Pitt Water Survey Plan Referred To County Board

Pitt County Development Commission members last night referred to the Board of County Commissioners a proposal that federal geologists survey the county's ground water resources during the next four years.

The proposal was directed to the county board because of costs involved and restrictions included in the Development Commission's charter. The motion to refer the matter for further study carried with it, however, a comment that the Development Commission "feels the need for such a project" and would support favorable action by county commissioners.

Geologist Philip M. Brown of the U. S. Geological Survey's Raleigh office told members of the commission that the four-year study would result in knowledge of how much water is available in the county, types of waters included in the total amount, location of underground supplies, and safe drawing levels for such supplies.

The federal geologist also explained that such surveys are joint ventures of federal and local governments, with federal agencies participating in costs on a 50-50 basis. A water survey for Pitt County would cost about $28,000 per year for four years, Brown said, making the total county obligation an estimated $112,000.

Brown and members of his staff outlined a similar survey now being conducted in Martin County which, Brown said, is being done under auspices of the National Association of County Commissioners. Thus far, the Martin County survey has resulted in collection of data which permits mapping of chemical structures of that county's water supplies and iron content areas.

The survey has also moved to the point, the geologist said, where mapping of height, movement and presence of underground water sources is about three-fourths complete.

Development Commission members voted to refer the proposal for investigation by county commissioners after a series of questions and answers by Development Commission Chairman Leonard P. Bloxam of Greenville and Brown. Bloxam and Economic Consultant L. A. Weston told the commission that questions regarding quantity, volume and content of water are basic questions asked by industrial prospects.

In other action last night, the Development Commission authorized Weston to hire a professional photographer to assist in preparation of materials for a county industrial brochure, expressed its appreciation for services rendered by County Attorney W. W. Speight adopted a proposed budget for 1959-1960 operations, and accepted Weston's monthly activities report. Weston was given authority to obtain services of a photographer after he appealed for assistance in obtaining pictures to be included in the brochure. Commission members were also directed, by action of the group, to assist in compiling pictures which might be used in the brochure.

The group's appreciation for services rendered by Speight was voted unanimously and will be detailed in a letter from the commission to the county attorney.

Prior to the action, Speight appeared before the commission to offer assistance to any local groups which might be interested in forming development organizations similar to Greenville's Committee of 100 which he helped organize.

Weston's activities report included comments on contacts with representatives of firms which have expressed interest in Pitt County industrial sites. He said a representative of a large middle west manufacturing firm visited the county May 21 to inspect industrial sites and that a six-page report on the county has been compiled and mailed.

The economic consultant also said assistance has been requested of Governor Luther H. Hodges' office in developing contacts with another mid-west firm which is planning an expansion program and which is interested in Pitt County and other areas of Eastern North Carolina.

Big Four Postpone Critical Session

GENEVA (AP)—The Big Four foreign ministers today postponed their talks for 24 hours at the request of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The postponement was announced shortly before the ministers were scheduled to meet at Gromyko's villa.

The Soviet foreign minister requested the delay during a private luncheon with British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, Lloyd quickly obtained agreement from U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville.

The postponement will allow Gromyko another day to consult Moscow and study the new Western compromise formula for a stopgap Berlin settlement. It was assumed the Soviet government still had not reached a definite decision.

Moscow radio reported that the Soviet and East German leaders met at the Kremlin today to discuss the Big Four problem in an atmosphere of "complete mutual understanding and friendship."

Western diplomats had expected to hear this afternoon whether the Soviets were willing at least to negotiate on the basis of the new plan. Gromyko was critical of the plan but had asked for 24 hours to study it before giving a definite reply.

Western spokesmen had made it clear that a rejection of the new formula by Gromyko would mean the end of the six-week-old foreign ministers conference.

All they needed was word that the Soviet Foreign Minister was ready to bargain, but they had no assurance of this. They knew only that Gromyko had avoided collapsing the Big Four conference Wednesday by getting a 24-hour delay in answering the Western proposal.

Some high Western officials considered this only a tactical maneuver to give the Kremlin the appearance of seriously considering the Western offer before replying.

Others thought Gromyko actually wanted time to get new instructions from Premier Nikita Khrushchev and that some major Soviet concession might be forthcoming.

British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville were agreed that if Gromyko came into today's secret conference session with the clear intent of bargaining, they were prepared to make reasonable changes in the plan.

But it was said they would not weaken the key demand that the Soviet Union pledge not to interfere with the flow of Western traffic to West Berlin and the stationing of Western troops there.

U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter was preparing to insist on a quick windup of the conference, however the bargaining went.

Thirty-one industrial prospects in New York, New Jersey and other northern states were visited by Weston between May 23 and May 29, with four of them indicating an interest in county locations. The four firms which have expressed an interest in the county will send representatives for personal visits as soon as possible, Weston added.

Prospects with whom the commission and its personnel have been working and who have been mentioned in previous reports are continuing their investigations of the county, Weston reported. He added, however, "There is considerable work involved in developing additional information, and working out legal and financial problems, to the prospect's and others' complete satisfaction."

During the coming month, Weston said, he plans trips to New York, Maryland, Delaware and Michigan to contact prospects.

RALEIGH (AP)—The biennial revenue measure which provides for collection of individual income taxes under the payroll deduction or withholding plan was enacted into law by the Senate today.

The bill, which went unscathed through a barrage of amendments from foes of withholding Wednesday, was approved on third reading by a 43 to 4 vote.

One of those voting "no" was Wake's Sen. John Jordan who told the Senate he considered it "poor policy" to use a 27½ million dollar windfall from withholding to balance the general fund budget.

The revenue measure, which includes an income tax withholding plan for individuals, was given second reading approval by the Senate Wednesday. The action kept alive the possibility that the Legislature can adjourn this week.

In a long session, the Senate beat down all attempts to amend the revenue bill, which was given third reading approval by the House Monday night.

By a vote of 32-18, the Senate rejected an amendment by Sen. Robert R. Morgan of Harnett to apply the pay-as-you-go method of collecting income taxes to all corporations earning $10,000 or more a year.

Sen. C. V. Henkel of Iredell, another outspoken foe of withholding offered four amendments which were knocked down in rapid fire order. One would have removed a provision which makes the pay-as-you-go plan apply to the state's largest corporations—the 41 which pay $100,000 or more a year in income taxes.

The other Henkel amendments would have eliminated the 27½-million-dollar windfall the state expects to reap from withholding by postponing the effective date of the plan from Jan. 1, 1960, to Jan. 1, 1961; reduced the windfall feature to about 10 million by million by postponing the effective date to July 1, 1960; and eliminated the withholding feature altogether.

In addition to the 27½ million windfall, the withholding plan would bring in about 2½ million through more efficient collections according to Revenue Department estimates.

Most of the Senate debate centered around Morgan's amendment. Under his proposal, corporations would have estimated their income in the ninth month of the tax year and paid three-fourths to their tax at that time.

In voting against it, Sen. Lunsford Crew of Halifax noted the state had been highly successful in attracting new industry. He said, "Let's not do anything to stop that."

Strike Regarded As Big Test For Right-To-Work

HENDERSON, N. C. (AP)—Henderson Mayor Carroll V. Singleton today described his city's bitter textile strike as a test to determine "whether the controversial right-to-work law can be enforced."

In view of statewide implications, the mayor declared in a letter to Gov. Luther Hodges, "We don't feel that it is up to the local government to carry the entire cost of this fight that is being made for the state as a whole."

Singleton wrote to the governor to report on action taken by the city council last Monday on Hodges' request for more local officers to police the strike scene. The council approved the report of a safety committee that three additional officers be hired and one additional police car purchased.

The governor had called on Vance County and the City of Henderson to put 150 to 200 additional law enforcement officers in order to relieve National Guardsmen who have been on duty since May 12. The Guardsmen were sent in to quell violence in connection with the Textile Workers Union of America strike at the Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills. The strike is now 7 months old.

Hodges has been sharply critical of the failure of Vance County officials to supply extra officers. The county commissioners said they couldn't afford the step, and felt it was a state responsibility.

Singleton noted "Considerable criticism has been expressed by the press" over the county's position. "In the midst of the strike the City of Henderson has taken, we feel that this criticism should not be applied to our municipality," he said.

The state's right-to-work law, adopted some 10 years ago, assures that labor union membership cannot be made a requirement for holding a job. Thus, a worker cannot be fired for a job either on the basis of not belonging to a union, or on the basis of union membership.

Singleton expressed the Henderson city council's appreciation to Hodges for his help in the strike situation. "However, it is felt that we are in the midst of a test for the State of North Carolina as to whether the controversial right-to-work law can be enforced and we don't feel that it is up to the local government to carry the entire cost of this fight that is being made for the state as a whole," he asserted.

Practical Demonstrations Included

ANNUAL SWINE TOUR . . . Ed Hemingway (with microphone) describes his farrowing house.

More Than Fifty Take Part In Annual Pitt Swine Tour

More than 50 individuals interested in swine production were taking part in the annual Pitt County Swine Tour today.

The tour which began around 9 o'clock this morning continued through the day.

Those making the tour first heard Ed Hemingway describe his farrowing house operations.

The tour then moved to the W. C. Hollowell farm where the group observed a swine evaluation feeding building. Then the group went to the Johnnie Hardee farm to study his farrowing house operation.

The morning portion of the tour was concluded at the Hugh Winslow farm where the participants

Next they moved to the F. L. Blount Jr. farm to observe a farrowing house operation and witness a demonstration of culling and selecting of gilts for breeding.

The tour then moved to the W. C. Hollowell farm where the group observed a swine evaluation feeding building. Then the group went to the Johnnie Hardee farm to study his farrowing house operation.

The morning portion of the tour was concluded at the Hugh Winslow farm where the participants were shown a building converted to a farrowing house, feeding on concrete, and Virginia Black Swine. There was also a demonstration on grading market hogs. Lunch provided by the Pitt feed dealers was served at the Winslow farm.

Following lunch the group moved to the Frosty Morn farm near Grifton to observe a farrowing house and feeding on concrete and from 3 until 4 o'clock a discussion was scheduled. It was to be led by Jack Kelley, Ray Ritchie, Al Howard, Art Pitzer and L. B. Outlaw.

Adopt $22,010 Budget For Year

A budget calling for maximum expenditures of $22,010 during the 1959-1960 fiscal year was adopted last night by the Pitt County Development Commission.

The budget is the first full-year budget adopted by the group which was formed after the 1958-1959 fiscal year began.

Appropriations included in the budget for the coming year are: Salaries, $11,800; office supplies, $568; mailing, $530; advertising and promotion, $1,070; subscriptions and memberships, $67; telephone and telegraph, $1,600; travel, $2,280; entertainment, $400; insurance and bonding, $130; miscellaneous printing and reproduction, $250; office maintenance, $100; building, $220; equipment maintenance, $120; gasoline and oil, $1,995; petty cash, $200; and capital outlay (furniture and equipment), $720.

Funds for the Development Commission operations come from a three cents tax levy approved by Pitt County voters.

Miami Tornado Is Followed By Rains

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Pouring rain added to the misery of tornado scarred Miami today as householders tried to patch up damage caused by the vicious storm which swept the city Wednesday night, injuring at least 100 persons.

The highway patrol, which gave the injury estimate, also calculated damage at over $1,000,000. There were no deaths.

The weather bureau said the threat of a central Florida tornado has ended. A warning had been issued for a broad band starting just east of Tampa and running east to the Cape Canaveral missile test center.

Farther up the east coast, tornado-like winds swept across Jupiter Island, just north of Palm Beach. The island is a millionaires' resort. Property damage was minor. Most of the homes were boarded up for the summer.

The Miami storm was the first of its kind since the late 1940s when a hurricane-spawned tornado destroyed property.

The Red Cross reported over 1,000 families were affected by the storm and 100 homes suffered major damage. Five hundred other houses were less seriously damaged. At least three homes were completely destroyed and nearly 100 business establishments were severely damaged.

Scores of bayfront homes were left in wreckage amid tangles of tree trunks, signs and overturned automobiles as the storm leaped over a 12-mile path. Hundreds of persons were driven from their homes.

An 11-year-old boy, Frank Vasellotti, was reported in critical condition with head injuries.

Nearly 60 persons, some seriously hurt, were treated by hospitals, police, and civil defense units mustered on a disaster footing in all, about 100 were hurt, the Florida Highway Patrol said.

No one was reported killed. Hardest hit was a four-block residential and business area around the 79th Street causeway where police Sgt. Stewart Coster estimated the loss would run at least to one million dollars. It missed downtown Miami.

L. S. Pope, picked up bleeding on the causeway, said he was on the second floor of a five-family dwelling when its roof blew off. His bed was flung into the air.

Don Shoenaker, who lives in the area, said: "I've been through two tornadoes and have never seen anything like this. It looked like a bomb had hit."

John Brandt, 54, said he and his wife were in their small apartment when something wrenched their front window out of its frame.

"We ran into the bathroom," Brandt said. "I braced my back against the door and my feet against the bathtub. If I hadn't the tornado would have been in there with us."

City police, sheriff's deputies, a Florida Highway Patrol detachment, and Civil Defense auxiliaries slumped curiosity-seekers away from the area and guarded against looting from stores and homes where building fronts stood wrenched open.

"Everything we had is gone—leveled," said Dr. George Ferro. "My $40,000 house is destroyed. There's a grapefruit tree where our living room was—our pool's been ripped out of the ground."

In a single block of north Bayshore Drive, the area of great destruction, more than a dozen automobiles lay overturned or crumpled. Some had been slammed against buildings.

Tropical Storm Due To Weaken

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—Beulah, the season's second tropical storm, was expected to weaken today below storm intensity as more of its circulation moved into Mexico.

At 4 a.m. Beulah swirled about 50 miles east of Tampico, Mexico, with highest winds estimated at 45 miles per hour near the center.

Nash County Fire Marshal Describes Association Benefits

FIRE PROTECTION . . . representatives of county fire departments map plans for forming a Pitt County Firemen's Association.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Representatives from several Pitt County towns met at a supper meeting to discuss the possibility of forming a Pitt County Firemen's Association.

The purposes of the association would be to improve fire protection in the county. The goals could be reached by setting up a training program, more effective mutual aid procedures, and organizing new departments in the relatively unprotected areas of the County.

Nash County Fire Marshal Perry O'Berry of Nashville, spoke to the group and explained the benefits to be derived through the association. He told how the Nash County Association works.

O'Berry said Nash is one of three counties in the state that has a full time man to work with the association and coordinate its activities. The other two counties are Mecklenburg and Forsyth.

According to O'Berry the association was formed last October with 12 member departments and since that time has installed, with the aid of the County a central alarm system by means of radio-telephone, and acquired a central alarm training ground. Now, in order for a person to summon a fire department anywhere in the county all they have to do is to call one number and the dispatcher, located in Nashville will sound the fire alarm at the station closest to the scene.

It was pointed out that this method saves time because generally, if a chief gets a call at a rural department, especially at night he will have to dress, travel from home to the fire station, blow the siren or whistle and wait for all his men to dress and come to the station. With the central alarm system, with a man on duty 24 hours a day, all the men receive the alarm at the same time and are ready to leave the station sooner.

To encourage new departments, said O'Berry, the county gives $1,500 to the department when it organizes. It is hoped in the near future the county will give each department $100 per month for operating expenses, he added.

One of the main points O'Berry brought out at the meeting was the effective range of operation for each fire department. Five miles is considered the maximum range of a piece of fire apparatus. In fact, in order to qualify for an insurance rate reduction, the department must meet certain equipment requirements and not use its equipment over four miles from the fire house door in any direction, he said.

It was the general opinion at the meeting last night that Pitt County Departments drop far below those standards due to the fact they have to cover remote sections of the county in which there are no fire departments.

