF, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in the Marsh Swamp Baptist Church.

Miss Barnes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Luther Barnes, Jr. of Rock Ridge and Mr. Mayo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hassell Brown Mayo of Falkland.

The Rev. Daniel Rivers officiated. Mrs. William F. Brame presented the wedding music.

A background of palms and fern centered with a tall basket of white gladiola, snapdragons and larkspur, flanked by two seven branch candlelabra holding lighted white tapers was the setting of the double-ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of pure Italian silk taffeta, trimmed in imported princes lace re-embroidered in seed pearls. The dress was fashioned with a tight basque, scoop neckline and long tight sleeves, with the neckline outlined with the lace and pearls. It had a bouffant skirt with cascades of lace, and featured a chapel length train. Her fingertip veil of French illusion was attached to a cap of lace embellished with pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of lily-of-the-valley and stephanotis.

Miss Lynn Dare Carroll, the bride's college roommate acted as maid of honor. She wore a gown of yellow taffeta designed with a round neckline and featured the princess style. Her headdress was a picture hat with the open crown outlined with material matching her gown. She carried a bouquet of summer daisies showered with white ribbons and fashioned on the cascade line.

Cousin of the bride, Miss Susan Barnes Bissette, was flower girl. Her dress was of yellow organza over taffeta. A circlet of summer daisies was used as a headdress and she carried a miniature bouquet matching that of the honor attendant.

The bridegroom's father acted as best man. Ushers were Robert Luther Barnes, III, brother of the bride, Clayton Brown Mayo, brother of the bridegroom, Berry Vause of Chapel Hill and William Cayton of Washington.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a dress of beige organza over taffeta. She wore matching accessories and a corsage of green cymbidium orchids.

Wearing a dress of navy blue linen, the bridegroom's mother chose a corsage of white cymbidium orchids.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at their home.

For traveling, the bride changed into a green sheath dress with matching accessories and wore a corsage of stephanotis.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will be at home in Selma, Ala., August 25.

Out-of-town guests were from Pulaski, Va., Chevy-Chase, Md., Bethlehem, Pa., Washington, Greensboro, Winston - Salem, Burlington, Chapel Hill, Richmond, Va. and Marinna, Fla.

Poultry seasoning is good added to a meat loaf or sprinkled over pork chops before cooking.

30 Years Ago Today

June 8, 1929

The 20th summer session of East Carolina Teachers College will open tomorrow. Dr. L. R. Meadows, director of the summer school, in a recent interview gave out the information that the summer school will be attended by fewer pupils than in former years. This is probably due to the attitude set up by curtailment legislation.

The college has been forced to curtail in the teaching personnel for next year on account of the retrenchment policy followed by the last Legislature.

One teacher has been dropped from each of the following departments: Physical Education, Science and Music. Further curtailment will probably be necessary among the officers and administrative staff.

School Ends

STOKES—A picnic and commencement exercises brought to a close the Daily Vacation Bible School which was held at Sweet Gum Grove Free Will Baptist Church during the week of June 1-5 each morning from 9:00-11:30 Miss Carrie Lee Whitehurst was director of the school, Mrs. Sam Alexander served as secretary.

Teachers, assistants and helpers were: Nursery, Mrs. Heber Briley, Mrs. Howard Briley, Mrs. Hugh James, Mrs. Paul Worthington, Mrs. James Smith, Mrs. Juanita Huggert, Mrs. Herbert Brown and Mrs. Russell Brown; Beginners, Mrs. Lewis Whitehurst, Mrs. Aulander Tetterton, Mrs. Ronald Whitehurst and Mrs. Nita Bellflower; Primary No. 1, Mrs. Roland Fleming and Mrs. Carroll Whichard; Primary No. 2, Mrs. John Whichard and Mrs. Eric Whichard; Junior, Mrs. William Francis Tyson and Mrs. Charles Alfred Forbes; Intermediate, Mrs. Charlie Martin, Mrs Frank Whitehurst Jr. and Mrs. Esper Futrell; and Adult Class, Rev. D. W. Alexander.

Refreshment Committee was composed of Messrs. Wilmer Rawls, William Crandall, Clarence Whitehurst, and Joe Johnson.

Next time you prepare a sage-seasoned poultry dressing, add an extra amount of onion cooked first in a little butter or margarine. Sage takes no onion!

GREENSBORO—On Saturday afternoon, the First Presbyterian Church was the setting for the wedding of Miss Louise Holliday Deifell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Jey Deifell of Greensboro, and Herbert Lyman Ormond Jr., son of Mr and Mrs. Herbert Lyman Ormond of Greenville.

Dr. John A. Redhead, pastor of the bride, officiated at the ceremony. Prior to the ceremony a program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Ellis Caldwell, and a song was sung by Miss Louise McGee, sorority sister of the bride.

The selections played by Mrs. Caldwell included "Largo" by Handel, "Adoration" by Borowski, "Evening Star" by Wagner, "Prayer" by Bowlmann, and "Arioso" by Bach. Immediately following the entrance of the mother of the bride, Miss McGee sang "Love Never Faileth" which is the 13th chapter of II Corinthians put to music by Frederick W. Root. For the benediction, as the couple was kneeling, she sang Lamotte's version of "The Lord's Prayer." The traditional wedding marches from "Lohengrin" by Wagner and "Wedding March" by Mendelssohn were used as the processional and the recessional. The tower bells were rung as the couple finished their vows.

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride wore a bridal gown designed of shimmering white crystalette, featured with a voluminous four tiered skirt with a chapel train and fastened with tiny self buttons. The shirred bodice continued over the shoulders to form a low circular neckline and cap-like sleeves. Her above-the-elbow length gloves were fashioned of the dress material. Crowning the attire was the heirloom full-length Brussels rose-point lace veil lined in imported English illusion. The veil was purchased in Italy by the bride's mother, worn by her in her own wedding and by her sisters at their weddings. Her bouquet was a cascade of stephanotis, lily-of-the-valley and white orchids.

Miss Terry Anne Garrison, former Woman's College roommate of the bride, attended as maid of honor. She wore a cocktail length, full skirted dress of nile green silk organza with matching veil and shoes. She carried a basket of garden flowers.

Other attendants were Miss Ann Deifell, sister of the bride, and Miss Elizabeth Allen of Florence, S. C., cousin of the bride. They were dressed like Miss Garrison.

Mr. Ormond served as best man for his son, and the groomsmen were John Jey Deifell Jr., brother of the bride; James Thomas Grier of Spartanburg, S. C., brother-in-law of the groom; James Curtis Hendrix and John Albert Messick, both of Greenville; Donald Jordan Rose of Burlington; and the Rev. Robert McKenzie Jr. of Durham. Assisting the groomsmen were senior ushers Harold A. Collins of Southern Pines, Joseph Holliday and John Monroe Holliday, both of Gallivants Ferry, S. C., uncles of the bride, and Oscar Burnett of Greensboro.

Mrs. Deifell, mother of the bride, wore a tea length sheath dress of powder blue lace with chiffon trim and matching accessories and a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. Ormond, mother of the bridegroom, wore a tea length sheath dress of turquoise lace with satin trim and matching accessories. She also wore a white orchid corsage.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple greeted their guests in the vestibule of the church.

Later, when Mr. and Mrs. Ormond left for their wedding trip to Bermuda, the bride wore a beige linen costume dress with white accessories and a white orchid.

Mrs. Ormond was graduated from Greensboro Senior High and attended Woman's College in Greensboro and the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. She is a 1959 graduate of the University with an A. B. degree in Education. She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority at Chapel Hill, a member of the Greensboro Junior Spinsters Club, and was presented at the 1955 Greensboro Debutante Ball.

Mr. Ormond attended the University of North Carolina and while there became a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha social fraternity. After serving in the U. S. Army for two years, he continued his studies at East Carolina College and is now in the wholesale distributing business with his father in Greenville. He is also a member of the Greenville Rotary Club.

After June 20, the couple will be at home at 603 Oak Street in Greenville.

Greenville people attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Harrington, Dr. and Mrs. K. B. Pace, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gray, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Crisp, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Hendrix, Mr. and Mrs. John Messick, Mrs. Reid Perkins, Mrs. J. H. Thomas, Mrs. S. M. Crisp, Mrs. Lee Hannah and Miss Mary Will Long.

Mrs. Herbert Lyman Ormond, Jr.

Moore-Rasberry Wed

Miss Joyce Yvonne Rasberry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dalton J. Rasberry of Bell Arthur, and Harvey Thomas Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hervey Moore, were united in marriage in a ceremony of simplicity and dignity at the Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church last Saturday evening.

The Rev. J. Herbert Burgess performed the double ring ceremony before a background of palm leaves and fern, with arrangements of white gladiola and burning white tapers. The family pews were marked with white satin bridal rings with pink and white bows, which accentuated the color of the pink wedding.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Roy Turnage Jr. of Ayden, organist, and Mrs. James Blanchard, soloist. Mrs. Blanchard, wearing a pink formal gown of tulle and net, sang "I Love You Truly" and the "Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

James Blanchard, uncle of the groom, served as best man. Ushers were Elmer Flake, cousin of the bride, and Billy May.

Miss Betty Sue Flake of Bell Arthur was her cousin's maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of pink tulle and chiffon with tiny puffed sleeves. The full skirt extended into rows of tiny ruffles and she wore a tiny pink Juliet hat with a tiny prayer veil. She carried a nosegay of white carnations centered with a huge pink feathered carnation and featured pink satin streamers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional long formal wedding gown fashioned along princess lines. The bodice was white satin covered with American lace and the satin skirt was covered with tulle. A lace coat with long fitted sleeves and a stand-up collar covered the bodice. Her fingertip veil of imported silk illusion was attached to a tiny cathedral cap which featured orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book centered with a pure white orchid.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Rasberry chose a Dior dress in nile green which featured tiny ruffled tucks and white accessories. She wore a white carnation corsage with pink and white ribbons.

Mrs. Moore wore a Venetian blue dress with matching accessories and a white carnation corsage.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple received in the vestibule of the church.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, Mrs. Moore changed to a blue sheath shantung dress with elbow length sleeves and white accessories. She wore the white orchid lifted from her prayer book.

