

Soviet Sets Up New Deadline On Berlin -- If West Accepts Terms

GENEVA (AP)—The Soviet Union has proposed to the Western powers a one-year moratorium in the Berlin crisis—provided the West agrees to begin working out a German settlement on Soviet terms.

A U.S. spokesman said the proposal—which would put the West under a new deadline—was "totally unacceptable" and must have been introduced by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko "in order to bring about the breakdown" of the Big Four conference.

Andrew H. Berding, assistant secretary of state, making public the Soviet proposal which was advanced at a secret session Tuesday, reported the Western reaction today at a news conference. Berding said that "obviously there is no point in going on with the conference on the basis of these proposals."

Gromyko, after his move at the secret session at the residence of U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter Tuesday, got agreement to a formal Big Four session today. He served notice he would present the proposal there—meaning he would make it public.

Herter and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, asked for a written statement of the plan. Gromyko refused to provide it.

Berding said the proposal "reintroduces a time limit, one year, into the Berlin situation and also reintroduces the element of threat."

The Soviets originally had proposed on last Nov. 27, a six-month time limit which the West called an ultimatum.

Berding said the proposal as presented by Gromyko covered these general lines:

"The Soviet Union would accept the temporary maintenance of certain Western occupation rights in West Berlin for a one-year period. "During this period an all-German committee of the (Communist) German Democratic Republic and the (West) German Federal Republic on a parity basis should work out the problem of reunification, agree on the principles of a peace treaty and facilitate the development and broadening of contacts, between the GDR and GFR."

Gromyko, Berding said, declared the one-year time limit was necessary to prevent the West German government from delaying indefinitely the successful completion of a peace treaty. Continuing his report on the Gromyko statement, Berding said:

"The Soviet Union would agree to a one-year recognition of certain occupation rights in West Berlin on the basis of the following conditions:

"1. The Western powers reduce the level of forces and armaments to a symbolic number.

"2. Hostile propaganda against the GDR and other Socialist (Communist) countries from the territory of West Berlin is to be stopped."

"3. All organizations in West Berlin engaged in espionage and hostile activities against the German Democratic Republic and other Socialist countries to be liquidated.

"4. The Western powers to assume the obligation not to station atomic or rocket installations in West Berlin.

"If these conditions are accepted, the U.S.S.R. is ready to maintain communications between West Berlin and the outside world as now existing.

Berlin would be guaranteed first by the four powers on the basis of a protocol of guarantee submitted by the government of the GDR (East Germany) which has expressed in principle its willingness to respect the agreed provisional status of West Berlin.

"The Soviet Union is willing to make access commitments either in a general agreement concerning the provisional status of West Berlin or in a separate document as the Western powers desire. These documents would be registered with the United Nations.

"If an understanding is reached to make West Berlin a free, demilitarized city in conformity with the Soviet proposals, access commitments would be maintained until the reunification of Germany."

"Finally, there should be the four-power supervisory commission to watch out for violations of the agreements and to take appropriate measures to insure the fulfillment of the agreements without, however, touching the sovereign rights of the German Democratic Republic."

Gromyko told the Western ministers that if they did not agree to his proposition the Soviet Union would not give its consent to continuing the present regime in West Berlin.

Also, Berding reported, Gromyko said that if the Western powers or West Germany hampered the achievement of a peace treaty within the time limit, the Soviet Union and other countries "would be compelled" to sign a peace treaty with East Germany.

Teacher Pay Amendment Knocked Out Of Budget By Threat Of Tax

Revenue Bill Is Up For Consideration

RALEIGH (AP)—The House today postponed consideration of court reform and a revised state constitution and began debate of the biennial revenue bill.

The major feature of the revenue measure is a provision calling for collecting the state's income taxes from individuals using the withholding play or pay-as-you-go system.

House consideration began with Rep. Clifton Blue of Moore, chairman of the House Finance Committee, explaining the bill and the withholding plan which is counted on to swell the state treasury by 27½ million dollars through its "windfall" feature—resulting from the collecting of two years taxes in a single year.

A major issue which is expected to confront the House in consideration of the measure is whether the pay-as-you-go feature is to be applied to collection of corporate income taxes. The Hodges administration is opposed to this. However, Rep. Thomas Turner of Guilford has stated that he plans to offer an amendment to place corporation income tax collections on a pay-as-you-go basis.

House consideration of the twin issues of constitutional revision and court reforms was postponed until Thursday.

The Senate has a slightly different version of the revenue bill on its calendar. The House measure contains tax reductions which reduce state revenue by about $700,000 while the Senate bill does not include the tax reductions.

Tornado Leaves 75 Homeless

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — A tornado storm generating winds up to 115 miles an hour ripped through Fargo Tuesday, leaving about 75 homeless and causing property damage running into thousands of dollars.

No casualties were reported in Fargo, scene of a devastating tornado that killed 11 persons and injured many others two years ago almost to the day.

At least one person died in weather violence that swept eastern North Dakota and western Minnesota. An 18-year-old girl, Belicia Alonso of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, was killed by lightning while she was working in a sugar beet field east of Ardorch in western North Dakota.

A twister reportedly hit the Clearwater County fairgrounds in Bagley, Minn., some 100 miles east of Fargo. Ten buildings were reported destroyed or damaged. The storm disrupted telephone service, temporarily cutting off the community from outside contact.

Striking from a 10-mile-high mass of black clouds, a tornado funnel touched down on the north-east edge of Hector Airport on Fargo's outskirts.

The greyish-white twister whirled along the ground for a half mile through an uninhabited section and then lifted.

It was followed by powerful gusts accompanied by rain and window-smashing hailstones an inch in diameter. About 25 were left homeless when some 25 trailers in a lot west of Fargo were bowled over. The downpour flooded basements. Cars were marooned in water backed up from storm sewers.

France Drawing Away From Chief NATO Partners

PARIS (AP) — France appears to be drawing steadily away from her chief partners in the Atlantic Alliance as President Charles de Gaulle puts on pressure to win his country an equal role with Britain and the United States.

Western diplomats are openly concerned over how far the stubborn French president will go. De Gaulle has set a course aimed at restoring France to her lost international prestige and power. His strategy appears to be to cold shoulder various NATO projects until the United States and Britain openly recognize the "grandeur of France" which De Gaulle proclaims with religious fervor.

De Gaulle is asking to be accepted as a bargaining equal to President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. His demand is viewed as somewhat unrealistic since France has no atomic bomb, only two under-strength divisions now under NATO and is threatened with internal dissension over Algeria.

De Gaulle wants the formula on how to put together an A-bomb. He can't get it from the United States. Congress forbids that. Britain shows no inclination to give it to him.

The French president wants to work out with Eisenhower and Macmillan a global policy including the Middle East, Asia and Africa. But both the United States and Britain have misgivings about France's refusal to promise Algeria independence. The United States doesn't want its Far East policy decided in Paris. Britain is jealous of her role as senior partner.

Plans to name a treasurer for the council were announced last week by Rose. The new officer will be chosen by members of the council which is composed of mayors of Pitt County towns and other Civil Defense officers.

Record Job Total For May

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employment rose by a million in May to a record 66,016,000 for the month. Unemployment fell by 238,000 to 3,399,000.

Announcing the figures today, Secretary of Commerce Lewis L. Strauss and Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said they reflected further substantial improvement in the nation's job picture.

An unusually large pickup in factory employment accompanied a May seasonal rise in farm work. The May total of 66,016,000 employed the largest number of Americans with jobs for any month of May. It compares with an all-time peak of 67,221,000 set in July, 1957.

The new figures represent a drop of about 1½ million among the unemployed in the past year. However, the idle total is about 700,000 higher than it was in May, 1957.

