West Hopeful Plan Will Shelve Dispute

GENEVA (AP) — The Western Allies are reported working up a new proposal to put the Berlin dispute on ice for several years and give the Soviet Union a summit conference in the fall.

The foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France are expected to put the proposal to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko soon after the Big Four conference resumes here Monday.

As outlined here, the plan contains only one change in previous Western proposals. East and West Germany would be given equal representation on a subcommittee to take preliminary steps toward reunification of Germany.

Previously the West proposed a subcommittee of 25 West Germans and 10 from the Communist East, because West Germany's population is more than three times that of the East.

In return for this concession, Western officials think the Soviets might agree to freeze the situation in Central Europe, including Berlin. But they are considerably less than optimistic.

It all depends on whether Premier Khrushchev wants any kind of settlement at all, said a highly placed Western official.

In addition to the freeze on the Berlin situation, the other key point in the plan is appointment of a Big Four commission to work on plans for reunification of Germany, the end of the Berlin occupation and a mutual security system in Central Europe.

The foreign ministers would set no deadline for the commission and the subcommittee to complete their work. That would be left for the heads of government at the summit conference.

At the end of the agreed period, another foreign ministers' meeting would be held to study the reports of the commission and the subcommittee.

"The virtue of the plan is that it would let both sides get out of the foreign ministers' conference without losing face," a Western source said.

Any proposal to put East and West Germans on a committee in equal numbers is certain to be looked on with disfavor by West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. The Western Big Three are expected to tell Adenauer the subcommittee will have no powers and will merely report to the Big Four commission.

U.S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter indicated this line at his news conference Thursday. He said he didn't feel the question of numbers "is an item of too great importance." He pointed out that the earlier Western proposal for a 25-10 ratio also provided for decisions by agreement of three fourths of the members, in effect giving either side a veto.

"If agreement had to be reached," said Herter, "the numbers on each side are not of primary importance."

Smoke, No Cancer In Mouse Research

LONDON (AP) — Mice exposed to strong doses of cigarette smoke have failed to develop lung cancer in five years of laboratory tests, the British Institute of Cancer Research reports.

Only one mouse developed a tumor, and that was blamed on a bad case of bronchitis, scientists assigned to the research project said in a report made public Thursday.

"Our failure is a striking negative result," the report added.

Now mice are being subjected to cigarette smoke plus the ingredients of smog with the same negative results, the report continued.

At Leeds University, 40 mice were subjected to concentrated cigarette smoke and atmospheric pollution. Of these 27 still are alive and none has developed lung cancer. The report did not say how the other 13 died.

At London's St. Bartholomew's Hospital, substances of tobacco smoke and smog were injected into the lungs of rats and guinea pigs and no malignancy has been found so far.

The institute did find that smoking seems to keep down the weight of animals, as it sometimes does in human beings.

"Exposure to cigarette smoke results in reduction of food the animal consumes, just as in man the smoker usually eats more sparingly," the report said.

Three Counties Will Join In Supporting Fire Tower

The Federal government has built a new lookout tower for forest fire protection in the edge of Edgecombe County just across the Pitt line about one mile north of Fountain.

According to Pitt County Forest Ranger, the new tower will be maintained six months of each year by three counties which will share equally the maintenance costs — each county supporting the new tower for two months each year.

The new tower will be equipped with a new two-way radio by state funds, while the district office in Rocky Mount will arrange for its other equipment such as the "fire-finder" and shelves for map storage.

Tyson told the Daily Reflector this morning that the tower should be in operation by this fall after tobacco harvest. Between now and the initial use of the tower, according to the County Forester, the district must do some extra work on the new 110-foot all-steel structure.

Dirt will have to be hauled in around the base and a protective wire fence must be put up on the steps.

The location of the new tower is strategic in that there have been fires in the past in that area to be covered by the structure which have gone out of control before fire-fighters could be notified. The new lookout spot, some 110 feet above ground, should aid greatly in spotting fires in the heavily wooded vicinity in time to save a much greater amount of timber, according to District Forester E.F. Corn of the Rocky Mount Office.

Library Commission Missed Out On Budget Hearing

The Sheppard Memorial Library Commission chairman was disappointed because library representatives were not given a chance to be heard by the City Council before the budget was tentatively approved.

He let the city fathers know it when he, the librarian and other representatives finally did appear at the regular meeting last night.

S. B. Underwood, chairman of the Library Commission, told the group that he had written a letter to the mayor on April 26, with a carbon copy to the city manager, asking for a formal hearing on the library's budget requests.

He said he was informed by the city manager that he would be called before the councilmen held their next budget session.

"I'm still waiting for that call," he declared.

Mayor S. Eugene West told the chairman that the council had found itself with little time left for approving the tentative budget.

A meeting was held Monday, (June 29), he said. Attempts had been made to contact both Underwood and Librarian Elizabeth Copeland but city officials had been unable to reach either.

Underwood said later in the meeting he was in town on the Monday the budget meeting was held.

Sheppard Memorial Library had requested an operating budget of $25,814 for the coming year and a capital improvements budget of $12.

In making up his recommendations, the city manager cut the library appropriation to $22,117.50, leaving the capital improvements the same.

The City Council, in considering the budget, restored $1,000 to Sheppard Memorial Library funds, at the June 29 session.

Councilman E. W. Harvey pointed out that the budget as approved is tentative and final approval will not be given until it has been advertised and left open for public inspection.

West expressed the council's appreciation to the library officials for the work they are doing.

"We might squeeze the dollar a little bit but we don't want you and your board to think we don't appreciate what you're doing," the mayor told Underwood.

Miss Copeland in a report to the council gave figures to show that the library's books have taken a big jump over the past few years.

In 1954-55, she pointed out, books circulated from the library and Bookmobile totaled 145,112. For 1958-59 the total had risen to 180,399.

Last month was the largest ever for Sheppard Memorial Library, she said, 12,209 books were lent from the main library alone.

The council also heard from J. H. Rose, who asked that they begin thinking about plans for air conditioning the library.

"We would have far more people sitting in there reading if they could bear it," he declared.

Air conditioning would also be helpful in maintaining the condition of the books, he said.

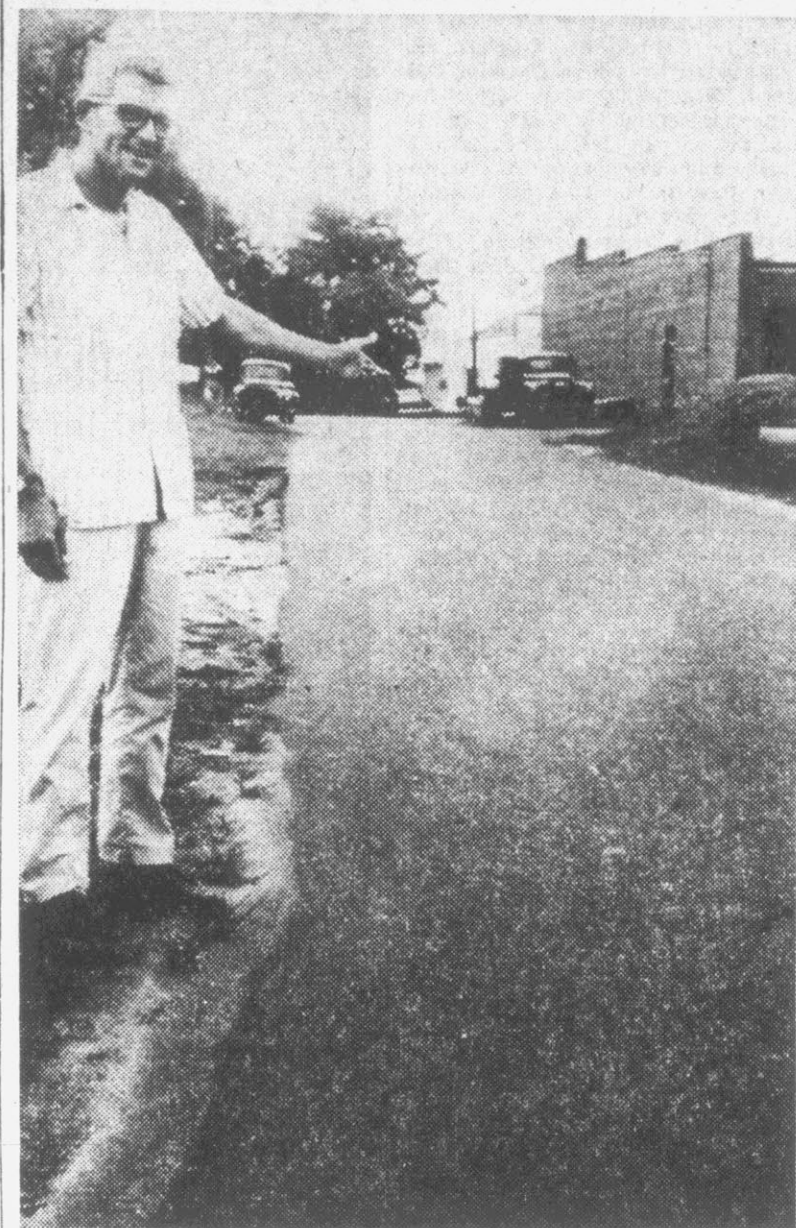

Public Hearings

Councilmen annexed two new subdivisions areas after public hearings were held.

"Taken into the city were Carolina Heights Addition No. 1 and Harrington-Williams sub-division Addition No. 1.