A meringue has a good chance of being "leakproof" if the sugar called for is beaten, rather than folded in to the egg whites.

An Area Airport Is Still Best Bet

Another step in laying the groundwork for creation of an area air facility for Eastern North Carolina hangs in the balance Tuesday when the Senate gives final consideration to the proposal for an Eastern Carolina Airport Authority.

The need for more adequate air transportation for this area of the state long has been recognized. Also generally recognized is the fact that Eastern North Carolina probably will never have adequate air transportation if its communities continue to compete against each other for available air service. By joining together in a common effort, however, the area can demand and justify air service far superior to anything individual communities have been able to obtain by working independently.

During the past eight years repeated efforts have been made to create an atmosphere in which a joint effort to obtain adequate air service would be practical. Each time things have progressed well to a point only to be shattered in the final planning stages because one or more communities decided it would go-it-alone in this matter of obtaining air service.

The proposed legislation now pending would provide an area airport authority with sufficient powers to move ahead with a joint plan for obtaining adequate air service if the various cities and counties choose to cooperate with each other. It would provide an approved structure under which plans could be developed and carried out.

Whether or not a joint effort would be successful, would depend, of course, upon the desire of the individual cities and counties involved to cooperate in the undertaking. But if the creation of such an area authority is approved, the framework will be provided.

Certainly there can be no harm in this approach to the problem of lack of adequate air transportation which this section faces. Creation of the area authority will not bind the cities or counties of the area to go through with any preconceived program. It will merely afford them the necessary organization—equipped with necessary powers—through which to work toward that end if they desire.

In spite of opposition which has come from Sen. D. J. Rose of Wayne County and Sen. Dallas Allford of Nash County, the Eastern Carolina Airport Authority bill introduced by Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Pitt and Sen. Henry G. Shelton of Edgecombe should receive legislative approval. The merits which members of the Senate think the program has is indicated by the 22-12 vote by which the Senate approved the bill on its second reading last week. When the bill comes up for its third reading in the Senate tomorrow, it should be given approval. It should also be approved when the bill reaches the House.

A Change In Convening Date Appears Useless

The House has approved and sent to the Senate a bill which would restore the January convening date for the General Assembly in lieu of the February date adhered to in 1957 and 1959.

In more ways than one, this to us would represent a backward step by the General Assembly.

The biggest argument for returning to the January date for starting legislative sessions is that it will no longer be necessary to wait until late April for revenue estimates if the state adopts the income tax withholding plan. While this would apply where individual income taxes are concerned, it seems less than likely now that a provision covering corporations will be written into the withholding tax law.

Therefore it would still be necessary for the state to wait until April to know how much the state's income tax take is from businesses and the large number of citizens who will not be covered by the withholding system. It is entirely probable that state revenue from these sources not covered under the withholding law will appreciably affect any budget estimates made prior to the time when such reports and payments are received.

By going back to a January convening date, the legislature would be handicapping itself in dealing with the all-important financial problems that must be faced every two years.

The February convening date for the legislature has worked well these past two sessions, and has not brought about any pronounced disadvantages for the lawmakers. All things considered, it appears that legislation has moved along more smoothly with the later convening date than was the case with the earlier date.

While the legislators know first-hand the problems involved much better than those who watch their actions from the outside, there appears to us nothing to be gained and perhaps much to be lost, by moving back to the January convening date.

We trust the Senate will give thorough consideration to the proposal before concurring in the action taken last week in the House.

Might Ask For Court Opinion

By LYNN NISBET

ADVISORY — There was some talk around the Senate that the Supreme Court might be asked for an advisory opinion on procedure in submitting the proposed constitution to vote of the people before the bills are finally enacted in the House. Amendments adopted in the Senate which resulted in third reading passage of the constitution bill by a vote of 43-0, leaves little doubt the House will accept the general provisions. Some minor adjustments can be worked out in conference.

Suggested wisdom of obtaining an advisory opinion stems from the double presentation of the courts article. Senator Spencer Bell introduced a bill designed to amend to existing constitution by rewriting the judicial sections. The exact phraseology of that bill as several times amended in committee was incorporated in the whole constitution bill. Both have now passed the Senate, each requiring a vote of the people to make them effective.

Question is: If both are submitted, and the people should adopt one and vote down the other, which vote would prevail? The situation would be that the people would have voted both for and against the court reforms.

Senator Bell and other staunch advocates of the bar committees court recommendations contend that a favorable vote for that bill would count against an unfavorable vote on exactly the same subject matter in the full constitution. Senator Lindsay Warren and others who support the constitution commission bill, including court reform, insist that is asking for two bites out of one cherry. They say either the whole thing should be offered as a new constitution, or separate bills for each section as amendments should be prepared, with only one vote chance at any of them.

PACKAGE — Senator Warren obtained adoption of an amendment tending to hedge against piecemeal amendments. His amendment would designate the document as "the Constitution of 1960." Without that clause, whether approved in whole or in part, the product would still be the constitution of 1868 "as amended."

The constitution has been amended more than 130 times in the past 90 years, but only once has an entirely new text been considered by the General Assembly. That was in 1933, when the Legislature passed the submitting bills, but by a fluke as interpreted in advisory opinions by the Supreme Court justices it was never voted upon by the people.

That indicent has been widely publicized. The same Legislature which authorized vote on the State Constitution "at the next general election" ordered a special general election for a vote on repeal of the 18th (prohibition) amendment to the Federal Constitution. Failure to submit the issue at that election prevented submitting it later, since the requirement was for the "next general election."

Those who are earnestly interested in court reform and others who are more concerned about other constitutional provisions do not want to take a chance of having all the work of two study commissions and many days in the Legislature negated by another legal or judicial fluke.

The Justices may be asked to give opinions on two questions: If the people vote for the court section separately on one ballot and the whole business, including courts, on another, and results are different, which will prevail?

Or, if the people ratify both ideas, one a complete new text and one an amendment to one article of the present constitution, which would indicate satisfaction with the rest of it, which constitution would be controlling?

The question of dual submission of one issue has nothing to do with the merits of the old or new constitutional provisions. It has to do only with the mechanics of ratifying or refusing proposals submitted by the General Assembly. Statements made in floor debate indicate there is difference of opinion among Supreme Court Justices about merits of pending proposals. These personal feelings are not expected to influence legal decisions, in event the advisory opinion is requested.

POLITICS — Nobody has intimated that the high court would play politics with this matter, but there is definite evidence that politics influenced adoption of the amendment limiting representation in the Senate to not more than one Senator for one county. The small counties have enough strength in the Legislature to adopt this provision, but the big counties have enough voters to defeat it at the polls. (They do just that for a similar provision two years ago.)

That is why advocates of court reform want two whacks at the question and hope they can submit their proposals in such manner as to facilitate ratification, without the burden of unpopular ideas.

Inescapable conclusion is that the constitutional revision bills have been strengthened for legislative support, but probably weakened for popular vote in an election.

People Still Like You, Buck—

By ED CREAGH

That White House Beat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Had a letter from a journalism student the other day. He'd seen my name over a story about President Eisenhower, and wondered how a man goes about covering the White House. I wish I could tell him. I've been trying to find out since 1947.

All you really need is the strength of a lion, an encyclopedia in your brain, an endless capacity for boredom, and a family that is used to getting along without you.

It helps if you have a talent for missing meals, battling small-town cops, passing up cocktail parties, hopping off moving trains, and — when necessary — clawing press secretaries.

Marvin L. Arrowsmith, who regularly covers the White House for The Associated Press, comes as close as anybody I know to meeting all these requirements. The rest of us occasionally fall by the wayside.

I'll never live down that time I missed a presidential press plane in Chicago.

One part of the White House beat consists in growing bunions on your spine from sitting around the lobby. Now and then you buttonhole callers from such exciting groups as the Save the Chipmunks Federation. Or you get a thriller-diller of a report on corn pone production since 1903.

You never relax. There's always a big story coming, and often when you least expect it. Then you sprint for your telephone, politely bashing in some other reporter's ribs with your elbow.

That's the time when you wish you had paid more attention in school to history, economics, political science and jiu-jitsu.

Eventually, sooner than later, you go "on the road" with a president. They all travel.

You go by plane or train or credit card car, or slump through the mud in your formerly shiny new shoes.

One day you live like a prince. A President goes to some suave resort and you can't lift your hand without finding a daiquiri or a Hollywood starlet in it.

The next day you may find yourself slomping along some trout stream trying to catch a glimpse of the president, who remembered to bring along fishing tackle while you didn't.

Then there was the time in Mexico when your correspondent discovered the only mud puddle in a drought-stricken province and sank himself up to the knees in it.

Or the time we followed Harry Truman down the Potomac in a World War I sub-chaser with ice floes chasing us and no toilet facilities aboard.

It's a great life if you can stand it. Anybody who can should be selected immediately to be the first human being to be launched into space.

Other Editors Saying
No Concessions To Make

(Henderson Dispatch)

Premier Khrushchev said last week that the Soviet Union has no reason to make any concessions to the West on the German issue. He added that Western proposals advanced at the Big Four foreign ministers' conference in Geneva do not "contain a single element for negotiations." He does not negotiate on the principle of "concession for concession," the Moscow dictator declared.

On the contrary, the Western group has come up with the idea of "leaving the divided city (of Berlin) as it is — but removing flash points of possible friction." That in itself is a step on the part of the free nations toward appeasement. It is not surprising; actually it was feared and expected.

Herein lies the danger in getting together with Communists. They come up in advance with their proposals, always taking the initiative, and leaving the West to wiggle like a worm in hot ashes trying to find a way out.

No one but the Russians has suggested any change in the Berlin situation. But the Kremlin moves on the theory that the way to gain its ends is to off new proposals and shout its ultimatum with the idea of getting whatever it can, and writing that down as a gain — which definitely it is.

What is going on at Geneva now is but a foretaste of what may be expected if a summit meeting is held later. Anything that can be wangled from the Allied group is that much of a victory for the Communists.

