West Fears Failure Looming In Geneva

GENEVA (AP) — Western foreign ministers were reported deeply concerned today over the possibility that their conference with the Soviet Union may collapse in failure soon without agreement either on Berlin problems or a summit conference.

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville rate the danger of a breakdown greater than does Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd of Britain, highly placed authorities said.

All three still hope that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will get instructions from Moscow in a few days enabling him to make last-minute concessions.

But Herter particularly is now much less hopeful in this respect in view of statements made by Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in an interview published in Hungary last weekend.

The Western ministers are about ready to toughen their conference tactics in dealing with Gromyko. They returned to another secret session at Herter's villa. They discussed the desirability of cutting the session short if the arguments developed the same positions that have been debated repetitiously for more than a week.

The prospect of a breakdown—which apparently all sides still hope to avoid—is blamed by Western ministers on the Budapest interview. In this Khrushchev said that if the Geneva conference now fails to reach agreement, agreement would be made at a summit conference, and if the Western governments refused a summit because of a foreign minister's failure, "then world opinion will see who is responsible for the collapse of the summit conference."

This was interpreted as a maneuver by Khrushchev to begin to pin the blame on the West for whatever failures grow out of the deadlock over Berlin.

Khrushchev gave answers on the Berlin dispute itself which went beyond anything Gromyko had been able to say here. Again, these answers, in the Western view, pointed toward a potential breakdown.

Khrushchev ridiculed the demand of the Western powers that the Soviet Union pledge itself to recognition of their rights in Berlin and to a policy of noninterference with access between West Germany and West Berlin.

"The Soviet Union," Khrushchev said, "will not under any kind of pressure make an agreement which would perpetuate the occupation regime in West Berlin."

Gromyko has made the interview a part of the official conference record.

In a secret session Monday, Gromyko gave the impression he was interested in working out a new accord on Berlin but lacked final instructions. He made no concessions, but neither did he slam the door on further talks.

President Eisenhower said last week he would not go to a summit meeting under threat of a Soviet squeeze on West Berlin. The conflicting positions taken by the President and the Soviet Premier have left the range of maneuver for the foreign ministers very narrow.

American officials are convinced there would be serious trouble if the Soviets turned over control of the West Berlin access routes to the East Germans and they then tried to stop Western traffic.

Khrushchev now is conferring in Moscow with top East German officials. Western diplomats believe it may be several days before Gromyko gets his orders from the Kremlin.

Literacy Test Of Voters Supported By Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court has unanimously upheld the right of states to apply a literacy test to voters so long as no racial discrimination is involved.

Justice Douglas, speaking for the court, said Monday a North Carolina law requiring the prospective voter to be able to read and write any section of the state constitution in the English language was fair on its face.

He said the requirement applies to members of all races.

"That seems to be one fair way of determining whether a person is literate, not a calculated scheme to lay snares (snares) for the citizen," Douglas said.

"Certainly we can not condemn it on its face as device unrelated to the desire of North Carolina to raise the standards for people of all races who cast a ballot."

In other actions involving racial issues:

1. The court struck down for a second time an Alabama judgment of civil contempt against the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, together with the $100,000 fine it carried.

2. The justices filed 6-3 that the federal courts must give Virginia state courts reasonable time to pass on constitutionality of three Virginia laws aimed at the NAACP before federal courts take action on them.

3. The court denied a hearing to five Houston, Tex., Negroes who complained the United Steelworkers Union negotiated a labor management agreement with Armco Steel Corp. that discriminated against Negro employees.

In the North Carolina literacy test case, the loser was Mrs. Louise Lassiter, a Negro woman who refused to read sections of the North Carolina constitution when she asked to register as a voter in Seaboard Precinct of Northampton County. She contended the requirements violated guarantees of the U.S. Constitution.

I. Beverly Lake, counsel for the Northampton County Election Board, said Mrs. Lassiter was unable to read or write.

Douglas observed that a literacy test, fair on its face, may be employed to perpetuate racial discrimination. But he said no such influence was charged in the North Carolina case.

Att. Gen. Malcolm B. Seawell of North Carolina said in a brief filed with the court that similar literacy tests are in effect in 19 states, only seven of them South-

Debate Offering Court Reform In Package Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — Should the question of court reforms and a revised state constitution be submitted to a vote of the people as a separate issue or together?

Sens. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg and Lindsay Warren of Beaufort disagree on the answer.

Bell, who headed a North Carolina Bar Assn. committee which recommended court reform proposals, declared Monday night the issues should be submitted separately.

Warren, former congressman and comptroller general of the United States, said they should be submitted as a package or not at all.

Earlier, Gov. Hodges had told his news conference he agreed with Bell that the issues should be offered separately.

Warren said, "Any such proposal to let the people vote on the Bell bill alone and then again on the constitution with the Bell bill in it is a trick to defeat the bill of the General Assembly." If it were done, he contended, it would mean "a ganging up against the constitution on a sectional basis."

Apparently Warren meant that if the revised constitution were voted on separately from court reform the state's populous areas would oppose it because it contains a provision which says no county can ever have more than one senator no matter how large its population. Such an amendment was defeated in a statewide vote several years ago.

Bell noted the Senate had approved by 40-7 a bill carrying the court reform proposals separately. He declared it would be unfair to the public to tie the judicial section of the proposed constitution to a legislative reapportionment rejected by the people less than five years ago.

Bell added, "If the Legislature desires to resubmit such a proposal it should be done separately."

UTILITIES COMMISSION MEETING SET TONIGHT
The Greenville Utilities Commission will meet tonight in City Hall at 7:30. The meeting will be held in Superintendent Leonard Bixham's office.

Jenkins Re-Elected Chairman Of City Recreation Commission

Doctor Leo W. Jenkins, present Chairman of the Greenville Recreation Commission, was re-elected for another year at the monthly meeting of the commission held last night in the recreation building at Elm Street Park.

Also re-elected was the vice-chairman, Mrs. W. R. Guice.

A report was heard from the playground committee, which outlined the recreation activities for the summer.

Playgrounds at Elm Street Park, Third Street Park, Hillsdale Park, South Greenville Park, Riverside Park, and Fleming Street Park will be opened from 9:00 to 12 Noon and from 3:00 p.m. until 6:00 p.m. The playground at Guy Smith Stadium will be in operation from 9:00 a.m. to 12 Noon while the Meadowbrook Park will be supervised from 3:00 p.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday, starting June 15 for seven weeks.

Themes for the weeks include preparation and get-acquainted week, nature week, Independence Day and United Nations week, drama and storytelling week, Indian week, music and dance week, and youth fitness week.

Playground leaders and assistants include "Bud" Phillips, supervisor, Pat Morton, Sandra Vinson, Sara Ewell, James Overby, Merrill Eynum, Mary Don Beatty, Charles Cook, Mrs. Leon Royal, Nancy Berryman, Ike Riddick, Luke Hemby, Mabel Godette, Eleanor Hagen, and Mrs. Percy Daniels.

Members of the commission voted last night to pay part of the cost for a fence at the South Greenville Playground. The fence, according to reports, is needed to keep the children on the playground and off school property.

It was agreed to pay the remainder of the cost of construction of the fence, provided the Coastal Plain Boys League and the Greenville School Board would pay $100 each toward the project. Estimated cost for the project is between $400 and $500.

Commission members voted to take a tour of all City playgrounds July 7, in order to see what improvements may be needed.

The next meeting of the commission will be the second Monday night in September.

Big Alligator Shot In Pamlico River

BIG ALLIGATOR KILLED IN PAMLIKO RIVER AT WASHINGTON—An alligator 11 feet, five inches long was pulled Sunday from Pamlico River at Washington, dead, apparently, from effects of four rifle bullets fired into him late Friday by a member of the Washington Rescue Squad. The big reptile attracted large crowds of spectators after he was pulled from the river between the U. S. 17 highway bridge and oil docks on the south side of the river. Move To Drop Teacher Pay Raise Stirs House Debate

Fugitive Slayer Asked For Death

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — "Kill me. Kill me. Please kill me. I don't want to go to the gas chamber."

That was the plea of a Negro man who was hunted down and shot by a posse after the slaying Monday of Lee County Deputy Sheriff J. L. Powers, 50.

Powers was slain while he and other officers searched an area five miles southeast of here for a man reported living in the woods and stealing food from homes in the area.

The man also was wanted for questioning about the wounding last Wednesday of Vernon Elkins, 32, a farmer. Elkins was shot from ambush while driving his tractor. He was not seriously hurt.

Sheriff D. F. Holder said the man identified himself as James Jones of Richmond, Va. His wounds were treated first at a hospital here. He was later taken to the hospital at Central Prison in Raleigh.

In Raleigh, the State Bureau of Investigation said a check of fingerprints confirmed his identity.

Near-Disaster Is Said No Accident

MCRAE, Ga. (AP) — Who took the lock off the switch that caused derailment of a freight train and dumped two car loads of dangerous chlorine gas in this southeast Georgia community?

Investigators were trying to answer that question today as wrecking crews completed removal of the debris.

The tank cars containing 16,000 gallons of gas were placed on flat cars and carried out of the area. Residents breathed easier for the first time since Sunday night.

D. D. Strench, division superintendent of the Southern Railway in Atlanta, said the wreck "apparently was caused by someone tampering with the switch at a main line and an auxiliary track."

Officials found a lock which kept unauthorized persons from tampering with the switch lying beside the switch.

The tank cars containing the gas and 17 loaded with pulpwood run off the tracks and ended in a tangled heap of metal and wood. A warehouse was damaged.

Bethel Sewage Survey Approved

BETHEL — Town fathers have authorized a survey of Bethel's water and sewer system by an engineering firm. Mayor Clifford Everett said today.

The survey will be done with the idea of extending the town's sewer system to serve new sections where septic tanks are being used by individual houses at present.

Prisons Director Protests Curb

RALEIGH (AP) — Prisons Director W. F. Bailey today protested a bill prohibiting the use of prisoners in the operation of highway maintenance equipment.

Bailey said if prisoners were forbidden from such work it would cost the state $300,000 a year in money which could otherwise be used in the secondary roads system. He also said it would increase the Prison Department's task of finding constructive work for convicts.

The director made his protest to the House Penal Institutions Committee considering the measure by Rep. J. Raynor Woodard of Northampton. The committee deferred action.

Block Attack On Minimum Wage

RALEIGH (AP) — Senators drew a tight defensive ring around the state's minimum wage law today, and killed an attempt to amend it.

With only one dissenting vote, members of the Senate Manufacturing, Labor and Commerce Committee defeated a bill which would have exempted laundry workers until 1963. The minimum wage law, enacted several weeks ago, goes in effect next Jan. 1. It will require the workers covered by the act receive at least 75 cents an hour.

The bill was introduced Monday night by Sen. Frank P. Cooke of Gaston.

NEGRO PRIESTS BAY ST. LOUIS, MISS. (AP) —

A survey conducted by St. Augustine's Seminary here shows that 54 American Negroes have been ordained as Roman Catholic priests since 1950.

Passes Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill authorizing six eastern counties to operate a cooperative airport passed the Senate today and was sent to the House.

As introduced by Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Pitt, the measure would have included 10 counties. Amendments offered today, however, withdrew Wayne, Nash, Beaufort and Edgecombe counties.

The bill, permitting creation of an authority to own and operate an airport, affects Greene, Lenoir, Pitt, Wilson, Martin and Washington counties.

A crowd of 10,000 was expected to watch the launching of the 300-foot, 5,400-ton George Washington, first in a new class designed to fire the Polaris missile from either underwater or surface.

