New Tobacco Crop Is Off To An Early Start

1959 TOBACCO HARVESTING BEGINS IN PITT COUNTY . . . Tobacco From At Least Two Farms Began Going Into Barns Yesterday And Today.

Housing Of 1959 Tobacco Has Begun In Pitt County

Housing operations for Pitt County's 1959 tobacco crop have begun.

According to reports received this morning, Sam McLawhorn of Grifton began first primings yesterday, with Amos Buck of Rt. 1, Winterville, beginning this morning. McLawhorn put in at least one barn of tobacco and Buck expects to get an equal amount of leaf from today's primings on his farm.

The housings are among the earliest ever reported for the county, which has the largest allotment of tobacco acreage in the state. Crop experts, however, have predicted an early and "unusually good" crop for this year.

Reports from the McLawhorn farm said tobacco there is "pretty", but in need of rain. That area has not received as much rain as has the area around Buck's farm where tobacco being primed today is between five and six feet tall.

Buck, who has 5.1 acres of tobacco on his "home" farm and nine additional acres in a leased parcel of tobacco land, said his field and barn hands would continue to work throughout today in the smaller field. He anticipates a layoff of between seven and ten days before returning to harvesting work, although he added that if dry weather continues the harvesting will have to be resumed next week.

Priming and housing activities on the Buck farm are the earliest by two or three weeks' ever held there, Buck said. He pointed out, however, that the area has had "fair rainfall" and the crop is planted in soil which tends to be more moist than other fields on the farm.

Pitt Swine Tour Slated Thursday

Pitt County's annual swine tour will be held Thursday beginning at 8:30 a.m. County Farm Agent S. C. Winchester said today.

The group making the tour will assemble at the Pitt County Fairgrounds from 8:30 to 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

From there the tour will move to the Ed Hemmings farm on the Bethel Highway where the group will observe a farrowing house.

At 9:40 the tour will go to the P. L. Blount, Jr. farm on the Bethel Highway to observe a farrowing house. At this farm there will be a demonstration of culling and selecting gilts for breeding.

At 10:30 the group goes to the W. C. Hollowell farm to observe a swine evaluation and feeding building.

The group will move to the Johnnie Hardee farm to observe a farrowing house at 11:20 a.m. The farm is located five miles from Greenville on U.S. 264 east.

At 12:15 the group goes to the Hugh Winslow farm to observe a building converted to a farrowing house, feeding on concrete, Virginia Black swine, and a demonstration of grading market hogs.

The Winslow farm is located one and a half miles from Greenville on the Hooker Road.

From 1:15 to 1:45 a free lunch will be served to those making the tour at the Winslow farm. The lunch is being given by the Pitt Feed dealers.

At 1:45 the group will journey to the Prosty Morn Farm near Grifton to observe farrowing houses and feeding on concrete.

From 3 until 4 o'clock there will be a discussion led by Jack Kelley, Ray Ritchie, Al Howard, Art Pitzer and L. B. Outlaw.

"Those interested in swine production, feeding, housing, selecting, grading and management will be benefited by making this tour," Winchester declared.

Revenue Bill Is Before Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — The biennial revenue bill, including a pay-as-you-go plan for collecting individual income taxes, went to the Senate today. The House gave it third reading approval Monday night.

The battle against withholding may be revived in the Senate. A few weeks ago Sen. Robert Morgan of Harnett led a move in the Senate Finance Committee which resulted in the adoption of an amendment to put corporations under the withholding plan. However, administration supporters rallied their forces the next day and the amendment was retracted.

The House tacked on an amendment last Thursday to apply withholding to the state's largest corporations, 41 in all.

Before the revenue measure was given final House approval, 86-17, some members got in final licks at withholding. Rep. Thomas Turner of Guilford termed it "an attempt to fool the people of North Carolina."

Rep. John McLaughlin of Iredell said "the greatest labor movement you ever saw" would result when workers find their pay reduced by withholding.

Rep. John W. Umstead Jr. said he voted for the revenue bill "with misgivings" because he feared it meant dumping tax problems "into the lap of the 1961 General Assembly, something we should not do." Umstead also said "we're short - changing some essential services."

The House also gave overwhelming approval to two bills calling for a 48½ million dollar capital improvements program for state agencies and institutions. The Senate had already passed the bills, but one must be returned for Senate concurrence on a technical amendment.

Firemen's Pension Plan Clears Hurdle

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislation to create a firemen's pension fund moved a step nearer enactment Monday when it was approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The action followed a public hearing on the two bills, one of which would levy a 1 per cent tax on fire insurance premiums collected on property in protected areas. The other measure would set up the fund and provide for its administration.

The House had already approved the bills.

TV's Superman Dies Of Gunshot

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor George Reeves, 44, the "Superman" of television, died early today of a gunshot wound. Police said Reeves apparently took his own life.

He was found dead on a bed in his home in Benedict Canyon, an exclusive residential area in the hills above Beverly Hills.

Reeves starred in scores of the "Superman" films. Although the series was discontinued, reruns are appearing.

The husky, dark-haired actor complained to a Hollywood writer recently that he wasn't getting enough other roles—because he was type-cast.

JAGUAR-HUNTRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — A Philadelphia society girl left by plane Monday for Brazil to hunt jaguars. Stella (Cissy) Reeves, 26, wants to learn to kill the big jungle cats with a spear. She was accompanied by bearded Sasha Siemel, 69, a veteran hunter in Brazil's Matto Grosso jungle.

Meanwhile, the Senate received a bill Monday night under which eligibility requirements for welfare payments would be subject to approval by the governor and Advisory Budget Commission.

Sen. J. William Copeland of Hertford and Robert Morgan of Cleveland introduced the measure, which resulted from a recent disagreement over Welfare Department appropriations.

The Welfare Department said appropriations in its budget for the next biennium would make it necessary to cut welfare payments. Gov. Hodges has said that in his opinion the payments must not have to be cut.

Under the Copeland-Morgan bill, all rules and regulations made by the State Welfare Board to determine eligibility for welfare grants or to determine the amount of such grants would be subject to approval of the governor and Advisory Budget Commission.

The House passed and sent to the Senate bills calling for three special studies. One would set up a special commission to study the feasibility of using school buildings year-round. Another would direct the State Board of Education to study teaching evaluation and certification. A third bill would investigate factors influencing the habitual criminal.

The House gave third reading approval to a bill which would authorize the State Milk Commission to set minimum retail and wholesale prices in emergencies. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Acting under suspended rules, the House and Senate gave quick approval to a bill which would authorize an election in Statesville on the question of establishing ABC liquor stores.

At 1:15 to 1:45 a free lunch will be served to those making the tour at the Winslow farm. The lunch is being given by the Pitt Feed dealers.

At 1:45 the group will journey to the Prosty Morn Farm near Grifton to observe farrowing houses and feeding on concrete.

Rural Roads Will Get Small Signs

RALEIGH (AP) — Black and white road signs, about the size of an auto license tag, soon will be going up along North Carolina's 58,000 miles of rural roads.

Gov. Hodges displayed the first of the signs Monday at his news conference in Raleigh.

He said the signs will help the highway department in record keeping and will aid the motorist in finding his way along secondary roads.

Navy Patrol Plane Fired On By Two MIG Fighters

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Navy patrol plane was attacked by MIG jet fighters over international waters of the Sea of Japan Monday and one of the crew was seriously wounded, the Defense Department reported today.

The incident, in which two MIG fighters were believed to have made the attack, occurred about 85 miles east of Wonsan, North Korea.

The first reports received here did not make clear whether the American plane returned the fire.

Neither did those reports identify the attacking planes by nationality. The MIGs are Russian-type planes used by the Soviets, Red Chinese and North Koreans.

"Radio reports said the jets attacked without warning, firing tracer ammunition," the Pentagon announcement said.

"Thought to be two in number, they made six firing runs and followed the P4M to within 50 feet of the water as the patrol plane took evasive action. Skies were clear and ceiling unlimited."

"A tail gunner in the U.S. plane was seriously wounded as his gun was knocked out on the first run. He was the only casualty reported."

"Attacking aircraft were silver MIG fighters with red stars aft of their cockpits on the fuselage," the report said.

In Tokyo the U.S. Navy clamped tight secrecy on the incident except to say the wounded crewman is out of danger.

"He'll make it all right," a Navy spokesman said. Present plans are to fly him to the naval hospital in Yokosuka Wednesday.

The attack was started at an altitude of 7,000 feet. The incident, the Pentagon said, took place at 12:36 p.m., Tuesday, Japanese time.

The Defense Department said the plane was on a routine training patrol. It was based at the Iwakuni Marine Corps air facility on the inland sea of Japan's Honshu Island.