The Western emissaries went into this conference in the attitude of cringing before the Soviets and hoping that something profitable might result. The record of history ought to be sufficient to prove the fallacy of such an attitude. A concession now will be no more than the groundwork for further demands from Khrushchev later.

Why the free nations cannot and do not take the initiative has never been explained. Their policy is to let well enough alone as long as Moscow remains quiet. Then the Reds come along with their threats and inch by inch wrest from the Allies a little here and a little there.

The attitude of the democracies is that of retreat in the hope of avoiding atomic warfare that could bring the destruction of civilization. As a matter of fact, that very danger is encompassing the world by the gradual erosion of the principles of freedom, so that the end results ultimately will be the same.

Free peoples must assume an attitude of firmness fully as rigid as that presented by the Kremlin. Only in that manner shall we be able to save ourselves. Certainly liberty will not be preserved by steady retreat in the face of challenges from an ambitious, dictatorial hierarchy which constantly revels in the brandishing of power as a means of attaining its goals.

That Slichter Inflation Theory

By RALPH ROBEY

Sumner Slichter, of Harvard University, is widely known for his defense of creeping inflation. He maintains it is necessary to assure continuous economic growth. Other persons believe inflation is inevitable, although probably a majority of these do not think it is desirable. A small investment firm recently issued a letter under the heading "The Blessing of Inflation." Its statements and arguments are almost unbelievable.

History Refutes Writer's Thesis

For example, it is said: "We know of no period in any country's history when a consistently rising level of production has not been accompanied by rising prices." Had the writer of this looked at the history of prices and production in this nation he could not in honesty have made this statement. During the eighties and up until 1895 we had a period of extraordinary growth. In the 1920's we also had stable prices and growth continued. It was not until the depression of the 1930's that inflation became an official government policy, and it wasn't too successful in bringing about prosperity.

It also is said "that the only times of real dollar stability have been hard times." This is not even approximately true. It would be more accurate to say that hard times are characterized by either rapidly rising or rapidly falling prices. We had real dollar stability from 1951 through 1955, and we had nothing justifying the term "Hard times" during those years. Granted there was a recession in 1954, but it was both mild and short, and by 1955 we were at new highs in production, employment gross national product and all other broad economic measures.

Here is another example of amazing logic: "The people who rant against inflation rationalize their position in the face of continuing reality: the success of inflation . . . They answer normalcy by pointing to a hideous reckoning in the future. It has to be in the future, because there is no proof in the present that an intelligently administered inflation won't work." No description is given of an "intelligently administered inflation," but it is pointed out that Russia and France have simply turned $100 bills into $1 dollar bills whenever the currency debasement chased prices too high." This, of course, is not monetary management at all; it is the reflection of a nation finding itself in an impossible position and taking drastic measures to attempt to get back to a condition which makes continuation feasible. Germany in its great inflation might also have been cited.

The letter ends with this question: "Would the retired people on fixed incomes be retired at all with any kind of income if it were not for America's mighty, inflation nourished productive power?" We have many millions of retired persons in this nation, and their retirement has not been the result of inflation and their welfare has been hurt rather than helped by inflation. Even with the many increases which have been made in social security, the real purchasing power of the pensions has not provided them with an easy life. Those who are living on their own savings have had a drastic shrinkage of purchasing power.

Now what does the record really show about inflation and growth?

First, it shows that there can be growth in periods of falling prices, stable prices, and rising prices. No one likes general falling prices, but we need price flexibility, with some prices declining, and some rising. In this way we can attain at leats reasonable price stability overall, and that will contribute more to sustainable growth than either rising or falling price levels.

Can't Escape Inflation "Fallout"

Second, there is no method by which the public can protect itself against inflation. Some persons may gain, but their gain will be at the expense of other persons. There is, in short, no method by which one may guard himself against inflation. The most he can do is lessen its bad effects upon himself.

Third, there is no basis for assuming that it is possible to have a creeping inflation. Those who urge a price rise of two or three per cent a year are inviting economic disaster.

Finally, a rising price level is not conducive to rising production. Business does not, and in general will not, make an investment on the assumption that prices will be higher and higher. An investment is made on the basis of possible profits at current prices.

Tips On How To Invest

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass., — A small investor should first buy a little stock in the best bank in his community. Not only is this a safe investment; but it gives him prestige and a source of advice on financial matters. After buying the stock, he should get personally acquainted with the chief executive officer, who may be the President, Vice President, or Cashier.

(1) LIFE INSURANCE AND A HOME

Theoretically, if we are entering into an age of inflation and and you are likely to live twenty years or so, life insurance should not be a good investment. You had better put the money into a small home with an adjoining vacant lot. However, you may not live twenty years, or even five years, in which case a life insurance policy would be your very best investment.

(2) BUY WELL-DIVERSIFIED COMMON STOCKS

These should be listed on the New York Stock Exchange and approved by your banker friend or by a seasoned investment counselor. They should be common stocks of companies without large bond issues or cumulative preferred issues.

(3) WATCH LABOR RELATIONS

The greatest clouds on the investment horizon today are creeping Socialism in Government and unreasonable Labor Leaders. Perhaps the safest rule is to buy the stocks of companies which have just been through long and difficult strikes, with a final settlement satisfactory to all. These companies should be free from major strikes for a considerable time.

(4) BUY FOR CASH

Put the certificates in a safe deposit box in the bank of which you have bought stock. If you have all your stock certificates paid for, and will hold them, you cannot be wiped out when the next panic and depression comes; good stocks always "come back." But those who buy on borrowed money or on margin usually suffer total loss.

(5) IMPORTANCE OF PATIENCE

For every stock buyer there must be a seller, irrespective of the price. Stocks go up when more people are impatient to buy, while stocks go down when more people are impatient to sell. Buy your stocks when other people are frightened and anxious to sell. Fortunes are made by bucking — not by following — the crowd, which is usually wrong.

(6) IMPORTANCE OF FACTS

Depend upon what the published manuals report, rather than upon tips by brokers or friends. You can always consult the manuals on file in the Trust Department of your friendly bank, free of charge. The Trust Officer will gladly help you interpret these printed reports.

(7) INVESTING FOR INCOME AND GROWTH

The small investor should buy for Income and Growth rather than for speculation. I believe that the stocks of Public Utilities offer the best such opportunities. Later on, you can learn to buy for profit.

(8) CONSIDER COMPANIES OWNING LAND AND NATURAL RESOURCES

The Government can print unlimited amounts of bonds and money; but only God can make more land, oil, gas, and minerals.

(9) IMPORTANCE OF CHARACTER

The value of stocks depends very largely upon the managements. This is something you must talk over with your banker. The manuals, card files, and other publications of the Trust Officer do not disclose the character of the managements. Managements are apt to be the best in companies producing useful products rather than in the liquor business, for instance, or even in companies dependent upon fashion and other intangibles.

(10 IMPORTANCE OF CORRECT TIMING

Stock prices have always moved in cycles of several years' duration. Each cycle consists of four periods: — Prosperity, Decline, Depression, and Improvement. Your banker will tell you it is unwise to buy for profit in a period of prosperity, as at present, or even in a decline. Wait for a depression when your friends are bearish and the future looks dark. Such a time will come again, to be followed by improvement and a period of great prosperity.

Questions That Have Piled Up

By ELMER ROESSNER

Readers questions pile up. They are so thick on the desk the tranquilizer pills can't be found. Let's burrow out.

Question: How can I copyright the title of a newsletter I am planning?

Answer: Titles cannot be copyrighted. Within limits, they can become trademarked. Talk to a trademark expert.

Question: I have a legal problem—

Answer: Stop there! I'm not a lawyer. One of the things that puzzles me is businessmen's reluctance to take up legal problems with lawyers. Some think that lawyers are "sharp." They are. Never retain any other kind. Others feel that lawyers are like designing women: that if you talk to one, you're hooked for the rest of your life. Nonsense. If you have a legal problem, discuss it with a lawyer. If you're afraid, talk over fees first. If they are out of your range, put on your hat and walk out. No charge. If you don't know a good lawyer, ask your local bar association for names to choose from. But don't take your legal problems to me, to your grocer, or to the boys on the corner.

IS QUITTING UNETHICAL

Question: I have a product that is no longer profitable. Would I be unfair to my customers, or unethical in any way, if I discontinued it?

Answer: If you have a contract with customers to keep them supplied with this product, you must fill the contract, renegotiate it, or face suit. But outside of that, you are free to discontinue products as you see fit. Ford discontinued Model T's and Studebaker discontinued farm wagons. Some people were thereby bothered, but none thought that these companies, or any others, had any moral obligation to keep turning out products at a loss.

COMPETITIVE ETHICS

Question: One of my competitors has told me in considerable detail about a project he is planning. Does his confidence prevent me from taking advantage of that information

Answer: No, but be careful. He must have had some reason for leaking the information. He might have been trying to put you under some obligation not to use it, or he might be spreading a false story to bring about some special action on your part.

Question: I suspect my telephones are being tapped. What should I do

Answer: Have friends call you up and give you tips on long shots, saying in hushed whispers that they got the dope from the jockey. If this doesn't bankrupt your eavesdroppers, take it up with the district attorney.

Question: A cream is advertised on television as being good for externally caused blemishes. Does that include bullet wounds

Answer: If it doesn't, see your doctor.

Question: Aren't you getting flippant

Answer: I am never more flippant than when I'm serious.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS MAKERS OF MANY STRANGE THINGS

On request from the inventors, the Small Business Administration is trying to find manufacturers for these products:

An apparatus for watering cemetery plants unattended over long periods.

An insulated, foil-lined paper cup.

A hand tool for applying lead weights to fishing lines.

A traveling case with secret compartments. (Just the thing for smugglers.)

A steak tenderizing device with a series of knives that cut the fibers, making shank meant as tender as loin.

A decoy duck that keeps diving as if finding food.

An insect repellent that attaches to gasoline lamps.

A fishhook covered with barbs like a porcupine quill; the book keeps working in but can't slide out.

No Prop; Rifle Killed Performer

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A woman entertainer who faced death daily holding targets in a trick shooting act was accidentally shot to death Sunday by a 9-year-old boy who came to see her perform.