President Eisenhower, in a message for reading at the ceremonies, hailed the new vessel as one which "will add greatly to our ability to preserve the peace."

RALEIGH (AP) — An administration-sparked effort to remove a 10 million dollar teacher pay raise amendment from the big biennial appropriations bill plunged the House into debate today.

Rep. John Umstead of Orange sent up the amendment to eliminate the amendment which the House adopted last Friday by a close 58-53 vote.

The move came as the House considered the big spending bill on third reading. Including the teacher pay amendment, the bill would appropriate about 937 million dollars to operate state agencies, institutions and the public schools during the next two fiscal years, including 592 million from the general fund.

The bill already carried sufficient funds to give teachers a 5 percent raise—if the State Board of Education decides to use it for that purpose, as most legislators assumed it would. It also provides for a contingent raise for teachers of up to 5 percent more if state revenues during the next two years permit.

Meanwhile, the House Finance Committee's version of the biennial revenue bill was reported to the House floor by Chairman Clifford Blue of Moore. Its main provision is to provide the withholding plan of collecting individual income taxes.

The bill went on the calendar and may come up Wednesday.

To Open Hospital Bids Tomorrow

Bids for contracts to construct an addition to Pitt Memorial Hospital will be opened tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the courtroom of the Pitt County Court House.

Jesse R. Moye, chairman of the hospital's Board of Trustees, will preside at the meeting. He will be assisted by other members of the board and architects for the project which is expected to cost in excess of $1,500,000.

Bids to be opened will include those for the general construction, electrical, heating and air conditioning, and plumbing contracts.

The addition will increase capacity of the hospital to 200 beds, 70 more than are available now. Funds for the project will come from a million-dollar appropriation by the North Carolina Medical Care Commission, which allocates federal and state funds, and a $750,000 bond issue approved last fall by Pitt County voters.

First Missile-Firing Nuclear Submarine Is Launched Today

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — The nation's first missile-firing, nuclear-powered submarine slips down the ways today with the advance billing of a "vital deterrent" against enemy aggression.

A crowd of 10,000 was expected to watch the launching of the 300-foot, 5,400-ton George Washington, first in a new class designed to fire the Polaris missile from either underwater or surface.

President Eisenhower, in a message for reading at the ceremonies, hailed the new vessel as one which "will add greatly to our ability to preserve the peace."

Humber Discloses Art Treasure For State Museum

RALEIGH — The Samuel H. Kress Foundation gift promised 12 years ago to the North Carolina Art Museum will be 70 paintings and sculptures valued at $2.5 millions, Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville announced here last night.

Dr. Humber, a member of the State Senate from Pitt County and president of the State Art Society, made the announcement at the Senate's Monday evening session. He said, however, formal presentation of the gift collection will not be made for several months.

The gift is the result of a promise made 12 years ago by the foundation to match a state appropriation of $1,000,000 for art purchases. It was described last night, by Dr. Humber, as "... the largest and most important collection of paintings ever given by the foundation to any institution except the National Gallery of Art in Washington."

Included in the collection are works of Rembrandt, Botticelli, Perugino, Francia, Tintoretto, Veronese and Frans Hals. In addition, Dr. Humber said the gift includes works by pioneer painters of the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries.

Prior to formal presentation of the collection, Dr. Humber said the paintings will have to be cleaned and framed. A catalogue will also have to be prepared and made available to the public.

The collection will be placed in the North Carolina Art Museum which was opened in 1956, nine years after the 1947 General Assembly made an appropriation of $1,000,000. Dr. Humber, Rep. John H. Kerry of Warren County and the late Gov. R. Gregg Cherry leading a campaign for the appropriation, and Dr. Humber persuading the Kress Foundation to match it.

Efforts were made by the 1949 and 1951 General Assembly sessions to reclaim the unspent funds, but the efforts failed. In 1951, the Assembly enacted legislation designating the appropriation for the purchase of a state art collection and the Kress Foundation entered into a contract with the state in which the foundation stated it would match the appropriation with works of art valued at a million dollars.

The foundation's gift, as it was outlined in Dr. Humber's announcement, will, however, more than double the amount called for in the contract.

Governor Luther H. Hodges, commenting on the announcement, said, "I am very pleased to learn that a final agreement has been reached with the Kress Foundation for its gift of paintings and other works of art as promised some years ago."

"These new acquisitions will add great cultural wealth to our growing State Art Museum."

"I would like to commend Dr. Humber and all who have had a part in this agreement and I thank the Kress Foundation for its generosity."

Dr. Humber was the leader of the state's delegation in negotiating for the gift, as chairman of the North Carolina State Art Commission. Other members of the commission who assisted in the negotiations include Dr. Clarence Poe and State Treasurer Edwin Gill, both of Raleigh; Dr. Clements Sommer of Chapel Hill; and E. L. Davis Jr. of Winston-Salem.

The late Dr. William B. Vann, director of the state Museum of Art until his death; James B. Byrnes, acting director; and Carl W. Hamilton, consultant and advisor to the State Art Society, collaborated with the Art Commission at different periods of the negotiations, Dr. Humber said.

Push Attack On Tobacco Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Farm Bureau leaders made a last try today to stop Congress from passing an industry-sponsored tobacco price support bill.

Charles B. Shuman, president of the group, said in a telegram sent to 10 House members: "Farm Bureau favors making tobacco prices more competitive in a clean cut, honest, understandable manner which would be less costly and more acceptable (than the industry bill)."

The bill desired by the major tobacco producers — already passed by the Senate and scheduled for House action today — is designed to stabilize tobacco support prices at current levels.

But the changes in the overall tobacco program are minor, and would leave tobacco as the only crop with a fixed price support.

This, Shuman said, is one of his organization's objections to the bill.

As he put it: "It is a complicated effort to maintain the fiction of 90 per cent of parity while lowering price supports."

Parity is an arbitrary figure used in computing price supports. It is supposed to give the grower a fair price for his crop as compared with what he pays for the things he buys.

Rep. Charles B. Hooven (R-Iowa) is expected to offer a measure on the floor that conforms to the desires of the Farm Bureau.

This proposal would be a two-year freeze on present prices to allow for time to draw up a new program.

Rep. John C. Watts (D-Ky.), one of the leaders behind the push to pass the industry-sponsored bill, said it would be an out and out catastrophe to the growers if that freeze became law.

Watts reasoned this way: The big firms that make the popular brands of cigarettes have about a three-year supply of tobacco — maybe a little more.

If a freeze on the price is put into effect for two years, these firms might be inclined to slow down on tobacco purchases in the hope the price will drop after the freeze is taken off.

"Why, the uncertainty of the present situation has already slowed sales," Watts told a reporter. "With a freeze, the big companies could afford to sit it out and hope to receive their own price."

House members, in addition to the communication from the Farm Bureau, also received a letter favoring the other side.

Signed by 29 House members from tobacco states, the letter said that the bill, do just what President Eisenhower wants, stabilize tobacco prices in world markets.

is sponsor of the shark-shaped submarine.

The Electric Boat Division said the George Washington is capable of remaining submerged indefinitely while carrying large numbers of intermediate range ballistic missiles.

General Dynamics' board chairman Frank Pace Jr., a former secretary of the army, said in his prepared remarks that the George Washington, together with sister ships under construction, "will have a combined striking power capable of destroying the military and industrial power of our enemy in less time than we will spend here today."

Sunday Rites Unite Couple

In a ceremony of simplicity and faith, Miss Carolyn Briley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Briley, became the bride of Billy Fields, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Fields, Sunday afternoon in the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church. The altar was flanked by white floral arrangements in baskets and seven-tier candelabra. White satin bows marked the family pews. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Billy Jackson.

Nuptial music was furnished by Mrs. Billy Taylor, organist, and Mrs. Patsy Jones. Traditional wedding marches were used. Miss Jones sang "Hawaiian Wedding Song" and "O Promise Me" before the ceremony. "The Lord's Prayer" was sung as the benediction. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a Lorrie Deb creation of white nylon organza. The gown was ballerina length on princess lines with nylon embroidered panels and fashioned with a sweetheart neckline. She wore nylon fingertip gloves. Her elbow length veil of imported silk illusion was attached to a circle of nylon rosettes. She carried a white prayer book, showered with ribbon streamers and centered with a white orchid and baby's breath.

Miss Ann Byrum, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a dress of blue nylon. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and blue baby's breath, backed by a net fan with streamers of white ribbon.

R. C. Fields, father of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were R. C. Fields Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and Bill Moore.

The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a sheath dress of baby blue lace over taffeta, with matching lace hat. Her corsage was white roses.

The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue silk jersey dress with white accessories. She wore a pink rose corsage.

The bride is a 1959 graduate of Greenville High School and is employed by a local theatre. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Greenville High School and at present is stationed at Chester, Pa. with the U. S. Army.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church parlor. Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Fleming directed the guests to the parlor, and Mr. and Mrs. Elton Byrum introduced them to the receiving line, consisting of the bride's parents, the bride and the bridegroom, the bridegroom's parents, and Miss Byrum.

The appointed table was covered with an imported hand-embroidered handkerchief linen cloth. An arrangement of feverfew, shasta daisies and lilies centered the table, flanked by crystal candleholders with white candles tied with ribbon bows. The bridegroom's grandmother served punch and the bride's grandmother served bridal cakes. Mints and nuts were also served.

For a wedding trip, Mrs. Fields wore an aqua sheath dress with white accessories and the orchid lifted from her bridal bouquet.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Dunn, Mrs. L. G. Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Russ Willan, Mrs. Earl Norwood, Miss Bonnie Fish, Morehead City; Miss Nancy Rothrock, Raleigh; Mrs. Howell Whitehead, Mrs. R. L. Wooten, Mrs. Jack Brown, Rocky Mount; D. T. Stanchell, Newport News, Va.; Miss JoAnn Hathaway, Miss Joyce McLawhorn, Winterville; Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Fields, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Bond, Keith Bond, Miss Linda Bond, Miss Nancy Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Bond, Mrs. G. T. Brown, Selma; Mr. and Mrs. Street Jones Jr. and family, Pine Level; Mr. and Mrs. W. Vacation reading clubs for the children were organized at the Greenville Public Library this morning.

Seventy-four children were present and started their summer reading. Others may come in any day this week.

After this week, one will need to get special permission from the librarian to join a club.

Miss Johnnie Gray Currin, Miss Mary Frances Whitehurst, Miss Helen Gaskins and Miss Catherine Jones helped enroll the children and directed the distribution of the books. They will continue to give help with the club work all through the summer.

Their home on E. Tenth St. A pink and white color scheme of floral arrangements was carried throughout the home.

The table was covered with an oyster linen outwork cloth, centered with an arrangement of pink and white carnations and white snapdragons, flanked by crystal candelabras with pink candles. The three tiered wedding cake was topped by a miniature bride and groom.

After the bride- and the bridegroom-elect cut the first slice, the bride-elect's mother served the cake and the bridegroom-elect's mother served punch to the guests.

Farmville Illustrates The 'Profit'

The manner in which industrial development boosts tax valuations of a community or a county is vividly illustrated by the 1959 valuations for Farmville township.

Of the 15 townships in Pitt County, Farmville showed the largest increase in county tax valuations from 1958 to 1959, and the gain is almost entirely directly attributed to the new Flakeboard plant which began operations in Farmville several months ago.

The 1958 listings for Farmville township (which were based on the value of property as of January 1, 1958) totaled $7,762,952. By January 1, 1959, with the huge Flakeboard plant constructed, valuations jumped to $8,959,233, an increase of $1,196,281 during the 12 month period.