Roy Hardee, a Greenville representative said "The meeting last night pointed up an acute need for such an association." He added, "Unless we can attain our purpose, that of better fire protection for the people of the county, both in the towns and in the rural areas. According to Hardee, the representatives from the towns at last night's meeting were 100 per cent in favor of the association.

There will be a Dutch supper meeting Wednesday night for all Pitt County Firemen at Respass Brothers in Greenville, at which time committees will be appointed to work out the constitution and by-laws for the association and recommend a slate of officers for the group.

Attending the meeting last night were: Lloyd B. Worthing, Walter Dail, and Paul R. Hunsucker of Winterville; hosts for last night's gathering; T. G. Chauncey and Larry Tripp of Ayden; Leslie Elks and J. D. Heath, of Grimesland; George J. Abeyounis and C. M. Burton, Jr. of Bethel; Roy Hardee and Stuart Savage of Greenville; and Perry O'Berry of Nashville.

ECC Art Gallery Named For Charter Member Of Faculty

Miss Kate W. Lewis, charter member of the faculty of East Carolina College and head of the department of art there from 1909 until her retirement in 1946, received recognition for her outstanding work and long services at the college when an art gallery in the new Rawl Classroom building on the campus was named in her honor.

Miss Lewis is the only surviving member of the original faculty of the East Carolina Teachers Training School, now East Carolina College.

The name "Kate W. Lewis Art Gallery" suggested by the present staff of the college art department, was approved by members of the East Carolina Board of Trustees at their recent meeting in Raleigh.

The Rawl building on the East Campus will be completed this summer and will be ready for use when the fall quarter of the 1959-60 term begins September 2. It will provide new headquarters for the college art department, which is now located in the Austin building.

In addition to classrooms, offices, and other accommodations, the art department in the Rawl building will include a spacious hallway equipped for staging large art exhibitions and the smaller Kate W. Lewis Art Gallery.

Exhibitions by faculty members and by senior and graduate students at the college will be staged during each school year in the Kate W. Lewis Art Gallery, according to Dr. V. Ellington B. Gray, head of the college art department.

First of these exhibitions will be on view next fall when the new classroom building is officially opened. The show, continuing through September, will be made up of selections from the permanent collection of the college and will include selected student work and paintings, graphics, and sculpture by professional artists.

Miss Lewis, a native of Virginia, has spent most of her life in North Carolina. She attended Peace College, Raleigh; taught in the public schools of Henderson, Goldsboro and Greenville; and in October, 1909, joined the first faculty of the East Carolina Teachers Training School.

During her years of teaching at East Carolina, she continued her training at the Snow-Froehlich School of Industrial Art, Chicago; the Boothbay Studios Summer School of Art in Maine; the New York School of Fine and Applied Art; and the state universities of Tennessee and Virginia.

Miss Lewis devoted her major efforts over many years to training teachers of public school art. Especially in the field of elementary-school art, she was one of the pioneers in this state. Through her own classes and the work of teachers who studied with her, she helped to raise the level of instruction in art in this state and to create an interest in art in North Carolina public schools.

Miss Lewis is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, national honor society for women of outstanding accomplishment in education.

June Is Dairy Month

RALEIGH — June is Dairy Month. The reason is that during this 30 day period production of milk, cheese, and butter reaches its peak.

Throughout the state 4-H Club dairy projects are contributing their share to the over-all peak production, says L. R. Harrill, state 4-H Club leader. Girls and boys in North Carolina are engaged in two specific dairy award programs.

Some of the rural youth are raising their own dairy animals under the guidance of N. C. Agricultural Extension Service workers in the counties. They are learning about production, sanitation, marketing and showmanship.

Another group is specializing in dairy foods demonstrations. They learn why dairy products are essential to a balanced diet and good health, and how to prepare and serve tasty dairy dishes.

The Oliver Corporation, Chicago, will again provide 4-H awards for the dairy animal project winners, while Carnation Company, Los Angeles, will present awards to the dairy foods demonstration winners.

30 Years Ago Today

June 18, 1929

"The various members of the organization are deriving great benefit from the group meeting held from time to time," declared an officer of the Merchants Association today, referring to the gathering of coal dealers yesterday.

"Members of these groups not only discuss the best way of handling the great volume of business of the community, but also worked out plans for improving the credit situation. There has been a demand for more complete understanding between the dealers and consumers for sometime regarding the credit situation, and the more it is discussed the sooner conditions in this line may be expected to improve."

"Our membership has expressed much gratification at results so far obtained from their conferences and believe the future will witness an improvement in all lines of business."

Mrs. Jackson Bridge Hostess

GRIFTON — Mrs. Clifton Jackson was hostess Friday night at three tables of bridge at her home on Highland Drive. Roses, gladioli and other garden flowers decorated the playing rooms.

Prizes for the highest scores went to Mrs. Conrad Hart and Mrs. Albert Tyson, and the consolation to Mrs. Walter Murphy. Completing the guest list were Miss Ruth E. Smith, Mesdames Frances Shackelford, Johnnie Smith, John Glenn, Wilbur Murphy, Kenneth Talton, Paul Bradley, John Coward, David Parker.

Home Ceremony Unites Couple

Miss Gloria Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. T. Cox, became the bride of Floyd Hardee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Hardee, in a ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, in late May.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ap Meiborn. Music was presented by Miss Gail Haddock, pianist, a cousin of the bride.

The bride given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of lace over taffeta. Her bouquet was of white orchids.

The bridegroom's father was best man. For her daughters wedding, Mrs. Cox wore a pink linen dress with matching accessories. Mrs. Hardee, mother of the bridegroom, wore a blue brocaded linen dress with matching accessories.

There was a reception following the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. Afterwards the couple left for a wedding trip in Virginia.

The bride is a graduate of Winterville High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden High School, and is now in Greenville, N. C.

After the wedding trip the couple will make their home near Ayden.

Miss Baker Feted At Birthday Party

Sunday, Miss Magdalene Baker was given a birthday dinner by friends and relatives at her home on Route 2, near Chiswood School. The dinner consisted of barbecue, slaw, chicken, pickles and cake, which was served on the lawn. The honoree was presented with gifts and pictures were made of the gathering after which everyone enjoyed special singing.

Year-Round Schools Worth Study

North Carolina has long used study commissions to delve into matters of great importance (and sometimes matters of little importance) and come up with recommendations for action by the state.

While the value of such study groups has been questioned from time to time, most people agree that a great deal of good has been accomplished by study groups working between legislative sessions. Their findings and recommendations often have focused public attention on important problems and led to workable solutions.

The legislature is now considering study commissions which might function during the period between now and the time the 1961 General Assembly convenes.

One of the most important of the commissions so far proposed is the one which would investigate the feasibility of using school buildings year-round.

With its growing population, North Carolina faces a continuing problem of providing adequate education for its young people. The state must provide for thousands of new students in its public schools each year and at the same time seek to elevate the level of public education offered these youngsters.

In terms of classrooms alone, the increased cost puts an appreciable burden on local governments which are primarily responsible for providing the physical facilities for public education.

If greater utilization could be made of school buildings now in existence or to be built in the next few years, literally millions of dollars of local government funds which would have to go into classroom construction might be diverted into other education channels to provide better schooling for our youngsters.

It is obvious even to a layman that many problems would be involved in any plan to use school buildings on a year-round basis rather than on the nine-month basis. To experienced public school officials, the hazards involved in the transition to year-round utilization of school buildings must be even more evident.

Through an effective, hard-working study commission, the problem could be investigated and the findings of the committee made known to the people of North Carolina. The recommendations of such a committee would carry a great deal of weight in helping the state to decide whether year-round utilization of school buildings would be advantageous to public education in North Carolina.

Certainly the state should overlook no possibility which might enable it to afford better public education for its youngsters. And greater utilization of school buildings, while a matter of conjecture, appears at least on the surface to have some merit in long-range school planning.

The General Assembly would be wise in authorizing such a study commission to look into the feasibility of utilizing school buildings on a year-round basis. The findings and recommendations of such a commission would be invaluable to North Carolina and its system of public education.

Public To Vote On Compromise

By LYNN NISBET

CONSTITUTION—By the time this can be read it is quite likely the General Assembly will have taken final action on the next of a new constitution to be submitted to the voters this fall. What the people vote upon (if as expected, the Legislature submits it) will be studied compromise and represent composite conclusion of the 170 members of the Legislature, based upon long and careful study by eminent lawyers and laymen. It can be truthfully said that no member of the General Assembly, no member of either of the study commissions, and perhaps no voting citizen will like every provision in the document. The hope was many times expressed during committee discussions and full-scale debate in open session of the Senate and the House, that majority of the voters will find enough total good to overbalance the small segments of bad and ratify the new constitution in time for it to apply to next year's elections.

Many speeches will be made and many editorials written between now and the election. A few observations based upon comments heard throughout the debates seem pertinent at this stage.

COURT REFORM — By common consent Article IV, dealing with the courts, is the heart of the new constitution. Most of the arguments on other articles, especially the one relating to a county limitation, were hypothesized on the effect that would have on a favorable vote for court reform.

The court section as acted upon by the General Assembly was itself a compromise of widely divergent ideas contained in recommendations by the Bar Association (Bell Committee) and the Constitutional Commission.

STATE PACKAGE — Merits or lack of merit in the proposals will be fully covered during the election campaign. Without regard to basic content, it has been obvious for months that one group sought to paramount court reform above all else, while another sought to deal with the whole problem of inter-related governmental activities. The inter-related idea largely prevailed.

It also has been apparent that the Senate was more State-minded, the House more disposed to think in terms of sections and communities. More significant was the fact that members of both branches who had not served on the committees, and so had not heard the discussions there, insisted upon going over much of the same ground in order to vote intelligently.

That was evidenced in House discussion of several amendments designed to remove the limit of one senator to a county provision which had been put in by the Senate. Most of the comments on those amendments, all of which were overwhelmingly defeated, related more directly to points which the committees had thrashed out about courts. This contest brought clearly into focus the fight between big and little counties for control of the General Assembly. The test vote came on a roll call by which the amendment to submit that idea as a separate ballot was defeated 67 to 44. None of the lines which had been established roughly on the pro or anti-administration basis held in this vote. Administration stalwarts from little counties voted to retain the one senator limitation, while big county representatives who are numbered among the administration forces voted to delete it.

TOO FAIR? — By overwhelming, but not counted votes, the House voted down amendments to increase pay of legislators above the included in the Senate bill, and to increase House membership to 130, as recommended by the Constitutional Commission. It accepted lengthening the pay period from 120 days to 150, and to add health and sanitation to the subjects upon which the General Assembly could not pass special local acts.

Majority of the members felt they had gone far enough in raising their own pay, after denying to other State agencies and employees the amounts they contended were required to sustain good services. The 150 day pay period at $20 per day will increase the salaries of legislators next term to a maximum of $3,000 compared with the present maximum of $1,800. That, plus the new travel allowance and unlimited subsistence allocations, will more than double the compensation of members of the next and succeeding Legislatures.

TECHNICAL — Many of the Representatives were resentful of efforts on part of some others to cut off debate in order to enable the General Assembly to adjourn this week—a goal that most of them admitted was unattainable.

Monday, we find no fault with that decision.

But along with the decorations, someone is also fully entitled to a good, old-fashioned Navy "chewing out" for the plane's equipment deficiencies which rendered it incapable of returning the fire of its attackers.

If all American planes on patrol duty in the Far East are as ill prepared to respond to attacks as this P4M was, the U. S. air arm in that theatre is in terrible shape.

The attack in itself is alarming. More alarming, however, is the condition of the aircraft in which the men were sent on patrol.

The words of the commander of the craft point up vividly the lack of proper precautions before the plane left the ground:

"I gave the order to fire," Lt. Cmdr. Mayer said, "but the communications were bad and Corder (tail gunner) didn't get the order on the first run. On the second run, before he got the range, he was hit."

Further, the Navy said initially, the plane's two other 20mm. machineguns were unable to fire because of missing parts.

Faulty communications, and guns with missing parts!

Subsequently the Defense Department explained that two gun units of the plane had been dismantled and that confusion in phone conversation among the crew resulted in failure of the third weapon to return fire. The statement added that the two guns were dismantled to better suit the plane for its particular mission.

Regardless of this statement by the Defense Department, there are questions which should be brought to the fore:

If no armament was deemed necessary for the protection of the plane, why were two guns rendered inoperative and the other left in operating condition with a gunner manning it?

How prepared is a military aircraft in that condition for an attack by an enemy plane?

How many other U. S. planes are sent winging over the Sea of Japan or into other areas in similar condition?

What's the use of American taxpayers spending billions of dollars annually for defense if military planes are incapable of returning enemy fire under surprise attack. Where was the nation's high degree of military readiness at 12:36 p.m. Tuesday Japanese time over the Sea of Japan?

Is the condition of that P4M indicative of the degree of readiness of all our military forces spread in every segment of the globe to respond to a surprise enemy attack?

This latest attack on our aircraft over the Sea of Japan is another reminder that we must stand ready to repulse an attack at any moment. The condition of the U. S. plane which was attacked should shock us into the realization that our "degree of readiness" may not be as high as military and other officials have led us to believe.

The incident should result in something far more important to the safety of our nation and its military forces than the mere decoration of crewmen on the plane.

Other Editors Saying ... Oil Gamble In N.C.

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

If a gamble that started in 1911 and continues today ever pays off, Eastern North Carolina is going to have a new industrial interest, that of producing oil or natural gas, and perhaps both. To date, however, the prospects of success in drilling for oil and gas on the North Carolina coast has been none too heartening, for a total of 30 wells in 48 years has failed to produce anything of importance.

Despite this lack of success efforts are continuing. The discovery of oil in Florida some years ago concentrated the interest of such possibilities in this state. Several major oil companies and various individuals have been drilling in the southeastern part of the state since.

The first wells known to have been drilled in North Carolina were sunk in Currituck County by the East Coast Drilling Company in 1911, and the most recent drilling was done in Onslow County two Texas "wildcat" wells who have found nothing but are still hopeful.