"Skillful handling by Lt. Cmdr. Donald Mayer, the pilot, enabled the badly damaged plane to be brought safely into Miho Air Force Base on Honshu," the Pentagon said.

Pentagon records indicate the most recent previous Communist air attack on a U.S. plane in the Far East took place Nov. 17, 1958. In that incident Red fighters attacked an Air Force RB47 over the Sea of Japan. The American plane was not hit.

Another attack, June 12, 1957, involved a naval plane on a routine training flight over Formosa Strait off the Chinese coast. That American plane suffered minor damage from gunfire but there were no casualties.

Similar incidents have been occurring in the Far East area for years.

The P4M normally carries a crew of nine, but the first brief reports from the Far East did not say how many were aboard when the latest incident occurred.

This model of the Navy patrol craft has two piston and two jet engines.

Mayer, the pilot of the plane attacked Monday, is a native of Torrington, Conn., where he was born Sept. 9, 1923.

He is a former enlisted man who was graduated from the Naval Academy in the class of 1947. His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Mayer, live in Litchfield, Conn. His wife lives with him at Iwakuni. They have four children.

Secret Talk By Gromyko, Herter

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter met unexpectedly today at Gromyko's request to discuss the final phase of the Big Four conference on Berlin.

There was immediate speculation among Western diplomats that Gromyko might have some new proposal either on breaking the East-West deadlock over Berlin, or on how to wind up the conference.

Earlier Herter met with British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd to find reports that the Western powers were split over the problem of a summit conference following up the foreign ministers' meeting.

Britain was reported urging U.S. and French consideration of accepting a summit session even if the present meeting ended in failure.

The Soviet foreign minister went to Herter's villa. In another conference crisis last week Herter had gone to Gromyko's villa. The Russian was accompanied by A. A. Solodov, chief of the American Section of the Soviet Foreign Office.

Herter had Assistant Secretary of State Livingston Merchant and Llewellyn Thompson, U.S. ambassadors to Moscow, as his advisers in the meeting.

The Western allies were reported making an 11th hour attempt to hammer out a stopgap accord on Berlin with the Soviet Union in case of threat.

Diplomatic officials said foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France may present in secret session Wednesday a new document setting forth their latest ideas.

Herter and Lloyd conferred for an hour at Herter's villa.

While Western informants were tight-lipped about the meeting, Herter presumably told the British that President Eisenhower continues strongly opposed to a summit conference unless it is justified by some success here.

The stopgap formula under study by Western experts would represent the minimum Western terms for agreeing to a summit meeting—barring a reversal of policy such as the British government apparently is advocating.

Informants indicated the West's approach would temporarily set aside both Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's plan for turning West Berlin into a free city, and the Western plan for restoring East and West Berlin as a united city through a free election.

In general, informants said, Lloyd spelled out Friday the sort of approach the Allies would like to use—on condition the Soviets withdraw their demand for a one-year limit on the Western occupation of Berlin.

Lloyd's starting point was that any new or revised arrangement must leave intact the right of the United States, Britain and France to go to the aid of West Berliners in case of threat.

Indict Eight For Dynamiting Plot

HENDERSON, N.C. — (AP) — Eight men, including four union officials, accused of plotting dynamite violence in the bitter textile strike here, are expected to be tried soon at a special term of court.

The Vance County grand jury returned three separate bills of indictment Monday against each of the men.

They were scheduled to come before Judge William Y. Bickett in Vance Superior Court this afternoon for arraignment, a formality which will give the men a chance to say how they plead to the charges.

Boyd Payton of Charlotte, Carolina director of the Textile Workers Union of America, was named in the indictments, along with three other TWUA officials.

They are Lawrence Gore, a member of Payton's staff; Charles Auslander, chairman of the TWUA Bi-city Joint Board at Spray, N.C.; and John Martin, vice president of Local 578 at the South Henderson plant of the struck Harrier-Henderson Cotton Mills.

Four strikers named in the indictments were Calvin Ray Pegram, Robert Edward Abbott, Warren Walker and Malcolm Jarrell.

Each was freed under $15,000 bond.

The indictments charged the men with conspiring to: (1) dynamite a Carolina Power & Light Co. substation transformer which feeds power to the Harrier-Henderson mills; (2) dynamite the boiler room at the South Henderson mill; and (3) destroy the main office building at the South Henderson mill.

District Solicitor W. H. S. Bur-gwyn Jr. said Monday night that there is no doubt that a special term of Superior Court will be called for the trial. He said it would be in the near future.

Originally, seven men were charged. The grand jury added Martin's name.

Director Walter Anderson of the State Bureau of Investigation has been here for the past two days directing investigation of the case.

The strike began Nov. 17 after the company called for removal of an arbitration clause in the contract. The two mills reopened on limited operations Feb. 16. This was followed by sporadic violence. National Guardsmen have been on the scene since May 12.

Meanwhile, the City Council voted Monday night to hire three additional full-time officers to help the strike situation and to purchase another police car.

Gov. Hodges recently called upon the city and county to employ 150 to 200 additional law enforcement officers to relieve National Guardsmen on patrol duty here.

One councilman said the council's safety and finance committees, which studied the governor's request, felt the city could not afford to employ that many additional men. The county also turned down the governor's request.

Escaped Convict Recaptured After Day-Long Hunt Monday

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A 20-year-old escaped convict was re-captured near Red Banks Church late yesterday afternoon following a day-long search which began when he ran from the Beaufort County Prison Camp road gang while working near Aurora.

The convict, Walter Harris Jr. of Chocowinity, allegedly entered the home of H. A. Brothers near Aurora and took the car keys and sixty cents in change from Mrs. Brothers and fled in the vehicle.

According to Deputy Sheriff W. C. Berry of Aurora, Harris threatened to tie the lady up but he hugged and kissed her when he left, instead.

Prison officials and highway patrolmen had received reports of the stolen car throughout the day but were unable to stop the vehicle.

The prisoner was finally captured near Bell's Fork within sight of the Red Banks Church.

Officials received a report that he had been driving the stolen vehicle in that section and they converged on the area.

Two New Bern prison guards, Sgt. Richard Hardy and Rufus Lewis, were checking a dirt path when they came upon Harris lying on the front seat of the car resting. According to the officers, Harris did not resist apprehension.

Prison officials reported Harris had just purchased some barbecue and was resting before he ate the food.

Harris was originally sentenced to a youthful offender's camp for larceny of an automobile but escaped two times and was convicted on both counts.

He was serving a sentence at the Beaufort camp for convictions from Moore, Pitt, and Beaufort counties on varied charges.

According to L. L. Short, superintendent of the Beaufort County Camp, Harris had not given any trouble at the Washington camp prior to yesterday's escape.

Charges of escape, larceny, and assault on a female have been placed against the prisoner following his short-lived freedom.

Each was freed under $15,000 bond.

The indictments charged the men with conspiring to: (1) dynamite a Carolina Power & Light Co. substation transformer which feeds power to the Harrier-Henderson mills; (2) dynamite the boiler room at the South Henderson mill; and (3) destroy the main office building at the South Henderson mill.

District Solicitor W. H. S. Bur-gwyn Jr. said Monday night that there is no doubt that a special term of Superior Court will be called for the trial. He said it would be in the near future.

Originally, seven men were charged. The grand jury added Martin's name.

Director Walter Anderson of the State Bureau of Investigation has been here for the past two days directing investigation of the case.

The strike began Nov. 17 after the company called for removal of an arbitration clause in the contract. The two mills reopened on limited operations Feb. 16. This was followed by sporadic violence. National Guardsmen have been on the scene since May 12.

Meanwhile, the City Council voted Monday night to hire three additional full-time officers to help the strike situation and to purchase another police car.

Gov. Hodges recently called upon the city and county to employ 150 to 200 additional law enforcement officers to relieve National Guardsmen on patrol duty here.

One councilman said the council's safety and finance committees, which studied the governor's request, felt the city could not afford to employ that many additional men. The county also turned down the governor's request.

Disappointment, But Constructive

Looking back over legislative action during the past four months, there probably are few North Carolinians who are entirely pleased with everything which has been done in Raleigh . . . least of all the members of the General Assembly.

There is probably not a man among the 170 members in the House and Senate who has seen everything go the way he would like it. On at least as many occasions as the average voter, the average legislator has been in disagreement with and disappointed at the final decision made in matters under consideration. But unlike the average voter, the legislator—regardless of his position in any matter—shares a part of the responsibility for what was or was not done because he was a member of the body taking the action.

Each of the legislators who has been in Raleigh since last February carried with him an individual viewpoint on various matters. Among the membership of the General Assembly as a whole there were probably as many different viewpoints on any one item up for consideration as there were different viewpoints among the people of North Carolina.

