

Tobacco Harvest Nearly Over

A FAMILIAR SCENE . . . now in Eastern Carolina are fields such as this which have been stripped of their tobacco. According to Walter Hasty, Supervisor for the Pitt ASC office, if there is a known disease, such as wilt, blackshank or hollow stalk, in the field, the stalks should be cut and removed from the field. If no disease is present, the stalks may be plowed under, he added, and a vegetative cover crop planted. Any one interested in planting a cover crop and wishing assistance from the ASC office in securing seed, should sign up for the $2.00 per acre assistance on September 1 at the ASC office.

Greenville-Wilson Not Yet Ruled Out In CAB Hearings

Greenville-Wilson's application for air service is still far from dead despite a recommendation made Thursday by a Bureau of Air Operations counsel.

County Attorney W. W. Speight said the recommendations, made by James A. Tomlinson, would only be considered along with other evidence by the examiner in the Piedmont Local Air Service investigation.

Tomlinson served as bureau counsel at the series of hearings which were conducted in North Carolina, Washington and other locations by Hearing Examiner James A. Keith.

Tomlinson recommended that Piedmont Airlines be given permanent authority to operate between Wilmington and New Bern via Morehead City-Beaufort with authority to serve the latter cities on a seasonal basis. He also recommended that the air line be given permanent authority to operate between Norfolk and Knoxville via Elizabeth City, Rocky Mount, Raleigh-Durham, Southern Pines, Greensboro-High Point, Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Hickory and Asheville.

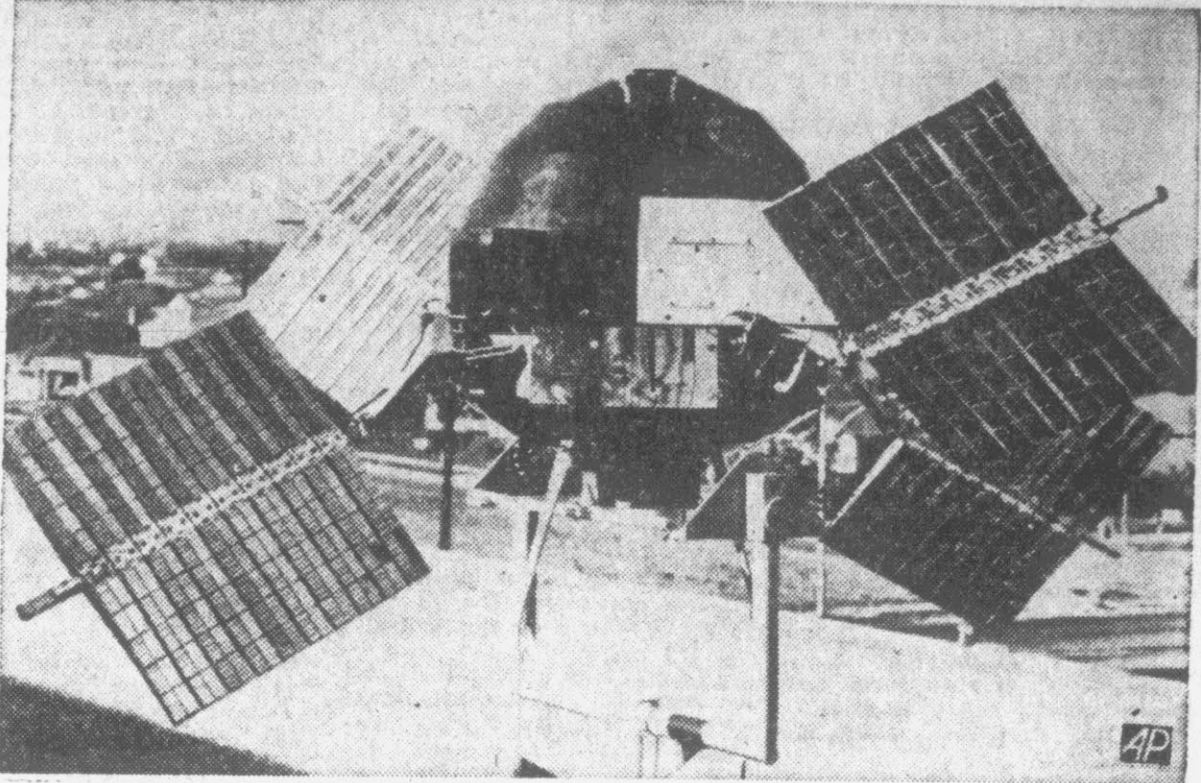

He recommended that Piedmont be given authority to operate between Charlotte and Goldsboro via Southern Pines, Fayetteville, Wilmington, Jacksonville-Camp Lejeune and Kinston, and beyond Goldsboro to Washington, D. C. by way of Rocky Mount and Richmond, on one leg, and to Washington by way of Elizabeth City, Norfolk and Newport News on another.

He proposed temporary authority to add Lumberton to Piedmont's Roanoke-Wilmington route and to serve the New River Valley Airport on the Knoxville-Washington route.

Finally he proposed that Rocky Mount, Hickory and Elizabeth City be cut from Capital Airlines route and that intermediate points on Capital's route between Norfolk and Atlanta be deleted.

Tomlinson had no recommendation on the Greenville-Wilson application for service. Speight pointed out, however, that Tomlinson's recommendation are only that. They will be considered by Examiner Keith along with the briefs which are to be presented by the various municipalities involved in the investigation.

America's Explorer VI, The Paddlewheel Satellite

"PADDLEWHEEL" SATELLITE SOARS IN ORBIT—Here's the 142-pound "paddlewheel" satellite which was launched at Cape Canaveral, Fla., Friday and soared into orbit. The Space Agency said it will remain aloft more than a year. The four solar vanes, which give the satellite its name, are designed to pop out from sides in space to convert the sun's rays into electrical energy for the enclosed radio transmitter batteries. This creates the satellite's own power for transmitting information back to earth. The "paddlewheel" is packed with instruments and serves as a flying laboratory exploring the mysteries of space. 'Most Advanced' Satellite Collects Valuable Data

By STANLEY MEISLER

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—Paddle-wheeled Explorer VI, the most advanced American satellite, orbited in a wide sweep around the earth today and collected scientific data that may ease man's way into space.

The spheroid, sporting four paddle vanes trying to catch energy from the sun, was launched Friday at the missile test center here. A Thor-Able rocket, 90 feet long and in three stages, sent it aloft. Soaring 25,950 miles from earth at its highest point and coming 152 miles above earth at its lowest, the satellite had the longest orbit of the six artificial moons now in space. It also takes six times as long as any other satellite to make a trip around the earth—12 1/2 hours.

Packed in the 142-pound satellite was the most comprehensive scientific package ever orbited by the United States, enough instruments to perform 15 experiments. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington, getting reports on signals transmitted by the satellite on 108.06 and 108.09 megacycles and on an undisclosed high frequency, reported that every instrument tested was working perfectly.

Most of the experiments are designed to provide vital information for sending a man into space. In summary, the instruments would:

1. Measure the intensity and length of the deadly radiation in the Van Allen belts that hover around the earth.
2. Demonstrate whether the four paddle vanes can convert enough of the sun's rays into electrical energy so that a future space ship could send radio messages from 20 to 50 million miles in space.
3. Scan the earth's cloud cover and transmit radio signals that might be converted into pictures that could help weather forecasting.
4. Measure the density of micrometeorites or cosmic dust to see how a space ship would hold up under their bombardment.
5. Chart the earth's magnetic field.
6. Study the behavior or radio waves to learn more about communications far out in space.

Arrests In Connection With Negro Home Blast

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP)—Seven white men have been arrested in connection with the first of two explosions that ripped through a Negro home.

Delaware State Police Capt. John Herbert said after Friday's announcement of the arrests that officials expect more to follow.

Herbert did not explain whether they might be in connection with the first blast last April 7 that caused $3,500 damage or the latest explosion last Sunday that completely wrecked the home of Mrs. George Rayfield. The Rayfields and their teen-ager daughter were not at home at either time.

The Rayfields were the first and only Negro family to move into the previously all-white nearby community of Collins Park last January.

At the start they were plagued by demonstrations. Then things quieted down until the explosion April 7.

Those arrested in Wilmington were Gilbert Minnick, 49; Francis Conley, 32; Albert L. Reverdito, 32; David Emory, 28; and Ronald Therkliden, 24, all of Collins Park and Melvin Downing, 28, of Overview Gardens, a neighboring development.

All were released on bail ranging from $5,000 to $15,000 pending Delaware Superior Court action.

William V. Charlton, a filling station operator, was arrested in Venice, Charlton, who also lived in Collins Park, said that he was 600 miles from Wilmington on April 7. Officers said he will be arraigned on a charge of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution. State Police had charged Charlton with a burglary that preceded the explosion.

Queen Begins Her Vacation

BALMORAL, Scotland (AP)—Queen Elizabeth II began vacationing today with her family to recover from the strain of her Canadian tour and to rest up for her third child.

The 33-year-old Queen arrived at Balmoral Castle Friday, with Britain's press in a sentimental tizzy over the coming happy event. Messages of congratulations flooded the tiny village post office near Balmoral.

Behind the grey walls of the castle built by Queen Victoria in 1854, Elizabeth with Prince Philip and their two children were effectively screened from the excitement let loose by the impending royal birth.

By long custom, royal vacations at Balmoral are held in the strictest privacy. And with her release from public engagements the Queen is now free to enjoy the seclusion of her Scottish home until late October.

Even so, police were prepared for an invasion of curious. High fencing was erected last year around parts of the extensive Balmoral estate to discourage tourists.

It has been 102 years since Britain had an expectant Queen and newspaper headlines reflected the excitement of the occasion.

"Well," exclaimed the Daily Sketch, "what lovely news."

"Feeling fine!" declared the Daily Express.

"A February baby?" mused the News Chronicle.

"Delighted ma'am," said the Daily Mail.

"COOL JUDGE OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—A municipal judge who complained that 95 or 96 degree heat 'affects my disposition' won quick relief. The Alameda County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to rent a cooling system for $115 and investigate the feasibility of installing a system throughout the courthouse.

Navy Developing Radar To Spy Across Oceans

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—A new radar device to spy across oceans and give a quick report on ballistic missile launches is being developed, the U.S. Navy says.

The radar also could be used as one means of uncovering sneak tests of nuclear weapons in violation of any international agreement.

Dr. William J. Thaler of the Office of Naval Research and "father" of the new radar setup called Project Tepee, said Friday night:

"I would hope you could double the warning time." This would mean that the United States would have almost 30 minutes instead of 15 minutes—possible under the U.S. system now being built—in which to launch counter-weapons. Military men figure it would take about 30 minutes for a missile fired in the Soviet Union to reach the United States.

Thaler, 33, talked to newsmen about the project. Asked if the Navy had tested the device against Soviet ICBM testing launches, he replied "no."

Trials with the device, which he said is still in the early "breadboard" developmental stage, have worked at what amount to intercontinental ranges—5,000 miles.

Thaler said the device is located at an undisclosed place in continental United States and picked up the ballistic missile-nuclear explosive tests made last summer in Project Argus in the South Atlantic and the Johnston Island tests in the Pacific.

However, the New York Times said today that several stations are now in operation, adding: "The number and locations of these stations are secret."

The Times story continued: "Soviet missile and satellite firings have been monitored for the last several months from locations within the boundaries of the continental United States."

The newspaper also said: "The system can also determine the location of missile-launching sites and can evaluate the performance of a rocket thousands of miles away. Such information has already yielded important guidelines on the state of the Soviet missile program."

If the detection equipment will spot a missile within seconds or minutes from the firing time at a range of more than 5,000 miles, it would appear to be better than the Air Force's Ballistic Missile Early Warning System (BMEWS) now being built in the far north. That conventional although long range radar system is designed to detect missiles at distances of about 2,000 or 3,000 miles—after they are well on the way toward target.

The new device carries the name of "high frequency ionospheric back scatter radar."

It detects ionized gas, those particles of electrons which appear in temperatures of thousands or millions of degrees after a nuclear explosion or in the exhaust trail of rocket motors on ballistic missiles.

Ordinary radar, like that used in BMEWS and conventional aircraft warning systems, works as does television—in a straight, line-of-sight. The beam won't bend around the curve of the earth, so anything below the curve is hidden to the radar's eyes.

But Thaler figured out that with the frequency radar, which behaves somewhat like a radio wave but has the characteristic of returning, he could do this:

Send an impulse up to the blanket of ionized particles which envelops the earth and the top of which is about 250 miles high. The impulses striking the ionosphere then reflects downward at an angle. It strikes the earth's surface 5,000 miles away, then flashes back instantaneously toward the transmitting point.

