Courtroom Filled By Curious Spectators

STANDING ROOM ONLY . . . was the rule yesterday in the Pitt County Court room as spectators flocked in to hear portions of the Stocks murder trial testimony.

Can't Recall A Sunday Session

Yesterday's Sunday session of Pitt County Superior Court may have set a new precedent in Pitt County, but at least it was a rare occurrence in Superior Courts in North Carolina.

Old timers around the Pitt County courthouse couldn't recall another instance in which Superior Court had been convened on Sunday to hear testimony in a case. If it has happened before it was more than 30 years ago and none of the attorneys or court officials asked about it could recall a similar Sunday session in Pitt Superior Court.

Attorney L. W. Gaylord Sr. recalled that in the first trial of former Pitt Sheriff Amos C. Jackson, charged with embezzlement in 1927, Judge Crandall convened court on Sunday morning for the purpose of hearing a report from the jury which had been given the case the previous Friday. The jury reported it had been unable to reach a verdict and the presiding judge ordered a mistrial. Later when the case was tried, Jackson was acquitted of the charges.

A spot check of the records of some of the more prominent criminal cases recorded in the office of the Pitt County Clerk of Superior Court as far back as the late 1800s failed to give any indication of a session of court being held on Sunday.

Saturday sessions of Pitt Superior Court are rare although most people closely connected with Superior Court in Pitt could recall several instances in which the presiding judge designated a Saturday court session. The most recent one in a major criminal case apparently was in June 1949 in the Daniels trial when a Saturday session of court ran until 11:15 p.m. The presiding judge in that case then (continued on page twelve)

State Completes Case In Stocks' Trial For Murder

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

After the witness stand had been filled a total of 39 different times in behalf of the State, the prosecution rested this morning at 11:40 in the murder trial of Thomas Abner Stocks.

Testimony had continued since the State began its presentation of evidence last Saturday as the Superior Court reconvened for an afternoon session.

Clyde D. Pentress, State Bureau of Investigation Agent stationed in Washington, N. C., testified this morning that he had talked with Stocks last Dec. 22—the Monday after the Saturday on which Miss Helen Edwards came to her death.

Pentress told the court that Stocks told him he would "be glad" to relate what had happened the night of Dec. 20.

According to the agent's testimony, Stocks said that he had gone to the home of Mrs. Mabel Minges about 10:00 the night the Edwards woman died. Stocks also told, Pentress said, of breaking into the house, shooting E. Harvey (Duck) Lewis Jr. in the chest, pushing Mrs. Minges "down" as she attacked him with a broom, and then taking Miss Edwards away in his car.

The testimony continued that Stocks had related of taking the woman to the Port Terminal where he parked his car and the pair sat and talked for "about 20 or 30 minutes."

Pentress testified that Stocks had refused to tell how he killed the woman but said that the defendant had said that the woman was dead when he took her from the parked car and dragged her out onto the hard surface of ice-covered Hardee's Creek.

The agent told the court that Stocks told him of trying to break the ice in order to drown himself after dragging Miss Edwards' body across the ice. The testimony continued that Stocks had related that he had attempted to kill himself with a pistol he had but that he had lost the magazine and could not fire a bullet that he had placed in the chamber of the weapon.

Stocks further told the SBI agent, the testimony continued, that he had gone to Lewis' home west of Greenville "a couple of weeks" before the slaying of Miss Edwards. Lewis had ordered Stocks to leave his property and followed him for a short distance as Stocks did as he ordered.

Stocks told Lewis, according to the testimony, that he knew the Edwards woman was in Lewis' house that night and that he knew she was "messing around."

Pentress testified that Stocks had quoted himself as telling Lewis that if "she doesn't stop messing around, she will bust Hell wide open."

Another witness, former Greenville insurance salesman Joe Stone, had previously told the court of a Dec. 21 talk he had with the defendant.

The testimony quoted Stocks as saying to Stone on that Sunday afternoon, "Looks like I'm really messed up this time." Stone told the court that he had expressed his sorrow in reply.

On the heels of this, Stone quoted Stocks as having said, "Don't be sorry—I'm not. If I had it to do over again, I'd probably do the same thing."

In cross examination, the defense asked both witnesses if either had obtained permission from either a doctor or a nurse before talking with Stocks and if either had known that the defendant was under sedation at the time. Both replied "No."

In other morning testimony today, Special Agent Cornelius G. McWright of the Federal Bureau of Investigation told the court that, in his opinion, two hairs removed from the clothing which Stocks was wearing the night of Dec. 20 probably came from the head of the Edwards woman. He had conducted examinations of the two hairs and of hair samples taken from the woman's head in the FBI laboratory in Washington, D.C.

Eight other witness appearances this morning in the State's behalf presented further testimony and evidence that clothing of both the defendant and the Edwards woman were properly handled and examinations made.

In its presentation of its evidence, the prosecution entered a total of 46 exhibits and more than 30 different witnesses.

In this morning's session, the court room had only about 100 spectators as compared with an overflow crowd of nearly 500 at yesterday's session.

Shoes Are First Items For Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—The first load of the new U.S. military aid for the Laotian armed forces is made up of 2,640 pairs of shoes.

The shoes, for Laotian troops operating against Communist-led rebels in northern Laos, arrived in Vientiane today aboard a chartered transport.

The rest of the equipment under the new aid agreement—World War II small arms, rifles, clothing and vehicles—is due later.

Eisenhower, Macmillan Agree To Broad Strategy

LONDON (AP)—Cheered by thousands, President Eisenhower returned to London today from weekend talks with Prime Minister Harold Macmillan that brought broad agreement on the strategy of future cold war negotiations.

Qualified informants outlined results of the conference of the two leaders at Chequers, the Prime Minister's country estate.

They said Eisenhower and Macmillan displayed a resolve to do all they can to bring French President Charles de Gaulle back into full cooperation in the North Atlantic Alliance.

Eisenhower's coming exchange of visits with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev was said to have been the most important single topic covered in the American-British exchanges.

Other subjects covered by the two men—sometimes with Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd sitting in—included:

1. Plans for a new Western approach toward an East-West disarmament program. This approach was said to take into account an American idea that would make a cutoff of nuclear weapon production under tight controls a starting point of the program.

2. A possible compromise formula on key issues holding up an agreement in the Big Three Geneva conference on banning of nuclear weapons tests. No details were given.

3. The East-West deadlock over the future of Berlin and Germany. Eisenhower was said to have indicated that he will discuss this issue informally with Khrushchev in Washington next month.

4. U.S.-British defense matters and ways of militarily strengthening the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Again no details were given.

5. Eisenhower's ideas for a big new effort to help raise living standards in the have-not nations of the world. Britain already is pledged to cooperate with the United States along these lines. But the two leaders were said to have considered ways of broadening the basis of their efforts so other interested powers could join.

Most of these issues are expected to arise in one form or another during the Eisenhower talks with Khrushchev.

Eisenhower got another mighty "I like Ike" salute from Londoners today as he rode through the heart of the city to St. Paul's Cathedral.

Thousands massed around St. Paul's as the President and Prime Minister rolled up in an open car. They went to the cathedral to spend a solemn half hour in the chapel Britain built in memory of 23,000 Americans who lost their lives in World War II and had been based in the United Kingdom.

The President returned to the city for a round of appointments and an informal, televised report to the world with Macmillan tonight on their talks about future relations between the West and the Soviet Union.

The sound portion of the Eisenhower-Macmillan telecast will be relayed to the United States for broadcast live by American radio networks. Tapes of the program will be flown across the Atlantic for showing on American TV. The British Broadcasting Corp. and Europe's Eurovision network will carry the appearance to a potential audience of nearly 100 million viewers in Western Europe.

"We don't know what they are going to say," said a BBC spokesman. "There is no script."

The President had a full schedule after his drive back with Macmillan from Chequers. It included a half-hour visit to the chapel in St. Paul's Cathedral which commemorates American World War II dead who were stationed in Britain, a conference with Spanish Foreign Minister Fernando Arias Castiella, and—after the telecast—a formal dinner given by Macmillan at his official residence, No. 10 Downing St.

Britain's wartime chief, Sir Winston Churchill, flew back to London from a Riviera vacation to attend the dinner with his old comrade in arms and also another Tuesday night which Eisenhower is giving for a large group of his wartime associates.

HENRY OGLESBY

BAXTER RIDENHOUR

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Hodges today announced the appointment of four new members of the board of trustees of East Carolina College.

He also announced the appointment of members of the new State Advisory Committee on Aviation and the Commission to Study 12 Months' Use of Public School Buildings and Facilities for School Purposes.

The governor named Henry Oglesby of Grifton and James Whitfield of Raleigh to eight-year terms on the ECC Board of Trustees. Mrs. Elizabeth S. Bennett of Burlington and Baxter Ridenhour of Durham were appointed to the board for four-year terms.

All four of the new board members are graduates of ECC and each has served as president of the Alumni Association. In addition, three of the four have received the college's annual alumni award.

Mrs. Bennett graduated from the two-year normal course in 1917. In 1928 she received her AB degree from the college. She is now a teacher in the Burlington school system. She received the alumni award in 1941.

Oglesby of Grifton and Washington, D. C. is now administrative assistant to Congressman Herbert C. Bonner. He was the first male student to receive an AB degree from the college. It was awarded in 1932. Oglesby taught for a time after graduation from the college.

Ridenhour was an athlete at East Carolina. He graduated in 1938 and received his masters degree in 1948. He received the alumni award in 1957. Ridenhour is now principal of Club Boulevard School in Durham. He is an active layman in the Methodist Church and has held high office in district affairs of Civilian Clubs of North Carolina.

Whitfield is a Greenville native who graduated from ECC in 1946. He has worked as a newspaperman with the Raleigh News and Observer for the past 10 years and is now state editor for that paper. He received the college's alumni award in 1946.

The four replace Luther Hamilton of Morehead City, I. H. O'Hanlon of Fayetteville, Arthur Tyler of Rocky Mount and Ralph H. Hodges of Washington. The terms of Hamilton and O'Hanlon have expired. Tyler and Hodges requested they not be reappointed.

The 1959 Legislature created the seven-member Advisory Committee on Aviation. Hodges appointed to the committee Thomas H. Davis of Winston-Salem, Carl Goerch of Raleigh, L. F. Broadfield of Rocky Mount, John C. Erwin of Charlotte, Alex B. Andrews of Raleigh, Leroy Sossaman of Bryson City and Rep.

Five Of Nikita's Family Coming

WASHINGTON (AP)—Five members of Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's family will accompany him on his visit to the United States.

The State Department announced this "with pleasure" today and said President Eisenhower has been informed of it in London.

Those who will travel with Khrushchev will include the Soviet leader's wife, Nina; two daughters, Julia and Rada; his son, Sergei; and a son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubel.

This is his whole family with the exception of one son-in-law. Adzhubel is editor of the Soviet newspaper Izvestia.

'Preparedness' Might Cut Toll To 3 Per Cent

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy, after an analysis of its hearings last June on the biological and environmental effects of nuclear war, said probably the most significant finding was that civil defense preparedness could reduce the casualties, from approximately 20 per cent of the population to about 3 per cent.

The committee assumed, in dealing with a hypothetical attack on this country, that 263 nuclear weapons would burst over heavy population centers, industrial and military targets.

It found that 50 million Americans would die and 20 million more would be seriously injured. Half the population would be homeless. Radiation would cause millions of deaths and contaminate food and water supplies.

Routine Opening For Pitt Schools

It was apparently a routine morning as 12,000 county school system students returned to the classrooms today.

Superintendent D. H. Conley said he had heard of no unusual problems during the morning.

The students were dismissed around 12:15, he said.

Today does not count as one of the 180 teaching days of the school year although enrollment figures for the day had to be kept.

The 12,000-student estimate included all the schools in the county outside of Greenville, Conley said. Final enrollment figures will be available at the end of this week.

Pupils were registered this morning and other pre-class activity was disposed of.

The superintendent said classes will begin tomorrow morning and the county school system will operate on a full day's schedule.

There are approximately 450 teachers in the county's 12 white and 14 Negro schools.

Conley said 155 buses will be operated this year to transport students to and from school.

Teachers began their duties Friday and principals have been on the job for the past two weeks.

New Enrollment Record As City Schools Begin Term

Greenville City Schools opened their doors this morning with a record estimated enrollment of 4,863 students.

Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose said an estimated 3,043 white students and 1,820 Negro students entered the doors of the city's six white and three Negro school buildings at 8:30 a.m.

However, he estimated that as late registrations come in over the next few weeks the total number enrolled for the year will swell to 5,100.

Today was assignment day in the local schools and the elementary schools were dismissed around 11 o'clock with the senior high school running until around 12:25.

Several hundred first graders were to report this afternoon. This group was included in the total estimated enrollment figures.

Tomorrow will be the first of the official 180 teaching days of the school year and classes in all schools will run until 12:30.

Wednesday the schools will run on full day schedules and the lunchrooms will open that day for the first time.

Next Monday, Sept. 7, will be observed as a holiday for Labor Day.

Rose described the enrollment as "the largest we've ever had."

He said it was about 200 more than enrolled on the first day last year.

The superintendent said there was only one possibility of a double shift of classes in the system. That would be only one grade in one building. He described that as a "bare possibility" and he said completion of the Elmhurst School would alleviate even that situation.

Rose described the opening day as routine.

"We had asked the parents to please get registration out of the way ahead of opening day now," he noted. "In spite of that a bunch flocked in, as they always do."

He pointed out that because of the need for birth certificates, immunization records and other records "you practically have to register ahead of opening day now."

"For those 'who didn't,' they didn't go to school today because they still have to be processed."

However, he said school personnel would work tonight processing the late registrants so the students could begin classes on the first teaching day tomorrow.

There are two general teachers meeting on schedule.

While teachers will meet in the Junior High School Library tonight at 8 o'clock along with the school board and others.

A meeting for Negro teachers will be held in the C. M. Eppes gym tomorrow night beginning at 8 o'clock.

There are 103 white teachers in the school system and 65 Negro teachers.

Rose pointed out: "We have the highest percentage of (Rose High School) graduates going to college of any school in North Carolina. Our curriculum is built around high standards of scholarship and citizenship and as we study our curriculum we realize what the needs of the children of this town are."

"We do require a great deal of work in this school system and we will continue that, of course."

Rose said there is also a higher percentage of Eppes High's graduates who attend college.

"We are dedicated to hard work in this school system. We are going to have a very good year. The morale of the students and teachers is very high."

The superintendent pointed out that a lot of work has been done on the school system's buildings during the summer months.

Estimated 12,000 Attend Opening Of County Schools

THESE GRAMMAR GRADE CHILDREN . . . in Winterville are typical of the 12,000 school-age boys and girls who attended the opening of schools today after three months' vacation. The county operates 26 schools served by 155 buses. There are approximately 450 teachers in the school system. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Something Different In Preserving, Jelly-Making

RALEIGH—Why not try something different while you are preserving, and jelly-making?

According to Miss Iola Pritchard, food conservation specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, preserves are a favorite of many people. Conserves are a mixture of several fruits, often combined with raisins and nut meats.

Now that pears are available, try some pear preserves:

Pear Conserves
5 pounds firm pears (15 cups sliced); 10 cups sugar, 1 pound seedless raisins, Rind of two oranges, Juice of 3 oranges and 2 lemons.

Peel pears and cut in small pieces. Add sugar and let stand overnight. Then add raisins, orange rind cut in small pieces, and juice of oranges and lemons. Cook until thick, or about 30-35 minutes. Nuts are usually added.

PARTY IDEA

Want a different sort of entertainment? Give a "Shipwreck Party." Everyone appears in apparel denoting their appearance after being shipwrecked and reaching land.

Such attire as life preservers and jackets, inflated rafts and inner tubes will bring much laughter. The nautical theme should be carried out in decorations and refreshments.

ALL CREAM

You can draw the cream off a quart of milk without getting any of the milk by using your oven baster syringe.

Double-Ring Vows Unite Gardner-Conley

WILSON — At a double ring ceremony in the First Christian church Sunday afternoon, Miss Eloise Hunter Conley and Charles Ray Gardner were united in marriage. The Rev. Allen Sharp, head of the Department of Religion at Atlantic Christian college, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bee Hunter Conley of this city, while Mr. Gardner is the son of Mrs. Joseph Melvin Bullock of Greenville, and Leon Grady Gardner of Greensboro.

Prior to the ceremony a program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Bertha Crosby, organist, and Miss Rachel High, soloist, who sang Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee and I Love Thee. The traditional wedding marches were used for the processional and recessional.

Palms and ferns flanked a large arrangement of white gladioli, carnations, and fugi mums which centered the communion table at the front of the church. Burning white tapers in seven-branch candelabra lighted the scene, while clusters of white flowers and satin ribbons marked the church pews. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was wearing a full-length gown of white silk organza and imported French Chantilly lace. The fitted bodice featured a sabrina neckline and long sheath sleeves which ended in points over the hands, while her bouffant skirt extended into a chapel train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion fell from a tiara of pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses and carnations, centered with a white purple throated orchid and showered with lilies of the valley tied in ribbon streamers. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, presented to her by the bridegroom.

Miss Mary Katherine Conley of Wilson attended her sister as maid of honor. Her blue lace and chiffon dress was fashioned with a fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. Crushed chiffon panels marked the waistline which tied in back and fell softly to the hemline of the skirt. She wore a matching headpiece and carried a cascading bouquet of pink asters, tied with matching ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Miss Betsy Powell, Miss Patricia Linville, Miss Gayle Bradley and Miss Linda Cale, all of Wilson. They wore ensembles identical to the maid of honor.

Miss Helen Daniel, Miss Alice Maroon, Miss Betsy Baker, Mrs. Roger Daniel, Miss Frankie Daino and Miss Mickey Hayes were honorary attendants. They wore pastel-colored party dresses and headpieces of pink asters and pink mums.

Julie Leach of Wilson was flower girl. Her full-skirted dress was fashioned of white net and tulle over taffeta and accented by a blue sash. Her headpiece was of white tulle and flowers and she carried a white basket, trimmed in blue, and filled with rose petals. The bridegroom's father served as best man.

Ushers were Donald Conley, Bill Gardner, cousin of the bridegroom, and Mac Respass, all of Greenville, and Ben Smith of Raleigh. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Conley was wearing a blue lace dress with matching accessories, and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Bullock chose a pink lace dress and matching accessories. Her corsage also was an orchid.

When Mr. and Mrs. Gardner left for a wedding trip to Skyline Drive and other points of interest in Virginia, the bride was wearing a beige and brown silk shantung sheath with matching bolero. Beige accessories and the orchid from her bridal bouquet completed her traveling ensemble.

After September 7 they will be at home in Raleigh at 711 - C Daniel Street where Mr. Gardner is a rising senior in the School of Textiles at North Carolina State college, and is a member of the Delta Kappa Phi fraternity there. Mrs. Gardner is a graduate of Ralph Fike High School.

How To Make And Keep Friendships

By VIVIAN BROWN

IS POPULARITY the key to happy school days? More than one letter emphasizes that the student who is lost in a sea of unfamiliar faces may have difficulty feeling at ease with the young people around her, especially if they are different from those she has known.

It isn't easy to make new friends, these letters emphasize, but it is a cinch to lose them. So it ill behooves a teenager in a new school to treat friendships lightly.

1. Do not expect other people to conform to your pattern of living. Learn to understand them, and their mode of living, the customs of their families and their interests.

2. Avoid dreary outlooks, telling troubles to everyone you meet. Be jolly, and you will not only win friends, but be able to weather the hurdles you encounter.

3. A reputation of being a gossip can make you highly unpopular. You'll attract those who love to gossip, and they may even eventually turn the heat on you.

4. Be helpful without expecting obvious rewards. If you lend someone a book don't expect them to fall on their face in appreciation. If your family is better heeled than those of your friends, don't emphasize the fact.

5. A group may laugh at your off-color jokes or crude remarks but these are unflattering tributes to your popularity. Good types will avoid you on other occasions, especially in not extending invitations to their homes.

6. Do not speak disparagingly of ex-friends—girls or boys you've dated. When friendships cease, go on to make new friends.

7. Students below par in your estimation should not be avoided in such a way that they are sneered into despair.

8. The most difficult role you can play is that of a liar. You'll need a perfect memory to put it over, and the chances are you'll be suspect No. 1 after the first few tries.

9. Avoid suspicion. Your imagination may be the reason people do not like you, gossip about you or try to avoid you. If you have such ideas, test the individuals you suspect by pouring out the honey rather than the vinegar. If they are against you, this method may change their attitude, and if your doubts are merely your imagination, a shot of honey will have done no more than impress the suspect.

One way to make friends is to learn to like people. Many girls, especially, have difficulty making fast friends because they try to single out a girl without getting to know her. Get to know as many people as you can, and from these acquaintances you may make some very choice friends. You will naturally choose those who see more eye-to-eye with you, rather than those who are different from you. Meanwhile give everybody a chance.

With Farm Women

By MAIDRED MORRIS

(Items this week from: Bertie, New Hanover, Henderson, Currituck, Sampson, and McDowell Counties.)

Winter Gardens

Fall gardens are now being planned in Bertie County. Miss Lenore Crouser, home economics agent, recently introduced new vegetables to Home Demonstration Club women through the use of slides.

Production of asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, brussels sprouts and kohlrabi was discussed. These vegetables were new to many of the women. Club women were encouraged to plant a fall garden which could supplement the summer food supply.

Well-Dressed Table

Home Demonstration Club members in New Hanover County are convinced that a well-dressed table, like a well-dressed person, depends on an outfit that goes well together.

Miss Verna Belle Lowery, home economics agent, said, "A careful and discriminating buyer purchases table linens that have beauty, will be durable and serviceable, can be easily and successfully laundered, are reasonably priced and suited in type to the other appointments used."

Health Program

Health is an important program among all Home Demonstration Club members.

According to Mrs. Kathleen C. Hodges, home economics agent, Twin Rocks and Happy Valley Clubs in Henderson County have each presented $25 checks toward the building of a new health center. Other clubs in the county have pledged their support to the center.

Managing Time

Do you manage your time wisely and if so, how? Recently, Home Demonstration Club women in Currituck County studied a time management sheet to see if they were using their time wisely, reports Mrs. Elizabeth P. Sanderlin, home economics agent.

Mrs. E. R. Woodard of Coinjock Club said by making a plan of work each day, listing important duties first, she did not have to take time to decide what to do next. More work was accomplished at the end of the day.

Leisure Laundry

Emphasis was placed in two areas during the demonstration on laundry given recently at Home Demonstration Club meetings in Sampson County.

According to Mrs. Virginia B. Evans, home economics agent, emphasis was placed on the importance of following directions given on labels of wash 'n' wear garments and resin finished fabrics, on laundry supplies and equipment. "Mrs. A. P. Shaw was delighted to learn about ironing board grippers," says Mrs. Evans.

Low Calorie Desserts
McDowell County Home Demonstration Club members have learned to make tasty, nutritious desserts which are low in calories. Chocolate souffle with low calorie topping was demonstrated. Mrs. Bobby G. English, home economics agent, says several members have lost weight this summer by trying low calorie desserts.

For a quick top-of-the-range supper try your hand at making potato pancakes; serve with crisp bacon and applesauce.

Water Conservation Plan Is Next

With members of the new State Board of Water Resources now officially in office, North Carolina should be on its way toward developing a workable and comprehensive program for maximum use and maximum conservation of its water resources.

In recent years North Carolina has come to recognize the fact that its bountiful water resources are among the most valuable natural assets the state possesses. It has also come to realize that for generations we have been taking our waters for granted with the mistaken idea that no matter what we did to them, they would still be usable.

As the state developed industrially it became apparent that some of our water resources were being ruined. It also became apparent that although we have vast quantities of water resources, these resources are not inexhaustible. They could be quickly ruined like the water resources of some other highly industrialized states unless care was taken in advance to preserve them for future use.

Over a period of several years one after another of a variety of agencies and commissioners were given specific jurisdiction over the state's water resources. The result was confusion, overlapping of authority and responsibility, and generally an ineffective program for preserving for future use our water resources.

When the 1959 General Assembly authorized the State Board of Water Resources, it afforded the state an overall agency with authority to deal effectively with the problem of both developing and conserving our water resources. How well the new board does in dealing with these problems will largely depend on the men who took their oaths of office last week.

A heavy responsibility rest upon their shoulders, for the effectiveness with which we develop our resources in North Carolina may well determine the future development of both agriculture and industry throughout the state.

Our Firemen Showed Invaluable Know-How

Greenville's firemen deserve the highest praise for their efforts in battling one of the largest downtown fires in Greenville's history Friday.

The destruction of Roses Store was in itself a great loss, but the total loss might have been many times greater had it not been for the fact that firemen prevented the blaze from spreading to other buildings in the heart of the city's business district. That in itself was no easy task with the tremendous inferno licking over the walls of the building, fanned by a light wind.

Less skill, less courage, less determination on the part of the Greenville firemen Friday and a large portion of Greenville's business district might have been destroyed.

Friday's fire probably afforded a good many residents of Greenville their first opportunity to see local firemen battle a major blaze in the downtown area. Many of those who had previous impressions that firemen were happy, checker playing guys with the easiest job in town probably got a different impression. The firemen displayed courage and they displayed know-how as they battled the searing flames and the choking smoke that spewed from the building.

They fought the fire against hazardous and heavy odds and they prevented adjoining areas of the business district from being engulfed by the flames.

Greenville's Fire Department and its individual firemen are to be commended for their efforts Friday.

Politicking Not At All Unlikely

By LYNN NISBET

CONVENTION Governor Hodges is not an active candidate for Vice President. He told newsmen the other day he would be embarrassed if any movement to endorse him for that position developed at the Southern Governors' Conference in Asheville next month. He had previously voiced his belief that the nominee for President ought to pick his running mate, much as the elected President selects his cabinet. He made it clear he thinks for him to encourage—or permit—any effort to promote his personal political interest at the conference where he was official host, would be impolite.

His reticence in that direction cannot be interpreted as lack of interest in the national ticket. To the contrary, he has for months shown more concern about who will be nominated for President than about who will succeed him as Governor. He made it very clear that he hopes to have his voice in selecting Tarheel delegates to Los Angeles, that he wants a "strong unified delegation." As of now he wants them to go with open minds, without advance commitments, so as to be in good trading position when voting time comes.

While soft pedaling personal references, it is inconceivable that Governor Hodges will not do a lot of politicking with his colleagues during the Asheville meeting. It is entirely possible that out of these conversations may develop evidence of sufficient support for one candidate to justify pre-convention announcement of North Carolina backing. It will be surprising if any such statement comes before the delegates are chosen next spring, even though decision may have been reached earlier.

BUTLER — The North Carolina folks are not apt to take any part in efforts to oust National Chairman Paul Butler, despite open resentment at his persistent slaps at the South. This state would find itself in untenable position if it protested a rule requiring participants in the national nominating convention to support its nominees. North Carolina requires every candidate filing for office in a party primary to sign an affidavit pledging support to the nominees of that primary. No oath of allegiance is required of rank and file voters, but many citizens recognize a moral obligation.

Governor Hodges repeated what he has said many times before that he thinks Paul Butler talks when he ought to be listened ing, and that his efforts should be devoted to unifying the party instead of apparently trying to split it up. But—with the prospect that he will have to deal with Butler in all pre-convention arrangements, he sees no point in playing into his hands by helping him bust up the party.

Similar attitude was expressed by John D. Larkins Jr., national committeeman, when he said he doubted the propriety of trying to oust Butler as chairman at this time. Efforts in that direction have failed before. Hodges and Larkins, who do not agree on many political issues, appear together in belief that the party is hooked with Butler for some months to come, and the wisdom suggested making the best of the situation.

Almost certainly these matters will be discussed among the Governors assembled at Asheville—and just as certainly the discussions will be private.

SPECIAL SESSION — Talk about probability of a special session of the North Carolina General Assembly continues. The main reason for an extra session would be constitutional revision, with emphasis on court reform. Lately a new item of constitutional amendment has been injected, which in some quarters is taking precedence over courts.

That is the convening date of the General Assembly, in relation to the beginning of the term of the newly elected Governor, and other State officials. The present constitution says the Governor's term shall begin on the first day of January, with provision that the incumbent executive shall hold office until his successor has been sworn in. Traditionally the inauguration of the new Governor has been staged at a joint session of the General Assembly on its second day. Now, the constitution provides for the Legislature to meet on the first Wednesday after the first Monday in February. That date can be changed either by legislative act or by constitutional amendment. The 1959 Assembly failed to adopt a bill fixing the date for early January. Without action by a special session, the next elected Legislature will not meet until February 8, 1961.

Whoever is elected Governor next year can demand that the oath be administered and he take over the office on January 1. That will miss the panoply of "inauguration." Or he can let the incumbent stay on until February 8 or later, thus losing four to six weeks of his term. A newly elected Governor is not likely to be pleased with either alternative.

Interest Rates In Our Economy

By RALPH ROBEY

Weeks ago the Administration requested the Congress to eliminate the 4½ percent ceiling on government bonds of over five years' maturity, and to authorize it to adjust the rate paid on United States Savings Bonds. For a time it appeared that the requests would be granted, but now that possibility has been eliminated by the House Ways and Means Committee.

Earlier, the committee had voted to give the President authority for two years to lift the interest rate when he determined that it was in the national interest. At the same time it passed a resolution stating that it was the "sense" of the Congress that the Federal Reserve System should buy government bonds as well as Treasury bills and notes in its open market operations. Both the Administration and the Federal Reserve objected to this resolution, and quite properly so.

Mills Spurns Compromise Proposal Then a new "compromise" was worked out which gave the President the authority to raise the interest rate for three years, and softened the resolution into fairly meaningless language. This was tentatively passed by the committee, with five Democrats joining the ten Republicans, which meant a 15 to 10 vote. But Committee Chairman Mills refused to introduce the compromise, and another argument started. Finally, Rep. E. H. Rostenkowski (D-Ill.) proposed that the problem be tabled and this carried by a 14 to 11 vote, with all but one of the Democrats, Rep. Harrison of Virginia, voting for the motion.

This means that the Treasury can sell only obligations with less than five-year maturity, because the demand for long-term funds has already driven the interest rate above the 4½ percent level. As a matter of fact several government bonds are now selling at such a discount from their par value that the yield is higher than 4½ percent.

What this Means to the Economy

There are various unfavorable aspects of this necessary concentration in the short-term field.

First, it makes the management of the public debt much more difficult and means that the Treasury must go into the market more frequently than otherwise would be necessary. This is disturbing to the market. Secondly, by selling only short-term paper the rates on Treasury bills and notes will advance and may well rise to above the long-term rate. This will make the carrying charge of the public debt higher than it otherwise would be, and higher than necessary.

Thirdly, long-term obligations are attractive to savers and investors, and to the extent they are bought by these groups they represent a mere transfer of purchasing power to the government. Short-term paper is bought primarily by the banks, and is paid for by a bookkeeping entry by the banks to the credit of the government. This is an increase in the volume of money, and hence is inflationary. This point was stressed at great length by the Treasury and the Federal Reserve before the Ways and Means Committee.

Fourthly, the action indicates that we as a nation are not willing to put our financial house in order and subject ourselves to the rather rigid discipline of a free market. With the fear of inflation already widespread, this congressional move toward inflation could scarcely be more unfortunate or more untimely.

Finally, foreign holders of balances in this country will tend to withdraw their funds. That means a stepping-up of gold exports, and while we have far more gold than necessary to meet present requirements we can not be complacent about anything approaching a run from the dollar.

E and H Savings Bonds

The failure to be able to adjust upward the rate of interest on E and H savings bonds is equally serious. At present the return on these obligations is 3½ percent, or well below what a saver may obtain on other securities of equal safety and liquidity.

This is the primary reason why the redemptions of E and H bonds for the past several months have consistently been above the new sales. The Treasury had proposed lifting the rate on these E and H bonds to 3½ percent, and making this rate apply to all such savings bonds outstanding. Now that is not possible, and we may be sure that the savings bond program will continue to be a drain on the cash resources of the Treasury.

The strongest public statement on the action was that of Rep. Richard M. Simpson of Pennsylvania, the ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee. He said it "is the height of fiscal irresponsibility and bodes evil for the confidence of the people, at home and abroad, in the soundness of our fiscal structure." That is a correct appraisal.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE REAL THING

The Greek philosopher Plato once wrote that the unexamined life is unworthy and ineffective. We Christians would go even further and say that the uncommitted life is unworthy and ineffective. We not only have to examine our lives; after we examine them, we need to direct them toward good ends. We want to commit ourselves to something. Better still, to somebody—and that somebody is, for the Christian, Jesus Christ.

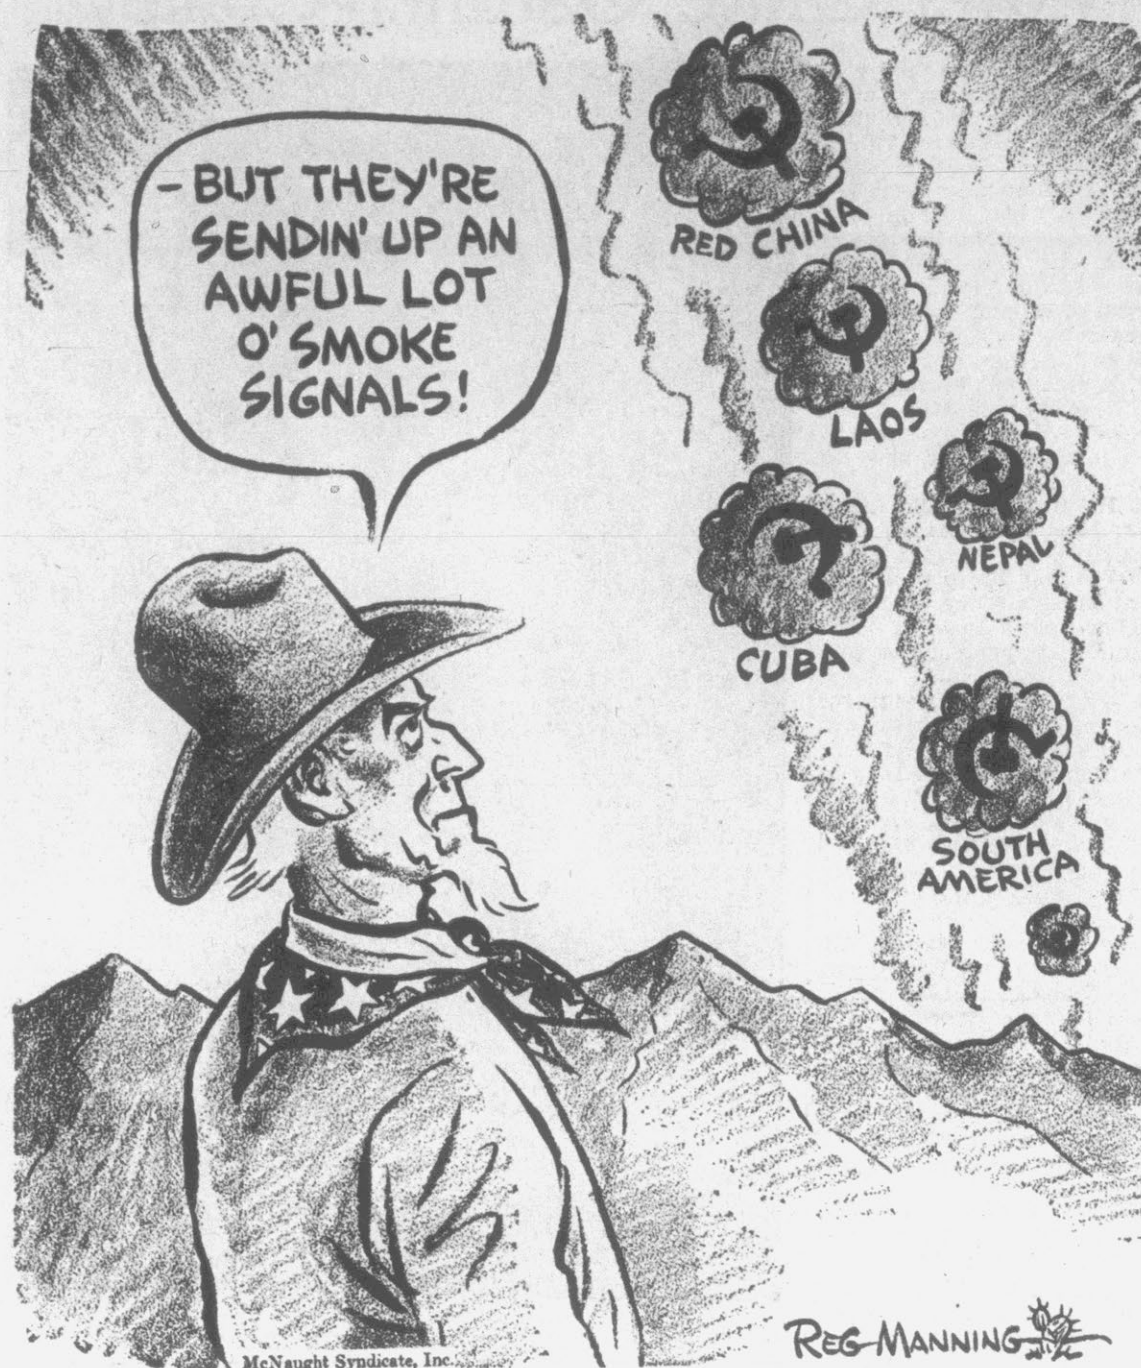

People often complain about the fact that their religion means little to them. There may be many reasons why they have this feeling, but certainly one very prevalent cause is the fact that Christians are often not committed Christians. They believe a few things. They meet a few church requirements such as payment of dues and more or less regularity in church attendance. But this is far from the committed life. The committed life has spiritual potency in it, for the committed Christian takes his life and puts it in truth into the hands of God.

Not quite surrendered. This is the diagnosis which experienced Christians often make of the people who are indifferent to religion, who scoff at it, or are hostile toward it.

Religion requires belief. Religion requires faith. But belief and faith together cannot give us a religion which really works. In order to get a religion which really works we have to commit our lives to the object of our worship and to the enterprises which our faith establishes.

It takes the human eye six times as long to see an object in color as it does one in black and white. Maybe that's why people no longer take the time to watch a rainbow.

How weird can you get? ... second-hand hearses are now in great demand around Boston. Plumbers, carpenters and other tradesmen use the vehicles as attention-getters for new business.

How heavy is a cloud? Well, a good robust average thundercloud is said to weigh 150 tons.

Figures show that the average woman spends 75 per cent of her waking hours sitting down, and her figure shows it, too!

The oak is the forest tree most damaged by lightning.

These — are — the — good — old-days note: In 1908 the average American had to work 86 weeks to earn enough to buy an $800 car. ... Today he earns enough to buy a car in only 26 weeks.

There's safety in sunlight. ... Mile for mile, you are three times as likely to get killed if you drive by night instead of by day. ... You are not only more likely to get into an accident; the accident itself is twice as likely to be fatal.

American men are going in more and more for the body beautiful. ... Each year now they spend about 72 million dollars on hair tonics, 25 million for shampoos, 405 million on shaving accessories, 120 million on toothpastes and mouth washes, and 20 million on deodorants.

It was Orson Welles who observed, "There are three intolerable things in life—cold coffee, lukewarm champagne, and over-excited women."

Opinions In Brief

"Now, women are found in every responsible financial position of trust. From the penny-pinching housewife to the woman president of a bank, they are recognized for their good business sense. And the men don't seem to mind anymore that members of the fair sex have taken over these positions of trust."—Canton (N.C.) Enterprise.

Furniture Industry Must Fight Strength For Today

By ELMER ROESSNER

The furniture industry will have to fight harder for sales next year and even vigorous increases in advertising and promotion may not bring sales up to this year's level.

The principal reason is that the push behind automobile sales and the excitement of new models are sure to drain considerable consumer buying power. Furniture and autos are both, to a great extent, sold on time and there are limits to families' credit, even in boomiest times.

Many furniture manufacturers are aware of the situation and the furniture shows in January and February will abound in new styling and design. But is doubtful if they can generate as much interest as the new compact cars, the new foreign cars, and new designs in larger American cars.

STEEL PINCH COMING Here are other look-aheads in business: Steel shortages are only days away. So far, huge stockpiles of steel in the yards of auto manufacturers and other users, and in the steel warehouses of the nation, have prevented the strike from pinching all but a few users. However, the piles are shrinking and some users will be slowed down; some perhaps next week, others later in September.

Flag bonanza. Flag manufacturers may work off their heavy inventory of 48-star and 49-star American flags, thanks to the coming visit of Nikita Khrushchev. They are offering them at bargain rates for use along routes the Soviet Premier will take.

Booming him will be inhospitable—in fact it would be considered an affront to the President, whose guest he will be. But cities, towns and individuals can show their feelings by heavy displays of the American flag.

Rise in interest rates. Pressures for higher interest rates have been slowed down by the steel strike. Corporations are borrowing less for expansion until they are sure that metal will be available. But shortly after the strike is ended, spending for expansion will rise, renewing pressure for higher rates.

MORE POWER FAILURES

Blackouts in other cities coming. While the causes of the power failure that blacked out a large section of New York have not been definitively assessed, engineers say that other cities may experience similar problems. They say the great age of some power distributing systems, plus the fact that they are being overloaded with constantly increasing number of appliances and industrial machines, makes failures probable.

Cheaper vitamins. Because of increased manufacturing efficiency, many producers have been able to cut prices of vitamins.

Extra Income Sources

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — The Boston & Albany (New York Central) and the Boston & Maine railroads are asking to drop scores of trains and stations. Increased fares are not the solution. People simply will not ride the trains if fares are increased further. I have just returned from Arizona on the swankiest train—the Santa Fe's "Super-chief." There were 54 passengers in eight beautiful cars hauled by two engines and a crew of ten men. The passenger business will gradually decline to almost no riders. Now the riders are 90 per cent old people; the young people travel in automobiles, buses, and planes.

RAILROADS ARE DOING EVERYTHING TO REDUCE COSTS

The railroads have bought new passenger cars, which are air-conditioned. But they are cutting out checking trunks on many trains and are closing express offices. This saves carrying baggage cars and men to handle baggage, both at the stations and in the trains. Even the freight business is falling off, although the railroads are running faster freight service and adopting "piggyback" transport from point of loading to final destination. Now electrical freight yards are being built and salesmen are calling on shippers for business. Freight business may again increase, although the new federal highways will be another handicap. The railroads, however, will successfully compete with the newspapers, magazines, and billboards in selling advertising space. In dining cars, if there are any waiters, they will not bother with table linens; but will use only paper napkins and place mats. On these will be printed advertisements of the foods we are served! All stations and much right-of-way will be sold for advertising space, although this income may gradually decline as passengers become fewer. Freight cars and freight yards, however, offer some advertising possibilities for both national and local products.

WHAT MORE CAN THE RAILROADS DO TO GET INCOME?

The railroads are the largest real estate owners in the United States. This is true not only of the United States, but of the entire world. The Northern Pacific, and the Southern Pacific, both of every one of the 700 different railroads now operating. Land owned but not now used by the railroads could be sold to pay up all their bond issues. Selling this land would not only save them interest and taxes, but would benefit the communities in which these 700 railroads operate. The railroads should be allowed to consolidate and raise or lower their rates of fare and freight charges.

Railroads having large terminals will stop trains 1,000 feet further out than the present stops; hence, unless there are more "red caps" passengers will have to carry their bags further. This will give the railroads some wonderful property however, to rent for supermarkets, drive-in theaters, bowling allies, etc. in the hearts of the cities. These, of course, of the cities, irrespective of the moreover, could be two-story buildings, if desired, which would be readily financed by insurance companies.

RAILROADS ARE NECESSARY We must have the railroads for heavy freight. They are the life blood of the nation. This was proved during the two World Wars. When the railroads had a monopoly, they abused the people. They are now suffering from competition, but this will be changed. It will be changed by greater efficiency, fairer labor and tax laws, and by their being given freedom to run their own business as do the bus companies, trucking concerns, airplane companies, and taxis with which they must now compete.

Now a word — in closing — to investors: In most instances, you who hold railroad stocks might do well to sell them, putting the money in a bank until industrial stocks have their crash in price; then reinvest in good dividend-paying industrial stocks. You who hold railroad bonds should probably keep them. When the railroads wake up to the advantages of getting into the real estate and advertising business, most of these railroad bonds should be paid off at par.

Mayor Proclaims Sight-Saving Month

September has been designated "Sight-Saving Month" by Mayor S. Eugene West.

Observance of the month is sponsored by the Lions Club and George Brown is chairman of the project.

"All 65 members of the club are giving moral support to this worthy cause," Brown said. "They are endeavoring to get our citizens to be more conscious of protecting one's sight."

In his proclamation, the mayor said, "Good vision is a precious gift bestowed by God and nature upon all mankind. Our eyes are windows of light through which we see and understand each other and enjoy the beauty of the world in which we live."

"The ruthless threat of blindness is increasing although at least half of all blindness is due to neglect and for that reason is needless."

"We owe it to ourselves and our loved ones to recognize the wisdom of protecting vision, to join fully in the battle against blindness, and to learn how to take care of our eyes and the eyes of our children."

The mayor said that in cooperation with the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, the North Carolina State Association for the Blind, the North Carolina State Commission for the Blind and the Greenville Lions Club he was designating September as "Sight-Saving Month."

"I call upon my fellow citizens of this community to conserve the vital resource of good vision by learning the habits of good eye care, and by supporting research efforts which will help all men enjoy the blessing of healthy eyesight."

Michigan Faces Sales Tax Boost

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Gov. G. Mennen Williams today was expected to sign into law a penny increase in the Michigan state sales tax.

The state already has a three-cent tax and the one-cent increase represents the main item in a $128,500,000 revenue program passed by the Legislature Saturday night after nearly eight months of political turmoil, payless paydays and near bankruptcy.

The new tax rate goes into effect at midnight tonight if the law is printed in time for the governor's signature. Williams has said he will sign it so that the state will not miss another month of new revenue badly needed to begin cutting down a $114,000,000 deficit.

The sales tax increase is expected to yield about 120 million dollars a year. The remainder of the expected revenue will come from new business taxes.

The tax package was designed to balance the record $411,000,000 budget.

In adopting the increase in the sales tax Michigan became the third state to have a four-cent levy. The others are Washington and Pennsylvania.

Stocks Trial . . .

By Sunday afternoon, the courtroom was crowded with spectators.

In Sunday's testimony, each of three law enforcement officers told the court that he had heard Stocks say the Sunday following the day Miss Edwards was killed that he had killed a woman the night before.

First of the witnesses, A. M. (Duke) Andrews, Pitt County deputy sheriff, testified that he had visited Stocks the morning after Miss Edwards was slain.

"He told me he went to Mrs. Minges' home with the intention of not bothering anyone but Helen Edwards," said Andrews in his fourth appearance as a witness for the State.

Andrews quoted Stocks as saying that he got into a "tussle" with Mrs. Minges and shot Lewis when he "got after me."

The Pitt deputy further stated that Stocks told him what happened at the Port Terminal that night after Miss Edwards had been abducted from the Minges home.

Andrews said that Stocks, suffering from a broken spine and ribs as he talked to the deputy, related that he had dragged Miss Edwards from his car while it was parked at the Port and dragged her out across frozen-over Hardec's Creek where he left her.

According to Andrews' testimony, Stocks said the woman was dead when he took her from the parked car. The defendant also told Andrews, according to the deputy's statement, that he did not know how he killed Miss Edwards.

Andrews added that he had asked Stocks on the afternoon of Dec. 21 if he had been drinking the night before. The deputy said Stocks replied that he had drunk two beers.

Constable Testifies

Constable Levy Wilson of Grimesland took the stand and told the court that he, too, had visited Stocks on the day after Miss Edwards' death. He quoted Stocks as saying to him that he had killed a woman last night at the Port Terminal Inn.

The third witness to testify he had talked with Stocks on Dec. 21, Jasper Mills of the Greenville Police Department, told the court that Stocks had told him that his original intentions were to kill the Edwards woman with a pistol and then take his own life.

The loaded magazine from a .22 calibre pistol was found outside the Minges home by a neighbor's child on Dec. 21 and turned over to Greenville police.

Mills further testified that Stocks had told of shooting Lewis, striking Mrs. Minges, and taking Miss Edwards away from the Minges home to the Port Terminal where he parked his car.

According to Mills' testimony, Stocks had quoted his former wife as saying that she didn't know it would end this way as the two talked in the parked car the night she was slain.

The Greenville policeman further stated that Stocks told him on the same day that he believed the woman was dead when he took her from the car and dragged her across the ice to the spot where her body was spotted early Sunday morning by Deputy Andrews.

Mills quoted the defendant as saying that he had "stomped on the ice" in efforts to break it because he "wanted to go down with her."

The testimony continued that Stocks had told the policeman that he "couldn't get her off my mind" and that if "I can't have her—nobody else can."

Mills also told the court that he knew Stocks to have been a heavy drinker in the past and added that he had assisted in carrying the man to Dix Hill, state mental hospital in Raleigh, in 1953 "two or three years" after Stocks had tried to kill himself by a self-inflicted pistol wound in the chest.

Cross Examination

The defense pointed out by cross-examination that neither of the officers had obtained permission from a doctor or nurse to talk with the injured man and that Stocks had been given sedatives to lessen his pain for the duration of his stay at the Pitt hospital. He was transferred to another hospital after two days.

Patrolman Wesley Boykin, stationed in Washington, testified that he had been pursuing the Stocks vehicle when it overturned just north of the Tar River bridge on the highway connecting Grimesland with NC 33.

After notifying Greenville's Rescue Squad unit, Boykin told the court, he asked Stocks, who was lying on his back close to the wrecked vehicle, if he had killed his former wife. He said Stocks answered, "I'd rather not say."

Surgeon Takes Stand

Testimony from Dr. John L. Winstead, surgeon at Pitt Memorial Hospital, showed that the Edwards woman was dead when she arrived at the hospital. Dr. Winstead was the examining physician.

Dr. Wiley Forbes, head of the Pathology Department at Duke Hospital in Durham, told the court that the cause of Miss Edwards' death in his opinion was "severe injuries to the head and to the brain."

Just before the Sunday session, which is a Pitt County rarity, came to a close, the prosecution introduced a special agent from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Richard W. Flach of Falls Church, Va. In his testimony he said that he had examined soil samples taken from the Port Terminal area and that one of these was similar to a sample taken from one of the shoes Stocks was wearing the night of Dec. 20. He said that the soil on Stocks' shoe "could have come from the area" from which the samples were taken.

After the 13-man jury was completed Saturday morning the State's testimony in the trial began in the afternoon session which was underway by 2:30.

Testimony continued until nearly four hours later when Judge Bundy called a recess until 9 o'clock Sunday morning. By that time the prosecution had called nine witnesses to the stand.

Stocks' trial for his life began with six members of his family seated directly behind him and his attorneys, and with some 30 spectators in the courtroom.

Lewis, Mrs. Minges On Stand

Witnesses E. Harvey (Duck) Lewis Jr. of Raleigh, formerly of Tarboro, and Mrs. Mabel Minges, of Greenville, testified to the fact that they were in the Minges home the night of Miss Edwards' death and saw Stocks force his way into the home through an outside door to the den of the Minges home at the corner of 10th and Erul Streets.

Lewis said Stocks shot him in the chest as he was rising to divert the intruder's path toward Miss Edwards. He said the impact threw him back onto the couch upon which he had been sitting.

Lewis was a dinner guest at the Minges home the evening of Dec. 20, according to his testimony.

Mrs. Minges told the court that Stocks chased Miss Edwards into the kitchen, caught her and beat her repeatedly on the head with a gun. She further testified that, when she attempted to intervene in the struggle, Stocks struck her on the head with the gun, stunning her.

She stated that she had, moments before, attempted to telephone the police but the "phone was dead."

After the struggle in the kitchen, Mrs. Minges told the court that her sister ran screaming from the room. Stocks chasing her, and that she "never saw her again alive."

Further State testimony Saturday afternoon came from neighbors of the Minges family. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney W. Dunn Sr. told the court that they heard the "screams of a woman" about 10:30 on the night Miss Edwards met her death. Mrs. Dunn stated that she had looked from her bedroom window and had seen "a man pushing a woman" across the Dunn yard. She said that she did not recognize the pair.

Testimony had previously showed that Stocks had gone on a hunting trip to a spot near Vanceboro on Dec. 20 with Floyd McGowan, local tobacco warehouse operator, and McGowan's son-in-law, Kent Lee.

Lee, as the State's first witness, testified that, in his opinion, Stocks was not intoxicated at the time the hunting party returned to Greenville "between five and six o'clock" the afternoon of the same day.

Further testimony from Maynard Porter, Greenville service station operator, and Leroy Hudson of Hudson's Crossroads stated opinions that Stocks was not under alcoholic influence when they saw him the night of Dec. 20.

Inquest Held In Football Death

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C. (AP)—An inquest will be held today in the heat exhaustion death of a high school football player, stricken during a practice session Friday.

Coroner Loy Warren reported that an autopsy showed that 17-year-old John Robert Johnson died of heat exhaustion. His temperature reached 107 degrees before his death Saturday morning in a hospital.

Funeral services for the victim will be held this afternoon at Millersville Baptist Church near here.

The Taylorsville coach, Vernon Morrison, said Johnson was one of 51 players at Friday's practice, the first scrimmage session of the season.

"All of them seemed to be all right," said Morrison. "Johnson, who plays tackle, missed several blocks. I told him, 'You aren't doing your job and you're letting the boys down.' I shoved him toward the line and he fell on the ground."

The coach said he poured water on the stricken player's neck, then sent him to the dressing room with the team manager. Johnson fell down on the way to the dressing room and the coach sent players to carry him on inside. The youth lost his head and his lips turned blue, Morrison said, so an ambulance was summoned.

PHOTOGRAPHER'S VACATION—A houseboat on the Hudson River, a novel sight for the New York area, provided this interesting image when being docked.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A boating boom has hit America and as more and more people take to the water their cameras go right along with them. But photography only runs into a few special problems and one way to tackle them was to lead a boatman's life.

That's how the Desfors found themselves on a houseboat, churning up the Hudson River from New York City to near Saratoga N.Y., with a variety of cameras to record the unusual vacation adventure. Handling about was a new experience but with my wife and daughters pitching in to take over the wheel, handle the ropes and backstop me with the cameras I wasn't using we were able to come back with a fairly complete picture story.

We soon discovered that boat people are a friendly lot, ready to offer advice and give assistance when needed. I found this spirit useful on several occasions when I wanted to take pictures of our houseboat from a distance. Newly found friends took over the helm of the River Queen and maneuvered it while I sought camera angles from one of their boats from an overhead bridge or a pier.

Our houseboat proved to be quite a novelty along the Hudson River. At every marina or boat basin, curious boat owners came over to inspect it. Some were amazed that it could be pushed along solely by a Johnson 50-horsepower outboard engine. Others were impressed by the generator which supplied power for a house-sized refrigerator and electric lights. Almost all of them dug out a camera to take pictures of it.

For pictures of activities aboard one's own boat, a wide-angle lens is a helpful accessory.

To get a good sized image of other boats, a telephoto lens would come in handy. Water of course acts as a giant reflector so exposures have to be cut down to compensate. Shutter speeds can be increased or the one or two stops. A lens shade is recommended for all pictures.

It is always a good idea to carry all the film and supplies that you are likely to need for your complete vacation trip. It is more of a necessity when you go boating, for you'll probably find no photo counters or accessories at boat basins.

On most small boats, film, cameras and equipment must be protected from spray and heat. Wrap them in plastic bags or oilskin covers and keep them in a shaded spot when not in use. Never aim the camera into a stiff breeze because the spray is likely to coat the camera and hit the lens. Salt spray can gum up the working parts and even corrode the lens surface in time. A filter over the lens serves the double purpose of dramatizing the scene and protecting the lens.

When the boat is in motion, a good shooting stance is one that can balance a wave action or sudden pitch without letting the camera skin one's nose or blacken an eye. It is dangerous, however, to stand up at all in a very small boat if other boats are going by. Their wake is sometimes sudden and powerful.

False Alarm Is Sounded Here

Firemen answered a false alarm to 412 Latham St. Saturday after receiving a telephone call from a young child stating the house was on fire.

Firemen turned in box 144 for Fourth and Elizabeth Sts. at the station to summon aid and according to fire officials, when that number had stopped blowing, someone pulled box 153, at the intersection of Fifth and Elizabeth Sts. No fire was found at either location.

Yesterday firemen were called to 1111 N. Pitt St. when gasoline in a tub in the backyard of the residence caught fire.

According to Assistant Fire Chief Berry Sumrell, the fire was out when the trucks arrived and no damage was reported.

Siamese Twins Are Born Dead

Hopes Parents Will OK 'Right To Live'

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)—"I love my parents and I believe they have a right to their beliefs. But I believe I have a right to my sight and my life."

Charlene Butts, 19, is struggling with a dilemma.

Physicians say she has a tumor on the pituitary gland in the brain and probably will be blind in two years and dead in four or five. She has lost 40 per cent of her sight.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butts of Oswego, Kan., have refused to consent to surgery for their daughter.

Atty. Emil C. Anderson Jr. has petitioned the District Court here in Miss Butts' behalf, requesting she be declared an adult so she can give her consent for the operation.

She says a nonmedical practitioner with a clinic in rural Oklahoma has convinced her father there is nothing wrong with her.

"I took 11 treatments from him," she said. "I think my parents paid him about $81 for them."

"He flicked his finger in front of my eyes a couple of times and then told me my eyesight wasn't damaged 40 per cent."

"He told my parents there was an excess of water in my system, that it was filling up my lungs and my head."

The girl returned to her $37.50-a-week clerical job here after the treatments, but began having blackouts.

"My mother would give her consent immediately," Charlene said, "but she won't go against my father."

"This man down there has just convinced them there is nothing wrong with me."

Charlene's father declined comment on his daughter's statement.

Sports
Scope

by Johnny Hudson

The brawn of East Carolina College sprawled across the bottom floor of the college gymnasium late yesterday afternoon. Some fifty football players and their families hovered around the large tables stacked with food. No doubt, the room was filled with veterans of grid warfare but yesterday they were gentle, just like attending their first Sunday School picnic.

It was a day of rest but today these same grid-ders marched out to the college practice field ready to do what they know how to do best—play football. The return of the players gave signs of existence to the almost lifeless East Carolina campus. For the veterans, it was like a reunion. To the newcomers on the squad, it was a day of making friends with the fellows they will be closely associated with for the next three months.

Football Talk Is Present

The conversations varied from their summer work, the presence of two new coaches, the loss of a couple of the boys last year, last quarter's grades, and the new football season. It was obvious that the pigskin sport was here again.

For some of the returning lettermen, the presence of two new coaches was a development which had taken place during the summer and was news to them. Also the absence of Earl Sweet and Perry Lane was a blow to some members.

The Pirate coaching staff was in full force. Jack Boone, the popular head mentor, greeted the squad and their families. Coaches Madigan, McDonald, Matlocks, and Tucker aided in getting the boys into their dorm rooms. George Baynes, the manager, was busy issuing equipment.

Physicals Are Given

Others attending the first official meeting of the 1959 edition were Dr. J. B. Cummings, President of the North State Conference and geography professor at the college, and his wife; Dr. James Butler, Director of the Sports Bureau, and his wife; and Dr. Fred Irons, college physician.

The boys said good-bye to their families following the picnic supper, made their way to the college infirmary, and prepared for the hard grind ahead which will be necessary for sharpening up for Presbyterian College September 12th.

Pirates Ranked As Favorites

On the eve of another football season, the Pirates find themselves in the unusual position of being rated as one of the favorites in the 1959 North State race. East Carolina, along with Appalachian, have been tabbed by early season scribes as the teams with the best chance of overthrowing the perennial domination of Lenoir Rhyne.

The two schools tied for second place last season with identical 6-4 records. Both are loaded with veterans and their losses from the 1958 season were few. The Apps have only two starters missing from last year's club.

Coach Boone is a little more on the cautious side than the writers. The veteran coach welcomes the return of his large number of lettermen but contends that they must prove themselves capable of doing the job.

Today they were attired in sweat shirts and heavy pads. The Pirate stock was to report in "good shape" and there pace will be a fast one and one that only the true football player would endeavor to undertake.

First Game Is
Hard To ScheduleWHO SHOULD YOU SCHEDULE
FOR THE OPENING GAME?

By JACK BOONE

This question is asked many times as a coach it is very important. Last week I gave a typical week of preparation for an opening game—the game happened to be away from home. Why schedule such a team for the opening game? I would like to make a few comments regarding scheduling of games.

This has been a tough job year in and out at East Carolina College. It is difficult to elaborate on the first game without thinking about the entire schedule.

The calibre of your opposition holds the key to your preparations; therefore, the first game is important. It is not only a preview of things to come, but determines how strongly and quickly you approach a state of readiness.

Below are three considerations for the opening game:

1. A real tough game—Several years ago we opened with V.P.I. and Richmond. These teams compelled us to play our best football at the beginning of the season. All of other games then became merely anti-climatic. Usually the reason for scheduling these type of games is for monetary remuneration. In our case it was the matter of getting a schedule.

2. An Easy Team—does not make your men go all out. It might give them a false sense of security. These types of games may get you a victory, but it does little to improve your team—better not do that!

3. A Close Game—The best opponents are those to whom you lose as often as you defeat them. A definite advantage will accrue from the closeness of the contest. Winning by a close margin and barely edging out a victory provides sufficient motivation for a team to work for improvement in its preparation for the next game.

4. Opportunity presents itself where by you can legitimately drive the squad harder. Their desire to intensely improve their game in order to win the next one will result in a willing surrender to your practice whip.

The desired technique is to bring a team along gradually so it reaches its peak about the middle of the season and maintain that sharp edge throughout. Yep, a close game was the advantage. We have beat Presbyterian College year and year before last they beat us. Should be close again! A natural!!!!

Usually if you get beat by a tough team it takes three or four games to recover—not too good!!!!

2. An Easy Team—does not make your men go all out. It might give them a false sense of security. These types of games may get you a victory, but it does little to improve your team—better not do that!

Scrimmage GamePhillips Has High Praise
For ScrimmageBy JOHNNY HUDSON

Rose High gridders climaxed their second week of practice Saturday afternoon with their first full-scale scrimmage session of the season.

Five touchdowns were scored by the two teams, which were alternated frequently, and Coach Bud Phillips stated that he was well pleased with the scrimmage as a whole.

Randy Bass, fleet-footed half-back, provided the offensive highlights of the drill, scampering 50 yards for one touchdown and then passing for another.

Erskin Duff and Billy Neal James showed signs of giving Greenville their best depth at the signal-calling slot in many years.

Both boys directed their respective teams with confidence and their passing was up to par for two weeks work. James threw for one touchdown during the afternoon scrimmage which was played in a continuous rain.

Alan MacArthur, a terror around his left end for ten yards and a touchdown in the second half of action.

Norfleet Felton, Louis Dale, Jeff Fountain, Bill Wade and Bert Aycock drew special praise from the Greenville coaching staff with their line play. Fountain, the lanky center, grabbed a James pass out of the air and raced 45 yards for one touchdown.

Both teams had their share of fumbles but Phillips was hoping that this could be attributed to the rain and wet ball. "We were well pleased with the game," he said, "but found a lot of points that we will need to work on next week," stated Phillips.

Included in some of the points to work on this week were pass defense, coverage after a pass, and individual work with the line-men. Phillips stated that scrimmage would be held to a minimum this week with a game once again being played on either Friday or Saturday afternoon.

There were still no serious injuries reported in the Phantoms camp as they prepared to open their third week of practice. Nursing minor bruises were Alan MacArthur and Louis Dale. They were slated to be ready for work today.

With the opening of school, the Greenville squad will practice only in the afternoons as they finish tapering off for their September 11th opener against Asheville. They will return to the local field for instructions after working out under the lights at Guy Smith Stadium for the past week.

Atlantic Coast Loop
Opens Practice Tues.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Three weeks of final tuneups begin tomorrow for about 500 Atlantic Coast Conference football players.

Two-day sessions are planned at most of the eight schools this week and next, tapering off to one the third week.

All conference teams begin play on Sept. 19 when the schedule brings together the preseason favorites, Clemson and North Carolina, at Chapel Hill, N.C.

Other games that day include Duke at South Carolina, North Carolina State vs. Virginia Tech at Norfolk, Va., William and Mary at Virginia, West Virginia at Maryland and Wake Forest at Florida State.

Clemson, with a squad of 80, including 21 lettermen, and North Carolina, with 77 men, 25 of them letter winners, have the bulk of the roster.

Maryland, in its debut under Coach Tom Nugent, has only 49 men, the Terps' smallest turnout in many years.

Virginia, Wake Forest and South Carolina list 54 each, North Carolina State has 61 and Duke 66.

Jim Hickey, who has stepped up from an assistant's berth to the head position at North Carolina as successor to the late Jim Tatum, will greet the Tar Heels tonight at the annual twilight barbecue and entertainment program in Kenan Stadium.

At 6:45 a.m. tomorrow the team returns to the stadium to begin the serious business of living up to its glowing pre-season notices.

Clemson offers a stern test for a conference opener. The Tigers edged North Carolina last year and went on to the ACC title and a Sugar Bowl berth opposite LSU.

The winner of this game should be the team to beat for conference and postseason laurels.

West Virginia
'Hurting' In Southern Loop

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—"Man, I'm nervous," said Art (Pappy) Lewis. "You know something? We're 'white meat' this year. They'd better feast on us while they can."

It was the eve of the opening of pre-season football drills, and what Lewis means was that, maybe, this will be the year somebody inside the Southern Conference whips his West Virginia Mountaineers.

The other eight teams in the league think it's about time. West Virginia has won its last 23 conference games and, as usual, is defending champion.

Lewis, as befits his profession, is chronically fearful but this year the Mountaineers may, indeed, be in trouble even in the conference they customarily rule with an iron hand.

The start of practice tomorrow will find only 12 lettermen among the 55 candidates reporting to the West Virginia camp at Jackson's Mill, W. Va. At the same time, over at Blacksburg, Va., Virginia Tech Coach Frank Moseley will be welcoming the best-looking squad he's ever had.

West Virginia's other conference foes include improving Richmond, George Washington, and The Citadel. Tech has additional league tests against William and Mary, Richmond and arch-rival Virginia Military.

Untested sophomores—31 are in camp—will have the task of carrying West Virginia to a winning season after a 4-5-1 showing last fall. Line reserves are badly needed, especially at tackle.

Virginia Tech seems to have depth everywhere, but must find an adequate replacement for 1958's star quarterback, Billy Holtsclaw.

VMI has only one regular left from 1958—halfback Sam Horner. George Washington, too, is rebuilding but needs time to offer a challenge.

The Citadel expects to be improved over last year's 4-6 mark but must conquer a depth problem of serious proportions, as must inexperienced William and Mary. Furman has lots of candidates, headed by pass-master Billy Baker. Davidson will have good quarterbacking from Charlie Benson but needs guards and halfbacks. Richmond, whose Ed Merick was conference coach of the year in a 3-7 season last fall, has holdover strength in depth and may surprise.

Harrowing Wait For The Missing

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP)—It has been a harrowing two weeks for relatives and friends of those still missing in the Montana earthquake of Aug. 17-18.

Mrs. Rex Miller of Idaho Falls is one. Her brother, Robert J. Williams, his wife and three children were in Virginia City, Mont., several hours before the quake struck.

Virginia City is not far from southwestern Montana's Hebgen Dam where the earth shook hardest that Monday night and Tuesday morning.

"They may get back," Mrs. Miller told a reporter who phoned her early today. "He's not due back at work until today."

Sheriff Donald J. Skerrett of Gallatin County in Montana says his staff is checking with relatives and friends of the 13. "We want to determine how many we can presume dead," he says.

The Williamses were traced to a museum at Virginia City where they signed the registry Aug. 17. They were on a vacation trip with plans to camp out. The Hebgen Dam area was a popular camping spot.

Search officials have reported no further trace of the family.

Besides the Williamses there are eight members of three other families unaccounted for.

They are: Dr. Merle Edgerton and his wife Edna of Coalinga, Calif.

Roger Provost, his wife and two sons of Soledad, Calif.

Harmon Woods and his wife Edna, also of Coalinga.

On the missing and presumed dead list are Mr. and Mrs. Bernie L. Boynton of Billings, Mont.; Sidney B. Ballard, his wife and son of Nelson, B.C.; and Mrs. Thomas Stowe of Sandy, Utah, whose husband's body was among those recovered from the area of the landslide which accompanied the quake.

Funeral services were held one week ago for the husband.

Williams' three children are Michael 7, Christy 3 and Steven 11.

Williams, 32, was to have returned from his vacation today to resume his job as manager of the plumbing and building department of a department store in Idaho Falls.

Alan Ladd, Jr. Is Honeymooning

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Alan Ladd Jr., 21, son of the actor, is honeymooning today with the former Patricia Ann Beazley, 23.

The couple, who met while attending the University of California, were wed Sunday in a church ceremony. Young Ladd is an actor's agent.

NEW YORK (AP)—Police said today that at least a dozen suspects would soon be arrested in connection with the latest outburst of murderous teen-age violence on New York City streets.

Chief of Detectives James B. Leggett said that two would be charged with homicide, and the rest with unlawful assembly or held as material witnesses.

Leggett said the fatal stabbings apparently did not represent organized gang action.

Two boys were stabbed to death early Sunday when a gang of boys armed with knives attacked a group of youngsters in a West Side playground.

The leader of the attacking group, police were told, wore a black cape and carried a cane.

The deaths brought to four the number of young people killed in teen-age violence in a week. The city's toll so far this year is eight dead.

A third boy was stabbed in the stomach in Sunday's violence, a bottle was broken over another boy's head, and two other boys and a girl were roughed up.

Six boys and two girls were sitting in a darkened playground on Manhattan's West Side when they were set upon.

One of the boys who was roughed up, Jimmy Orphanos, 15, said the gang leader wore a black cape, "like the kind Dracula wears in the movies," and carried a cane.

Orphanos said that the youth in the cloak told him just before the gang fled: "This will teach you to fool with the Young Lords."

Police said the gang was Spanish-speaking. Officers questioned members of the Young Lords, a Puerto Rican street gang which hangs out about 30 blocks away from the playground.

One of the survivors said an attacker yelled "we don't allow gringos near the park." Spanish-speaking people sometimes use "gringo" as a contemptuous word for North Americans.

The area where the violence broke out is not far from the old Hell's Kitchen section. It is an area of run-down tenements, where there is a delicate balance of tension between the older elements—Italians and others—and Puerto Rican newcomers.

The two 16-year-old boys, Anthony Krzesinski and Robert Young, staggered into tenements across the street before they collapsed and died.

Ewald Riemer, 18, was in fair condition in a hospital, suffering from a stab wound in the abdomen.

Harold Luken, 16, suffered less serious injuries when he was hit on the head with a bottle. His sister, Sandy, 14, escaped unhurt.

Orphanos was beaten with an umbrella, a 15-year-old girl with him, whose name was not disclosed, was punched in the face. Tony Wozniak, 15, was slugged several times.

Stickpin Stolen From The Corpse

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Hundreds of visitors viewed the body of Jasper Wottrink, 71, prominent restaurateur, between his death and funeral last week—and one of them may have departed with a $3,500 diamond stickpin from his necktie.

Police said Sunday they had no clues or suspects in the casket-raiding. The gold pin with diamond setting was missed shortly before the services.

Chinese Student Says His Hiding 'More Like Death'

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—"It was like death. I talked to myself more and more," Cheng Guan Liu said today describing his four-year voluntary imprisonment in the caves of the First Methodist Church here.

Cheng, flushed out of his hiding place Sunday by police, told incredulous authorities and University of Michigan officials he went into hiding after the Michigan-Navy football game in 1955 to save face after failing in his studies in the university's engineering college.

The 26-year-old Chinese student said he hadn't spoken to anyone during the four years. He said he subsisted on scraps of food picked up from the church kitchen following social activities.

Cheng, son of a Singapore school teacher, said he brushed his teeth with burnt match sticks, cut his hair with a pair of shears and trimmed his beard with a set of tweezers. His strange existence was discovered after private police were hired to check the church building after complaints of prowlers.

Officers entered the building after a couple living in the basement heard noises. They heard a door slam and went to the eaves where Cheng was found.

The student was found doubled up under a catwalk. He was wearing a pair of shorts. Beneath a paper tent were his blankets, an earphone radio and a jar of instant coffee.

Cheng said he decided on the hiding place after the football game and entered it to stay after throwing his clothes and identification papers into the nearby Huron River.

"Nobody ever goes up there (the eaves) because there is no reason to go there," he told police and university officials in the Washtenaw County jail.

He said he skipped rope for exercise and ate only one meal a day.

"Once I went three days without food. You get used to hunger." To help while away the time he

'Black Creature' Wasn't A Shark

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP)—Their 18-foot motorboat was sinking under three San Franciscans, so they abandoned ship in the bay.

Then Jerry Anolik, Fred Manley and Gunard Mahl climbed right back in when they decided a black creature circling them was a shark.

But the shark barked like a sea lion, so they jumped overboard again and waited an hour for a passing yachtsman to pick them up.

They spent Sunday raising their craft and found a loose hose behind the engine responsible for the leak.

read books and magazines he took from the church library.

The former student was ordered held in the jail pending an Immigration Service investigation concerning his expired student's visa.

Walter B. Rea, university dean of men, said he may be allowed to re-enter the university if he can clear himself with immigration officials and meet school entrance requirements.

A university spokesman said Cheng actually had not flunked out, but that his average grades in engineering were not sufficiently high to permit his transfer to the literary college, which he had requested.

Cheng entered Albion College on his student visa. He transferred to the University of Michigan to take engineering. Part of his educational expenses were paid by the Methodist Church and by the church's Wesley Foundation.

"I didn't live up to what they expected of me," the 5-foot-7 student said. "I think this is the worst thing a man can do. It makes him kind of a fraud."

"I'm glad it's over now. I hoped it would happen from the start. I didn't have the courage to do it myself."

The student said he thatched a little corner under the eaves with paper to keep dust from falling on him as he slept.

The Rev. Eugene A. Ransom, pastor of the church, had worried, asked and written about Cheng during the four years.

University officials said the student probably disappeared on the weekend of Oct. 8-9 in 1955.

Some time later he was reported missing to authorities. A search was not pressed however, when a report was received that Cheng had a job in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Cheng's hiding place was in the rafters above the church ceiling, near where the roof and the walls meet. His bed was an old pew cushion, over which he had rigged a paper tent "to keep out the dust" in the unused loft.

An extension cord provided light for his pillow and gave him power for his radio. To ward off winter cold he had two blankets and some old clothing taken from an accumulation in a church clothing drive. He also had a little paper fan for the stifling heat of August.

'Splendid American' Is Going To Be Unveiled

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Regardless of the new Communist-led insurrection's outcome in Laos, ABC news chief John Daly is determined that the sacrifices of Americans working there shall not go unnoticed on television.

Daly toured southeast Asia last year and was tremendously impressed with the sacrifices of comfort and career made by Americans toiling in the area. His desire to tell their story on television was translated into action when he read "The Ugly American," a best seller chronicling mistakes made by our foreign service personnel.

Daly insists that his "The Splendid American," an hour-long documentary to be presented Sunday, Sept. 27, is "not an answer to 'The Ugly American.' The book was a collection of errors and personality clashes that made us look stupid and fat-headed. It only triggered my conviction that something should be done for the Americans I saw there."

"Certainly mistakes were made and we had a few venal people out there, but you have venal people everywhere. The Soviets made mistakes too, far worse than ours."

"The people I met were working selflessly, out of kindness and dedication, at great personal sacrifice in one of the most primitive countries on earth to keep the Communists from getting a foothold. Conditions in Laos are roughly equivalent to our pioneer West a century ago, and the people are still living in the 15th Century. There is no railroad. The roads are nothing more than trails. I doubt if there are five flush toilets in the whole country. The weather ranges from sodden summer heat to the terrible drenching rains of the monsoon season."

"The Splendid American" deals with the work, among others, of Dr. Thomas A. Dooley, who founded three hospitals in the tiny country, one within sight of the Red Chinese border; Dr. Ras Johnson, head of the U.S. education program, and engineer Clyde Searl, who has built canals and other projects to help develop the primitive country.

Only Dr. Johnson is a government official. The rest are affiliated with the International Volunteer group and receive only $60 a month to cover subsistence. All are subject to constant abuse from Radio Hanoi and Radio Peiping.

Enumerating Soviet blunders in the same area, Daly told of a Soviet deal to barter cement for rice that back-fired when the cement was delivered in single ply bags at the height of the rainy season. "The Soviet Union overstepped itself in Cambodia by trying to brainwash young Cambodians sent to universities in France and to make them leaders of an upheaval. The Prime Minister got on the air and denounced this insidious infiltration in a series of speeches," he added.

"The Splendid American" is part of a series of 26 planned documentaries that Daly is still hoping to find a sponsor for and present on a biweekly basis. Others in the series will treat of the life and times of Premier Khrushchev, microscopic life in a Central Park pond and the vast, untapped mineral resources on the floor of the ocean.

CHAPTER 23
AT THE Running M ranch, having fed Rupe Hahn and Pearly Grimes, Sue Vincent sat down to a second cup of coffee with Mandy Madison. Mandy, despite her splendid vigor, looked very tired.
"You," Sue said flatly, "are going to get some decent sleep. You haven't had an hour of it since Nels was hurt. Tonight I sit with him, and you rest."
Mandy shook her head. "You're a darling, Sue, and I love you very much for all you've done. But Nels is my man, and when he needs me by his side, that is where I'm going to be."
"But he doesn't need you by his side tonight," Sue protested. "Mandy, honey, your Nels is doing fine. If he wasn't Doc Jerome certainly wouldn't have gone back to town."
"I know," said Mandy soberly. "But—suppose, in the night, Nels took a—bad turn—and me not right there—"
"If he takes the slightest turn, I'll call you instantly," Sue promised. "Please do as I say, Mandy. Worrying yourself out isn't going to help anyone."
Mandy weakened a little. "Perhaps I will lie down for an hour or two."
"You do your sitting with Nels now," said Sue. "I'll take over later, and there'll be no more argument."

Mandy smiled softly as she got to her feet. Then she went back to her vigil at her husband's side.
Moving on about the kitchen chores, Sue Vincent pondered her own feelings toward the men she knew best; those who, so far in her life, had been her closest confidants and friends. Winning quickly through these, she came up with two, Link Asbell and Frank Dalmar. And what were her real feelings toward each of them?
In personalities they came close to being direct opposites. She had found Frank Dalmar pleasurable company and had known a definite fondness for him. But did that fondness still exist in the face of the blunt and brutal facts of the past few days?
Here, unless she held herself to strict reality, it was all too easy to drift into a sense of unreality. All her life, so it seemed, she had listened to her father again and again voice his suspicion of Jonas Dalmar and Bardo Sampson and of their ultimate piratical intent toward Big Five.
Far back, there had been one period of open fighting between Big Five and Double Diamond, but she was a child at the time, and however the quarrel had been resolved, it left no impact upon her, or any clear memory of any of the actual incidents. She recalled once asking Frank Dalmar if, in his belief, such an eruption of violence might ever come. He had scoffed at the bare idea, stating flatly that it was all merely the surly growling of stubborn old men, living in the past, and that it would never be anything more than this, because the old, bad days were gone.

But now there were grim and bitter facts that could prove them both terribly wrong!
It was, Sue knew, Link Asbell's positive conviction that Double Diamond was behind the shooting of Pearly Lane and Nels Madison. If this was true, did it incriminate Frank Dalmar in any way? Was it fair to feel that it did?
Sue swung slim, restless shoulders, as though in an effort to shrug clear of all unpleasant and depressing facts, and her thoughts left Frank Dalmar and reached to Link Asbell, and immediately it seemed, her world steadied and became more confident.
She remembered the day she first laid eyes on Link, and for some reason she'd never clearly understood or figured out, it was a day that stood out with particular clearness in her memory. It was the day her father hired Link.
She remembered how he had looked, a tall, lean young rider, still-faced with a taciturnity that was even now characteristic. She had opened a kitchen window to let out some of the heat and vapors from supper's cooking, and now she moved to close it.
While about this, she picked up the drum of incoming hoofs. After which there was a brief murmur of voices and then one clear remark by Rupe Hahn. "She's still in the kitchen I guess, Link."
She heard him coming toward the house, clink of spurs muffled against the earth. She opened the door and stepped on to the porch.
"Link! What is it?"
"A little talk, Sue—if you got the time."
She dropped quickly down the porch steps and stood beside him. "Let's walk, Link. I've been inside so much today."
They moved out past the corals and into the clear of the plain. She looked up at him, striding so tall and quiet.

"Rupe said you were by earlier. Right after first dark. You could have seen me then and saved this extra riding."
Asbell shrugged. "You were busy getting supper for Mandy and the others. The extra riding don't count. There could be a lot of it ahead."
He was spinning up a smoke while he spoke. He lipped this and cracked a match, cupping the small flame in his curved hands before lifting it to his cigarette.
The brief glow brought his features into sharp relief and on them Sue glimpsed a harsh, almost somber gravity.
He extinguished the match with a flick of his fingers and left now was only the crimson spark of his cigarette to sharpen, then wane, then sharpen again against the deep velvet wool of darkness, a dark so deep that it made of night a tremendously vast and lonely thing.
Sue tucked a hand inside the comfort of Asbell's arm.
"What is it you wish to talk about, Link?"
He answered with slow care. "A decision we have to make. You know my feelings about Double Diamond and their intent. I admit I've no positive proof—yet. If I did, the decision would be easier to come by. Because so much that is yours rides on it."
"We discussed that before, Link. I said then that however you felt it wise to move, would be all right with me. I still feel that way."
"Even if it means more dead men in the trail—likely enough some of our own as well as theirs?"
The threat of open range war had never become an actual possibility to Sue until now. The prospect of such left her a little numb and stammering.
"Must—must it really be that way, Link? There's law. There's Sheriff Hatfield's office. Surely—"
"I thought of that," Asbell said. "The most Hatfield would do is send in a deputy to investigate. After hanging around a while and unable to prove anything, the deputy would head back to Oakdale. Then, pretty soon, somebody else would be found, shot in the back. Likely another of our boys. In fact, any honest man who might oppose open range piracy. No, Sue—the answer isn't that easy or simple. Neither is the decision."
"The decision, Link—what is it?"
"Whether we go along as we are, letting Jonas Dalmar and ANOTHER type of shelter which gives excellent fallout protection can be built as an added room to the basement of a home under construction. It would add about $500 to the total cost of the home. The shelter illustrated here is based on such a room built in a new home in the Washington, D. C., area in the Spring of 1959. Important considerations for each type of shelter are: arrangement of the entrance, ventilation, radio reception and lighting. Bardo Sampson make the moves and call the turns, or whether we start carrying the fight to them—hitting them first. That's the way you win a fight, Sue—by picking your own time and place instead of letting the other side pick theirs."

Can Sue trust her heart? With his features in full shadow, Sue could not read Asbell's expression. She knew her own reaction, which was a new and strange and breathless turmoil within her. Continue the story here tomorrow.

'Indefensible'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee says it would be "completely indefensible" for the Navy to abandon its partly complete seaplane base at Harvey's Point, N.C.
Rep. Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) has demanded that the Navy find a profitable use for the base, which was part of a big seaplane program recently discontinued.
Rep. Herbert C. Bonner (D-NC) said about 12 million dollars had been spent on the Harvey's Point project. Total cost of the base when completed had been estimated at 50 million.
Vinson said in a letter to Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke that it was inconceivable that so much money could be spent on the project only to drop it.
Bonner said he had contacted the chief of Naval operations, Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, urging that the base be put to good use.

look, mom, no chimney!

That, son, is a home that's completely heated by electricity. And in the years ahead, it's likely that more homes will be heated by electricity than by any other method.

Electric home heating is the really modern way—clean, automatic, safe, and so convenient. You can have a chimney if you want it, of course, but you'll save many dollars on home building with easy-to-install, economical electric heating.

Ask us for details, or see your electric wiring contractor about the ideal way to heat your home . . . electrically.

Expect 20-Year Struggle Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Soviet threat to dominate the world requires the free nations to pool money and weapons for a struggle that could last 20 years, a report to the Senate says.

The work of a private research firm, the report called for a long-term defense against the Soviet threat, plus strong measures to expand their economies and increase military strength.

The report, prepared by the Corporation for Economic and Industrial Research, Inc., was published over the weekend by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The report urged these military measures:

Quick development of an effective defense against intercontinental missiles before the Soviets achieve one.

Full exploitation of "our vast superiority in electronic processing and computer production."

Expansion of mechanized, powerful forces "to prevent Communist expansion by 'local' conventional warfare."

"These cost heavily," the report said, "but the United States and its allies have a 3-to-1 superiority in economic resources over the Communist bloc."

U.S. programs to date have only been enough to buy limited "term insurance" against Soviet threats, it said, and a 10-to-20-year "endowment policy" is needed to "face the facts of future Soviet power politics."

Six-Year-Old Spent Half Day In A Refrigerator

CINCINNATI (AP)—Debby Tucker, 6-year-old who police say spent half a day jammed inside a running refrigerator, is recovering at General Hospital today.

Detectives said they plan to file charges against Charles Thomas Crawford, 21, who they said admitted molesting the girl before stuffing her into the refrigerator.

Hospital aides said the youngster was unconscious when brought in early Sunday but revived about three hours later.

Her stepfather, Kenneth Spangler, 24, discovered her in the refrigerator of an unused apartment next to the Spangler apartment.

Spangler and his wife had just returned from an all-night search with police and neighbors for the girl. Mrs. Spangler heard a moan from the unused apartment and Spangler investigated.

"She was practically frozen when I pulled her out," he said. Police said Crawford signed a statement admitting he lured the girl into the apartment building where his sister is landlady.

Eggs—Price paid for graded, sized, minimum 80 per cent A quality: Raleigh and Charlotte, stronger, large 41; prices paid on graded out basis: Asheville, steady, A large 36.

NEW YORK (AP)—Strength in some of the steels and motors helped give the stock market a selective advance early this afternoon. Trading was moderately active.

Some of the favored stocks among the list of key issues gained well over a point. The market as a whole, however, was spotty.

Most key stocks made small gains and there was a wide assortment of minor losses.

The irregular upward trend was established at the start. As the session wore on, a few of the steels and motors met fairly lively demand.

U.S. Steel and Ford touched new highs for the year. The rise of the steels and motors was not unanimous, however.

Trading was at a slightly faster rate than on Friday's sluggish session.

U.S. Steel jumped about 2 while Youngstown Sheet posted a gain exceeding 2. Republic Steel rose around a point.

Ford, with a rise of well over a point, was a standout in the automotive division. General Motors dropped a fraction. Chrysler and American Motors nudged ahead.

The Associated Press averaged of 60 stocks at noon was up 40 cents to $231.30 with the industrials up 60 cents, the rails up 10 cents and the utilities up 20 cents.

Government bonds shaded to new record lows.

SHP Car Struck Sales Underway In Car Mishap

Greenville police investigated an accident late Saturday, in which a Highway Patrol car was struck in the side.

According to investigating officers, the patrol car's driver, Patrolman W. K. Chapman had parked the vehicle just off North Greene St. and was issuing a driver a citation for a traffic violation when a car operated by Mary Worthing Dail of Route 1, Winterville, was allegedly forced off the road by a third car and struck the side of the state-owned vehicle.

Police identified the driver of the car which allegedly forced the Dail car into the patrol car as James Courtney Youngblood, 65, of 607 West Fourth St., Greenville.

Officers said Youngblood was pulling from a parking lot at 700 North Greene St. and said he did not see the Dail car.

Youngblood was charged by officers with failure to yield the right of way as a result of the collision.

Damage to the patrol car was estimated at $55 while damage to the Dail car was set at $5. The Youngblood auto was not damaged.

Saturday afternoon, cars operated by Godfrey Chance, 37-year-old Negro of 900 Douglas Ave., and David Lee Nobles, 30-year-old Negro of 1914 South Pitt St., collided when Chance was backing into a drive way at 1914 South Pitt St. and Nobles was backing out of the drive.

Officers said Chance was attempting to turn around and backed into the drive.

No charges were placed by officers who set damage to the Chance car at $80. No damage was reported to the Nobles vehicle.

Damage to the patrol car was estimated at $55 while damage to the Dail car was set at $5. The Youngblood auto was not damaged.

Stock In Burned Store Declared Complete Loss

The stock in the fire-damaged Rose's store which burned Friday has been declared a 100 per cent loss by the insurance company to J.A. Taylor, manager of the store.

Taylor said a salvage company from Norfolk arrived this morning and has started removing the stock from the floor. An estimated $150,000 stock was in the building at the time of the fire, Taylor added.

Damage to the building has not yet been determined, Taylor commented, as the state inspector has not arrived to inspect the building to check the walls of the structure.

The building, valued at about $100,000, is owned, according to Taylor, by the J.B. James heirs and was constructed about 75 years ago, with an addition being added to the rear of the structure about 1939.

Firemen held the stubborn fire to the second floor of the building during the eleven hours they fought the blaze before extinguishing it. Fire Chief George Gardner noted that the only damage done to the main sales floor of the structure was caused by water.

Over 200,000 gallons of water were forced through some 4,100 feet of fire hose used at the smoky blaze.

Taylor said he thought the fire started from a short circuit in the exhaust fan located in the ceiling of the second floor.

Never Practices His Preaching

ASBURY PARK, N.J. (AP)—George Zuckerman steadfastly refuses to practice what he preaches.

For the past 27 years he has been the press agent trumpeting the praises of this famous beach resort.

Yet he has never gone swimming here.

"I'm too busy on the job," he says. "The only time I can go swimming is when I'm vacationing down in Miami."

Trinidad, in the West Indies, was named by Columbus in 1498 for the Holy Trinity.