Yet, when the individual legislators get back to their home districts, they will be praised for some of the stands they took and criticized for others . . . probably in the same breath. But that shouldn't be surprising. It happens every time the legislature meets, and it will continue to happen every two years. Such are the ways of democratic government.

As a whole the legislators have worked hard in Raleigh . . . probably much harder than they would have worked at their regular jobs or professions back home during the same period. They have talked, listened, studied, been buttonholed by colleagues and buttonholed others, and generally moved at a much faster-than-normal pace turning the legislative wheels. They have sacrificed sleep, time and, yes, money by serving the people of North Carolina as members of the General Assembly.

Most of them, like most of the people of the state, will agree that something constructive for North Carolina has been accomplished in Raleigh since February 4. And most of them, like most of the other people of the state, will voice their disappointment at some things which were done and others which were left undone by the 1959 General Assembly.

That Summit Parley Looks Farther Away

A complete about-face could develop any day now in the foreign ministers conference at Geneva, but unless something gives from the Soviet side, the conference will soon collapse in failure.

For six weeks now the Big Four foreign ministers have been meeting in Geneva, apparently accomplishing little toward settlement of the Berlin question. The only suggestions offered by the Soviets consist of the West abandoning Berlin which is of course out of the question. Further, the Soviets in effect have renewed threats to turn control of access routes to West Berlin over to the East Germans if the Western nations do not accept Soviet terms.

So far there has been no indication that the foreign ministers have developed groundwork which would give any reasonable assurance that a summit meeting could accomplish anything. Yet the Soviets, and to a lesser extent the British, appear determined to bring about a summit meeting.

President Eisenhower has said flatly he will not attend a summit meeting unless the foreign ministers conference produced some reasonable hope of reaching agreement on the Berlin situation. Further, he has asserted the United States will not be intimidated by Soviet threats that this or that will be done if a summit meeting does not materialize.

From the viewpoint of the United States at the moment there appears little hope that anything fruitful will come from the foreign ministers talks. A summit meeting seems less assured now than was the case before the Geneva sessions began.

During the meeting in Geneva, the West has offered a number of concessions, only to be rebuffed by impossible demands by the Soviet Union. The next move now must be up to the Soviets. What they will offer will determine not only the outcome of the Geneva conference, but also whether there is an East-West summit conference in the next several months.

The United States must stand firm by its position that it will not abandon West Berlin. If it does otherwise, it will lose far more than West Berlin itself.

Sampling Gets Data On Jobs

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — How does the government know what it's talking about when, every month, it issues figures on how many people in the previous month had or didn't have jobs? Last week the government announced 66,016,000 people were working in May and that in the same month 3,389,000 were jobless. Did it ask questions of those almost 70 million people?

No, it couldn't, possibly. Its figures on total employed and unemployed are estimates, based on samplings. But the government thinks they are, nevertheless, amazingly accurate.

This is the main way it gets those figures. The Census Bureau hires 600 part-time people — mostly housewives and college students — who go to 35,000 homes with prepared questions about who, among those living in each house, has a job, lost a job, or is looking for work.

That seems like a tiny sampling to come up with the announcement on the total number of people working or jobless in the United States.

But the Census Bureau says — because the questions and the locations of the houses are scientifically worked out — that a total estimate of 66,016,000 people working will not be wrong by more than 100,000.

Then 35,000 homes visited by the 600 Census Bureau workers are spread over 330 sample areas in 68 counties. They are not the same every month.

Because of the way the areas are chosen — they include city and farm homes, industrial, commercial and farm areas — the government feels it has a pretty accurate picture of the whole country when the answers to the questions are analyzed.

But the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which works with the Census Bureau in reaching totals and conclusions on employment, has some other checks to guide it, too.

The BLS has arrangements with factories around the country to send it each month their payroll count — meaning how many people they have on their payrolls. These include not only production workers but white collar people, salesmen and bosses, too.

The BLS gets other information from the factories. For instance, the number of hours their employees worked, their hourly and weekly earnings, and the kind of industry they're in.

Still another check is made through the claims jobless workers around the country put in for unemployment compensation. This is not always a precise rundown on the unemployed. Each week many unemployed people, being out of a job so long they have used up all their unemployment benefits, disappear as a statistic from unemployment compensation books.

Before the 1930s there were no direct measurements of the number of jobless persons. The present system of checking got its start during the depression when, because of mass unemployment, there were widely conflicting estimates on the total.

They Follow The Leader

We never cease to be amazed at how people continually follow the leader.

Your columnist was waiting at the stop light headed north on Dickinson Ave. Saturday. There is a double lane at that intersection, one for through traffic and the second for right turns.

Suddenly a car in the right lane started up even though the light hadn't switched from red to green. Immediately two cars behind him and at least two in the second lane roared off behind the lead car. Luckily none of the cars were involved in accidents with vehicles moving into Dickinson from other streets.

Jaycees attending the organization's national convention in Buffalo next week will find 3,000 items of a product "Made in Greenville" waiting for them.

Local club president Brooks Beddingfield said 3,000 pen light batteries, manufactured by National Carbon, were contributed by Frank Presissle, manager of the local plant, for the convention.

Beddingfield said the little batteries, sold under the "Eveready" trade name, are to be placed in the North Carolina booth at the convention.

Delegates from all over the nation will be given the pen light batteries without charge and thus will know they are manufactured in North Carolina and Greenville.

Even the Russians have gotten the hang of the American press release.

Comes an article to the Reflector office from the "Press Bureau, Soviet Exhibition, N.Y. Coliseum."

The article attributed to Ivan Bolshakov, USSR deputy Minister of Foreign Trade, says that the Soviet Exhibition will open in the New York City Coliseum on June 30.

The exhibition will continue for 40 days, according to the release and it will consist of some 10,000 displays, designed to tell Americans about the Soviet Union, the culture progress and aims of its people.

"Extensive documentary materials will show how Russia, once an economically and culturally backward country, has developed after the 1917 Socialist Revolution," the release states.

A similar American Exhibition opens in Sokolniki Park, Moscow shortly after June 30.

Your columnist was under the impression that the Soviets had only recently embraced this peculiarly capitalistic habit of mailing press releases but our news editor says there has been a steady flow of publicity from the Russians in this country.

Opinions In Brief

"BLUE CHIPS" AND SMALL INVESTORS

Sylvia Porter, the well-known financial columnist, writes: "A read-and-run observer of some of the shenanigans in Wall Street today easily might get the impression that the vast majority of little fellows now pouring money into the stock market are going in for wild gambling, are risking the savings of a lifetime in 'cat and dog' stocks, are generally playing the role of utter fools."

"It isn't so," and proof of the fact it isn't so, Miss Porter goes on, is provided by the latest data on MIP — the Monthly Investment Plan — the New York Stock Exchange started in January, 1954. This plan is primarily geared to the needs of the small investor and, under it, stocks can be purchased out of income as little as $40 a quarter. So far some 3 million shares have been bought through MIP, for a total investment of nearly $120 million.

And the most popular MIP stocks are strictly of a "blue chip" character—that is, the issues of national and international corporations with solid records of success and good management behind them. They aren't speculative "penny" stocks—a large part of them sell in the $40 and $50 a share bracket.

Miss Porter concludes: "The basic point is that the little fellow buying this type of stock in this manner is investing, not gambling, following sound rules, not fads."

"And over the years, the odds are he'll make out much better than the in-and-out speculator. He'll also sleep better nights," (Industrial News Review)

Subway Charms A Boy

By ED CREAGH
NEW YORK (AP) — The best way to see New York is with a 7-year-old boy.

He has the bright eyes you once had. You can see the crazy, muddled-up, wonderful, savage city as you never saw it before. Maybe you saw it once in all its sadly undisciplined glory. Now you see it, on your own, as a madhouse run by the inmates. But take your 7-year-old son along and the wonderment, even some of the delight, comes back.

You take him to the top of the Empire State Building. He looks at all four compass points. He nods, reserving his opinion.

Later he says: "Daddy, that was fun — being up in the Empire State Building."

And if this doesn't make you laugh you don't deserve to be a parent.

Some umpire, over 100 stories high.

Then you take the little monster — a term of affection in my family — to Chinatown. He likes it, the way he likes almost any place.

"Daddy," he asks, looking back at the Chinese people going about their business, or otherwise, all around him, "what's the difference between these people and us?"

And if you could answer that question you should be in the United Nations.

Most of all, though, he loves subways.

This will send a shudder through most New Yorkers — and many an ex-New Yorker.

Subways are an invention of the devil, overcrowded, noisy, dirty and frequently frightening.

David thinks they're wonderful.

You take him to see a live television show. He tries to act properly impressed by all the cameras, bright lights and hung-up account executives, but you can see that he's fidgeting. So you leave.