Powell Bill Funds Pile Up

FALKLAND'S STREET . . . Town Clerk Lewis Lawrence points to downtown's Powell Fund project.

More Money Than Town Can Spend

Falkland has a unique money problem.

Unlike most towns, the little Pitt municipality has more money than it can spend — at least in one fund, Falkland receives, like other North Carolina towns, a certain share of Powell Bill funds each year for street maintenance and improvement.

The Falkland share is the smallest received by any town in the state, but it's still more than enough to maintain the town's "streets."

Falkland has only one street of its own. Paved several years ago, the street is less than 100 yards long and connects highway NC 43 and NC 222 just before they intersect.

According to Falkland Town Clerk Lewis Lawrence, the town receives about $350 a year from Powell Bill Funds, which can be used for street maintenance, construction, or safety only.

The Clerk says there are no other streets to maintain since Falkland's other streets are state highways and are, therefore, maintained by the state. He adds that, as far as he knows, there are no immediate prospects for new streets.

The only other use of Powell Funds in Falkland is that of maintaining a blinker-type traffic light, the cost of which, according to Lawrence, after installation has been small.

The Town of Falkland now has, Lawrence says, "about $2,000 in Powell Funds" in the bank which cannot be spent because "there's nowhere to spend it!"

Dwindles

REIDSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Officials reported that hunger strikers at the Reidsville State Prison dwindled to a mere 250 today and that they are being transferred elsewhere.

A spokesman for the State Department of Corrections in Atlanta said that as many as 140 are being removed to the maximum security rock quarry prison at Buford, a distance of some 200 miles.

The remainder, he added, will be dispersed to various smaller facilities in an attempt to stamp out the day-old hunger strike.

He emphasized that there has been no disorder at the 2,900-inmate state prison — that the warden and other officers were in full control at all times.

Report Rise For Tax Collections

Pitt County tax collections during the 1958-59 fiscal year were $81,973 higher than collections for the previous year according to the official report from the office of Robert S. Moye, Pitt's Tax Collector and Tax Supervisor.

Collections of $28,179 during the month of June ran the total for fiscal 1958-59 to $1,252,012 as compared with the previous year's total collection of $1,170,039.

Greenville. Such a law is in the general statutes of the state. However, Bloxam said for some reason Pitt County was omitted from the general statutes in 1957.

Rose appearing again as Civil Defense Director expressed his appreciation to the council and to Fire Chief George Gardner for the local rescue unit. He reminded that the unit was the "brain child" of Chief Gardner.

As city school superintendent he expressed appreciation for the police guarding school crossings and for firemen standing by at special school events.

He also asked that an ordinance be passed prohibiting the playing of golf on school property. Rose said he feared a school child might be hit by a golf ball. Building windows have also been broken out with the balls, he said.

Tentative Thoroughfare System For City Streets Receives Council Blessing

City Councilmen last night gave their blessings to a tentative thoroughfare system for development of Greenville streets over the next 20 years.

The system was prepared by the Advance Planning Division of the State Highway Commission and proposed to the city by the commission.

The city's Planning and Zoning Commission had recommended to the council that the plan be approved.

In presenting the plan, which was prepared in booklet form with a full map of the city showing the proposed system, City Manager Leonard Bloxam pointed out that the State Legislature had passed a new law which says the commission will assume responsibility for certain streets connecting into certain highway system or city system streets.

However, adoption of such a plan was needed before the Highway Department can proceed under the new Legislature authorization.

Bloxam said Roanoke Rapids is the only North Carolina town which is ahead of Greenville provided this city adopted the plan right away.

"I believe it is to our advantage to adopt such a report and assure the Highway Department we are interested and will work to bring such a program to conclusion," the city manager declared.

However, he pointed out that over the years the city "must put in the budget certain improvements to tie in radial streets with arterial streets."

Mayor S. Eugene West told the councilmen that once the proposed system is approved he understood the Highway Commission can use federal money on the street projects "and that seems to be the major source of money they are now spending."

The mayor said he felt approval of the plan is "a step in the right direction."

Councilman W. S. Stafford offered the motion to approve the plan. West, Stafford and E. W. Harvey voted in favor of the motion. Councilmen Charles M. King and Dr. M. W. Aldridge were not present for last night's meeting.

Bloxam emphasized that the streets shown in the plan were not to be considered exact locations.

He had told the Planning and Zoning Commission earlier the title — Proposed Thoroughfare System — is misleading. He quoted a letter contained in the report which said, "This report represents a preliminary thinking of a proposed system of major thoroughfares for the City of Greenville . . . It should be understood and emphasized that this report only attempts to outline a possible system of major thoroughfares."

The report envisions three new bridges across the Tar River in addition to the two now in existence. Also included is: development of Chestnut St. as a radial artery to relieve congestion on Dickinson Ave.; construction of links between Hooker Road and Greenville Blvd. and between U.S. 264 and N.C. 30 to complete a loop road around the city; and utilization of Pitt, Greene, Cotanche, Reade, Eighth, Ninth and First Sts. as cross-town roads to facilitate movement of traffic in the center business area.

The suggested system is based on a projected population estimate of 38,000 for Greenville in 1980.

Bloxam emphasized that as work is done on each of the proposed streets through the years, they would be carefully analyzed to determine the best routes and the proposed work would be brought before the City Council for approval.

Young Boy Dies Of Insecticide

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — A boy who had been playing in a container of deadly insecticide was rushed, weak and retching, to a hospital near here Thursday night. He died about 15 minutes afterward.

Three playmates, two of them his brothers, were hospitalized in serious condition in nearby Wrightsville Sound, but improved and their condition was reported satisfactory today.

The dead child was Robert Dale Melton, 9. Also hospitalized were his brothers Sterling, 6, and Larry, 10; and Delton Mintz, 8, a neighbor child.

Dr. C. B. Davis, Jr., New Hanover County health director, said the father, W. H. Melton, told him he had been treating plants in his garden with the poison parathion. Melton said he discovered the boys playing in the powder and that the boys had thrown some in Robert's face.

Melton took the boy to the pump and washed him off. He seemed all right, the father said, but about two hours later became nauseated, weak and could not see clearly. He was rushed to a hospital a short distance from the Melton home at Wrightsville Sound, but died soon afterward.

The other children were hospitalized later when they also became ill.

Dr. Davis identified parathion as an organic phosphorus compound that is easily absorbed through the skin. He said manufacturers recommend that those who use it cover themselves completely, even using a gas mask if available.

The doctor said Coroner Gordon was investigating.

High Winds Strike During The Night

ROBERSONVILLE — A severe windstorm struck a farm and house on the S. T. Everett farm about two miles south of Robersonville around 1 a.m. today.

The wind, apparently associated with Hurricane Cindy, came across a wooded area and ploughed a clear path of about 100 yards through a tobacco field.

It uprooted trees, blowing them across a house in which Russell Barnhill and his family of nine lived. Although the house was damaged, all the family escaped injury.

The wind moved through a six and a half acre tobacco plot destroying tobacco in its path. It also heavily damaged other tobacco in the field. There was damage to corn and other crops on the farm. Peanuts were reported picked up by the roots and blown away.

The storm was reported to have come out of a southeasterly direction and travelled in a northwesterly direction.

Some hail accompanied the storm and there was lesser damage reported to crops on other farms in the area.

In addition to hitting the main house on the farm the wind did damage to other outbuildings.

There was said to be some crop insurance to cover the loss.

The trial, which began April 7, was the longest here in recent years.

Duke Twins Marry In Double Rites

Mrs. William Samuels Garrett

WASHINGTON—The marriage of Miss Jane Marsh Duke and William Samuels Garrett, and Miss Jean Frances Duke and Dr. Samuel Neal Trueblood, twin daughters of Dr. and Mrs. James Frank Duke, took place Wednesday, July 8, in formal ceremony in St. Peter's Episcopal Church. The Rev. W. T. Waterhouse, rector of the church, officiated at the double ring rites.

Mr. Garrett is the son of Mrs. Elbert Jones Garrett of Greenville, and the late Mr. Garrett, and Dr. Trueblood is the son of Mrs. Julian Moore Trueblood of Washington and the late Mr. Trueblood.

White chrysanthemums and stock were used in the brass vases on the white marble altar with the altar candelabra and candles.

Mrs. Thomas S. Hopkins, church organist, played a program of sacred music and used the traditional recessional offerings. Mrs. Hopkins accompanied Harold Raymond Moag Jr. of Greensboro, soloist, as he sang "O Perfect Love" prior to the entrance of the wedding party.

Given in marriage by their father, the twin brides wore wedding gowns of Italian silk taffeta and Alencon lace. The basque bodices were designed with Sabrina necklines of scalloped lace, and long taffeta sleeves pointed over the wrists. The belted skirts were applied with lace medallions, and had polonaise draped bustles extending into long circular trains. Their tiered veils of French illusion were attached to lace Juliet caps embroidered with pearls, and they carried white orchid wedding bouquets.

Miss Anne Hollowell of Edenton was maid of honor for Miss Jean Duke, and Miss Sonja Warren of Washington was Miss Jane Duke's maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Miss Judy Sallie and Mrs. Jack Caldwell Williams of Washington, Mrs. Albert Sidney Roberts Jr. of Washington and Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mrs. Riley S. Stallings of Durham. The brides' attendants wore formal length gowns of Poudre blue silk organza, fashioned with taffeta cummerbunds and pouf bow bustles. They wore matching blue velvet, pearl trimmed, bandeaux, with the honor attendants carrying cascade bouquets of Better Times roses with English ivy, and the bridesmaids' nosegays were of Better Times roses and gypsophylla.