The shot came at a frontier town exhibit at the Pittsburgh Bicentennial Exposition in Point Park. It ended the life of Mamie Alice Peniman, 38, of Sun Valley, Calif.

The youth, who thought he was playing with a stage prop, started to run but was halted by his father. The victim's husband, Frank, 40, rushed over and slapped the youth, shouting, "You shot my wife."

The exposition, crowded with Sunday visitors, took on a tense and tragic air as police rushed to the scene.

The boy's mother, who permitted him to handle the .22 caliber rifle, stood stunned. The victim's 8-year-old daughter wept.

The shot came a few minutes before Mrs. Peniman was scheduled to go on stage and step in front of her husband's blazing guns as he fired at targets she held in her hands and mouth.

Police took young Frank Monaco of nearby New Kensington, Pa., into custody for questioning. No charges were preferred.

Mrs. Peniman performed with her husband and daughter, Mary Alice. He is known professionally as "Wild Bill Cody." They joined the exposition last week after touring with a Wild West show.

Mr. and Mrs. John Monaco said they had taken their boy to the exposition for a Sunday outing. After visiting several other exhibits they went to the frontier village.

Young Monaco and his mother walked into a jailhouse cell. He saw two rifles and asked his mother if he could examine them.

Mrs. Monaco said she thought they were part of the display props and agreed. Police quoted her as saying the boy picked up a rifle and pressed the trigger.

Mrs. Peniman was standing outside the jail talking to other show people. She had loaded the rifles moments before in readiness for the show.

Nuclear Negotiations Due Resume At Geneva Today

GENEVA (AP)—The three-power nuclear negotiations resume today amid prospects that a final decision on suspending the testing of atomic and hydrogen weapon tests will be taken at a summit meeting.

Sir David Ormsby-Gore, British representative for the talks with the United States and the Soviet Union, said he considered it likely that Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, President Eisenhower and Premier Nikita Khrushchev would deal with final aspects of a test ban treaty if they meet this summer.

There were still two big qualifications, however.

The Western powers want the Big Four foreign ministers' conference on Germany to make some progress, particularly with regard to the Berlin crisis, before committing themselves to a summit session.

Also, the negotiators in the atom talks must make more headway before the nuclear problem is in shape for a final decision at the top level.

The talks began last Oct. 31, but so far have failed to produce a complete treaty draft. They recessed a month ago, ostensibly because two major international conferences were one too many for the facilities of the U.N. Palace of Nations.

The French are participating in the foreign ministers' talks on Germany but are taking no part in the nuclear negotiations.

During an earlier stage of the Big Four talks, British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd, U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met privately to discuss nuclear problems without including French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville.

But if the French explode their own atomic bomb between now and a summit meeting, they undoubtedly will have to be brought quickly into the nuclear negotiations.

Arriving from London, Ormsby-Gore told reporters this is "the last lap—we hope."

Ormsby-Gore assumed any treaty the negotiators might draft probably would still have holes that would have to be filled in by Eisenhower, Macmillan and Khrushchev.

"Certain points might have to be dealt with at the summit," he said.

Seawell Attacks Reluctant Vance

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Atty. Gen. Malcolm B. Seawell took a verbal poke Sunday night at Vance County commissioners for refusing to hire extra police to relieve National Guardsmen on patrol duty at the Henderson strike.

"It seems quite clear to me that, historically and constitutionally, our people intended and still intend that law enforcement is the first duty of the law enforcement officers at the local level."

Seawell told the State Assn. of Register of Deeds, "The maintenance of law and order is a most vital responsibility of those who would govern themselves."

The Vance commissioners informed Gov. Hodges last week they felt law enforcement at the struck Harriet - Henderson Cotton Mills was a matter for the state.

"It will be a sad day," Seawell declared, "when any people within our borders feel that they may lay down on the job and that the governor of North Carolina will, in effect, become the chief of police and the sheriff for the entire state."

Bit Of Thurber's World Is On Television Tonight

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—A bit of the wonderful world of James Thurber, which is peopled by bewildered men, pragmatic women and thinking dogs, appears on television tonight in "Christabel."

The comedy on "Goodyear Theater" (NBC-TV, 9:30 p.m., EDT), written by Melville Shavelson and based on several Thurber stories, may grow next season into a TV comedy series called "The Secret Life of James Thurber."

Talk with Thurber for an hour and you find that at the age of 64 he does not seem in the least bewildered nore specially pragmatic, but he is thinking. Probably that's why he likes dogs—especially poodles, like Christabel: They're always thinking.

Thinking over the question of why scarcely any young men are writing humorously these days and leaving the field to their elders (Thurber, S. J. Perelman, Ogden Nash, E. B. White), Thurber said:

"There was a gaiety in the 1920's, when we all started writing, that seems lacking today. I know a woman psychiatrist who has a theory on the lack of humorous young writers these days. She points out that they grew up in the depression hearing their fathers say, 'We're ruined.' Then they got knocked by the second World War. I suppose it's no wonder they say, 'Life is grim.'"

It set Thurber to thinking of the growing ages of old friends who gathered at a party recently to celebrate the publication of his new and thoroughly delightful book, "The Years with Ross," the story of Harold Ross, late editor of the New Yorker.

"I have a theory," said Thurber, "that the English live longer and remain productive longer than we do. Three years ago, when I was in England, I couldn't turn around without falling over an old writer who was still writing. I got so I expected to run into Browning and Tennyson. Even old Eden Phillpots was grinding out television scripts at 90.

"Senescence grows slowly on the English, but senility pounces on the American like a tiger from the jungle. It may strike a man in the middle of a sentence. It seems to be a tradition with us. I think it's because of the remendous pace at which we live."

Although completely blind now, Thurber continues to be a productive writer. This summer he hopes to complete 20,000-word satire tentatively entitled "The Grawk" and to have a play based on the life of Harold Ross ready for Broadway production next season.

Thurber dictates—or, as he says, "recites" his work. He enjoys television and the theater, with his wife describing actions.

Jerry Lewis Has $10 Million Deal

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jerry Lewis has signed a 10-million-dollar contract which Paramount Studios said is the biggest price paid in Hollywood for the services of one star.

The seven-year contract calls for the comedian to make 14 pictures — seven by Paramount-York Corp. and seven by Jerry Lewis Productions Inc.

Of the 15 governments which endorsed the Atlantic Charter with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in 1941, nine were in exile.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW! By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Question Value Of Probing 'Munitions Lobby'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Heads of two potent House committees share President Eisenhower's concern about what has been called the munitions lobby, but they doubt that a congressional probe would solve anything.

They agreed lobbying activities have had the result of forcing defense costs higher, but they pretty well agreed also that the average citizen himself unwittingly is a strong force behind the drives.

These views came from Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo) of the House Appropriations Committee and Chairman F. Edward Hebert (D La) of a House Armed Services investigating subcommittee.

But they and other Congress members who were interviewed had differing ideas on what constitutes a munitions lobby—if any.

Of course there are sales representatives trying to peddle their firms' products to the government and, to do that, seeking congressional appropriations to provide the money. Some push newly developed planes, or missiles, or guns as the best and most necessary weapons of defense.

Hebert referred to advertising as one of the stronger ways the lobby works. He and Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill) criticized some firms' hiring of high-ranking military officers as they retire. Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash) referred to executives from business and industry who hold temporary but important posts in the Pentagon.

But Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex), Senate majority leader and head of a Senate Preparedness investigating subcommittee, discounted the idea of a munitions lobby as such.

"I don't know any who deserve that label," Johnson said.

He saw no need for an investigation, and was joined in that view by Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo), a former secretary of the Air Force and a sharp critic of Eisenhower administration defense policies.

The subject came up at Eisenhower's news conference last week. A reporter said several senators had quoted the President as having spoken sharply to them about efforts by a munitions lobby to alter his defense program.

Eisenhower said he didn't think he had used that term, but said he doesn't want to see political and financial considerations involved in defense matters.

MORE

Cannon and Hebert agreed that the men formally registered with Congress as lobbyists "aren't always the really effective ones."

"The cleverest lobby is the social lobby," Cannon said. "The fellows who do the job operate out of the cocktail bars, the golf clubs and the social gatherings."

"The best remedy, and perhaps the only remedy," Cannon said, "lies with the voters. They must send representatives here who will stand up against pressures."

"Unwittingly," Hebert said, "the voters are helping these big lobby groups. They read newspaper advertisements of how good this or that missile or weapon is, they hear radio programs and they see television programs espousing the effectiveness of the product of one company or another. They are on the midway listening to the pitch man, and they write letters to their congressman, who in turn listens to the voters."

Prison Doors Due Open For 'Deadliest Spy In History'

LONDON (AP)—In a few more weeks the gates of prison will probably swing open for the man they call the deadliest spy in history.

Klaus Fuchs will be free after serving nine years for betraying Western atomic secrets to the Soviet Union — secrets that probably enabled the Soviets to produce an atomic bomb five years sooner than they could have otherwise.

Home Secretary Richard A. Butler probably will tell the House of Commons this week what happens next to the German-born scientist.

As a docile, model convict, Fuchs, 47, is believed to have earned the maximum remission of one-third of the 14-year sentence passed on him at London's Old Bailey in March 1950.

This would make him due for release early next month.

He could be deported. Although Fuchs acquired British citizenship in 1942, he lost it after being sentenced.

But demands have been raised in press and Parliament that Fuchs should be prevented from going to live in the Communist East for fear he may pass over more secrets or use his scientific learning to the Reds' advantage.

For seven years Fuchs worked with British nuclear scientists. Part of that time he was on the British team that worked with American nuclear scientists during World War II.

American and British scientists generally agree that the knowledge he acquired during that time would probably be of little use to the Soviets after all these years.

But fears have been expressed that his brilliant brain still could be put to service in Communist laboratories. It also has been argued that Fuchs' presence behind the Iron Curtain could prove a powerful propaganda fillip for the Soviet bloc.

Reports seeping out of Wakefield Jail in northern England say Fuchs has expressed a desire to live in East Germany with his father, Prof. Emil Fuchs, 85, of Leipzig University.

If he really wants to go, there is some doubt that British authorities could prevent him.