"What would you like to do?" you start to say.

But before you say it he comes on with: "Daddy, couldn't we go someplace in the subway?"

So you go down to the intestines of the city and fight your way into one of those overlighted, overpopulated, mobile slums known as subway cars. He loves it. He stands with a look of almost ecstasy clutching one of those white poles, and is sad when he has to get off.

One night we kept David up after his bedtime while we sat in a restaurant discussing the old days with a friend or two.

Just about the time we expected him to fold he came up with: "Hey, let's get out of here. I want to see Times Square."

So he was taken there. He looked around at possibly the most flamboyant neon lights on earth. He shrugged.

"Let's find a subway station," he said.

We did.

Other Editors Saying Control Must Be Basis

(Raleigh Times)

The bill would have given towns of 2,000 or more population the right to vote on ABC stores has been re-referred to a House Committee. It is to be hoped that the bill will die there.

This bill never should have been introduced in the first place. But, once it was introduced, it should have been killed in committee instead of receiving the favorable report which sent it to the floor of the House.

Threats of a real fight over it caused its re-referral to the same committee which just a day earlier had blessed it with a favorable report.

When the ABC system was set up in North Carolina in 1935, the idea was the control was to be at the basis of all the handling of alcohol. Control was to be the big thing, the central thing, the only reason for the State involving itself in the alcohol business.

It is hard to think that control has been the central theme of some of the legislation proposed during this session. In fact, it is impossible to think that.

Just how would control figure in this idea of letting every little town in the State vote on ABC stores, even though the little town might be located in a county which had voted dry time and time again? The idea there, instead of controlling the sale of alcohol, would be to further the sale of whiskey in an area which had declared that it didn't want whiskey sales.

And, this Legislature has already enacted into law, a measure which cannot by any stretch of the imagination be called something designed to control the sale of whiskey. That is the law which lifts from the shoulders of beer license holders the duty of seeing to it that people don't drink hard liquor in their beer places.

That could easily mean that any beer place in the State that wants to do so could turn itself into a "locker club" and thereby have considerable drinking of whiskey along with the beer drinking. This bill ostensibly was aimed at letting the country club folks have cocktails in the same room where beer is served. And, if it gives the country club folks that right, it just as surely would give dubious privilege to folks in just about any beer place.

The sooner North Carolina's legislators remember that control must be at the basis of all liquor legislation, the better off they'll be. A great many people, including some personal drys, think that the ABC system is the best way to try to handle liquor.

But, once control was taken out of the picture, the ABC system would lose a lot of friends.

NOT FOR WORLD OF 1959

"However appropriate they might have seemed at the time they have no help to give expanding America of the Space Age. The problem now is not surpluses of savings and investment but shortages."

"The key to economic growth is imaginative enterprise. What we need, on one hand, are real savings for investment and, on the other, incentives to put funds to work and to attract sustained effort from creative individuals."

The letter quotes a statement by Arthur Burns, former Chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors: "I don't know a surer way of killing off the incentive to invest than by imposing taxes which are regarded by people as punitive."

The letter continues: "At the same time, excessive tax rates sharply cut the rewards attainable for extra effort by ambitious and industrious people who are trying to climb the economic ladder. . . . The question is whether the rising young executive still has incentive to drive himself toward the rigors of top management positions or whether taxes have shaved the rewards to the point where a more relaxed life seems preferable."

TAXES HIT LITTLE PEOPLE

"Although many people think we are 'soaking the rich,' it is small business, the proving ground for so many business leaders and the seedbed for industrial giants, which suffers the most under punitive tax rates. They dry up the sources of the most crucial need — venture capital.

"The personal income tax rate progression saps the unincorporated small businessman's ability to build his business. It also chokes off an important source of outside funds in years gone by: the successful individual who once found pride and satisfaction as well as profit in giving a financial lift to a budding enterprise, no longer has the means to do so."

Greenville Man Is Named Washington Post Editor

WASHINGTON D.C. — Bernice Jenkins, a native of Greenville, has been named news editor of the Washington Post. Jenkins graduated from Greenville High School in 1941 after editing the prize-winning school paper, Green Lights. He attended East Carolina College and served two years as editor of the Teco Echo, college newspaper.

In two years with the Durham Sun (1943-45) he was a reporter, sports editor, and telegraph editor. He later was editor of the Jacksonville, N.C., weekly Record for one year and was with the Wilmington Star-News four years, the last three as managing editor of the News.

Jenkins came to the Post in 1951 as an assistant world editor. A year later he became makeup editor and three years after that was named the assistant news editor.

The son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Sidney Jenkins of 109 West Ninth Street in Greenville, he was graduated with honors in history from the George Washington University here in 1956. His wife, the former Georgia King of Durham, was an honor graduate of East Carolina College in 1948.

Kidnap Charges For 12-Year-Old

SPARTA, Tenn. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy who told police he wanted to run away from home because he was mad at his father faces charges of kidnapping, assault with intent to kill and auto theft today.

Mrs. Fred Alcorn, 26, told Sheriff W. M. Hobbs that Billy Ross, a neighbor, pointed a .22 rifle at her as she hung up her washing Monday. He tied her hands behind her, she said, forced her to lie on the floorboard of her car and started to drive away. She said he tied her daughter, Debbie, 4, to a dresser drawer in the house.

Mrs. Alcorn said she worked free, ran in the house and telephoned police as the boy was trying to start the car's engine a second time. Neither the woman nor the little girl was injured.

Ross was found four hours later when he appeared at the home of a farmer, Cecil Eller of Blue Springs Community, about three miles from here. The car had run into a ditch on a rural road. Sheriff Hobbs quoted the 135-pound sixth-grader as saying he planned to steal a car and run away because his father, Virgil Ross, "was always complaining at me."

The boy was held for a juvenile court hearing.

Predicts Bumper Year Of Suicide

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The Bexar County medical examiner, Dr. Robert Hausman, predicts "a bumper year in suicides" for San Antonio.

Three persons took their lives Monday, bringing the total for the year to 29—8 more than at this time in 1958.

Dr. Hausman labeled the hanging death of Nathan Lerner, 64, and shooting deaths of Alfrida Thomas, 31, and Harry C. Martin, 77, as suicides.

Find California Farm Efficiency Is Greater

WINSTON-SALEM — Greater efficiency is essential in agricultural operations — that is the California story that two plane loads of Carolina bankers and farm leaders brought back home after a tour last week of the state's major farm areas.

They were on the "1959 Farm Opportunities and Marketing Caravan" sponsored by Wachovia Bank and Trust Company in cooperation with the N.C. Department of Agriculture and N.C. State College.

Agricultural efficiency in California has been achieved through mechanization and insistence on high quality products, starting with production, through processing and marketing. Californians told their guests: The result: California today is the nation's No. 1 state in farm income.

This efficiency was obvious in dairying, in poultry, in truck farming and cattle feeding, in cotton, citrus and fruits and in other fields of farm production inspected by the "Carolina caravaners."

Why?

"We had to do it," Dr. George Mehren of the University of California, told the group. "For many years we were so isolated from the nation's markets that to sell our products we had to offer better quality and lower price than our competition. To accomplish this, we had to have greater efficiency in all three phases of agribusiness — in production, in processing and in marketing."

And they did it with only a small fraction of the rainfall that is available in the Southeast. In addition, pointed out Wayne A. Corpening, Wachovia vice president, "We in the Carolinas are closer to the prime markets of the nation. With California-type efficiency, we could sell a much greater volume of our farm products and thereby increase substantially the income of our people."

Agribusiness is big business in California, the Carolinians found. In Fresno County alone, farm income last year exceeded $370 million—more than many states. This was accomplished through intensive production and scheduled year-round production and processing. Similarly, in Tulare and Kern Counties, also visited by the Caravan, high farm income was found to be a result of efficient marketing, processing and production.

The Carolinians returned to Winston-Salem and Raleigh-Durham Sunday by plane after touring California in four buses since last Monday. They had started in Los Angeles, viewing dairy and poultry operations and vegetable packing and marketing facilities in that area.

By Wednesday they were in the rich San Joaquin Valley, inspecting the cattle feeding operation of the Kern County Land Company, the washing and packing of potatoes and the irrigated cotton and potato acreages of W.B. Camp and Sons.

(Mr. and Mrs. Camp are native Carolinians. He and three sons are alumni of Clemson College and they also have farms in South Carolina).

Further up the valley, the growing, handling and packing of citrus, tomatoes, berries, peaches, vegetables, plums and other products of the area came in for close inspection. By Friday the caravan had crossed the coastal mountains to the intensified truck farming area around Monterey where they saw the field harvesting of strawberries and lettuce, strawberry freezing operations and lettuce cooling in preparation for marketing.