The bridegrooms' brothers were best men, Julian Moore Trueblood Jr. of New Orleans for Dr. Trueblood, and Raymond Garrett of Greenville for Mr. Garrett.

Others attending the bridegrooms were Dr. John Wayne Martin Jr., Dr. Don Lee Allen and Dr. Nathaniel William Garrison, all of Chapel Hill, for Dr. Trueblood, and Ralph M. Garrett Jr., Corydon Dwight Garrett and William B. Mixon, all of Greenville, for Mr. Garrett.

For her daughters' wedding Mrs. Duke selected a formal pink silk organza gown with pink lace trim, pink accessories and a corsage of pink cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Garrett chose a champagne embroidered short formal gown, using matching accessories and a lavender orchid corsage, while Mrs. Trueblood's gown was of aqua silk chiffon, complemented by aqua accessories and a lavender orchid.

A reception, given by the brides' parents, was held at the Washington Yacht and Country Club immediately after the ceremony.

For travel the twin brides wore light blue two piece linen dress-suits, the jackets being styled with portrait collars and bracelet sleeves. They wore toques of valley lilies, and white orchid corsages.

The Duke twins attended St. Mary's School in Raleigh and graduated from East Carolina College, Greenville, May 1959. They were presented to North Carolina society at the Debutante Ball in 1956 and were sponsors at the Governor Luther Hodges Inaugural Ball in 1957. They both represented the Young Democrats Club at East Carolina College, Miss Jane Duke serving as president.

Dr. Trueblood attended East Carolina College, later graduating from the School of Dentistry at the University of North Carolina where he was a member of Psi Omega professional fraternity. Graduating in June, he will serve in the University faculty until September at which time he will enter the U. S. Air Force, commissioned Lieutenant at Keesler AFB, Biloxi, Miss., where the couple will reside.

Mr. Garrett attended North Carolina State College, Raleigh, before serving with the United States Marine Corps. He is now a tobaccoist with the Person and Garrett Company of Greenville, and the Garretts' permanent home will be in Greenville.

Gardening Today

By JOHN G. DUNCAN

By this time the bugs should be hard at work trying to make your gardening year miserable. And you should be as equally determined to see it doesn't happen.

On your pecans and other trees you may find a filmy web enclosing the ends of the branches. This is the fall webworm at work (it will be back later this summer also). Cut out the nest or spray with Arsenate of Lead (2 table-spoons to one gallon of water). Burning them out is risky, especially if leaves have dried out some due to hot dry weather.

The Japanese Beetle is also doing his damage now. This copper greenish beetle (with white dots at tip of hind body or abdomen) is active on areas of plant exposed to sun. It eats flowers as well as foliage. If the infestation is heavy, spray with two table-spoons of D.D.T. 50% wettable powder to one gallon of water or three tablespoons of Lead Arsenate to one gallon of water. If not many insects are present, knock them into a jar of kerosene. (Do this when they are inactive before sun strikes plant, or at dusk. Be sure you get them, they are quite tricky and will roll off foliage at slightest touch.)

Your chrysanthemums may be covered with aphids (plant lice). Spray with malathion 50% E. C., two teaspoons to one gallon water.

Thrips may be causing those white roses to turn brown or fall to open. These insects become more of a problem as the size of the flower increases. You should dust every two or three days with 9% malathion.

Leaf hoppers cause a stripping on rose leaves. Dust with D.D.T. 5%.

Powdery mildew may be the reason the buds of your roses fail to open. If buds and leaves are white coated, use Phaltan. (This also is a control for Black Spot.) This disease is also found on lilacs and other plants.

If the tips of your pyracantha look like they have been scorched with fire, cut out infected parts (down in good wood 6"). Do pruning tool in Clorox (full strength) after each cut. This is fire blight, it also occurs on pear, apple and others.

Keep your spray equipment in good repair. Wash it out after each spraying. Do not use weed killer in same tank. When you spray, try to use an insecticide or fungicide that takes care of several kinds of insects or diseases at one time.

Club Holds Vegetable, Fruit Workshop

The Druidian Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. David Hancock Wednesday where a fruit and vegetable workshop was held.

A short business meeting, presided over by Mrs. L. E. Ward, club president, was held to make final plans for their club picnic to be held July 25 at Mrs. Ward's home. Mrs. Aaron Baxter demonstrated several arrangements using fruits and vegetables and pointing out the different and effective ways that they may be used in decorating, and the economy because of the persistence of them in the home.

During the workshop, members were served an ice cream course and cookies by the hostess.

Club members joined in tribute to Mrs. E. J. Maloney, a charter member who has moved away, for loyal and unfailing support to the club.

der for the consolation prize, and Mrs. Corey Stokes captured the floating prize.

Guests included Mesdames Little, Dunn, Smith, Stokes, Keith Brunson, James W. Everett, Jack M. Collins and Miss Clyde Stokes.

Tea Honors Miss Pitt County

Miss Pitt County. The Jay-C-Ettes decorated the Community Building with mixed summer flowers and magnolia leaves. The table was covered with a white linen cloth with a centerpiece of white chrysanthemums and tapers.

Refreshments of lime ice, cake, mints and nuts were served by the Jay-C-Ettes.

Among the guests was Miss Betty Lane Evans of Greenville, Miss North Carolina, who came to wish Ann special good wishes. Approximately 90 guests attended.

Mrs. Carolyn Powell became the 190th member of Greenville Chapter 1308, Women of the Moose, at initiation ceremonies last night.

Mrs. Louise Carrigan, a recent initiate into the College of Regents at Mooseheart, Ill., was in charge of the Chapter night program.

She and Mrs. Bonnie Singleton and Mrs. Lillian Briley described their June investiture with cap and gown in Mooseheart.

It was the first visit to the Child City for Mrs. Briley and Mrs. Singleton; Mrs. Carrigan had been there on a previous occasion.

The chapter has one other member of the College of Regents. Mrs. Betty Smith was initiated in 1951.

Mrs. Gardner Bridge Hostess

AYDEN—On Friday evening Mrs. Alton Gardner was hostess to the Odds and Ends Club and other invited guests at bridge at her home, "Sunny Lawn."

The patriotic motif was used, carrying out a color scheme of red, white and blue. During the game grape punch and cheese crisps were served and at the conclusion of the party the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Jeanette, served an iced course, with miniature silk flags being given as favors.

Mrs. Rosa J. Little, winner of the high score, was given a beverage set, and Mrs. Marian Dunn received guest high. Mrs. James Smith was remembered with powder for the consolation prize, and Mrs. Corey Stokes captured the floating prize.

Guests included Mesdames Little, Dunn, Smith, Stokes, Keith Brunson, James W. Everett, Jack M. Collins and Miss Clyde Stokes.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Let no-one accuse of us not being alert to the latest climatic conditions. In line with yesterday's weather and all the hoop-la about hurricanes, tornadoes and what-all, we deftly refer you to an article in the July edition of The Saturday Review, "How Stormy Weather is Born," complete with drawings and diagrams, compiled by John Lear, SR's Science Editor. It contains all you want to know—maybe more—about storms, how they originate and how to tell where they're going and what they're planning to do . . .

HIRSHBERG

In the same issue of SR we also enjoyed Joseph Wood Krutch's editorial on "English as She is Spoken" — a favorite subject of ours — in which the redoubtable Krutch takes a mean swing at educators who think that bad English should be tolerated as long as it communicates — somehow. We agree with Mr. Krutch. If we catch anybody saying, "I ain't got no bananas," we will call him dead wrong—true, he'll be communicating, but he'll also be perpetuating a way of speaking that is acceptable only among the ignorant. This, we think, is not democratic but simply stupid . . .

To the Queen

Also up-to-the minute is our review that HOW THE QUEEN REIGNS, by Dorothy Laird, has just been issued by World Publishing Company to coincide with Queen Elizabeth II's current tour of America now at its triumphant height—and a smart time for the World people to do it, we might add. The book goes into the fascinating intimacies of just what life is like for the reigning Queen of England. She's careful about the family budget, for example, believe it or not. She hates to pay fancy prices for her children's clothes — who doesn't? — and they have hems for letting down, as the kids grow up—even as your children's clothes and cures . . . There's a section about her husband Philip and how she gets around the rank problem—and it's interesting to compare the way she does it with Queen Victoria's methods 100 years or so ago. Other matters come up, too—how she entertains what she wears and how she decides to wear it, what jewels she selects for particular occasions out of her huge collection—the most valuable in the world—and what procedure is followed when she sits for a portrait. These are problems which most of us don't face though maybe we'd like to. Sill, HOW THE QUEEN REIGNS looks like good reading for one of these cool days, if it stays cool, that is . . .

On Vacations

Speaking of reading, we have the vacationer's manual par excellence—Duncan Hines' VACATION GUIDE, all about where to go, what you'll find when you get there and how much it will cost you. Roy Park, vice-president of the Duncan Hines Institute, publisher of the Guide, writes us that "We revised this newest edition so that anyone using this book could plan a vacation right in their own armchair, not only have fun doing it, but have more fun on their holiday." Aside from the atrocious grammar—there's that bugaboo again—we'll agree with this statement. The new VACATION GUIDE tells you a lot about places where you can go all over the U. S., Canada, Mexico the Caribbean and Bermuda, and is a very handy little book to have around if you're planning a trip . . .