While all the valuation increase for Farmville township was not due directly to the construction of the new industrial plant, the vast majority of it was. The valuation increase in Farmville township alone accounted for more than half the total increase in valuations for all of Pitt County from 1958 to 1959.

Based on a county-wide tax rate of $1.00 per $100 valuation, the increased valuation in Farmville township will mean an additional $12,900 in direct tax revenues for Pitt County during the coming fiscal year. That amount of revenue represents only slightly less than what would be expected from a county-wide tax increase of two cents, based on 1958 valuations.

Add to the county-wide tax rate the amount of school district tax for the township involved, and the total tax revenue produced by the increased valuation would be considerably higher.

The increased tax valuation for Farmville township from 1958 to 1959 should serve to illustrate the manner in which local governments can benefit tax-wise from industrial development. The increase in tax revenue because of the higher property valuation brought about investments in buildings and equipment may be used either to meet higher costs of government and thereby help avert tax increases, or eventually, with sufficient development and valuation, it may tend to reduce the overall tax rate of local government.

In short, the development creates more taxable property which tends to provide a broader base for financing local government operations. And aside from industrial plants themselves, the new jobs and additional income provided by a new plant will in time reflect itself in more homes, more automobiles and other things which will also add to the property valuation and tax revenues.

Farmville has done an outstanding job of pulling itself up by its own bootstraps with industrial development in recent years. It is evident from the increased property valuations that in addition to helping itself and the area by providing more jobs and more payrolls, it is also benefitting the entire county by creating additional taxable property which in turn creates more tax revenue for the county as a whole.

From a county-wide tax standpoint, the increase in valuations in Farmville township helps the taxpayers in Greenville, Ayden, Chicod, Bethel and all the other townships of the county. As the property valuations in each township increases, the taxpayers in every township of the county are helped.

It should be evident to all of the people of Pitt County that the best method of meeting the constantly increasing cost of local government is to create greater taxable wealth through industrial and general economic development.

Vance Board Should Take Realistic View

When Vance County Commissioners meet Wednesday to reconsider their attitude toward providing more officers to cope with the Henderson strike situation, we hope they will view with greater realism the obligation of local government to maintain law and order in the territory under its jurisdiction.

Previously the Vance commissioners declined to hire additional officers to cope with the strike violence, asserting it was the responsibility of the state.

Enforcement of law and order in any community becomes the responsibility of the state only when local government has done all within its power and still needs assistance to prevent disorder. In the case of Henderson, neither the municipal nor county government, in our opinion, has done all within its power toward preserving law and order.

Perhaps Vance County cannot afford to hire a couple hundred additional officers to patrol the strike-torn area. At least it should be able to provide more officers than it now does, and by doing so it would relieve the state of at least a part of the financial burden it now shoulders by keeping National Guardsmen in Henderson.

If 50 or 100 additional officers can be hired by the local governments, the complement of Guard forces in Henderson could be reduced by that many and the financial burden on the state reduced also.

Any local government which denies its responsibility to see that law is enforced within its boundaries likewise denies the obligation to protect the lives and property of its citizens.

Vance County officials should not only reconsider their previous stand in this matter, but they should also renounce their previous declaration that law enforcement in connection with the state is primarily a state rather than a local responsibility. Further, they should make a genuine effort to shoulder as much of the burden of enforcing the law locally as is impossible.

Taking A Look At The Ex-Brass

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — What could be nicer for a retiring general or admiral than to get a job—paying up to $40,000 a year or more—with a company which sells some kind of military equipment to the government?

But the question Congress is going to ask now is: What does he do to earn his money?

About July 1 a House Armed Services subcommittee headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert (D-La.) is going to start hearings digging into questions like these:

1. When a retired general or admiral gets a fat job from a company selling to the armed forces, is it strictly because of his executive ability and professional experience?

2. Or is he really hired as a lobbyist or influence-peddler to use his old friendships and contacts in the Pentagon for the benefit of the company which hired him?

There is a third, underlying question: Is a high ranking officer, still in the service, influenced in the selecting of equipment from a particular company by the prospect of going to work for that company when he retires?

Hebert says the picture is not all white and black—that many retired officers now with military equipment companies do a good, legitimate job because of their knowledge and background.

However he says he thinks more business in Washington is done on the golf links and over the cocktail tables than is ever transacted in the Pentagon. But any legislation Congress considers to correct abuses—and Hebert expects to have remedial measures for Congress when it returns in 1960—runs squarely into a problem of individual rights.

Many officers retire in the prime of life and, like nonmilitary people, have a right to make income in addition to their pensions—particularly in fields where their knowledge and experience should pay off best.

Pending results of the Hebert investigation the House rejected last week a ban on such employment for five years after retirement. But there is a long history of congressional agitation about military brass going into private industry which does business with the government.

When Sen. Gerald Nye, a North Dakota Republican, conducted his historic investigation into munitions-making back in the 1930s, it was brought out that retired military brass had big jobs in that industry.

There is a difference between the Nye inquiry and the one to be made by Hebert.

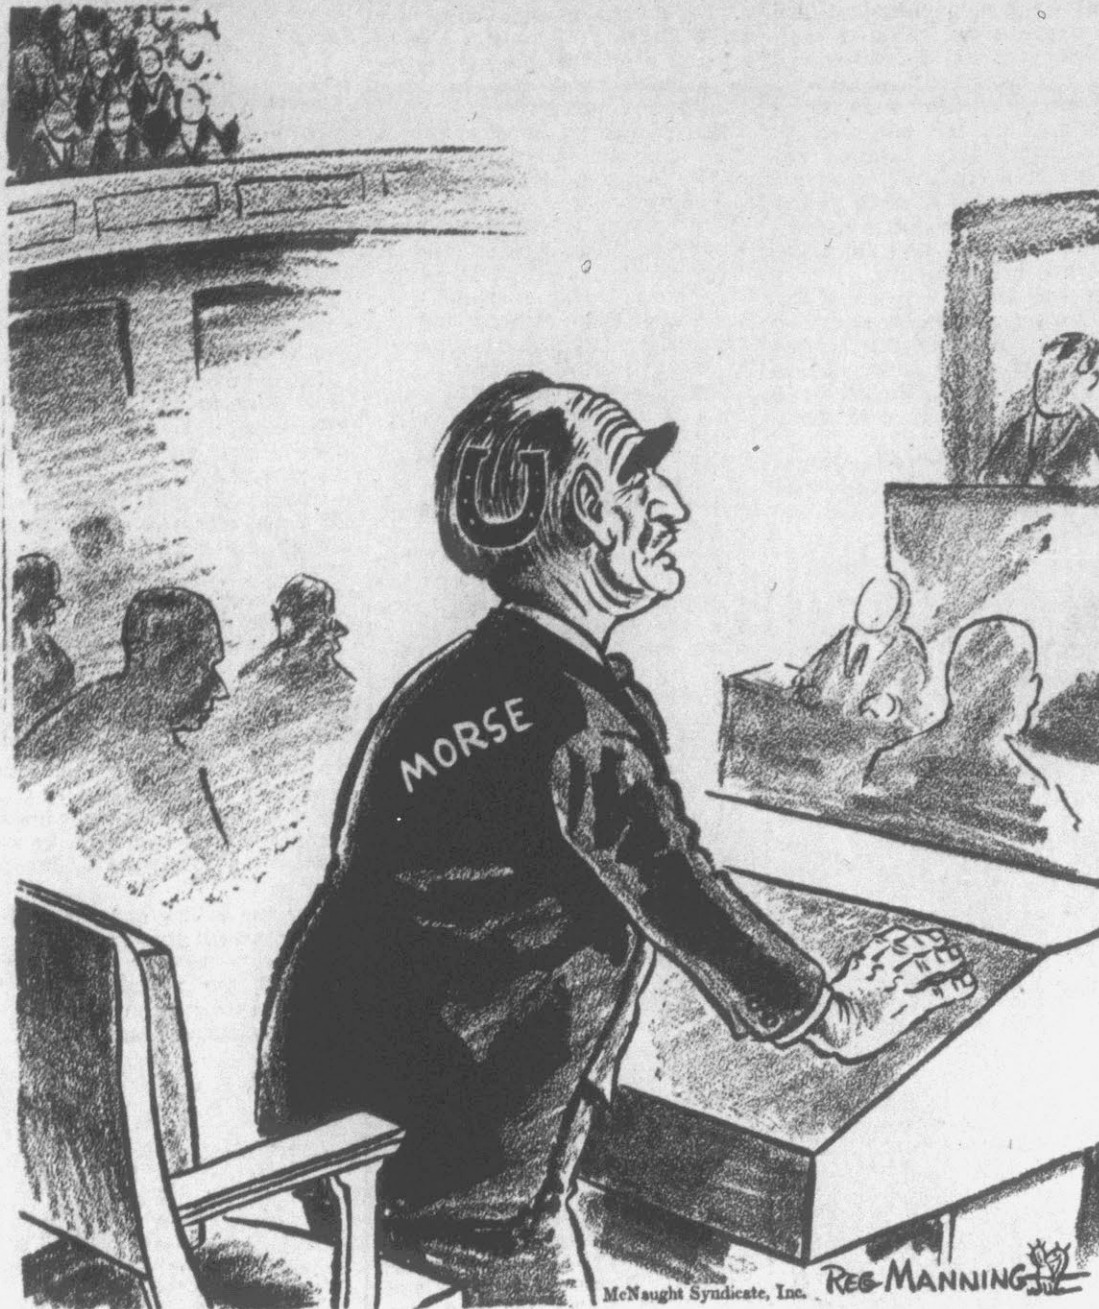

The former had its roots in American pacifism and neutralism—this country was isolationist then—and the munitions makers were accused of getting fat by fomenting conflicts around the world.

There is no dispute now about American needs for heavy armament. The American economy is so tightly linked with defense production that a sudden decision to reduce armaments drastically might throw the country into depression.

The Hebert investigation will examine not only the roles of retired officers in firms dealing with the government. It also will want to know the military equipment makers go about competing with one another to sell their products to the government. Meaning, how they try to influence decisions in their own favor.

President Eisenhower, asked at his news conference last Wednesday about the role of the munitions makers in American defense purchases, said: "Obviously something besides the strict military needs of the country are influencing decisions."

Whom Does The Gentleman From Oregon Arise To Attack?

By DON SCHLIENZ

So They Killed A 'Gator

Reading about that big alligator they shot in the Pamlico River something deep, deep inside.

You'd have to attend the University of Florida to understand. There we made quite a totem of the 'gator. If the school had a mascot, it was that swampy saurian (rampant).

The football team was known as the Fighting Gators. In keeping with the "other side" of that fierce-looking reptile, they were a pretty peaceable lot.

No Florida zoo was complete without a caged tank full of alligators, which proved to be the quietest, most somnolent-looking exhibit to be found anywhere.

There's no telling how many thousands of 'gators were on the loose in Florida, but their living space is dwindling as humans take over all that real estate. Civilization has taken a lot of "shirtilal lakes" from the contemporary scene, but every summer or so someone used to "discover" a spring-fed lake in the backwoods that had a small sandy beach.

The word would spread and bathers congregated.

It was nothing unusual to be told on arrival that a 'gator or two was around; and sure enough, on looking, you might see a couple of black knobs floating off in the distance. The attitude then was that 'gators were more scared of humans than vice versa; so everybody played a policy of live and let live. . . we did our swimming on our side of the lake, they did their swimming on their side.

Alligators have been known to have a taste for dogs. William T. Tetterton (known as "Jack" for some unfathomable reason), lives on West Fifth Street extension in Washington. Tranter's Creek is about three-eighths of a mile behind his house.