Other reports say Fuchs has shed his Communist convictions and wants to work again for British science. But it is certain the British would never again trust him with even the smallest secrets.

In Leipzig, Prof. Fuchs declined to comment on his son's plans. The father was honored last month with the East German Order of the Fatherland on his 85th birthday.

Can't Tell What Troubles Long

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP)—"We still can't tell what's the matter with him," a psychiatrist attending Louisiana's Gov. Earl K. Long said Sunday.

The physician, who asked not to be named, said Long steadfastly refused to cooperate with doctors seeking to diagnose his illness.

On petition of his wife, a court order for holding the 63-year-old governor in protective custody was issued last week. A sanity hearing is set for next Saturday.

Long is a patient in the psychiatric clinic at John Sealy Hospital. He was flown here May 30.

Wrote On Harmony, But Had Disharmony

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—A Presbyterian minister who wrote a national magazine article on racial harmony has been dismissed after several years of disharmony and unrest among members of his congregation.

The Rev. Robert B. McNeill, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, was dismissed Sunday by a judicial commission of the Southwest Georgia Presbytery.

The eight-man commission said the action was taken because "the interests of religion imperatively demand it."

The decision was read by the Rev. Frank C. King of Valdosta, chairman of the group, to a stunned and subdued congregation.

The announcement came without advance notice although the commission statement was dated June 2. McNeill said he was informed of the impending action Wednesday.

The 44-year-old gray-haired pastor said he was surprised by the action but had not decided whether to submit the matter to a higher court.

The dismissal could be appealed to the Presbyterian Synod of Georgia and even to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.

Garrett Shackelford, a former elder, said he would appeal the decision "only with Mr. McNeill's permission. He is being sacrificed for the sake of the commission having the easiest way out."

King said the dismissal was "in no sense a rebuke to Mr. McNeill. We are just trying to make progress and feel more can be accomplished this way."

He urged all church officers to continue in their posts and said "this concerns no one but Mr. McNeill."

One tearful woman replied that "it concerns all of us who love him and don't think he should leave."

McNeill said that several years ago the church organized a Negro congregation in Columbus. When they were unable to secure a Negro pastor the white church employed a retired white minister. McNeill said this burned some members of the congregation.

Opposition to him came to a head after Look magazine published an article he wrote on May 28, 1957, in which he discussed ways of bringing racial harmony to the South through "a creative contact between leaders of both races."

Last June a commission was appointed by the presbytery to investigate reports of dissension among some of the 1,200 members of the church.

In November that commission dissolved the church's session, governing body of the church, after it reported findings of unrest and disharmony.

The session's function of receiving new members was bestowed on the pastor who was given the powers of evangelist.

McNeill, a native of Birmingham, Ala., is married and the father of two children. He has been with the First Presbyterian church since November 1952.

Police Break In, Save Actress

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Police had to break down the locked door at actress Lynn Baggett's home after she took an overdose of sleeping tablets Sunday.

The 36-year-old ex-wife of producer Sol Spiegel had dialed a telephone operator and called for help. Police found her in bed at her home in Beverly Hills.

She was taken to a hospital where attendants said her condition was serious.

Sports Scope

by Johnny Hudson

East Carolina College opens up again tomorrow but athletics at the college will be inactive. While most of the coaches will be taking a break from the continued stress and strain of the past year, Coach Jack Boone will be just beginning his worries.

Boone, veteran Pirate football coach, will be busy getting some of his athletes in summer school and will also be trying to keep his prospective freshmen on the hook during the off-season. Boone will be keeping in constant contact with his touted prep stars to make sure other offers don't become too tempting. He will not be assured of their enrolling in East Carolina until next fall when they officially arrive.

The problems for Boone will just begin then as he will start molding his veteran club for an eleven-game schedule—one of the most colorful in the school's history.

The Northeastern AA baseball loop was well-balanced this past spring but individual stars were scarce. The prep All-Stater team was named yesterday in The Greensboro Daily News and only one man—Pat McDowell—from this conference was named. McDowell pitched and batted Elizabeth City to the loop title and then on to the eastern play-offs.

Merrill Bynum and Joe Moye had a good season for Greenville but neither rated All-Stater. Bynum was named on the All-Conference club while Moye was undoubtedly overlooked. The latter batted almost .500 and was one of the best defensive first-basemen in the league.

When basketball opens in Pitt County next winter, at least two coaches will be missing. Charlie Bill Moye of Belvoir-Falkland has taken over as Principal of Falkland Elementary School and Leroy Pittman of Chicod has moved over to Kinston as teacher.

Both were outstanding students of the game and had compiled exceptional records in the county. Moye was a former star at East Carolina College while Pittman did his college work at Wake Forest.

Moye inherited a "green" team in his first season at B-F but did a fine rebuilding job and the club is expected to be strong next winter. Pittman was more successful this past winter as he took his club to the county championship, only to lose out in the district finals of the state tournament.

Don Hipps recently resigned as head football coach of Rocky Mount High School. He is the fifth coach to leave the position in the last five years. Something seems to be wrong in the Black Birds Athletic system . . . Monogram awards were recently given at UNC, and Greenville had three students to receive their letter. They were: Grover Everett — track, Eugene Keys—tennis, and Wayne Bishop—track. Ronald Griffin of Williamston was among the letter winners in baseball . . . Elbert Holmes of Farmville was one of 74 Duke University students receiving athletic awards. Holmes earned a varsity monogram in lacrosse . . . Several ECC grads have already landed coaching positions for next fall. Al Vaughn, All-State second baseman, has signed a contract in Franklin, Va. and Jerry Pearson, tackle on the gridiron club, is headed for Rohannen in Rockingham as a football aide . . . Charlie Burns, 1958 prep All-Stater in basketball, has expressed interest in East Carolina. Burns was at a military school this past year and has narrowed his choice of colleges to ECC and Lenoir Rhyne.

Massey Hill Has Baseball Title

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Massey Hill held its second straight Class AA high school baseball title today thanks to a fine two - hit pitching performance and a home run.

Massey Hill captured the title here Saturday with a 2-0 shutout over West Mecklenburg to win the championship series 2-1.

In winning the title, the Pirates finished the season with a 21-2 record and a 42-3 record over a two-year span.

Junior Edge held West to but two singles in the fifth inning in collecting his 13th victory of the season against one loss. Charles Polston accounted for all of the scoring with a 325-foot homer.

West finished the season with a 15-6 record.

Small Fry Loop Players Practice

Practice for the Small Fry Baseball League is now underway and the regular season will start next week. The league is sponsored by the Recreational Department and is made up of boys between the ages of 7-12.

Practice is being held at the Elm St. Park every day at 3:00. Any one interested in playing should come out to practice in order to be placed on a team.

Wilhelm Already Tagged 'All-Star' Starter

By JACK HAND

Casey Stengel might as well announce it today. Hoyt Wilhelm will be the starting pitcher for the American League in the All-Star game at Pittsburgh, July 7.

If old Case has any other ideas, he had better forget them. Wilhelm has everybody on his side, except the poor catcher who will have to dive for those darting knucklers.

Just to be on the safe side, the players and managers had better vote Gus Triandos to the team as the first-string catcher. He lets one get away now and then but he says, "I can take it if Wilhelm can."

Wilhelm and Triandos teamed up on Kansas City Sunday to boost Baltimore into second place. The surprising Orioles are only one game behind the league-leading Chicago White Sox.

While Hoyt's knuckler was fluttering past the A's for a 3-0 seven-hit shutout, Triandos' 13th home run with Al Pilarcik on base was providing the insurance. It was Wilhelm's ninth straight victory without a defeat.

After the game, the statisticians went into a huddle and reported Wilhelm's earned run average, figured all the way down to a third of an inning, was a startling 0.999. Every now and then somebody gets as far as third base against the man who was let out by the New York (now San Francisco) Giants, St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Indians.

Chicago's lead was shaved while they split two with Boston. After the White Sox staged one of their rare big innings — six runs in the second — in winning the opener 9-4, Boston grabbed the second 4-2 although Frank Sullivan needed help from Leo Kiely and Mike Fornieles in the ninth after eight shutout innings.

The largest American League crowd of the season, 59,823, gathered at Cleveland where the Indians divided a pair with the New York Yankees. Herb Score beat Don Larsen in the first game 7-5 but the Yankees hopped on Cal McLish for four runs in the second inning of the nightcap to get an even break 4-3.

Eddie Yost hammered two home runs against his former Washington mates in Detroit's 6-4 victory that pulled the Tigers up to the .500 mark. Charlie Maxwell also homered for the Tigers and Jim Lemon and Roy Sievers for the Senators.

Milwaukee opened up a two-game lead in the National by scoring eight runs in the seventh inning for an 8-2 victory over Los Angeles.

San Francisco dropped back a half game by breaking even at Cincinnati. The Giants rolled to a 5-3 victory in the opener but bowed to Orlando Pena's four-hit pitching in the second, 7-1.

Chicago moved into third place by sweeping Pittsburgh, 4-2 and 1-0. Philadelphia split with St. Louis, the Phils taking the wild opener 11-9 and Vinegar Bend Mizell pitching a five-hit shutout, 2-0, in the finale, marked by a fist fight between the Phils' Don Cardwell and the Cards' Gino Cimoli.

Williams Still Confident Despite Bad 1959 Start

CHICAGO (AP)—Ted Williams, Boston's splendid splinter, isn't hitting his weight, but bury those rumors that he might quit baseball before the season is over.

"Sure, I might have decided to call it quits now if I had had a bad season last year," said Williams Sunday before a doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox.

"But I got off to a bad start last year and won the batting championship, so why should I call it quits?"

Williams, always confident, expects to shake his present slump and eventually get up above the .300 mark.

"I think I came back too soon after that trouble with my neck," said Williams. "There were about 40 at bats that I shouldn't have had."

So far, he hasn't been able to untrack himself. He is batting a feeble .185.

"So what," is Williams answer to his bad start. "On May 20th last year I was batting .224. By the time the All-Star game came around I was batting only .280. But I finished up okay."

That he did. Williams ended the season with a .328 average to capture his sixth American League batting championship.