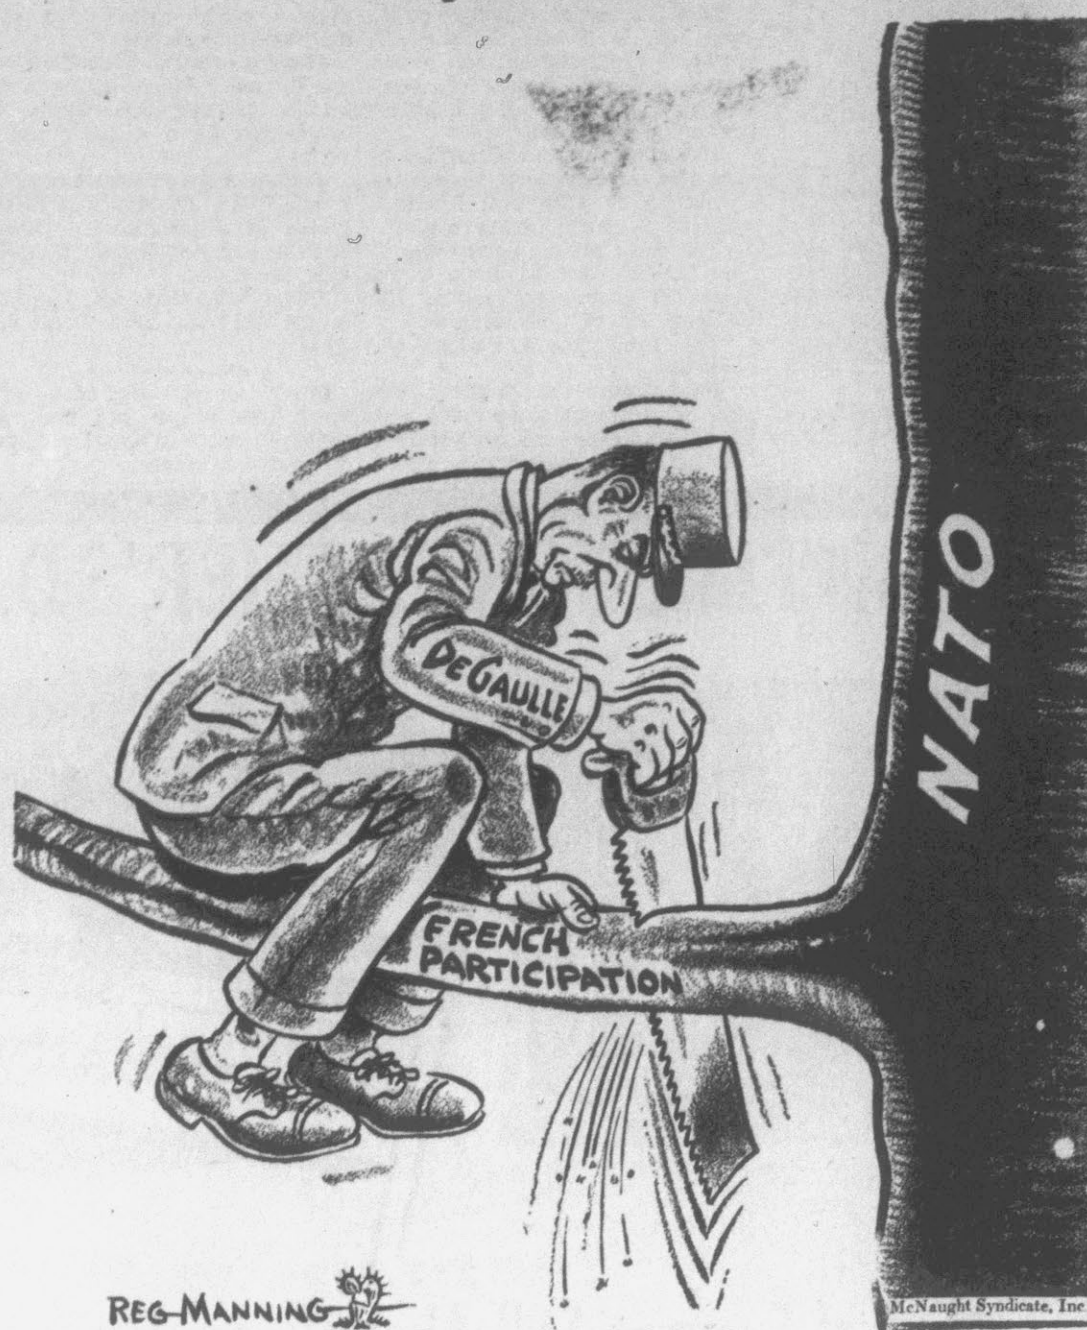

A lot of money has been poured into this exploratory drilling that has produced holes ranging from 2,000 feet in depth to more than 10,000 feet. Those who try to gamble their efforts are a big admit, but they continue to express the belief that it is logical that oil or gas might be found on the North Carolina coast. The investigations of these possibilities are based on the fact that some of the Coastal Plain sediments have been correlated with formations of similar ages to the Southwest where gas and oil are known to occur.

Whether the prospects of gas and oil in North Carolina will ever pay off with a "gusher" has been argued for many years, and the differences of opinion still exist. Some oil men continue to think the gamble is worth taking, but at best men of technical knowledge say there may or may not be oil in North Carolina.

Where there is the slightest hope for oil, of course, men with dreams will continue drilling. And so long as they drill the possibility that Eastern North Carolina may some day be in the oil industry exists. But before we start counting our barrels, perhaps we should remember the words of Dr. Collier Cobb, a geology expert at the University of North Carolina who said that he would drink every barrel of oil ever found in this state.

To Spite The Tree

By JIMMY ELLIS

They Had A Name For It

A couple of weeks ago, Greenville's jeep-mounted bug-killing equipment attracted some public notice in that it was said to be the target of rocks thrown by youngsters following in its fog-dimmed wake.

City Manager Leonard P. Bloxam allowed, at the time, that the machine would be removed from service if the rock-throwing continued.

If one little fellow in one of Greenville's eastern residential areas could have heard the removal threat, it would be a good bet that he would have been out throwing rocks at the jeep the next time it came by his house. The little fellow is afraid of the thing.

Nothing bothers the child at all, except the bug-killer. It can be four blocks away and he'll burn a new path going home to get away from it.

Most of the adults in his neighborhood were not aware of his fear until a week or so ago. Several of them were standing in one of the yards when the little fellow in question set up a loud yell and headed for home.

His older brother, wise in the ways of the world and afraid of absolutely nothing, patiently explained to the older folks, "He's skeered o' that skeetering 'chine'."

The group chuckled all around at the reference to the bug-killer as a "skeetering 'chine'."

Their chuckles turned to full-grown laughs when another youngster came on the scene to ask, "Where's that buggering 'chine'?"

The combination of names for the equipment sent the adults into a frenzy of laughter when they thought of them for a minute. They didn't realize the best was yet to come.

A third youngster walked up to the group, waited for the laughter to subside and asked, "What time will that froggering 'chine' get down here?"

The whole crowd was paralyzed with laughter. Come to think of it, though, what is the correct name for the machine? That might be funnier than any of the names dreamed up by the children.

As a general rule, strictly personal notes aren't usually included in these columns, but one will be included today. It is to a Mrs. Harris.

Thank you, Mrs. Harris, for the note to the Wee Urchin. He was tickled pink by it. My Fair Gwen and I are certain he doesn't understand all you wrote, but we do, and we appreciate it. Perhaps we could take you with us some day when we go for a ride to hear the bob whites call across the fields.

Strength For Today

POWER IN THE WORD

"In the beginning was the Word." The Gospel of John opens with this majestic sentence. And majestic it is in every sense of the term. Sometimes people read this declaration with only a very hazy conception of what it means. It is one of the most arresting statements found in the entire Bible.

For "word" in the Bible means something different than it does in modern parlance. It is by His word that God creates. In the beginning He said, "Let there be light, and there was light." It was His word which brought about this marvelous beginning of creation, and as one goes through the creation stories he finds that everything was created simply by the word of God.

Plunge At The Casino

By HAL BOYLE

MONTE CARLO (AP)—Help! Get me out of here or, better, lend me more francs. With a few hundred more francs I am sure I can win the wheel—the roulette wheel that is.

From the time of my birth in Kansas City, Mo., I knew I was born to break the bank at Monte Carlo—or at least make the try.

Well, nobody can say I didn't make my play.

First I went to the dice table, and tried to throw the dice that are hereditary in my family and once won one of my ancestors in Missouri the right to build a canal between Sedalia and London—God speed being granted beyond state lines.

They wouldn't take my dice, and I got riled up and refused to use their dice.

By then my wife had got control of the family exchequer.

I explained I would break the bank at Monte Carlo at roulette. She said I was welcome to do so and God speed, but all she could lend me was 1,000 francs.

For a moment I thought she was bleeding generosity until I found out that 495 francs equals a dollar and 1,000 francs is only the sunny side of two bucks.

I found a roulette table where the going bet was 200 francs. Came to about 40 cents.

The table was surrounded by people who looked like they were either family advisers to the last Czar of Russia, or at least displaced cousins of Tovarich Trotsky. Each had a system.

They noted down the results of every turn of the wheel. They got only about once out of every 50 times.

I passed up the 200,000-franc-limit table myself and sportingly put down 200 francs on No. 29, a lucky number in my vocabulary because it has always seemed to me the last number before 30. And you know what 30 is. Finis. Exit. So long.

I played it five straight times. It never came up.

Yet when I walked away from the table I could almost feel the respect of those sick foreign aristocrats. They had seen the last of the boy plungers of the Western world spend his entire away tight-fisted but smiling, bowing to a duke here, a duchess there.

Opinions In Brief

"Somewhere around 15 per cent of all personal income in the nation is paid out now for nonwork. That includes social security payments, life insurance, private pensions, dividends, interest and rent, and various payments under federal, state and local programs. Not working obviously has become big business in the United States. And it seems destined to get bigger still." —Waynesboro News-Virginian.

"The perfect gift to give a woman is something she can exchange for the next day." —Mattoon (Ill.) Journal-Gazette.

"A picture may be better than a thousand words but most women doubt it." —Miami Herald.

Spending More Than The Budget

By ELMER ROESSNER

We keep hearing about the $77 billion Federal budget. It seems like a dreadful amount of money, built up by our taxes. But as a matter of fact, total Federal spending is far greater than that. In fact, it will probably run above $97 billion in the fiscal year starting July 1.

That's because of the Federal trust funds, which are built up by the government's taxing power but are not listed in the operating budget.

There's a lot of suspicion that considerable political influence backs the system. If the public fully realized the extent of government taxing and paying, it might clamor more for economy. It might even kick some of the spenders out of office.

IN THE SHADOW BUDGET
These trust funds include the Social Security system, unemployment compensation, railroad and Civil Service retirement, veterans life insurance and the highway program.

The money people pay in Social Security taxes, and the money they pay in added Federal gasoline taxes is no less taxes than the money they pay on income or liquor. And it is paid out by the Treasury just as other tax monies are. But it doesn't figure in the budget and people—even those getting Social Security and other benefits—seldom realize that either their payments or benefits aren't in that well-publicized $77 billion budget.

This shadow budget has been jumping in size. Here is a table showing trust fund and regular budget expenditures since July 1, 1951, in billion of dollars:

Fiscal Yr.	Tr. Fund	Reg. Bud.
1951	$3.7	$4.1
1952	5.3	65.4

1953 5.3
1954 7.2
1955 8.5
1956 9.4
1957 13.0
1958 16.1

The total for the coming year has been estimated from $18.1 billion to $20.3 billion.

THAT'S NOT ALL

In addition to the trust funds, there are also guarantees. Theoretically, at least, these do not increase either taxes or spending.

The government has pledged support of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, the secondary mortgage operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fanny Mae), the Panama Canal Zone government and rural electrification loans. Most of the government's other guarantees—such as farm price supports—are listed in the budget, but these are not.

And while these guarantees don't add to the total budget, if the government should ever be called upon to make good, the money would have to come out of future taxes.

With The Farm Women

By MAIDRED MORRIS
(Items this week from: Macon, Wilson, Alexander, Carteret, New Hanover, and Rockingham Counties.)

"I think if we concentrate on our homes and make them more attractive, Macon County can truly become the beauty spot of Western North Carolina," says Mrs. I. T. Peek, Home Demonstration beautification leader.

Home Demonstration Clubs are cooperating with other organizations in sponsoring a county beautification project. Residents are cleaning up, planting trees, and cleaning roadsides. Mrs. Florence S. Sherrill, home economics agent says all the people are trying to emphasize the natural beauty of Macon.

Cleaning Can Be Easy
Main emphasis was placed on the use of vacuum cleaner attachments for general cleaning and on proper storage of the vacuum at recent Home Demonstration Club meetings in Wilson County.

According to Mrs. Ona P. Humphrey, home economics agent, each club was furnished a gallon of rug, carpet, and upholstery shampoo plus a long handled brush to demonstrate various cleaning techniques.

Yeast Breads
Yeast breads are becoming popular in Alexander County, according to Mrs. Agnes W. Watts, home economics agent.

Three leaders from each Home Demonstration Club attended a special interest meeting on yeast breads. Leaders who attended agreed to give informal yeast bread demonstrations to their friends and neighbors.

Curb Market Profits
Various articles of craft art are appearing on the Carteret County Curb Market as a result of county leader training. Mrs. Noah Avery has been getting requests for information on materials used in dried flower arrangements.

Italian hemstitching has become a popular handiwork and is appearing on blouses and skirts offered for sale on the market. According to Mrs. Floy Garner, home economics agent, Home Demonstration Club women are busy in their spare time working on crafts for gifts and for sale.

Landscaping
Installing central heating system, refinishing floors, making draperies, and equipping the kitchen of the community building have been recent projects of the Eastwood Home Demonstration Club in New Hanover County.

Members also brought extra pieces of shrubbery from home and started landscaping the yard. Mrs. Verna Belle Lowery, home economics agent, says shrubbery has made surroundings more attractive.

Homemaker's Dream
"A place for everything and everything in its place is a homemaker's dream," says Miss Isabelle Buckley, home economics agent in Rockingham County.

Mrs. C. G. Mabe of the Holy Club had her husband build a closet in the corner of the bedroom according to recommended specifications. The cost of the attractive, convenient closet was low since the work was done "family style."

Becky Jo Bullock, Helen Burgess and Selma Sharp underwent minor surgery Monday at the Beaufort County Hospital, Washington, N. C.

Tuesday Mrs. Mae Wyatt Taylor, her son, Leon, and her mother, Mrs. W. L. James, went to Oriental, where they spent several days with Mrs. Wilbur Kittrell.

James, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. Beamon Whichard, who had an eye operation the first week in June returned to the Eye Hospital in Richmond for a check-up.

Mrs. Carrie Roberson, Miss Leona Moore, Lon Roberson, Jesse Ben Roberson, Miss Sue Moore, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Roberson, Sr., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Roberson at a barbecued chicken supper in their yard Wednesday evening.

Mrs. J. Milton Highsmith spent the weekend with Mrs. Cora Page of Stokes and attended the Homecoming at the Christian Church.

Mrs. Harry W. Johnson and Miss Mary Ethel Johnson, from Martinsburg, West Virginia, are visiting Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. John Tyler, and family and her mother, Mrs. Walter Swindell.

Joney Taylor is a patient in Richmond hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Whitfield spent several days in Fayetteville. She was the matron of honor at the wedding of her sister, Miss Margaret Johnson and M-Sgt. A. G. Dillinger in the Main Post Chapel at Fort Bragg. John L. Whitfield, Mrs. Jesse Bunting and Miss Cinda Bunting of Robersonville attended.

Farewell Party Given Friend

GRIFTON—On Tuesday morning Miss Doll Groat and Miss Sharon Stone entertained at the home of Miss Groat at an informal party for several of their school friends and to honor Miss Ruth Stenguit who has moved with her family to Massachusetts. The home for the occasion was decorated with mixed summer flowers. Party snacks and iced drinks were served buffet style. The guest of honor was remembered with gifts from those present.

News From Ballards X Roads

Mrs. Wilbur Hart, Mrs. Viola Demuth of Macesfield and Mrs. Annie Pittman of Tarboro, were Thursday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Little.

Will Pollard of Chapel Hill and John Pollard of Farmville were Wednesday afternoon visitors of their sister, Mrs. Mamie R. Holloway.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Tyson and family of Marion are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Tyson for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James Jones and children are visiting Mrs. Jones' parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Elakely in Meddian, Miss.

Mrs. A. D. McArthur spent last week with her daughter, Mrs. Horace Moore.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Tyson spent Tuesday with relatives in Rocky Mount.

Tommy Worrell of Plymouth spent the past week visiting in the home of his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Flanagan.

Mrs. Mamie R. Holloway and Mrs. Lee Jenkins and daughter Linda, visited relatives near New Bern recently.

Seaman Horace Lee Moore is spending the weekend with Mrs. Moore at Monroe.

Mrs. William Cox, who has been receiving treatment in Pitt Memorial Hospital, has returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Ross and family attended a family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fulford in Pine Tops last Sunday.

Church Circles
FOUNTAIN—Circle 1 Women of Fountain Presbyterian Church held their meeting Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Mattie Nichols.

Mrs. J. L. Peele, Circle chairman, opened the meeting with prayer and used 1 Peter 2:4-10 for the scripture lesson. The topic for the month was, "Gird Up Your Minds—Now You Are God's People."

In the absence of General Fund Agencies... Chairman, Mrs. Ann Mercer, Co-Chairman, Mrs. Ann Jefferson and Mrs. Mark W. Owens gave a report on "General Fund Agencies."