If there is an ionized gas along the earth "the column in the trail of a missile's rocket engines (or the mass produced in connection with nuclear explosion), it registers on instruments back at the transmitting-receiving point.

Thaler says that what the Navy has now is just the bare-bones, experimental stuff, not an actual complete system. But he thinks the cost of building an operating system might be "relatively" inexpensive and could be done in a couple of years if all-out effort were made.

Ionized gases, missiles and atomic explosions are no new subjects for Thaler. He was senior Navy scientist for last year's Project Argus.

Quality Up In Border Belt

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An improvement in quality marked end-of-the-week sales on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina Flue-Cured tobacco belt.

General price averages also rose Friday, offsetting losses reported on Thursday. The increases mostly were $1 and $2 per 100 pounds.

With less low grade tobacco and more fair to fine quality, quality was improved. Volume ranged from light to heavy.

Total sales Friday were $6,140,719 pounds, averaging $60.10 per 100 pounds, up 32 cents from Wednesday. Season sales now are 35,920,487 pounds averaging $59.47.

The breakdown of sales and averages by state Thursday: South Carolina 3,621,973 pounds, $61.79; North Carolina 2,518,746 pounds, $57.66. Under the government loan program, 9.1 per cent of sales went to the Flue-Cured Stabilization Corp.

Auction bid averages on a limited number of grades Friday: Leaf—good lemon $70; fair lemon $68; good orange $70; fair orange $68.

Cutters—low lemon $71; low orange $71. Lugs—good lemon $69; fair orange $69. Primings—good lemon $68; fair lemon $65; low lemon $51; fair orange $62; low orange $46.

Nondescript—best thin body $32.

NEW YORK (AP)—The 25-day-old steel strike seemed as far away from settlement as ever today, and pressure was mounting in Congress to have President Eisenhower intervene.

Friday, Steelworkers Union President David J. McDonald joined company spokesmen and mediators in saying that recent reports of progress were unfounded. Negotiations will resume Monday after a weekend recess.

In Washington, 32 Senate Democrats have sponsored a resolution urging Eisenhower to try to speed a settlement in the strike.

Blast Toll To 11, Loss In Millions

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP)—Eight business blocks of this southern Oregon city, seared and shattered when a truck load of explosives blew up like a bomb, were sealed off by the National Guard today while searchers sought more victims.

At least 11 persons were killed early Friday when the 6 1/2 tons of dynamite and other explosives detonated after fire spread to the parked truck from a nearby building blaze.

Coroner C. H. Babbitt said he was certain that there were other deaths. He said ashes, believed to be the remains of humans, were found in a charred rooming house near the blast scene. The ashes are being sent to a laboratory for testing.

Some 100 persons were injured by the blast, 52 of them requiring hospital treatment.

The explosion, which eyewitnesses said sent a column of flame hundreds of feet into the air, caused extensive damage to an eight block section on the edge of the main business district. Buildings in some 22 blocks around the blast scene were damaged to a lesser extent. Firemen said they had reports of windows being blown as far away as seven miles.

Arlo Jacklin, mayor of this city of 12,200, said property damage would probably total 10 to 12 million dollars.

The truck, loaded with two tons of stick dynamite and 4 1/2 tons of the explosive mixture of ammonium nitrate and oil had been parked near the Gerretsen Building Supply Co. building for the night by its driver, George Ruthcriford, 47, of Chehalis, Wash.

It is believed that a fire started in trash cans and then spread to the Gerretsen structure. Firemen were fighting the fire — which spread quickly — when at 1:15 a.m. the truck blew up with a deafening roar.

Rutherford said he heard the sirens and rushed to move the truck. It exploded when he was a block away. He was thrown to the ground. Gerald Butler, a Eugene, Ore., insurance man who came to Rutherford's aid, said Rutherford screamed "Let me go. Let me go. I've got to go down there and see how many people I've killed."

The blast scattered embers over a wide area and a number of smaller fires were started.

The known dead all lived in Roseburg. Mayor Jacklin, surveying the tragedy that struck his city, said "It's going to be a long time before we even think of rebuilding. We've got a lot of buildings to condemn yet."

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will confer with the two top officials of the North Atlantic Pact organization during his trip to Paris in early September, the White House announced today.

Eisenhower will meet with Joseph M. A. H. Luns, Netherlands minister of foreign affairs and president of the NATO Council, and with Paul-Henri Spaak, secretary general of NATO.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said the President is looking forward to reviewing with the two NATO officials "important aspects of the current world situation of concern to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization."

The White House announced Friday that Eisenhower will go to London Aug. 28 and to Paris Sept. 2 for talks with British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and French President Charles de Gaulle.

This is preliminary to his conferences in Washington with Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev, beginning Sept. 15.

100 Bronze Bars Stolen From Firm

CHICAGO (AP)—Police are seeking burglars who know something about bronze — about 2 1/2 of bronze.

Thomas Burns, sales manager of the Johnson Bronze Co., Friday reported the loss of about 100 bronze bars worth more than $4,000.

Burns said the thieves must have known something about the alloy of copper and tin because they took only bars of high-quality bronze from a stock room.

Rare 1943 Penny Is Held By South Carolina Man

CHARLESTON, S.C. — (AP)—Jimmy McKnight Jr. of Charleston is like the little boy clutching a lone penny on his way to the candy store.

Only McKnight has his penny carefully cared for in a little flannel bag—because the coin may be worth $40,000.

McKnight, now 20, says he won the coin matching with a girl about five years ago.

He recalls that "When I first got it, it was black and I thought it was a slug, but then I rubbed it and discovered it was a 1943 copper penny."

"I'd been reading coin books and I knew it was valuable, so I put it in my pocket and didn't say anything about it."

The reason the penny is so rare is that 1943 pennies were made from a cheap alloy that looks like zinc. But a few coppers were minted. No one seems to know how many 1943 coppers were made, but apparently only two or three are known to exist.

McKnight's looking for a buyer. He said he has held the coin all this time because some years ago an auto manufacturer offered a free car for a certain coin, and he hoped a similar offer might be made.

If he realizes the last sale price, it will be considerably more than the value of a new car.

Clergymen Now Becoming Real 'Flying Parsons'

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

They used to call the Rev. Gil Dodds the flying parson because he could run a mile in a track suit faster than most men of his time.

Now, with private air travel a commonplace thing, churches are developing a breed of real flying parsons, clergymen able to serve large, scattered parishes through the use of airplanes.

The United Church of Christ has at least two.

The Rev. John R. Kelly of Broadus, Mont., serves six congregations scattered over an area of 4,000 square miles, flying his own two-seater plane over the longer legs of his parish rounds.

The Rev. Alan O. Ingles of Flasher, N. D., travels about 4,000 miles a month by car and single-engine plane to perform ministerial duties in his sprawling parish.

For both flying parsons, facilities are primitive.

The Rev. Mr. Kelly has to shoot cows off his landing strip in Broadus before taking off.

"The runway is in the middle of a cow pasture," he says, "and the cows haven't forgotten they were there first."

None of the fields in the Rev. Mr. Kelly's Powder River parish are lighted for night landings, but he has solved the problem in a novel way.

He buzzes the town, and parishioners get out their automobile and hustle to the field to light the landing strip with their headlights.

The Rev. Mr. Ingles recently outlined a typical Sunday of services for his five scattered congregations in Flasher Larger Parish.

He's up before dawn and hurrying to the airport in Flasher with his Bible, church bulletins, a tape recorder and, during the winter, a can of heated oil to get the plane started.

By 7 a. m., he's in Solen, N. D., landing on a little-used road. Then worship services for some 40 persons and a church breakfast of coffee and homemade rolls.

Carson, N. D., is the next stop. There, the Rev. Mr. Ingles sets down on the high school football field. Services in Carson start at 9:15 a. m.

He's back in Flasher for 11 a. m. services, occasionally experiencing a delay while automobiles are hauled off the landing field. Hot-rodgers use the strip for drag racing on warm days.

After a quick sandwich at the parsonage, he's off for Selfridge, 30 minutes away across rough terrain on the fringe of the Badland area. Services there are at 2 p. m.

The last service of the Rev. Mr. Ingles' busy Sunday is in Shields, which he refers to as a paradoxical town.

"The town is dying. Only the church and the bar remain open."

ST. PAUL CHRISTIAN

DEEP IN THE WOODS

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For the sake of his children. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Have you ever been deep in a woodland, where it is so dark that you think light can never enter? Then suddenly a shaft of sunlight strikes through the trees, and you find yourself standing in unexpected beauty.

Life can be like that, too. At the darkest moment, suddenly there can be light—if you have the power to see it. But that's an important "if." So many of us fumble through the days and years when the greatest candle of all, the Church, stands ready to light our path.

If you have been depriving yourself of the guiding strength of the Church, start now attending its services. It will help you find your way both in sunlight and in shadow.

Dinner Party Honors Bridal Couple-To-Be

Highlighting the social calendar last night was a dinner party in honor of Miss Linda Whincard and Gene Brown, whose marriage is to take place August 23 in the Emmanuel Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Vance Perkins and son Jimmy entertained the couple and approximately 20 guests at their home on East Fifth St.

Wearing a pink sheath dress complimented by a corsage of pink roses, a gift of the hosts, Miss Whincard and Mr. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Perkins, and Miss Lynn Southerland of Goldsboro greeted the guests. They were directed to the side porch where tomato juice and chesnes were served.

Dinner was served buffet style from the dining room table covered with an imported Chinese cloth over pink linen. Centering the table was an arrangement of clove, dahlias and roses in varying shades of pink and white, the chosen color scheme.

Throughout the living room individual tables were set centered with pink rosebud arrangements. The dinner course consisted of ham, potato salad, string beans, beets, cranberry pineapple salad and iced tea which was followed by lime ice cream and pink and white bridal cake squares.

A gift in her chosen silver pattern was given to Miss Whincard by the hosts and hostess during the evening. Miss Southerland, fiancée of Jimmy Perkins, was also remembered with a silver tray and a yellow rose corsage.

Antique Gadgets Perk Up Bathroom Decorations

THE BATHROOM can prove to be a wonderful challenge to the antique collector as many old-fashioned articles now fall into the antique bracket.

Take that old Victorian hat rack that used to hang in the front hall. Even a purist antique collector could find satisfaction in using it for a towel rack, though it doesn't have the correct amount of aged dust to put it in the antique category. But why should that worry lovers of the old? It'll make a handsome addition to the modern bathroom painted to match the color scheme.

Antique shows are loaded with old-fashioned items, and one dealer at the New York Coliseum Antique Fair suggests a small-size lacquered rack as another possibility for a bathroom towel-holder. Another exhibitor has a good collection of curved brass tiebacks. One set is shaped like dragons' heads—ideal for towel holders or clothes hooks.

The show is rampant with ideas along that line. An excellent clothes hamper for the modern bathroom is a handsomely painted toile bin, unless you'd rather earmark it for firewood. These were used sometimes for tea or grain in general stores. Many of them held coal or kindling in Victorian homes.

All dealers seem to be jar-minded, and these old jars fit nicely into modern bathrooms, no matter what the motif. There are apothecary jars with labels, and in handsome colors to be used for bath oil, salts, cologne. Oil decanters and even barber bottles of colored glass serve this purpose, also.

Old-fashioned shaving mirrors—the kind that can be placed on top of the vanity or those on wooden legs with drawers may be used to good advantage in a roomy bathroom.

Large covered sugar bowls of china or pewter may be pressed into modern service to hold small tins of soap or cotton balls. You'll find ironstone or china tooth brush holders with floral designs on the cover, or perhaps you'd prefer an antique glass, goblet or small pitcher to hold your toothbrush.

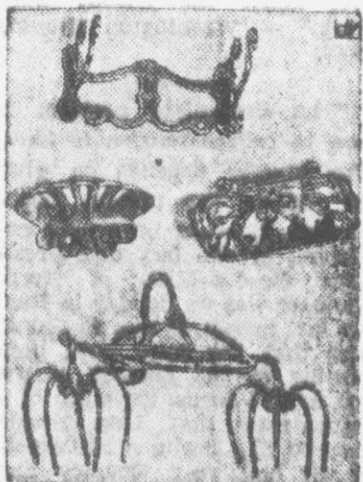

The big brass soap and sponge racks that are so popular now are counterparts of those you'll find at antique shows, and the earlier ones have that advantage of mellowness that somehow lends to authenticity in home decorating. In this category you'll find shell-shaped soap dishes, and ornate tissue racks.

If you're the type who goes in for art in the bathroom, consider some old botanical prints. Pottery wash basins, urns or large ironstone pitcher can lend to bathroom decor as planters.