The ratio of unemployment to the labor force declined in May to 4.9 per cent compared with 5.3 per cent during last winter. This is the first time the idle ratio has dropped below 5 per cent since November, 1957.

Factory worker earnings averaged $90.32 in May—representing the first time in history the average passed the $90 mark. Earnings among durable goods workers averaged $98. Among soft goods workers it was $80.

The average work week in manufacturing continued to rise, reaching 40½ hours in May—the longest work week for May since 1955. Overtime in manufacturing averaged 2.7 hours a week.

While the May gain in employment was largely seasonal, Seymour Wolfbein, deputy assistant secretary of labor, said it was accompanied by a very encouraging gain of 100,000 in factory employment which usually tends to decline in May.

Wolfbein said the 238,000 drop in unemployment demonstrated economic improvement because the idle total normally does not change significantly in May.

The group is headed by Dr. Athos Valsecchi, president of the monopoly and Undersecretary of Finance for Italy, and Dr. Pietro Cova, director-general of the monopoly. Other members of the party are Mr. deLuise, head of the Italian purchasing mission in the United States, and Mr. Bettini and Mr. Giovannella, members of the purchasing mission.

Mrs. Valsecchi is accompanying the group on its tour, which is in conjunction with the American tobacco industry's market development program in Europe.

Usual Order Of Things Reversed

A five-year-old boy leaving a Vacation Bible School this morning reversed the usual pedestrian-automobile accident story when he ran into a car stopped on Washington Street in front of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Greenville police who investigated the boy-car collision said little Jeff Skinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luby C. Skinner of 310 Meade St., dashed between two parked cars and into the side of another car which was stopped in the street.

The child suffered minor bruises on the forehead and right knee, police reported.

The police report of the accident listed the driver of the stopped vehicle with which little Jeff collided as William George Craft, 70, of 131 N. Library Street.

Police said no charges were brought in connection with the accident.

Grants Stay To Starkweather

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Charles Evans Whittaker of the Supreme Court today granted a stay of execution to Charles Starkweather, 29-year-old mass killer from Nebraska.

Starkweather had been scheduled to die in the Nebraska electric chair on Friday morning. Whittaker said that counsel for Starkweather would have until June 17 to file a petition with the full Supreme Court, asking a review of his case.

If a petition is filed, the stay will remain in effect until the full court acts finally on it.

While in Greenville, the six Italians were guests of honor at a dinner party last night at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. About 65 representatives of tobacco companies in North Carolina and Virginia attended the dinner.

The group left Greenville this morning for Raleigh and will travel to Lexington, Ky., and San Francisco before returning to New York to return to Italy. Dr. and Mrs. Valsecchi and Dr. Cova arrived in the United States Saturday and joined members of the purchasing mission who have been in this country for several weeks.

Prior to coming to Greenville last yesterday, the group visited Richmond, Va., where they inspected tobacco production facilities, and Newport News, Va., where they inspected storage and shipping facilities.

Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association was host at the dinner party last night and is also one of three major tobacco groups sponsoring the Italians' visit. Other sponsors are Tobacco Associates and the Burley Tobacco Association.

James C. Lanier, Jr., of Greenville accompanied the visitors on their trip from Richmond to Newport News and Greenville.

Reports 51 New Jobless Claims

Fifty-one new unemployment compensation claims were filed the first week in June, according to W. B. Dillingham, of the Employment Security Commission office here.

Dillingham also said there were 714 continued claims. Continued claims are claims for unemployment compensation which have been paid for one or more preceding weeks.

The claims are an increase over the first week in May when there were 33 new claims filed and 692 continued. The figures were also an increase over the first week in June last year when 50 new claims were made and there were 625 continued claims.

It is believed the increase in the number of both new and continued claims is due to a lay-off at a local mill.

Dillingham said the local Commission office has had more calls for out-of-state tobacco hands this year and two orders have been sent for a total of 156 farm laborers from Alabama and Mississippi. The laborers, to be employed by the farmers who have ordered them are scheduled to arrive here about July 1.

Regional Airport Bill Crippled In Its Final Form

RALEIGH — Sen. David Ross of Wayne made a strong plea for utilization of military installations of civil air traffic rather than spend millions developing less adequate facilities, and then exemplified Wayne county from the bill. Edgemont, Nash and Beaufort also asked to be included out.

The Senate then passed by a roll call vote of 43-0 the bill by Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Pitt creating an East Carolina Airport Authority for Greene, Lenoir, Pitt, Wilson, Martin and Washington counties. The Kinston Free Press had said a few days ago that Lenoir wanted no part of the deal, and voiced some resentment that Sen. Humber should have purported to speak for Lenoir.

In his brief speech Sen. Ross pointed out that although there are hundreds of millions of dollars in airport facilities at military bases, not a single one in North Carolina is used for commercial air service. He noted that some 50 bases in 44 states were so used. He felt the people of the central eastern part of the state should make arrangements for use of facilities at Seymour Johnson before going broke trying to provide less adequate service at little ports no more centrally located.

Two previous attempts to get a regional airport in the area failed, largely because of jealousy about its location.

Guild Hears Guest Speaker

Mrs. Sally Klingenschmidt spoke to the Wesleyan Service Guild of Jarvis Memorial Church in the Church Parlor Monday evening. Her topic was "The New Ambassador for Christ — The Tourist."

She told of what several tourists—a journalist, a mother, and a student, said about the opportunities for representing one's country and Christ in foreign countries. Another mother who had not traveled, according to Mrs. Klingenschmidt, told of a stranger from another country who visited in her home. Later he wrote telling of the inspiration he received from that visit in a Christian home. "Christ can mission all his followers to witness for him," said Mrs. Briley, as travelers in this country and abroad, all Christians can bear witness."

The Devotion was given by Mrs. V. P. Scovall.

After a short business meeting the hostesses, Mrs. F. A. Jordan and Miss Frances Wahl, served punch and cookies.

Duplin Woman Recalls Past HD Activities

By MAIDRED MORRIS
Mrs. Alberta Ward, member of the Rockfish Club in Duplin County, says, "We Home Demonstration Club women were considered the most intelligent women in the county."

News of Home Demonstration work reached Duplin County in 1914 through news articles in The Progressive Farmer magazine written by a Mrs. H. H. Ward and Mrs. Ethel Register, neighbors, were among the first to become interested.

Mrs. H. H. Ward visited Duplin County and tried to interest the people in organizing a Home Demonstration Club. Mrs. Ward and Mrs. Register had a quilting party at Mrs. Register's home. Ten women were present. Following the quilting session, the Rockfish Club was organized. Children were carried to the meetings and later two of the girls became county home demonstration agents.

Duplin had no home agent so literature was ordered from Raleigh and Washington on better canning methods, poultry raising and nutrition.

One of the outstanding group projects was a free clinic to vaccinate members of the community for prevention of typhoid fever. Mrs. Ward made speeches on the prevention of typhoid before various county groups. Each woman studied facts concerning various diseases and later reported her findings before the club. Mrs. Ward studied smallpox and vaccinated sixty-three people in the community.

Mrs. Ward was raised in Kenansville but later moved to Rockfish community to teach school. There she met the man who after seven years became her husband. The late Mr. Ward cooperated with his wife in supporting her various club activities.

In 1917, the County Board of Commissioners ordered that $250 be appropriated for canning demonstrations in Duplin.

Miss Lucy Cobb of Chapel Hill was the first Duplin home agent and taught club members how to can in tin cans, how to make large fly traps, and other similar things.

For several years there was no agent in the county but good officers with strong determination directed the work. From the Rockfish Club, thirty-three clubs are now active in Duplin County.

In 1923, the home agent gave instructions on how to make hats using braids and how to prepare nutritious school lunches and other food economically. An educational trip was made by the club women in 1928 to Washington, D. C. via the Shenandoah Valley.