At the conclusion of the meeting, the hostess, Mrs. Nichols, served refreshments to the ten members present and a social hour was held.

BETTER WAFFLE IRONS
Even waffle irons have changed! Nowadays many models have preheated non-stick grids and do not need to be "treated" before using.

Holcombs Give Outdoor Supper
GRIFTON—Mr. and Mrs. Howard "Buddy" Holcomb Jr., were hosts on Saturday evening at their home on St. David Street when they entertained informally at an outdoor supper.

The occasion was to honor Mrs. Holcomb's sister, Mrs. James L. Gaddis and her sons, Jimmie and Bobby, of Dayton, Ohio, who are guests of their parents, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. McArthur of Grangers.

Guests gathered on the back lawn for the supper. Attending were the honored guests, Mr. and Mrs. McArthur, Mr. and Mrs. John Glenn Jr., Kim and Cliff Hughes of Greenville.

A Delectable Taste Of The Past

By CECIL BROWNSTONE
AP Newsfeatures Food Editor

HUNGRY FOR the taste of old-fashioned chicken salad—that delight of box suppers, Sunday school picnics and ladies' club meetings?

Then first find yourself a plump bird, cover with water and cook him (or her) well. When the bird is ready, dismember tenderly so you have large juicy chunks of meat.

Cut the chicken into healthy bite-size pieces and add diced celery, that's all. No grapes, no water chestnuts, no pineapple, no parsley, no chives, no almonds, no apple or orange; these are new-fangled additions and right now we've got our hearts set on the original standby.

Dress your chicken and celery with old-fashioned boiled dressing. Fannie Farmer's first cookbook allowed a garnish of only hard-boiled eggs, capers and pickles, but we feel it doesn't hurt to garland with tomato, radishes and cucumber.

Perfect accompaniment to this salad is crisp Melba toast. Originating in Victorian times, nowadays it comes in neat packages in white, rye or wheat varieties with plenty of crunch. Choose small round melbas and count only 9 calories per piece; or help yourself to a real slice and still count only 16.

OLD-FASHIONED BOILED DRESSING
Ingredients: 2 tablespoons flour, 3 tablespoons sugar, 2 teaspoons dry mustard, ½ teaspoon salt.

WHEN COMPANY COMES
Company dinner service: If service plates are used, napkins should be placed on them. If the first course is at each place before guests come to the table, place napkins to the left of the forks.

cayenne pepper, 1-3 cup cider vinegar, ½ cup water, 4 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon butter.

Method: In the top of a double boiler stir together thoroughly the flour, sugar, mustard, salt and a dash of cayenne. Gradually add vinegar and water; blend well, stirring until smooth after each addition. Cook over hot (not boiling) water, stirring constantly until thickened. Four half of the mixture into the slightly beaten yolks stirring to blend. Stir this mixture back into the rest in the double boiler. Cook, stirring, until the mixture is thick enough to mound. Remove from heat and stir in the butter or margarine.

Cover and cool. Store in the refrigerator; if necessary, thin, when using, with a little light cream or evaporated milk. Makes about 1½ cups dressing.

Vice President Richard M. Nixon made an agreement between themselves on what to do in case of Eisenhower disability. But it was based on mutual trust between these two men and has no binding effect on any future president or vice president.

For just that reason it is only a stop-gap device. Its legality has been questioned and would probably be challenged in court if it ever went into effect.

Under the agreement Nixon will decide whether Eisenhower — if unable to speak for himself — is too disabled to act as president. Then Nixon will let for him. The word act in this is important.

Nixon won't take the oath of office as president. He will not become president. He will turn the job back to Eisenhower if the latter recovers. Eisenhower, not Nixon, will decide whether the president's disability has ended.

But suppose, when Eisenhower thought his disability was over, Nixon didn't. What then? No answer.

When this agreement was announced March 3, 1959, Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas, leader of the House Democrats, became critical at once. He argued that a voice president who attempted to carry out the president's duties must take the oath of office as president and, once he has done so, the elected but ailing president is out of office.

The then Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell insisted the Eisenhower-Nixon agreement was constitutional. But the immediate dispute over its legality was a clear warning of trouble ahead if Nixon ever did take over under this agreement.

The Senate subcommittee's proposed constitutional amendment would bring the president's cabinet into the act in deciding whether he was too disabled to carry out his duties — if he couldn't or wouldn't do it himself — and then Congress would have a hand in deciding whether his disability was over, if he thought it was but the vice president disagreed.

CHAPTER 26

"You would save us all a great deal of time, Anet," said the inspector Perrier, setting a match to his pipe, "if you would answer my question. On whose orders did you act?"

Anet did not move. "You won't," said Perrier. His voice was authoritative, strong, powerful. An impressive voice, thought Mark Travers.

"Then I shall give orders to have you arraigned. On several counts — high treason, the possession of arms, found in your room by Mr. Travers. Oh, yes, I almost forgot — the murder of Corinne Javal."

At that Louis Anet jumped from his chair and took one quick step toward the desk. It looked to Mark as if he was going to attack the inspector. But before he could come between the two men, the little black dog had fotten hold of Anet's trouser leg and wouldn't let go until Perrier picked him up. "Don't be a fool," said the inspector, as if he were not in the least disturbed by Anet's behavior. "Sit down."

Anet did as he was told, rather like a dog whipped into submission, all the time looking at the inspector wide-eyed.

"You see, Anet, all of us have to count on the unforeseen. Things do not always run according to plan. In that case we have to make the best of them. Don't you understand the situation?"

He turned to Mark. "You see, I found out that Corinne knew Anet. It seemed she dived frequently from the Anemone and got to know him quite well. What's more, she trusted him, didn't she, Louis? That explains why she had no reason to refuse him a ride when he stopped her this morning. He said he was going to see one of his friends at the radio station on the Mont Agel. He bought the scarf with which he strangled her yesterday, at the Galeries Lafayette, and pretended to make her a present of it. She was touched, wasn't she, Louis? And didn't she smile when you asked her permission to place it around her neck yourself?"

Anet was trembling, but the inspector paid no attention to the fact that the man seemed to have reached the breaking point. Perrier sighed. "It was your first murder and you didn't like to do it. You tried to get out of it but orders were orders. So now, Louis Marie Anet, you are a murderer."

"You didn't care, did you, how many people died, were killed, stabbed, tortured, hanged, as long as you didn't do it yourself? But maybe you know now what they suffered, how they struggled to stay alive. Yes, Louis, now you know to what consequences treason can lead."

Anet lifted both hands and held them to his ears. Perrier jumped from the table and pulled them down again.

"And Mademoiselle here — you wouldn't you, Louis? You always carry out orders like a good boy, don't you? Without questioning. Not that it matters now. We have all the proof we need to condemn you to death. Yes, Louis, you will die, and nothing can save you unless you turn state witness and help us find the man on whose orders you committed all these crimes."

Anet's face was so white that he looked like a dead man. "Was it your employer, Monsieur Constant?"

Anet's face remained a mask. He will never talk, thought Mark. It is quite obvious that he made up his mind long ago that he would say nothing if ever he was caught.

But Perrier seemed to be of different opinion. He nodded encouragingly to Anet. "Come on, now. Tell us what you know about Monsieur Constant."

Anet's eyes widened suddenly and he stared at the inspector as if he were trying to read the other's mind.

His lips parted, closed again; then, still looking at his interrogator, he shook his head.

"No," he said. "I don't think Monsieur Constant had anything to do with it."

The silence that fell over the bare little room of the police station was filled with surprise.

It was quite apparent that Anet had never intended to utter the words he had just spoken, that he was trying to grasp what had made him say them.

Fleur had swung around from the barred window and was facing the room, her eyes wide with astonishment at this unexpected revelation.

Only when her glance finally met his, did Mark realize that in spite of her efforts to convince him of her brother's innocence, since all evidence seemed to point more and more to him, she had come to accept the possibility of his guilt.

Mark's expression was that of tremendous relief, at least during these first few minutes, when all he could think of what that now Fleur's pride and love for her family would not have to be hurt.

Perrier showed no surprise. He was nodding to himself, almost as though he had expected this answer. "Not Constant," he said.

"Then who?"

Anet did not answer, and Perrier began to whistle softly, the same little tune Mark had heard him whistle so often. "For the last time, Louis, if your life is worth anything to you, talk, and I may be able to save you."

"If you tell us the truth, if you turn state witness, you may have a chance. I promise to do my best for you, if you tell us on whose orders you acted."

Anet lifted his head, looked at Mark and from Mark to the inspector, swallowed, and said in an almost inaudible voice, "Tim-gad."

"Tim-gad?" repeated Perrier. "Tim-gad?" He began to laugh angrily, sarcastically. "Of course. Whenever any one of you finds himself caught, he names Tim-gad as the mastermind. But," and he leaned forward to give his words emphasis, "who is Tim-gad?"

"I don't know," said Anet.

"You don't expect me to believe that," Perrier jumped from the desk and planted himself in front of the man, tapping him severely on the right shoulder. "Nobody will believe you. Nobody will believe that you take orders from a man you don't know."

"But it's true," said Anet, all of a sudden speaking excitedly. "I've never seen him. Very few people have. I receive my orders over the phone or the radio."

The inspector looked at Mark out of the corners of his eyes, nodding slightly, as if to say that Anet might be telling the truth. Then he turned his full concentration once more on the man.

"The great unknown. That won't help me at all. The police never believe in the great unknown. You should know that, Anet. So you take orders over the radio or the phone. And how did you get the order to kill Corinne Javal this morning? Over the phone?"

Anet lowered his head and Perrier began to shake him gently. "Come on, Anet. Every minute counts. We know that Tim-gad has been seen in Monte Carlo, that he came here to meet with others, even if I should believe that you have never seen him in person, or cannot identify his voice, I cannot believe that you don't know where to contact him."

"Let's make a deal, Anet, you and I," the inspector continued. "I will guarantee your life if you will tell me where I can find Tim-gad. I'll give you three minutes to make up your mind."

The trap is laid for the diabolical Tim-gad, as "A Spy at Monte Carlo" reaches a climax tomorrow.

Illegal To Anchor On Waterway

WILMINGTON — Fishermen who anchor their boats in the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway are advised that it is a violation of the law and the practice would result in serious consequences.

The warning comes from the Corps of Engineers' District Office following a complaint by a commercial carrier who said that the practice "is worse this year than ever before."

Col. H. C. Rowland, Jr., District Engineer, said violations of the law concerning both anchoring and speeding, too, had resulted in damaging incidents to life and property.

He pointed out that tugs with barges are big and cumbersome and can't be stopped and maneuvered like small boats. Regardless of how careful pilots are, he continued, anchoring in the waterway and speeding on the channel develops unavoidable situations which otherwise could be prevented.

The practice, according to the complaint, appears to be most prevalent between Morhead City and Charleston, S.C.

Colonel Rowland said the law is very specific and pointed out applicable excerpts: "No boat, regardless of size, small anchor in a dredged channel or narrow portion of the waterway for the purpose of fishing if navigation is obstructed thereby."

Host To Major Gangland Gathering At Apalachin Dies Keeping Secret

JOHNSON CITY, N.Y. (AP)—The man who played host to one of the largest gatherings of gangsters in the annals of crime in this country died Wednesday night.

Joseph Barbara, who suffered a heart attack May 27, carried with him to the grave another key to the mysterious meeting of 60-odd hoodlums and friends at Apalachin, N.Y. on Nov. 14, 1957.

The 53-year-old, short, once-sparingly bespectacled Barbara, shriveled and paled by illness, had lived on the fringes of death since he fell unconscious at his home in nearby Endicott May 29.

He lost the fight for his life at 7:35 p.m. But he won his fight never to divulge the sinister meanings behind the crime cabal at his plush, hilltop estate.

Despite repeated efforts to have him break his silence, Barbara evaded questioning by pleading illness.

Only last April it looked as though state investigators finally had him cornered. A State Supreme Court justice ordered Barbara, ill or not, to testify before the State Investigation Commission, an agency that has managed to jail some of the delegates to the underworld meeting for refusal to talk. No date was set for Barbara's hearing, however.

In his only public appearance after the gangland meeting, Barbara, looking drawn and haggard, sat silently on a wheelchair in U.S. Dist. Court in Syracuse April 27 while his attorney entered an innocent plea for him to charges of evading payment of nearly $40,000 in federal taxes.

Barbara died in Wilson Memorial Hospital during a routine visit by his wife, two sons, and a daughter, all of whom were seen departing later, weeping. A Roman Catholic priest accompanied the family.

Barbara had suffered a heart attack prior to the gangster convention at his home in 1957. In fact, many delegates to the meeting maintained they had visited Barbara only to see "a sick friend."

His brushes with the law also antedated the so-called summit conference of crime.

His police history dated back to 1931 when he was arrested by Pennsylvania State Police on suspicion of a gangland slaying. His only conviction came in 1946, when he was fined $5,000 for illegal acquisition of sugar. He operated a soft-drink bottling business in Endicott and also distributed beer.

In 1956 Barbara held a meeting of hoodlums at a Binghamton, N.Y., hotel. The meeting, smaller than that of 1957, was supposed to be a gathering of bottlers. Police did not learn of it until the participants had dispersed.

The 1957 meeting, however, threw Barbara into the national and international spotlight.

The first faint suspicions of the meeting were aroused on Nov. 13 when an alert state trooper, Sgt. Edgar D. Croswell, noticed several big, flashy cars cruising into tiny Apalachin, 15 miles west of Binghamton, in south-central New York.

The drivers all had a certain similarity — big rings, big cigars, big hats, monogrammed handkerchiefs, silk ties, and expensive suits.

The next day, while the "boys" whooped it up around a barbecue, Croswell, a Treasury agent and a group of troopers blocked off the road leading to Barbara's isolated estate.

The gay pinickers, bewildered by the sudden raid, galloped for cover. But 60 were rounded up, and a flock of investigations soon got underway. However, the boys all adhered to the code of the underworld: don't talk.

On May 21, in the largest attempt to crack the wall of silence surrounding the famed meeting, a federal grand jury in New York City handed down indictments against 27 men. They were charged with conspiring to obstruct justice. A nationwide roundup began. Only a handful remain at large.

Barbara was named a coconspirator but not a defendant, since he had not been questioned.

Decides To Use Old Train Ticket

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — Austin W. Smith is finally getting around to using a 52-year-old railroad ticket.

Smith paid the 15-cent fare for the five-mile trip from Estill Springs to Decherd, Tenn., on June 24, 1907 but didn't make the journey.

Arrangements have been made for the Louisville & Nashville's Dixie Flyer to make an unscheduled stop Wednesday at Estill Springs to take on Smith as a passenger. Smith said the conductor has been instructed to honor the old ticket, which at current prices would cost 25 cents.

STRIKE FAILS

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Spanish Communists failed today in their attempt to stage a 24-hour general strike in protest against the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. Reports from labor centers throughout the nation showed even less absenteeism from work than normally.

Rubber plantations in Ceylon and Malaya were started when Henry Wickham, an Englishman, smuggled some rubber seeds out of Brazil in 1876.

City Playgrounds Have Enjoyed Busy Opening Week

HERE WE GO . . . down the sliding board.

HIGH MAN . . . on the jungle gym.

BATTER UP . . . at an afternoon ball game.

LOOK MA! . . . only one hand (and two legs).

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's nine playgrounds have been bustling this week following their opening on Monday.

According to Gordon Goodman, recreation director, attendance has been better this year than in the past. Goodman attributed the increase to a greater local child population.

The playgrounds will be open with trained playground leaders on hand for seven weeks of planned fun and entertainment.

Each week's activities will be centered around a different theme including: Get acquainted week, nature week, Independence Day and United Nations Week, drama and story-telling week, Indian week, music and dance week, and youth fitness week. Such activities as arts and crafts, games, tricks, dramatics, dancing, sports, and many others will be included.