Throughout the trip the group saw numerous examples of producers cooperating to provide sufficient volume to support an efficient size marketing agency. That was true of oranges, of peaches and plums, of raising and of practically every farm product.

An outstanding example of volume coupled with efficiency is the egg grading and distributing plant—world's largest of its kind—of the Nulaid Egg Marketing Company near San Francisco, which the caravaners saw. In 1958 the plant had 10,500 egg producers and handled 1.9 million cases of eggs.

In talking to the caravaners about the fantastic growth of agriculture in California, Dr. George Alcorn, Director of the State Agricultural Extension Service, said, "We cannot lie fast enough to keep up with the truth about it. And it is still growing. The Carolinians noticed, as additional land is reclaimed and greater use is made of irrigation in fields which once were waste land."

A great part of this growth has been possible because the farmers can get credit and financial planning services from California banks. Jesse W. Tapp, Chairman of the Board of the Bank of America, said that approximately $1 billion of credit is available for agriculture from the banks of California.

Dr. D.W. Colvard, dean of the School of Agriculture of N.C. State College, at the conclusion of the caravan said that he and his associates on the tour had "learned a number of principles of California agriculture that can be applied successfully in North Carolina."

John L. Reitzel, North Carolina's assistant commissioner of agriculture, was "particularly impressed with the marketing facilities available in California. If we only had just a few more like them. . . . W.B. Camp set goals for an agricultural economy, whether in California or the Carolinas: "Operations should be large enough for the farmer to gross enough on it to provide an adequate net income to support his family."

He was also optimistic in his feeling that the future belongs to the Southeast: "It offers the greatest opportunity in American agriculture—when you who live there are ready and determined to take advantage of it," he said.

Labor Turnover Costly For Many

By SAM DAWSON
 AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)—Labor turnover is costly in many industries—about competing with cheap labor costs abroad.

The rate of turnover varies widely among industries and is particularly prevalent among the younger workers—the ones that companies have gone to pains and expense to train.

On the other hand, some firms complain because seniority rules and fringe benefits tend to freeze skilled labor to its job, making for a scant labor pool on which to draw. This especially hurts growing firms and new growth industries.

It is particularly true of older workers who often will remain idle after being laid off rather than take a new job. They'd rather wait the chance to be called back to the old job with all its accumulated benefits than to start in a new one at the bottom of the ladder.

From management's point of view, seniority and fringe benefits have become such a large part of labor costs that employers hesitate to take on new workers when business expands seasonally or temporarily, preferring to pay overtime to present help as less costly in the end.

Labor turnover hurts a company in various ways.

It costs money to train a replacement—not to mention loss from having trained the one who moved on. Often turnover involves bringing a lower paid employee (such as a piece worker) into a higher paid job with higher minimum standards. Turnover also often means work spoilage, a slow down in output and sometimes production shortages which may lose sales.

The cash costs to all industry of labor turnover is estimated by the Wolf Management Engineering Co. of Chicago as around one billion dollars a year. A survey of several industries indicates the loss from lower production rates is even higher.

Replies from 768 textile and apparel firms show an average loss of $398 on each employee who leaves his job after being trained, to be replaced by a green hand.

The annual turnover in this industry is put at 30 per cent. Cutting back on this loss might help American firms to meet competition from low cost foreign textiles.

In some other industries the cost is estimated as high as $2,000 per lost worker. Lowest turnover rate among industries surveyed was 12 per cent in fabricated metal production.

What can be done to cut down turnover?

With the young task is hard. They tend to go from job to job seeking the one that pleases them most.

But Richard P. Miller, assistant general manager of the Chicago firm, has ideas on why some companies have such high rates of labor turnover each year. He cites:

Failure to create a qualified labor pool by advertising; failure to use employment agencies for preliminary screening; poor interviewing and testing procedures; failure to find why employees quit in a particular plant and failure to find out what qualities are typical of stable employees.

But, says Miller, America's historically high labor turnover. They contend such mobility keeps the economy flexible, opens up new industrial regions, makes it possible for new industries to start and grow.

Goldwater Cites Centralization

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) said here Monday night that he believes in state's rights, but that the nation is "tending more and more toward a centralized, bureaucratic government."

Goldwater, who spoke at a $100-a-plate dinner for North Carolina Republicans, said:

"I believe the Constitution means today exactly what it meant when it was written. I believe in the 10th Amendment which clearly provides for state's rights."

But the senator also said, "We are a welfare state. We are tending more and more toward a centralized, bureaucratic government, and drifting away from the Constitution."

Goldwater, who said his state has no segregation problem, said states that do should be left alone to solve them.

Goldwater reserved some jabs for former President Harry Truman. He said Truman stopped the missile program in 1947, and it was up to President Eisenhower to start up again in 1953.

Goldwater also told the gathering, "The Democrats went for 20 years telling lies about Herbert Hoover. If we will just tell the truth about Harry Truman, we can get elected forever."

Archie San Romani, Jr., is following in his father's footsteps, but at a faster pace. A senior at Wichita East High, young San Romani is rated the finest school-boy mile prospect around. Dad San Romani will be remembered as a slightly built Kansas State Teachers College undergraduate who came charging down the homestretch to stage some thrilling mile duels with Glenn Cunningham, George Bontroun, Gene Venzke and others who made the race most exciting a generation ago. Archie Sr., was a great mile in his day. He was a member of the 1936 Olympic team and, in 1937, won the Princeton Invitational Mile in 4:07.2 — five-tenths of a second off the then existing world record.

As a high school runner, Papa San Romani's marks can't stand up to his son's performances. The best time Senior did in the mile was 4:35.3, compared with Junior's scholastic record of 4:13.6. That certainly points up the improvement of the breed.

"He runs a lot like I did," said the proud father, "only a lot faster. He's doing much better than I thought he would. Why, I would have been delighted if he had just gotten down to 4:30 as a schoolboy. I look for him to get under four minutes in the next three or four years. There's no telling what he'll do, he has his sights set so high."

The senior San Romani takes no bows for his son's success on the cinders, insisting that his boy's high school coach, Bob Timmons, should get credit for doing such a grand job. Naturally, Pop is ready to give his son the benefit of his experience — when asked, He's proud of that boy, and pleased that he decided of his own accord to be a mile.

All-Star Softball Group To Play Graniteer Team

The Graniteers, winners of the first half of the Industrial Softball League, will take on an All-Star outfit at Guy Smith Stadium Wednesday night.

The select group has been chosen from the other four clubs, Carolina Dairy, finishing in a second place tie with two other teams, paced the group with seven men on the club. Coffman's had four members and Quality Oil and Greenville Parts and Metal had two and one man, respectively.

Selected from the Carolina Dairy were Bill Altman, Tom Boyd, Jerry Warren, Bob Dash, Bob Moore, Earl Tripp and Brownie Tripp.

Representing Coffman's Mens Wear will be Winfield Tingle, Charlie Yates, James McRoy and Charlie Padgett. Harvey Strickland and Jerry Carpenter were chosen from the Quality Oil and Bill Bein was the lone member of the Parts and Metal club.

Leroy Sasser of Quality Oil will manage the All Star outfit. Ike Riddick, Dan Gordon, and Dalton Owens got only one of the four hits given up by College View Cleaners pitchers last night but his was a grand-slam four-bagger in the first inning and put the Home Builders well on their way to an easy 11-3 victory.

The Cleaners defeated themselves as their pitchers were unable to find the plate. Joe Harper started on the mound but walked the first four batters and was relieved by Harrington, who had the opportunity to serve Owens his perfect pitch.

Harrington came on in the first inning with the bases loaded and nobody out. Owens drove his four-bagger to left-center field and the game was all over except for the final score.

Alton Clapp was the third College View pitcher and had little better luck than his preceding cohorts.

Bennie Hardee received credit for the victory. He allowed only four hits in posting the fourth win of the season for the pace-

Win Or Lose, Haney Is Planning To Quit Game

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Whether the Milwaukee Braves win the National League pennant—and a World Series—this may be Fred Haney's last year as manager.

Haney has been appointed vice-president of the Studio City Bank, which opens next month in the San Fernando Valley, and he is anxious to spend more of his time here among his relatives and close friends. He has spent 42 years in baseball, is 61 years old, and says:

"I've reached a point in life where I want to enjoy myself, and that place is right here."

Haney said that whether the Braves win or lose the pennant the World Series will have no effect on his decision.

"If I feel at the end of this year as I do now, this may be my last season in baseball," Haney said. "When I came home this time I said to myself: 'Look what all this?' I go over and see my mother, who is 92, and my four grandchildren, and I enjoy being home.

"If I stay in baseball it will be with Milwaukee."