When traipsing through an antique show, don't look for the obvious. It is the small versatile thing, often inexpensive, that can put your home in the elegant bracket.

MODERN TOWEL RACK . . . It was originally a clothes rack hanging in Grandma's front hall. Shown at the Coliseum Antique Show.

OLD FIXTURES . . . These handsome brass bath fixtures are ideal in the modern bathroom, more elegant than their counterparts shown today.

Church Circles

BETHEL—The Women of the Mary Lambeth Circle met in the home of Mrs. Frank Whitehurst Monday night with 12 members present.

After all had assembled, Mrs. C. M. Burton, Spiritual Life Secretary, led in the devotionals. Her scripture reading was taken from Mark. Her topic was "Does Your Life Count?"

After devotionals, Mrs. R. B. Edmondson gave the first two chapters of the new study book, "The Ways of Africa." She told of the invasion of Africa by the white man and how the ways and customs of the whites looked upon with curiosity by the Africans. She asserted that through the help of missionaries the natives are accepting the ways of civilization. "Their country is being industrialized," the speaker said, "and they now have roads where there was wilderness."

Continuing, she said that vaccines were now used to fight diseases in place of the medicine man's rites. Mission schools are teaching children to read the Bible. In her talk she said, "Africa is going through a trying period but with the help of God, the church missionaries, and democratic people it is hoped she will soon get a firm foundation spiritually and financially."

The meeting was concluded with a short business session after which refreshments were served.

Circle No. 1 was entertained in the home of Mrs. J. L. Brown on Bethel-Greenville Highway Monday afternoon with 12 members and one visitor present.

Mrs. W. P. Thigpen opened the meeting with the devotionals using excerpts from the July-August "Woman's Survey." In connection with these she used a variety of scripture selections.

Mrs. D. T. House Jr. presented the program based on the first two chapters of the study book "The Ways of Africa."

At the business session an offering was made toward the memorial for Mrs. Paul N. Garber.

The Women of the Sarah Whitehurst Circle and the Merion Burton Circle met in the home of Mrs. Howard Keel Monday with Mrs. Jim Andrews and Mrs. W. O. Warren as co-hostesses.

Mrs. Sam Keel presented the program on Africa.

At the conclusion of a short business session, the hostesses served a sweet course.

More Realistic Controls Needed

President Eisenhower's public appeal for more realistic legislation to curb labor racketeering and abuses brings into keener focus a major problem which faces the nation today.

Just what effect the President's personal intervention in the matter will be remains a matter of conjecture. There can be no doubt, however, that the President spoke the sentiment of a great many Americans who have watched with awe and gangster and racketeering elements have gained and exploited formidable footholds in organized labor. Neither can there be any doubt that many people in the United States hold views in conflict with those of the President concerning the method of curbing labor abuses.

Congress at the moment is more sharply divided and its members more bitter over labor legislation than at any time since the Taft-Hartley law was enacted in 1947. On top of that, the fact that next year is a national election year tends to make members of Congress more than normally aware of the political implications of their votes in the field of labor legislation.

The trend of events in recent years has clearly illustrated that existing laws are not completely effective in curbing racketeering, gangsterism and corruption in labor organizations and also in the field of labor-management relations. It has also become evident that existing laws do not provide sufficient protection for the individual rights of members of some labor organizations, third parties that become only indirectly involved in labor disputes, and the general public.

There is no bigger business in the nation today than the business of organized labor. Yet, for the most part control which the government has over big business goes far beyond that which is exercised over labor organizations. The public must not be left at the mercy of racketeers in labor organizations any more than they should be abandoned to the mercy of racketeers in business.

President Eisenhower, in his address to the nation, outlined a reasonable program, pinpointing items which need immediate attention of Congress. Before Congress adjourns this summer, it should write into law more realistic labor legislation to curb the racketeering and corruption that is victimizing an increasingly large portion of the nation's population with each passing year.

'Other Fellow' Not Entirely To Blame

The shortage of Salk vaccine which faces North Carolina and the rest of the nation on the eve of the peak of the polio season must be attributed to a lack of planning on the part of officials and on the part of the public.

Several years ago when the nation was faced with a similar shortage, federal health officials offered the lame excuse that they did not expect the public response which was forthcoming when the vaccine was put into general use. Apparently we are seeing again this year another instance in which officials have not accurately evaluated public demand for the vaccine.

Production apparently has slipped because of stocks that were once large, and now that the public demand for the vaccine has increased rapidly, production cannot keep pace.

While we may be prone to blame officials and manufacturers for the shortage, the public itself must assume a considerable portion of blame for the present situation.

Salk vaccine has been on the market now for several years. Health officials, family physicians and others associated with public health and medicine have urged citizens continuously to take advantage of the vaccine. Many children and young adults have taken the anti-polio shots, but quite obviously there are millions of Americans who have disregarded the repeated urging. Now that the number of polio cases is taking a sudden increase, many of those who have put off taking their shots are clamoring for the vaccine.

At the moment there just isn't enough to go around.

If an individual had received his series of shots two or three years ago, he wouldn't be so worried about the apparent shortage of vaccine now. Neither would he be so concerned about the increase in the number of polio cases. He already would be protected against the disease. And in all probability, there wouldn't be a shortage of the vaccine now.

When a situation such as the one now with the vaccine shortage arises, most of us are prone to blame someone else. As often as not, we are as much to blame as the other fellow for the situation which exists.

Background To Nikita's Talk

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Is there one word which describes the difference between confident and cocky? Sure. It's K-N-I-G-H-T. But the Soviet Premier still acts like a boy with two heads. He crawls out of one and cries out of the other.

While Premier Nikita Khrushchev feels himself getting more powerful, as he surely is, he also shows startling signs of self-conscious inferiority. An example is what happened to the display of American goods at the fair in Moscow.

It's no discredit to the Soviet Union, which started late, that it is still far behind the United States in industrial production, particularly in consumer goods.

But Khrushchev's government—means the Premier himself—through its controlled press tried to belittle the evidence of American production at the fair and even set up a fair of its own to distract the Russian people.

Nevertheless, here's how Khrushchev grew from confident to cocky:

1955—Just before he went to the Geneva summit meeting, when he was No. 2 man behind Premier Nikolai Bulganin, he said the Soviet Union wasn't going to Geneva out of weakness, it didn't have "broken legs," and "if you don't want to talk seriously, we can wait and hold on."

1959—Just before coming here for his September meeting with President Eisenhower, Khrushchev says he won't be coming with rockets in his pockets. The 1955 statement was defensive, as if he felt the Allies were looking down their noses. Then the Soviet Union was ringed with American bomber bases—as it still is—but then it had no missiles and was trying to get production up.

Now the Soviet economy is working overtime although still behind this country in agriculture and industry. But now the Soviet Union has missiles and has surged ahead in their development.

Khrushchev's present cockiness isn't sudden, it's been growing. A little over two years ago, in a TV interview, he told the people of this country: "Your grandchildren will live under socialism." Why did he suddenly need a bigger hat?

First, he's Premier now. He won an untidy fight, booting out Bulganin and took his job, and tossed his rivals into Soviet limbo. He's the undisputed No. 1 man, the boss. More than that happened, Soviet military strength grew meanwhile.

In the fall of 1956 with one statement the Soviet Union proclaimed to the world that only two powers counted, the United States and itself. With one statement it set out to relegate those old empires and world-rulers, Britain and France, to second-rate roles.

That was when it threatened to smash them and Israel if they didn't stop their attack on Egypt. Eisenhower saved the day by pressuring all three of them into stopping their war.

And in 1957 the Soviet Union sent up its first satellites, beating the United States into this field of the future. It went on to one achievement after another, including a moon-shot.

So Khrushchev really was rubbing it in when he said he wouldn't come here with rockets in his pockets.

As time moved, Soviet fear of American long-range bombers may not have diminished. But its own confidence—in military strength, at least—bounced ahead with its progress in long-range and intermediate missiles.

Two years after Geneva Khrushchev was feeling so sure of himself that he challenged the United States to a "peaceful rocket" contest. He said a third World War would be the worst and would be fought on American soil.

That was in November, 1957, after the first Soviet satellites had gone up. Just a year later, on Nov. 14, 1958, Khrushchev was challenging the West to an all-out production race.

Not Exactly A Reducing Diet

Jail Floors Are Hard

A prisoner was brought into the county jail in handcuffs the other day.

He had a terrific black eye plus some other cuts on the face. We figured he had been in a fight and we asked a deputy about it.

"Nope," he replied. "He was brought in on a drunkenness charge the other night. They put him in a cell. He went to sleep in a top bunk and rolled out during the night."

The prisoner was being brought back from a doctor's office where the stitches were removed.

Those floors in jail cells can be mighty hard.

What's in a word? Or better still, what's in several words? Its all in how you use them.

Dentist Dr. M.W. Aldridge has found out that proper wording is important in his profession.

If you've had many teeth filled you've probably been asked to bite down on a piece of carbon paper by which the dentist checks to see if the new filling strikes the opposite tooth.

Any way your columnist took a trip to the dentist the other day and when Dr. Aldridge got to the checking stage we got into a discussion about what would happen if I had bitten down too hard.

If the patient does that, the new filling can be broken out and the dentist has to do the job all over again, he said.

"I used to say 'All right now, bite down gently,'" Dr. Aldridge said. "But every once in a while, I'd get a patient who would clamp down by the time I said 'Bite down.'"

"So now I say 'All right now gently... bite down.'"

If you were inconvenienced by the lights going out when the 'opossum tangled with a transformer the other night, just remember the administrative head of the whole darn Utilities Commission was in the dark, too.

An informant tells us, Superintendent Leonard Bloxam was in a meeting downtown that night. The lights went out.

In the sudden darkness and silence Bloxam fumbled to reach a telephone, intent on an immediate call to the plant.

After a few moments of fumbling, he said, "Somebody please strike a match. I can't even see enough to dial the number."

"Thanks to the Harvard machine that handles figures of fifteen digits, one now can figure how long the country's resources of unmined coal will last under the no-day work week." — Washington Evening Star.

"The immediate problem is how to reduce tension in Laos. The answer depends on what lies behind the present insurrection. It could be simply explained by the fact that President Ho-Chi-Minh of North Vietnam was on holiday in Russia last month, is now in China, and that the mice have been playing in the absence of the cat. But it seems too much of a coincidence that Laos should succeed the Berlin crisis exactly as last year Quemoy and Matsu took over from the Middle East crisis, Peking has certainly not shared in Moscow's jubilation over the prospect of the meeting between President Eisenhower and Mr. Khrushchev, and a diversion in Southeast Asia might seem a timely reminder of China's power." — The mind turned toward God. Prayer is not just a matter of words or primarily a matter of words. Prayer is above all else the set of the mind. One may pray all day yet never utter a word. One may utter a thousand words and yet not pray in the way God requires.

When will we get out of our minds the idea that religion consists in going through certain motions, in believing certain religion involves all this, but religion in the deepest sense consists in an attitude of heart and mind. And when this attitude is what it ought to be, this is prayer. This is prayer without ceasing. Keep the heart uplifted to God—and do whatever you want to do as a result.

Agitation and propaganda for more trade with Russia will grow stronger in the months ahead. American producers and exporters with goods the Soviets want, and importers and others seeing profits in Russian-produced goods will promote this idea.

The argument will be: Top-level personal contacts among Khrushchev, Nixon and Eisenhower are good for world peace, but international trade is better. The old law is valid: No one ever shoots a good customer. So let's be a good customer of the Russians and let's make them our good customers.

He's a dark suspicion: Maybe that's the way the Russians figured it.

OUTLINE OF THE CASE It is obvious that Russia has made tremendous advances in the last few years. Now the question arises: Can Russian keep up its high rate of industrial expansion without additional sources of machines and materials, and without markets for its surplus production?

Sources and markets are largely confined to China and the satellites today. They can increase their supplies of machines and materials very little; Russia has already drained them heavily. And neither China nor the satellites are growing markets for their surplus Russian production. Their purchasing power is worn thin. So America and the rest of the free world remain the only fresh market for Russian goods, and the only fresh source of additional machines and material.

Nuclear Mishaps Rare

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy planes, like those of the Air Force carry nuclear weapons on some training flights.

But so far there have been no accidents to Navy planes carrying A-bombs, the Navy said in answer to a question this week.

Even if such accidents did occur, the government has said, chances of a nuclear explosion were virtually negligible.

Training flights involving use of live but unarmed atomic weapons are made in planes that are carrier — based. The weapons apparently include both bombs and the Navy's new atomic depth charge, "Betty."

The Navy said it does much training using the unloaded, dummy "shapes" of nuclear weapons for practice "but in some instances" actual atomic weapons are aboard aircraft.

There was no official information on where the over — water flights of nuclear weapon carrying planes usually take place.