Special events such as a pet show, game tournaments, a carnival, a circus, roller skating, and an arts and crafts exhibit will highlight the program. Even with all the planned activities children will be children. At the parks you can see almost any activity from balancing on seesaws, sliding down sliding-boards, and playing baseball to hanging up-side-down on an acting bar and playing old maids. Larger children have even been observed balancing on the top of rolling garbage cans which have been made from oil drums.

All parks will be open from 9:00 a.m. to 12 Noon and from 3:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday with the exception of Meadowbrook Park and Guy Smith Stadium. The stadium will be open from 9:00 a.m. to 12 Noon and Meadowbrook Park will run from 3:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m.

Goodman said the park staff this year is better than it has been in past years and the leaders have been around children and know how to handle them.

Safety is stressed during the park hours. The park grounds are kept clean of glass and sharp objects and the equipment is kept in top notch condition for the safety of the children. Each park is also equipped with a first aid kit to be used in the event of an accident.

It was pointed out that no serious accident has occurred at a park in two years. The last serious accident was recorded when a child was struck by a car while crossing the street.

Goodman said he hoped the excellent safety record could be kept up. Whether for play, picnic or just relaxing under the shade trees, the Greenville Playgrounds hold fun and enjoyment for the whole family.

LIKE ANY OTHER DAY
STARKS, Maine (AP)—Barlow D. Nichols treated Wednesday like any other day, but his family noted it was his 105th birthday. The family said he isn't allowed much excitement now, in contrast to his life when he was a cook for the mule trains supplying the gold fields in the Dakotas in the 1870s.

Cheese is made in about 500 varieties.

Deny Wrong In Big Beck Loan

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Teamsters President Dave Beck and two trucking company officials have denied there was anything wrong in a $200,000 loan made to Beck by the other two while he headed the Teamsters Union.

Indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury were Beck, 64; Roy Fruehauf, president of the Fruehauf Trailer Co. of Detroit; and Burge Seymour of New Preston, Conn., president of Associated Transport, Inc., New York.

Fruehauf and Seymour said the loan, since repaid, was made to Beck because he had previously made them loans when they needed them.

The indictment charged them with violation of the Taft-Hartley Act, one section of which prohibits union officers from accepting payments from management officials, and vice versa.

The $200,000 payment was made to Beck in 1954. In Seattle Wednesday Beck had no comment. His attorney, Charles S. Burdell, said that "naturally we'll fight this charge."

Burdell indicated he would seek postponement of the June 24 date on which Beck is expected to make his plea.

Suing Family For Chair Fall

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Sol E. Handler, 60, is suing his daughter and son-in-law for $25,000 because he fell out of a chair while babysitting at their home.

The suit alleges he suffered a leg injury which aggravated a heart condition when he fell from a defective chair. He was watching his grandson, Adam, 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Messinger.

The Messingers declined comment.

Former Freedom - Fighter In Hungary Builds New Life

By ROLLO TAYLOR

Spartanburg Journal Staff Writer
Written for The Associated Press
SPARTANBURG (AP) — A little over two years ago, 21-year-old Gedeon Peteri ran up a flight of stairs to help capture a Budapest radio station.

His advance was cut short by the cold muzzle of a Russian sub-machine gun cradled by Red security police.

This morning, Gedeon walked up another flight of stairs. He met no resistance until he said in crisp English: "Good morning. I'm your Fuller brush man."

There are some who had rather face the machine gun than an irate American housewife uninterested at the moment in brushes. Gedeon—whose last name is pronounced Pee-tree—knows better. He prefers the brushes.

Gedeon doesn't mind the housewives; in fact, he rather likes to meet people. This trait might be one of the keys to his remarkable courage.

Two years ago, Gedeon didn't know a word of English. He had never driven a car, and considered himself a jazz-band drummer.

Now he drives a 1953 model car, plays the drums only for his own pleasure, and has become an accomplished speaker.

A few weeks ago, Gedeon spoke to the Spartanburg Kiwanis Club. He was received so well, so warmly, that other civic clubs jumped at a chance to hear him.

He's making the green pea and mashed potato circuit a regular break in his work week. Naturally, he still has a little trouble with his words. His first attempt at "chaos" came out "chay-oose."

When speaking of his native land, it comes out "Ong-ar-ee."

Yet these accents only serve as emphasis to Gedeon's story.

After the security police kept the Hungarian freedom fighters from the radio station, Gedeon joined the group as it swept to the main square in Budapest.

The group managed to take a cutting torch and burn through the supports of a giant Stalin statue. But as that statue crashed to the ground, Hungary crashed into another period of agony. The Red Army came back.

With his wife, Enikoe, 18, and his infant son, Gedeon set out for the Austrian border in a train. He rode between the cars on a coupling. His wife managed to find space in a crowded toilet compartment.

Arrested before he could cross the border, Gedeon was being led to the police barracks when a stranger stopped police to say the Peteri family had come to visit her. She claimed them as cousins.

Released, the Peteris then managed to hide under a load of hay in an ox-drawn cart which was plodding across under the very shadows of a Russian tank cannon guarding the border.

From the Austrian border, they lived in a temporary camp in Switzerland and came to the United States and Camp Kilmer under Congress' special act to admit the Hungarian refugees.

From Clinton, Dr. and Mrs. Charles L. Josa, themselves Hungarians by birth, agreed to sponsor the young family. Gedeon's success in Spartanburg supported the doctor's faith in the young man.

At first, he worked at an armature firm, working with his hands rather than his voice. Then slowly, with the aid of television and his newspaper, Gedeon picked up not only English but the American idom as well. Enikoe, busy with the Peteri children—there are two now—manages English as well as her husband. She still relies on her Hungarian cookbook to see that her family is properly fed. She admits her taste for American food is growing but the borsch and goulash still prevail.

Whether goulash or hot dogs, their meals are eaten without the heavy tread of hognall boots or the rude knock at their door. There are no tanks in the street, no cannon fire, no security police.

In Hungary, Gedeon wanted to be a lawyer but the Russians would not allow it. Now he's in the United States not as a lawyer but as a door-to-door salesman.

Bombs Explode As Castro Talks

HAVANA (AP)—Three bombs exploded in Havana Wednesday night during a television appearance by Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Castro during his telecast made no mention of the bombings, which occurred in areas of the city away from the TV studio.

There were no reports of injuries or damages from the bombings, which were reminiscent of tactics used by Castro's underground during the terrorist campaign in Havana against President Fulgencio Batista.

Castro told his TV audience he would unmask elements of the press he accused of campaigning against his government.

Obviously nettled by editorial and other criticism of his land redistribution program, he said the newspapers would prefer to forget the "corrupt past and all the immoralities of past governments."

He did not explain what action he plans against the press. But

He'd rather have it that way. "This is our home," Gedeon says quietly, "for this we thank almighty God."

Mayor Nervous As Brigitte Wed

PARIS (AP) — Brigitte Bardot and Jacques Charrier were married at the town hall of suburban Louveciennes this morning by a nervous mayor.

The ceremony was almost an anticlimax in the complicated scenario the couple had improvised in their effort for secrecy.

Charrier said Tuesday they had already been married. Anne-Marie Bardot, Brigitte's mother, confirmed that Wednesday. But both refused to be specific about where or when the ceremony had been held and no one was able to find a record of the event.

The sexy 24-year-old movie star met Charrier, 25, while they were costarring in their latest movie.

She previously was married to director Roger Vadim and only recently broke her engagement to guitar player Sacha Distel.

Brigitte and Jacques calmly said "ouis," but Mayor Fernand Guillaume muffed his lines. The couple broke out into giggles.

Arts And Crafts Workshop Draws Large Attendance Of Teachers

Eighty students will complete Friday of this week at East Carolina College an intensive two-week study of arts and crafts, with emphasis on work in the elementary grades. Of those enrolled, 95 percent are teachers.

The course in arts and crafts is being offered this year for the second consecutive summer as a workshop on the senior-graduate level.

Registration this summer was limited to 80 students selected from 110 applicants. To attend, several participants are traveling approximately 170 miles each day back and forth from their home town.

Three-hour classes meet Monday through Friday in the Wahl-Coates Laboratory School on the campus.

Dr. Wellington B. Gray, head of the East Carolina art department, is director of the workshop. He has as assistant Thomas E. Mims of Henderson, graduate student.

To develop ideas for effective and stimulating teaching is the main objective of the workshop, according to Dr. Gray. The use of inexpensive and readily available materials is receiving emphasis as students work on such projects as plaster and enamel jewelry, glass mosaics, cardboard weaving, and printing with dies of unusual materials.

Bob Reynolds 75 Today; Little Changed

Designer Annoyed That Men Dislike To Dress

By DOROTHY ROE

Elsa Schiaparelli says American men are lazy and sloppy. This also is true, in a lesser degree, of all men, even Europeans, says the imperious Schiaparelli, whose ideas on dress and manners have left an imprint on a generation of international society.

The Paris designer is annoyed because men won't take the trouble to dress up any more.

"I get more disgusted with men all the time — particularly traveling Americans," she says. "They start out on a trip to Europe and never bother to pack a dinner jacket. This is not only stupid — it's bad manners."

"Dozens of times recently I have invited a man to a dinner party, mentioning that he should wear a black tie, only to be told gaily that he didn't bring one along. Invariably he adds — 'I'll just have to come as I am.'"

"When the last prospective guest said he didn't bring his dinner clothes, I replied, 'Oh, I'm so sorry. Next time please bring them, and I'll ask you to dinner then. This time I'll just have to give you a rain check.'"

"After all, you have to draw the line somewhere. If you don't, men will be arriving at dinner parties in bathing trunks."

Schiaparelli takes a dim view of all phases of the current American craze for casual living.

"Give a man a chance and he'll be so casual that he won't bathe, shave or comb his hair. He'll just depend on his animal magnetism to get him by," she says.

Schiaparelli aired her views during one of her frequent trips to New York to check on her many American enterprises.

There is a touch of grey in the hair at his temples.

But that's about all the change in the man who made news here and in Washington in the years between World War I and II.

Today, 14—nearly 15—years since he relinquished his seat in the Senate, Bob Reynolds still speaks with the vigor, the conviction he expressed in those depression-pre-war years.

He hasn't changed his tune. He's still an ardent nationalist.

Labeled an isolationist in those years when Hitler and Mussolini were flexing their muscles in Europe, he still calls that label a "smear."

"There never was such an animal as an isolationist," he said. "I was never an isolationist. I have always been an American nationalist. . . and I'm more so today."

An American nationalist, he explained is one "who thinks more of his country than any other country and puts the interests of his country ahead of any other country."

He called Winston Churchill a symbol of British nationalism and said what the United States needs today is a Churchill.

Such a nationalist, he said, would stop this "giveaway" in foreign aid.

"We are the biggest simp on the face of the earth," he said in commenting on foreign aid.

"I don't know of a nation in Europe which is grateful for what we have done. . . While we burden ourselves with taxes, the ones we're trying to aid are laughing at us."

"You ought to know that it is absolutely impossible to buy friendship."

"We've got to stop this giveaway before we pauperize ourselves."

Turning to Russia, he drew the allegory of two strange dogs uncertain whether to growl or wag their tails.

"If the whole world would stop talking about war, the threat of war, the fear of war, maybe we could get some place," he said.

He said the more the United States publicizes incidents and military build up, the more propaganda Russia has with which to "sell" the rest of the world on the idea America is a warmonger.

On segregation:

"I am of the opinion the question of segregation definitely—definitely—should be left to the South to be settled by the South through (the principle of) states' rights."

"If those who talk about us would leave us alone to meet the problem, there would not be nearly as much difficulty in the long run."

The South has come a long way in meeting the problem, he said. And, he continued, "Look at the progress the Negro has made in the South. . . His has outstripped any other race in history in its limited time. . . One hundred years ago they were slaves. Today they are university presidents, surgeons, presidents of corporations."

On public affairs:

"Americans don't take enough interest in public affairs, in politics. . . They don't evidence enough interest in local, state and national affairs. . . They'd be better off if they did, and so would the nation."

As for Bob himself:

"I don't feel any older than I did when I was 50."

"I enjoy life. I feel good. I'm healthy. I eat sensibly. I get enough exercise. I weigh 185, the same as I have weighed for 45 years."

On exercise:

"I get my exercise horseback riding. That way, the horse exercises and there is no strain on my heart."

He admits to enjoying an occasional dip in the swimming pool. But what's more enjoyable is just to lie in the sun after that dip.

He had no special birthday plans — "One day is just like another now."

His daughter, Mamie, and the household staff may have something to say about that.

The Graniteers, first-half season winners, showed their championship caliber last night as they battled from behind to defeat the Industrial League All-Stars, 9-5, before a big crowd at Guy Smith Stadium.

Trailing 5-0 after the first two innings, the champs cut loose on All-Star pitching for three runs in the third and then pulled out front to stay with a five-run up-

Casper Plays In Canadian Open

MONTREAL (AP)—The weather and the condition of the Islesmere course appeared to be two big factors to consider today as a 149-man field, including Bill Casper, the newly crowned U. S. Open champion, began play in the Canadian Open Golf Championship. Fresh from the U.S. Open, played in changeable weather, the touring pros had been expecting to give shorter Islesmere a licking. They changed their tune after a couple of days of practice over the 6,695-yard, par 36-36-72 layout.

Elks Edge Pepsi In Pitching Duel

Frank Moye and Leo Cannon hooked up in a pitching duel yesterday afternoon and only a freak play in the sixth inning kept the game from going into extra innings as the Elks edged Pepsi-Cola, 1-0.

Both pitchers gave up only four hits but little Leo Cannon was the one that had to take the heart-breaking defeat.

The game entered the final inning in a scoreless tie but with two out, Jerry Clark got credit for the fourth hit off Cannon, a triple.

Danny Cain got the first walk off Cannon and then a pitch got away from Cannon and Clark came romping home with the winning run.

Clark was the big star of the game as he collected three of the four hits dished out by Cannon. Gaskins had the only other hit.

Michael Prewett had two hits, including a triple in the sixth, to pace the losers at the plate.

Lions Score 4-2 Against Texaco

The Lions scored four runs in the first inning and then backed James Gilliam and Graham Register's pitching to the hilt in defeating Texaco, 4-2.

The Lion pitchers allowed only five hits and were in trouble only in the third when Texaco picked up a couple of runs.

Register, starting off at short-stop, connected with a two-run double in the first inning to highlight the Lions' big inning. He later scored on Lee Whitehurst's single.

Activity in the loop today will send Kiwanis against the V.F.W. Texaco

Milwaukee Slump Shrinks Lead

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer
What's with the Milwaukee Braves?

They've lost 10 of their last 15 and have been shut out three times in the last five games. Is this the beginning of the end to their hold on the National League pennant? Or is this just another of those slumps, such as they had and shrugged off while winning the flag the past two years.

Either way, they have only a

Meet Tonight For NCAA Title

OMAHA (AP)—Oklahoma State and Arizona meet tonight in the championship game of the NCAA college baseball world series with each seeking a first title. Oklahoma State moved into the championship round via a 4-0 win over Fresno State Wednesday night.

Both Arizona and Oklahoma State have won three and lost one in the double elimination tourney.

half-game edge left from what was a bulging, 4½-game lead a month ago after dropping a two-night doubleheader at Los Angeles Wednesday night. They were checked on five hits by lefthander Sandy Koufax while losing the opener 10-2, then were blanked on two hits by Danny McDevitt, another lefty, as the Dodgers took the second game 4-0.

That put second place San Francisco, a 7-5 winner over Cincinnati, just one game behind in the "lost" column and within .009 percentage points of the champs. The sweep hoisted the Dodgers into fourth place, one percentage point behind Pittsburgh after the Pirates' 5-2 loss to the Chicago Cubs. Both the Dodgers and Bucs are only 2½ games from the top.