Haney said he had not discussed his status with Milwaukee officials and that, in fact, he hadn't expected to say anything about it at this time, except that "this just came from my heart."

John McHale, the Braves' general manager, said in Milwaukee he was surprised at Haney's statement. "This is the first we've heard of it," said McHale.

TAIPEI (AP)—The Republic of China Olympic Committee passed a resolution today expressing determination to battle for representation at both the 1960 Olympic Games at Rome and the Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif.

Cleveland's revived Indians, once more thumping home runs, suddenly are back in the American League lead after winning six straight in a scramble to stay ahead of the fast-closing Detroit Tigers.

The Indians, counting all their runs on three homers, shot back on top with a 5-1 victory at Boston Monday night for a .002 percentage point edge over Chicago's idle White Sox. But the Tigers closed within 1½ games of the lead by handing Hoyt Wilhelm his first defeat of the season in a 3-1 victory at Baltimore — their 18th in a 23-game rocket ride from 11th in the cellar.

Washington ripped Kansas City 9-5, with Harmon Killebrew hammering his 22nd home run for the Senators, in the only other game. In the National League, Los Angeles trimmed Milwaukee's first place lead to one game, beating the Braves 4-0.

The Indians backed up Gary Blyden's three-hit pitching with solo homers by Jim Baxes and Woody Held and a clinching three-run shot by Minnie Minoso, who broke a 1-1 tie by tagging an 0-2 pitcher in the fourth inning.

The Indians, who hit only five home runs in their skid from the top, now have belted 17 homers in their streak—one shy of the AL record for six games set by the 1936 Yankees. It all began last Wednesday, when Rocky Colavito triggered the blasting with his record-tying four in one game at Baltimore.

Since then, Cleveland has one game. Colavito is the individual leader in the streak with six. Minoso is next with four, three in three games in two days and good for a dozen runs.

The homers made it a breeze for Bell, who struck out nine but walked six while claiming a 6-5 record. The young right-hander had trouble only from Jackie Jensen, who followed Pete Runnels' single with an RBI double in the first inning, then singled for the other Red Sox hit in the sixth.

The Tigers, who have won six of their last seven, made it three in a row after getting only two infield hits for five innings off Wilhelm (9-1), who had won 10 straight since last September 16. Then they rapped the knuckling right-hander for four hits and three runs in the sixth, ending his string of scoreless innings at 19.

Singles by Eddie Yost, Al Kaline and Larry Osborne, plus a double by Harvey Kuenn, Charlie Maxwell's sacrifice fly and a passed ball, did it. Then Kuenn, who was 3 for 3 and regained the AL bat lead from Kaline (.361 to .357), put it away with a two-run homer in the seventh—the first off

Erskine Retiring From Active List

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Carl Erskine—the only active major league pitcher who has thrown two no-hit games—is through.

Refusing to let the Los Angeles Dodgers carry him four more weeks, when he would become a 10-year man under the players' pension plan, the handsome little right-hander asked Monday night to be placed on the voluntarily retired list.

"When your time comes," he said, "the decision is not too hard to make. You know what's right."

"I came to the conclusion that this club really needs help in pitching. It's a young staff, so everybody has to be able to pitch a couple of days in a row if necessary. I just figured I couldn't give it 100 per cent any more."

In a game where most men need a sleeve full of tricks to survive, the 32-year-old Erskine had been playing with no trump card.

"In my later games," he said, "I knew I had to be extremely careful. It's true that the less actual velocity or stuff you have, the less mistakes you can make. When you get to the point where you're relying a lot on a change of pace—with no fastball to fall back on—you've really got to be careful."

He worked 23 1-3 innings this year, lost three games and won none, and had an earned run average of 7.71.

Erskine won 122 games during his career and lost 78. His lifetime ERA before this season was 3.94.

Carl threw his first no-hitter in 1952 against the Chicago Cubs, missing a perfect game by the margin of a walk—issued to a pitcher. In 1953, he set a World Series record by striking out 14 New York Yankees in a single game. And, in 1956, he pitched his second no-hitter, against the Giants.

Erskine said he'll probably go to New York late this summer to join an organization that operates boys' summer camps.

For pension purposes, Erskine will be credited with nine full seasons.

Kiwanis Topples Jaycees, 5-4, In Uphill Fight

The Jaycees, first half winners in the North State League, saw a rougher road ahead as they were topped by Kiwanis yesterday afternoon, 5-4. In the second half opener.

Kiwanis fought an uphill battle in upsetting the club which handled the rest of the league at will in the first half of the season.

The victors came from a 3-0 deficit to tie the game at 4-4 in the fifth inning. A single by Linwood Manning and a double by Jimmy Ashby, the winning pitcher, highlighted the two-run rally.

Kiwanis surged into in front for the first time in their half of the first inning. Ray Ward had the only hit of the inning but an error aided in scoring the winning run.

Ashby gave up a walk in the final inning but struck out two to survive the frame without any serious trouble.

The Lions and Texaco, a couple of clubs that tied for second place in regular season play, will meet Wednesday to open their second half of the season.

Raleigh, Wilson Each Win Tilts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wilson and Raleigh, only two games apart in their Carolina League pennant battle, came through with victories Monday night in extra inning games.

Wilson belted two relief pitchers for seven hits and seven runs in the 14th inning to hand Winston-Salem an 8-1 defeat.

Raleigh, meanwhile, scored four runs in the top of the ninth to tie the score and rallied for two more in the 12th to grab a 6-4 victory from Durham.

Winston-Salem and Wilson each scored a run in the 13th inning of their marathon battle after the regulation nine innings ended in a scoreless tie. A three-run homer by Larry Elliott and a three-bagger by Duncan Campbell highlighted Wilson's seven-run outburst.

Raleigh, held to three hits for eight innings, shelled Larry Foster from the mound in the ninth to tie the regulation game at 4-all and defeat Durham in the 12th. It was Durham's eighth consecutive loss, tying the club's longest losing streak in the league's history. The 1958 team also lost eight in a row.

Greensboro defeated Burlington in a doubleheader at Greensboro 6-4 and 10-3.

The double victory stretched Greensboro's win streak to five straight and enabled it to leave the cellar. Don Lock was the batting star for the Yankees. He blasted a pair of home runs in the second game and had a double and single in the opening contest.

Tonight's games: Durham at Greensboro, Burlington at Wilson and Raleigh at Winston-Salem.

NAIA GOLF TOURNEY

Moose Wallop Pepsi, 11-3, To Begin Second Half Play

Moose indicated yesterday that they have no intentions of finishing the second half of the Tar Heel League in the cellar, a place where they stayed most of the first half. They opened their second half play yesterday by downing Pepsi-Cola, 11-3.

The Moose didn't show too much hitting power but as it turned out they didn't need it as they picked up six bases on balls and were aided by four errors in the one-sided win.

A double by Ricky Webb got the scoring started in the second and in the third clutch singles by Gary Hodges and Hubert Evans paved the way to four more runs.

Larry Godwin and Charles Hudson had doubles in the fifth to score three more runs.

Beverly Hanson Wins OnPlayoff

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Beverly Hanson, afflicted all year with an acute case of second place miseries, cured her troubles Monday and won the American Women's Open. The willowy Indian of Atlanta, Ga., on the first hole of a playoff to collect first prize money of $1,247.35 after finishing runnerup seven times since her last tournament victory in 1958.

Gary Hodges worked the distance for the winners and scattered five hits over the victory. Le-muel Combs was the only member of the losers to collect two hits.

Greenville Tobacco Company and Exchange open their second half play today with the Elks and Pepsi-Cola slated to play tomorrow.

Morrow Returns To Face Rivals

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—Four years ago sprinter Bobby Morrow blazed to his first national victory on the cinder path here at the University of Colorado.

Now, weighted with honors, including three Olympic gold medals, a lame Bobby Morrow faces on these same cinders the biggest threat to his No. 1 world ranking.

In the National AAU Track and Field Championships Friday and Saturday, Morrow runs against a classic field. It was in the 1953 NAAU that Morrow, an Abilene Christian sophomore then, won his first national crown with a 9.5 seconds run in the 100 yard dash.

The 23-year-old, 6-foot-2, 170-pounder lowered the NAAU mark to 9.4 last year.

His chief challengers are Bill Woodhouse, 21, 5-foot-10, Abilene Christian senior from Mason City, Iowa, and Ray Norton, San Jose, Calif., State senior. Like Morrow, both have churned the 100 in world record equalling official times of 9.3 seconds.

Several other collegians who've raced the distance in official 9.4

are in the field. They include Charlie Tidwell of Kansas, winner of the NCAA championship at Lincoln last Saturday with a wind-blown 9.3 Orlando Hadley of Oklahoma State and Bob Poynter, San Jose State.