Nuclear weapons are carried by all three categories of U.S. Air Force combat planes — strategic bombers, tactical planes used in support of ground troops, and air defense planes using the "genie" atomic warhead rocket.

Several mishaps involving bombs — carrying SAC planes have been reported during the last few years, but in no case has there been a nuclear detonation or any spreading of radioactivity.

Most of the cases have been crashes of bombers with nuclear weapons aboard. However, in one instance a bomb was released accidentally and in another the crew of a bomber jettisoned the weapon after a mid — air collision.

The latest reported accident occurred July 5 when a C 124 cargo plane, transporting what the Air Force declared as "unarmed nuclear weapons" crashed and burned during takeoff at Barksdale Air Force Base, La.

The Pentagon and AEC issued detailed instructions more than a year ago prescribing safety and decontamination procedures to be used in event of accidents and a quantity of additional instructions have been issued since.

A circular of the two agencies distributed Sept. 30, 1958, said that the most probable hazards in the case of accident are 1. detonation of the conventional explosive or 2. dispersion of particles of plutonium by the impact of heat or fire. The poisonous plutonium particles can be taken into the body by breathing or through open wounds in the skin.

The Defense Department and AEC have specially trained and equipped radiological assistance teams upon which any federal agency or local community may call for quick help in case of accident. The circular warns that only personnel specially trained should attempt to clean up or dispose of wreckage after an accident.

Opinions In Brief

Times, London.

"The conjunction of these two spectacular items of news could hardly be more revealing. On the one hand, the Poles display to the world the continuing instability of Russia's western empire; on the other, the Americans offer the oppressor the symbolic accolade of respectability which Mr. Dulles doggedly withheld on the ground that it would solidify Soviet rule behind the Iron Curtain and cause consternation to the subject peoples. At the time of the Hungarian and Polish uprisings Britain's action at Suez was blamed for saving Mr. Khrushchev's face. This time, the President's invitation has deflected attention from Poland—as Mr. Khrushchev's press conference so pointedly showed. There was no time to ask about Mr. Nixon's welcome in Warsaw, since curiosity was concentrated on more pressing matters, such as the American cities the Soviet leader would like to see." — London Daily Telegraph.

Strength For Today

TRUE NATURE OF PRAYER In his first Epistle to the Thessalonians, Paul urges his followers to pray without ceasing.

How absurd, you say. Does the Bible or does the church expect us to spend all our time in holy devotions? Of course not. If that were the requirement, we would be entirely right in denouncing it as absurd. What this commandment means is that the mind should continually be turned toward God and this can be done no matter how secular the tasks in which we find ourselves.

It is possible to do housework, office business, factory jobs, farming, studying and every other form of physical and mental activity yet all the while keeping keep up its high rate of industrial expansion without additional sources of machines and materials, and without markets for its surplus production?

Sources and markets are largely confined to China and the satellites today. They can increase their supplies of machines and materials very little; Russia has already drained them heavily. And neither China nor the satellites are growing markets for their surplus Russian production. Their purchasing power is worn thin. So America and the rest of the free world remain the only fresh market for Russian goods, and the only fresh source of additional machines and material.

JUST SUPPOSING Suppose that we were Khrushchev, a smart bunny, and that you wanted Western markets and sources. Wouldn't you try to create a climate for such trade? And wouldn't the best way be to make some show of friendship, such as sending top comrades, like Mikoyan and Kozlov, to the United States to play the part of eager but unconvincing friends? And then to bring somebody like Nixon to Russia and demonstrate that the Russians love Americans, even if you have to use the knout to make them show it?

And then wouldn't it be a good idea to visit the United States yourself, and get Eisenhower to return the call?

By itself, that would be too obvious. But if you make some retractable threats about war over Berlin, and had the preliminary boys—Mikoyan and Kozlov—be a little stiff, then wouldn't the whole affair look credible?

And on that basis, this week's prediction is that the trade-with-Russia campaign will be carried on on just such a basis, and that the carryings-on will be some greater than ever before the end of the year.

OLD PROMOTER SPOTS A NEW TAX TREND "An interesting new theory in taxation is developing," the Old Promoter remarked on his visit today. "Congressman Watkins of Kentucky has introduced a bill to tax cigarettes made with tobacco substitutes the same as cigarettes made with tobacco. Perhaps there ought to be a beer tax on soft drinks, because some people use them as substitutes for beer. It ought to be a tax on rich widows, because some of them marry them instead of earning a taxable income." The old one's idea seems to be of low Wait-age.

Coach Earl Smith returned from the East-West game well pleased with the performance of "Cotton" Clayton. The Zeb Vance star wasn't the leading scorer but Smith felt that he played an all-around good game.

Paul Dietzel, head coach of the national champions—LSU—says that he thought his club was the best in the nation last year and he wonders if this season will be as good.

Dietzel explains that he has lost one important ingredient of winning good kicking. The LSU coach does have his problems with only 31 of 35 lettermen returning, including All-American Billy Cannon.

Bullard is Cut by Colts

Harold Bullard, the former terror of the North State Conference while playing for Lenoir Rhyne, has been cut from the squad of the Baltimore Colts.

Bullard, a hard-driving fullback at Rockingham High and then for Lenoir Rhyne's single wing attack, was the ninth draft choice of the Colts in 1958. Last year he played a couple of exhibitions with them before leaving to help coach at Camden Military Academy in South Carolina.

Speaking of Lenoir Rhyne, the Bears only lost six men from their 1958 championship club. The losses were heavy ones, including Bill Ackard and Joe Murphy—two All-Conference choices. Lee Farmer, junior fullback, is the man to watch this year in the Bruin attack.

Comparing ECC with the Bears. The Pirates, second place in the 1958 race, lost only five men with their backfield catching the biggest of the graduation toll. Bobby Perry, All-Conference star, was the big loss.

Themides Makes Big Jump

Mike Themides, former East Carolina College student and now working on his masters, has made a big jump in Virginia prep circles. Themides will take over as head coach of Franklin High School's football team this fall after serving as an assistant for two years.

Joining the staff at Franklin will be three other ECC graduates. Al Vaughn, diamond star at East Carolina and outstanding griddy at Chowan, will assist Themides and also head the baseball club. Nick Nichols, former Pirate cager, will be head basketball coach and Harold Smith will direct the junior varsity organization.

Bob Moore, Carolina Dairy third baseman, is considered as one of the best infielders in the league. A Wilmington native, Moore gave pro ball a try and was signed by the Cleveland Indians. He came to East Carolina several years ago in search of an education. Dean Robbins continues to set a blazing pace for the league-leading Raleigh Caps. Dean will return to ECC this fall as a junior. Lou Collie, local insurance man, feels that the Touchdown Club will achieve much in future years. The club is already in operation and have plans which include a big banquet for the 1959 season.

Meeting Is Important For Freshmen Gridders

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles written by Coach Jack Boone of East Carolina.

By COACH JACK BOONE NEW SEASON UNDERWAY

After getting the ink and stencils on newly purchased equipment, it is now put in the players' lockers awaiting them when they report in. The manager and his assistants have put in a lot of time, and the trainer has now checked and rechecked all of his equipment. He knows he is in for a long season. Besides going to school, he will work day and night keeping his boys playing on Saturday nights.

As the players report on opening day, they have only a few minutes to get their rooms straight and check their equipment. While the players are getting their equipment, their parents are helping out in another room with the picnic that has been arranged for the players, wives, sweethearts, parents, coaches, and friends of the college. The food sure looks good—fried chicken, ham, all kinds of cake. Look at those biscuits—I'm sure getting hungry. Sure is plenty of good food. Look at those boys eat. No wonder the parents said they were glad for their boys to get back to school!!! The sun is now going down—the mothers and sweethearts are now saying goodbye. In a few minutes the players will have to rush over to the infirmary where Dr. Fred Irons, with complete medical staff including Dr. Dan Wright, a dentist, will be waiting to examine them from head to toe. All defects will be noted and corrected as soon as possible. Some boys reported in fine shape. A few boys who were not here last year did not report in too good shape—the old boys will laugh—they'll learn! The new boys seem lost at this point. At last the examinations are over and it is now 10:00 p.m. One coach is yelling, "Hurry up boys—remember the 10:00 o'clock meeting at the Gymnasium."

This is the most important meeting we have as we try to go over our objectives for the coming year and try to explain the importance of every individual to our program. We try to impress upon each boy the importance of our training rules, so he will want to "just get by," but will give up many things that are precious to him, and subject himself to the hard, bitter, grind of fundamentals that will make him a legitimate football player and a gentleman. It is indeed an important meeting! The clock says 10:30 and the squad is dismissed—a long day. Tomorrow—on the field early—at last, the season is now underway.

Lee Advances In Golf Tournament

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP)—Larry Lee is the only kid who packs his own bag in the National Junior Golf Tournament but it doesn't seem to hurt his scoring.

The blond, 17-year-old Spokane, Wash., par player threw a 2-under 69 at 14-year-old Mike Riley of San Diego in the quarter-finals Friday and set himself up today as the favorite.

Riley finished with a 1-under 70. In the semifinals Lee takes on another 17-year-old, 115-pound Fred Leffingwell Jr., of Miami Beach, Fla., who came from behind to beat Dave Stockton of San Bernardino, Calif., 2 up.

Kermit Zarley, of Seattle, another sharp golfer from the Pacific Northwest, moved into the semifinals by dumping Gary Polumbus of Denver 5 and 4.

Zarley, 17, plays Michael McMahon of Atlanta in the semifinals. McMahon advanced on a 2-up win over Jimmy Gabrielson of Athens, Ga.

Graniteers Win District Tourney

Gordon Hurls Final Victory

ROANOKE RAPIDS—It has been a long hard grind but the Graniteers finally reached their goal last night, banging out a 11-3 victory over Seymour Johnson to top the 1959 Northeastern District Softball tournament.

The Graniteers, always a soft-ball powerhouse but never able to win the "big one" in district play, were never behind last night as they broke their jinx and ended the tournament in quick fashion.

A lapse by the Goldsboro club opened the golden gates in the third inning, the winners scoring four runs.

Johnny Foell, a terror on the base paths all week, got a walk. Roebuck did likewise, and Ike Riddick got a single to lead the bases. Another walk to Heidenrich gave the Graniteers their first run and then a wild pitch scored another tally. Bobby Conway hit a single to score another and the ball was crrored to allow the fourth run to score.

Singles by Riddick and Perry started another Graniteer rally in the fifth and once again the loser's defense fell apart. Two errors and a single by Gordon gave the Graniteers four more runs and a comfortable padding to work with.

Errors paved the way for another Greenville run in the sixth and then two more in the seventh.

Goldsboro used the long ball for their lone rally in the fourth. Millard Walker, husky right-fielder, hit a four bagger in the fourth after Ferrer had singled to score two of the three runs.

Allen of Seymour Johnson had the only other extra base blow, a double in the fifth.

Seymour Johnson outhit the Greenville champions 8-7 but their defensive ability did not stack up with that of the Graniteers and Gordon kept the base knoxes well spaced.

The victory ended the week-long double elimination tournament and gave the Graniteers the right to compete in the state tournament later this month.

Giants Bump Off Reds, 3-2 Behind Antonelli, Mays

By JOE REICHLER Associated Press Sports Writer

San Francisco fans have waited nearly two years but they're finally seeing the real Johnny Antonelli, the one who pitched the Giants to their last pennant—in New York.

Friday night Johnny, now 29, pitched the Giants to a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds that increased their first place lead over the idle Los Angeles Dodgers to a game and a half. The Rochester, N.Y. native doled out four hits and went the route for the 14th time, the sixth in his last seven starts.

The victory was Antonelli's 16th which makes him the top winning pitcher in the major leagues. Lew Burdette, Warren Spahn and Sam Jones, his closest pursuers, all have 15. Anty has lost only six.

Chicago's Cubs snapped a fourth place tie with Pittsburgh, shutting out the Pirates 4-0 and the St. Louis Cardinals moved into sixth place, one percentage point above Cincinnati, defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 3-1. Milwaukee joined Los Angeles on the sidelines.

In the American League, Chicago's White Sox maintained their game and a half lead over Cleveland, defeating Washington 4-1. The Indians downed Baltimore 8-5. New York's Yankees climbed into fourth place shutting out Kansas City 3-0 and Boston dropped Detroit into sixth with a 4-3 victory.

The Giants blew an early 2-0 lead and had to stage a ninth inning rally to win. The winning run was knocked in by Willie Mays, who collected three of the Giants' seven hits off Lefty O'Toole and Brooks Lawrence. Mays also came up with the fielding gem of the game, robbing Johnny Temple of an extra base hit in the fourth with a leaping catch. Willie crashed into the barrier and was shaken up, but he held the ball.