Censors Again

Last week we wrote our approval of poet John Gadi's condemnation of the Chancellor of the University of Chicago and the U. S. postal authorities for banning a recent literary magazine because they thought it wasn't proper. Now we read advertisements in various places concerning the recent release of the unexpurgated edition of D. H. Lawrence's "Lady Chatterley's Lover." It seems that the post office has denied the facilities of the U. S. mail for transporting this book, also on the grounds that it's improper, and Barney Rosset, for the Grove Press publishers of the new edition, has lodged a trenchant and just protest. In view of the fact that many of the leading critics and literary men of our day have hailed "Lady Chatterley's Lover" as a major classic and a truly great novel, Mr. Rosset deplors the postal authorities' stand as an insult to the public's intelligence and as a threat to constitutional liberties. We agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Rosset—and also wonder how the book is getting around without the U. S. mail, since it now is Number 4 on the best-seller list. Maybe Lady Chatterley is using the pony express? . . .

Today's Review

Your Columnist's versatile daughter reviews a recent juvenile about a girl with a gun . . . ANNIE OAKLEY: LITTLE SURE SHOT, by Ellen Wilson, Indianapolis: Hobbs-Merrill Co., 1959. Annie Oakley is very famous today. Her life was transported onto television. Her four sisters and Annie, and of course Tag, the nickname Annie gave her brother Johnny, live in a small log cabin. Annie was always ready to go outside, that is after she had finished her housework. She played with Tag a lot. I think I would call her a tomboy. For instance, the time that she and Tag built a trap, with much patience, to try to catch some quail for their mother's birthday. Annie lived in three different places in her life. But finally she ended up at her log cabin. The book is very interesting. Annie's fast running, good sportsmanship and wonderful shooting made her famous. I am sure that you would like the book, if you are eight years old or up.

Private N.Y. Tennis Club Told Explain Membership Policies

NEW YORK (AP)—Officials of the West Side Tennis Club have been asked to appear July 21 before the city's Commission on Inter-Group Relations to answer questions about the club's reported policy of banning Negroes and Jews.

The hearing is a result of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche's disclosure Wednesday that the fashionable Forest Hills club's president, Wilfred Burglund, had told him neither he nor his son could join the club because they are Negroes. Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-N.Y.) said Thursday that he and four other senators had sent a telegram to the U.S. Lawn Tennis Assn. asking that the U.S. tennis championships and the Davis Cup matches be transferred from the West Side club.

There also was a storm of other protests against the club's ban on Dr. Bunche, who is United Nations under secretary for special political affairs and a Nobel Peace Prize winner.

In announcing the July 21 hearing, Dr. Alfred J. Marrow, chairman of the intergroup relations commission, said it was "unthinkable that major international athletic events for which the general public pays admission should be conducted in this city on the grounds of an institution which discriminates in its membership policy."

"We will therefore use every power in our command to change these policies," Marrow added. He said members of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Assn. also might be invited to the hearing.

Can Now Track Beyond The Moon

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—An improved missile tracking instrumentation system designed to range to the moon and beyond was announced today by Convair-Astronautics.

Called Azusa Mark II, the system will replace Azusa equipment used at the Atlantic missile range at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., next year.

Convair-Astronautics said the Mark II is designed to measure changes in missile position of one-tenth of a foot at distances of hundreds of miles down range from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Called Azusa Mark II, the system will replace Azusa equipment used at the Atlantic missile range at Patrick Air Force Base, Fla., next year.

Seasick Coast Guardsman Discharged; Just No Cure

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Doctors now can cure most cases of seasickness but they've given up on former Coastguardsman Gene O. Austin of Coinjock, N.C.

Two months ago, after five years and five months largely spent clinging to a ship's rail, Austin was given a medical discharge because of "chronic seasickness," a rare reason for separation from the Navy or Coast Guard.

The discharge made him an oddity in his own family: he's a fourth generation Coastguardsman from North Carolina's Outer Banks, born in Corolla and raised on the water.

Austin didn't realize when he entered the Coast Guard that his seasickness was going to be a problem. Until then, most of his boating trips had been short ones.

Chessman Again In Death Fight

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Death row author Caryl Chessman, his gas chamber sentence reaffirmed for the second time, said he will battle all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court for the 10th time.

Chessman, convicted Los Angeles sex terrorist, announced his determination Thursday in a 15-minute television and newspaper interview at this state prison, where he has served since July 3, 1948.

The state supreme court Tuesday upheld Chessman's death sentence. The U.S. Supreme Court had ordered a rehearing of his original trial notes was faulty.

He is to be taken to Los Angeles soon for hearing of a new date set for his oft postponed execution. He said he will ask for a rehearing and exhaust all state remedies before turning again to the U.S. high court.

He has written three books, two of which were published.

ONLY THE SMOKEHOUSE

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AP)—Firemen raced to an Armour packing plant Wednesday night, but the only fire they found was in the smokehouse, where workers were curing hams. Somebody had noticed the smoke and turned in the alarm.

Victor Denny, president of the tennis association, was attending a meeting of the International Lawn Tennis Federation in Dublin.

In London, the Negro tennis star, Althea Gibson, when told of the controversy, exclaimed: "How ridiculous. Are we living in the 20th century or the 19th?" She has played many times at the West Side club, but is not a member.

Bunche said he had contacted Burglund to inquire about membership at the club for his son. He said Burglund told him membership was not by application and that Negroes and Jews were barred.

"I thought I'd get over it after I'd been at sea a couple of days. 'Ke other people do," he said.

That was at the beginning of his first trip — a training cruise to Cuba.

Almost before the ship pulled anchor both Austin and the horizon were swaying.

"Even in nice weather, I stayed sick," he said. "I was willing but I just couldn't make it."

Three weeks later, after innumerable trips to the rail, Austin was still fighting that green feeling.

When the trainees assembled on deck for instruction, Austin often had to disappear from the ranks suddenly.

"I lost a lot of weight on that trip," he said.

"I wanted to make the Coast Guard my career," said the 25-year-old. So, for four more years, he stuck it out, on shore duty a lot of the time. Then came his last and worst assignment—to the cutter Mendota.

The Mendota, out of Wilmington, N.C., patrolled the Atlantic for 35 days at a time.

Armed with anti-nausea pills, crackers, lemons and casting a suspicious eye on the stormy, wintertime Atlantic, he boarded.

Somehow, woefully, he managed to get through that first trip—with a good deal of nursing care from his shipmates.

After the second one, though, he was admitted to the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital here. Doctors ran tests to find out why he had been so ill, but Austin said nothing was proved by the examination.

"It was pretty weather, but by the time we got to Newfoundland, I was really in bad shape."

He had lost about 35 pounds since he had been assigned to the Mendota.

The ship's doctor put the shaken ashore in Newfoundland, and he boarded a plane to return to the hospital.

Immediately, he got airsick. Back at the hospital, doctors finally decided Austin's case was pretty hopeless and his honorable discharge was recommended.

He had run his last race for the rail.

It'll Take Our Best To Break Even

It is not unnatural for people to underestimate the ability of their opponents because of their confidence in themselves or others who represent them.

It is not unnatural, therefore, for Americans to look upon their leaders as more skillful, more resourceful and more capable negotiators in international affairs than those of Russia or other communist nations.

The reaction of several governors to top Soviet officials after conferences with them should re-emphasize to the American people that Soviet leaders are by no means less capable than those who represent the United States in the field of international affairs. In short, they aren't pushovers and we're fooling ourselves if we allow ourselves to believe they are.

In their trip to Russia, seven American governors had conferences with Premier Nikita Khrushchev and their impressions of Khrushchev are more meaningful to most Americans than the impressions State Department and other high officials have had in the past.

Gov. Luther Hodges, for example, termed Khrushchev "as smart as the dickens. He is a worthy opponent and dangerous. One second he could be ruthless and the next second he would have a fine sense of humor that would get him over the rocky places."

Gov. Stephen McNichols of Colorado after the conference termed Khrushchev "one of the most adroit men I have ever met. He has the complete ability to draw on an immense fund of information without any help. He is able to deal with you at any level—at the highest or in street fighting . . ."

In this country Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan conferred with Soviet First Deputy Premier Frol Kozlov for an hour in heated debate, after which Gov. Williams declared, " . . . he is shrewd, he is tough, in full control of himself at all times and I think it will take a Yankee trader to beat him."

These impressions of the governors should be important to American citizens. They give some indication of what kind of men American diplomats are up against when they are called on to negotiate with Soviet officials. Added to the fact that the Soviet sense of values is nowhere near those innate to this nation, the job is made doubly difficult.

It offers another reminder that where so much is at stake in our constant dealings and negotiations with the Soviets, we must put our best minds, our best men forward to meet the Soviet challenge.

To do otherwise would be to give the Soviets an added advantage in the field of diplomacy which today largely shapes the course of world events.

A New Pattern For Hurricane Behavior?

Hurricane Cindy, while she was small as most hurricanes go and did little damage before blowing herself out over South Carolina, had some very disturbing aspects for this hurricane-jittery section of Eastern North Carolina.

In the first place, Cindy appeared about a month earlier in the season than we have come to expect hurricanes along the Carolina coast. Secondly, she apparently had her origin off the coast of South Carolina instead of farther south off the coast of Florida or in the Caribbean.

It makes one pause to wonder if Cindy gives an indication that we are in for another change in the pattern of hurricanes that have swept the East Coast in recent years.

Until Hazel, Coastal Carolina viewed hurricanes as big storms that came only rarely and confined their damage to high waters in the immediate area of the coast. For the most part they kept far to the south where the people along the coast of Florida could worry about them while the coastal area of the Carolinas only felt sympathy for coast of Florida.