Jack had a retriever who loved the water. . . would go swimming in the creek maybe two or three times daily.

About three weeks ago the dog returned from swimming with his lips and hind legs badly mangled. The dog had to be shot. Jack thinks an alligator was responsible.

There have been several reports of late about alligators between Washington and Chocoma; but the news editor of the Washington Daily News says no reports of property damage attributable to 'gators have been heard.

Beyond having a taste for dogs, and being repugnant to look upon, there isn't much you can say against alligators. Not much you can say for them, either. They look coldly cruel, fierce and natural killers. Maybe that's sufficient reason to kill them; but I just don't feel that strongly about that kind of a deal.

RIGHT COMBINATION Thorwaldsen, the great Danish sculptor, made a statue of Christ for a church in Copenhagen. He molded the statue with the head of Christ raised imperiously as the King of Kings.

But as the plaster dried, the head sank down upon the breast and Thorwaldsen realized that what he would ordinarily have considered a mishap of great consequence turned out really to be a revelation of the true nature of that Jesus who had said, "Learn of me for I am meek

Erase That Scowl

By ED CREAGH

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wipe that scowl off your face, will ya?

I've seen you scrunched past a million times, with your lips clamped tight and your eyes like oncoming thunder.

You don't walk. You grind the pavements beneath your feet.

You don't see people. You see potential pickpockets.

You don't live. You hate yourself into gritty dust.

Yes, it's you I'm talking about — the you who can't bear the reflection of yourself in a store window.

I've seen you in a hundred cities, clutching your little worries, stroking your petty grievances in to disasters.

Wise up, will ya? Life's too short for hatred. Ponder a minute on that old wheeze. Even if you live out your three score and ten — which you won't, at the rate you're using up your vital juices — there isn't time for hatred.

I'm watching you go past on the street as I sit here at a typewriter.

You don't look good. You're gray, even when young — although you probably were born old.

You wish all the time, to destination nowhere. What's the hurry? The grave will claim you soon enough, and the grass will grow unhurried to cover you.

Try strolling. Start earlier and take longer. Risk a secret now and then — even a secret inward smile. Work up, or outward, to a smile at some total stranger. Even me. We won't understand. We'll stop being saddened by the sight of you.

Try joy, young man with the clutched attaché case. Try glory, too-soon-old gray lady with the hoarded purse. Honest, happiness is not a dirty word. The post office lets it go through the mails almost every day.

Joy, glory, happiness are your rightful legacy — from God or your healthy heartbeat, if you still have one. Unfrown. Unsnarl. Unzip your resentments. Love. The early Christians knew the meaning of that. Whatever became of them, or of the Word?

Okay, it's raining. Don't hunch your shoulders like a brooding hen. Walk in the rain. Strut in it. You're waterproof. The worst that can happen to you is a head cold and a dry-cleaning job. You'll recover from both.

Slow down. Straighten up. This is your world. Enjoy it. Don't look down your nose at strangers; they'll only look back at you. Glare at the world — as I just saw you doing — and it will snap at your heels.

So endeth today's sermon, which never would have happened if your reporter had not glimpsed himself in a store window mirror today, scowling, rushed, and ornerly for no earthly reason than pure unnecessary cussedness.

and lowly in heart, and he shall first rest unto your souls."

Although Jesus Christ is King of Kings, although all authority has been put in His hands, he ever remains humble and by His humility implements in the lives of men the eternal and loving purposes of God.

Jesus in His Sermon on the Mount declared that the meek shall inherit the earth. How many times without number that declaration has been verified. Every one who has tried to own the earth and dominate its people has gone down to defeat. Those who have served humanity in the humble spirit of Christ—such as Francis of Assisi, David Livingstone, Father Damien, Albert Schweitzer—are the world's real heroes. Their heads are not held high. They are bowed in humility and submission to Christ.

Sometimes we feel that we know a great deal. Maybe we do, and, again, maybe not. But whether we do or don't, let us remember that King of Kings and Lord of Lords, "Meek and lowly in heart."

Offer Less Pay, Good 'Fringes'

By ELMER ROESSNER

A corporation had this problem: Its condition was shaky. Its best hope was to hire the executive vice president of the competitive company. He was getting $50,000 a year. The troubled company offered him $75,000, but he declined. Said the increase was peanuts after taxes.

So it called this department several times. The first time your correspondent was out, teaching an Italian chef how to make a better marinara sauce. The second time he was tied up rewriting the rules for jai alai.

The third time he was teaching Casey Stengel how to talk double talk. So the corporation hired another man.

If he had caught your correspondent in this, is what he would have suggested:

1. Cut the offer from $75,000 to $49,500. That will plique his interest.

2. Explain that his new job will involve managing the Florida office during December.

COVER ALL OVER

3. Also insist he will have to take charge of the Paris office, rent a suite in the Hotel du Serbie.

4. Explain that because of his position, he will have to meet people at the best club in town, and that his dues and tabs will be a company expense.

5. Advise him that it will be necessary for him to ride in a company car with chauffeur, even though he prefers his 1950 MG.

FURTHER RESPONSIBILITIES

6. Let him know that he will be expected to entertain important prospects at his home and that therefore the company is placing an 18-room mansion at his disposal, with an operating bar, a barman, four servants and a swimming pool.

7. Let him know that he must become a beneficiary of the company's "split dollar" insurance program, which will drop a lot of split, tax-free dollars in his or his widow's lap.

8. Warn him he will be expected to spend some time on the company's yacht, possibly entertaining guests.

9. Let him know that a personal publicity man will be in attendance writing his speeches and getting mention in the trade press and seeing that his name is spelled correctly.

10. Introduce him to the secretary you have hired for him, and tipple out of the room.

11. Explain that the company has set up a private club and that he will have to serve as president and thereby run further risk of getting his name and picture in the paper.

DON'T HOLD BACK

12. Then tell him about the stock option plan. Point out that it's no free gift; that he's got to get it and be a genius to make the stock worth more, but that if he turns that trick, he can make a million — at capital gains tax rates.

13. Promise him as many windows to his office and any thickness of carpet he desires.

If the boy isn't smart enough to realize that at a lower salary he can have lots more fun after taxes, he isn't the man for the job.

Too bad I was out. Might have taken the job myself.

Contingency And Emergency Fund Is Becoming Legislative Football

By LYNN NISBET
Reflector Raleigh Bureau
RALEIGH — One of the anomalies and curiosities in North Carolina's legislative budgeting process is the one and three quarter million dollars a year appropriated for the contingency and emergency fund. As originally intended that money was set aside for use by the Governor and the Council of State for contingencies and emergencies arising when the General Assembly was not in session and for which specific appropriations could not be made in advance.

In this category might be listed necessity for immediate relief for communities victimized by hurricanes or floods; for unanticipated destruction of State buildings by fire, or demands for extra law enforcement activities because of strikes or rioting—of which recent developments at Henderson offer good example. There are many other contingencies and emergencies apt to arise in ordinary departmental operations which could not reasonably be anticipated when the biennial appropriation bill was prepared and considered in the Legislature.

To enable State government to continue without interruption, the budget commission and the General Assembly set aside this million and a half dollars a year ostensibly for use by the elected officials to meet emergency conditions. It would seem to be wise and sound financing to provide such a cushion.

But the Legislature apparently does not have the same regard for the emergency equation as does the public. Legislators who would not think of providing that money specifically appropriated for public schools might be used for building bridges have no hesitancy in saying that funds definitely appropriated for contingent emergencies shall be used for other purposes, without control by the group charged with responsibility for their use.

Latest example, but no more flagrant than many others, is provision in the bill offered last week by Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Pitt to give ten awards worth $1,000 each to individuals for excellence in art, literature, music and other cultural areas, the money to come from the contingency and emergency fund. What contingency or emergency can be involved in procedure which requires long advance study, planning and examination of candidates for the awards?

Nearly every resolution by the General Assembly authorizing a study commission provides that expenses of the study be paid out of the C&E fund, which already had been appropriated for use at discretion of the Governor and Council of State.

So far as can be learned this issue has never been brought into the courts. If it were subjected to judicial decision, and the courts should decide that the same dollars could be appropriated twice, the whole budget system would be knocked into a cocked hat.

Regardless of the merit of any project, if the General Assembly can say that money appropriated for use at discretion of the Governor and Council of State can be appropriated again for specific purposes without consent of the original consignees, why can't the Legislature appropriate the same dollars to pay school teachers and pay travel expenses of legislators—and let the first comers get the money.

In East Germany, Streets Are Without Laughter And Life

Editor's note: Associated Press Correspondent Michael Goldsmith went with a group of 10 Western newsmen on a two-day trip from Geneva to East Germany at the invitation of the Communist government. Here are some things Goldsmith observed on the trip.

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
GENEVA (AP)—The 7-year-old German girl's drawing showed the hanging of a top-hatted capitalist holding an atomic bomb.

The Communist teacher in the hush, super-modern school pinned the little girl's effort on the classroom wall along with similar student products.

The central theme of drawings made by children of the model school at Stalinstadt, East Germany's "first Socialist city," was fear—fear of the capitalist war-mongers plucking up nuclear weapons to destroy the "Socialist camp of peace-loving nations."

Stalinstadt is the pride of the East German regime. Its vast iron smelting combine on the Oder-Neisse border with Poland grew from a sandy waste in less than a year. Now it turns out more than a million tons of pig iron a year for East Germany's growing industries.

The foundry's 6,000 workers live in the new state-built, state-owned and state-operated city of 24,000 inhabitants. Three and four story buildings are clean, bright and well designed. The accent is heavy on social services. Nurseries, hospitals, schools and recreation centers are all free, or nearly so.

Basic food in the state-owned stores is cheap and plentiful. The average worker pays less than one tenth of his wages for a three-room apartment. All material conditions are there for comfort above the average enjoyed by industrial workers in Western Europe.

But the streets are without life and without laughter. The people have a glazed, unreal look like sleepwalkers. It is a familiar atmosphere in East German cities.

Only two buildings in Stalinstadt are not state-owned. The makeshift Protestant and Roman Catholic churches have been built with church funds. Church attendance is discouraged by authorities. The state religion is "socialism."

In schools, nurseries, hostels and old age homes throughout East Germany there are shrines to socialism and peace. Fashioned from scarlet drapes, flowers and slogans, they feature photographs of Red party secretary Walter Ulbricht and other Communist leaders.

The state religion has ceremonies corresponding to christening, confirmation, marriage and funeral services. Children leaving school go to "youth conservation" where they swear to help build socialism.

Communist burial services are less common. "The old people haven't had time to get adjusted," one Communist official said. The aged are well cared for in East Germany. Any Western city would be proud of a beautiful, air-conditioned old folks' home on the outskirts of Berlin. But one aged inmate caught a Western newsmen alone and whispered, "It's good to be here—but the young ones outside. Just think of them." A Czechoslovak army officer on a visit to East Berlin stood looking at a photograph of goosestepping soldiers of the new East German army.

The goosestepping has been a symbol of German military aggression in Europe for three generations. The officer walked off shaking his head.

When a Western newsmen tried to talk to the officer. He froze and turned away.

Green-uniformed police are as much in evidence as Hitler's storm troopers once were. The color of the uniform is different, but they still patrol in pairs, never alone.

Most of the policemen are in their late teens. Their entire lives have been dominated by dictatorship and war. Slogans come naturally to them. They are jack-booted and armed and they know who runs their country.

Soviet troops keep scrupulously out of the way. In East Berlin, Soviet troops and their families live on the outskirts of the city. They are rarely seen in town.

"But we know they are here," a retired civil servant said. "Those who would rebel remember Hungary. If they are realistic, they know there cannot be any hope at all."