With the score tied 2-2 in the ninth, Lawrence, who had replaced O'Toole in the eighth, hit pinch hitter Leon Wagner. Then Lawrence threw Antonelli's bunt wildly, attempting a force play at second, and pinch runner Felipe Alou raced to third. Jimmy Day-enport struck out, but Mays singled sharply off Lawrence's chest to score Alou with the winning run.

Stan Musial crashed a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth to snap a 1-1 tie for the Cardinals' victory over the Phillies. Lindy McDaniel, who replaced starter Wilmer Mizell in the ninth, was credited with the victory.

Pittsburgh was shut out by Moo Drabowsky who handcuffed the Pirates with five hits.

The Cubs also got five off loser Ronnie Kline but two of them were home runs. They were hit by Ernie Banks and Art Schult.

Cooper Retains Lead In Cleveland Tourney

By FRITZ HOWELL Associated Press Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP)—Goldfom's gay young blades have been giving old man par a beating in the first two rounds of the $25,000 Cleveland Open, but they haven't been able to do much with old man Cooper.

The latter is Pete Cooper, 44-year-old recent operator of a pitch-and-put course in Lakeland, Fla. With the four-day, 72-hole medal play going into the second half today, Cooper still was keeping out in front.

In the first round, Cooper fired a 67, a 71 for the 6,966-yard, par 71 Seneca course. That tied him with veteran Jim Ferrier of Burbank, Calif., another 44-year-old, a stroke ahead of a field of 152.

Friday, in the second round, there were some amazing deeds among the younger set. Paul Harney, 30, the 1957 winner from Worcester, Mass., carved out an 8-birdie 63. Gene Littler, 29, of Singing Hills, Calif., had an 8-birdie 64. Big Mike Souchak came in with 65, and Doug Sanders and Jay Tebert had 66.

There were 27 subpar rounds fired, but "Old Pete" was still out in front by a stroke. Harney, Littler and Souchak were deadlocked for second with 135.

Cooper merely duplicated his opening 67 and was all alone at 134. Ferrier slipped to 71 for 136, two back of 26-year-old Sanders and tied with Bob Goalby, 28, of Crystal River, Fla., and Bert Weaver, 27, of Beaumont, Tex.

Tokyo, the capital of Japan, covers a territory of 828 square miles.

Defensive Tilt Sees West Throttle East

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—Quarterback Hal Beaver of Charlotte operating from behind a heavy and aggressive line punched over two first half touchdowns here Friday night to lead the West to a 14-0 victory over the East in the 11th annual North Carolina high school all-star football game.

The westerners advanced 49 yards for their first quarter touchdown. Beaver, the Myers Park quarterback, moved the ball from the 18 to the 2 on a fake pass. Three plays later he slipped over from the one-foot line.

A 52-yard push paid off for the West early in the second quarter. That touchdown was set up by an 18-yard run by fullback Barry Ramsey of Marlon who legged it from the 24 to the six. Two plays later Beaver carried it over from the five. Fullback Jimmy King of Charlotte Harding bulldozed over the two extra points.

The East, held to but 15 yards rushing in the first half to 107 for the West, picked up in the second half. They moved into scoring position three times, but lost out each time.

A fumble by fullback Jimmy Mooring on the West 28 ended one drive; a second drive in the fourth quarter stalled on the 13; and a third with 2:30 remaining fell flat on the 10.

Just before the game ended, quarterback George Wooten of Hamlet returned a West punt 32 yards to the 18. But the East was unable to move farther.

We learned some more facts about submarines that we thought interesting enough to pass along to you. It seems that prior to World War I the submariner saw very little actual warfare, but during that period it engaged in some pretty weird "set-tos," besides firmly establishing itself as a major weapon of modern warfare.

For example, there is the case of the British sub G-11 which was captured by an abandoned German balloon. It seems that while surfaced the sub tried to engage the balloon which was hovering nearby. Soon the balloon was directly overhead and so near the water that its trailing lines became enmeshed with the sub's screws. The sub then was helpless. It had to shoot down the gas bag and then work for hours to free its propellers before it could resume its patrol. Then there are the cases of the subs that were captured by cavalry, rammed by trucks, slugged it out with infantry, railway and field artillery. One sank an active zeppelin, and one was even attacked by a mad Turk in a rowboat.

As in our business, apparently anything can happen, and usually does, but when prepared for it, as we always try to be, we can give you top satisfaction in just about any situation.

Dean Should Have Played First Base

By FRANK ECK AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

It has been 25 years since Jay Fanna (Dizzy) Dean astounded the baseball world by racking up 30 victories for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Since this is the silver anniversary of the great man's feat it seemed like a good time to call Dizzy's old manager, Frankie Frisch, at his New Rochelle, N. Y., home.

Dizzy was the last pitcher in either major league to collect 30 wins in one season. Robin Roberts got 28 for the 1952 Phillies, and in the American League Hal Newhouser of the 1944 Tigers turned in 29. But nobody has touched 30 since Dean's day.

"And I don't think anybody ever will during a 154-game schedule," says the 61-year-old Frisch. "We had eight pitchers going into the 1934 World Series with Detroit and used every man. Today if a manager doesn't have a pitcher he's short-handed. I say what good are pitchers if you can't use them."

"Years ago a pitcher wanted to start and he wanted to finish. When a manager came out to take the ball, the pitcher went nutty. Look at what happened when Boom Boom Beck threw that ball up against the right field band box wall in Philadelphia. He woke up Hall Wilson.

"There was the time Charlie Grimm went out to take the ball from Tex Carlton. Tex wouldn't give up the ball. When Grimm insisted, Carlton threw the ball into the grandstand.

"If you had that much stuff in the game you'd start by pitching," Grimm told him. "People tell all kinds of stories about Dizzy Dean winning the seventh and deciding game in the 1934 World Series against the Tigers. I had used Dizzy as a pinch runner in the sixth game, won by his brother Paul, 4-3, and Dizzy got hit in the head.

"After the game I walked under the shower with Dizzy and right then and there I knew he would pitch the final game the next day.

"We'll beat 'em for sure tomorrow," I told Dizzy. "I got a great pitcher going—Bill Hallahan."

"What's wrong with me?" Dizzy asked. "You won't get your rest if I tell you you're pitching. That game tomorrow will mean anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 to you if you rested tonight."

"Dizzy must have got his rest. He shut out the Tigers with six hits, and we won 11-0 after getting seven in the third inning."

Dean, now a Saturday television announcer for CBS, is 48 and much heavier than when his fast ball won 150 National League games. The native of Lucas, Ark., was only 23 when he won 30 games.

Three years later in the All-Star game, before President Roosevelt in Washington, a third-inning drive from the bat of Earl Averill hit him on the left foot. When Dean reached the clubhouse an examination revealed the drive had broken a toe on his left foot. Dizzy never was the same pitcher.

"I still think Dizzy should have stayed in the game," says Frisch. "He should have gone to first base. He could hit. He was a good runner and a great fielder. He could size up a play in a hurry and always know to which base he should throw the ball. He was a natural."

"That ought to be enough on Dizzy. Think I'll go back and lie in my hammock."

Frisch, who recently pinch hit on Dean's TV show when Dizzy took a vacation, is still active as a radio sportscaster.

Trucking Officials To Attempt Legal Action

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Officials of at least three trucking lines here said today they would look into the possibility of legal action against the Teamsters Union. They said they would do this because their names were used without their consent on identical telegrams to North Carolina congressmen asking them to vote against a strong labor reform bill backed by President Eisenhower. Company spokesmen said that in at least five cases, the names of men signed to the telegrams are not employees of the companies. The spokesmen also said they had learned some of the telegrams were charged to Teamsters Local 71 here. "It's a case of typical Teamster deception," said A. M. Price, general manager of the Overnite Transportation terminal. The Teamsters have been picketing Overnite in an attempt to organize it. The telegrams were signed with the names of Teamster members. But the signers were not identified as Teamsters. Their names

Gettysburg Excited About Ike's Visit

By KARL R. BAUMAN
GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Gettysburg, long accustomed to taking President Eisenhower's comings and goings in stride, is a bit excited because it is going to be, for all practical purposes, the base of White House operations for a week or so. The Gettysburg Times, which usually reports the President's weekend visits to his farm near here in a few paragraphs, gave top play to its story that the White House is going to set up shop here for an indefinite period. "So again Gettysburg becomes the center of world attraction," the Times said. "The President of the world's greatest nation will make his headquarters here for at least a week." Because of overcast skies, Eisenhower abandoned Friday plans to fly here by helicopter. Instead, he came from Washington by automobile. Eisenhower plans to play golf and relax until Monday, when he returns to the capital to keep appointments. He will meet with Republican congressional leaders there on Tuesday. Then he returns here for what press secretary James C. Hagerty has described as the nearest thing to a vacation the President will get before beginning a series of international conferences later this month.

There were seven resident additions valued at $16,727, five resident alterations valued at $12,700 and one garage valued at $1,000. There were a total of 22 building permits issued during the month and there were 31 plumbing and sewer inspections. The turnover in fees to the city clerk's office came to $340.

Says 'She Should Have Told Us!'

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP)—Tom Johnson says the least the Queen could have done is tell him she's expecting a baby. "It seems impossible we should have been allowed to make all these preparations then on the eve he told that it is all off." Johnson's face began to flush when he said he didn't "really wish to comment on this so soon as naturally one's reactions are very violent." "Personally after this another visit will be a matter of indifference as there could never be the same anticipation as on this occasion." Johnson declared the Shetlands have waited a long time for a royal visit—800 years in fact. It's been that long since a reigning monarch set foot on these barren, rocky, strewn islands off Britain's north coast. Internal problems have now beset the islands' fathers. Who will pay for all the preparations? What will they do with all the food and drink ordered?

They will be arraigned Aug. 13 in criminal court. Fans were used in China in 3000 B.C.

Dot Weakens, Moves Away

HONOLULU (AP) — Hurricane Dot moved well north of the Hawaiian Islands today and weakened into a tropical storm. But her 75 mile an hour winds had flooded and ravaged the island of Kauai at the northern end of the Hawaiian chain. Dot's howling gales ripped roofs off houses, wrecked old frame buildings, flattened sugar cane, knocked down power and telephone lines and sent 1,000 tourists and residents to high ground. No casualties were reported. Edward E. Johnston, acting governor in the absence in Washington of Gov. William F. Quinn, asked President Eisenhower to declare Kauai a federal disaster area, qualifying her residents for federal aid loans. Following a personal tour, Johnston told the President damages would exceed a million dollars. Official estimates for the damage in Hawaii ranged up to six million. Johnston also declared a state of emergency in Hawaii and indicated funds will be made available for repairing roads and public properties.

Admiral Says Subs Not Boats

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP)—A submarine is a ship and not a boat and furthermore it is a first class ship of the Navy, says Rear Adm. Frederick B. Warder, Commander Submarine Force, Atlantic. He has requested officers and crew to refer to them as submarines or ships, reviving the old Navy adage: It's a boat if it can be carried by a ship. Early submarines were small craft originally called torpedo boats, which could be hoisted to decks or aboard ships, and were a far cry from today's submarines.

Wayland Sermons Speaker At Club — Last night at the weekly meeting of the Greenville Exchange Club, Wayland Sermons, member of the N.C. General Assembly from Beaufort County, told the Exchangeites of the history and enchantment of the North Carolina Motorboat Act. Sermons was author of the Act, which was passed during the last term of the Assembly. He told briefly how the act was based on the new federal law and was necessitated by the tremendous increase in the number of boats in use now for both commerce and pleasure. Since a large number of the Exchangeites are boat owners, they "found the program very interesting." It was announced that next Wednesday the club will hold its annual outing at Pamlico Beach at the cottage of Exchangeite Hap Moye. It was also announced that next Friday at the regular weekly meeting the members of the Exchange Little League ball team will be guests of the club. President John Hassell presided.

Housing Project For The Birds

HOMER, Ohio (AP) — Early Hayes, 75, has carried out a one-man housing project, strictly for the birds. Hayes has built 14 apartment houses for birds. Each apartment has a private entrance and is partitioned inside for privacy. Some of the bird buildings have as many as 38 rooms. Hayes says he provides the rent-free housing for his feathered friends simply because he enjoys having them around.

Patience, Craftsmanship Essential To Gunsmith

MANY HOURS INVOLVED . . . A gunsmith could be proud of these guns and this picture of "The Woman At The Fountain" which were begun from ordinary pieces of wood.

By PEGGY SMITH
Reflector Woman's Editor

Patience, understanding hand tools and being able to work with your hands are "a must" in gun making, says Claude Christopher of 1606 Berkeley Rd.