Winner of 11 races in 14 starts this season, Morrow scored his last victory May 15 in the Coliseum Relays at Los Angeles.

End 14 Days Of Nonstop Bowling

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP)—Idaho State College students Paul Fuchs, 23, and Roy Braun, 20, went fishing today as they rested up following 14 days of nonstop bowling. They claimed it set a record.

The two quit Monday because neither had strength to continue. During their total 336 games, averaging five games an hour and 172 pins a game. The best score, by Braun, was 241.

They said the old record was 13 days—312 hours—but didn't know where, when or by whom it was set.

Says Patterson Trains Himself

CHATHAM, N.J. (AP)—World heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson may not have much to say, but he's strictly on his own when training decisions are made. "This has been going on for several years," said manager Gus D'Amato today as Patterson started his final week of serious training for his June 25 title defense against Sweden's Ingemar Johansson in the Yankee Stadium. "But we haven't said anything about it. Floyd is the type who needs no trainer. He's that sharp."

D'Amato merely keeps a close eye on his prize chattel. He does all the talking, but looks for other things to do when Patterson starts his training sessions.

"I've heard all this talk about Floyd being overtrained," scowled D'Amato. "But it doesn't mean a thing. He knows exactly when he's had enough. He decides when, where and how long to work out. And I'll tell you something else. This boy simply cannot be overtrained. He can work all he wants to and still not be overtrained."

A romantic suspense novel by MARTHA ALBRAND A SPY at MONTE CARLO

CHAPTER 24

Louis Anet's room was dark except for the thin light from the lamp post on the corner, that seeped in from the street. Without turning on the light, Mark Travers walked into the room and over to the windows.

There was no balcony on which anybody could crouch and nothing moved on the street below. He closed the shutters and drew the curtains before he went back to the door and snapped on the light.

The room was empty. It had no other door than the one through which he had entered. An old-fashioned, double brass bed, a night table, a cupboard, a table, two comfortable chairs.

On the table stood a radio, an open tin box and a tin of tobacco — English tobacco, the same kind he had seen on board the Anemone. Two books, one on aqua lungs, the other on radio-telegraphy. Both carried marks of intensive handling. A couple of scientific magazines. Nothing else.

He opened the closet. The door creaked as if rebelling against such violation. Three suits, a coat in a moth bag, several pairs of shoes — expensive shoes on lasts. He pulled out the drawers of the chest. Socks, shirts, stockings, underwear. Nowhere the picture of a woman, a letter, writing utensils. He heard a noise behind him and swung around, but it was nothing, only a sigh of the floor boards.

He took a look into the corridor before he went to the bed, lifted the mattress and put it back when he saw there was nothing hidden underneath.

He knelt, lay flat on his belly, and saw two large, flat pieces of luggage under the bed. Heavy, metal luggage, painted gray. He had some trouble getting them out from under the bed without making too much noise. They were locked.

A piece of wire would do the trick. He remembered the tool box near the radio. Not quite five minutes later, the locks gave.

Before him, neatly arranged in cotton wool, lay an assortment of weapons, pistols, guns, bullets, hand grenades, fuses, pins, detonators, everything necessary to assemble bombs.

Mark's hands were shaking when he closed the lid over his discovery. It was impossible to believe that Guy Constant did not know what the man with whom he had worked for almost three years was up to, impossible to believe that Louis Anet would dare to use the Anemone to smuggle arms to the Algerian rebels without his employer's knowledge, impossible to think . . . The sound of a car stopping, of steps in the street, of a door being opened and closed.

Mark didn't bother to push back the trunks. He switched off the light, flattening himself against the wall so that the door would hide and shelter him when it was opened. Then he heard the front door slam again, this time with a heavy thud.

Had Anet, seeing Fleur at this time of night, guessed that he had been found out? But Fleur would not have let him go.

She was too alert not to make up some sort of story that would sound logical enough to detain him. Then, through the night, came a scream, stifled immediately, followed by complete silence.

Mark was out of the room and down the stairs within a matter of seconds. But the chair in which Fleur had been sitting when he had left her was empty.

"What's going on here?" The night watchman came forward, pulling at his nightgown. "Can't a fellow have his well-earned sleep? You darned young people, you — the devil take your whole generation."

The moment Mark opened the door, a car, parked directly in front of his, a long, black sedan with no lights on, shot around the corner and into the night.

Whoever had entered the Pension Select had kidnapped Fleur. But they are only using her, Mark told himself, as he stepped on the accelerator of his car, using her to lure me into following them.

Otherwise they would not have waited until I could see their car. Or they would have punctured my tires, to make it impossible for me to pursue them.

He could not remember ever having been so calm as at this moment. All that seemed to matter was that Fleur would not be hurt. Of course it had been incredibly careless of him, irresponsible, to let her come with him. He should have seen her home and gone alone.

There was no excuse for what he had done. But it was too late now to indulge in feelings of guilt. It was not even worth while to watch the car ahead of him. He knew he was not intended to lose sight of it.

Now they were in front of the palace. He could see the light of the moon silvering the piles of cannon balls on the square. A little while later he recognized the stadium.

Then they were driving past the aquarium, then through narrow streets up a mountain, and he could see, from far above, the fireworks of the Casino exploding in hundreds of colors against the night-blue sky. A little while later he recognized the gate that led into the Gardens.

I won't let them confuse me, he told himself as the car ahead seemed to disappear downhill. I will not lose my sense of direction. Somewhere the car will stop, probably in a one-way street too small to turn in, in front of a house.

That's the moment I have to watch for. I must not let Fleur be carried into a house. He tried to read street signs, but he was passing them too swiftly, and he could remember nothing except a few landmarks which were repeated as the car ahead passed them again and again, each time taking a different way.

I'm like a dog running behind an electric rabbit, he thought, his calm wearing thin. The idea that he could take the initiative came quite unexpectedly. And when it came, the solution seemed so simple that fury filled him for not having thought of it before.

There was no reason whatsoever for him to do exactly what they wanted and walk into their trap. He could force them to fight on his terms.

He waited until they had again turned into a narrow street. Then, instead of following the car, he stopped and turned his squarely to block the street. Then he got out and hid in a pillared entrance, a good twenty yards away from where he had created a roadblock.

If his assumption was right, that Fleur had been kidnapped to lure him on, the driver of the black sedan would notice that Mark was no longer following him, would turn back to see what had happened, would have to stop or at least slow down to back out.

As the minutes ticked slowly away, Mark's tension mounted until he could feel it like something alive pressing against his chest, pushing the air out of his lungs, making it impossible to breathe.

But what if he was wrong? What if it was not Anet who had come to the Select but another of Tim-gad's men, someone who didn't know that the girl he had kidnapped was Guy Constant's sister. In that case he might kill her.

Mark was close to despair when he heard the sound of a motor, caught between the houses on both sides of the street. With its headlights full on, the black sedan came slowly into view. It stopped.

The driver, apparently undecided what to do, remained at the wheel. Mark could see him only as a dim outline.

"They rolled across the cobblestones, against the wall of a house, two equally strong men fighting for survival . . ." and so Martha Albrand's novel comes swiftly to a climax here tomorrow.

Census Queries On Appliances

Questions on the ownership of several kinds of household appliances will be asked in the June Current Population Survey, announced Joseph R. Norwood of the U. S. Census Bureau's regional field office in Charlotte, N.C.

Owners will be asked when electric and gas ranges, sewing machines, and electric toasters were acquired and whether similar items were taken out of service since June 1, 1958. The household appliance information is being collected for the U. S. Department of Agriculture for use in preparing estimates of replacement needs, in budget counseling, and for research in family living costs.

The Current Population Survey will be conducted here and in 329 other areas of the country during the week of June 15. Information will be collected locally by Mrs. Miriam M. Moore of Grifton.

Local Man Builds Cabin Cruiser In His Back Yard

HIS PRIDE AND JOY . . . Simmons stands beside the home-made wheel and control panel.

A cabin cruiser, complete with a fresh water system, stove, bunks, has been constructed in the back yard of a local home.

The cruiser was successfully launched Saturday afternoon in Washington by its builders.

The 26-foot craft is the brain child of Earl S. Simmons, who is a heavy machinery mechanic, a field far removed from the wood-working trade.

Simmons laid the keel for the home-made boat in the backyard of his home at 305 Harvey Drive, last June and according to him, has averaged working on the craft at least three hours a day since. His brother-in-law, R. H. "Buck" Griffin, also a mechanic, helped with the problems of construction.

The craft is fully equipped with a Grey Marine engine, 70-gallon gas capacity, a fresh water system, stove, ice boxes, and bunks for sleeping four.

Simmons said he had no idea how much the boat has cost him. He added it weighs in the neighborhood of 4,000-5,000 pounds.