Hazel blew in, spread debris and wreckage all along the coast of North Carolina, then swept across a large inland area of the state ruining crops, cutting off communications and generally exhibiting inexcusable behavior. In the past few years she has been followed by others of her kind that have destroyed millions upon millions of dollars worth of property and taken many lives.

After Hazel the weather observers declared that hurricanes were changing their pattern and that the Carolinas could expect to bear the brunt of their winds for a number of years at least. Now Cindy has made up far to the north or the usual hurricane breeding grounds, and she has come early in the season.

Are we in for another change in the hurricane pattern along the East Coast? If so, will the Carolina coast be better off or worse off than it has in recent years?

Maybe Cindy has just given us a recurrence of our hurricane jitters, but it would be interesting to know the answers to the questions?

Predictable As To Segregation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The present Supreme Court is not completely predictable on anything except its opposition to various forms of racial segregation.

Of the nine justices who handed down the historic and unanimous decision on public school segregation in 1954, only Justices Warren, Black, Douglas, Brennan and Clark are left.

Yet the four justices who joined them since then — Harlan, Brennan, Whitaker and Stewart — have voted in unanimity with them in case after case involving segregation.

Once outside that field, forecasts on opinion day get hazardous. Yet, year after year, the opinions of this court are much more on what is called the liberal than on the conservative side.

Justices Warren, Black, Douglas and Brennan vote together pretty consistently — but not always — as a liberal bloc. But there are only four of them and there are nine justices.

Thus the views of these four men can never prevail unless they are joined by one or more of the other five. It often happens.

Those five — Frankfurter, Harlan, Clark, Whitaker, Stewart — can be considered more conservative than the other four, but in varying degrees. Whitaker and Stewart are perhaps the most conservative.

Yet, to make the picture more confusing, Clark, a frequent dissenter and often a fiery critic of the liberals, sometimes votes with them and does so consistently on segregation cases, even though he is a Southerner.

Frankfurter and Harlan seem the more flexible. Frankfurter has been credited with major influence on the conservative side as a restraining force. Actually, judging by votes, this influence may be exaggerated.

Some examples show the switches in the court:

In the famous John T. Watkins case of 1957 Justices Warren, Black, Douglas, Frankfurter, Harlan and Brennan cracked down on congressional investigating committees.

They ruled a witness, before he could be held in contempt for not answering, had to be guaranteed you can get for parading down various desecrated these principles by undertaking to visit a country whose 40 years of its existence been the avowed and uncompromising enemy of all human rights." — George Meany, AFL-CIO President.

Then again the court ruled, 5-4, that radio and TV stations have immunity from libel suits for remarks made in political broadcasts. This time Clark joined Warren, Black, Douglas and Brennan to make up the majority.

Just as some people thought the court showed signs of backing down under criticism for up-setting too many congressional and governmental programs and operations, the court showed its muscles unimpaired.

It threw out the Defense Department's industrial security program because neither Congress nor President Eisenhower had authorized it. Under this program those defense plant employees tagged as security risk could be fired without a chance to confront or cross-examine their accusers.

On this the vote was 8-1, with Clark the lone dissenter.

Quote . . .

"No believer in the basic principles of free trade unionism could today conceivably desert these principles by undertaking to visit a country whose 40 years of its existence been the avowed and uncompromising enemy of all human rights." — George Meany, AFL-CIO President.

Enjoying Her Disability

Out our way we've been learning how to live with a leg in a cast. The two-year-old member of the Schliez's suffered an accident and has since been enjoying her fracture.

Mary Jane can't walk with her cast, but gets around remarkably well . . . sliding about on the back-of-her-lap (she should wear roller skates there), and the neighbors have all been more than kind in carrying her away to be entertained.

The little Miss hasn't had so much sympathetic attention since her baby days, and is lapping it up. She has learned it pays to greet strangers with a half-whimper and pointing gesture to the cast. She throws in the word "broke", to get the point across. It would melt a heart of stone.

Small matter that five seconds later she's laughing. Mary Jane knows the newcomer is good for that bit of extra attention she loves.

So much deference and attention could spoil anything less than a perfect angel. Not having quite reached that status, our girl has come to expect an equal amount of extra attention when household chores or other distractions call for a measure of priority. This irks her no end, and the cherubic facade of sweetness and light is replaced by thunderclouds and teardrops.

The doctor suggested two or three weeks of keeping her leg in a cast would restore it to normalcy; but he didn't say how much longer it would take to restore her unspoiled self.

After all, a girl can't wear a cast all her life just to get some special attention; and what can she do when it's removed?

Just adjust.

(Oh come now, Doll! your pappy had to write a column about something . . . and how could he possibly get along any more without you, and your cast, anyhow?)

Other Editors Saying . . . Butler vs. Conservatives

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

While the Republicans watch with satisfaction, the Democrats may be heading toward a showdown for party leadership in their latest intra-party feud. The whole thing started when National Chairman Paul Butler said last Sunday that quite a few Democrats were unhappy about the performance of the Democratic-controlled Congress and that the party will be in a tough situation in the 1960 presidential campaign unless Congress provides a more "progressive" record.

When he said "quite a few Democrats" we assume he means the liberal element within the party, such as Hubert Humphrey, Wayne Morse, St. Symington, and others of that category. At the same time, there were "quite a few" of the other brand of Democrats who were unhappy over Butler's remarks, and most of these were of the conservative type, such as Lyndon Johnson and Sam Rayburn, both of whom have been leading stalwarts of the party for years.

In reply to Butler's statements, House Speaker Rayburn said, "Butler can do the talking and we'll do the acting and make the record." Apparently Butler is more interested in trying to impress the voting public than a solid record by Congress. For example, Butler's main quarrel with Johnson's Senate leadership is over Johnson's strategy of cutting down various Democratic bills to the point where he thinks President Eisenhower will not veto them.

In other words, Johnson is thinking of the welfare of the nation by getting various bills through despite the consequence. He of course, would like for the Democrats to get credit for any beneficial bills, but he is not placing the party's interest over the good of the country. Butler, on the other hand, would make all bills impossible for Eisenhower to accept, so that the voters could get a "contrast between the Democratic program and the administration's."

A Senator from Butler's own state of Indiana, Sen. Vance Harke, took the floor of the Senate to declare that Johnson's "concept of responsible Congress" was credited with Democratic victories in last year's congressional elections. He said polls show that "the people share the feeling that we are doing the right thing in Washington."

One result of Butler's views was a suggestion that Butler may be working to name new officers for the 1960 Democratic National Convention and to deny seats to some Southern delegates. This could be possible. Butler has made no secret of the fact that he thinks the Democratic party can get along very well without the Southern delegation.

Whatever the outcome of this latest family brawl, the Democrats had better get it straightened out before next year. Party strife could damage the chances of a strong campaign for the presidential election. A solid front would go a long way toward unseating the Republicans in the administration.

Another Puff On Inflation Pipe

By ELMER ROESSNER

Despite current campaigns against inflation, there seems little doubt that we shall have another puff on the old oil pipe. Inflation generally is a certainty because the United States is operating on a fiat money. It can no longer be traded for gold. It can still be traded for bread, vittles and other things, but — as you may have noticed — you get a little less of them almost every time you go to the store.

About the only thing you are guaranteed you can get for paper money is Federal tax receipts — and that's about the most painful guarantee possible.

Assuming that inflation generally is certain, there are specific reasons for some sharper inflation in the immediate future.

WHY INFLATION NOW

Even if the steel labor negotiations result in a modest pay rise without a strike, these reasons will prevail. They are:

1. Wage rates are rising. If there is a "peaceful" steel settlement, there will be some general increases. But even if — by some fantasy — the steel situation were resolved without a pay rise, increases in other industries would guarantee considerable inflation.

Since the first of the year, every expiring labor contract has been renewed at higher pay, generally in the 10-cents-an-hour range. And let's not fool ourselves: some way or another the steel conflict will end with a pay increase for that industry.

In the end, most wages will go up. Then prices will go up, first, because enterprisers will need more money to pay higher wages and, second, because wage-earners will have more money to spend.

And if higher wages and higher prices don't add up to inflation, they will do until something else comes along.

HIGHER PRICES, ANYWAY

2. Prices are rising. Getting further into fantasy and assuming that there won't be any more wage increases, there would still be more inflation because prices are rising from other causes.

The consumer price index kicked a new high in May and present indications are that the June figure, due in a few days, will be even higher. We are only nine days into July but so far it looks as if we are on our way to another successive high.

The food component is still rising. Some crops promise to be more bountiful than ever, but possible slight price drops, but others seem small enough to force prices higher.

The Administration succeeded in getting some limitations on farm supports, but they are generally regarded as minor and the government itself will be pushing up the cost of eating again.

GOVERNMENTAL PRESSURES

3. Politics and government make further inflation inevitable. The last fiscal year, ended nine days ago, showed a deficit in the Federal budget of $12 billion more.

That is a direct measure of inflation. The government, in effect, created $12 billion more buying power than it took up in taxes. The only reason that was better than just printing that much paper money was that the government promises to pay it back.

It's doubtful if it will ever pay back much of the national debt, but at least it will pay interest on it.

There's a simple way to halt inflation: increase taxes to pay for what we get. But that would prove very unpopular and few Congressmen have the courage to support such a move with elections just around the calendar.

4. There is another reason for expecting inflation: the people expect it. They are putting their savings into stocks, Florida and other real estate, and other tangibles in the belief that these investments will insure their savings against attrition by inflation.