St. Louis whipped Philadelphia 10-4 in the other NL game.

As a refresher, the Braves blew almost all of an 8½-game lead with a 3-8 slump in early September before winning the flag in 1957. Last year they dropped nine of 15 at this same state of the race but came out of the spin by building a quick 3½-game lead.

They blew that, too, before taking over for good in July.

They've lost behind their best pitchers in this present skid, with Lew Burdette dropping two, Bob Rush three, and Bob Buhl one. In Wednesday night's opener, southpaw ace Warren Spahn failed to finish a five-run first inning for his third defeat in his last four decisions.

The Braves, getting a first game home run from Johnny Logan against Koufax (3-1), who gained his first complete game while beating Milwaukee a second time this year, had only a pair of singles by Hank Aaron in the nightcap. McDevitt (5-6), walked three, struck out two.

Los Angeles broke through a two-hit shutout by Joey Jay (2-5) in the seventh of a bases-loaded walk and an infield out, then added two in the eighth off Bob Trowbridge on a single by Don De-meter and Gil Hodges' double.

The Giants broke a 2-2 tie with five runs in the sixth against Orlando Pena (3-5) on three singles, one a two-run smack by Willie Kirkland, three walks and an error. Cal Neeman, who singled and scored the tying run in the seventh for the Cubs, hit a three-run, inside-the-park homer in the eighth to beat Pirate southpaw Harvey Haddix (4-5), who has lost three to Chicago. Bill Henry (5-3) won it in relief.

The Cards made it 9 out of 11 with Ray Jablonski and Bill White each driving in three runs. A five-run fifth put it away against reliever Humberto Robinson (1-1) while lefty Marshall Bridges held the Phils to five hits and one run for a winning, 5 1-3-inning relief job in his major league debut.

Johansson Keeps Publicized Right Under Wraps

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP)—Is Lagemar Johansson a bum or is he holding back in training? The chances are the question won't be answered until the night of June 25 when the Swedish challenger steps into the ring against world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson at Yankee Stadium in New York.

His workout Wednesday was a typical one for the solidly built 26-year-old from Goteborg. He showed a snappy, sometimes stiff left jab against three regular sparring partners, and his brother, middleweight Rolf. The touted right hand again was used sparingly and once more without power.

The seven-round boxing drill was watched by four ex-champions, Jersey Joe Walcott and Jimmy Braddock (heavyweights), Gus Lesnevich (light heavyweight) and Barney Ross (lightweight and welterweight).

All agreed on one thing. Inge-mar is in wonderful condition.

New Cuban Dazzler Tops Akins

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cubans in the Miami area today hailed what they called "the new Kid Gavilan" in the person of Luis Manuel Rodriguez, a lanky, fast-punching youngster from Camaguey.

Rodriguez soundly whipped former welterweight champion Virgil (Honeybear) Akins of St. Louis in a 10-round nationally televised fight Wednesday night and made a solid impression in his first appearance in this country.

Kid Gavilan ruled the welterweight division from 1952 to 1954, and Rodriguez, 22 years old, hopes to follow in his footsteps. The young Cuban is unbeaten in 22 fights and operates much on the order of the speedy Gavilan.

Using a flurry of left jabs and right hooks, Rodriguez won all but a couple of rounds in the opinion of Referee Cy Gottfried and two ringside judges. About 2,600 saw the fight in the exhibition hall.

Although there were no knockdowns, Akins was a tired, beaten man at the end, and Rodriguez was still throwing stinging punches that had closed the former champion's left eye.

Akins won the title June 6, 1958, and lost it to Don Jordan in Los Angeles Dec. 5.

Eddie Yawitz, St. Louis druggist and co-manager of Akins, was boiling mad over the outcome of the Rodriguez fight.

"I don't appreciate these kind of fights," he said. "I will put Akins in with any of the top four welterweights today, and he'll beat them all."

"I thought that this fighter (Rodriguez) would fight a little bit at least, but all he does is jump around and throw what he calls punches."

"In the clinches he was bending Akins' arms back, and at the end of four rounds Virgil was complaining that he couldn't even bend his elbows."

Akins weighed 148½ to Rodriguez' 147 and at 32 is 10 years older than the Cuban.

"At 147 he was a little too heavy," said Rodriguez' manager, Ernesto Corrales. "He usually fights at about 144. So it took him a little longer to get started than he usually does. It was not his best fight. If he fights Akins in Cuba at the right weight he will knock him out in four to six rounds."

Wendell Carr Is Added To Staff

Wendell Carr, former Wake Forest College basketball star, and basketball coach at North-west High School in Winston-Salem for the past two years, has been added to the East Carolina College coaching staff as graduate assistant coach of basketball.

Carr's appointment was announced by Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, Director of Athletics, and Dr. J. D. Messick, ECC president.

Carr hails from Muncie, Indiana, where his prep basketball performances attracted the attention of many college coaches. He finally decided on Wake Forest after a tour of duty in military service.

The flashy guard was a mainstay on the Wake Forest club under Coaches Murray Greason and Horace "Bones" McKinney.

Carr was selected from a field which included several other college stars and successful prep coaches. He will join new ECC head coach, Earl Smith, in September.

Young Milt Pappas His First Major League Shutout For Baltimore Club

By ED WILKS

Associated Press Sports Writer

Young Milt Pappas has his first major league shutout, and he couldn't have picked a better time to nail it.

The big right-hander, 20, put it away with the best pitching of his brief career Wednesday night for Baltimore, dropping Detroit's Tigers 4-0 with a two-hitter and halting the Orioles' skid in the American League race.

Pappas, signed two years ago off the Detroit sandlots, struck out six and didn't walk a man. He had a perfect game going until Lew Burberet got the first of the Tigers' two singles with two out in the fifth inning. The other hit, in the sixth, was by Jim Bunning, who allowed only four Baltimore hits and had a perfect game for the third time in his last four decisions.

Pappas retired the last 11 men in a row while gaining a 6-3 record.

That left the fourth-place Birds, who have lost five of seven since tying for first last week, 3½ games behind Cleveland's league-leading Indians, whose game at Boston was postponed because of cold weather. The loss barred the Tigers, who had won three straight, from a second place tie with the Chicago White Sox, beaten 7-3 at New York.

Pappas' last-place tie with Boston by beating Kansas City 7-2. The Orioles, who had lost three straight, broke through Bunning's perfect spell when Gus Triandos and Chico Carrasquel hit solo home runs in the fifth inning. It was Triandos' 15th, giving him at least one against every club in the AL this season, and Chico's third. A single by Al Pilarcik, Gene Woodling's triple, and an error produced the other two Orioles runs in the seventh.

The fifth place Yankees returned to 500 with their second straight over the White Sox. Mickey Mantle's 14th homer, a two-out wallop into the third deck in right field at Yankee Stadium, capped a wrap-up, five-run second inning against loser Ray Moore (1-5).

Bob Turley (6-7) made it six straight over the White Sox since August, 1956, but needed Ryne Duren's relief over the last 2-3 innings.

Turley, who has been suspected of having a "dead arm" by Manager Casey Stengel, struck out six in the first two innings but then tired quickly. The big right-hander, who won 21 last year, finished with nine strikeouts, walking four and giving up eight hits.

Camilo Pascual (5-7), who had lost three in a row and hadn't won since May 27 despite five consecutive complete games, handed the A's their fourth consecutive loss with an eight-hitter. He fanned eight and was backed by two-run homers from Rookie Bob Allison and Rezo Bertolia. It was Allison's 17th. Bertolia's eighth, and boosted the Senators' AL leading total to 80. Ned Garver (5-5) lost it.

Will Telecast 3 Southern Conference Grid Games

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP)—

Football games involving at least three Southern Conference teams—Virginia Tech, West Virginia and Georgia Washington—will be televised this fall.

Wallace Wade, conference commissioner, made the announcement Wednesday at the final session of the annual meeting of Southern Conference athletic directors. Wade said the television producers already have sold the telecasts to 35 stations with hopes of bringing another 17 into the field.

Wade said the first game televised would be between Navy and William and Mary Sept. 26. But a CBS executive in Washington, D. C., said later that date had been set aside for an NCAA national telecast.

It also was pointed out that NCAA regulations restrict a team to two telecasts, one regional and one national. Navy annually appears in the national viewing of the Army-Navy game and, under the schedule outlined by Wade, the Midshipmen would be appearing in another regional telecast Nov. 14.

The Southern Conference commissioner was not available for comment. The commissioner said the telecasts will cover an area from Maine to Florida. The Southeastern Conference has requested its territory be blacked out.

The games Wade said would be televised are:

Sept. 26—Navy vs. William and Mary at Annapolis, Md.; Oct. 10—Virginia Tech vs. Florida State at Blacksburg, Va.; Oct. 31—West Virginia vs. Penn State at Morgantown, W. Va.; and Nov. 14—Navy vs. George Washington at Annapolis, Md.

In other action, the conference agreed to play a round-robin schedule in baseball next season. A proposal to play a round-robin schedule in basketball, however, was voted down.

Robert K. Faris of George Washington was elected president. Edward L. Teague of The Citadel was named vice president, and Milt Drew of William and Mary was selected as secretary.

Diz Puts Life In Gashouse Gang

ST. LOUIS, Mo., (AP) — The fearless, brawling Gas House Gang sounded more like a group of altar boys Wednesday night until Jerome (Dizzy) Dean took the microphone.

Old Diz brought the 25th anniversary ceremonies to life and showed 16,767 fans what they have been missing all these years.

Dizzy started slowly by saying how glad he was to be back in St. Louis, "where I was, after all, a pretty fair country pitcher."

He called St. Louis fans the "greatest in the country" and offered this prediction: "There won't be any clubs moving away from this town at all . . . no more." This was a reference to the old St. Louis Browns.

Then Dizzy brought the house down by thanking the organization which had made his appearance possible and naming his sports casting sponsor — a rival brewery to the one which owns the Cardinals.

As if that wasn't enough, he repeated a commercial of the same firm.

As an encore Dean took the microphone again and stomped out the Mudcat Band tune he had made famous, "Wabash Cannonball."

Diz was through then, but he had only started the show. Pepper Martin, Rip Collins, Joe (Ducky) Medwick, and others took a turn at bat while Dizzy — now 255 pounds and white haired — fogged them in.

Medwick gave the fans a thrill by going for the left field bleachers. One of his drives made it but was barely foul.

Average Student Still 'Average' In TV Courses

CHAPEL HILL — How effective is teaching-by-television for the (1) superior student, (2) the below-average student, (3) the average student?

Delegates attending the first national In-School Television Workshop at the University of North Carolina have gauged the impact of video instruction on three levels of students according to their abilities.

TV teaching helps the superior student and the below-average pupil to a marked degree.

With the average student, however, there is no significant difference between the amount of information absorbed by TV teaching as compared with traditional means of instruction.

Over 200 teachers are here from 15 states, taking part in discussions and demonstrations of classroom teaching with a "teleteaching" and a "receiving teacher" who follows up the TV instruction broadcast. The Ford Foundation's Fund for Advancement of Education is the sponsor.

The comments on receptiveness of students according to their standing in classes was made at a group discussion at the University of North Carolina.

One of the "receiving teachers" cited an example of a below-average pupil who performed much better after being exposed to TV instruction. The students who had difficulty learning "concepts in the textbooks" did much better after using the TV facilities.

Another group of science students who had failed the previous year did "quite acceptable work" through the in-school TV medium.

One noticeable asset of TV instruction, a number of teachers agree, is "increased proficiency in note-taking." This was observed especially in history courses.

What are the drawbacks noted by the teachers? Too many students come to rely on TV as a crutch, it was declared. Some students assume they can get all the material needed through the TV set. Teachers must impress upon them that supplementary study is necessary. The role of the "receiving teacher" was emphasized several times in the discussions here.

POOR PREACHING

Revolutionary Zeal In Iraq Is Wearing Thin

Editor's note — William L. Ryan has revisited Iraq, a country he last saw just before the 1958 revolution which killed the king. In this dispatch, written free of censorship, he describes the current atmosphere.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — For the past few weeks nobody in Baghdad, as far as can be learned has spat on an American.

Perhaps the atmosphere of carnival is wearing off in Iraq. The confused young men charging about the streets of Iraqi cities, intoxicated by nose-thumbing slogans, went on a monumental binge after the revolution last July.

Now the ardor is fading a bit. Even the uniformed youngsters of the "popular resistance forces" seem bored. They still stop cars and search some, but the old zeal is gone.

Iraqi soldiers still live in tents on the U.S. Embassy grounds. A soldier with fixed bayonet looks at the credentials of those who go in. Iraqi intelligence men haunt the place. But it's not so annoying as it once was.

Evidently the situation for employers is easing a bit, though the syndicates — unions hastily formed and dominated by Communists — still make it possible for a worker to defy his boss on the flimsiest of pretexts.

Red banners with violent slogans hang on buildings or flutter over the streets, more in evidence than the traditional green of Islam.

Women with black veils covering their heads and faces, black abbas billowing about them, squat unceremoniously in the dust-covered streets to gossip and attend to the needs of squalling children. Kurdish porters with incredible loads on their backs stagger doggedly through the streets, oblivious to propaganda. Stolid farmers belabor slow-moving, heavily burdened donkeys weaving their way along the crowded sidewalks.

Their landlords, once entitled to the deferential respect due feudal lords, mutter glumly to one another in the coffee houses about the confiscation of lands under the revolutionary regime.

Workers at key city squares in Baghdad, sweltering in the cruel sunshine, labor against time to erect expensive triumphal arches for the revolution anniversary July 14. The job keeps a corps of workers busy.

Bookstores display the latest pamphlets published in Communist countries. The shopkeepers have little choice about this. Newspapers with dreary unanimity follow the lead of the Communist press in spreading the clichés of Communist propaganda. All refer to Iraq's future as one of popular democracy. All pay tribute to the Soviet Union.

Everywhere, on pillars, in shop windows, on buildings, there are pictures. There are pictures of renowned revolutionary poets, pictures of Communist heroes like Lenin, Stalin and Khrushchev. But the picture which dominates all the others in the hot, dusty, dirty and overcrowded streets is that of the premier, Maj. Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem.

At one stage the Communists were ready to grab, at the least, a large share of governmental authority. Suddenly they pulled back.

It was a bitter pill to swallow for those who believed the party ready to move. Relatively small in number, the disciplined hard core commanded the only well-organized political party. It had control of virtually all mass organizations. Street mobs were its playthings. It was ready to use the new-born popular resistance as a civilian striking arm.

Soviet and Communist bloc penetration had been swift and heavy. Many hundreds of foreign Communists poured in; technical teams, cultural teams, propaganda training teams, engineering, economic and military missions, experts in swarms.

Kassem apparently still had army support, but the eager ones among the Communists seemed confident they could handle the problem.

Then the Communists backtracked, called off an "education campaign" for participation in the government, proclaimed their loyalty to Kassem.

What caused this reversal? First, Kassem's resistance to the Communists seemed to have stiffened.

Then, despite a great deal of noise hitting at President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, it was plain Nasser still had considerable personal following in Iraq. And Nasser had turned violently on communism.

For Moscow it became a choice: take power in a country which still could blow up or retain whatever gains Soviet policy had made in the Middle East toward long-range goals. Moscow risked provoking a solid Middle East anti-Communist front under Nasser leadership. Iraq, lacking a frontier with a Communist power, might not long be held firmly in the Red grip.

The Communists' Iraqi party secretary general, Salam Adil, attended international Communist meetings in Moscow. He came home and proclaimed: no party alone could "shoulder the responsibility of liberating the country."

Kassem at this time, no attempt to grabbing power. Moscow, alert to the complexities of the Arab East, seems in no hurry to take rash chances. Attractive as oil-rich Iraq might seem in the role of Communist satellite, the risk is great. Nasser defeated the Communists once before in Syria, when they were almost strong enough to grab for power. They have reason to respect him, even now.

Only 2 POW Escapees Now Unaccounted For

WASHINGTON (AP) Out of the grand total of 2,803 men who escaped from prisoner-of-war camps in this country during World War II, only two one-time German soldiers are still missing.

Until very recently, there were three in this exclusive club. But on May 10, Kurt Rossmel, now 52, once an officer in the Panzer Division of Adolf Hitler's North Afrika Corps, walked voluntarily into the FBI field office at Cincinnati, Ohio. Suffering from arthritis, he said he wanted to give himself up.

An accomplished linguist, Rossmel escaped from a North Carolina camp in 1945, adopted the name Frank Ellis, got a social security card and made a fairly comfortable life for himself for 14 years in the Chicago area, working as a punch-press operator, elevator man, bartender and waiter.

Once, about five years ago, a national magazine ran his picture. A fellow worker thought it looked an awful lot like Frank Ellis. But Frank's boss laughed off the idea, and nothing came of the incident — except that Frank shortly afterward changed jobs and associates.

For him, the tap on the shoulder never came. But he apparently got tired of waiting for it.

At an immigration service hearing at Cincinnati June 4, Rossmel was ruled deportable. However, he requested, and got, permission to leave the country voluntarily so that he might re-enter as a regular immigrant and apply for American citizenship.

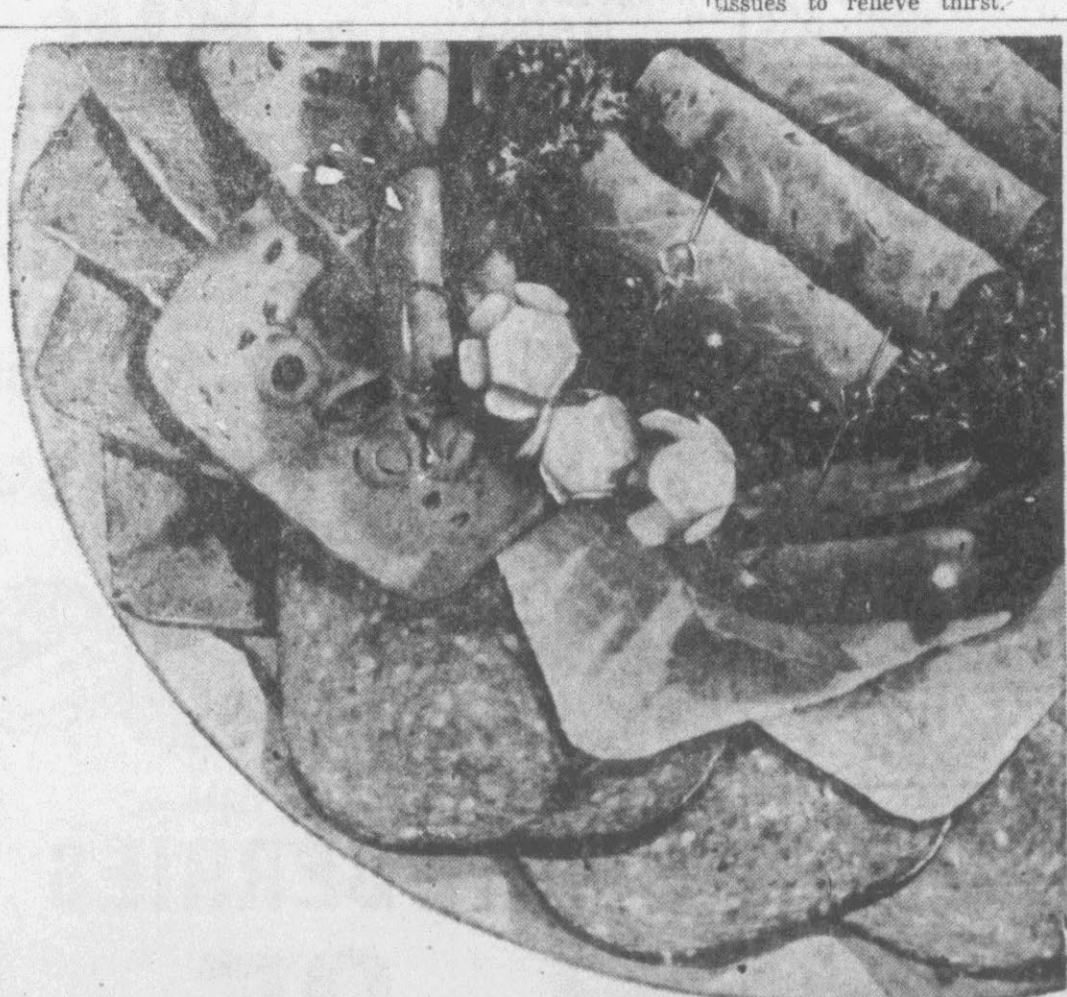

With Rossmel's surrender, the unaccounted for dropped off to: 1. Georg Gaertner, who if living would now be 38.

2. A man who always insisted on calling himself Charly King, but who according to the FBI is really named Curt Richard Westphal. He would be 37.

Pictures of both these men still appear on FBI wanted fliers on the walls of some federal buildings, but no active search is being made for them. So far as is known, they have broken no laws in this country.

Senators Seek Make It Certain U. S. Planes Prepared

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators set out today to make it as certain as possible that American patrol planes fly with guns loaded and in working order in the future.

Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) joined Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) in a demand that steps be taken to see to it that no American plane again is as defenseless as the converted Navy anti-submarine plane strafed by Communist MIG fighters over the Sea of Japan.

"Our planes should be fully armed and have their guns ready to fire if they are attacked," Bridges said. "We are going to investigate this situation and see what can be done about making certain that our men can fight back immediately if they are fired on."

Bridges, chairman of the Senate

Republican Policy Committee, and Johnson, the Senate Democratic leader, are top members of the Senate Preparedness subcommittee. Johnson said this group, which he heads, will decide on the basis of a Navy Department report what course it will take in the inquiry.

Navy airmen said Wednesday that a communications mishap and two useless gun mounts in their patrol plane had left them at the mercy of the Communist fighters when their one operative gun in the tail assembly was knocked out. The tail gunner was wounded before he could fire a shot.

Adm. Wallace M. Beakley told a Senate hearing Wednesday that all naval planes are under orders to return any attack. Beakley, deputy chief of naval operations, said the attacked plane did not return the fire because its tail guns were shot out.

There was temporary disagreement over why other guns in the fore part of the plane and stop its fuselage were not working.

The plane's pilot told newsmen in Japan that needed spare parts for these two turrets hadn't arrived in time.

But the Defense Department said the forward turret had been purposely taken out of commission and the other removed to make way for special reconnaissance equipment presumably radar or camera devices.

After the Washington announcement U.S. naval headquarters in Japan put out a statement saying that guns had been partially replaced by special detection equipment. It did not elaborate further.

But even if the forward guns had been working, they would have been of no use against the fighters, the Navy said.

In a report to Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, it said the forward guns in the slow patrol plane "are for the purpose of strafing submarines on the surface and are of no value against fighter aircraft."

Johnson said the fact that members of the crew were unable to defend themselves must be explored thoroughly.

"It seems incredible that equipment which should be elementary in any military plane exposed to such hazards should be missing," he said. "Americans will insist only that the facts be brought to light but that we have strong assurances that our men will not again be defenseless."

The Detroit Free Press reported in a Washington dispatch that the Navy has been holding its planes and ships together "with baling wire to stay within its budget."

of Aeronautics, as saying that spare parts."

The dispatch quoted Rear Adm. eight per cent of the Navy's Various congressional groups and for having large accumulations of unused parts.

R. E. Dixon, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said the services alterations for lacking needed parts and for having large accumulations of unused parts.

Many Cases Disposed Of In Local Recorder's Court

By CHESTER WALSH

June 12:

Judge Charles H. Wheeler disposed of 21 cases in Municipal Recorder's Court June 8. The charges ranged from public drunkenness to non-support and larceny.

Jesse V. Umphlett, R-2 city, larceny six months on the roads, sentence suspended on probation for two years, behave and not violate any law for two years, return property to Waldrop Motors and pay $20, costs deducted.

Cavin Gallin, Negro, assault on female, 30 days on roads suspended on payment of $20, costs deducted, not harm, molest or threaten Martha Thigpen, behave and not violate any law for six months. The following cases were tried in Municipal Recorder's Court

May Conclude Grandpa 'Right'

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP)—The willow switch and a visit to the woodshed may be a partial answer to curbing juvenile delinquency.

That's the opinion of Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho.

"There is no easy answer," he told the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges. He said schools, the home and public officials must do their part, but he added:

"We may well have to conclude that grandfather was right after all and that there is no substitute for the woodshed and the willow switch in the building of an industrious, civilized and disciplined human character."

Inflation Hikes Worth Of Body

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP)—Inflation has finally caught up. For years scientists have estimated the value of the chemical contents of the human body at 98 cents.

But on the basis of present day prices, the value has now gone up 11.17, says Tom Keller, instructor in chemistry at Texas Southmost College.

Periods Solved Tongue Twister

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The word concaspinsulated on a Chesterfield County building permit caused some furrowed brows. It referred to the type roof for an industrial building. Miss Patricia Harbour, secretary to the building inspector, solved the problem. She had overlooked putting in the periods. The next permit read: "Conc. asphalt insulated." Meaning concrete, asphalt, insulated.

As Dennis Sees It, Movieland Gave Up

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I think they just gave up trying to make good movies." That's the analysis of the film industry's woes by Dennis Morgan, himself a victim of the system.

Not much has been heard from Dennis since he left Warner Brothers five years ago. Now he's back in action with a TV series, "19 Beacon Street," which takes over for Tennessee Ernie Ford July 2.

Shed no tears for our boy. He earned top money for most of the 15 years he spent at WB and has lived sensibly. He looks great—just as handsome as when he sang "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" under his real name of Stanley Morner in "The Great Ziegfeld."

"I haven't made a picture in five years because the studios haven't offered me anything I thought was any good," he said. "There have been scripts, yes, but they're pretty junky. Fortunately, I'm in a spot where I won't starve if I don't do them."

His problem: too many poor pictures. He feels it's a bad thing for an actor to be under contract to a studio where his fate is determined by the bosses upstairs.

"I couldn't take parts in good pictures that were offered by other studios," he recalled. "I had to bootleg myself out to get 'Kitty Foyle.' I did a test for it without the studio's knowledge.

"So I stayed at Warners and did bad pictures. Why? Usually it was because they promised me better things would follow."

Dennis argues that the producers lost the urge to make good pictures during the easy wartime and postwar years and have never fully regained it.

"There still aren't enough hits being made to keep the theaters busy," he remarked. "It's a shame, too. The movie house used to be the center of social life, especially in a small town. Now people are out of the habit of going to the movies."

Dennis did musicals, comedies and dramas at Warners and he was offered a variety of TV series, including several Westerns. He waited until "19 Beacon Street" because he thought it was different.

ALL TIED UP

When they arrived the situation was well in hand. The wife and son had tied the man of the house to a bedpost.

More Women Today In Stock-Buying Market

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Those women you see in stockbrokers' boardrooms in increasing numbers are not just resting their feet.

They're buying stocks in ever greater volume. In the list of Americans who have bought their first share of stock in the last three years, housewives lead all the rest. Women shareowners have outnumbered men for some time. But they have increased their lead since 1956.

Some four million women classifying themselves as housewives now own stock, the biggest single group in the New York Stock Exchange's 1959 census of shareowners.

This shows that women now are 52.5 per cent of all adult shareowners, compared with 51.4 per cent in 1956 when the last census was taken. Altogether there are 12,490,000 men and women who have at least one share.

Among the newcomers to corporate stockholders lists since 1956 women outnumber men by 56.3 per cent to 43.7 per cent.

Altogether there are 6,347,000 women shareowners in the land, the stock exchange estimates through its survey, or about 11.5 per cent of the nation's adult female population. Three years ago 4,260,000 women held stock, or 8.1 per cent of their total number.

Of all women shareowners 1,275,000 are housewives who have jobs outside the home.

The increase in working housewives could be one reason that women are more and more involved in the stock market. Women have more money nowadays to spend—and to invest.

Another could be that women live intimately with inflation. As handlers of the family spending they know what has happened to their bills and to the purchasing power of their dollar. Many may look on stocks as a good hedge against this.

Capital gains through rising stock prices appeal to them, too, as compared to fixed interest returns on other investments.

Brokers add that their women customers are active bargain seekers—although finding bargains in stocks has become harder to do in a soaring bull market.

While the career girls and the other women employed in business are taking to the stock market, too, it's the housewife who is the shining light in the boardrooms these days. They now total one third of all the shareowners in the land. Their numbers have increased by 1,170,000 since 1956.

Next largest groups of shareowners are proprietors, managers and officials; professional and semiprofessional; and clerical and sales. There are many women among each of these three occupational groups.

Many employed women got their stocks through employee stock purchasing plans. Some 1,340,000 of both sexes are now investing regularly under these plans, and an estimated 2,500,000 shareowners got their first shares in this fashion.

Even those who don't work for corporations tell the stock exchange says 9 out of 10 of all shareowners feel that way.

Many women own shares in more than one company. Corporation books list a total of 14,429,000 female owners, along with 7,289,000 joint accounts. The total of stock shares held by women comes to 2,013,000,000.

More Than Sixty Foreign Models

CHARLOTTE — More than 60 different makes of foreign cars are on sale in U.S. showrooms according to a survey by the Carolina Motor Club.

By comparison, the U.S. which is the greatest car-buying country in the world, produces 16 makes—built by only 3 corporations.

"Ten years ago," Mr. T. E. Pickard, Jr., Executive Vice-President, said, "few Americans had ever heard of a foreign car, except possibly the Rolls Royce. Today the names of many of the faster selling models like Volkswagen, Jaguar, MG and Renault are household words."

The motor club official said the list of foreign cars being sold in the U. S. is likely to continue growing—at least as long as the imported car sales curve continues upward. In each of the past five years, sales have approximately doubled those of the previous years. The number of makes offered for sale has just about kept pace.

There are still many potential entries in the foreign car market in the U.S. At least five British-made cars are not exported to American dealers, and seven car-producing countries, including the U.S.S.R., do not yet export cars to the U.S.

England, selling 29 makes produced by 20 different companies, leads all countries in both number of different makes and total export sales to the U.S. West Germany, producer of the top-selling Volkswagen, ranks second in each category—15 makes. Italy sends eight makes to U.S. dealers, and France, which exports the second best-seller—Renault—markets seven makes over here.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP)—

Fire ravaged a section of Negro homes late Wednesday, demolishing six, damaging two others and leaving 25 persons homeless.

No injuries were reported in the four-alarm fire of undetermined origin.

Authorities were compiling a damage estimate. Most of the homes were small, wooden units.

U.S. railroads carry about 80 per cent of our total coal production. The other goes either by canal boats or trucks.

Law Protects Even The Robber

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—O.V. Norris, 55, picked George E. Emerson, 27, from a police lineup as the man who robbed a grocery store where Norris worked. Then Norris said to an officer: "I'll give you $50 to let me take one punch at him."

The officer refused.

No rest for this Chevy... round the clock the engine never stops!

At Washington's bustling National Airport, Allied Aviation Fueling counts on its radio-equipped Chevy to get crews and tank trucks to the right planes at just the right time. Aside from occasional time out for the usual service, its Thriftmaster 6-cylinder engine has been running 24 hours a day for the past 9 months!

Once you've got that kind of endurance working you don't worry much about lost job time. Breakdowns go out of style the day your Chevy goes into action.

The fact is, Chevrolet trucks are dead set on dropping the word "downtime" right out of the English language. And they just might, if precision engineering and top-quality materials have anything to say about it. Chevy trucks are put together to stay together—incorporating the most advanced chassis developments, the most efficient 6-cylinder and V8 engine designs. They're built to last, built to keep Chevrolet's hard-earned reputation for reliability flying high.

Going into the real heart of Chevrolet advantages is where your dealer comes in. He'll show you, in feature after feature, that you can't buy more truck dependability—in any weight class—at any price.

No job's too tough for a Chevrolet truck!

Pentagonese May Be Breaking Out

WASHINGTON (AP)—Pentagonese, a dialect of English, has burst the boundaries of the Pentagon.

Members of Congress may snort at uniformed witnesses who lapse into this strange tongue, with its cadences of an engineering manual, its verbs fabricated out of nouns, its phrases riveted together with plenty of extra words to insure rigidity. But Pentagonese expressions crop up in the speech of the members themselves and are heard at White House news conferences.

Obviously it is only a question of time before Americans who wish to communicate freely with an important segment of their countrymen will have to master the dialect for general use.

How will it sound? For a sample, here is the biography of a (purely mythical) inhabitant of Pentagon, as it might be written in Pentagonese.

"The marriage 13 May 1911 of Angus Inbasket and Penelope Scruggs may be considered to the actuation of Gen. Marcus T. Inbasket.

"Production was finalized 13 February 1912.

After appropriate lead time, emphasis was shifted to a phased training program, during which a wide spectrum of possible career configurations was evaluated.

"The program was definitized with an appointment to the military academy in August 1929.

Growth potential was apparent at an early date and typically confirmed by a standing in the upper 15.72 per cent of the class of 1933.

"Implementation of the Inbasket potential was maximized by the entrance of the United States into World War II, with attendant timewise compression of the officer promotion structure and the initial deployment of Capt. Inbasket into the upper staff echelons.

"It was during the period under consideration also that utilization with Miss Honeysuckle Picketline, daughter of Lt. Gen. Shiloh Picketline, was accomplished.

"Satellization of the new establishment was initially inhibited by problems of distance and logistics. When these were solved by the termination of hostilities, increments were annualized in the following order: Marcus T. Inbasket Jr.; Penelope S. Inbasket; Shiloh P. Inbasket. A domestic facility was established on the suburban perimeter of Washington, D.C., when Brig. Gen. Inbasket was redeployed to the Department of Defense.

"A period of steady transitioning to cognizance of matters of higher administrative responsibility followed. Outstanding accomplishments were a study of systems control of management tools, direction of a task force on paperclip procurement in its relationship to unobligated balances, and the chairing of a study group on continuous refinement of functional criteria for stenographic pools.

"Gen. Inbasket was deactivated yesterday by a random encounter with a civilian-type vehicle in the approaches to the Pentagon north parking lot.

"Funeral plans have not yet been formalized."

Ask All-Out War On Boll Weevil

PHILADELPHIA — A call for action to eradicate the boll weevil is sounded in the July issue of Farm Journal, nation's largest farm magazine.

Specifically, the magazine urges every cotton farmer to write to his Congressman urging approval of $1,893,000 appropriation to start construction of a new boll weevil research laboratory to be located at State College, Mississippi.

The Senate has approved the appropriation, but the House omitted the item from the House-approved budget. Immediate action is necessary, Farm Journal declares, if the funds are to be included in the conference committee report now being considered.

This is the time to step up boll weevil research, the magazine points out, because scientists now believe ways can be found to wipe out the boll weevil once and for all.

Getting rid of the boll weevil will save Southern cotton growers five cents on every pound of lint they produce — five cents that now is spent to poison weevils. It will double cotton growers' profits, by saving the cotton weevil destroy, equal to another five cents per pound of lint.

Proposing complete eradication of the boll weevil is not "just blue sky talk," Farm Journal insists. It points to other eradication programs that have succeeded in the South — of the cattle fever tick, the Mediterranean fruit fly, the citrus black fly, and currently the cattle screwworm.

Mark Twain liked to travel and he summed up his wanderings with, "Nothing helps scenery like name and eggs."

Just One Dog After Another

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police-man Kenneth Shipp had the dog-gonest time fighting a grass fire Wednesday.

He hastily reported the blaze after spotting it heading for a large wooden house. In the backyard, he found about 50 dogs in kennels. He freed them and heaved each one over the fence to safety.

Then Shipp broke down the front door—and found the house full of dogs in kennels. More than 100, he estimated. It took him 15 minutes to empty the building.

After the fire was out, Shipp rounded up all the dogs. He never did learn the name of the kennel owner. Didn't have time.

The world's longest cog-railway tunnel is in Switzerland. The two mile tunnel took more than 4½ years to make.

Claims Real TV Pros At Work In Daytime Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — "I think there's a lot of snobbishness about daytime television — outside and inside the business," says actor John Larkin. "But if you want to see real pros working, just take a look at the soap operas."

For almost four years Larkin has been playing the role of strong, brave, good-looking Mike Karr, male lead in CBS' daytime serial "Edge of Night." Before that he was the radio voice of Perry Mason and had leads in such popular network radio fare as "Girl Alone" and "High Adventure."

"We do a half-hour dramatic show five days a week with a minimum of rehearsal," Larkin emphasizes. "That we can turn them out at this rate is simply the result of craftsmanship and professionalism."

He adds with a touch of bitterness that, although many of the regulars acting in daytime serials are names well-known and well-regarded on Broadway, TV's soap operas are rarely tapped for evening-show casts. "It makes me laugh every time I hear that a producer is looking everywhere for talent," says Larkin. "One place producers never look is the daytime serial. And some of these people — who never look — are the very ones who suggest that the daytime serials are good places to train young actors. "That's nonsense. We do a 30-minute show with a maximum of six hours rehearsal — and if it were a night-time show of the same length there would be 16 hours of rehearsal time. That takes experience. I will admit that there are a lot of cliches in daytime serials, and I will admit that a lot of pao comes out on it."

"But I also watch considerable night-time television, and I say that a lot of pao comes out on that. And I also say that with the same amount of money and rehearsal time, we — the technical and acting crews — could do a better job. And, what's more, I often see stuff on important evening shows — bad camera work, bad acting — which wouldn't be permitted on our shows."

While Waiting, They Can Learn

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Comic books are taboo in Dr. Bruce Higley's waiting room.

Dr. Higley, a dentist, decided the youngsters might as well have something worthwhile to read while waiting their turn. So he swept out the comic books and put a set of encyclopedias in his waiting room. Now the children do their homework at his office. Some even show up then they don't have appointments just to use the books.

HE'S STARTING A LEAGUE NOWATA, Okla. (AP) — A thief broke into the Nowata High School and stole nothing but 28 football jerseys. A year ago the same thing happened.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON THE QUESTION OF THE ADOPTION OF AN ORDINANCE EXTENDING THE CORPORATE LIMITS OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, N. C. BY ANNEXING CAROLINA HEIGHTS, ADDITION NO. 1, THERE TO

The owners of the real property hereinafter described, the same being contiguous to the City of Greenville, having filed a petition requesting the City Council of the City of Greenville, N. C. to annex said property to the City of Greenville pursuant to Article 36 of Chapter 180 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, N. C. will, on Thursday, the 9th day of July, 1959, at 8:00 o'clock, P. M., in the Council Room of the Municipal Building in Greenville, N. C., hold a public hearing on the question of the adoption of an ordinance annexing the following described land to the City of Greenville:

Beginning at a point in the west property line of the Hooker Road at the southeast corner of the Tucker Circle Subdivision and running thence North 89 deg. 15 min. West to the east line of the Hillsdale Subdivision; thence South 8 deg. 15 min. West to the south-west corner of Lot No. 8 in Block 'A' of the Carolina Heights Subdivision, Addition No. 1; thence South 81 deg. 45 min. East to the southeast corner of Lot No. 6, Block 'C', Carolina Heights Subdivision, Addition No. 1; thence North 8 deg. 15 min. East to the common corner of Lots Nos. 1 and 23, Block 'C'; thence eastwardly along the southern line of Lot No. 23, Block 'C', 107 feet to the west property line of Abel Street; thence eastwardly across Abel Street to the southwest corner of Lot No. 1, Block 'D'; thence eastwardly with the southern lines of Lots Nos. 1, 14, 13 and 12, Block 'D' to the west property line of the Hooker Road; thence northwardly with the west property line of the Hooker Road to the point of beginning, as shown on map of Carolina Heights, Addition No. 1, prepared by C. A. Holliday, R. S., recorded in Map Book 9 at page 8 of the Pitt County Registry.

All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing to be held at the time and place aforesaid when they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

By order of the City Council.

Off-Duty Police Work On Pistol Range

PAINTERS . . . Off duty policemen apply a coat of paint to the field house at the local police pistol range.

Greenville Police Officers are proud of their pistol range and, as it should, they enjoy using it.

Officers have spent many off-duty hours working on the range and firing on it.

The range house, built by off-duty officers and Greenville Utility men will house the department's bullet re-loading equipment and the targets, when they are not in use.

Just yesterday, off-duty officers banded together to paint the house and construct a fence to keep curious people off the range where they might be injured.

The fifty yard range has been in use for some time, but in just recent months improvements have been made which make it easier and more enjoyable to use.

The department has also formed a competitive pistol team which has entered several matches with other departments in the state and shows signs of being a leader next year.

Even though the officers enjoy using the range, it is a dead serious business they are practicing. They are learning how to defend themselves and the public against anyone who would take life or cause injury to others. They are marksmen, upholding law and order in Greenville.

Gov. Long Taken To Louisiana Hospital

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—A weary but determined Gov. Earl K. Long was back in Louisiana today, confined to a $225-a-day hospital room overlooking the Mississippi River bridge his brother built.

Long, 63, returned Wednesday night from a 19-day stay in a Galveston, Tex., psychiatric clinic. The return trip began as he stated firm intentions of resuming his duties as chief executive of his home state.

The extent to which this will be possible, at least immediately, remains unanswered.

Nearly a dozen doctors began

Closing Exercises Of Bible School Planned For Friday Morning

The closing exercises for Vacation Bible School at the First Presbyterian Church will be held in the Sanctuary Friday morning, June 19 at 10:45 o'clock.

Parents and friends of the children attending the school are invited to come early and visit the different departments to see the accomplishments of the two-week program. After visiting in the rooms they are invited to go with their child into Fellowship Hall where refreshments will be served.

The Kindergarten Department will be served at 10:20 A.M.; the Junior at 10:30 A.M.

Each group will have a part on the program. Children of the Kindergarten will sing songs; the Primary group will recite scripture verses and sing "God is Near". Members in the Junior Department will do a choral reading.

Reverend Richard R. Gammon, assisted by the teachers, will present a certificate to each child attending. Special recognition will be given the ones with perfect attendance. Attendance at this school has been very good and a large number has maintained a perfect record.

checking today the physical condition of the ailing governor, who vows he will seek an unprecedented fourth term in December. They promised a midmorning bulletin.

Doctors at the Ochsner Foundation Hospital removed the telephone from the governor's "medium priced" room. They insisted a "no visitors" ban include politicians.

The big questions now: Will Long run again? Will his health permit it? Will he call a special legislative session to resurrect some of his pet bills that failed in the fiscal session?

Long slipped quietly and without comment into the privately owned general hospital after a plane flight from Galveston.

He immediately requested a bowl of peaches and cream. From his fifth-floor corner room he could see the big river bridge by Huey P. Long, the late Louisiana governor and U.S. Senator.

The plane flight home began just 16 minutes after Probate Judge Hugh Gibson of Galveston County had released the governor from the protective custody of the John Sealy Hospital.

His wife had signed commitment papers June 2, three days after six men had been needed to place the governor on a stretcher for a flight to Galveston. Mrs. Long claimed her husband was physically and mentally exhausted.

Wednesday she and Texas attorneys negotiated nearly seven hours before reaching the agreement that led to Gibson's dismissal.

Mrs. Long said the governor had agreed to remain at Ochsner's two weeks or longer, if necessary. Technically, Long became governor again when the Air National Guard plane crossed over the Texas-Louisiana border. He can exercise the full powers of his office unless incapacitated. Louisiana law, however, does not specify who can declare a governor incapacitated.

Man Convicted On Health Count

In a special term of City Records Court held yesterday afternoon at 4:00 p.m., Robert Hurst of 1101 Forbes Street was tried and convicted on charges of violating North Carolina Public Health laws.

Hurst was sentenced to two years in the North Carolina Sanatorium Prison Division at McCain by Judge Charles Whedbee on charges placed by the local health department.

According to health department officials, Hurst had an advanced case of tuberculosis with one lung practically collapsed, and a throat and lymph infection also.

The charge was brought against Hurst for refusing to return to a sanatorium. He is alleged to have been a patient at both the Wilson and Black Mountain TB Hospitals and he has given trouble at both places. He left the Black Mountain Hospital against doctors' orders Thursday and, upon visiting the local health department, was charged with a violation of the law.

Dr. Georgia Mills, superintendent of the Health Dept., pointed out if a patient leaves a sanatorium against the doctors' orders, he can be tried on charges of violating the public health laws and if convicted, sent to a state prison hospital.

TEACHER'S PET

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Troup, a spaniel, was given a grade of A in biology at Lynchburg College. He attended classes regularly for two years and not only showed interest in lectures but was termed the top student in seeking specimens on field trips.

Prince Edward County Negroes Urged Fight

FARMVILLE, Va. (AP)—Prince Edward County Negroes, meeting to protest school-closure plans by the county supervisors, were told Wednesday night that segregationists will be "licked everywhere" if they are beaten here.

They were warned, however, that they must make their voting strength felt if the supervisors are to be persuaded to give up their decision to shut down all public schools rather than submit to integration.

"We're going to be attacking this situation in the courts," Oliver W. Hill, chief of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People's legal staff in Virginia, told a mass meeting of 200 Negroes. "But stop depending on the courts. Go to the polls and vote intelligently."

Dr. John B. Henderson of Norfolk, co-chairman of the NAACP's Church Coordinating Committee, told the gathering that "The Lord helps those who help themselves."

An overflow crowd at the New Hope Baptist Church, 13 miles south of here applauded and shouted approval as Hill told them.

"The only way you can demonstrate to die-hard segregationists that you are of age is to get out there and cast and overwhelming vote."

The Richmond attorney has fought Prince Edward's desegregation battles since the early 1950's. He carried the case into the U.S. Supreme Court where the locality was one of five involved in the original desegregation ruling in 1954.

The Rev. L. Francis Griffin, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Farmville, hinted that a week-end boycott of Farmville stores by Negroes might have an effect on the attitude of the county's white population. And he rejected an offer of the Prince Edward Educational Foundation to help Negroes organize private schools as it plans to do for white children.

"Tell B. B. Hanbury (foundation president) if we need private schools, we believe we can run them ourselves," he said.

Firm Honored At Nat'l Convention

CHICAGO — Carolina Sales Corp., of Greenville, was honored at a national distributor convention of Sylvania Home Electronics Corp., TV marketing subsidiary of Sylvania Electric Products Inc., for outstanding sales and service during 1958.

The company, which is headed by J. T. Little as president and which has a branch operation in Columbia, S.C., received the Sylvania Service Award for 1958 "for the greatest service performance of any distributor" and received the runner-up award for Distributor of the Year "for outstanding sales programs."

Unusual Turns In Industrial Hunt

The business developing industrial prospects can, and does, take unusual turns, according to L. A. Weston, economic consultant for the Pitt County Development Commission.

Weston told commission members last night that during a recent visit to northern states, he spent two sessions of 12 hours each with one prospect. During the sessions, Weston said advantages of a Pitt County location and problems involved in a relocation move were detailed for the prospect.

Also, during the sessions, Weston said he acted as an unpaid consultant to the firm in discussions of a plant layout to reduce operational and other costs, toward placing the revised plant layout in Pitt County.