Williams never has batted less than .317 since breaking into the big leagues in 1939.

"The way reporters come after me in every town you'd think I was batting .436." he said, laughing.

"Say, do you think Hank Aaron (Milwaukee) can hit .400? I do," said Williams. "He's got a good start and that's what counts."

Once again the conversation returned to the possibility of retirement.

"There are a lot of factors to consider," said Williams. "Heck, it's no secret that I want to hit 500 home runs. The man who batted .406 in 1941 has a career total of 483 rome runs, including one this year.

Williams was walked his first time up Sunday, struck out the second and grounded out to the first baseman his next three times. He sat out the second game.

VFW made a futile attempt to win their first game of the 1959 season Saturday afternoon as they blew a four-run lead to lose to Texaco, 7-4, in North State League action.

The cellar-dwellers opened strong with four big runs in the first inning but wilted in the second frame as Texaco took the lead with a five-run rally.

The winners added insurance runs in the fourth and fifth innings.

VFW collected only one hit in the first inning but loose fielding by Texaco paved the way for four runs. Owens slashed a single for the only hit of the frame. His bingle scored two runs.

Sumerell, Hardy, and McGlohon had base knocks in the Texaco's big inning. All three had run-scoring singles.

Fuller went the distance on the mound for Texaco and gave up only four hits, two of them by Owens.

The win for Texaco was their second straight and moved them into a three-way tie for second place in the league.

The Lions will be attempting to break the tie today when they go against VFW, League-leading Jaycees will try to put a halt to Texaco's win streak tomorrow afternoon and VFW and Kiwanis square off Wednesday.

Stokes showed a torrid offensive attack over the weekend to bounce into a second place tie with a doubleheader sweep over Bethel. The winners had a total of 32 runs in the two games as they dropped Bethel by scores of 13-1 and 19-9.

Meadowbrook controlled first place until this weekend on the strength of two wins over Stokes the previous week.

Carolina League Meets Saturday

WILSON, N.C. (AP)— Carolina League directors will meet in Durham Saturday to consider the possibility of reinstating the annaul all-star game next month.

Directors of the Class B league voted out the all-star game last winter and agreed to give the league treasury cash to sustain the president's office.

President Bill Jessup said here Saturday the directors will consider an East-West All-Star game for Winston-Salem in July.

He said the directors also will consider limiting doubleheaders to two seven inning games rather than a seven inning opener and a nine inning nightcap.

Greenville Tobacco Company staved off a final surge by Pepsi-cola Saturday afternoon to beat the defending champions, 5-2, and move into a second place tie with Exdhange.

A base on balls and singles by Prewett and Hudson provided Pepsi-Cola with their threat in the top half of the sixth inning. The rally was halted when Masten pulled in Combs' long fly ball to centerfield.

The winners had scored three runs in the first inning on five back-to-back singles by Whitley, Jarmon, Beamon, Calloway, and Richardson.

Beamon, who had a perfect day at the plate, had a triple in the third and scored on Calloway's double. The third baseman got his third hit, another triple, in the fifth and scored the final run.

Hudson and Prewett had two hits each for the losers but Horne, the winning pitcher, had things under control most of the way.

Pepsi-Cola will be trying to escape a possible position in the basement today wren they take on Moose. In other games this week, Exchange and Greenville Tobacco Company will determine the second place standing Wednesday and Pepsi-Cola will play the Elks Thursday.

Another NCAA Try For Tigers

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—Clemson's Atlantic Coast Conference champions get another crack at the NCAA college world series starting in Omaha, Neb., this week.

The Tigers brushed aside Florida State University 5-0 here Saturday night in the finals oft he District 3 tournament to earn a berth in the world series. The Tigers won the district tournament last year, too.

Harold Stowe, Clemson's crafty lefthander, allowed Florida State only five hits in hurling his seventh victory of the season against two defeats.

Stowe, who fanned 13 and walked but four, was named the tournament's outstanding pitcher.

Fred DeBerry, Clemson's hard hitting first baseman, collected three for three. He was named the tournament's outstanding infielder and won the batting crown with a .667 average. He got six hits in nine trips and got on base 10 straight times.

The outstanding outfielder was Roger Kaiser of Georgia Tech. The Jackets and George Washington were eliminated in the second round.

Dick Suggs and Larry Bagwell each homered for the Tigers against FSU to lead an 11-hit attack.

Clemson's first game at Oaha will be Saturday night against the District 6 winner, Arizona.

Small Firms First To Hurt In Steel Strike

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—In all the guessing about whether there'll be a steel strike this summer one question sticks out:

How long before the innocent bystanders would be hurt

Just how much stock steel users have been able to pile up is debatable. Some observers think that almost all have enough to keep going for two or three months without further deliveries. Others think that many companies, particularly the smaller ones, would have to close down after a few weeks.

Some industries serving the steel mills would be quickly affected. Example: railroads that carry coal and ore to the furnaces and tote steel products to users. Another: Coal mines that supply steel mills (ore mines usually are involved directly in any steel strike).

Steel users have been busy for months building up stocks. Steel mills have been running at near capacity to supply the demand.

European steel firms have stopped up exports to this country and expect to profit handily if a strike is called and shortages develop. England recently cut steel prices a little, which could act as a come-on. And the St. Lawrence Seaway has carried a lot of foreign steel into mid-America.

But many would-be builders of steel inventories have found that as a result of the pickup in business activities they were using more of it than they had anticipated. So their stock piles aren't as high as planned.

Some small users of steel have found that, as the poorer customers, they have been put at the end of the list on steel mill order books and have built up little inventory. They could be in the fix after a strike, if one develops. To start up again, small users might have to wait longer for deliveries.

To find out just what the situation might be, the Research Institute of America Inc., a fact-finding agency for industry, asked its members in the metalworking fields how long they could keep going if steel deliveries halted July 1 because of a work stoppage. From about 300 replies the institute reports small companies would feel strike effects first. Nearly half of these say they'd be out of steel after eight weeks. After 12 weeks three-fourths would be closed down.

Of companies with 500 or more employes, 89 per cent can maintain normal operations for more than six weeks, 68 per cent for more than eight weeks and 43 per cent for more than 12.

Companies that buy steel components and parts — jobs shops, tool makers, gear plants, assemblers—Counting their own stocks and firm delivery promises from their suppliers, report those with less than 100 employes, 55 per cent would have eight weeks supply on hand or in sight, but only 25 per cent would have more than 12 weeks. The big firms would fare better: 75 per cent with eight weeks supply and 45 per cent with more than 12.

The real pinch may come in special types of steel.

Only half of all companies using structural shapes and heavy plate have more than eight weeks supply. A like supply of castings and forgings are held by 56 per cent of all users; 59 per cent of users of bars and rods are in that position; and 61 per cent of users of pipe and tubing.

Wire and wire products would last 68 per cent of users for eight weeks or longer. And 67 per cent of firms using sheet and strip have more than eight weeks supply at hand.

She climbed onto the tailgate of a truck to rest, apparently fainted, and fell to the ground.

She was pronounced dead at a doctor's office.

EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Ciro Bravata's quadruplets and their mother are doing fine in East Orange General Hospital.

But the proud papa admits "I've got troubles" — another family in New York City.

Bravata became the father of a girl and three boys Saturday. Sunday he admitted he was married to another woman and had two children by her.

"Oh, he's a fine one," moaned Bravata's wife, Grace, 38, as she lay in bed under sedation after hearing of the quads.

But Bravata, 39, a railroad freight conductor, said the quads' mother, Louise Strohlein Bravata, knew all along he was married.

"Louise couldn't be happier," Bravata said.

As for Grace: "I have no desire to talk to her. I never did. She's been giving me a hard time since the first day I married her."

Bravata said his lawyer, Herman Caponi of New York, "has got the case."

Caponi said Bravata and the mother of the quads had never been married, that legal action the wife Grace had started never had been put on a court calendar and never "brought to termination."

The only thing legal about the separation, Caponi said, "is that it's mutual."

However, Caponi said that under a court order, Bravata was required to pay $40 weekly in support of Grace and their two children, a girl and boy, now 13 and 12 years old.

Grace at her home in Hollis, Queens, New York City, said her husband's support payments had been an on-again-off-again thing and that he owes her $900.

"I suppose he's proud of himself with his picture in the paper, grinning with that other woman," she said.

Several years ago Grace underwent a delicate heart operation. "My relatives lent him money to pay most of the hospital bills," she said, "then he goes and buys a new car."

Bravata, who makes $115 a week as freight conductor of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and Louise have been living here for more than two years in a five-room apartment.

Bravata spent two hours at the hospital Sunday visiting Louise and the quads. Then he had two aspirins and went to bed.

He will be 40 years old on Father's day.

Henderson Duty For Air Guard

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A contingent of Air National Guardsmen patrolled the struck Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills today. They arrived Sunday to replace Army Guardsmen.

The new task force, headed by Col. Henry C. Byrd Jr. of Charlotte, is comprised of Air Guard units from Charlotte, Wadesboro and Badin.

Army Guardsmen who had been on patrol duty here the past two weeks left Sunday to attend their annual summer encampment at Ft. Bragg. They were from Hickory, North Wilkesboro, Asheville and the Forest City-Spindale area.

Shortly after the Air Guard units arrived, death struck one of its members. Cap. Ben F. Beckett, 38, of Charlotte, a fighter pilot with the Air Guard, died of a heart attack.

Guard troops on patrol duty at the two mills are being rotated every two weeks to avoid excessive personnel hardship on the men. The new contingent is the third group to arrive since May 12 when Gov. Hodges called out the troops to halt violence which erupted after highway patrolmen were withdrawn from the strike scene.

The strike was touched off Nov. 17 after the company insisted that an arbitration clause be removed from the contract.

Now The Highest Ranking Of All

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—To the distinction of being the last survivor of the Confederate army, 116-year-old Walter Williams has added still another.

Now he holds higher rank than any ever achieved by his comrades at arms.

In a weekend ceremony at his bedside, a group calling itself the Confederate High Command presented the old soldier an honorary commission as a five-star general — a rank which didn't exist in Civil War days.