To a certain extent, they are right. But, right or wrong, many people are sure more inflation is coming. And once the public is convinced of that idea, it is very difficult to stop inflation itself.

Change In The Model?

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Will the atomic age create a two-headed human race?

Will the man of the future have six eyes, perhaps, and three legs and five arms?

These possibilities, admittedly remote, must be at least considered — in view of what happened to the Florida frogs.

You remember the strange case of the Florida frogs? Unusual frogs were discovered last month near Gainesville, Fla.

They had extra eyes and extra limbs. At first no one paid much attention to them, tolerantly figuring they were probably just a new breed of Yankee tourists, and all Yankee tourists look odd anyway.

But scientists, after studying them, theorized they were home-grown frogs whose ancestral genes had probably gone awry as the result of atomic fallout radiation.

Not all such mutations are necessarily bad for a species, of course. They might even improve the breed — make it better able to face the problems of a troubled world.

Stretching the long arm of possibility a bit farther, what might happen if more and more nations develop hydrogen bombs, and the rate of test explosions is stepped up steeply?

Well, it is likely that in time we might start observing a few dramatic mutations among human beings.

Would that be good or bad for the human race?

A person with three legs would have no particular advantage over a two-legged person, since civilized people don't use their legs much anyway. If pants had three legs in them the cost of suits would go up again. So would the price of a trio, instead of a pair, of shoes.

The advantage of a third eye, however, is obvious to anyone. Today it is just what both pedestrian and driver need to cope with traffic.

The advantages of extra arms are even more obvious. How often have you heard a housewife complain she had only two hands? With three, four, five or six hands, she could do many more things easily, and housework would become a breeze.

An equally heartening prospect is the possibility that in time atomic radiation might produce people with two heads. There is

Strength For Today

ELOQUENT BUT TOO LATE

As a minister was putting the finishing touches on his sermon one Saturday night, received a telephone call asking whether or not he would conduct a funeral service the following Tuesday afternoon. He replied that he would, and asked if he might call on the family. He was hurriedly told that this would not be necessary. They would see him at the funeral parlor.

He discovered to his amazement just before the service began that he had been called in to say a few words over the remains of a famous gangster who had been murdered a few days before in a gang war. The minister girded up the loins of his mind and soul and gave them a sermon on that occasion the like of which few had ever heard at such a gathering. The listeners were the members of the dead man's family, a rather sizable group of gangsters, and a half dozen detectives who were there to keep their eyes on the "mourners."

At the grave the dead gangster's father insisted on saying a prayer. The members of his family tried to stop him. But he knelt down, and directing his words not to the Almighty but to the recently departed, he said, "Son, your mother had a right to expect something better from you than this. Amen."

Perhaps if the father had been as eloquent in prayer twenty years before, the picture might have been different.

A Nation Under God

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Deuteronomy 29-34.

Moses called all the Israelites together. He rebuked them; while they had seen all the miracles the Lord had performed to make Pharaoh let them go, they still were not obeying Him.—Deuteronomy 29:2-4.

Then Moses told them that he was 120 years old and unable to lead them into the land God had promised them. The Lord had therefore chosen Joshua to lead them into that land.—Deut. 31:1-3.

Moses called Joshua, saying, "Be strong and of a good courage... the Lord, He it is that doth go with thee; He will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed."—Deut. 31:7-8.

The Lord decreed that Moses should not enter the promised land, but would die in the Mount of Nebo, after he had seen the land from the Mount.—Deut. 32:49-52.

MEMORY VERSE—Deut. 31:8.

Decisions Determine Destiny

MOSES REMINDS HIS PEOPLE OF GOD'S PAST GOODNESS AND BEGS THEM TO OBEY HIM

Scripture—Deuteronomy 29-34.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
MOSES is now a very old man, 120 years of age, he tells his people. That is an age that very few people attain today.

He called all his people together to tell them that he was no longer able to lead them into the land the Lord their God had promised them. Joshua, son of Nun, had been chosen by God to lead them.

And Moses called Joshua to him, saying, "Be strong and of good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the Lord hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it."—Deut. 31:7.

Also Moses told Joshua, "And the Lord, He it is that doth go before thee; He will be with thee; He will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed."—Deut. 31:8.

Fortified by God's promise as told him by Moses, Joshua must have been proud of his mission from the Lord, and he prepared to go with the aged leader and obey the command of the Lord.

The Lord also said to Moses,

MEMORY VERSE

"The Lord, He it is that doth go before thee; He will be with thee, He will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed."—Deuteronomy 31:8.

"Behold, thy days approach that thou must die: call Joshua, and present yourself in the tabernacle of the congregation, that I may give him a charge, And Moses and Joshua went, and presented themselves in the tabernacle in a pillar of a cloud; and the pillar of the cloud stood over the door of the tabernacle."—Deut. 31:14-15.

Then the Lord told Moses that after his death his people would not be faithful to Him, who had brought them out of Egypt and given them a land of their own. If they would again turn to the worship of "strange gods," His anger would be such that He would "Hide My face from them, and they shall be devoured, and many evils and troubles shall befall them: so that they will say in that day, Are not these evils come upon us, because our God is not among us?"—Deut. 31:16-17.

The Lord commanded Moses to write a song and to teach it to the people, "put it in their mouths, that this song may be a witness."

It must have been hard for Moses not to be able to enter this land to which he and Joshua were to lead the people. But, as always, he obeyed the command of his Lord.

So he blessed the tribes of Israel, and "went up from the plain of Moab unto the mountain of Nebo, to the top of Pisgah, . . . And the Lord shewed him all the land of Gilead, unto Dan. And all the Naphtali, and the land of Ephraim, and Manasseh, and all the land of Judah, unto the utmost sea. And the south, and the plain of the valley of Jericho, the city of palm trees, unto Zoar."—Deut. 34:1-3.

"So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And he buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Bethpeor; but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day."—Deut. 34:6.

His people mourned for him, but Joshua "was full of the spirit of wisdom," and the people "hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses."—Deut. 34:9.

Sports Scope

by Johnny Hudson

Al Capone and his ruthless gang of the early 1900's carved a mark in our American history. Capone and his gang have moved on but the underworld continues to thrive and have even made their move into the sports scene.

Tonight, a fighter will take the ring with a vivid memory of the Capone tactics. Don Jordon, who last December won the welterweight championship, is the fighter we are speaking of. Jordon is only indirectly connected with the recent scandal that jarred the state of California and boxing.

Leonard Is Brutally Beaten

Jack Leonard, leading fight promoter on the West Coast, has taken the brunt of the underworld punishment. Leonard, manager Don Neseth and the champ, Don Jordon, seemed to have a bright future ahead in their joint association but the roof caved in and Leonard was soon in the hospital suffering from a concussion of the brain and other serious danger.

The after-dark attack on Leonard June 3 was the big news in Los Angeles and across the country because the boxing promoter had been under police protection since giving testimony, only two weeks before the blows were struck, to the California State Athletic Commission about how some of boxing's dirty businessmen had threatened just this sort of reprisal if they were not handed a 50% interest in the welterweight champion. The attack was a demonstration of the way the underworld still strives to run boxing in the U. S.

Demands Half

The story goes that one night just before Jordon won the crown, Leonard received a call from Blinky Palermo in Chicago, racketeer and longtime friend of boxing's hoodlum No. 1, Frankie Carbo. "We're in for half the fighter," demanded Blinky.

Leonard tried to stall and finally went to the police but on June 3rd, the underworld "got even" with Leonard, sending him to the hospital suffering partial paralysis on one side of the face. The attack was similar to the one which occurred to Ray Arcel, a promoter, on a Boston sidewalk in 1953. He was beaten up with a pipe by a mob.

Following the Leonard episode, Don Chargin, a partner of Leonard said he received a phone call warning him to stay out of Los Angeles.

Violence Should Awake The Public

The recent violence should awake the people of California and also bring about a determined drive to clean up the underground businessmen of boxing.

Recently, one of the ablest sportswriters, ridiculing the ways of Cus D'Amato, manager of Floyd Patterson, told his readers with cheery sarcasm that "the fist fight industry needs a great big shot of Sinister Influence, triple-strength, quick, before it wastes away and dies of Moral Uplift." He called for the return of Carbo "to restore the healthy glow of corruption." "Frankie, come back!" he cooed.

The era when this could be written, even in sarcasm, and read in enjoyment, has now come to an end.

New Outlook May Be Ahead

A new tone has been struck and the prevailing situation may very well have been struck by Sports Editor Curley Grieve of the San Francisco Examiner, who wrote: "The brutal beating of Jackie Leonard is one of those things you wouldn't believe could happen. It is a throwback to the days of Capone. It strikes at the very core of justice. It is a slap in the face of decent people."

Tonight, Jordon will take on Denny Moyer in Portland, Oregon. A lot of interest will be on the fight and it would be interesting to trace the events of the underworld since June 3rd. They have continued to ripple their muscles in boxing and will continue to do so until the public decides to clean it up for good.

Other top contenders in this division will be former Tallahassee, Fla. junior champion Andrew Kilpatrick of Greenville, and two other local players, Malcolm Griffith and William Stancl.

Recent top entries in the Men's Single event, which N.C. champion Gary Preston of Burlington is favored to win, included the Central South Carolina Doubles Champion John Parks of Spartanburg, ECC Doubles Champ Robert Benton, the former Staunton, Va. Champion Joe Corne of Burlington, and Donald Moffat of Norfolk.