During the preceding years members of the Rockfish Club attended Farm Home Week where one member entered the State Dress Revue and received statewide recognition.

Although Mrs. Ward is an inactive member now due to her health, her eyes still sparkle and her voice is filled with enthusiasm as she speaks of the accomplishments in Home Demonstration work. At 81, Mrs. Alberta Ward is a symbol of Home Demonstration Club work in North Carolina and is known throughout Duplin County as a woman who has helped everyone. Mrs. Ward says, "I am the luckiest woman in the world to have been a member of the Home Demonstration Club."

THE BRIDE COOKS BREAKFAST

Here's how to poach four eggs perfectly!

Grapefruit Halves
Poached Eggs on Toast
Beverage

POACHED EGGS ON TOAST
Ingredients: 4 eggs, butter, 4 slices toast.

Method: Butter well the bottom of a 10-inch deep skillet that has a dome-type cover. Butter the insides of 4 poached-egg rings. Place the rings in the skillet; pour in boiling water to the height of the rings. Bring water to a boil rapidly; lower heat so water simmers. Break an egg into a demitasse cup or some other container that is short and narrow; holding cup close to ring, drop egg into it; quickly drop remaining three eggs into the other three rings the same way. Cover skillet; allow to stand over very low heat (making sure water does not bubble above surface) for 3 to 4 minutes or until whites are set and yolks are as firm as desired. Remove rings with tongs; remove eggs one at a time, with perforated kitchen spoon, draining off water. Place each egg on a slice of buttered toast.

Never use hot water for washing dishes that have contained milk, eggs, doughs or cheese mixtures. Instead use cold water and you will get the job done quicker.

Arrangements of red roses, white Shasta daisies and white hydrangeas gave a decorative scheme in the den.

Mrs. John Clark Sr. invited the guests into the dining room where the central table held branched candelabra with epergnes filled with gardenias, feverfew, gypsophelia and satin streamers. Lighted tapers were placed on the buffet and an arrangement of white snapdragons, feverfew and gladioli.

Mrs. Charles Bissette bid the guests goodbye.

Remember Your Freezer At Vacation Time

RALEIGH — When you leave for vacation remember your freezer.

Do not forget the freezer and pull the master switch! If you do, you will find a freezer full of spoiled food when you get back home.

Give your key to a neighbor. Ask him to check the food in your freezer every couple of days. Remind him to close the freezer door firmly. Give him the name and telephone number of the service man.

Before you go on vacation prepare and freeze food for your first meal after you get back. That will make your vacation seem to last longer. It will give you a chance to unpack and get ready for work again.

BELK-TYLER'S

Local Affairs Remain Paramount

Gigantic struggles in the state legislature over money problems and the budget for the next two years has in recent weeks far overshadowed the matter of local government budgets for the new fiscal year which will begin July 1.

In most cases county and municipal officials already have begun work on their respective budgets for the new fiscal year. While most of them may not be completed for another month, important decisions on money matters will have to be made by local government officials before that time.

It would be amiss for residents of this or other counties to give all their attention to the money struggles which are going on in Raleigh and pay no attention to what is being proposed for solving the financial problems on levels of government here at home.

What is done in the legislative halls in Raleigh about appropriations and taxes directly affects every resident of North Carolina. By the same token, what is done toward formulating the budgets of the county and municipalities directly affects citizens who live in the jurisdiction of those governments.

So far as local governments are concerned, there are needs which must be met if progress is to continue, just as is the case with the state government. And where local governments are concerned, there is the matter of tax revenues to meet the increasing demands of citizens for services and the increasing cost of providing these services.

As local officials move into high gear in their budget considerations they should be sure that appropriations approved for the coming year are essential to the welfare and progress of the area they serve. They should make sure that tax dollars which they propose to spend during the next 12 months are to be spent wisely. At the same time, they must see that needs of the communities which they serve are adequately met.

Insofar as possible they must see that local tax burdens on the individual taxpayer — already swamped with local, state and federal taxes—is not increased.

Just as the state's budget for the next biennium is of paramount importance to the state, local government budgets for the next fiscal year are of paramount importance to citizens of the respective local governments.

Migrant Workers Need An Extra Safeguard

The next few months will bring the peak of the season when migrant farm laborers will be moving through North Carolina as crops are ready for harvest.

Unless the pattern of past years is broken, these workers will move from one section to another in groups of up to 30 or more. Most of them will be transported in make-shift buses, often overloaded and mechanically unsafe.

The accident of such a vehicle in Arizona this week which took 16 lives and injured 32 other farm workers brought back memories of a similar highway tragedy near Fayetteville not too long ago.

How many more times will the scene of shattered bodies scattered about the highways be repeated this year? How many such accidents will there be in North Carolina before the harvest season ends?

The State Highway Patrol should make special efforts during the next few months to seek out and inspect vehicles being used to transport these migrant farm workers through North Carolina. They should make sure that vehicles used for such purposes are mechanically safe, and also that they are not overloaded with human cargo.

North Carolina can ill afford another highway tragedy involving farm workers like the one which took place near Fayetteville. Certainly it does not want such a thing as happened near Phoenix a few days ago to be repeated in this state.

Adequate preventive measures taken by Highway Patrolmen during these months when migrant farm workers are moving about North Carolina can go a long way toward preventing such accidents.

How A General May Be Hired

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — How does a general get a job with a big corporation selling millions of dollars worth of military equipment to the government? It could happen in a lot of ways. It could — and did — happen this way: On the day a general retires he gets a cryptic telephone call from an old friend, telling him to call a man at a certain number in California.

He does. It turns out well. He becomes president of a company making bombers and gets a salary of $75,000 a year, plus a $25,000 bonus.

A congressional subcommittee will soon start looking into the question of how high-ranking military men, after retirement, get big-paying jobs with big companies dealing with the government.

The subcommittee — headed by Rep. F. Edward Hebert (D-La.) — will also root around among the military equipment makers to check on how they compete to get Uncle Sam to buy their stuff.

But this kind of investigation doesn't have unanimous approval in Congress. For instance, Sen. Landon B. Johnson of Texas, leader of the Senate Democrats, doesn't think a munitions lobby as such exists or needs investigating.

Neither does Sen. Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrat and former secretary of the Air Force in the Truman administration. Symington himself was once a big help to a retiring general through a simple telephone call.

Hebert's group learned about this three years ago when it was examining the aircraft industry. His subcommittee now would like to know how some other generals and admirals got their jobs and what they do to earn their pay.

In its 1956 inquiry Hebert's group called — among top men in the aircraft industry — J. T. McNamara, former Air Force general who retired in 1952, and quickly became president of the Convair Corporation. This firm made the B-36 bombers for the government and McNamara testified that in the late 1940s, when the value of this particular plane was in dispute, he backed development of the B-36.

Hebert asked him how he got his job with Convair and McNamara told this story: "On the morning of my retirement (Jan. 31, 1952) I did receive a cryptic telephone call and the question asked of me was: 'Have you signed up with anybody to go to work? I said 'I have not.'"

McNamara said he told the caller he was going to San Diego to live — because he had married a San Diego girl — and the voice on the phone said: "Well, when you get to San Diego, would you call this number?"

McNamara indicated that from the telephone exchange the caller gave him — it was in Indio, Calif. — that he guessed the one who answered that phone would be Floyd B. Odium, chairman of the Convair board of directors.

When he got to San Diego, McNamara said, he called the number. And it was Odium. The financial officer of the retired general offered the retired general the presidency of Convair.

For five years as president, he would receive $75,000 a year, plus a $25,000 bonus yearly. For the following 10 years — while he served as a consultant — he would receive $30,000 a year.