The first basic patents to make "artificial leather" were issued in 1855. "Leatherette" is used for such things as baby buggies and book bindings.

Counter-Attack
GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP)—A tobacco company official has urged a crusade against the American Cancer Society and other forces which he said are intent on destroying the tobacco industry.

Spencer Hanes, vice president of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. of Winston-Salem, N.C., told burley warehousemen and growers from eight states here Monday that the American Cancer Society has found "attacks on the tobacco industry the best money raising media in its history."

Hanes added, "The American Temperance Society has been actively campaigning against tobacco for many years." And he said there is a great army of crusaders who find various benefits from attacking the tobacco industry.

He urged the group to join a counter-attack on "the formidable array of forces intent on destroying us."

Somoza Calls On Nicaragua Rebel Force To Give Up
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP)—Nicaragua's commander in chief today called on rebels against his family's government to surrender and claimed they had been knocked out in the rebellion's first major battle.

Gen. Anastasio Somoza, brother of President Luis Somoza, said the insurgents apparently ran out of ammunition in a bloody battle Monday which, he claimed, marked a decisive turn in neighboring Honduras reported, however, that civil resistance to the Somoza regime was increasing.

Agustin Torres Lazo, first secretary of the Nicaraguan Embassy in Washington, resigned Monday and aligned himself with the anti-Somoza faction led from Costa Rica by Dr. Enrique Lacayo Farfan.

Gen. Somoza gave no figures on casualties—either for the rebels or the National Guard—in the two-hour battle on a rain-drenched hill known as Cerro de la Guna about 120 miles northeast of Managua.

But he said, "I consider militarily these people (the rebels) are liquidated." He reported the rebel force, which came by plane from neighboring Costa Rica now numbered about 75 men. Many were believed to be sons of prominent Nicaraguan families.

The battle ended after two hours of fighting when the invaders ceased fire, apparently out of ammunition.

Somoza said the rebel position would be blanketed with air-dropped leaflets today demanding unconditional surrender.

The military chief said the second planeload of rebels, which landed in the Santo Tomas area, had disintegrated into groups of two and three.

"For all practical purposes the invaders in that area are no longer a menace," he declared.

Firemen from East St. Louis and four nearby communities brought the flames under control 2½ hours after the fire started in a wrecking company yard.

The flames reached the MacArthur Bridge, 80 feet above the yard, filled with old timber and plumbing fixtures. Underpinning of the bridge was damaged and the bridge was closed.

"If those tanks and gasoline trucks had blown it would have torn up a chunk of ground a mile wide," said East St. Louis Asst. Fire Chief William Eckles.

Supreme Court Clarifies Rulings On State Sedition Laws, Investigations

By STANLEY MEISLER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court has clarified its controversial rulings on state sedition laws and congressional investigations, saying earlier decisions in these fields were misunderstood.

Russian Deputy Premier Asks To Meet President

WASHINGTON (AP)—First Deputy Premier Frol Koslov of the Soviet Union has asked to meet with President Eisenhower and other top administration leaders during a 10-day visit to the United States.

Eisenhower is expected to grant his wish along with a request to undertake a coast-to-coast tour of some half-dozen American cities in early July.

Koslov, 51, a fast-rising new comer in the Kremlin hierarchy, is due to arrive in New York June 25, ostensibly to open the Soviet National Exhibition in the New York Coliseum.

The Soviet government appears to be making his visit a formal one, a tit-for-tat exchange for one Vice President Richard M. Nixon is to make to the Soviet Union July 25.

Nixon will open the American National Exhibition in Moscow's Sokolniki Park. While in the U.S.S.R. Nixon has asked to be allowed to tour Soviet cities, including some in Siberia, an area rarely opened to foreigners.

Top officials considering Koslov's requests, including an appearance before an American television audience, recognize that their answer may well determine how much of the Soviet Union Nixon gets to see.

Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov formally asked the State Department Friday to help arrange Koslov's trip.

Menshikov's move in giving Koslov's visit a formal character was in sharp contrast to the unofficial label put on a similar trip to the United States last January by Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan. Mikoyan's visit was arranged as an informal call on his old friend Menshikov.

The hectic coast-to-coast tour which followed was pictured by the Soviets as an effort by Mikoyan to accept some of the invitations showered upon him by private American citizens.

Koslov, regarded as one of Premier Nikita Khrushchev's likely successors, has expressed interest in visiting Washington, Detroit, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and a city in Texas.

His call on President Eisenhower at the White House shapes up as a courtesy visit, depending on the status then of the East-West jockeying for a summit meeting. Koslov has the reputation of being a forceful speaker, as well as a handsome, self-assured Communist party stalwart who helped Khrushchev beat down the challenge of Georgi Malenkov and V. M. Molotov in June 1957.

Valuable Books Given To Library

The Joyner Memorial Library at East Carolina College has received as a gift from Dr. Edith A. Roberts of Salem, Mass., seven volumes 1840 to 1846 of the "American Institute of Instruction Lectures," published by the Board of Censors of the organization. Only a few complete sets of the publication are known to be available in libraries in the United States, and separate volumes are hard to obtain.

Dr. Roberts presented the books to the East Carolina library through her friend Dr. Mildred Southwick, assistant librarian at the college here. Both are former members of the faculty at Vassar College. The volumes are from the library of Dr. Roberts' great-uncle Hal Roberts, formerly a professor at Bowdoin College in Maine.

The American Institute of Instruction, oldest education association in the United States, was organized in Boston in 1830 and continued its work until 1908. Its purpose was the "diffusion of useful knowledge about education."

Proceedings of the organizations included in the seven volumes recently acquired by East Carolina present materials by many of the famous educators of the time, among them Horace Mann, David Page, Asa Gray, and S. J. May.

laws may be invoked to protect the state, and upheld the right of congressional committees to question educators as well as others about alleged Communist activity.

In making these rulings, the court affirmed contempt convictions against Dr. Willard Upshaus, director of the New Hampshire World Federation Center, and Lloyd Barenblatt, a former teacher at Vassar College and the University of Michigan.

Upshaus had been convicted under New Hampshire's sedition law for refusing to provide a membership list of the center to the state attorney general. Barenblatt had refused to tell the House Committee on Un-American Activities whether he had been a Communist party member.

Earlier decisions in the same fields had drawn severe criticism from some congressmen and from groups as the state attorneys general and the American Bar Assn. Moves were started in Congress to try curtailing the court's power.

But, in its latest decisions, the court said that part of the earlier rulings had been misinterpreted. Justices Clark, Frankfurter, Harlan, Whitaker and Stewart made up the majority in both decisions. Dissenting were Chief Justice Warren and Justices Douglas, Black and Brennan.

In the Upshaus case, Clark, speaking for the majority, said that its Nelson case did not "strip the states of the right to protect themselves." In that case the court had thrown out the conviction of Communist leader Steve Nelson under the Pennsylvania sedition act.

Upshaus, of New Haven, Conn., had refused to give information about the New Hampshire World Fellowship Center to Atty. Gen. Louis Wyman, who requested it under a legislative resolution giving him power to investigate subversive activities.

Clark said that the court, in the Nelson case, had ruled that the Smith Act superseded the Pennsylvania law because they prohibited the same thing: "Knowing advocacy of the overthrow of the government of the United States by force and violence."

"All the opinion proscribed," Clark continued, "was a race between federal and state prosecutors to the court house door."

"The opinion made clear that a state could proceed with prosecutions for sedition against the state itself."

In a dissent, Brennan said the freedoms of speech and assembly were involved in the case and the state had not shown that its interest in getting the information from Upshaus was sufficient to outweigh these freedoms.

In the Barenblatt case, the court said that the House committee acted within the scope of its authority when it questioned

Barenblatt about membership in the Communist party.

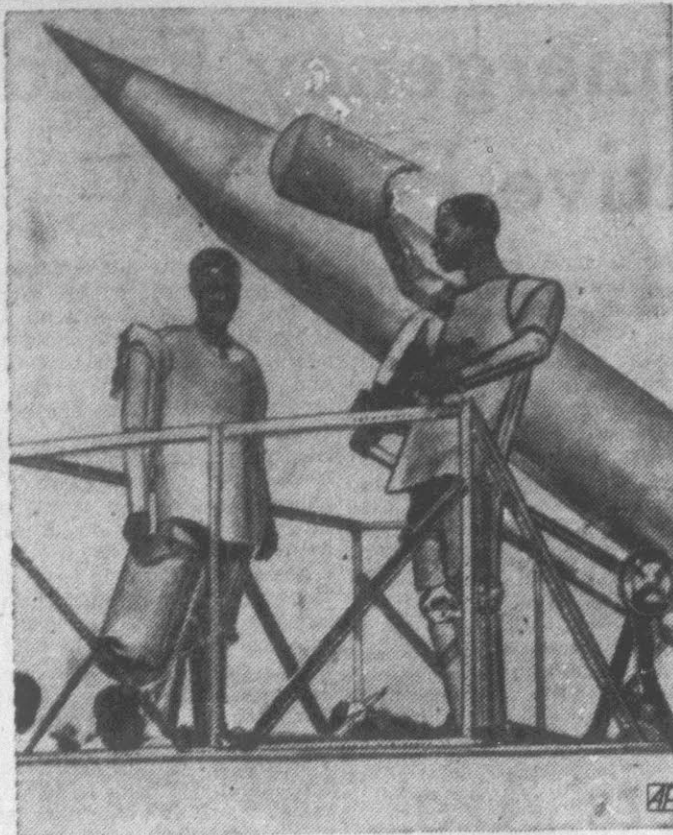

Barenblatt had refused to answer the committee's questions. He said the resolution setting up the committee was too vague and that the committee had no right under the First Amendment to investigate his activities or associations.

"When the court threw out the contempt conviction of John T. Watkins for refusing to answer questions before the committee, its decision had been interpreted widely as holding that the resolution setting up the committee was too vague."

But Justice Harlan said Monday the court had reversed the Watkins conviction because Watkins "had not been adequately apprised of the subject matter of the subcommittee's investigation or the pertinency thereto of the questions he refused to answer."

On the contention that Barenblatt's rights under the First Amendment had been violated, Harlan said: "We conclude that the balance between individual and government interests here at stake must be struck in favor of the latter, and therefore the provisions of the First Amendment have not been offended."

In a dissent, Justice Black said the decision "marks another major step in the progressively increasing retreat from the safeguards of the First Amendment."

Nixon Prescribes Good Dollars For GOP Win

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sound dollar—with plenty of them available for GOP campaigners—is the prescription of President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon for a 1960 Republican victory.

In a turnout that astonished its Senate and House sponsors, Republicans overflowed two large banquet halls at a $100-a-plate dinner Monday night to honor party members of Congress who survived last November's GOP debacle, and many who didn't.

What seemed of more practical importance than anything said by either Eisenhower or Nixon—or a long series of other GOP speakers, was the solid fact that the dinner racked up more than $300,000 net for party purposes.

The two congressional campaign committees will split the amount, 60 per cent to the House group and 40 per cent to the Senate unit.

Eisenhower told the applauding Republicans that he is not fighting to balance the budget just to claim that as an accomplishment. This, he said, is no effort to pinch pennies.

"At this moment," the President continued, "We are engaged in a highly important battle for a sound dollar. This is a fight to promote an expanding economy and domestic prosperity. This is a fight to make sure that a dollar earned today will tomorrow buy for the housewife an equal amount of groceries."

To carry on this fight, he said, "we will need money." But he said money alone will not do the job. He contended that for Republicans "sound, stable, progressive government for this country is the greatest cause that we could possibly have today."