People seeing the sleek craft would never think it was home-made by amateurs.

This is the second boat Simmons has built. Several years ago he constructed a 22-foot craft but sold it because it was not what he wanted.

When asked if he did much fishing, Simmons replied he has not done much in the past but hopes to in the future.

The boat will be kept at Harker's Island for a while but Simmons plans to dock it at Morehead in the future.

"CAROL ANN" . . . the 26 foot back yard built boat.

'Never Worked So Hard' Asserts Sen. Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-NC) says he's worked hard all his life but never as hard as he has in the year since he became a senator.

The Saxapahaw textile manufacturer, who is up for re-election next year, came to Congress by appointment of Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina to fill a vacancy created by the death of Sen. W. Kerr Scott. He was elected last year for the term ending Jan. 3, 1960.

"Frankly I don't know where I'll find the time to campaign, but I will," said Jordan, pointing to a pile of letters on his desk about a foot high.

"I cleaned out that letter box before I went home last night," he said. "I like to answer people right away."

He never seems to hurry but he gets a lot done.

Jordan was the sponsor of the tobacco price support bill which President Eisenhower is expected to sign shortly. It passed both the House and Senate despite a furious fight against it by the American Farm Bureau.

The bill is designed to save the world market for American tobacco by leveling off prices supports at the 1958 level for about five years.

He also backed a provision in the wheat bill which allows a farmer to plant up to 12 acres without allotment or penalty.

His great interest is water.

"If North Carolina is going to progress in manufacturing we have got to have water. We must store it. We must have a bunch of dams," he said.

He commented that the last time he was in the area where the Wilkesboro Reservoir is to be built on the Yadkin River he saw two plants which had been idle since

Generosity Got Him In Trouble; Law Understands

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—A Topeka teenager who got into trouble with the law because of a generous impulse has found that the law also can be generous.

Last week, George Anderson, 17, noticed that time had expired on two downtown parking meters. He didn't know the owners of the offending cars, but he put a penny in each meter to save the motorists from a ticket.

"I just thought it would be a good deed and I didn't think I was doing anything wrong," Anderson said.

But Topeka has an ordinance prohibiting the depositing of coins in a meter to extend parking time past the legal limit. Anderson was arrested by a policeman who saw him put the pennies in the meter.

Nonetheless, the city attorney, Carl Zimmerman, decided Monday that evidence against Anderson was insufficient and dropped the charge.

Mercy Flight Was For Wife

DENVER (AP)—As a pilot and good neighbor, Tom Knight of Riverton, Wyo., and his single-engine lightplane have flown about 500 mercy errands in the past 12 years.

He made another Monday, from Riverton to Denver.

On a stretcher lashed down behind the pilot's seat was a pale woman whose doctor ordered her rushed here for exploratory surgery. The woman is Knight's wife, Winifred.

She was taken to St. Luke's Hospital.

Pitt Firemen's Ass'n To Be Considered At Meeting

WINTERVILLE — Representatives of all fire departments in Pitt County will meet in Winterville on Wednesday night, to look into the possibility of forming a Pitt Firemen's Association.

Spokesman for the group, Roy Hardee, president of the Greenville Volunteer Fire Department, said that the meeting was being held after a number of departments in the county had indicated their desire to see such an association formed.

The Winterville Fire Department is being host for the meeting, with a barbecue supper for the two representatives invited from each department. Time is 6:45, at the Fire Department.

"We would like to extend an invitation to any of the groups which are now planning to form fire departments in any area of the county, Grimesland, Simpson and Eastern Pines community have made definite steps in this direction. A number of others are in the planning stages. One of these has already indicated their desire to attend the meeting," Hardee said.

In addition to voting their views of the formation of an association, the group will hear a discussion on the formation and operation of the Nash County Firemen's Association. Hardee said that Nash County Fire Marshal Perry O'Berry has accepted an invitation to talk to the group along with President of the Nash County Firemen's Association Bruce Brown of Rocky Mount. The Nash Association is made up of both town and rural fire departments, or combination.

Nash County has built an outstanding record in the field of fire fighting, which they can be justly proud of, and has been

Hardy Retiring After 44 Years

The board of directors of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company announced yesterday the retirement of H. N. Hardy, chairman of its executive committee, to be effective August 1.

On the date of his retirement Hardy will have completed 44 years of continuous service with the company. His entire career has been in its leaf department.

Starting as a buyer, he progressed to supervisor of leaf tobacco buyers, general leaf supervisor, and, in 1948, general manager of the leaf department.

He was elected to the board of directors in 1945 and was made a vice president in 1949. Since October, 1958, he has been chairman of the executive committee of the board.

Hardy also has supervised the foreign leaf operations of the company.

He is a native of Pitt County. He and his wife, the former Katherine Elizabeth Wilson of Hartsville, Tennessee, live at Gray Court Apartments, Winston-Salem. They also have homes at Ponte Vedra Beach, Florida, and Hartsville. Following his retirement they plan to divide their time between Ponte Vedra and Hartsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardy have two children. Their son, H. Noel Hardy Jr., is president of the Austin-Carolina Company, Winston. Their daughter is Mrs. Dwight Garrett, of Greenville, whose husband is vice president of the Person-Garrett Company.

Hardy is a director of the Third National Bank of Nashville, Tennessee.

assisted greatly by the formation of a county wide firemen's association, Hardee said.

"Our sole purpose in seeking to form an association is to promote the growth of united and better fire service in Pitt County. We feel that this can best be carried out if the organized departments and those in the formation stages can unite with a common goal," Hardee pointed out.

Several Wrecks, Damage Is Light

Several wrecks were investigated yesterday by police, however damage was light and no injuries were reported.

Cars driven by Kirby Branch Jr., 20, of 2601 Dickinson Ave. and Helen Stokes Floyd of 803 Buchanan Ave. Durham, collided on Fifth St. near the intersection of Cotanche St. An estimated $50 damage was done to the Branch car which was backing up at the time of the accident, according to investigating officers.

Damage to the Floyd car was set at $15.

Branch was charged with failure to keep proper lookout while backing as a result of the investigation of the wreck.

Cars operated by William T. Coghill and Sam Reese collided at the intersection of Boyd and Broad Aves. causing only minor damage to the vehicles.

Coghill was charged with failure to yield the right of way. Officers listed his address as Route 3, Greenville.

Reese's address was not listed. Only $35 damage was reported in a collision between two autos at the intersection of Grande and Albemarle Aves.

Investigators charged Catherine Landon Harris of 401 West Village Drive with failure to yield the right of way following a collision between her car and one operated by Joseph L. Laman of Kenly.

Damage to the two cars was estimated to be $40.

Atoms-For-Peace Exhibit To Be Shown On Thursday

ATOMS FOR PEACE EXHIBIT . . . in Greenville Thursday.

"Atoms for Peace," a free mobile exhibit presented by the United States Atomic Energy Commission is being presented in Greenville Thursday from 12 noon to 8 p.m.

Roy Hardee, chairman of the Jaycee-sponsored visit, said the trailer housing the exhibit will be parked at Five Points.

The exhibit contains panels and models explaining the basic principles of atomic energy and its uses. Applications of this new science are illustrated in the peacetime fields of medicine, power production, industry, agriculture and research.

Visitors to the free exhibit will obtain a comprehensive picture of the many ways in which the peaceful atom is playing a more and more important role in our everyday life.

The exhibits, some of them operated by the spectator himself, explain research and development in the atomic energy field, ranging from the mining and refining of radioactive ores to the construction of nuclear reactors designed to provide electric power. The mobile "Atoms for Peace" exhibit is operated by the AEC by the Museum Division of the

All departments serving rural areas under one of the many plans now in operation have been asked to bring a map showing the area for which they now provide protection. This will enable an overall picture of the rural protection program in the county at the present time to be shown. It will also point out the weak spots in the program. Maps will be provided at the meeting in the event a current map is not available prior to the meeting.

There is a great need in certain sections of Pitt for the formation of community fire departments and the maps will show where the greatest need is. Many areas now are unprotected.

Effective fire fighting can be carried out as a rule according to fire records, largely because of the distance involved, very little over a five mile radius. This of course would not apply to mutual aid programs which exist between one town and another for town fire fighting. Such a program now exists between towns which have organized fire departments and water supplies.

"However, the idea of the Pitt Association would be to further better fire service in Pitt County on all levels, both city and rural," Hardee said.

If the association plan is approved then a mass meeting will be called, with delegates from each department meeting to adopt a slate of officers, by-laws and constitution to guide the new organization. City and county officials from the area would be invited also once the association is adopted.

Invitations were mailed to Grifton, Ayden, Farmville, Four Oaks, Bethel, Winterville and Greenville departments.