Being a gunsmith is not his profession, but for the past 20 years anyone could find him in his sparetime assembling and doing finishing work on firearms or inlaying pieces of wood into picture forms.

"Since I was the only child in my family, I had to learn to play and do things by myself," he commented. He feels that making himself contented when a child is a large factor in his being able to have a hobby which "requires a lot of patience and determination."

Prior to my first attempt in making a gun stock, I read a lot and learned as much about the art as I could," Christopher noted.

Continuing he said, "One must know about welding, inlaying, working with woods, bluing the barrel and action, machine work, soldering, and finishing wood before he can create a good gun."

In making a gun stock, Christopher first finds out what type of wood the owner desires. Among the choices would be American walnut, Tulipwood from Brazil, Sainwood from Ceylon, Ebony from Africa (which is very expensive and is the oldest wood mentioned in the Old Testament), Aspen from the state of Maine, Rosewood from Honduras and many others. Some of these woods are used for inlays on the stock. Ivory, pearl, gold and silver are most common inlay materials.

"Semi-precious stones such as jade or topaz are used in inlays for pistol grips," he added. After the selection of wood, the barrel and action are inlayed on the block wood, next the stock is cut to owner's specifications—length, weight, and the type of inlays or carvings and checkering he desires.

His most unusual experience while working with this hobby was when he was asked to design and make pistol grips with a skull and vampire bat on each side of the firearm.

After graduating from Greenville High School, Christopher served as First Lieutenant in the Army Air Force. Prior to his present position as First Lieutenant in the Greenville Fire Department, he was employed by the local Police Department. While working with this department, he shot with the pistol team.

A winner of many medals, his most outstanding is the first place award won in a National Rifleman's Association match.

He is married to the former Helen Cannon of Winterville and has two children, Lina, 15, and Claude, III, 13.

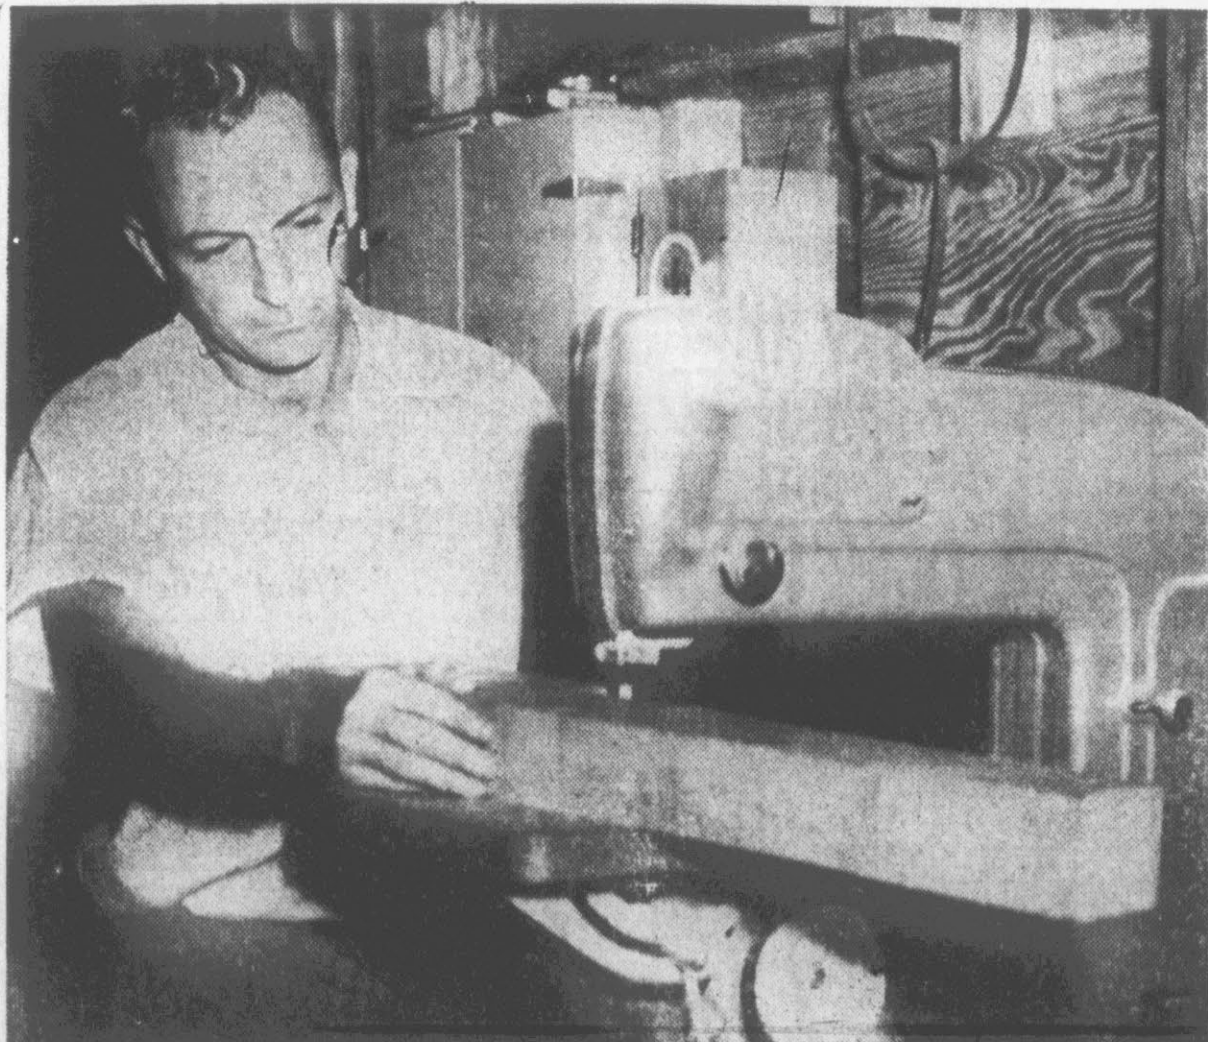

With children in the home Christopher has always abided by two rules toward his love of guns. They are: "Always keep ammunition away from guns, or separate the two and keep one locked up, and there will be no trouble."

SANDING STOCK . . . A gun stock must be sanded and re-sanded before it is ready to be finished and in-lays made.

PRIZED POSSESSION . . . Claude Christopher oils and cleans this prized rifle he made from start to finish.

FIRST STEP . . . Cutting a rough outline of a stock is the first step toward many hours of work before it looks like a real gun stock.

CHECKERING . . . Patience and determination must be acquired before one can do such a tedious job.

ASSEMBLING SHOTGUN ACTION . . . With precision Christopher fits the working mechanism into the finished stock

Research Park Will Bring Many Highly Skilled Persons

By LYNN NISBET
Reflector Raleigh Bureau

RALEIGH—Development of Research Park, in the center of the Chapel Hill-Durham-Raleigh triangle, will bring into the communities a large number of scientists, engineers and highly skilled technicians. Of necessity most of this top bracket personnel must come from outside. In the first place, the firms want their own company trained men; and for the present, at least, there are not enough of this calibre men and women here to man the laboratories and experimental pilot plants.

The development will create demand and afford job opportunities for thousands of secretaries, technicians and semi-skilled laborers. The firms coming here expect to recruit this class personnel in the area. While there are some weak places, the prospects are good that the communities can supply the needed employees.

Business schools, those which are classed as business colleges and the numerous educational institutions which offer business courses, are emphasizing studies designed to train the type of workers which surveys have indicated will be most in demand.

W. E. Griffin, chairman of the Durham Committee of 100, is concerned about the scarcity of good secretarial material. He has urged his local schools to step up instruction in these courses. He is less concerned about the technician class. Training programs in Durham industry, and the potentials of the Durham Industrial Education Center, administered by the State Department of Public Instruction, and with increased Federal aid under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, will ease the situation in this field.

John R. Drummy, head of the industry promotion section of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, anticipates no difficulty in supplying the secretarial personnel—including stenographers, typists, filing clerks and computing machine operators. Raleigh may be a little short in the field of mechanical technicians, he said, but it is long in the clerical worker class.

As for the semi-skilled labor demand, both new and old industries have testified to the adaptability and ready response to special training of young people native to this area. Neither Drummy nor Griffin see any trouble in that field.

Reports from the University at Chapel Hill, Duke and State College are to the general effect that while original personnel in the low scientific brackets may have to be imported, there is no doubt that these institutions will produce replacements in the future.

Housing for the imported scientists and engineers presents no serious problem, says John Drummy. Most of them are in what might be loosely termed the "upper middle class," desiring homes in the range from $15,000 to $25-30,000. Residential developments around Raleigh have many such places already built, and opportunities for new building in the same class. Homes and building lots for new construction in the $50,000 and above bracket are available. So are many in the range of $10,000 and below.

"Except for the very small number of top echelon scientists, we can supply the personnel and housing needs of any company locating here," said Drummy.

Quality Drops, Volume Medium

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)—Volume was medium and the quality lower during sales at the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco markets Friday. Nondescript comprised nearly a fourth of the offerings.

Prices were fairly well in line with Thursday. Some grades of leaf varied $1 to $3 per hundred pounds with gains and losses about equal.

Other offerings were higher for the most part with averages on nondescript recovering some losses.

Markets at High Springs, Jasper and Lake City, Fla., held closing sales. Live Oak and Madison, Fla., will close Tuesday while Pearson, Pelham, Thomasville and Valdosta, Ga., will end Wednesday.

Auction bid averages per hundred pounds Friday on a limited number of U.S. grades:

Leaf—Low lemon $62, up $1; poor lemon 58, down 1; low orange 64, up 1; poor orange 60, unchanged; low medium green 53, down 2; poor medium green 51, down 1.

Nondescript — Best thin bodied 39, up 8; best heavy bodied 46, up 5.

Actor's Wife Charges Fraud

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Actor Ernest Borgnine's wife has expanded her charge that he used fraud and undue influence to induce her to obtain a divorce.

Rhoda Borgnine Friday filed seven additional affidavits by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Kemins of New York; other relatives, friends and her doctor—to support her contention.

A hearing on her petition to have the divorce set aside will be held in Superior Court next Friday.

The divorce is scheduled to become final Aug. 29.

Borgnine and Actress Katy Jurado have announced they intend to marry. Miss Jurado said earlier this week the wedding would be Aug. 15 but Borgnine said she must be confused. He said he couldn't be married until the divorce is final.

After Many Successes, Young Actress Marries

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Remember that little girl with the freckled face and the braids? Well, she's grown up and getting married today.

Not the little girl who lived next door. But Margaret O'Brien, the child screen star whose wistful charm won millions of fans.

Margaret, now a serene 21-year-old brunette beauty and again a busy actress after an awkward-year absence, weds Harold Robert Allen Jr., 24, a commercial art student.

The ceremony will be conducted in St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church. The couple will honeymoon in Hawaii. Upon their return, Margaret plans to continue her career, Harold his studies.

Margaret says they met four years ago on a double date—with other partners. They have been going steady a year.

Harold is the son of Harold R. Allen, an aircraft design specialist. Margaret's mother, Mrs. Gladys O'Brien, a former dancer, died a year ago.

Margaret decided she wanted to be a movie actress at the age of three. It was not until she was five that she made it.

A picture of Margaret on a magazine cover resulted in her first picture assignment—a government short film starring James Cagney. Then she appeared with Mickey Rooney in "Babes on Broadway."

Margaret became a star in her next picture, "Journey for Margaret," portraying a British war orphan.

Starring roles followed in "The Lost Angel," "Canterville Ghost," "Meet Me in St. Louis" and many others.

Greek Hero Now At Odds With Gov't

By VASSO MINGOS

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—Five months ago George Grivas returned to Athens as a conquering hero. The government promoted him from colonel to lieutenant general and Greek girls and boys danced in the streets.

On Cyprus, he had led the underground EOKA organization of Greek Cypriots against the island's British rulers. His homecoming to Athens followed the signing in Zurich and London of accords by Greece, Turkey, Britain and the Cypriots, granting independence to Cyprus.

Now controversy is swirling around Grivas, and he is at odds with the Greek government, which once supported him, and several Cypriot leaders, including Archbishop Makarios, the head of the Greek Cypriot community.

Greek politics appear to be in for a stormy time as Grivas lashed out against the London-Zurich agreements. His words seemed to confirm what most Greeks already thought—that the former guerrilla leader had decided to enter Greek politics.

Grivas insists he does not want to get into politics. But he adds: "If the fatherland calls me, I shall once again obey the call."

And he was acting like a politician. When Premier Constantine Karamanlis struck back at him, Grivas tried to get in the last word.

For the present, the Grivas-government dispute is causing only a ripple on the political scene. Parliament is in summer recess. Many politicians who might have been expected to jump into the fight are on holiday abroad or in the hinterlands.

But come autumn and the resumption of Parliament, the controversy could blow up into a major storm.

Ever since Grivas returned from Cyprus, he has been sought out by leaders of many opposition parties. Each sees him as a man with a name that could bring victory at the polls.

If he agrees to lead an opposition group, his popular appeal would make him a formidable challenger of Karamanlis.

There are some in Athens who feel his opposition to the Cyprus accords will do him no good. They believe the Greek people are tired of the strife of Cyprus and do not want to see it revived.

But there is no doubt the name of Grivas still stirs Greeks. Athens newspapers immediately started taking sides in the dispute.

Eleftheria, a newspaper backing the opposition Liberal party, said Grivas' criticism had confirmed "that the agreements constituted a conspiracy against the Cypriot people . . . (and) were the fruits of the weakness of the present (Karamanlis) government."

Ethnos, a big independent afternoon newspaper, noted Grivas' statement that he had not been consulted about the agreements and therefore could not be held responsible for them. The paper reprinted Grivas' proclamation to his EOKA men after the accords were signed.

He said: "Those who will not accept the agreements . . . will not only divide the Cypriot people but probably the entire (Greek) nation. . . . As regards myself, although this solution is not the one expected, it is preferable to national dissension. . . ."

By last month Athens was full of talk that Grivas had turned against the accords and opposed the way Archbishop Makarios was implementing them. On July 26 Makarios in a sermon referred to "circles in Athens who for their own purposes are trying to split the Cypriot people and create confusion."

Several days later Grivas spoke up. He said he wanted to disassociate himself from the accords "in view of the unpardonable tendency to retreat before British and Turkish demands."

Karamanlis countered with a claim that Grivas was sowing discord. Grivas said he would not be muzzled. The Karamanlis government followed with an announcement that it stood by the accords.

Reports circulated that authorities on Cyprus were concerned

Japan Will Pay Well For GI's WW II Swords

NEW YORK (AP)—Some GI's are in for a good "cut" if they own certain ancient Samurai swords, considered by Japan to be national treasures.

The Japanese Artistic Sword Preservation Assn. has launched a treasure hunt for 42 of the fierce-looking, two-handed blades believed brought home by American servicemen after World War II. The 42 are among an estimated 350,000 carried home by the men.

Junzo Sato, representative of the association, said Friday he was prepared to present "suitable gifts" to any one returning a valuable Samurai sword. The most treasured blades, the ones being sought, date back to the 11th and 12th centuries.

The value of the swords depends on the name of the sword maker, which is inscribed on the 30-inch blade, or the name of the family to which it belongs, Sato said.

During the war the swords were turned out by the thousands, and Sato said he was not interested in these. But the blade, he noted, has played an important part in the lives of Japan's military caste for centuries.

Sato said the Japanese consulate general here will receive re-

Seven New Polio Cases Reported

RALEIGH (AP)—Seven new cases of polio were reported Friday to the State Board of Health, bringing North Carolina's 1959 total to 73.

This compares with 22 cases up to the same date last year. Five of the new cases were reported in Craven County. Hertford and Alamance reported one each.

At Cherry Point, 2-year-old Mary L. Carrion, daughter of acting Sgt. and Mrs. Thomas Carrion Jr. of Brooklyn, was hospitalized with paralytic polio.

It marked the fourth time in a week that polio has hit among children of service personnel at the Cherry Point Marine Air Corps Station. Two children were paralyzed and a 17-month-old boy killed by the disease earlier in the week.

So far this year the dread disease has claimed eight lives in North Carolina—three in Cumberland, two in Onslow, and each in Craven, Martin and Wake.

Says President Degraded Himself

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The president of the Communications Workers of America says President Eisenhower "degraded himself" in recommending a labor bill which the union leader said would destroy this country's labor movement.

Joseph A. Biernie said Friday night the bill would allow Communists to sue union officials for trying to expel such people. He termed the President's television speech Thursday night "ill tempered."

Biernie also criticized Eisenhower on other matters in a speech before members of CWA Local 6222.

"The President, who enjoys more social security than all of us, who spent all of his life on the public payroll, says that inflation is more dangerous than Communism," Biernie said.

"The guy doesn't know what inflation is. Wage increases do not cause inflation."

Workman Hangs On Until Rescue

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP)—Dale Krob, 37, struck by a falling ton of sandstone block, hung head down 65 feet above the pavement until firemen rescued him Friday.

Krob, of nearby Grand Prairie, was working on an aluminum scaffold guard rail, but Krob caught one end, locked his feet around the railing and hung on, until his rescuers arrived.

Attended at St. Joseph's Hospital said his condition was good.

In most of the countries of the Middle East, 80 per cent of the people are employed in agriculture.

Four-In-One Vaccine Newest Weapon

DETROIT—A new, "four-in-one" vaccine designed to simultaneously protect children against paralytic polio, diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough) and tetanus (lockjaw), is being distributed this week throughout the United States.

The vaccine, Quadragen, reduces the number of injections required to immunize children against the four diseases. The result of three years of intensive research by Parke, Davis & Company at its laboratories in Detroit, Mich., Quadragen combines polio vaccine with a three-in-one injection—diphtheria and tetanus toxoids and pertussis vaccine—now in general use by physicians.

Production of the vaccine is an intricate procedure conducted under the most rigid aseptic conditions and requires a minimum of six months to complete one lot.

Each of the four components of Quadragen—polio and pertussis vaccines and diphtheria and tetanus toxoids—is produced separately. After each is run through a complicated process that involves the addition of aluminum phosphate, it undergoes rigid testing to insure potency, safety and sterility. Using a complex formula, measured quantities (1) of the four components are pooled in a large stainless steel vat. The pooled material—three months have elapsed up to this point—blended and drained into glass containers. Samples from each container undergo further tests, both by the company and by the U.S. National Institutes of Health Laboratories.

Upon receipt of government approval of each lot—there are approximately 300,000 doses in a single lot—the packaging operation begins. Vials containing enough vaccine for nine injections, are automatically filled (2).

Parke-Davis' constant vigil to assure the quality and potency of Quadragen continues throughout this process. One such phase is the inspector (3) who uses a mirror to double check each vial of the "four-in-one" vaccine before it is packaged.

The vials are then hand-packed into individual cartons, placed into larger cartons (4) which are then weighed, inspected, and packaged in still larger containers for swift air-shipment to physicians, hospitals and pharmacists throughout the United States.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

The only girl who ever stirred Link Asbell has become a worry to him. Her father's death left Sue Vincent with the responsibility of maintaining the Big Five ranch against range rivals and outlaws. She has given her attention to little except a round of gala parties. As foreman of the ranch, Asbell has had to make all the decisions and face all the problems alone.

In making the rounds of line camps on the Big Five, Asbell found a cabin burned to the ground, and its sole occupant, Packy Lane, dead in his bunk. Convinced it was a case of murder, Link rode to Big Five headquarters to inform Sue. He had difficulty wrestling her away from a noisy party.

She was angry at the suggestion that Packy may have died as a result of the old feud of Jonas Dalmar and Bardo Sampson with Sue's father. Jonas is the father of one of Sue's suitors, Frank Dalmar, and co-owner of the Double Diamond ranch with Sampson.

Something else gave Asbell his reason for anger. On his going to Dock Jerome to report Packy's death, he found the doctor with Sampson and Dalmar. Dalmar made no pretense of concern over happenings to either Packy or Link, and Sage Wingo, a Double Diamond rider, challenged Link to fight.

CHAPTER 4

Sage Wingo's words brought Jonas Dalmar around from the bar, his glance darting and speculative. In quick succession it touched Bardo Sampson, Sage Wingo, and finally Link Asbell. Dalmar spoke tightly. "Asbell here seems to have some a mite proud. Take it out of him!"

Doc Jerome cried quick protest. "No! That's folk's talk, Jonas! Where's your good sense?"

Dalmar did not answer, but Link Asbell did, coldly sardonic. "Maybe he hasn't any, Doc. But never mind. Seems he's dead set on starting something. Well—"

He acted with the word, fast and ruthless, the pressure of feeling in him finally breaking out violently.

It wasn't Sage Wingo he made his first move toward. It was Jonas Dalmar. He grabbed the link cattleman, hauled him clear of the bar, whirled him around and shoved him violently ahead.

Expecting nothing of the sort, and caught thoroughly by surprise, Dalmar was unable to either set himself or resist. A powerful hand, locked in his collar, drove him headlong into Bardo Sampson.

Not for years had Jonas Dalmar carried a belt gun. But always, in a hip pocket, rode a snub-barreled one, and now he grabbed for it. Link Asbell's free hand was there first, snatching the weapon clear and tossing it over the bar.

Done with Dalmar, Asbell sent him spinning aside. The cattleman, stumbling and foundering, collided with a chair, tripped over it and went down. His head rapped the floor and for a little time he lay there, sprawled and angular and nearly stunned.

With Dalmar out of his way, Link Asbell went straight on into Bardo Sampson, giving him the solid bulk of a driving, hard muscled shoulder full in the center of the chest. Off balance from having Dalmar slam into him, Bardo went down with a jarring crash before the power of Asbell's rush. And now Sage Wingo, in the clear and waiting, threw a savage punch.

Link Asbell had no chance to dodge or evade the blow, only time to drop his head slightly, so that Wingo's fist, instead of finding the angle of his jaw, landed high on the cheekbone under his left eye. Even so, it felt like he'd been hit with a rock, and momentarily the world went crazy for him. But the impetus of his rush carried him into Wingo, and he caught hold of the fellow and hung on.

Wingo was deceptively powerful, with muscles like stringy rawhide and fists that were bony chunks of misery. Furiously he tried to break away, to haul clear and get in another full power blow. But Asbell stayed in there grimly, wrestling with his man while waiting for his head to clear.

Bardo Sampson's breath knocked out of him, finally got to his knees. His eyes were blurred with a killing fury. He, too, carried a pocket gun, and now he began fumbling for it.

Ben Dillon came around, the end of his bar at a run, yelling a sharp warning.

"Lay off that, Bardo! You hear me—lay off!"

Past as Dillon moved, Whit Henderson was there ahead of him. The quiet, easy-going store-keeper hooked a hand under Bardo Sampson's chin and yanked hard back, spilling Bardo flat once more. He tore Bardo's gun away from him and poised it threateningly.

"Behave yourself or I dent your skull!"

Bardo glared, mumbled a curse, but stayed put.

Still wrestling his man, Link Asbell, with short lunging steps, began driving Sage Wingo ahead of him. They banged into the poker table, skidded off it and slammed into the far wall, Wingo taking the smashing impact across his back.

At this sort of thing, Asbell had the greater power and he made use of it. Twice he hauled Wingo away from the wall, then threw him into it again, each time digging a punishing, twisting shoulder into Wingo's chest. Abruptly letting go, all holds he stepped back, and as Wingo recoiled off the wall, moved in with a vicious blow to the jaw.

Getting the full weight and drive of his back and shoulders into the second effort, Asbell clubbed him again. Wingo spun half around before they whipl of the blow, then went fully down, where he lay without moving.

Asbell watched him for a moment, then moved away. He scrubbed a hand across his face and knew some surprise to see it come away with a smear of crimson from a cut at the corner of his mouth.

Jonas Dalmar, having regained both his senses and his feet, was using the poker table to steady himself. Marked by violent contact with the floor, one side of his face carried the dark shadow of a forming bruise. Rage made him tremble, made his voice high and shrill.

"Damn you, Asbell! You laid rough hands on me—on me, Jonas Dalmar—a man better than twice your age! So help me, before I'm one with you!"

"Save it!" Breath running deeply in and out, Asbell broke curtly into the cattleman's furious spurt of words. "You had a gun in your pocket, and with no reason to trust you at all. I just made sure you didn't use it on me while I was taking care of your bully boy. You ordered the show started. Dalmar. Don't squeal because it worked out different than you figured."

Whit Henderson, who had been standing over Bardo Sampson, holding him out of the ruckus, now skidded Bardo's gun along the bar.

"Give it back to him when he's cooled off, Ben."

The storekeeper turned to Asbell, faintly smiling.

"Well done, Link. Well done!" He moved to the door and paused there, looking back at Dock Jerome. "For the poker game and the drinks—thanks, Doc." With that he went on out.

Bardo Sampson climbed to his feet and glared around, as though he would seek further combat with someone. But it was only the pale ash of his former truculence. He'd been well shaken up, and now was glad to lean on the bar and beckon Ben Dillon for a drink.

Asbell turned to Doc Jerome. "I came to town especially to see you, Doc. A little talk?"

"Sure, boy—sure!" Doc headed for the door. "Come along to the office."