Flexing their muscles for the first time in the kind of a dinner the Democrats have made traditional, Republicans showed they have lost none of their enthusiasm for Eisenhower and can generate some of the same kind for Nixon. The President and his wife were swamped with autographic seekers who delayed the start of the dinner program for 30 minutes. Nixon out-scored every Republican but Eisenhower in applause, including Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the darling of the conservative GOP members who made up most of the audience. Nixon was introduced by Rep. Richard M. The vice president told the diners that, to be frank about the whole thing, the Republicans can't win "without the sinews of war which money will provide." The three second division clubs took it on the chin in the Carolina League Monday night.

First-place Wilson edged Greensboro 3-0, second-place Raleigh made it 11 victories in a row by defeating Burlington 2-1, and Durham's Bulls won over Winston-Salem 6-3.

Big Ben Trench held Burlington to six hits and struck out 10 as Raleigh continued its victory string. It was Trench's third triumph of the season without a loss. A fifth inning triple by Al Moran drove in Raleigh's two runs.

Wilson shoved across three runs in the third inning and made it stand up in defeating Greensboro behind brilliant pitching. Tom Butters gave up only three hits in eight innings, and two relief hurlers didn't allow any hits in putting down a ninth-inning Greensboro threat.

Durham, trailing by 3-2, came from behind with two runs in the eighth and added two in the ninth to defeat Winston-Salem. George Schmid limited the Red Birds to five hits. The game was played under protest by Durham. Manager Frank Skaff over a ground rule decision on an overthrow error in the fourth inning.

Frick, Giles And Cronin Iron Out All-Star Details

By WHITNEY MARTIN

Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Details of the second major league All-Star baseball game this year will be worked out today when Warren Giles and Joe Cronin, presidents of the National and American leagues, respectively, meet with Commissioner Ford C. Frick. The game, to be played Aug. 3 in the Los Angeles Coliseum, was approved unanimously Monday at a meeting with Frick attended by members of the pension committee and major league player representatives.

Frick said it will be possible to play the game without interrupting the regular schedule, thanks to plane travel. Pressed as to whether the same teams would complete in both games, he said that would be disclosed after the meeting. It was assumed the teams would be the same. Frick said he already had completed negotiations for radio and television rights for the second game. The agreement, with the same sponsor, calls for $250,000, the same sum as for the first game. The regularly scheduled game will be played in Pittsburgh July 7.

The second game is scheduled for this year only, and Frick said if it is successful consideration then will be given to continuing it through 1960 and 1961.

Receipts of the second game will be split on the same basis as prevails for the first game—60 per cent to the players' pension fund and the remaining 40 per cent to the central fund of the major leagues.

The leagues will use their share for minor league support; for the Assn. of Professional Baseball Players of America, and for the promotion and maintenance of juvenile baseball programs.

Dramatic Topics For Commission

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A beating... mystery phone calls... fight cancellations... and the value of heavyweight Rubeen Vargas.

Those are the subjects for Wednesday's state athletic commission meeting in San Francisco. The cast of characters reads like a thick Russian novel, at least in numbers.

Jackie Leonard, Hollywood Legion Stadium matchmaker who testified at an earlier commission hearing, was the victim of the beating last week.

Vargas' manager, Bert Brodese, and the fighter's mother, as well as Don Chargin, an Oakland promoter currently commuting to the Hollywood for fights there, are involved in the anonymous telephone calls.

The fight cancellation concerns Larry Boardman, a lightweight who pulled out of Saturday's Legion Stadium fight.

Brodese and Ralph Gambina, an associate of singer Frank Sinatra, are the feature attraction in the Vargas contract hassle. Brodese claims he sold a chunk of Rubeen to Gambina for $10,000 but collected only $500.

pitcher and one of the players' representatives present at the meeting Monday, said the purpose to which the new pension money will go has not been determined officially.

It was the judgment of the player representatives and the pension committee members, however, that most of the new money would be used to pay for the back service obligations for old-time players' pensions and to guarantee full retirement benefits for the current ball players.

Winning Habit by Pap

Sam Snead's amazing 59 for a victory in the Bing Crosby Tournament, Snead has won so many tournaments that he doesn't remember the exact number. The record books credit him with 101, a total no other golfer can match. The list of triumphs includes every major tournament except one—the U.S. Open.

Friendly, colorful and charged with "Southern Charm," Snead is easily the greatest single gate attraction since Bobby Jones. It isn't only to watch his near-perfect golf swing that a lion's share of the gallery follows Sam. The spectators like his warmth and wit. They marvel at Ben Hogan's wizardry and concentration but there's a certain amount of tension just watching Hogan work at his game. With Sam, it's different.

The gallery is as relaxed as Snead appears to be and everyone seems to have a good time. If wishing could do it, Sam Snead would win his first U. S. Open title at Winged Foot.

VFW Losing Skein Ends Against Lions

NEW YORK (AP)—Manager Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees isn't through "settling the score" with the rest of the American League.

The grizzled pilot said today he wouldn't be happy until the Yankees wiped out the shame of losing six of their first seven Yankee Stadium games against the Western teams. He expects his players to atone for this lapse during the current Western invasion which starts with tonight's game against Kansas City. The Yanks have won nine of their last 11.

"They caught us when we were down," explained Casey. "It should be different this time. We're up now."

The defending world champions, a sorry looking lot during the first six weeks of the season, definitely are "up" now.

Although still in sixth place, they are only 3 1/2 away from the top and have lost only two more games than the first place Chicago White Sox. The Yankees' early season failure has made this the closest race in years. Only six games separate the first and last place teams. A Yankee victory tonight together with a Detroit defeat would boost the Yankees into the first division.

Taipei Stunned By Olympic Rule

TAIPEI (AP)—Taipei was stunned today by the summary rejection of its bid to be readmitted to the Olympic movement.

The Nationalists sought readmission as the "Republic of China Olympic Committee" in place of the former designation, Chinese National Olympic Committee.

But within hours of the bid, Otto Mayer, chancellor of the International Olympic Committee, said the Nationalists would only be readmitted if they dropped any reference to China in the name.

Dykes At The Helm, Detroit Is Sizzling

By ED WILKS

Associated Press Sports Writer
Okay, so the Detroit Tigers have been hot since Jimmy Dykes took over as manager a little more than five weeks ago. That you know. But how hot is hot?

Call it torrid. Call it scorching. Better yet, call it tops. For if you compute American League standings on performance since May 3, the day Dykes took charge, the Tigers would be leading the league by a whopping six games.

When Dykes relieved Bill Norman the Tigers were last, 10 1/2 games behind Cleveland. They had a 2-15 record.

Now they are only 2 1/2 games shy of first place, have a 24-10 record (.706) under Dykes, have taken command of fourth place, are over .500 for the first time this season and have won 12 of their last 15 games after winning their fourth in a row 6-3 Monday night at Boston.

It was the only game scheduled in the AL and broke a fourth place deadlock with Kansas City while moving the Tigers within a game of Cleveland's third-place Indians.

In the National League, Milwaukee regained a three-game bulge with a 9-5 afternoon victory over the Chicago Cubs while Pittsburgh defeated second-place San Francisco 12-9 in an 11-inning night game.

The Tigers, after a brief, 6-2 home stand, opened a 16-game eastern trip behind the six-hit pitching of Jim Bunning and Al Kaline's three runs batted in.

Bunning (6-4), who has picked up all of his victories in seven decisions since Dykes took over, blew a three-run lead when the last place Red Sox paired half their hits with their only walk for all their runs in the fifth inning. A two-run double by Don Buddin broke Bunning's shutout with two out, and Pete Runnel's single scored Buddin.

The Tigers, who opened a 3-0 lead on Kaline's two-run single in the top of the fifth, broke the tie in the sixth against losing reliever Bill Monbouquette (1-2) as Bunning grounded into a doubleplay. Eddie Yost singled home another run in the eighth and Kaline, who was 3-for-4, hit his 11th homer in the ninth.

It was the third victory in three decisions this season against Boston for Bunning.

Going back to the Tigers' "would-be" six-game lead in the AL, nobody has led by more than 3 1/2 this season. Cleveland twice had that big an edge, but both times held it for only one day. The Chicago White Sox now lead by a single game over Baltimore.

The New York Yankees have the next best record to the Tigers in the span of Dykes' stay in Detroit. The champs, who replaced Detroit in the cellar, have a 17-15 record, six games off the Tigers' pace under the chubby cigar smoker. The White Sox and Orioles also are six games behind with 18-16 records.

Cleveland? The Indians are 14-19, 9 1/2 games behind the Tigers' record.

Boyd went the route in picking up Guaranty's first win of the season. Boyd struck out eight and was never in serious trouble during the game as the club scored six runs in the first two innings.

Billy James, being used at almost every position, turned slugger last night as he powered two home runs—one a grand slammer—to drive in six runs.

Playing first base, Billy hit his grand slammer in the second inning and then preceded to get his second four bagger in the fourth with one man on base.

Frankie Puryear, shortstop, also connected with a grand slammer to help Guaranty break a two game losing streak. His blast came in the fifth inning to wrap up the scoring for the winners.

The league leaders, Home Builders and State Bank, meet in tonight's action. Starting time is slated for 7:30 at Guy Smith Stadium.

Young Greenville Golfer Is Strong Contender In CGA

By JOHNNY HUDSON

Junior golfers from North and South Carolina tee off today in the qualifying round of the CGA being held in Salisbury, Greenville will be boasting one of the strongest golfers in the tournament in youthful Bobby Thomas.

Thomas, 15-year-old son of Greenville pro Harold Thomas, has been too young to gain any fame in the prep circles but has given warning in the junior tournaments and several other big state tournaments that he is here to be reckoned with for years to come.

Bobby placed second in last year's qualifying round and made quite a showing before losing to the eventual winner, Don Hendricks, in the second round.

Recalls Match

The Greenville youngster still recalls the match with a vivid memory. "We were all even going into the 18th hole. I hit my second shot on the green. Don was off and finally settled for a par five. I was going to shoot for a four but missed my putt and had a par five too," notes Bobby.

Hendricks, a Lexington native, went on to win the match in "sudden death" on the 19th hole and with it the CGA championship.

Bobby prepared to leave for the tournament with plenty of confidence. "I feel that I should have a good chance if I continue to hit the ball like I am now. I am driving the ball much better this year than any other year that I have played (which have been quite a few)."

Baker Entered

"Hendricks will be back and Buddy Baker of Florence will also be entered. These two will probably be the favorites," stated Thomas. Baker is the present national junior champion.

Tournament play will be nothing new to the Greenville youth as he entered his first tourney in 1953 and his most recent one was last week when he played in the Eastern Golf Association tournament at Fayetteville.

Bobby shot a sizzling 67 in the Fayetteville tournament, five strokes better than his nearest foe. A question arose concerning the score cards and Bobby was disqualified.

The mix-up came on the 16th hole when Bobby's partner, Jerry Jarrett of Kinston, shot a five and Bob finished with a four. Officials at first heard that the score should have been reversed. It was later straightened out with Bobby's score being correct but the trophy had already been awarded to Ed Justa of Rocky Mount.

"I feel that I got a bad deal but it was just one of the breaks in the game and I'd just rather forget it," expressed the modest youth.

Shot 139

Bob had shot a 139 in the 36 hole match at Wilson last year to defeat Justa and win the Eastern Golf Tournament. It was evident that losing the title had affected him but the instance had just made him more determined to make a good showing in the Salisbury tournament.

A resident of Greenville for 14 years, Bobby swings the club from the right side although he is left-handed. "I found out that the odds were against a left-handed golfer and turned to the right."