Jordan Risks His Welter Crown Against Youngster

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Don Jordon of Los Angeles risks his welterweight boxing crown tonight against an exuberant teenager who hopes to become the youngest fighter ever to win the title.

The challenger is 19-year-old Denny Moyer, who will be fighting before home town supporters in the scheduled 15-round outdoor bout at the Portland Meadows race track. He is ranked the No. 5 contender by the National Boxing Assn., No. 2 by Ring magazine.

His uncle, Tommy Moyer, matchmaker and promoter for the bout, said he expects a crowd of 10,000 and a gate of $100,000. Jordan said he has a guarantee of $70,000.

The fight will be on NBC television except for a 200-mile area around Portland. Weather forecasters said skies will be clear and the thermometer at 72 degrees or warmer.

Both fighters made the usual victory predictions, but with this difference: Jordan said he thinks he can stop Moyer; Moyer said his plan is to outpoint the champion.

Scoring will be by the 10-point must system, which requires award of 10 points for each round won. The loser of a round usually gets 9 points unless knocked down or beaten badly. That calls for 3 points or less.

Jordan, who has 14 knockouts in his 45-11 record, is considered the harder hitter; Moyer the faster boxer.

Their only common opponent Gaspar Ortega. The results were strikingly similar. Jordan fought Ortega twice last fall, winning each time on a split decision. Moyer fought Ortega in January. He also won on a split decision.

Moyer, who had a 72-10 record as an amateur, winning the National AAU welterweight crown in 1957, has won 20 straight since turning professional.

The two-day event has drawn 465 swimmers from 10 states and the District of Columbia, which is expected to send two of the strongest teams, one from the Congressional Country Club and one from Walter Reed.

The Congressional boys team is defending champion in that division and the Congressional girls team finished second to the winning team from Walter Reed last year.

Cites Improved U. S. Swimmers

LOS ALTOS, Calif. (AP) — A prominent swimming coach forecast today that the United States can assemble a swimming relay team capable of breaking the world record for 400 meters.

As the National AAU men's senior championships got under way at the Fremont Hills Country Club here, predictions of fast times came from Willis Casey, swimming coach at North Carolina State.

He's also the man who next week will head a 16-man United States squad to Tokyo for a meet with the top Japanese swimmers.

"We have at least five swimmers capable of swimming 100 meters in 56 seconds or less," Casey declared. "With the relay starts, a four man team should be capable of 3:44 and the record is 3:46.3 by an Australian team last year."

Casey listed Jeff Farrell, formerly of Oklahoma and now in the Navy, Joe Alkire of San Diego.

Roy Face Back In Groove After All-Star Slump

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitcher Roy Face of the Pittsburgh Pirates wasted no time in bouncing back from his disappointing showing in last Tuesday's All-Star game.

The bullpen ace came on in relief against Chicago Thursday night and won the game, 4-3 for his 13th consecutive victory of the season and 18th straight since May 30, 1958.

Thursday night's victory enabled Face to tie a Pirate record set in 1910 by Deacon Phillips for consecutive wins in a season.

"Anytime you win as many in a row as I have," said Face, "You have to have some luck."

The forklift artist won the extra-inning game after he relieved Vernon Law in the 9th and gave up the game-tying single to Tony Taylor.

Since 1900, only five National League pitchers have won 13 in a row. Last was Brooks Lawrence with the Cincinnati Reds in 1936.

By ED WILKS

Two pitchers combining for a doubleheader shutout over one club is rare in itself. Occasionally it happens twice in one season.

But it happened twice in the American League Thursday night. While Chicago's second place White Sox moved within one game of Cleveland by beating the Indians 4-3; Baltimore's kid right-handers, Milt Pappas and Jerry Walker, blanked Washington 8-0 and 5-0 in a two-night doubleheader. And Kansas City's Ray Herbert and Johnny Kucks each pitched five-hitters while whitewashing Detroit's tumbling Tigers 5-0 and 4-0.

The Tigers, who have lost six in a row, hadn't been handed a double shutout since Chicago's Marv Grissom and Joe Dobson did it on May 5, 1952. It hadn't happened to the Senators since Cleveland's Herb Score and Mike Garcia pulled it off Sept. 19, 1956. The sweep by Baltimore lifted the Orioles out of a third place tie with the New York Yankees, who were walloped 14-3 by Boston.

In the National League, San Francisco jumped into first place by a half game with a 3-2 victory at Cincinnati. Los Angeles knocked Milwaukee from first to third with a 4-3, 13-inning victory over the Braves that hoisted the Dodgers to second. Pittsburgh beat the Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 10 innings. St. Louis split a two-night pair at Philadelphia, winning 6-2 after the Phils had taken the opener 11-0.

The Senators managed only one extra-base hit among their 11 off Pappas (9-4) and Walker (7-3)—a first game triple by Bob Allison. Walker allowed only four singles while gaining a 4-0 record over Washington in his brief major league career. He has two shutouts in the majors—both four-hit jobs on the Nats.

Both youngsters walked but one man and struck out five. Pappas, also pitching his second shutout in the majors and like Walker just 20, was backed by Billy Gardner's two-run homer and Gus Triandos' solo 21st. Bob Nieman hit a two-run homer in the nightcap after Brooks Robinson stole home in the fifth for the only run Walker needed. Russ Kemmerer (5-8) and Pete Ramos (9-8) were the losers.

Herbert, pitching his first shutout since breaking into the majors in 1950 with the Tigers, walked two and struck out 10 while beating his ex-mates for a 6-7 record. Kucks, late of the Yankees, walked two and fanned three for a 3-4 record and his first complete game in 13 starts since June 27 last year.

Bob Cerv belted home runs in both games for the A's, getting his 10th in the opener against Frank Lary (9-6) and smacking his 11th with a man on the nightcap against Ray Narleski (4-9), who also gave up a home run by Bill Tuttle.

Jim Landis drove in three runs for the White Sox and Bubba Phillips clinched it with a sixth-inning home run off loser Herb Score (9-6). Pierce (9-10) went all the way for the victory after losing three in a row. Jim Baxes extended the Indians' home run streak to 18 games.

Vic Wertz and Ted Williams each hit solo sixth home runs for the Red Sox, and Bobby Avila, batting .174, drove in four runs with a pair of homers. Bob Turley (8-8) gave up only three hits in his 2 1/3 innings—but all were home runs. Frank Sullivan (5-5) was the winner for a 3-10 lifetime mark against the Yankees who scored all their runs with two out in the fourth on Hector Lopez' single and doubles by Elston Howard and Gil McDougald.

Inter-League Trade Rule To Be Put Before Frick

CHICAGO (AP) — The proposed inter-league trading rule again will be brought before Commissioner Ford Frick today at a joint meeting of the major leagues.

The measure, passed by both the American and National Leagues last December, was pushed aside when Frick asked the two organizations to reconsider.

Both leagues met Thursday and another vote was taken. Their votes will be announced today. If both again approve the measure, it will become law.

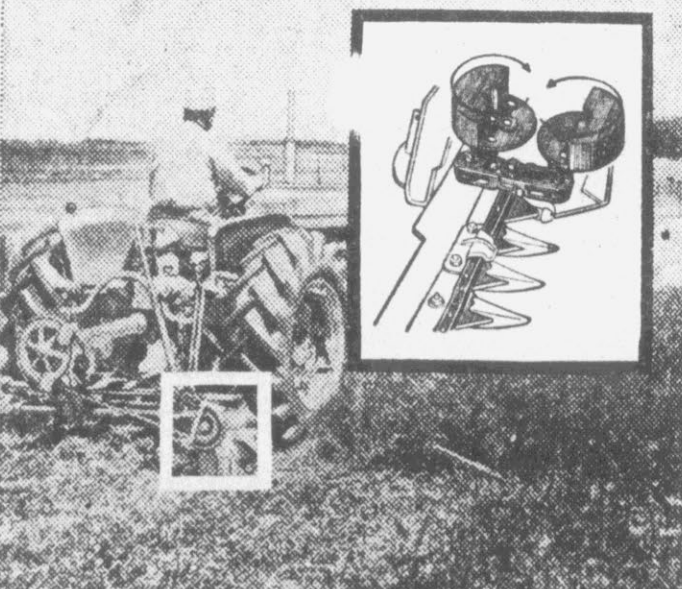

The ruling provides for a period in which clubs from both leagues can trade with each other without getting waivers on a player from other clubs in the league.

In the past, if the New York Yankees, for instance, sought to make a trade with a team in the National League, all the players involved had to be waived on by every club in the league.

Both leagues announced Thursday their opening dates for the 1960 season. The National League will open April 12, the American April 17. Both will close Oct. 2.

The American League adopted and put into effect the suspended game rule. A game halted before nine innings because of curfew, light failure or time limits will be played from the point of suspension. If a game goes over nine innings and is halted for any of these reasons, it will be completely replayed.

Admiral Asked
To Clarify Point

WASHINGTON (AP)—House investigators ask Adm. Arthur W. Radford today just whom he had in mind when he said interservice rows were encouraged from outside the Pentagon.

Radford is a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who was recalled into part time government service as a defense consultant. He faces questioning by a House subcommittee investigating alleged influences and pressures in weapons buying.

In a television interview June 28, Radford said one reason why defense decisions are not always fully supported by all services is that "there are certain encouragements lent from outside the Pentagon, for one reason or another."

The admiral said he did not mean "Congress alone" but that defense manufacturers also had to be taken into account.

The subcommittee is concentrating now on the role of former high-ranking officers and civilian defense officials who went to work for industrial firms dealing with the defense department.

Vice Adm Hyman G. Rickover, the Navy's atomic propulsion chief, reluctantly bowed Thursday to subcommittee orders to name people he said had called on him and tried to influence his programs. Rickover was allowed to submit the information in writing, with the understanding the subcommittee would keep in confidence any names it did not consider must come out in public investigations of possible impropriety.

NO IMMUNITY

BALTIMORE (AP)—When John C. Leitz, 38, knocked down a pedestrian, he got a ticket for reckless driving like anybody else. Leitz, driving a siren-equipped police car at the time, is a member of the police safety patrol.

MAN WHO MISSED THE MOON

by EDMOND HAMILTON

Story by Edmond Hamilton, Editor, Greenville, N. C. Daily Reflector

CHAPTER 15

Thayn Marden's blue eyes were brilliant with excitement as she talked with Kirk Hammond. "Either you are the cleverest poster ever heard of," he said, "or your story is true. And it all checks — that parachute device we found, like nothing made for ages."

She broke off, then said intently, "Listen, Kirk Hammond. Don't let yourself be involved in this Hooman plot. It will come to nothing, and you could get killed."

"This anxiety of yours about me is touching, but hardly convincing," Hammond said sourly. "Her eyes flashed with impatience. 'Do you suppose I care what happens to you personally? You represent, if your story is true, a vast storehouse of knowledge of the remote past. I don't want that knowledge to perish.'"

"There'll be no danger," he said lightly. "When our ship is completed, we'll go to Althar and find out how you Vramen make yourselves so long-lived."

"You haven't a chance in a billion of reaching Althar," she said. "We keep too close a watch on the whole Trifid. And even if you passed the Vramen."

She stopped suddenly. "Yes?" said Hammond.

Thayn shook her head. "Oh, no. They'll get no information from me, either by tricks or by the encephaloprobe."

"Not even to save your mind, your sanity?"

"No, not for that or anything," she answered, and her tone carried conviction to Hammond.

"Their quest is quite hopeless, believe me. I can't help it if they're determined on suicide. But I do want to save you and all the knowledge you have from a useless death."

In her earnestness she laid her small hand on his wrist. Hammond flinched slightly and instantly Thayn's expression changed.

"So you've already picked up the Hooman hatred of us?" she said, her eyes searching his face. "You too think us unhuman?"

He tried to find words of denial, but Thayn turned away from him. She looked weary and dejected. And for the first time Hammond felt a spark of real sympathy for her.

"Are you really going to be so foolish as to let them wreck your mind?" he asked.

"I will tell nothing that will help Hoomen to reach Althar," she said, without turning.

"But they're — we're — going there anyway," Hammond said. "You might as well tell."

"Why should you care what happens to someone who is not human?" she said. And of a sudden she turned and came over and stood facing him, close to him.

"Am I really so alien, so repulsive, in your eyes?"

She was looking up at him, and her tilted white face was provocative in its mock-innocence. The subtle perfume of her glimmering blonde hair made his pulses pound. There were little taunting devils in her eyes that utterly belied the softness of her face and voice.

Her small hands reached out and grasped his shoulders, and her red lips were very close.

"Am I, Kirk Hammond?"

Hammond fully realized what she was doing. Yet for his life he could not refrain from the kiss she invited. Her lips were strangely cool and sweet, and her supple body was firm and elastic in his grasp.

Next moment he was thrust violently away and Thayn was looking at him in scornful triumph.

"It seems I am not. But you are to me."

Hammond, after a moment, said steadily, "All right. I hurt your feelings and you wanted to hurt mine. Are we even now?"

The scorn and anger left Thayn's face. She said, "You're right. I'm used to the hatred of the Hoomen, but you are of another age and your action hurt me. For a moment, I was small and spiteful."

The avowal was so honest that Hammond could not help admiring her. He said, "I meant what I said. Thayn. I hate to see your mind destroyed."

"I cannot and will not help these people," she said. "Tell them so. And — come again if they will let you. I have much more to ask you about the old times."

The guard carefully let Hammond out of the little locked chamber. He had a lot to think about as he went through the busy work-chambers in search of Jon Wilson.

Wilson listened intently when Hammond told him what Thayn had said about Althar. He repeated it slowly. "We keep too close a watch on the whole Trifid. And even if you passed the Vramen — That seems to imply that there are other obstacles for us at Althar, beside the Vramen. She added nothing to that?"

"Nothing. She stopped short as though she realized she was letting information slip out."

"The Vramen make very few slips," Wilson said skeptically. "Her 'information' could be quite calculated."

"I can talk to her again," Hammond suggested. "She seems quite eager to see me, now that she's practically convinced I'm what I saw I am."

It was odd, he thought, how tensely he waited for Wilson's reply to that, as though a great deal depended upon it. He did not know quite why he should feel like that. But he did know that Wilson's answer, when it came, was a shock.

"North Abel says the encephaloprobe will be finished by tomorrow night. We'll use it on her the following morning, and it's her own fault if she resists it."

"But if she does, you learn nothing," Hammond said. "And if I could persuade her not to resist, you'll learn everything."

Wilson finally nodded. "You may as well try again to make her see reason. I'll tell the guard to let you in tomorrow afternoon."

He looked shrewdly at Hammond as he added, "You regard the encephaloprobe with horror, don't you? The necessity for it repels you?"

Hammond nodded. "I don't like to see even a Vramen's mind wrecked."

"Neither do I," Wilson said. "But like it or not, with the future of all Hoomen hanging on this, the thing will be done. Try to make her realize that."

On the next afternoon when he entered the small prison-room, Hammond had his mind made up. He didn't know for sure whether he liked Thayn or detested her, but like Wilson, he had no desire to see her mind blasted. He said so to her as earnestly as he could.

She shook her head. "I will not yield to the probe."

Hammond felt helpless, and angry because he was helpless. "All right," he said roughly. "I hate to see this happen to anyone. But if you're determined to put caste

See A Trap In Looking Back

HONOLULU (AP) — Werner Von Braun, Army missile expert, says the United States "can fall into a dangerous trap" in the missile race with Russia.

"If we persist in looking back to see how fast the other fellow is running," he behoves us to run just as fast as we can and let him worry about keeping pace," Von Braun told a meeting Thursday night of the Assn. of the United States Army, an officer organization.

Von Braun said the United States was developing a really big booster rocket larger than "anything the Russians have shown us." He said he was not so sure the United States was behind the Russians in space technology.

loyally ahead of your own sanity there's nothing I can do about it."

Thayn did not answer that for a moment. Her clear eyes studied his face, and then she said, "You don't want me made into a mindless idiot?"

"I told you, I don't want that to happen to anyone."

"You can prevent it if you wish," she said. And then as he started to object she added quickly, "No, I'm not suggesting that you help me escape, but there is another way..."

Can Thayn Marden trick Hammond into betraying the Hoomen? "Man Who Missed the Moon" reaches a spinechilling climax here tomorrow.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gains by selected issues highlighted an otherwise dull and irregular stock market early this afternoon.

The over-all market was "resting" from what brokers regarded as the first phase of a vigorous summer rally. Volume was below Thursday's.

Trading interest veered away from the blue chips which paced the climb to historic highs. Buyers turned to more speculative, secondary issues.

Gains and losses of fractions to a point dotted the list of pivotal stocks.

The market was mixed from the start as profit taking and switching were apparent in many sections.

A rebirth of speculative interest sparked moves in many stocks and led to comment that "the market wants to go up" — but the average was weighted down by important losers.

A few of the steels, motors, drugs, aluminum and chemicals moved to the upside. Rubbers, airlines and utilities were mostly lower.

U.S. Steel canceled a loss and rose more than a point. Gains of about a point were shown by Ford, Republic Steel, Western Union, Johns-Manville, Square D, Schering and Union Oil of California.

Down around a point were such stocks as Goodyear, Goodrich, Caterpillar, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Du Pont and Illinois Central.

Fractionally higher were New York Central, Amoco, Lorillard and Reynolds Tobacco, the latter after a dividend hike.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was off 30 cents to $223.70 with the industrials down 70 cents, the rails down 30 cents and the utilities unchanged.

U.S. government bonds advanced slightly.

Sugg Speaks To Underwriters

"Financial Planning of Estates" was the subject of the talk given by B. B. Sugg Jr., vice president and trust officers of the State Bank and Trust Co., at the meeting of the Pitt County Association of Life Underwriters yesterday.

Sugg pointed out that life insurance is vital to the financial planning of an individual's estate. He said the majority of people failed to realize that the entire valuation of jointly owned property is subject to federal estate tax at death unless proper planning is made in advance.

Carl Kinlaw, president, announced that the local association would sponsor a Life Insurance Education Week. The date will be announced later.

Two Items Impressed Hodges In Soviet Trip

RALEIGH (AP) — The disheveled appearance of a Soviet official and manual labor performed by Russian women stuck in Gov. Hodges' mind on his recent arrival in Moscow.

He told of the motor trip from the airport to the Russian capital and of other events in his trip behind the Iron Curtain in a report released Thursday by his Raleigh office.

The account, the second since the governor left Raleigh on his Soviet junket, told of conversations with the Russian education minister and another official who corresponds to an American governor.

He said Cultural Affairs Minister Zhukov, who greeted him at the airport, "had on a bedraggled raincoat, a very badly worn and dirty shirt with his tie askew."

Along the highway into Moscow he said "we saw quite early the work of the women. They were laying asphalt and running the machines for the road work."

He said an interview with the Russian education minister revealed that Soviet children follow a uniform plan from their birth.