Hebert asked McNamara who made the cryptic call, urging him to get in touch with Odium. The general said it was Symington, with whom he had worked at the Pentagon when Symington was secretary of air. At the time of the call Symington was no longer secretary and had not yet been elected senator.

McNamara said there was no connection between his championship of the B-36 — while he was still in service — and the fact that the company later hired him as president.

He said he had never been approached — while still in service — about a job with Convair.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
GET NEXT TO THE MAN IN NEED

In the Epistle to the Hebrews we find the statement that it behooved Christ to be made like unto his brethren, "that he might become a merciful and faithful high priest in the things pertaining to God."

In the last analysis, it takes a human being to help a human being. There are a few divine revelations on mountain tops recorded in the Bible, but the greatest revelations came to men through other men. Even the Word, the creative power and message of God, had to become flesh at last and dwell among men. This happened when Christ took on flesh and entered the stream of history.

If you want to help somebody, get down and walk with him along the pathway of life. Try to get your line of vision as close to his as possible. Learn his language, and then listen to him when he talks. There are millions of books full of ten-dollar words, but the guy in trouble doesn't need a book. He needs a friend — he needs even more than a friend; he needs an understanding friend. Not one who will preach to him, or even one who will give him a hundred dollars or agree to lend him a thousand without interest. He needs someone made "like unto his brethren" and who because he is so made, becomes a merciful and faithful high priest in the things pertaining to God — and pertaining to the tribulation, pain, and problems of the world.

It's Still A Good Plane

About a month ago, one of these columns included a few comments about Piedmont Airlines' new P-27 turbo-prop aircraft.

Among those comments were references to the quiet, smooth, comfortable rides a person can get on the twin-engine planes. I felt, at the time, that all of the comments were honest and well-deserved.

Less than a week ago, however, My Fair Gwen was on the verge of making me eat each of the words that had been written. She was, in a manner of speaking, not nearly so enthusiastic about the P-27 as I.

Actually, I suppose she had good reason to feel as she did. On her first trip via commercial aircraft, the last leg was from Raleigh to Kingston, late at night. She and I (she had permitted me to accompany her on the trip) had gone through a busy day and she was anxious to get home to rescue the grandparents of Wee Urchin and The Twinkles.

The flight schedule we had made necessary what seemed to be an eternity of waiting at Raleigh-Durham Airport, but the waiting period stretched even longer when flight time came and went without a sign of the airplane which was to take us to Kingston.

Finally, 36 minutes late, the plane came in from Greensboro-High Point Airport. There were no official comments about the cause of the delay, but the speculations at Raleigh-Durham speculated that some sort of mechanical difficulties had cropped up.

Anyway, when the flight was called, we all but ran across the ramp to get on the plane. My Fair Gwen hustled into her seat, graciously offering me the seat beside the window, and buckled her safety belt.

We could have saved the fast stepping we did across the ramp and the hurry to get ourselves belted in properly. We sat and sat and sat in the airplane without anything happening.

During the sitting period, the plane's flight attendant (who was, incidentally, Bill Briley of Greenville) asked everyone to leave the plane and return to the terminal. He added something about experiencing mechanical difficulties, which would be cleared up "as soon as possible."

We didn't know it at the time, but the "as soon as possible" was two hours later when another P-27 was flown in from Winston-Salem to finish the scheduled flight pattern to Kingston, New Bern, Morehead City and Wilmington.

The second plane was flown in because one of the engines on the regular aircraft couldn't be started after ground crewmen at Raleigh-Durham completed refueling operations.

The incident, of course, was one of those which probably won't happen again. And I still think the P-27 is a good plane.

Tokyo Play Notes

By NATE POLOWETZKY
TOKYO (AP) — "A joy party began."

That's what the English language synopsis of a play said — although up on stage he actors, in their gorgeous costumes, sat around showing as much agitation as a totem pole.

But the synopsis said it was a joy party, and the synopsis has become the foreigner's guide through the intricacies of the Japanese theater.

Sometimes the synopsis explains. Sometimes sheer poetry is the result, without much elucidation.

Take the play "The Mother of Shosno Shigemoto."

It's about 78-year-old Kunitune and his wife, Kitano-kata who "was about 20 years old and was so famous with her extreme beauty."

During the "joy party" Kunitune becomes so drunk he gives Kitano-kata away to Shihel "top man of the Fujiwara."

Says the synopsis "he was for a long time considered to make his wife free for the sake of her own happiness because he was too old for her. But now, after she was gone with someone else, he stood in desperate loneliness."

But not Shihel, who according to the synopsis, "was so much pleased with Kitano-kata that he visited her room every day."

Well, as it happens in Japanese plays everything becomes very confused at this point. The Fujiwara clan falls on bad days.

Shihel dies — or as the synopsis says: "Fujiwara family collapsed after Shihel and many members died of ill or thunder (sic). Kunitune (who is about 90 at this point), who could never get his wife out of his memory, became insane. The young Shigemoto (their young son) was pitiless (sic). He could never see his mother again since Kitano-kata has also been confined herself in a small nunnery outside of the town after Shihel died."

The synopsis shows everything turns out fine in act 3.

"One day Shigemoto was walking nearby the nunnery. Suddenly, he was struck with a strong wish to see mother and started to run along a stream. He found a nun preying (sic) before the grave of Shihel. It was Kitano-kata. He called her name. The mother and son were holding each other without a word, under the cherry tree in full blossom."

The Nishigeki, a big, modern music hall, also gives out an English synopsis of its acts.

Scene 15 of one play is called "Concrete Jungle."

"An ambitious scene which depicts a crowd of young people, singing the power to bring the nation in the midst of noise and 'rock n' roll' at Westside (sic of New York) where dwell crim enad poverty."

opinions on welfare subjects without having benefit of the knowledge he should have prior to forming his opinion." —Washington Daily News.

"This newspaper sees no valid reason why labor unions which now have or could arrange to have the power to bring the national economy to its knees with a general strike, and to leave the nation defenseless against attack, should not be subject to the same anti-trust laws which govern their employers." —Portland Oregonian.

"A few years ago, at the Iowa State Fair, a little survey was made on the farm equipment accident question. Of some 600 people who filled out cards, only one in five said the machine was in fault. All the others placed the blame on human frailty of one kind or another." —Industrial News Review.

Sounding Off On The PR Flack

By ELMER ROESSNER
Every business employing 100 or more persons today has a public relations agency, a director of public relations or, as we call them in the trade, a flack.

Quite a few smaller ones do, too. Sometimes a business with no other employees than the owner's wife and an outside salesman have a press agent. When your correspondent was a desk man on a New York newspaper, a publicity man offered, for a fee of $25 a week, to make him the most celebrated assistant city editor in America. It may have been a mistake to turn him down. It may have led to a Pulitzer prize. On the other hand, the kids would have had to go without shoes.

Because of this abundance of public relations men, the trade press is constantly coming up with articles on how to prepare releases for the press. These are usually written by publicity men themselves and contain such gems of information as "don't try to fool the editor," "give the editor the kind of stories he ordinarily uses," "always answer all legitimate questions honestly," "type double-spaced on one side of the paper only."

That's fine. Now let's hear from an editor and writer who has been on the receiving end of thousands of releases a week for more years than he can count on his finger AND toes. Namely me.

1. Be appropriate. This column has rolled on for a dozen years without analyzing the financial situation of any company, or carrying personnel changes. Yet each day half a dozen annual reports come in, along with news of the appointment of a score of vice presidents. This waste must cost the offending companies thousands of dollars a year in printing and publicity, and it costs me scanning time worth at least $12,598,000 a year to myself.

2. Be professional, of course. A press release should be in the same form and as factual as a newspaper story. However, this is less important than it sounds. Sometimes a factual personal letter conveys more real news than a bundle of writing in slavish imitation of AP copy.

3. Date the release. Some releases are worth stowing away for references, but unless the date is evident, they can booby trap the editor months later.

4. Give the address as well as the name of the source. "But you don't always use addresses!" flacks have told me. Right. But when a reader writes in for additional information, where do I refer them?

5. Tell where additional information is available. Releases often leave gaps in what a tough editor should know, and unless there's a phone number handy for getting a fill-in, another release hits the wastebasket.

FOR QUICKER HANDLING
6. Have releases folded with the typeside OUT. That's the way newspaper copy has been folded for three generations. Releases folded in, even when written by professionals, take on the appearance of social notes from the Wednesday Biddy and Backbiting Club.

7. Have something to say. If you haven't, you should have stood in bed.

8. Remember, editors have long memories, and some of us maintain blacklists. Don't announce as a new product something that was reported in the trade press, or advertised in a consumer magazine, two weeks earlier. Don't "announce" a new program that was started two weeks ago.

One corporation changes public relations agencies every year. I assume it thinks it is making each agency fresh enthusiasm and new ideas. And each new agency rushes a story to me about the company's "new, hi-erto unpublished program" and once again "the heart-warming story of a penniless immigrant who built an idea into a great, American business."

Life is too short to tell him to go back where he came from. There's barely time to shove the release into a wastebasket.

Four Florida Youths Go On Trial For Rape

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Four white youths went on trial today in the rape of a teen-age Negro college coed.

The four defendants, ranging in age from 16 to 23, looked on gravely and attentively as the preliminaries got under way.

Relatives of some of the boys also were in the court room.

More than 150 Negroes filled the segregated balcony. White spectators were barred for the time being so that prospective jurors could occupy seats on the first floor.

A veteran Florida jurist pledged that his court will function without regard to race, creed or color during the trial.

Told newsmen the case of four white youths charged with raping a slender Negro coed was being treated no differently than any other.

There was an atmosphere of tension in Florida's capital city as the highly publicized case began. Walker said the case probably would be concluded by Saturday unless selection of a jury stretched out too long.

The four, if convicted without a recommendation of mercy, would get the death penalty. No white man ever has gone to the electric chair in Florida for raping a Negro.

The slow business of picking a jury was expected to take a day or more. Three women and several Negroes were in the panel of about 170 prospective jurors.

Seating capacity of the somewhat antiquated courtroom was supplemented by about 50 chairs to provide for about 300 spectators.

National attention has been focused on the case, partly because it took place just a week after Mack Charles Parker, 23, a white Mississippi woman, was hauled from a Poplarville, Miss., jail by a group of men. His body was found in a river 20 miles away. There have been no arrests in that case.

The four youths on trial here were arrested within hours after the alleged rape of the 19-year-old Tallahassee girl on May 2. They were indicted by a specially summoned grand jury and have been held in the county jail without bond.

The fact that no white man has ever been electrocuted in this state for raping a Negro led the Rev. A. Leon Lowry, president of the Florida Conference of NAACP branches, to demand the elimination of what he called a "Coulter system of justice."

All four youths pleaded innocent at their arraignment. Sheriff Bill Joyce said all had signed confessions.

The defendants are William Collinsworth, 23, a telephone lineman who is married and has two children; Patrick G. Scarborough, 20, an Air Force man; David Ervin Beagles, 18, a high school senior; and Ollie Stoultz, 16.

They were charged with snatching the Florida A&M University girl from her escort following a school dance, and driving her to a lonely woods where they raped her repeatedly.

Collinsworth's lawyer, S. Gunter Toney, has been laying ground-work for a plea that his client was insane at the time of the alleged rape.

A private psychiatrist examined Collinsworth and reported him to be a moron with the mental age of nine. Three court-appointed psychiatrists examined him at the state hospital. Their report has not been made public.

Florida law provides that any prisoner may be considered for parole after serving six months, but prison officials said those given life sentences for rape serve at least 10 years.

A white man now at the state prison has served more than 20 years of a life sentence for rape of a Negro.

Joyce announced segregated seating will be preserved throughout the trial. White spectators will occupy the lower floor; Negroes will sit in the balcony.

Santa Claus Up For Sale Today

SANTA CLAUS, Calif. (AP)—Santa Claus has been put on the market.

Pat and June McKeon, who founded this tourist attraction on $500 they borrowed 11 years ago, haven't had a vacation in all of that time. Besides, they want their three children, they said, to have a more normal home life.

Santa Claus has a post office, a cafe, a bakery, a toy shop, a pottery shop and a miniature train. The town is incorporated and it may be the smallest town in the world: 315 feet long and 110 feet wide. It's on Highway 101, about two miles south of Santa Barbara.

President Asks AMA To Help Combat Inflationary 'Disease'

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—President Eisenhower has called upon organized doctors to help write a preventive prescription against inflation in the same way they guard the nation's physical health.

In his speech he hammered anew at what he termed the urgent need for a balanced federal budget.

GOP Leader Approves Democratic Worksheet

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate's Republican leader approved informally today a Democratic worksheet loaded with political fireworks but omitting any big new spending bills.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.) noted in an interview that Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas had included several major requests of President Eisenhower in an outline Tuesday of the work ahead for the Senate.

Among other things, Johnson called for action on "a reasonable civil rights measure which will appeal to free men who wish to make progress rather than make an issue." Dirksen said he agrees sponsors are going to have to tread this politics-mined field cautiously if they want to pass a bill.

"I have always proceeded on the theory that civil rights legislation must of necessity be reasonable in its nature if we expect to get action by the Senate and House," Dirksen said. "The administration seeks to be restrained in this field."

Of Johnson's list of priority measures, Dirksen ticked off a number of others he recalled Eisenhower had requested.

These included extension of the agricultural trade development, international wheat agreement and excise tax rates; military and atomic energy construction; foreign aid and creation of an inter-American development bank.

However, the Republican leader

Schoendienst's Return In Doubt

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Red Schoendienst, veteran Braves second baseman, was reported today recovering satisfactorily from tuberculosis but it appeared doubtful whether he would be able to begin practice in Milwaukee early in July as he originally planned.

Red's wife, Mary, reported that his Doctor William Werner had not given him the go-ahead sign for any serious workouts but he went through a 40-minute drill stopping grounders in the backyard of their home last Saturday.

She said that her father, Jim O'Reilly, a former semi-pro ball player hit several grounders to Schoendienst.

"I'm a little prejudiced," she said, "but I thought Red looked real sharp digging those grounders out of the dirt."

"In my own way, too, I've given him a series of little tests to see how his reflexes react and here, too, he's been sharp as ever."

"But we can't rush things and Dr. Werner still hasn't given him permission to start working out."

"We originally planned to move to Milwaukee after school was dismissed for the summer, but I think we'll have to delay matters a little."

Red had planned to start practice after the first All-Star Game July 8.

Never since Baltimore returned to the majors in 1954, have the Birds been in first place after the first few days of a season. But now Manager Paul Richards' collection of castoffs have made it.

They did it by belting Cleveland's suddenly dead Injuns 7-3 Tuesday night while Washington beat the Chicago White Sox 7-4. That left the White Sox and Orioles with 29-24 records and a 1½-game lead over third-place

Cleveland in one of the closest AL pennant races ever.

There's only a ½-game spread from top to bottom.

New York's defending champions finally reached .500 with a 9-8, 13-inning victory over Kansas City that hoisted the Yankees from sixth into a fourth place tie with Detroit, beaten 5-2 at Boston.

Both are only 2½ games behind the leaders.

Kansas City, now sixth, trails by only three games. Seventh-place Washington is five games behind with Boston last, 5½ back.

In the National League, St.

Kenny Boyer drove in four runs for the Cards with a two-run homer, his 13th, and a two-run double. Gino Cimoli batted in three with his fifth homer in a five-run sixth that made it a rout. Boyer and Bill White each had three hits in the Cards' 16-hit barrage, with White socking two doubles and a triple.

Larry Jackson (4-6), who had lost twice to the Braves, had a shutout until Hank Aaron's RBI double in the sixth.

Southpaw Johnny Antonelli (8-3), who has won five of his last six decisions, was the Giants' winner with a five-hitter, blanking the Bucs on three hits before Don Hoak's home run in the seventh. Dick Stuard homered for the other Pirate run in the eighth. Vern Law (5-4) was the loser.

Three homers scored six runs for the Cubs, who now have won six of their last seven. Bobby Thomson's seventh homer came with two on in the fifth against loser Joe Nuxhall (3-4), who left game after putting a tie-breaking run on base in the seventh. Ernie Banks then tagged reliever Tom Acker for his 14th home run and to the cellar 3-2.

Unpredictable Cards Take Off Against Spahn, 12-3

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

An unpredictable bunch, these St. Louis Cardinals. They've lost more one-run decisions (15), and dropped more games by last-inning runs (9) than any other club in the National League. But when they break loose for their biggest run production of the season, who do they blast off against? No less than first-place Milwaukee and Warren Spahn.

They quit the cellar with a 12-3 romp against the Braves Tuesday night, running up the highest one-game run total this season against Milwaukee.

It also was their first victory in five tries against the Braves and only the 30th time in 83 decisions that they have beaten Spahn, who now is 7-7 and has been charged with a third of Milwaukee's losses.

This one trimmed the Braves' lead to two games over the San Francisco Giants, who won 6-2 at Pittsburgh. Chicago and Los Angeles remained tied for third, four games behind, when the Cubs belted Cincinnati 8-4 and the Dodgers plunked Philadelphia in to the cellar 3-2.

Bolt Confident In Defending Title

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — A confident Tommy Bolt begins defense of his U.S. Open Golf Championship Thursday, apparently unconcerned by the shadows of those two aging titans, Ben Hogan and Sam Snead.

It's another Snead-Hogan open, so far as most of the gallery at the Winged Foot Golf Club is concerned, and it will remain so until they fall from contention. It's been that way almost for the last 15 years.

Hogan, 46, tight-lipped and determined, and with his putting touch good again, is shooting for a record fifth open title. Snead, 47, winner of 103 other tournaments, is seeking his first.

Bolt fired a two-under-par 68 in practice Tuesday and promptly announced that he didn't intend to vacate his throne without a struggle.

Bolt Confident In Defending Title

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — A confident Tommy Bolt begins defense of his U.S. Open Golf Championship Thursday, apparently unconcerned by the shadows of those two aging titans, Ben Hogan and Sam Snead.

It's another Snead-Hogan open, so far as most of the gallery at the Winged Foot Golf Club is concerned, and it will remain so until they fall from contention. It's been that way almost for the last 15 years.

Hogan, 46, tight-lipped and determined, and with his putting touch good again, is shooting for a record fifth open title. Snead, 47, winner of 103 other tournaments, is seeking his first.

Bolt fired a two-under-par 68 in practice Tuesday and promptly announced that he didn't intend to vacate his throne without a struggle.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Communiting—that's what is making ours a matriarchal society, says Max Shulman, a sage observer of the American scene.

"Nearly every man today is a commuter," remarked the humorist. "After fighting the traffic in the morning, working all day and fighting the traffic again, he comes home beat."

"But his wife—she's got the automatic washer and dryer, so she doesn't work the way he used to. When her husband comes home, she's just as fresh as if she'd had 30 days in the country."

"She starts throwing these questions at him about straightening their daughter's teeth and giving their son dancing lessons. The husband is too weary to concern himself with such things, so she takes over. She rules the family by default, but I don't think she really likes it that way."

"Now when I was a kid, the father was still the symbol of authority, like a cop. And I think we were better for it."

His observations were evoked by his present assignment, overseeing the filming of a TV series

'Temporary' Tax Rates Extended

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House has voted again for continuing corporate and excise tax rates that were set during the Korean War as a temporary measure.

The one-year extension, passed by voice vote Monday, now goes to the Senate which is expected to pass it with little controversy.

It was the sixth time the House has voted for an extension since 1951, when the regular tax rates were increased.

Unless the bill is passed, corporate income tax rates automatically will drop from 52 per cent to 47 per cent on July 1 and excise tax rates will be reduced on cigarettes, whisky, beer, wine and new cars and parts.

The lower rates would yield about three billion dollars less a year.

deadly weapon inflicting serious injuries not resulting in death, four months suspended upon payment of costs, $64.50 to Pitt Memorial Hospital and $15 to Dr. Ray Minges, and defendant ordered not molest or assault wife for 12 months.

Up To Ike

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defense officials have taken to President Eisenhower a dispute over missiles for air defense, but what decisions were reached, if any, remain secret.

Neither the White House nor participants in Tuesday's meeting would discuss results of the secret session, beyond saying it included talk of a proposed master plan which Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy had been directed to prepare.

At stake is a question about the kind of defense weapon the United States needs. Should it concentrate on the Army's Nike-Hercules or the Air Force's Bomarc or both for defense against enemy bombers.

Advance guesses had been that both the 85-mile Nike-Hercules and the longer range Bomarc would be chosen for specific tasks.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) in an interview today, expressed hope that the meeting had resulted in a decision that would resolve the dispute among the Army, Air Force, and Navy about the anti-aircraft weapons.

Land Swap Ends Potential Feud

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH—What had promised to be a heated fight over attempts of the City of Asheville to obtain complete police control over the new Asheville Airport area, which lies partly in Henderson county, proved to be a dud.

Buncombe and Henderson representatives, commissioners and attorneys had gotten together on a compromise before the public hearing was held. It was very simple.

Buncombe county, which owned half interest in the old Asheville-Hendersonville field ceded title to that land to Henderson county, and Henderson ceded that part of the new airport which lies in Henderson county to Buncombe. The City of Asheville holds title to the land.

Effect of the compromise is to give Hendersonville a fine industrial site, and to give Asheville the control it desired over the new airport. Henderson folk had expressed fear that if Asheville got full police control over the property, it might place an ABC store on it. Lawyers agreed that the Asheville corporate limits to include the air field—and miles of undeveloped land. Asheville has had enough headaches out of a much smaller annexation problem, and as one of the participants said, isn't looking for more of the same.

Henderson representatives were happy. "We got some land worth money," they said. "All Asheville got was trouble—because they already owned the land."

Louisiana's Long Dynasty Possibly At Crossroads

Editor's note: In 1928, a fiery country lawyer named Huey P. Long was elected governor of Louisiana and the state has felt the Long family's political influence ever since. But with the commitment of Gov. Earl Long, Huey's younger brother, to a Texas psychiatric clinic two weeks ago, there have been rumblings of the Long dynasty's crumbling. An AP writer Hugh A. Mulligan, an AP staffer at Louisiana's Capitol for three years, returned to Baton Rouge to survey Louisiana's government under the Long influence. Today's story, the first of three, deals with the situation in the wake of Earl Long's commitment.

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP)—The long Long trail winding through Louisiana politics for 30 years has meandered tragically to the gates of a Galveston, Tex., mental clinic where Earl Long, Huey's younger brother, is confined after two shockingly profane speeches to the Legislature.

Will Earl be back? Is the Long dynasty dead?

These are the questions being asked openly and answered guardedly in the 34-story state Capitol building that rises as a giant headstone over Huey P. Long's grave.

A sanity hearing next week will provide some indication of the 63-year old governor's political future.

Since Earl's departure, no one has dared to pick up the Long mantle but some have tipped to sniff at it. State Sen. B. B. Rayburn of Bogalusa, floor leader in the Senate, announced that he might be available to carry the Long banner in the coming governor's race and was promptly branded a "flyweight" contender by an outraged Long man in the House.

Rumors persist that U.S. Sen. Russell Long, Huey's son who bears a striking physical resemblance to the late Kingfish, is maneuvering to take over the Long forces and run for governor in the December Democratic primary with the support of Deleese Morrison, the dynamic mayor of New Orleans. Morrison would then complete the rest of Russell's Senate term and run for a full term with his support in 1961.

Both deny that any deal has been struck.

"I've always had an ambition to be governor and someday follow my father in the mansion," Russell Long said in an interview, "but I have serious doubts at this time about leaving the Senate for the governorship. The normal political path is through the governor's office to the U.S. Senate, not the other way around. However, if it were the only way of keeping the Long faction together, I might consider running."

The senator joined in the family's conclusion that decided to sign commitment papers for the stricken governor.

"My uncle and I have differed politically in the past," he said. "He has his following. I have mine. As far as I'm concerned, Lt. Gov. Letha Frazier is the head of the Long forces now. I'm available for help but not here to put pressure on things."

Spending most of his time in Washington, Russell lacks the strong personal following and patronage-fed political machine that made his father and uncle absolute bosses of the Long faction. His alliance with the northern liberal wing of the Democratic party is sure to come under heavy fire from segregation leader W. M. Rainach, an all but announced candidate for governor himself.

Many of Russell's opponents, together with some of his friends, feel that he lost considerable ground by showing flashes of temper when six House members objected to his addressing a joint session to explain the governor's illness and sudden trip out of state. Refusing to speak without an unanimous invitation, Long angrily demanded that the six stand up and be counted, and was somewhat taken back when they did. Three times he stalked away from the microphone, the old family fury burning in his eyes and his jaw set in a way reminiscent of Huey, but finally was persuaded to go ahead with his remarks.

If the Long camp is wary until the old warrior's future is determined by psychiatrists, many former Long supporters are anxious to pick up the pieces of his following. Among them are Secretary of State Wade O. Martin Jr. and State Comptroller Bill Dodd, both potent vote getters. There are even rumors that Blanche Long, the governor's wife, might be persuaded to run.

Segregation leaders, growing in political power since the Supreme Court school decision, are convinced that Earl Long's breakdown, witness by thousands on television, marks the end of the Long dynasty, regardless of whether he ever runs again.

In Louisiana the governor cannot succeed himself, but Earl a few weeks ago came up with a scheme to resign before his term ends in favor of Lt. Gov. Frazier and then run to succeed Frazier. Long collided head on with segregation leaders when he attempted to forestall by legislation a vote registration cleanup that in the past three years has removed thousands of Negroes from the rolls.

Although he insisted that he was "100 per cent for segregation" and merely out to protect the poor

CHAPTER 19
Fleur Constant shook her head violently. "I don't believe my brother is a murderer. I know him. There must be an explanation. I know there will be."

Though her voice trembled a little, it had confidence that Mark Travers' throat went dry. The real pain lay not in being hurt but in having to hurt others.

"I hope so, for our sake," Mark rose and went over to the telephone. "Fleur, darling, please try to see my side of it. I am sorry, but I must call Inspector Perrier."

She tore the receiver out of his hand. "You can't! I won't let you! Listen, Mark, I know he's innocent. But I also know what it will do to him to be questioned by the police. what it will do to Grand-maman to have to face scandal. You can't do it to him, nor to me. It's my name, too. You can't, Mark."

He saw the desperation in her eyes. Then what could he do? Go and face Guy Constant alone? It would be giving the enemy all the advantages without the slightest chance of defending himself successfully.

And then? Would she call Perrier if something happened to him? Or would she, to protect her family, choose to believe it was an accident if he were found dead, an accident with which her brother had nothing to do?

"Go and see Guy," she was saying. "I beg of you. Talk to him before you speak to Perrier. Mark, if you have any respect for me, you will come with me right now."

The sun had set when they drove through the warm twilight without speaking. Traffic had died down completely, for people had come in from the beaches to rest and change for the night.

Mark took the road Guy Constant had shown him that morning as the shorter way to reach the house and they were there so quickly it surprised them both. Neither was ready for the action demanded of them.

"I really don't know how to tell him," said Fleur. "It seems impossible." She opened the door. "You'd better not come in. Wait here." She pointed to one of the chairs on the deserted terrace and disappeared into the house, which seemed oddly quiet, dark and drab.

Mark was leaning against the wall, still warm from the day's sun, when he heard a small noise very close. He swung in the direction of the sound, then flattened himself instinctively against the wall again.

"I saw you," a voice whispered. "You are a fool to come here." "Who are you?" "Well, I had the misfortune to meet you at luncheon," Bransky, the little old ballet master, stepped carefully out of the shadow of a tree onto the terrace. Mark's tension broke into laughter. He had forgotten Bransky.

"Your best chance," said Bransky, "is not to let them know you are here. Oh, my migraine!" He pushed at something on his head. "The ice bag. Oh, the pain, the pain. I knew it would come back the moment you told me Mademoiselle was going with you. I was too stupid to do anything about it. I just sat there not knowing what to do."

"Madame has taken to her bed. The General has gone off to comb Monte Carlo for you. Inez is so nervous, she refuses to cook. And Miss Pendlebury has forgotten all her rrench and for hours has spoken only English."

Mark stared at him, unable to find an answer. All he could think of was Philippe, falling to the ground beside him, Corinne, killed in her car, the bombing in the cafe in Nice, and acts of terror on both sides, going on for years. It was difficult, almost impossible, to imagine a world in which all that mattered was that a young girl be properly chaperoned.

"And Monsieur Constant?" "Oh, I have no doubt that he will kill you."

Laughter rose in Mark's throat as the thought struck him that brotherly jealousy could be used to cover up the true motive. A fight between two men in which he would be killed.

The front door opened. It was Fleur. "Bransky, where is my brother?" "Monsieur Guy? Well, isn't he there?"

"Don't be an idiot," said Fleur. "Why should I ask you otherwise?" "Speak softly," said Bransky. "Don't wake Madame. I must have dozed off. I didn't see him leave. He was here an hour ago. Waiting for you in his study. Furious. I thought it best to stay away from him. Oh, Mademoiselle, I beg of you, go back into the house. He may have got impatient with the General for not having found you. He may have gone looking for you himself. He may come back any minute and if he

"He isn't here," Fleur turned to Mark. "He isn't here." Mark did not answer.

There was, of course, the possibility that he might have been seen boarding the Anemone. Constant might have remembered the pile of maps and preferred to disappear.

"But we'll find him," said Fleur, raising her voice a little in desperation. And she went back into the house.

"Who is the General?" Mark asked, stepping up to Bransky, who was holding his ice bag to his forehead with both hands.

"One of Madame's oldest friends. A fine gentleman. He often accompanies Monsieur on his adventures."

"Does he? Who else?" "On the boats? Well, there is one Anet, an all-around man, sailor, mechanic, engineer. And scientists or acquaintances sometimes go along."

The door opened and Fleur came out. She had changed into an evening dress at which the old English governess was plucking nervously. "Ducky, please, I am sorry, but I must refuse your permission."

"Are you sure he went to the Casino?" "I shouldn't have told you," Miss Pendlebury wrung her hands. "But that's what he said on the phone. It's unfair of you to take advantage of me. I only told you because I wanted to calm you, because you were so worried about him."

Then she saw Mark and shrank visibly. You should be ashamed of yourself, all this excitement when, with a little good manners, everything would be so much easier."

Fleur turned to Mark. "Let's go."

She ran down the steps and Mark followed her while the hushed voices of Bransky and Miss Pendlebury lamented their departure.

"I forgot all about having staved away with a stranger," Fleur said, as soon as he had started the car. "Stranger," Mark heard, and it cut him like a knife and yet it was better, perhaps, if she forgot what they had meant to each other for a few hours.

"Poor dears," she said. "But maybe they are luckier than you and I. They are not involved in treason and murder." Even in this enter she sounded close to tears.

"Fleur, let me take you back. I'll find him."

She shook her head violently. "I don't trust you. You might change your mind and call the police after all."

Mark could have good reason for calling the police if he fingers at the Casino. Continue "A Spy at Monte Carlo" here tomorrow.

Education TV's Past And Future Is Up For Study

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—About 200 backers and participants in a multi-million dollar project—the three-year-old educational television program in 15 states—will meet here June 15-26 to discuss how their baby has grown and how it can be improved.

It was strictly an experiment when it began, but it has had millions of dollars in backing from the Fund for Advancement of Education of the Ford Foundation.

During the school year just ended, educational TV (sometimes called ETV) reaches 130,000 pupils in various states. Response has generally been good. And many TV-taught pupils have made better grades on standard tests than their fellows taught by conventional methods.

The University of North Carolina program, begun in 1957, is the largest state program. It reached 7,000 pupils in 1957-58, 15,000 in 1958-59. The Ford Foundation has put $250,000 into it, matched dollar for dollar by funds from the 80 school systems in the state taking part in it.

Tests evaluated by the Educational Testing Service in Princeton, N.J. after the 1957-58 school year indicated that TV groups in North Carolina learned more than pupils taught by conventional methods. The state's program has received praise from a number of outside sources.

The on-camera teachers reach thousands of pupils at a time. The individual classes in North Carolina number from 100 to 300 pupils. In the classroom is a receiving teacher, who follows up the TV instruction with additional information and by answering questions and assisting pupils.

Basic subjects such as mathematics, science and history have been stressed.

The role of the receiving teacher, less glamorous than that of the on-camera instructor, is recognized in that they make up the majority of 150 "expert teachers" who will be honored at the ETV workshop.

A. J. Stoddard of New York City, educational advisor of the Ford Foundation, will direct the workshop along with John J. Scanlon, who is program associate to the Fund's education division.

Others who will take part are Alvin C. Eurich and James W. Armey of the Fund; Charles W. Phillips, head of North Carolina's ETV program; Arnold Perry, dean of the university's School of Education; Earl Wynn, director of WUNC-TV; and Charles F. Miller, director of the Extension Division.

Among other states which will be represented are California, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin and Virginia.

Aga Khan Slated To Get Degree

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—An undergraduate affectionately called "K" by his classmates gets his bachelor of arts degree Thursday at Harvard College's 308th commencement.

His formal title is His Highness the Aga Khan IV, spiritual leader of some 20 million Moslems.

It is in his capacity as Imam of the Middle East sect that he has donated to Harvard $50,000 to establish a 10-year program of scholarships, preferably for students of his faith.

To Aga Khan's gift, Harvard is expected to put in another $50,000 to make a scholarship fund of $100,000 available in the next decade for students from Pakistan, India, the United Arab Republic, Iraq, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon, Jordan, Iran, East Africa, including Kenya, Tanganyika, Uganda and Zanzibar.

The Aga Khan, 22, who succeeded his late grandfather Aga Khan III as Imam Moslem leader while a sophomore at Harvard, announced the scholarship plan in a formal statement distributed by the college news service.

He said he was "particularly impressed" by Harvard's program of studies of Middle Eastern and Asian affairs. He said more students from these regions should be able to take advantage of "Harvard's accumulated stores of knowledge."

"I approached the university authorities to see if I could help in any way and found that they have long wanted to make it possible for more students from Asia and Africa to come to Harvard," he said, in explaining his gift.

The program calls for an average scholarship of between $2,000 and $2,500 a year. Between 40 and 50 scholarships will be awarded in the 10-year period.

Of the Aga Khan as an undergraduate, Dean John U. Monroe declared he "has shown eager intelligence, seriousness of purpose and disciplined hard work in the classroom, as well as sportsman-

San Francisco 'Disinherited'; Won't Get Art

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Edward G. Robinson's ex-wife has disinherited San Francisco. She is going to give her valuable art collection to some other city.

"I wanted to leave the collection to the city I loved and I thought loved me," Gladys Robinson said Tuesday before driving to Los Angeles in her scarlet Ferrari sports car. "But I got the bumps and I probably never will come back."

The exhibition, containing 54 Renaissance, 19th-century French and contemporary French and Italian masterpieces, opened June 6 at the Palace of the Legion of Honor and runs through July 5.

She charged there was very little publicity, no catalogues and not enough excitement about the collection, which she values at more than a million dollars.

Also, none of the 14 trustees showed up at a pre-opening press party.

Ross Smith, assistant director of the Palace, said trustees never show up at those affairs. As for attendance, he remarked that nobody was breaking down the doors, but it was better than average—1,500 last weekend.

Smith's boss, Thomas Carr Howe, vacationing at Santa Fe, N.M., said "The museum is displeased that Mrs. Robinson is displeased with her reception. I thought we had done the best we know how."

Portraits by Tiepolo and Tintoretto are included in the collection as well as Pissarro's "Harbor Scene" and Modigliani's "Boy in Green." Twenty paintings are by Giuseppe Gambino, a Sicilian protégé of Mrs. Robinson.

There also is a portrait of her—"Victoria in Red"—done by Capulet, a modern Italian Salvador Dali.

Mrs. Robinson hinted she may give the collection to Philadelphia, the city of her birth. But she made no definite commitments.

Kill Big Bear In Downtown Area

BALTIMORE (AP)—City police report they shot and killed a large, black bear in downtown Baltimore about 4:15 a.m. today.

Somewhat proudly, officers said they think it was the same elusive bear that gave Washington police so much trouble recently.

Two men spotted the animal late Tuesday night near a cemetery in the southwest section. Police were alerted. Some 100 officers joined in the hunt.

The bear wandered in and out of alleys, with dogs at its heels. The hunt ended about five hours later when police felled the animal with a high-powered rifle.

It took four policemen to load it into a wagon.

Police, Pickets Violently Clash

NEW YORK (AP)—Fifty policemen, swinging nightsticks, and about 100 pickets clashed Tuesday in the first outbreak of mass violence in the month-old hospital strike.

Seven pickets were arrested. No serious injuries were reported.

Leon Davis, president of the striking union, called for an investigation by Mayor Robert F. Wagner.

"We vigorously protest the brutal clubbing of the defenseless strikers by the police," he said. "And we call upon Mayor Wagner to investigate and take immediate action against the policemen responsible for these outrageous attacks."

The brief flareup occurred at a medical school graduation ceremony near one of the seven hospitals struck by nonprofessional workers.

The academic procession was made up of the faculty of New York Medical College and 123 students who were to receive degrees. They marched three blocks in 90-degree heat in academic robes. The hospital pickets gradually joined the end of the procession.

The trouble broke out when police formed a solid wall to move the pickets, by then a group almost as large as the procession, out of the line. Doctors and students were not involved.

The New York Medical College owns Flower & Fifth Ave. Hospitals, the latest to be struck by the Retail Drug Employees Union.

FIRST TO PAY
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—This city hiked its fine for overtime parking from 50 cents to a dollar Monday. Among the first to be docked for the doubled fine was Robert S. Davis, chairman of the traffic committee which had recommended the higher fine.

When the French first built a settlement in what is now Peoria, Ill., in 1730, they named it "Au Pe," which means, roughly, "out in the new country."