Favorites Back In Winning Role

Carolina Dairy and Granite, two pre-season favorites in the Greenville Industrial Softball League, returned to their winning role last night after a couple of shaky performances in their last outings.

The Dairy blasted Greenville Parts and Metal, 12-5, and the Granite blanked Coffman's Men's Wear, 6-0.

Jerry Warren scattered six hits in the opener to pitch Carolina Dairy past Greenville Parts and Metal. The right-hander was given an eight-run lead in the first inning and he never lost it.

Bobby Moore and Tom Boyd had two hits each to pace the winners at the plate.

Dan Gordon allowed only three hits in the nightcap to knock off Jack Yates and his Coffman's teammates.

Tadgett collected two of the three hits off Gordon and Harding had the other safety.

Jesse Curry had three hits, including a double, and Mac Roebuck had two to pace the winners' attack.

Greenville Parts & Metal 000 140 0-5 Carolina Dairy 811 020 x-12 Odum and Weir; Warren and Dash.

Coffman's 000 000 0-0 Granite 300 003 0-6 Yates and Hopkins; Gordon and Roebuck.

RETURN PITCHER

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The San Francisco Giants returned outfielder Bob Speake to Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League today for the second time. Speake started the season with the Giants, who sent him to Phoenix in May and then recalled him.

side at an early age," says the converted southerner. Bob carries 125 pounds on his 5-11 pound frame and has developed plenty of power in his arms and can drive with most anyone in this area.

Works At Range

Summer plans call for plenty of tournaments for the Greenville ace. The younger Thomas works at the Greenville Golf Range in his spare time and it also provides him with an opportunity to improve his driving.

Bobby will be eligible to compete on the Greenville High School golf team next spring and his presence should make it a strong outfit. His sports interest also carries over into basketball and his potentials here are also good.

A closet at the Thomas home is already filled with Bobby's trophies and at his present rate, it may take a room for his winnings before his high school days are over.

Other future tournament high on Bob's list are the N.C. State Amateur in Wilson, Greensboro Junior Tournament, Carolina's Junior Tourney in Raleigh, and the National Junior Tournament in Kinston.

The four top winners in the latter tournament will advance on to Portsmouth, Virginia. Bobby finished fifth in 1957. He was medalist in the Raleigh tournament last year.

With continued interest and improvement in the game, Bobby has a big future ahead in America's fastest growing sport.

LOCAL GOLFER . . . Bobby Thomas will be shooting for the works this week in the CGA tournament which is being held in Salisbury.

DETROIT (AP) — Phyllis Ransdell is more worried about her aching feet than with any records she may have set as a participant in the National Golf Day Tournament over the weekend at Bob-O-Link Golf Club.

Mrs. Ransdell played 18 holes over the nine-hole course in a whopping 236, carding an out-going 122. Par for 18 holes is 72. After the 122, Mrs. Ransdell complained of her blistering feet.

"I read where Sam Snead likes to play barefooted, so I tried it," she said. "That was a good hunch. I cut my back nine score to 114."

Michigan PGA President Joe Before called the housewife's score the highest official tournament score he'd ever heard of in 35 years of golfing.

Mrs. Ransdell takes her golfing honors modestly.

"Actually, I have improved," she said. "I played once last year and they said I had over 200 but I think it was 200 and some."

"Me. I don't take this game seriously," she added, "but it won't be my last round. Golf is fun."

'Positive Thinking' Is For Bolt In U.S. Open

Six In Family Killed In Crash

DUNCANVILLE, Pa. (AP) —

Six members of a family were killed and another was injured Monday night when their car and two trucks collided on Route 22 near this western Pennsylvania community.

The dead were Wilmer E. Hinch, 34, of Williamsburg, Pa.; his wife, Dorothy, 34, a daughter, Sonia Jean, 12; and these sons: Robert Zane, 9; Randall Clark, 6; and William Dale, 10 months.

The only surviving member of the family, Roderick Kent, 4, was reported in satisfactory condition at a hospital.

Deputy Coroner William Crawford said a pickup truck rammed the Hinch car from behind and shoved it into the path of a truck loaded with bags of cement.

Neither the driver of the cement truck, Lester Hall of Claysburg, Pa., nor the other driver, Theodore McMasters, 35, of Duncanville R.D. 1, was injured.

State police charged McMasters with drunken driving after he was pronounced intoxicated by Dr. R. M. McNeal, a Hollidaysburg, Pa., physician.

The 1959 National League baseball season will run 171 days, four days longer than usual.

By HUGH FULLERTON Jr.

Associated Press Sports Writer

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Tommy Bolt, exuding sweetness, light and confidence, was explaining the necessity of thinking positively before he started out for his first practice round for the U.S. Open Golf championship today.

"When you think positively you don't make many mistakes," Tommy said. "You're sure what club you want to use and you're sure you can make the shot."

"If you make a mistake, you don't worry. You waste a shot getting out of the rough; you don't try to lay the next one up on the green."

A reporter suggested: "That's the way you were thinking at Tulsa last year, wasn't it Tommy?"

Bolt assented. Then came the inevitable next question: "Why don't you pick yourself to win?"

"Not me," said Bolt, mustering a wry grin. "Some people think I'm too cocky anyway without picking myself to win. Besides the odds are 20-1 against any one player."

Regardless of his opinion, Bolt is a player whose chances can't be discounted in figuring a possible winner of the 99th Open championship, starting Thursday on the 6,873-yard, par 35-35-70 west course of the Winged Foot Club.

Bolt, a golfer whose reputation was built around his fiery temper and club-throwing antics, pronounced himself a changed man before last year's championship. He is still talking about calmness and self-control.

Tommy's record since last year's victory hasn't been impressive, but he explained: "I haven't been playing too much tournament golf. I've been playing exhibitions and making a lot of appearances in stores and such places."

"But win or lose here, I'm going to play a lot from now on."

While Bolt has been comparatively inactive, a lot of his challengers have been quite busy preparing for the 1959 Open.

Ben Hogan, seeking an unparalleled fifth Open title, has practiced assiduously and has scored impressively at Winged Foot. Mike Souhak, a former assistant to Claude Harmon at this club, has fired several practice rounds in the 60s.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — E. G. Rea says he's going to quit umpiring and go back to managing Little League baseball teams.

Rea told Assistant Oklahoma County Attorney Ryland Keys Monday that he sustained a broken nose, two black eyes, chipped teeth and a cut lip Saturday after umpiring a game in which one team beat another, 11-0.

Rea said John H. Dial, manager of the losing team, started swinging after the game was over. Rea filed a formal assault charge against Dial.

A romantic suspense novel by MARTHA ALBRAND

A SPY at MONTE CARLO

Copyright, 1959, by The Curtis Publishing Company; Copyright, 1960, by Martha Albrand. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CHAPTER 18

Fleur Constant was very pale and Mark saw that she had been crying. "I don't know where women find the strength to endure waiting when the man they love is in danger," said Fleur. "Oh, Mark, is it worth while feeling so deeply?"

"Maybe it would have been better if we had never met, if you and I . . . but she didn't let him finish.

"Don't. I didn't mean it that way. It is worth while. For me, at least. I'd rather be this way than indifferent." She put her hands against his face, cupping it, and looked at him, but he could not tell what she was thinking.

Then, abruptly, she took her hands away, her expression changed, and she said, "Tell me what happened. You found the man Raffael mentioned — a smile crept into her eyes — 'Everything was all right. Was he any help?'"

Mark hesitated before he nodded. "Why didn't you tell me that you knew her, when I mentioned Corinne Javal?"

Perhaps his voice had sounded more reproachful than he had intended, for Fleur frowned sharply. "I didn't know her," she said. "What makes you think I would withhold anything from you that might be helpful?"

"But she was a friend of your brother's."

"A friend of Guy's?" No surprise registered in her face. "That is possible. I don't know many of his friends."

For a moment Mark was startled. Somehow he had assumed, from what she had told him, and from what Bransky had said, that brother and sister were very close. He had taken for granted that Constant would talk to her about anybody who interested him.

Then he realized that he was trying to think of her brother with out prejudice because he was hoping that Guy Constant was innocent.

Of course, if he was not, Constant would never mention any person, any name, connected with his other life. But Corinne had come to his boat quite openly, and the fact that he had not even casually told Fleur about her visits confirmed Mark's suspicion.

"You mustn't mind my questions," he sat down close to her. "But I know so little of you, your family, your true relationship to your brother."

Fleur smiled as if his interest touched her. "I love him," she said slowly, "in many ways. I respect him. I am deeply grateful for all he has done for me and I fight him every inch of the way."

She sighed, and again he saw the tired little line, which had touched him so in the morning, form around her mouth. "For the last five years, we have not been on really good terms. As I told you this morning, he is devoted to me, but he wants me to sacrifice my whole life to a career and I want to escape his tyranny. I am sorry for Grand-maman and all the others. But pity is a stronger tie than love when it comes to making decisions."

She looked at him and Mark knew she was trying to explain her problems, asking his understanding, but much as he would have liked to discuss them, he could not. At this moment only Guy Constant mattered.

"Don't you find it odd that he never mentioned Corinne to you? I was told he saw quite a lot of her. He taught her to drive. Do you think he was in love with her and didn't tell you, because he thought it might hurt your feelings?"

Fleur laughed. "I wonder if Guy can really love. Unegotistically, unpossessively. I don't think he even loves me. I am only an instrument to make his dreams come true. As you know, he made up his mind to save me from life in a wheel chair. He is determined that I dance and the world adore me. He would consider himself a failure if he didn't attain his goal."

Mark closed his eyes to recall once more the way Guy Constant had appeared to him that morning, a young man in a shabby red silk dressing gown, a parrot on his shoulder. The dark, fanatic eyes, the narrow, determined shape of his mouth, the bitterness in his voice.

"Would you consider him a happy person?"

Fleur shook her head. "Guy is happy only in his dreams, never in the present. The realities of the day mean nothing to him. He is driven. You see, there are people in his field who are much better known. Maybe they are better. I couldn't say. But I know he envies them. He has always felt frustrated."

"As a child he was frail. When the war broke out, he was turned down because of his health. It almost drove him out of his mind. That was when he started to take up diving. In those days there was something daring about it. Now — she shrugged — 'it has become almost a sport.'"

Out of question an answer there arose the picture of an enormously ambitious, yet deeply thwarted man, a man whose ego might cloud his judgment and drive him into any situation that permitted him to assert himself.

Unable to feel love for anything that did not further his goals, angry with a world that had let him down, had Guy Constant finally found a way of avenging himself for the real or imagined injustices of life?

Fleur's eyes were fastened on him. "What's the matter, Mark? What are you thinking? Why are you so interested in the fact that Guy knew Corinne? He knows many people but I don't think he considers any of them his friends."

"If Corinne was beautiful or amusing, he might have let her come on his boat whenever she wanted. Besides, if she was really interested in diving and flattered his vanity . . ."

"Corinne is dead," he interrupted her. "Have you forgotten what I told you? Or maybe I didn't mention how she died. The scarf around her neck caught in the wheel and strangled her."

"The way Isadora Duncan died." "Yes."

"But you said she was one of the victims of the man you have been searching for since your friend was shot—Timgad."

No Licenses, But Poetry Cleared

It was the way he said it that alerted her. She stiffened, sat very straight. "Are you trying to imply that my brother has something to do with her death, with . . . ?" Then, suddenly, overwhelmed by his silent accusation, her voice broke.

Mark knelt down in front of her. "Look at me, Fleur, dearest. don't you know how hard it is for me to have to tell you all this?"

She faced him squarely, the violet blue eyes almost black with anger. "You are out of your mind. How dare you suspect him? How dare you sound me out about him? How dare you think that Guy . . . no, don't touch me." She pulled away as he tried to take her hand.

Of course, he thought, suddenly feeling the long hours of the day dragging him down. I can't expect her to believe it.

"Unfortunately I have proof that he is involved."

"In her murder? Mark, you must be insane. Guy is no murderer. Never."

"He is connected in some way with her death."

"You don't know what you are saying."

NEW YORK (AP)—The police department says Greenwich Village poets can go on spouting their stuff in coffee houses, even though they lack poetic license.

Police had been handing out summonses to the coffee houses which dot the Village, a Bohemian section of lower Manhattan.

The police worked on the theory that the poetry was entertainment, and since the coffee houses didn't have cabaret licenses they couldn't legally offer entertainment.

Mark didn't answer and his silence, he saw, filled her with terror, as if she grasped only now what he had said.

"I saw you . . . you are a fool to come here," a voice whispered to Mark as the story speeds to a climax tomorrow.

ment. The poets, good and bad, beat and nonbeat, bearded and nonbearded, have been packing the coffee houses. The readings have been a big attraction both for tourists and Village natives.

One coffee house poet, Dick Woods, from Shreveport, La., summed up the poetic sentiment this way: "These summonses are strictly a bum rap."

Monday the police department, which usually doesn't dig poets, in effect agreed. The summonses already handed out would be prosecuted, but there would be no more, said Deputy Police Commissioner Walter Arm.

Stooping to the occasion, he phrased his statement on the "bum rap" in bum verse. "Technically an entertainer spouting poetry is an entertainer under law," he spouted.

"But though in violation, to the cops he's just a bore. (To some New Yorkers, believe it or not, this rhymes.)"

"He can talk throughout the night if he doesn't incite to riot." "We hope he keeps on talking 'til his audience yells for quiet."

To some of the more sensitive poets, such versifying is worse than a summons. To most, though, co-existence was the answer all along.

Sure, man, why not offer that deputy commissioner a chance to air his verse at some coffee house?

Thomas Jefferson, third president of the United States, was greatly interested in music. He asked a friend to find him a gardener and a stonemason who could both work at their jobs and play music.

Charlotte Hires City Manager And New Chief

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Charlotte City Council hired a new city manager and a new police chief Monday.

The new city manager is William J. Veeder, 35, who has been city manager at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., since November of 1955. He succeeds Henry A. Yancey, who retired May 1.

The new police chief is Jesse R. James, 38, who has been chief at Burlington, N.C. He is to receive $11,000 a year.

Veeder is to receive $17,500 a year. Veeder was elected by a unanimous vote of the seven councilmen.

James was elected by a 4-3 vote. He was the selection of the four new councilmen.

He succeeds Capt. Ernest Selvey, who was reappointed acting chief and later chief when Frank N. Littlejohn retired last year.

Air Force Tests Its 'Bold Orion'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Air Force gave another test version of its highly secret Bold Orion air-to-ground missile Monday.

A B47 jet bomber swept over the Cape and blasted the rocket at a target several hundred miles in the Atlantic.

The Air Force prefers to keep test flights of this ballistic missile secret. No report was issued. An informed source, however, reported the test was another success.

The missile is capable of being launched effectively from a bomber. Such a missile could extend the life of the B47 and B52 strategic bombers. The planes could fire the missile from beyond the range of enemy radar.

Comedian Finds Work In The Dramatic Field

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Alan Young was told recently by the American embassy in London that he would lose his American citizenship if he stayed any longer in England.

The comedian, who had been working in his native land for most of three years, explained: "I'm here because there isn't any comedy on television in the states. If I went back there, I'd be out of work and collecting unemployment insurance. Think of the money I'm saving the government!"

The officials weren't impressed with his argument, and so he's back in his adopted country (actually he is still considered a British subject by England and so has dual citizenship).

It is perhaps a commentary on the state of comedy that Young has returned not to play it for laughs. He's appearing in a dramatic version of H. G. Wells' "The Time Machine." It's an actor's dream of a role, since he gets to play his real age, himself as a 70-year-old and his own son. This is the same fellow who did some wonderfully comic things in pictures like "Margie" and "Chicken Every Sunday" and was one of the early hits in television. Yet he had to return to England to work as a laugh-getter. He did many TV shows there, as well as the movie "Tom Thumb."

Young was a victim in America of TV's voracious appetite for performers, especially comics. And he's not alone. Look at the other casualties: Milton Berle, Sid Caesar, Jackie Gleason, Red Buttons. "And the situation doesn't seem to be getting any better," Young observed. "Both Gleason and Berle have gone off the air this season, and even more westerns will be on next year."

This is the same fellow who did some wonderfully comic things in pictures like "Margie" and "Chicken Every Sunday" and was one of the early hits in television. Yet he had to return to England to work as a laugh-getter. He did many TV shows there, as well as the movie "Tom Thumb."

Young was a victim in America of TV's voracious appetite for performers, especially comics. And he's not alone. Look at the other casualties: Milton Berle, Sid Caesar, Jackie Gleason, Red Buttons. "And the situation doesn't seem to be getting any better," Young observed. "Both Gleason and Berle have gone off the air this season, and even more westerns will be on next year."

Probe Crash Of Makeshift Bus

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—More than a half-dozen agencies and organizations today continued their investigations into a fiery crash of a makeshift bus in which 16 Mexican farm workers were killed.

Three of the 32 laborers injured in Monday's accident remained in critical condition.

The victims were cremated when the heavily loaded vehicle smashed into a tree and exploded in flames. Most were asleep on the floor or trapped near the front of the bus—a converted truck with canvas sides and top, and no windows.

The driver, Natividad Manuel Gloria Jr., 20, told the highway patrol he dozed at the wheel. He was booked for investigation of manslaughter.

CHEVALIER RECOVERS

VIENNA (AP)—With veteran actor Maurice Chevalier recovered from his chest cold, filming started here today of the movie "Bimbo," which also stars Sophia Loren. Chevalier, 70, had been confined to his hotel last week but was up and about over the weekend.

Break For Savers Is Long Time Coming

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—President Eisenhower proposed today to give the savers a break. It has been a long time coming.

Those who buy U. S. savings bonds—whether at their bank or through payroll deductions—may see their returns from new purchases go up by one half per cent to 3 1/2 per cent.

And there's sweetening proposed for those who are holding bonds—despite the jeers of their neighbors who have been piling up profits—at least paper ones—in the stock market.

Outstanding savings bonds, even those that have matured, may be raised.

Should you cash your old bonds to buy new ones?

Better look carefully before you do. When and if the Congress agrees to the President's proposal, the Treasury is likely to increase the yield by shortening the maturity time of the new bonds.

Present E bonds yield 3 1/2 per cent if held to maturity—8 years and 11 months. In the early years after purchase the bonds yield much less if redeemed.

To increase the yield at maturity to 3 1/2 per cent the Treasury is likely to shorten the period of maturity (you'll still pay $75 for a $100 bond).

But, as in the case of the present bonds, the 3 1/2 per cent yield won't be paid if the bonds are redeemed in the early years after purchase.

Before redeeming your present bonds you should look carefully at the maturity tables to see how much you'll get for them and how long you'll have to hold the new bonds before they yield you as much as your present ones now do.

There also is a tax angle—especially those who are holding bonds that they expect to redeem only after they retire.

Those who haven't been prattling the interest on the bonds each year, but are waiting to pay income tax on the interest in one lump after they finally redeem them, may do well to wait until they retire. Their annual income will be lower then and the interest won't land them in an expensively higher bracket.

The Congress may or may not agree with the President on raising bond interest rates. But raising rates on savings bonds will be more popular than some other of the President's proposals.

Why does the Treasury want to pay higher interest rates on your savings bonds?

First, at present rates more bonds have been turned in for redemption than new bonds have been sold.

Those who redeemed them were lured by higher returns from other investments.

That's a drain on the Treasury—at a time when it's been running a deficit—that it can't afford.

Second, sale of savings bonds is almost free of the taint of inflation. They can't be sold, as many other government securities can—only redeemed. Thus they take money out of circulation as long as they are held.

Some other government securities—mainly the shortest term ones—are regarded in financial circles as "the next thing to cash." Their practical effect on the volume of money and credit is called by many financial experts as almost the same as if the Treasury had merely turned out the printing presses.

The nation's money managers are trying hard to hold down excess expansion of money and credit at a time when business recovery seems set to turn into boom. The more savings bonds you buy the better the treasury should like it.

Star Farmer Awards will go to the farmers who are tops in production of ten different crops in Pitt County during 1960 under a program approved by the Chamber of Commerce board of directors last night.

Both the name of the awards and details of the program received tentative approval from the board.

Definite plans for making the awards are to be developed by the Chamber in cooperation with the agricultural agencies before the end of the present year.

The crops for which the award would be given are: corn, tobacco, cotton, peanuts, sweet potatoes, swine, beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep and poultry. Included in the poultry division would be commercial egg producers, broiler hatching eggs and broilers.

Those who would be eligible to participate in the awards program include farm owners or farm managers and tenants operating on two-thirds or cash basis.

The awards would be presented following the harvesting season in 1960.

The Chamber's board approved the plan upon recommendation of the Agriculture Committee.

Board members also approved for 1959 devoting a major part of the Chamber's advertising funds to industrial promotion. Included would be industrial advertising, compiling and publication of economic surveys and preparation of brochures to be made available to industrial prospects.

The recommendation was made by the Executive Committee after studying expenditures from the advertising fund for 1958.

Industrial Committee Chairman W. W. Speight reported that several new prospects have indicated an interest in Greenville as a plant site since the May board meeting.

In addition, two major prospects reported earlier are still interested in locating here he said. Speight told the board the Committee of 100 organization had been completed and application has been made for a state charter.

Chamber board members also decided to study a request from the U. S. Army Engineers concerning the Chamber's feelings about minimum fixed bridge heights along the inland waterway.

Presently the minimum height is set at 80 feet. The State Highway Department has requested that the minimum height for fixed bridges be set at 55 feet.

Waldo Lynch, was in the passenger compartment. Because of the tremendous speed and angle of dive he had to fight his way back to the cockpit.

He and the copilot, Capt. S. T. Peters, leveled the plane with difficulty a mile in distance but only a few seconds in time from almost certain death in the ocean.

Lynch, a Pan-Am vice president for communications, and Peters, chief pilot of the Pacific-Alaska division, were among supervisory personnel flying jets during a jet boycott by union pilots in a wage dispute.

The copilot, who was at the controls when the plane suddenly dived from 35,000 feet, was notified of the government plans to suspend his captain's rating for six months. The reason for the suspension apparently was his failure to stop the dive immediately.

The jet, with 114 passengers, was flying from London to Gander, Nfld., Feb. 3, when it suddenly nosed down. The pilot, Capt. W.

Pan American World Airways, the owner of the plane, was also fined $1,000 for failing to keep a flight-recording device in operation on the new 707 Boeing jet.

Agreement Will End Long Goodrich Strike

CANTON, Ohio (AP)—The United Rubber Workers and the B. F. Goodrich Co. today reached agreement to end a 55-day-old strike of 14,000 Goodrich workers in eight cities.

The agreement, subject to ratification by local unions, followed an all-night negotiating session here.

In Akron, the union said the Goodrich workers will begin returning to their jobs immediately instead of delaying until after ratification voting, which usually requires at least a week.

Details of the new two-year master contract and five-year pension and insurance agreement between the union and Goodrich were not immediately available.

The agreement is expected to hasten an end to the URW strike against Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. The Firestone strike of