Donald A. Ramsey, a St. Petersburg, Fla., mining engineer, made the presentation as executive commissioner of the semi-military order.

Williams, fortified with a nip of whisky for what his doctor described as a slight chill, dozed during most of the ceremony.

Agree Potomac An Obvious Mess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many congressmen agree the most obvious "mess in Washington" is the Potomac River.

Rep. James C. Wright (D-Tex) said it was a disgrace.

Rep. Charles S. Gubser (R-Calif) said "the very stream which waters the roots of American history" is polluted.

House debate on a water pollution bill spotlighted the problem last week.

Gubser told the House that down by the Lincoln Memorial "We would inhale the air made putrid from raw human sewage flowing down our beautiful Potomac from our federal city of Washington."

Once the Potomac was a clear, sparkling stream for 287 miles—past Virginia and Maryland farms, past Washington, past Mount Vernon — to Chesapeake Bay.

Now you don't swim in it around Washington unless you fall in, Wright told a reporter.

"The most polluted river west of the Nile" is Sen. John F. Kennedy's term for the Potomac.

Rep. Richard E. Lankford (D-Md) called it "one of the most polluted, one of the most neglected and one of the least developed."

Lankford, with other congressmen from the Washington area, has introduced a bill authorizing a 75-million-dollar appropriation to build sewer lines and filtration plants.

Rep. John R. Foley (D-Md) said Congress must do something. He noted that the U.S. Public Health Service has threatened to take legal action under the Water Pollution Control Act.

He added: In a city of monuments to heroes of American history, there's a monument to man's shortsightedness—the most polluted interstate river in America."

CHAPTER 17

Fifteen minutes after leaving Colonel Baudon, Mark reached Monaco's harbor, an almost natural square enclosed by land on three sides and opening to the sea in the east.

He went into a cafe to find somebody who might tell him who the owner of the Anemone was. But as he looked at the faces of the various sailors, fishermen and dock workers, he discarded the idea. Why make himself conspicuous?

He left the bar and wandered along the quay until he saw a youngster, sitting on a step, fixing his rod. The boy seemed delighted to be able to name the boats Mark pointed out to him. Among the many yachts of all sizes, the high mast of a sleek sloop of about fifty feet stood out. "That," said the boy proudly. "is the Anemone. Mr. Constant's boat. She's being readied to go out again."

So he had guessed correctly. The boat Corinne Javal had been diving from belonged to Guy Constant.

A little further down the quay he rented a boat and rowed under the Anemone's lee. She was slapping gently at her mooring. Mark climbed her boarding ladder and fastened his boat to one of the rungs.

"Constant?" he called, walking around the deck. "Hello? Anybody there?"

Constant could hardly handle a boat this size alone, so possibly there was a mate. He might have gone away for a moment. He might be sitting in one of the cafes around the harbor, having his dinner, or he might be here, below. But there was no answer. Mark stood, uncertain what to do next.

He looked up into the sky. A pale half moon was clearly recognizable. In a little while, with darkness setting in, it would be gold and shiny.

He dropped into the cockpit. The hatch was open. "Constant?" he called again. Then, all of a sudden, his hand on the handle of the small cabin door became a thing separate from his body. It moved as if it had a life of its own, pressed down the handle . . . the door gave.

"Hello?" he called for the third time, then, feeling indiscreet, almost like a thief looking a place over before deciding if it is worth while to break in. He went down the four steps which led into a small galley that formed the aft portion of the main cabin.

Immediately to the left of the ladder were a sink, recessed in front of an elaborate instrument panel for the auxiliary motor, and an icebox with a dish rack and a locker. On the right were a stove and another locker. A curtain divided the main cabin.

The larger part held various pieces of diving machinery and aqualung equipment; in the other, screwed to the floor, stood a table; along both sides ran benches which could be converted into berths.

A narrow door led to a second cabin, as neat as if a woman had tidied it. Beyond lay a third, small cabin. Unlike the other cabins, it gave the impression of being lived in. Several ask trays stood around. There was a can of English tobacco, a rack with a few pipes. A rather dirty jacket dangled from a hook near the left berth, a small valise lay on the other.

Pencils, pads of yellow paper, and an assortment of maps were stacked in one corner of the desk below the powerful marine ship-to-shore tow-way radio telephone. Colorful post cards and photographs were tacked against the bulkhead.

Mark stepped closer, natural curiosity combining suddenly with professional zeal. The photographs were of astonishing variety. One showed an antique amphora, another a snake, a third, Fleur, as she must have looked at a child; others were views of different cities and harbors — the St. Mark's Square in Venice, Rhodes. Malta, Cyprus, Corsica, Marseilles, Algiers. Mark closed his eyes. Algeria, he thought. But of course, Constant would be able to take a boat this size along the coast of Africa.

He sat down in front of the radio. It was a complicated apparatus and he looked at it for a moment with interest, then forced his thoughts back to Corinne. She had dived from the Anemone. He should not be wasting time sitting here but try to find Constant.

Rising hastily, he knocked against the stack of maps and the two top ones slipped to the floor. He bent to pick them up and saw that one had opened.

He could not explain why he had expected to see a sea chart rather than an ordinary map, or why there shouldn't be maps of countries and cities aboard the Anemone, but his reaction was one of surprise. His surprise deepened when he saw that it was a detailed map of the principality of Monaco.

Why should Constant need a map of the place in which he had lived for so many years? On the other hand, it might belong to the mate, a stranger, perhaps, to this part of the world.

Mark put it back on the desk. He was running his hand over it, to smooth it out, when his eyes were caught by a thin, penciled line in the bright yellow insert which showed the outlying districts of Monte Carlo.

It followed the route he had taken that morning on his way to meet Corinne, but stopped abruptly in the middle of the last, big curve below the golf links.

The spot was marked with a cross, and a small arrow pointed to the inner side of the curve. The spot where Corinne had met her death.

Only when he had refolded the map and put it back on top of the pile, did Mark notice that his hand was shaking. He had boarded the Anemone with no other thought than that Guy Constant might be able to give him some information about the persons Corinne had seen. Now, suddenly, his whole conception had to be sharply reversed.

His mind refused for a moment to follow his thoughts; yet the fact that the Anemone, from which Corinne had been diving, belonged to Guy Constant, made it impossible to believe that Corinne and Constant had not known each other well, well enough, obviously, for Constant to know that Corinne intended to be at the golf course of Mont Agel at ten o'clock in the morning.

The markings on the map, showing where Corinne had met her death, must have been made by Constant. And the way she had been killed . . . Mark had not realized before . . . the same way a famous dancer had died Isadora Dunca. Her long scarf caught in the wheel, strangling her. Anyone as interested in dancing as Guy Constant would have been deeply impressed by that famous and tragic accident.

Mark's hand stopped shaking and, for a moment, he sat motionless with concentration. It seemed incredible that Fleur's brother should be the man he was seeking or, if not Timgad, then a person involved with the Algerian terrorist.

Yet here, in front of him, was proof making it definitely possible that Constant used his profession as a screen for very different interests, that he had other reasons for his trips beyond marine explorations. Who would ever suspect the well-known French explorer of being one of the leaders of the Algerian rebels?

I must not jump to conclusions, Mark told himself, trying to remember the impression he had formed of Constant this morning. But he had seen him only as the brother of the girl with whom he had fallen in love, a scientist, dedicated to his work and devoted to his sister's career. I must not let myself be carried away but stick to the facts, and the fact is that I have finally discovered a lead.

Mark must confront Fleur Constant with facts about her brother and hope it won't cost him her love. Continue the story here tomorrow.

Legislators Inadequately Paid, Says Sen. Lanier; Not Speaking For Self

By LYNN NISBET
Reflector Raleigh Bureau

RALEIGH — Sen. Ed Lanier of Orange rose to a point of personal privilege in the Senate Saturday and made some observations about the inadequacy of pay of members of the General Assembly and eloquently pleaded for more decent treatment of the lawmakers.

He said he was not "talking for Buncombe," but to and for the people of North Carolina. He chose the occasion because stress of business or other days did not permit time for such remarks, and although only three other Senators were present the public was ably represented by the two newspapermen—Noel Yancey of Associated Press and your reporter.

Lanier said present compensation of legislators is divided into three classifications: Per diem salary fixed by the constitution; subsistence allowance fixed by the General Assembly with definite limitations, and travel pay to and from home. Each of these items he thinks is presently too low, and a fourth item of major expense is not considered at all—postage, telephone, telegraph and official travel other than to and from home. One day last week he spent $3 for postage, admittedly not an average day.

Emphasizing that he could discuss the matter impersonally, because he has no idea of ever coming back, he insisted that compensation of legislators should be enough to encourage good men to serve, but not enough to attract incompetents for the sake of the pay. Present scale almost preclude men of modest means coming to the General Assembly. He believes most legislators work harder here than they do at home and they should not be asked to work for nothing—or in some instances pay out of their own pockets for the privilege.

The governmental structure of every State is different and exact comparisons cannot be made. He quoted from the yearbook of the Council of State Governments some comparative figures on legislative compensation.

Fourteen States have annual sessions, the others biennial. Thirty-two States limit the session length, 23 by specific constitutional or stautory limits, nine by indirection, including North Carolina which stops pay after 120 days.

Thirty-one States use a salary basis ranging from $200 in New Hampshire to $15,000 a year in New York, with the median range between $3,000 and $3,600. He includes North Carolina in the salary States, with maximum of $1,800.

Seventeen States use the daily pay plan, ranging from $5 in Kansas to $50 in Louisiana. The median per diem is $15, but without time limit. In many States the incidental allowances run to more than the base pay.

Emphasizing the difference in governmental structure he said the magnitude and ramifications of North Carolina's government are such that it is impossible for the General Assembly to do well the job that must be done in 120 days every two years. Current members are now serving without pay. Working under conditions comparable to boarding up windows in the midst of a hurricane is not conductive to careful consideration of important matters. When two men of opposing ideas are "sweating out" the problems, one able to stay until Christmas the other suffering financial loss, it is not difficult to predict who will yield first.

North Carolinians cannot be stampeded by what other States do, nor by pleas for precipitate action at home. Senator Lanier believer that when people understand the problem they will be willing to pay members of the General Assembly decent wages and necessary expenses while attending to the affairs of the State.