Jonas Dalmar watched them leave, then put his black gaze on Ben Dillon.

"Give Wingo a hand," he ordered.

Dillon, lifting on his toes, looked down across the bar top at the sprawled figure of Dalmar's riding boss.

"No need. He's coming out of the fog."

"Damn it, man," Dalmar flared. "I told you—!"

Quick and sharp, Ben Dillon flared in return.

"That'll do, Jonas! I don't like your tone. Neither do I take kindly to what you do tonight. You deliberately set out to start something with Link Asbell. I try to run a friendly place, and Link

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSBERG

Not one to be behind the times, we're chiming in with our contribution to the current Let's-Try-to-Understand-the-Russians - Better campaign by suggesting that you read the series of articles now running in the Saturday Review. They're written by its editor, Norman Cousins, who has just returned from a prolonged trip through Soviet Russia—not in Mr. Nixon's party, but more or less on his own. So far they've appeared in the July 25 and August 8 issues. The latest is called "A Toast in Georgia" and is about drinking vodka in the Russian state of Georgia, and not eating gao driving Sage Wingo ahead of him. We recommend the series heartily, along with the book that you will see reviewed below, for a birdseye view of what it is like to be a Russian, something we are all very much interested in these days . . .

August Heritage

AMERICAN HERITAGE, the Magazine of History, comes out in its August edition on Monday and we'll give you a little advance notice on what's in it—speaking of birdseye views . . . Feature article concerns the desk you saw the last time you watched Ike over TV. It's made out of teakwood taken from the deck of wrecked British battleship, HMS "Resolute." It was brought into England port in 1855 after being abandoned in the Arctic restored Queen Victoria, and dismantled. That's where Ike's desk came in—plans from its deck were made into a desk that was sent as a gift to the White House. Quite a story, hey?

Also in his month's HERITAGE is a grim account, complete with pictures, of prison camps in the Civil War, showing that Andersonville was just one of many pretty bad sink-holes . . . And our personal early history in New England. A. L. Row's "New England in the Earliest Days" is about Sir Ferdinando Gorges' attempts to establish settlements long before the pilgrims landed in Plymouth in 1620. And then there's a reprint of Harold Murdock's debunking of the famous Battle of Lexington, supposed to have occurred on April 19, 1775. There was a battle, according to this account, but the "shot heard round the world" wasn't fired by a colonial trooper . . . There's more we haven't space to tell you about in the HERITAGE, and we recommend the whole issue, which is, as usual, in hard covers and lavishly illustrated . . .

New Paperbacks

Two publishing houses have announced new activity in the paperback field. Especially significant is Macmillan's series, to be launched in the fall, of uniform, inexpensive editions called The Macmillan Poets that will make available the work of contemporary poets of whom most people never hear very much . . . Lipincott has just announced that New World Writing, a series that has been going on for quite some time, will now come out under its name. New World Writing No. 16 will be published early in 1960. Over the years since 1951 this series has carried what we consider the newest, and often the best, of the writers from all over, including Flannery O'Connor, Dylan Thomas and Erskine Caldwell, to mention only a few . . .

Today's Review

We've already mentioned that a recent book about life in Russia is today's choice. Commenting on it is one of our best—and most prolific—critics . . .

Main Street U. S. S. R. by Irving R. Levine Doubleday & Co., Inc. Garden City

Asbell is my friend. What the three of you got from him, you asked for. Link isn't the sort to make big with his mouth, or to throw his weight around without good cause. But he sits in a damn tough saddle. Just because you found that out the hard way, don't try and take your mad out on me!"

New York Price: $4.50

With Russian-American relationships apparently on the upgrade, Main Street U. S. S. R. will prove of timely interest to many, be they students of foreign affairs, or those simply interested in the world around him. NBC Moscow correspondent Irving R. Levine was strategically assigned to observe and study the ordinary Russian, and his account is delightful reading.

Mr. Levine concerns himself with minute details of Russian daily life. Some of his reports are fantastic and incredulous because they are so drastically different from our way of life. Mr. Levine states the idea for his book grew out of a weekly radio program in which he replied from Moscow to listeners' questions about Russia. Most of the book was written in Russia, but was carried out of the country without being censored. One wonders how this was accomplished after reading Chapter 13 on censorship! One of the outstanding qualities of the book, in with which he discusses the various aspects of Russian life. He neither approves nor condemns—he simply states things as he understood them to be.

I think you will enjoy the Russian jokes interspersed throughout, for in addition to being real, they are funny. They give further insight into this struggling country. For instance, The strategists in the Kremlin were plotting war. "We could send ten men to the U. S. with atom bombs in suitcases," suggested the leader. "One could go to New York, another to Detroit . . ." "No," interrupted his comrade, "we couldn't do that."

"Why not? We have plenty of atom bombs." "Yes, but where are we going to get the ten suitcases?"

The economy of scarcity is hard to comprehend for those of us in a land of plenty. Although there are jobs almost everywhere, consumer products are not available for people to buy. The Government takes what it wants, and there is little left over. (Plenty of bombs, but no suitcases). For instance, a Russian may have been years to buy a car, new or used, but unless he is a member of the four per cent which represent members of the Communist party, he may wait forever. Party membership determines status, privilege, and authority, although not necessarily income. Average Russian housing approximates the squalor of our slum districts, and the author himself considered himself extremely fortunate to rent a two room apartment without sharing it with other families.

Although this factual account is rather heavy, and is not recommended for effortless summer reading, I think you will enjoy the book. Out of the reading will emerge a feeling of respect for the ordinary people of Russia, without implying approval for the Communist Party or their policies, a greater understanding of their problems and ambitions, and above all, a concept that the Russian people too are decent, human beings.

By BOB THOMAS AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Tom Tully has turned in his San Francisco police badge and cashed out for $50,000.

The gruff, able actor no longer will be ferreting out hoods on "The Line-Up," the CBS crime series.

"I didn't like the new setup," he said. "They wanted to put me and Warner Anderson in supporting roles. After five years as stars in the show, I didn't think this was right. I had no objection to using new people, if it was handled intelligently. But they were killing the whole idea of the show."

"The Line-Up" ran into trouble last season from the fast-moving '77 Sunset Strip." An hour-long whodunit that opposed the Tully Anderson sleuthing in many time zones, CBS decided to fight fire with fire and expanded "The Line-Up" to an hour for the fall.

"I didn't want to go on an hour show unless it was done in big style," Tully added. "I suggested moving the locale to different parts of the country. One story could show Anderson in Washington, D.C., working with the FBI

Long Bike Jaunt For Rock Hound

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—Rock-hound Allyn Cureton of Williams isn't frivolous about his hobby.

Cureton, 22, heard there was to be an organization meeting of rock fanciers here, about 35 miles from his home. He jumped on his bicycle and arrived in plenty of time to be initiated.

When the meeting ended at 10 p.m., Cureton mounted up and pedaled all the way home.

Translating Info Creates Problem

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—Research scientists at half a dozen pharmaceutical and electronic firms in New Jersey saw a wealth of technical information available in the hundreds of Soviet scientific journals that enter the United States.

The big problem was how to translate them. Instructors from several colleges in the state are now conducting Russian language classes in company conference

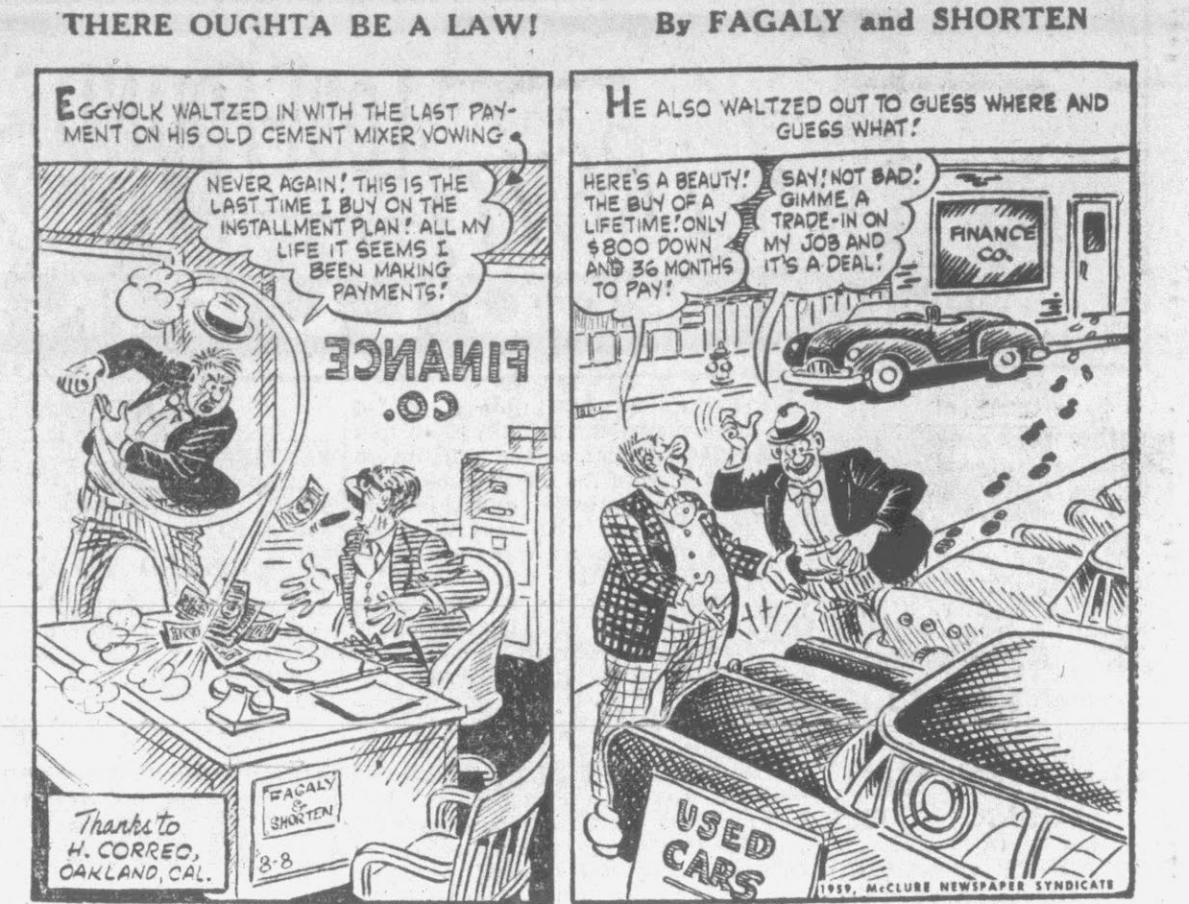

Skunk Runs Out, But Leaves Odor

PHOENIX (AP)—The Jack Cast family was relaxing in front of the television set when son Andy, 4, walked in carrying a small, furry animal.

Andy said to his Dad, "Look, I found a kitty."

"That's no cat, it's a skunk. Drop it," the father said nervously.

Andy dropped the skunk. The frightened animal sprayed the house. The family fled outdoors. The skunk followed. The odor remained.

Tully Disliked New Stars Idea

By BOB THOMAS AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Tom Tully has turned in his San Francisco police badge and cashed out for $50,000.

The gruff, able actor no longer will be ferreting out hoods on "The Line-Up," the CBS crime series.

"I didn't like the new setup," he said. "They wanted to put me and Warner Anderson in supporting roles. After five years as stars in the show, I didn't think this was right. I had no objection to using new people, if it was handled intelligently. But they were killing the whole idea of the show."

Royal Guardsman Clouts Another

WINDSOR, England (AP)—Another tourist got too close to a Royal Guardsman and collected a clout.

But this time there'll be no penalty for the redeot, unlike the Buckingham Palace sentry who got 10 days in the barracks for kicking an American woman.

The latest guard-tourist incident occurred at the Henry VIII gate to storied Windsor Castle. Queen Elizabeth's country residence.

The guardsman came to the end of his beat, stamped into a smart about-turn, and smacked his rifle butt on the ear of an 8-year-old vacationer from Birmingham, Willie Dakin.

Willie began to howl. The guardsman went right on guarding, as he's trained to do.

Willie's father hurried to the nearest policeman and said: "It was not the guardsman's fault. Willie shouldn't have been so near."

A doctor checked Willie and found the lump on his head wasn't serious.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

How spiritual understanding of God heals sickness as well as sin will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday.

"Spirit" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon.

Readings from the King James Version of the Bible will include Christ Jesus' promise (John 14: 12): "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy the following will be read (316:7): "Christ, Truth, was demonstrated through Jesus to prove the power of Spirit over the flesh—to show that Truth is made manifest by its effects upon the human mind and body, healing sickness and destroying sin."