Suspicion In Baghdad That Kremlin Curbed Iraq Reds

Editor's note — William L. Ryan, AP news analyst, is making another tour of the Middle East. Because all dispatches sent from Baghdad are censored, Ryan waited until he reached Beirut to report on Iraq.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—There is a strong suspicion in Baghdad that the Kremlin, in a calculated gamble, checked the Iraqi Communists' bid to grab power.

Some such move apparently aroused disagreement and resentment in the ranks of less disciplined party members. It looks as if there has been a serious split. But there seems little question that Moscow has prevailed.

Moscow seems to want to hold Iraq's Communists back so they can handle the country like a chesspiece in the game for global power. Thus it may be months, even years, before the Communists try anything akin to a total takeover.

Actually Moscow is toying with a powderkeg. None can say how long the fuse is, but the Middle East seems expecting a new explosion which will echo throughout Iraw and the world.

The Communists are enormously strong in the key Arab country. Their press has become the bellwether for all newspapers. In the city streets, Red Communist banners are eclipsing the traditional green standards of Islam.

They have supporters, if not members, high in the government.

To the casual onlooker Iraq, a key to the Persian Gulf, seems a pushover for the Communists, so far gone as to be beyond rescue.

But the Communists seem unable or unwilling to press their huge advantage to the utmost. Indeed they seem to be quarreling over the methods and pace to be employed in the attempt gradually to turn the country into a Middle East version of a people's democracy.

Moscow apparently is insisting on an internationalist approach. This clashes with the impatience of some local Communists who emerged from jails and underground hideouts in July, eager to strike for power.

Iraq should be an alluring prospect for Moscow: a foothold in the Arab East, authority in an oil producing state, access to the Persian Gulf. If Moscow is willing, Iraq might be a Communist state in a matter of weeks.

But Iraq is not Hungary. It has no border with a Communist power. While Turkey and Iran stay with the West, there is little immediate prospect of a land bridge for direct control of Soviet troops. Isolated Iraq might prove difficult to hold.

An explosive overturn would be a Communist black eye won at the price of economic political penetration elsewhere.

From Moscow, Baghdad's Communist leaders heard a stern warning against opportunism. In Red jargon that means attempting a decisive step without advance assurance of success.

Moscow seems to want a patient program along tested lines such as made Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania people's democracies with the help of Soviet troops over a period of years.

Iraqi Communists would continue to support the premier and current hero, Maj. Gen. Abdul Karim Kassem.

The party would participate with others in a national union front, dominate it and prepare carefully for the time when it is able to take power in its own name.

Moscow has a bigger goal than Iraq in mind — a long run stab at a large slice of the Middle East.

Westerners keep telling themselves that Iraq is a highly volatile and unstable land where things change suddenly. Yesterday's hero can be tomorrow's monster, as President Abdel Gamal Nasser of the United Arab Republic learned.

Many Iraqis still look to the West for help and support. If the Communists are not able to strike, the contest would seem far from over.

Waterfall Fall Killed One Girl

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP)— Two girls on a church assembly outing fell 50 feet over a waterfall near here Saturday. One was killed and the other injured seriously.

The girls, members of a party of 10 from the Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly, hiked to the Upper Catawba Falls in McDowell County.

Members of the party said one girl apparently slipped, and when the other attempted to grab her, both went over.

Barbara Butler, Saluda, S.C., a high school student, died about four hours after she was brought out of the western North Carolina country by jeep.

Her companion, Margaret Sue Morrow, 20, of Inman, S.C., suffered from a broken jaw, a broken leg and exposure.

Six Cubans Join A Refugee Camp

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)— Florida's Cuban refugee colony is larger today by five ex-soldiers and a sailor.

They told immigration authorities they chipped in $700 to buy the 16-foot motor boat in which they cruised from Havana to Key West.

Miguel Victoreto y Garcia, 29, said he fled from Fidel Castro's navy because of political trouble and hid out 15 days before embarking.

The others said they were in the Cuban army of ex-President Fulgencia Batista. All asked political asylum.

"Naval stores" is a trade term for turpentine and resin. It dates from the time when wooden sailing vessels needed them to lubricate rope to raise or lower the sails.

Old Hollywood Landmark Going

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It was a sad sight, all those memories being crunched under the tread of a bulldozer.

When I visited MGM on my recent rounds. I was suprised to see the building across the alley from the studio was being demolished. The walls had been pulled down, and a bulldozer was smashing the remains into rubble. The place was being leveled for a parking lot. Progress, they call it.

But to many of us it represented the loss of another sentimental landmark. For the building had housed a little-known hangout for the most famous names in Hollywood.

It was a drink-and-eatery that started out as Jim Stacy's shortly after prohibition ended. Later it became Frances Edwards' and in recent years it was called the Retake Room. Throughout its history, the MGM stars met there to start and to finish romances, to curse the bosses and to forget.

Vic Damone proposed marriage to Pier Angeli there over a bucket of Champagne. She accepted, to the surprise of her other suitor, James Dean.

Keenan Wynn once rode his motorcycle into the bar.

Gene Kelly and assistant Carol Haney planned most of their routines for "An American in Paris" and "Brigadoon" on the tiny dance floor. And one night the whole place toasted her acceptance of a role in "Pajama Geme," her start to fame as a stage star.

Editor Predicts New Leadership On School Front

DURHAM (AP) — Editor Ralph McGill predicted today the South will get a new sort of political leadership that "will open new and better schools, not close them."

The Atlanta Constitution editor, who recently won a Pulitzer Prize, told Duke University graduates this leadership will result from the South's "present travail and agony" but no one can say how long it will take.

McGill said North Carolina "is stronger and happier and more confident of its future because it has had stronger leadership with more integrity than some of its neighbors."

Men with little faith in themselves, McGill said, now "seek to destroy the faith of others in our processes of law and of constitutional government."

He said young Southerners are "watching their political representatives in the spotlight of the great drama of human rights and public education, as well as in economics and international affairs.

"Since their political leaders are before them so planly, the young Southerners cannot help but think about these men and about those who speak from pulpit, podium or press on the same subject," McGill declared.

"Not since the period 1855 - 61 have the young Southerners had so stark a contrast or so vivid a drama to watch. Somebody is wrong. That at least is obvious."

Southern youths largely are Sunday School attendants, McGill added, but find they have to try to rationalize the Sermon on the Mount with the last news conference at some of the South's capitols.

The editor said what the preacher and church school teacher say on Sunday often runs contrary to what some of the region's political leaders say on Monday.

"If the South loses, or betrays public education into inadequacy, if America ever kills its great dream, we will lose, too . . . the ability to offer the example of unarmed truth," he said.

Beatniks Meet Legal Difficulty

NEW YORK (AP) — The embattled Beatniks of Greenwich Village want to co-exist, like, but the fuzz doesn't dig them and is trying to down them.

This means the bearded young men who read their poetry in Greenwich Village coffee houses are having their troubles with the police.

The difficulty boils down to this: is it art or is it entertainment when a Beatnik reads his poetry aloud in a coffee house

To the police department, it is a simple matter of law. It is illegal to provide entertainment without a cabaret license. The issuance of such licenses is a police department function.

So the department is continuing to issue summonses to coffee houses in which regular poetry readings are held without cabaret licenses.

The proprietors of several coffee houses where poetry readings are pulling in tourist and native trade are protesting.

The Beatniks, natch, are backing them up.

"Dig this," says Dick Woods, a coffee-house poet from Shreveport, La.

"These summonses are strictly a bum rap. People come to the Village expecting something like these poetry readings. They come to enjoy them. Without them, the Village would be as dead as any other part of town."

More gas per gallon sparks switch to Amoco

In the past 12 months more motorists switched to Amoco-Gas than to any other premium gasoline

What makes Amoco-Gas so unique that it convinced thousands of motorists to change their premium gasoline buying habits? More than anything is the fact that only Amoco-Gas is all gas—untainted by lead, untinted by color. That's why Amoco guarantees you more gas per gallon. And more gas means you get more mileage, more natural power, more engine protection. Of all premium gasolines sold—only unleaded Amoco-Gas keeps your engine free of fouling lead deposits . . . your muffler free of corroding lead acids. Today, tonight or tomorrow for sure, discover the economy of Amoco-Gas.

Unretouched photo of piston from engine run 42,168 miles with a nationally known leaded premium gasoline. Lead deposits caused wasted power.

Unretouched photo of piston from identical type engine after 45,423 miles with Amoco Gas. There were no harmful deposits. Engine ran perfectly.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—A hesitant stock market declined unevenly early this afternoon. Trading was relatively slow.

Losses of key stocks went from fractions to a point or so generally. Many were unchanged and there were scattered gainers. Losses of around 3 for Du Pont and more than 7 for Zenith were exceptions to the general rule.

A pile-up of buy orders for North American Aviation and sell orders for Foster-Wheeler delayed the openings of both stocks.

North American rose 3½ to 48¼ on a block of 15,000 shares and later trimmed a point from the gain. Foster-Wheeler dropped 6¼ to 36¼ on a block of 12,000 shares and then reduced its loss by around a point.

Garrett Corp., picked as a "stock for action" by Standard & Poor's "Outlook' was up 3⅜ at the opening and lost a fraction of the gain.

Liggett & Myers was down about 2 while Lorillard and Reynolds Tobacco dropped more than a point each. American Tobacco lost a fraction.

United Aircraft advanced more than a point. Raytheon, Anaconda and New York Central were fractional gainers.

Losses of more than a point were taken by Goodrich, Kennecott and Pfizer.

U.S. government bonds were slightly higher.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hog markets today were mostly steady to 25 lower. RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

We, the members of Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of Eastern Star, wish to pay tribute to the memory of one of our Charter members, Mrs. Susie Moore Ragsdale.

Whereas, we admired and loved her for her faithful and loyal devotion to her family and friends; for her deep religious conviction; for her radiant kindness and artistic temperament; and for her sincere desire to lend her time and influence in service not only to her church, but to work in organizations promoting education, charity, gracious living and culture throughout this community and the State:
