Triumphal Entry Into Paris For Eisenhower; Talks Are Begun

Greenville Industries Inc. Reorganizes, Lays Plans

Greenville Industries, Incorporated, a local development corporation which has been dormant for the past seven years, was reorganized and reactivated here last night.

Ficklen Jr., Charles Horne and George Coffman. The present corporation was organized in January of 1951 with its purpose being to "promote, encourage and assist in any and every manner the balanced industrial and business growth and development of Greenville and Pitt County . . ."

S. EUGENE WEST . . . elected President

PARIS (AP)—President Eisenhower made a happy and triumphant entry into Paris today, riding beside his wartime comrade Gen. Charles de Gaulle. Crowds estimated at half a million jammed the center of the city, cheering and shouting as the World War II leaders drove past in an open car, on their way to conferences crucial to the Western Alliance.

There were 29 guests at the luncheon, among them Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville. After lunch Eisenhower drove back to the Foreign Ministry for an hour's rest before starting further talks with De Gaulle.

East Carolina Opens For Its Fall Quarter Of 1959

East Carolina College officially opened for the fall quarter of 1959-1960 today. The largest freshman class yet to enroll at the college and a faculty including 33 new members held the spotlight.

Registration of freshmen and transfer students is scheduled in the Wright auditorium for Saturday morning and afternoon, and of upperclassmen and graduate students for Monday morning and afternoon. Class work will begin Tuesday, September 8.

approximately 430,000, and the cost of higher education at eleven billion dollars. All of these figures show a tremendous increase over those applicable to the present, as explained.

Winston-Salem, Durham Join N.C. Integrated Schools

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Durham and Winston-Salem school systems today joined five other North Carolina communities which opened integrated schools for the 1959-60 term without incident.

grader, and Lucy Mae Jones, an eighth grader, arrived at Broden Junior High about five minutes after the bell rang for the start of classes. Mrs. Amanda Brame, mother of one of the girls, and Elder J. T. Powell, a Negro minister, accompanied the girls who entered the school without incident.

Changes Plea, Stocks Is Ordered To State Prison

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer Thomas Abner Stocks, 42-year-old Greenville tobacco speculator, today began an automatic life sentence in North Carolina's state penitentiary in Raleigh following the completion of his trial yesterday when he changed his plea to guilty.

Stocks stood emotionless as the sentence was read to him about 6:00 p.m. Minutes later he was escorted via the Pitt jail to a waiting car which immediately carried him to Raleigh to be committed to Central Prison there.

Dr. Brick had examined Stocks last May on three different occasions at Dix Hill, state mental hospital in Raleigh.

Other school systems which have opened for the fall term with limited integration are in Charlotte and Greensboro, for the third year; and Wayne County, where a few Negro children of personnel at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base near Goldsboro have been accepted into white schools for the second year.

Cumberland Tops State In Polio

RALEIGH (AP) — Cumberland County, which reported three new polio cases Tuesday, leads the state in total polio cases this year with 22.

JUDGE WILLIAM J. BUNDY . . . confers with attorneys Gaylord, Dunn, Cavendish and Rouse prior to the courts acceptance of a plea of guilty from Stocks yesterday.

House Apparently Upholds 'Pork Barrel' Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House apparently voted today to uphold President Eisenhower's veto of a big public works appropriation bill. The issue was left officially in doubt as a recapitulation was ordered.

Robeson is second in total number of polio cases this year with 15, followed by Wake and Onslow with 10 each. Buncombe is next with nine and Craven seven.

just about every congressional district. Most of them are river and harbor and flood control jobs. For years it has been known as the "pork barrel" bill and has been a congressional favorite because of its popularity in the home districts.

votes will be required to override. Republican leaders pitched their plea to their 153 members on party loyalty and "fiscal responsibility." Some of them had urged the President not to veto the bill because it involves projects in many Republican districts and might adversely affect the political future of GOP incumbents.

185 Young Ladies To Make Debut

One hundred eighty-five young North Carolina women will make their debut at the Statewide Debutante Ball which will be held in the Raleigh Memorial Auditorium on September 11-12. The popular event is sponsored by the Terpsichorean Club of Raleigh.

The Ball originated in 1923 when the Raleigh Merchants Association sponsored what was known as the Fall Festival. The "Mardi-Gras-like" festival, timed to coincide with the end of the summer farming season, was a three-day span of activities running from pie-eating contests and a fancy dress party to the Coronation Ball—the grand finale of the weekend, when a Queen of the Festival was chosen.

Candidates had been sent from all over the State to vie for the title of Queen, and among the girls at the Festival were Miss Mary Louise Everett, daughter of Secretary of State W. N. Everett of Rockingham, Miss Kathleen Price of Greensboro, Miss Margaret Pou of Smithfield, Miss Alice Cheek of Henderson and Miss Linda Randolph of Kinston.

Governor Cameron Morrison crowned Miss Cheek, now Mrs. Foy Edwards of Raleigh, Queen of the Ball, and Miss Cheek became the first leader of what is known today as the Debutante Ball.

The Merchants Association turned over the sponsorship of the Ball to a newly formed Terpsichorean Cotillion Club in 1927. The "Terps" at that time were mostly freshmen and sophomores at N. C. State College whose purpose, according to the constitution of the club, was to promote "social fellowship" and to encourage "social activities in the City of Raleigh and the State of North Carolina and to provide and sponsor social entertainment to such ends."

The Terpsichorean Club got its name from Greek myths naming Terpsichore as the muse of dance. During the early days under their sponsorship, members of the club issued invitations personally, and often asked girls they knew or met when on summer vacation. Now, however, each girl is nominated by a "secret nominator" in her own home town and submitted to a committee of young Raleigh women, most of whom are debutantes of previous years. This year's Girl's Committee is headed by Mrs. Charles A. Newcomb, the former Juliette Fulghum of Raleigh, a '50 Deb.

The Debutante Ball has been held each year since 1923 except for the war years, 1942-45. It is traditionally held the weekend after Labor Day, although in 1948 it had to be postponed until a few days after Christmas because of the serious polio epidemic.

This oldest of all present day North Carolina Debutante Balls will be held for the 33rd time this year. Through this span of time, there are many thousands of women, now living throughout the country, who can look back on their "debut-making" weekend in Raleigh as one of the highlights of their life.

Know How To Select A Rug?

RALEIGH—Confused by the parade of new fibers as well as the old standbys when you're looking for a rug to resist soiling?

Miss Charlotte Womble, house furnishing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says that plain or light colors and smooth finishes always show soil more readily than mixed, dark colors, or textured surfaces. However, your dark colors show lint and foot tracks more easily.

Many new fibers on the market have special soil retarding finishes. Good to excellent soil resistors are wool, acrylic, (Acrlan, Dynel, Beryl) delustered nylon and super L rayon fibers.

Fibers which are fair soil resistors are bright, delustered nylon, rayon and filament acetate. However, rayon can be treated to improve soil resistance; delustered fibers are best. Cotton is a poor soil resistor.

About the only way you can be sure a new rug will behave as you thought it would is to find a reliable merchant and take his word.

Asks Court Help For Operation

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Charlene Butts, 19, is trying another court action to obtain consent for a brain operation that may save her life. Her attorney petitioned Wyandotte County Probate Court Tuesday for appointment of a guardian for the girl. A guardian could authorize the surgery. Physicians say the girl has a tumor that will make her blind in two years and take her life in four or five years. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butts of Oswego, Kan., have refused to consent to the operation. Mrs. Butts declined to say why. Charlene has said they are opposed to the operation because a masseur who examined her said surgery wasn't necessary. A Probate Court hearing will be held Sept. 11. Charlene's attorney petitioned

DOG DID IT
DENVER (AP) — The family dog dragged 11-month-old Stephen Young's stroller into the path of a car Tuesday. The child was critically hurt. Police said the dog, whose leash had been tied to the stroller, was chasing a cat. The child's sister, Linda, 8, had left him while she went to a nearby drugstore. On Dec. 4, 1918, the Kingdom of the Serb, Croats and Slovenes was formally proclaimed. Later it became Yugoslavia.

Set Hearing For Site Of New Assembly Home

RALEIGH (AP) — The legislative building commission has set a public hearing here Sept. 28 on the question of a site for the new building to house the General Assembly. The commission will meet here Sept. 14 for a general discussion of matters pertaining to the building. This was decided at an organizational meeting Tuesday. Former Rep. Tom White of Kinston was elected chairman of the seven member group. Sen. Robert Morgan of Shelby was named vice chairman. The commission was recently appointed by Gov. Hodges. It will oversee planning and construction of the building. The last Legislature made 4½ million dollars available for the structure. White said he hopes the commission can "build a building which will be ageless and functional and in keeping with the quiet pride and integrity of the people of North Carolina."

Opportunity For Soft-Sell Expert

Gov. Hodges has made it clear that he would be embarrassed by any overt attempt to launch a campaign in his behalf for the vice presidential nomination at the governors' meeting in Asheville where he will serve as host.

He has also said that he feels the Presidential nominee should have complete freedom in choosing his running mate so far as the Democratic ticket is concerned.

Notwithstanding these and many other statements Gov. Hodges has made in regard to speculation that he is a candidate for the Democratic vice presidential nomination, there are a good many signs that Gov. Hodges is seeking to put himself in a position to obtain the nomination should it come his way.

He has said from time to time that he is not interested in running for the Senate in the near future, and so far he has kept hands off the maneuvering among prospective gubernatorial candidates in the forthcoming state elections. This adds weight to the suggestions that Gov. Hodges is looking forward to further political service at the federal rather than at the state level. It should be remembered too, that Gov. Hodges has played an increasingly prominent role in the National Democratic Party and in the governors' organizations in recent years. He has made himself well known, and his abilities as an administrator have gained increasing recognition. He has traveled a great deal and has made many contacts which might stand him in good stead should he seek a national office.

Quite obviously Gov. Hodges appears to be aiming for a North Carolina delegation to the 1960 National Convention which will follow his lead and thus strengthen his position in the convention. He has also seen to it that North Carolina keeps peace with national party big-wigs.

While Gov. Hodges has said he would be embarrassed by any move at the forthcoming Southern Governors Conference to endorse him for vice president, the past several years have shown Gov. Hodges a master of the "soft sell" as well as the "hard sell". There can be no doubt that the governors will talk politics when they meet in Asheville. Neither can there be any doubt that Gov. Hodges, if he has further political ambitions, will join in the politicking. He may do it quietly, but we can not help but believe that he will do it effectively. And he is certain to have some help.

Because of his position as host of the conference in Asheville, Gov. Hodges will have an ideal opportunity to use the "soft sell" in feeling out sentiment in behalf of his candidacy for the vice presidency. The "hard sell" can come later with endorsements, campaigns and whatever else appears necessary.

A Heavier Burden For American Leadership

Primary responsibility for determining Western policy for dealing with the Soviet Union may be shifting back to the United States as a result of the President's visit to Europe and his meeting with Soviet Premier Khrushchev later this month.

During the period when the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was ill, there was speculation that British Prime Minister Macmillan might assume the position of leadership for the west in East-West negotiations. His visit to Moscow and his subsequent role in negotiations added weight to such speculation.

Now, however, it may be that President Eisenhower will replace Macmillan as the chief negotiator for the West in dealing with the Soviet Union. It also appears likely that the East and West may be moving into a period in which summit conferences will handle many of the problems which previously have been left to lesser officials with not much genuine accomplishment resulting.

Reports from London say it will be left to President Eisenhower in his talks with Khrushchev this month to gain removal of the Soviet threat at West Berlin and thus pave the way for a full summit conference at a later date.

This change in Western strategy places a heavier burden upon the United States, and at the same time it thrusts the primary responsibility for East-West negotiations upon the United States. For the moment at least, Mcmillan appears willing to take a back seat to President Eisenhower in dealing directly with Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Rough Time For James Hagerty

WASHINGTON (AP) — That self-confidence and sweet air of nothingness which James C. Hagerty can exude upon occasion falls flat on his face overseas. He is a hit at home but London gives him the miseries.

This lively, 50-year old grandfather, President Eisenhower's press secretary, is one of the best any president ever had, at least from a president's viewpoint.

He has done so well since 1953 that two years ago he got applauded from opposite directions. The Binghamton, N.Y. Press suggested he be named the Republican candidate for governor of New York.

And Sen. Lyndon Johnson, the Senate's Democratic boss, said Hagerty had done such a good propaganda job for the administration he should be given a job to "propagandize the rest of the world."

He gets along all right with American newsmen who remember the superb job of information he did on Eisenhower's heart attack in 1955. The American press treats him gently.

But he clicks like a rusty lock in London. Two years ago the papers there gave him a big horse laugh when columnist Art Buchwald of the New York Herald Tribune stuck a needle in him and Hagerty jumped.

Buchwald thought Hagerty's news conferences during NATO talks were packed with nothingness. He wrote an imaginary spoof on the Hagerty school of questions and answers. This outraged Hagerty.

He called a special news conference, indignantly denounced the imaginary conference as "undiluted rot." The London Daily Express called it an "incredible scene."

Buchwald had the last word, which ex-newspaperman Hagerty might have expected. Buchwald wrote another piece, explaining the rot he wrote might be "diluted" but was never "undiluted."

First Time For Us All

By HENRY HOWARD

How does a guy feel when, all of a sudden, he finds out that he's got himself a girl who'll be his very first wife before long?

Well, up until just three days ago, it would have been sorta hard to say.

What happened last Sunday sorta made all kinds of feelings a little bit more clearly understood. You see, this girl's announcement came out in all the newspapers and it got spread all over the place.

Now this announcement wasn't just any ole kind of announcement—it was a WEDDING announcement. And on top of that, that announcement was about somebody besides that girl.

These last two things made all the difference in the world in that little bit of newsprint. You can be sure of that.

Before that thing came out in public, it seemed more like a dream or something. It seemed like something that wasn't really "right around the corner"—like it really is!

It was something that was easy to think about and talk about—even joke about. But, brother, there's a strange feeling now at every thought of it. When it's talked about now, there's at least one funny-sounding voice in the conversation. And, you know, there just ain't no joking about it anymore.

Well, you might say, that's a heck of a way for somebody to feel about a thing like getting married. Especially if you'd seen how good-looking and sweet-looking that gal was in that picture.

You might have a point there. It's probably the proper thing to go ahead and live as normal as ever and just wait for that pretty little gal to say "I do."

Well, some of us who're in the same boat have an argument of our side, too. One of us might say, "Look, I ain't never tried nothing like this before—how d'ya expect me t' act?"

See, you have to give us a little room to bemoan our fate. Then you say, "What fate? Why, man, you're just getting ready to start living!"

Okay, that's all well and good and probably most guys are reasonably calm and collected after such an announcement has been made public. Now that's not necessarily a statement of fact, just a supposition!

Anyhow, there might be some who feel sorta like a caged lion or something is pacing around in their stomachs. It's a safe bet some sensations are kinda like that.

Other individuals will commute to Wilson evenings for classes in fields they need or desire.

That is not all, the extension division of the University of North Carolina has expressed a willingness to make Goldsboro an important center of its work. Where there is sufficient interest in any subject offered by the University, an extension class can be formed for Goldsboro. Required would be a minimum number of students. Anyone interested in any particular topic or field might write to the director of Extension at Chapel Hill for details.

"Co-ed" Saloons A Bore

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—In middle age about the only exercise some men get is climbing on the water wagon—and falling off. After more than a quarter century of traveling the cocktail circuit—purely in the line of duty naturally—I find myself spending more and more of my time — by choice — high and dry on the old wagon.

My reason is quite simple. I like the change of view it gives, and am getting to like it more and more.

My initiation into the cup that cheers goes back to the Prohibition days when people sat around in dimly lit apartments gulping home brew out of kitchen pans at 35 cents a pan. It was fun merely because it was illegal. The beer was green, strong enough to curdle all four stomachs of the average cow.

Later, as a cub reporter, it was pure joy to stand at the bar drinking two — for — a — quarter shots of amber spirits of grain while listening to the colorful old-timers tell how life was life in the good old days.

But one by one—in this city, in that city—the old-timers took their last one for the road, and the road never led back.

The era of social drinking came in, and the trouble with social drinking is that it isn't really social—and it isn't really drinking.

Barroom camaraderie began to disappear when they took the sawdust off the floor and started admitting women.

A coeducational saloon is like a coeducational barber shop. It is an anachronism, and has no place in an ordered world.

There is another good reason for climbing the wagon. It is more peaceful and restful.

Twenty-five years ago the taverns were inhabited by wise and witty men who said wonderful things in a wonderful way. The conversation in a tavern today is downright boring. All the people there want to do is tell each other their personal woes. The bartender has become a wet nurse and a psychiatrist.

What is life like to a man still getting used to a high dry perch? Well, sometimes, he does get a bit lonely for the camaraderie of vanished times, but they are times that vanished years ago. His evening now and then gets a bit monotonous, but he has wonderful mornings.

He goes to bed feeling good and wakes up feeling fine. Life holds a new awareness. He now has time to do all the things he's wanted to do, and he does them. He reads more books, goes to more plays.

In a way it's like being born again. Nothing is stale. Everything is new, as if he were seeing the world for the first time.

He feels no urge to join a temperance league or take up Carrie A. Nation's hatchet, but he does mildly wonder why in heaven he didn't clamber up the wagon sooner—so he'd have a longer joyride.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS FACING LIFE

More than 100,000 new patients enter mental hospitals in the United States every year. Another 15,000 to 20,000 people commit suicide. The mental patients and suicides have this in common: they are unwilling or unable to face life. What a dreadful life we must have here, when so many people each year cannot face it!

Not at all, you reply—look at the millions of people who do face life and enjoy it. There is as much happiness here as anywhere in the world—certainly more than in many countries we could name. Probably more than there has ever been for any group.

What makes the difference between those who face life and those who cannot? Do the former have all the money, the big houses, the yachts, the social prestige? Not at all—suicide and mental illness are more often found among the wealthy and elite, than among the poor. The difference is inside people not outside—in that they are not what they have.

Even in this land of free enterprise, we cannot all control what we shall or shall not have. Not everyone who would like to own a yacht can make enough money to do so. But we can all control what sort of people we are, and it is what we are that lets us face life and meet it joyfully.

Two Absurdities On The Record

By LYNN NISBET

EFFECTIVE DATE — A major absurdity in legislative practice is making laws effective upon ratification of the act. Another absurdity is the common practice of validating, post facto, unlawful acts of public officials. The two absurdities are related, because in many instances the unlawful acts were performed in good faith through ignorance on part of the officer that the law had been changed. The record is replete with instances, however, when no such excuse maintained.

Opinion is widely held that there should be constitutional ban against "upon ratification" effectiveness, and that every bill enacted into law should carry specific date of its effectiveness. For general statewide legislation this should be a minimum of 30 days, and for local acts should be extended not less than two days. And legal burden should be placed upon the legislator sponsoring the bill, or upon the official clerks of the General Assembly, to notify affected law administrative and enforcement officers of the effective date.

EMERGENCIES — In most instances the suggested 30 days notice for general and two days for local acts should be extended. Admittedly, there are emergency cases when prompt action is required. Long experience as an observer of legislative process convinces your reporter that often these emergencies are deliberately created, especially in the area of locals. Also in numerous cases county and town officials have acted on basis of a telephone call that a law had been passed (meaning it had been given favorable vote in both branches of the Legislature) when technically it was not "ratified" (by signatures of presiding officers) until two or three days later. Yet the act itself stated it was effective on and after ratification.

NOTARIES — These observations are timely because of the hassle which developed last week upon discovery that an obscure and poorly identified act of the 1959 General Assembly apparently affected the tenure of notaries public. Actually, the 1959 act did not change the term of validity of a notary public commission, which has long been and still is for two years. The recent act simply spelled out that in computing time the date of the commission should count for one day, and it would expire at midnight of the day before that anniversary two years later.

The General Statutes Commission sponsored the bill in an effort to cure the practice of notaries public "fudging" a day on their authority. To make the point clearer, let's take one year instead of two. A commission that was effective on January 1, 1959, for one year would expire at midnight of December 31,

1959. To carry over another day, into another year, obviously would be illegal. (There remains the question of whether the two year tenure of notaries should date from the signing of their commission by the Governor, or from date of their "Qualification" before the clerk of superior court. That has nothing to do with the fact that January 1 cannot be counted but once.)

The point is, that common practice has been to count it twice, and the act spelling out the tenure of notaries public became effective "upon ratification"—at some hour of the day June 19, 1959. That meant any notary public who had a commission effective as of June 19, 1957, had no authority to act under that commission after midnight of June 18, 1959. There is real question whether such acts would have been legal with out the 1959 act, but the 1959 assembly pinpointed responsibility. Most of the trouble arises from the fact the original bill had an effective date of October 1, 1959, whereas as finally passed it was effective upon ratification.

VALIDATION — One result of this 1959 act is likely to be an avalanche of bills in the 1961, or some earlier special session, purporting to validate the acts of notaries public performed on and after June 19, 1959, on pre-emption they had authority to notarize documents under previously authentic commissions.

The post facto validation of illegal acts sometimes involves more serious problems than ratification effectiveness of laws. Millions of dollars worth of property can be involved in the validity of notary public certificates. The situation is more serious in the case of many justices of the peace who continue to perform duties after their legal authority had expired. Justices of the peace can perform marriage ceremonies. Nearly every session of the General Assembly has bills— which usually are enacted into law—validating JP actions performed without legal authority. In most instances these JP validations are necessary to protect innocent parties to a marriage and to remove the stigma of bastardy from children born to parents who in good faith thought they were legally married.

Constitutional bans of some types of special personal legislation preclude validation of one or a dozen marriages, without validating all the other acts of the JP during the same time. And that might include citations for contempt of court, which legally was not a court, or imposition of fines, as well as cloud of title on large property transfers.

These conditions could seem to justify popular belief that court reform should start at the bottom and work up, rather than hinge so much on where responsibility for rule making in the high levels should be vested.

Nazis Took Danzig Against Brave Defense

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press Staff Writer

The guns spoke at 4:47 a. m. in Danzig, putting the world at war for the second time in a generation. It was Sept. 1, 1939, and the general shots had been expected for months. Adolf Hitler was fulfilling his promise to seize Danzig back from League of Nations trusteeship for his "greater German reich."

As the ominous rumble of gunfire echoed over the stately old city, pigeons cooed from the gables of the ancient houses. Windows flew up. Hitler's storm troopers already were pasting up signs proclaiming Danzig's return to Germany.

Down in the harbor, the German cruiser Schleswig Holstein, which had slipped into port a week earlier on a "courtesy visit," was pumping shell after shell into the Westerplatte peninsula. Here the small Polish garrison in the city guarded a munitions dump. The cruiser's white hull slowly blackened as the big guns roared.

The free state of Danzig, including the city and a small surrounding area, had been created under the Treaty of Versailles after World War I at Polish insistence. It was placed under the protection of the League of Nations.

With its many towers, Renaissance buildings and its austere Marienkirche, Danzig was one of the loveliest cities in northern Europe.

There had been no mistaking the approach of war in Danzig. For weeks, straight-backed strangers with the unmistakable bearing of the German wehrmacht had been prowling the city in civilian clothes.

Barbed wire had sprouted at strategic positions. A pontoon bridge had been built over the Vistula. Communications lines were laid openly from the city to various headquarters in the surrounding countryside.

The day before it happened, more strangers appeared. The stores had been crowded all day with Germans. They had the greedy, luxury-loving glint in their eyes which bespoke the austerities of Hitler's reich even before the war. The wise Danzigers finally clamped down on the sale of coffee and other cherished items.

At the Deutches Haus, where I had been staying for nearly two months, it was hot and unusually quiet on the night of Aug. 31. The three-piece German orchestra in the hotel cafe signed off with a flourish earlier than usual and departed, never to return.

Notices were posted announcing that the sale of alcoholic drinks was being discontinued. These included two highly cherished drinks made in Danzig—goldwasser and machandel. The disappearance of whipped cream was another tell-tale sign of emergency.

Shortly before 10 p. m. that night, a German with a leathery face and a demanding voice stepped up to the night porter in the hotel and said: "Herr porter, call me promptly at 4 a. m."

He couldn't be anything but a German army officer. And his early call could mean nothing but trouble.

The streets filled quickly as the gunfire in the harbor increased. Danzig Nazis raced through the streets arresting all the Poles they could find. Polish business houses were ransacked, Polish mailboxes torn down.

But down on the Westerplatte, a long narrow peninsula on which the Poles were permitted to keep a small garrison and a munitions dump, a thin little Polish major named Henryk Sucharski was doing what he had been sent there to do.

Major Sucharski, son of a peasant family in Greboszow, Poland, had 201 men with 165 rifles, 38 revolvers, 16 heavy machine guns, 23 light machine guns, four 88 mm. mortars, two 37-mm. anti-tank guns and one three-inch field gun which really was a museum piece.

Facing him, only 700 yards away, was the Schleswig Holstein with four 11-inch guns, ten 6-inch guns and other guns of smaller calibre. In addition, the Germans had almost unlimited ground and air forces to throw against him. It was fire from the Schleswig Holstein which brought the garrison to its posts. At almost the same time, a German ground force tried to force its way into the Polish positions. Machine guns in high buildings across a canal from the garrison also opened fire. Sucharski had his hands full.

The Polish field gun was hit by a German shell after firing only 30 rounds. But Sucharski and his men repulsed the ground attack. They repulsed two more attacks at dusk.

When night fell over Danzig, Sucharski ordered some tracer bullets fired into the sky from the Westerplatte to taunt the Germans and show he was still there. Hitler had planned to take Danzig in one day. All the decorations for a celebration had been put up in the city.

For six days and nights, while their positions crumbled about them, fires burned and their communications were destroyed, Sucharski and his shrinking band held the fort.

On the seventh day, Maj. Sucharski put on his big sword, lined up 71 men who could still stand and surrendered. The other members of the garrison were dead or wounded.

The German commander was so impressed by the gallant major he allowed him to keep his sword. But Sucharski, writing an account of the action later in a German prison camp, said: "It was the most tragic moment of my life."

Tomorrow: Warsaw's ordeal.

Eisenhower And Friends Of War Years In Reunion

LONDON (AP)—President Eisenhower had a happy reunion in a reminiscing atmosphere Tuesday night with British comrades of World War II.

The President was a laughing, joking host, quickly putting at rest any tenseness that might have been felt by those of the guests who have criticized his war strategy in their memoirs.

By coincidence, the stag dinner was held on the 20th anniversary of the German invasion of Poland, which set off World War II. Eisenhower cordially greeted Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, whose critical comments nettled Eisenhower so much that he snubbed a card from Montgomery last Christmas.

When the evening was over, Montgomery left beaming and waving enthusiastically to a cheering crowd outside Winfield House, the residence of U. S. Ambassador John Hay Whitney where the dinner was held.

At dinner Montgomery sat with-in talking range of Eisenhower, just five feet across the table. What was said during the meal was not disclosed.

But Eisenhower was in high spirits and in no mood to raise past antagonisms.

He placed in an honored seat at his left Field Marshal Viscount Alanbrooke, who also has had a few criticisms of his wartime leadership. Alanbrooke was Britain's top commander during the war.

Field Marshal Earl Alexander, commander of Allied ground forces in North Africa and later in Italy during the war, sat at Eisenhower's right.

Wearing dinner jacket and black tie, the President greeted each of the 25 British guests at the door.

The President put his hand under 84-year-old Sir Winston Churchill's elbow and led the party into a large foyer for a group picture.

When the photographers crowded around for a closeup, Macmillan seemed momentarily startled. But Eisenhower was amused and told the prime minister, "Now you can see the whites of their eyes."

The President then assisted Churchill to his feet and stood aside to let the aging statesman lead the way into the dining room.

Whitney sat opposite the President, with Churchill on the ambassador's right.

Says Mrs. Khrushchev A Delightful Hostess

COON RAPIDS, Iowa (AP)—An Iowa farmer who has visited twice at the home of Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev says the wife of the Soviet leader is a gracious, delightful hostess.

Roswell Garst, whose flourishing business is producing and selling hybrid seed corn, will get a return call from the Khrushchev family this month at his modern, central Iowa farm.

Rambling like his farm, Garst told today of an evening at the Khrushchev villa, on his first visit in 1955 when he was selling seed corn.

"I had dinner at their home," he said. "One of the daughters—in her 40s) was there. She was as gracious as her mother. I think she was the older one because Mrs. Khrushchev didn't speak English then, and neither did this daughter, but the younger one (Julia, 30) was studying it."

"Mrs. Khrushchev showed me her garden and the trees around their house. She loves to garden, but I wouldn't say she was the outdoor kind. "She impressed me as a normal housewife," Garst said. "I don't notice too much, I'm just a farmer."

Does Mrs. K. keep her own garden like Mrs. Garst? "Oh no. She doesn't do her own. They are way out of our class," said Garst, reputed to be millionaire.

He described Mrs. K. as about 5 feet 2 inches tall and farm-fed healthy—actually not unlike Mrs. Garst.

"Mrs. Garst never got to meet Mrs. Khrushchev. When we were there last year Mrs. Khrushchev was away with her daughter who was having a baby, I think the younger one."

Does Mrs. Khrushchev talk and joke with her strongman husband? "Well she didn't talk as much as she probably would have liked. When men who like to talk as well as myself and Mr. Khrushchev get going, nobody else has a chance."

Mrs. Khrushchev is a sparkling conversationalist and now speaks English, he said. Garst said he and his wife would like to show some Midwest hospitality for the whole Khrushchev family and are particularly counting on Mrs. K.

Sees 'Dogfights' For Helicopters

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—Helicopters will stage dogfights in future wars just like fighter planes did in past conflicts, an Army aviation leader said Tuesday.

Brig. Gen. Ernest P. Easterbrook, commander of the Army Aviation Center at Ft. Rucker, Ala., told the Army-Navy Instrumentation Symposium here helicopters will be used increasingly because of their ability to fly low enough to escape radar detection.

Since one helicopter is the best defense against another one, Gen. Easterbrook said, the rotor-driven craft will be armed and used in dogfights.

Convicted For Game Violations

Several game-law violators charged with fishing without a license, were convicted by local Justices of the Peace recently.

Those convicted include: Lewis Johnson of Robersonville, paid $3.50 court costs; L. F. Lane of Robersonville, fine of $10 suspended on payment of $9.50 court costs; Herbert Johnson of Robersonville, paid court costs of $9.50; Jasper Williams of Robersonville, fine of $10 suspended on payment of $9.50 court costs; and Eddie Harrison of Route 1, Troy, paid $9.50 court costs.

Herbert Johnson, Lewis Johnson, Williams, and Lane were tried before Magistrate Luther Moore.

Harrison was tried before Magistrate Frank Harrington.

Boy Trapped By Hole In His Resk

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP)—Seven-year-old Ted Jensen was called to the blackboard by his teacher on the first day of school.

He didn't move.

Mrs. Julia Hladek, second grade teacher, investigated.

It took police and fire rescue workers 15 minutes to free Ted's little finger from a hole in his desk.

Blind Woman's Cooking Skill Is Being Shared

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — In the darkened world of the blind, simple explanations of the sighted often prove to be major stumbling blocks.

For instance, how would a blind housewife follow a recipe: "Keep in oven until a golden brown," or "cook custard until it coats a spoon."

That's why Mrs. Frank W. Ferrara decided to devote her time to sharing her kitchen knowledge with other blind homemakers. Her recipe book, "Grade One and a Half," has gone through 12 editions in Braille by Braille Institute.

Now she is at work on another cookbook, this one specializing in health foods and diet, which will be for the use of the sighted as well as the blind.

One section of her cookbook is devoted to practical suggestions for the blind homemaker, showing ways other than by physical sight that the blind cook may learn how to prepare foods in mixing bowls.

Special attention is directed to oven menus and one-dish menus, which are popular with blind cooks.

Mrs. Ferrara presented her first cookbook to Braille Institute as a gift to help others. The two-volume book, stresses nutrition and diet recipes, which Mrs. Ferrara became interested in while cooking for her husband, who is diabetic.

Mrs. Ferrara's spotless kitchen is equipped with an automatic stove, with notched knobs and dials to tell temperature.

Although completely blind, Mrs. Ferrara, besides doing all her own cooking, does her own housework, including washing and ironing. At present she is learning to sew.

New Language In State Mottos

CHICAGO (AP) — Hawaii's statehood brings a new language to the list of those used for official state mottos.

The island state's motto in Hawaiian is "Ua Mau Ke Ea O Ka Aina I Ka Pono." It means, "The life of the land is perpetuated in righteousness."

English and Latin are the languages most used for state mottos, but a few states have chosen other tongues to say what they mean, according to the Book of the States.

California, famed for its 1849 Gold Rush, has a one-word motto, the appropriate Greek word "Eureka" (I have found it).

Minnesota's French motto is "L'Étoile du Nord" (The Star of the North).

Montana, using Spanish, says "Oro y Plata" (Gold and Silver).

The only American Indian motto is Washington's "Al-ki," which means "Bye and Bye."

Sailors Turned To Air Force

OMAHA (AP) — A dozen members of the 1959 graduating class from the U.S. Naval Academy have found the quickest way to become admirals is to join the Air Force.

The 12, after graduation, were commissioned second lieutenants in the Air Force and assigned to the Strategic Air Command Atlas Missile Squadron at Offutt Air Force Base here.

Then Nebraska Gov. Ralph Brooks commissioned each an admiral in the Nebraska Navy. A Nebraska "admiral" is on a par with a Kentucky "colonel."

Trigger Trouble Wounded Two

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Two brothers-in-law were wounded in the same hand, by the same gun, on the same day.

Dale Shipman suffered a bullet wound in his left hand while cleaning a .25 caliber automatic pistol.

Six hours later, George Heuthington decided he would finish cleaning the gun. Another cartridge exploded, wounding Heuthington's left hand.

Planted Things, Grew Turtles

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — The John Simco family planted the 30 little things in the back yard, watered them a couple of times and—guess what grew—turtles.

That's right. Mrs. Simco took the 30 small eggs her teen-aged daughter, Joan, found during a mid-June vacation in Wisconsin and planted them.

The incident became a family joke, except to son Jimmy, 12, who displayed a faith not shared by his elders.

Last week's hot weather set Mrs. Simco to thinking. "With all the 95-degree weather and the hot sun, all I could think of was fried eggs. I finally dug up one of the eggs last Friday and cracked it. There was a live baby turtle inside."

The first born died. But Saturday eight turtles climbed out of the sand and Sunday there were six more.

Jimmy took the creatures down to the Illinois River where they appeared right at home.

"I sure wish we could have kept them," he said. "They'd make keen pets."

Mrs. Simco was content to let things be. "Wouldn't that have been lively?" she said. "Fourteen pet snapping turtles."

Tripp Played On Undeclared Team Stewart Tripp, Ayden football coach, has had a colorful coaching background at his high school alma mater.

He started at Ayden using the power-laden single wing but followed the modern trend and shifted over to the T which he uses now.

Tripp was an outstanding player in his college days at East Carolina College. He has distinction of playing center on the only undefeated team in East Carolina College history.

A large scoreboard and starters tent are just a couple of the developments for the big Labor Day weekend golf tournament, slated to get underway Saturday.

Simon Moye, tournament chairman, and his committee, composed of Erskine Duff, Lucian Bryan, and Bob Powell, have done a good job in promoting the event.

The tournament is gaining popularity each year. The late W. S. Moye donated a cup in 1953 which is still passed along to the winners.

Moye indicates that USGA rules will apply in the tournament and winter rules will be played.

Braves, Dodgers, Lose In NL Race; Tigs Halt Sox

By ED WILKS You'd think those Los Angeles Dodgers have a mental block when it comes to closing in on the National League lead.

Start in May. They were tied for first in mid-month, then lost five in a row and fell to fourth. It took 'em more than a month to get within a game of the top on June 28 after winning nine of 10. Then they lost four out of five.

They were only a half-game shy at the first All-Star game break. Then they lost five out of seven. Twelve days later, they were just a half-game behind only to lose three out of four.

Now they've missed again. After winning four of five, including two out of three from San Francisco, they had a chance to close within a half-game of the idle first-place Giants last night.

The Giants made hay all around. Philadelphia cracked third-place Milwaukee 5-3, on pitcher Don Cardwell's two-run homer in the ninth. That left the Braves three games behind and just a half-game ahead of Pittsburgh's Pirates, whose game with Cincinnati was rained out.

In the American League, Detroit's Jim Bunning blanked Chicago 4-0, cutting the White Sox edge over rain-riddled Cleveland to five games. New York beat Baltimore 5-0 and Washington defeated Boston 7-4.

Jackson, 28, a right-hander with only a 51-50 record in the majors, upped his career record against the dodgers to 12-5 while handing them their fifth shutout. He walked two, struck out four for a 12-12 season mark.

The Cards had only four hits, but two were home runs. Ken Boyer's 26th, a second-inning shot that extended his hitting streak to 20 games, ended Johnny Podres' winning string at four. Podres (12-8) also gave up Alex Grammas' third homer in the fourth inning and a double in the sixth by Don Blasingame, who stole third and scored on Grammas' squeeze bunt.

The other Cardinal hit, a seventh-inning single by Bill White, was off reliever Stan Williams. Don Drysdale pitched the ninth for the Dodgers, fanning White to give the Dodger staff a total of 892, bettering their own NL strike-out record of 891 set in 1957.

Cardwell, who had managed just one hit in 43 at bats this year, discarded his regular 30-ounce bat, picked up a 40-ounce cannon and tagged Bob Buhl's first pitch for the tie-breaking homer at Milwaukee. His only other home run in the majors came when he was a rookie in '57.

The big right-hander, now 9-7 with his fourth straight victory, allowed only six hits, including Ed Mathews' 36th home run and Joe Adcock's 22nd.

Buhl (11-9) had a two-hit shut-out until the sixth, when the last place Phils scored three runs, two on Gene Freese's triple.

Ayden Expects Better Things From 1959 Eleven

By JOHNNY HUDSON Reflector Sports Editor

Coach Stewart Tripp of Ayden was beginning to get the feeling that "he had been knocked down and stomped on" last fall as his inexperienced griders had their bumps in posting only one win and a tie during a long and dry fall.

Tripp, beginning his fourteenth season as head of Ayden football, is hoping that things can't be much worse as he makes preparation for another season.

On paper, the Ayden club appears much stronger than the 1958 team but Tripp is not taking anything for granted as he still recalls the quick turn of events last fall.

Opening with a young team, but spiced with six seniors, Tripp felt that his club would have a respectable season—not by any means the worst in his career. But fate was against the Ayden team.

Lightning hit in the opening game and there was no convincing Tripp that it doesn't strike twice. After a couple of weeks, three seniors were on the sidelines with injuries and several other underclassmen starters had joined them.

Before the season was over, he had lost the whole left side of the line and was looking for his fourth quarterback of the season.

Such was the story in 1958. Another season is ready to unfold for his 30-man squad and Tripp crosses his fingers when saying he could have a pretty good season providing no serious injuries pile up.

The strength of the Ayden 1959 machine may lie in the backfield. Back to bolster the club is Dennis Mills, a hard-running fullback. Tipping the scales at only 160, Mills is considered the backbone of the team. "He is fast, runs hard, and is a good defensive man," states Tripp.

Slated to aid Mills on offense are a couple of veteran halfbacks, Mac Tripp and J. D. Willoughby. Both are light at only 145 but have speed and experience, and are capable of providing plenty of outside trouble for the opposition.

The duo are juniors and Tripp was a starter last season while the latter was a member of the defensive unit.

Vital Position The quarterback slot is still a question mark but the Ayden mentor feels that things should run a little smoother here this season. A couple of sophomores, Tommy Dunn and William Edwards, will get the call here and both have "great potentials," says the East Carolina College graduate.

Dunn saw some action last season and is regarded as a "good thinker" by his coach. Edwards, 20 pounds heavier than Dunn, has the better passing arm of the two.

Sheridan Rutledge, a senior and starter last season, will man one of the flanks for the Ayden club along with Ted Norris, a rugged 175-pound junior. Backing these two will be three hopefuls, Willie Harrington, David McGlohorn and Emmitt Gibson.

Rayton Byrd, the largest man of the squad at 180, will team with Willis Manning, a first year man, at the tackle slots. Byrd is making the switch from guard while Manning is playing the pigskin sport for the first time.

Backing them will be Larry Brown, Kenneth Jolly, Tommy Pittman, Tommy Jordan, and Ray Craft.

The starting guard slots seem safe in the hands of Donald Cannon and Hubert Jolly, junior and sophomore respectively. Cannon, a 155 pounder who likes to rack, was a starter last season until receiving a broken arm. He may be the stalwart in the Ayden forward wall.

Also battling for the guard slots are Robert Cannon, Billy Jones, Brunson Tripp, starting center last season, and Artie McGlohorn.

Trying to break into the veteran backfield corps will be Jesse McGlohorn, Nolan Norman, Charles Skinner, and Rudolph Cannon.

Plenty Of Speed Summing up his 1959 team, Tripp cites that it will be one with plenty of speed but lacking in size. "We will be able to move fast but will be outweighed by almost everyone that we play. On defense, this will probably hurt us considerably during the first part of the season."

"Our line is a question mark. We have a fair first team but depth is a problem as always. If we don't have any hard luck with grades and injuries, we could have a fair season."

The opener for Ayden is just a couple days off as they launch their season Friday night against a strong Havelock outfit in Ayden. Ayden fans may not see a world-beater this fall but the season shapes up as one with plenty of action, and checking Tripp's record, they can expect an aggressive outfit.

VETERAN COACH—Stewart Tripp begins his fourteenth season as head of Ayden football forces. He has five conference crowns to his record.

U.S. Continues To Rack Up Pan-American Medals

CHICAGO (AP)—The track and field phase of the third Pan-American Games ends today, but not the crunching United States' victory march which in five days of competition has produced 33 gold medals for Uncle Sam.

As the U.S.A.'s Olympic-pointing track squad seeks a last batch of titles in a seven-even program in Soldier Field, an equally powerful American swimming legion gets down to championship action in the spanking new Portage Park pool.

The one-sidedness of this 10-day Western Hemisphere athletic carnival is underscored by the fact that, beyond the United States, the only other gold medal winners have been Cuba, with two, and West Indies, Argentina, Mexico and Chile with one each. There may be a few rays of Latin American sunshine in today's skirmishing.

In track and field, defending champion Adhemar Ferreira da Silva is favored to win the hop-step-and-jump; the West Indies may upset the U.S.A. in the 1,600 meter relay; and Walter Lemos of Argentina is a strong contender in the marathon.

In swimming, Cuba's Manuel Sanguly seems a cinch to register the only non-U.S.A. title in the 200-meter breaststroke.

In tennis, Chile's Luis Ayala meets Canada's Bob Bedard for the men's singles title, while the U.S.A.'s pro-minded Althea Gibson, prancing out of retirement, faces Yolanda Ramirez of Mexico, for the women's crown.

The U.S.A.'s powerful basketball team seeks its fourth triumph without defeat against El Salvador (0-3), while Canada (1-2) meets Puerto Rico (2-1).

The boxing competition finds the U.S.A. and Argentina each sending eight scrappers into semi-final battling.

As the U.S.A. completes its ramp in track and field in huge Soldier Field where the blazing Pan-American torch blows out next Monday, Coach Jack Werner is downright embarrassed over his squad's almost complete domination of the games.

"And we're doing this without several great athletes who will be contenders for the Olympic Games in Rome next year," said Werner.

Paced by world shotput champion Parry O'Brien and steeple-chaser Phil Coleman, the U.S.A. grabbed five more track gold medals Tuesday night. Three American women won titles, including Lucinda Williams, the flash from Tennessee State, whose 200-meter triumph had her a double sprint winner; broad jumper Anne Smith; and high jumper Ann Flynn.

O'Brien and Coleman hung up impressive new Pan-Am records, 62-5 1/2 in the shotput and 8:56.4 in the 3,000-meter steeplechase. Miss Smith notched a meet mark with an 18-9 3/4 broad jump.

In all, the U.S.A. now has won 14 of the 16 men's events and 7 of the 9 women's events, setting 11 new meet records for men and 4 for women.

However, there was a little change of pace Tuesday night as George Kerr, Big Ten star from the University of Illinois, led a 1-2-3 sweep for the West Indies. Berta Diaz won the 80 meters women's hurdles in a record 1:1.2 time.

Bucs Brave Hot Weather

East Carolina College gridgers, braved the hot weather once again yesterday, and raced through two more practice drills with the work becoming a little rougher.

Henry Kwiatkowski and Walkie Hanford let the weather get the best of them yesterday morning and Kwiatkowski, the veteran tackle, was missing from afternoon drills.

Coach Jack Boone spent both sessions working on offensive patterns yesterday and they went over individual drills with the backfield in the afternoon session.

Coach Bill McDonald had little mercy on his linemen as they spent most of the last drill in contact work, going over blocking patterns and working on two on one drills.

Some scrimmage work was expected today or tomorrow as the Bucs entered their third day of work.

Moses Crutchfield, North State Conference representative and sports writer with the Greensboro Daily News, was in the East Carolina camp yesterday afternoon and was slated to remain over for today's drills.

TOUGH SADDLE

By MATT STUART

© By Matt Stuart, 1959; from the Dodd, Mead & Co. novel; distributed by King Features Syndicate.

CHAPTER 25

ON THE wide slope of the Saddleback Hills, two men were going about business of their own, one moved by the drive of his own convictions, the other following orders from higher authority.

The first of these, Frank Dalmar, at his camp in the timber pocket, had awakened and left his blankets and shivered through the first chill morning moments until he had his fire going and his coffee and bacon cooking. The hot food and drink warmed and comforted him and drove out the worst of the dregs of physical discomfort.

After stamping down the coals of his fire, he brought in his horse, saddled it, then circled back and up to the same observation point he had used yesterday afternoon and evening. Here he settled down to another stage of patient waiting.

Farther down in the timber, Wiley Goss stirred and awoke under the scanty cover of his saddle blanket. He had neither fire nor food to ease his discomfort, and a sour venom lay in him. In saddling his horse, he lashed the animal around with a heavy hand.

His orders were to search these hills for Frank Dalmar, and if he found him, to bring him back to Double Diamond. Even if, to do this, it became necessary that he clout Frank over the head. Such had been old Jonas Dalmar's words, his order.

No Jove was lost between Frank Dalmar and Wiley Goss. Toward Goss, Frank's attitude had ever been one of blunt dislike and open contempt. As though, Goss had often savagely thought, he were something vastly inferior—something far down the human scale.

So, Goss vowed, nothing would suit him better than cause to translate. Jonas Dalmar's order literally. He'd hugely enjoy clubbing Frank down, giving him a physical going-over.

In fact, he'd even more have liked an order to finish Frank on sight. To draw a bead on him and put a Winchester slug between his shoulders. For it was indicative of the true mental and moral make-up of Wiley Goss that this was how the picture of striking at anyone always framed up in his mind—seeing himself in the act of planting a bullet between their shoulders.

Like he had with Nels Madison. Like he had with that old fool, Packy Malone. Goss had had to shoot Packy through the head, because Packy through the head, because Packy through the head, because Packy through the head, because Packy through the head.

Wiley Goss was proud of that shot, but not so much so of the job he'd done on Nels Madison. After all, when you had a chance at a man with a back near as broad as a door, at less than two hundred yards, with that man standing still and you shooting from a rest, there was little excuse for not killing instead of merely wounding. With Nels Madison, decided Goss, he'd been too sure of himself, and so gone a little careless.

In saddle, Wiley Goss set his horse to the upward climb. He had no particular plan for locating Frank Dalmar, if indeed Frank was any place in these hills. It had to be just a matter of prowling and looking, hoping to cut Wiley's trail somewhere. And this he did, so shortly after the thought came to him, he over-ran the sign before the significance of it struck home.

He cut back and from the saddle studied the hoof marks in the soft mat of duff and mold under the timber. Quite correctly he read this hoof sign as having been made late yesterday afternoon.

He followed the sign. It led him upward and at a slant to the south. It struck a rut through the open of one small, narrow meadow then moved into the timber again.

A little farther along he hauled up, alert and doubly watchful. In a thin, faint drift, the tang of cooling wood smoke hung in the timber. Watchfully, Goss moved slowly on, wolf-wary now and wolf-wary cruel, all his hunting instincts fully at work.

Above and to his right, a break in the run of the slope suggested a pocket of some sort, and it was from her the drift of smoke came.

Goss sent his horse to the edge of the break, and in the pocket beyond saw a frugal camp. There was a heap of blankets, carelessly tumbled. On a nearby limb hung a once white flour sack, holding a cache of food.

And there was the small, ash grayed circle where a camp fire had burned. From this the faint and fast dying drift of smoke filtered. At the edge of the ash were a frying pan and a blackened coffee pot.

These, Wiley Goss eyed avidly, and when he sent his horse slowly up to the fire and found neither sound nor movement anywhere near, he dropped from his saddle, caught up the coffee pot.

The coffee quenched Wiley Goss's morning thirst, but now hunger was awake and clamoring, and sight of the partly chilled bacon grease in the frying pan sharpened his need. But animal caution subdued this temptation.

To build up the fire again might well attract attention and warn off Frank Dalmar. Besides, the fact that the coffee had still held warmth and that the grease in the frying pan had not fully hardened, told that Frank was not long gone. The trail was fresh, and now was the time to follow it.

Goss was certain this was Frank's camp. All logic pointed that way with even the blankets adding proof. For Goss himself had slept under identical ones in the Double Diamond bunkhouse; gray-brown blankets, with two broad, black stripes running across the middle of them.

Goss made further survey of the camp. A trampled area showed where a horse had been picketed through the night, while the route Frank had left by this morning was a well marked trail, hoof sign showing that

Some Changes Made In Waterfowl Regulations

RALEIGH — Tarheel hunters face a reduction in both bag limits and hunting season for migratory waterfowl, Wildlife Commission Director Clyde Patton announced recently.

Frank had ridden both in and out of camp along it. Along with other thoughts, Wiley Goss had wondered how it would be when he finally came up with Frank. How would Frank react to the word that his father had ordered him home? Would he listen willingly, or would he resist?

All signs pointed to the latter attitude. For, reasoned Goss, he wouldn't have pulled out in the first place if he had any idea of returning.

Furthermore, Frank was armed, a fact which had to be considered carefully. The smart move, reasoned Wiley Goss, on coming up with Frank, was to get a gun on him first and hold him under the drop while giving him the word. Then, if he wouldn't listen to reason, persuade him according to Jonas Dalmar's orders by laying a gun barrel across his head.

High up along the aspen and cherry brush tinted crest of the Saddlebacks, Link Asbell was beginning to feel that he'd made this early morning ride for nothing. He saw now that it was pretty much a useless thing to hope to locate anyone riding through the timber.

Musing on this fact, Asbell spun up a cigarette, lit it and dragged smoke deep into his lungs. And then, from an easy slouch in his saddle, he came abruptly high and alert, standing straight legged in his stirrups.

The full focus of his attention on the rider who moved out of the timber into a small meadow that held a cattle trail. This the rider was following.

To Asbell, recognition was immediate. There was no mistaking that strangely built figure, either afoot or in the saddle, Wiley Goss!

"Here was what he had vowed to do, the thing that had brought him into these hills. His finger tightened on the trigger. . . . The story reaches high tension here tomorrow.

Waterfowl hunters will be permitted 50 days of hunting this year, with three ducks daily and six in possession; last year better breeding success allowed a 60-day season with four and eight bag limits.

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which maintains an annual waterfowl inventory through bird banding and nesting ground counts, sets a framework from which states may choose hunting seasons. Two alternatives were offered this year, Patton said. Atlantic Flyway states could accept a 40-day season with four and eight birds, or the 50-day season with three and six. The Wildlife Resources Commission chose the longer season with reduced limit, during a meeting here a month ago.

"The longer, 50-day season will not only afford more days for ducks, but more days when both ducks and geese can be taken," Patton pointed out.

A longer season is being permitted on geese (except snow geese) and brant. This will begin at sunrise on November 10, and closes at sunset on January 8. Two geese will be allowed daily with four in possession. Six brant daily and in possession are permitted this year, according to Patton. Including the opening day, hunting is permitted from sunrise to sunset. No Sunday hunting is allowed in North Carolina.

Opening day for ducks and coots will be November 20, with shooting beginning at noon on these species. Except on opening day, ducks and coots may be hunted from sunrise to sunset, ending January 8. Three coots may be taken daily, with six in possession.

A hunter may have in possession only one canvasback, red-head, or ruddy duck. The daily bag limit and the possession limit may include only two wood ducks. The daily bag and possession limit may include one hooded merganser.

A 30-day season on Wilson's snipe was allocated to North Carolina this year, with shooting beginning at sunrise on November 26 and extending to sunset on December 25. A bag and possession limit of eight snipe has been set for 1959.

Bethel, Scotland Neck To Get New Phone Numbers

Representatives of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company are scheduled to visit subscribers in Scotland Neck and Bethel in the next few days to begin placing new numbers on telephone dials in those exchanges.

Since all telephone numbers in the two towns are scheduled to change on September 20, at 2:01 a.m., it is necessary to change the number appearing on the telephone instrument.

After the new numbers have been placed on the telephone, temporary stickers bearing the old numbers will be placed over the new numbers, to remain in use until 2:01 a.m. Sunday, September 20. At that time subscribers are asked to remove the temporary stickers and begin using the new numbers.

If necessary, the dials themselves will be changed from one having only numerals on its face to one having both letters and numerals.

E. T. Meeks of Tarboro, area manager for the Telephone Company, in making this announcement, stated that the company will issue a new directory in connection with the number change. Users are cautioned not to begin using the new book until September 20. It will be very important, however, for every telephone user

Another Rise In Crime For U. S. During Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crime in the United States increased 9.3 per cent in 1958 over 1957.

The year's crime clock indicated: A murder every 64.2 minutes. A forcible rape every 36.1 minutes. A robbery every 7 minutes. A car stolen every 1.9 minutes. A burglary every 46.4 seconds.

Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover jointly reported today there were an estimated 1,553,922 crimes classified as very serious offenses last year compared with 1,442,285 in 1957.

There were increases in all of the individual classifications as follows: murder, 8,182 in 1958 and 8,027 in 1957, an increase of 1.9 per cent; forcible rape, 14,561 and 12,886, 13 per cent; robbery, 75,247 and 66,843, 12.7 per cent; aggravated assault, 113,530 and 110,672, 2.6 per cent; burglary, 679,787 and 603,707, 12.6 per cent; larceny over $50, 391,550 and 354,972, 10.3 per cent; auto theft, 270,965 and 265,178, 2.2 per cent.

A crime covered in the index was committed every 20.3 seconds last year.

Youths under 18 represented only 12.1 per cent of all persons arrested. They accounted, however, for 64.1 per cent of all arrests for auto theft, 49.9 per cent of those for burglary, 48.5 per cent of those for larceny, 30.9 per cent of those for receiving or possessing stolen property and 22.8 per cent of those for robbery.

Crime increased more than five times as fast as the population. There were 896.9 serious crimes committed for every 100,000 population, or one such crime for every 111 citizens.

For every 100 persons formally charged and held for prosecution, 67 were convicted.

While crimes of all types occurred throughout the year, the report said there were some rather definite seasonal patterns. Aggravated assaults, for example, occurred with greater frequency during the warmer months of the year. The same was true of forcible rapes. Negligent manslaughter, which are mostly traffic deaths, tended to rise during the last quarter of the year.

TV Screen May Replace Future Instrument Panel

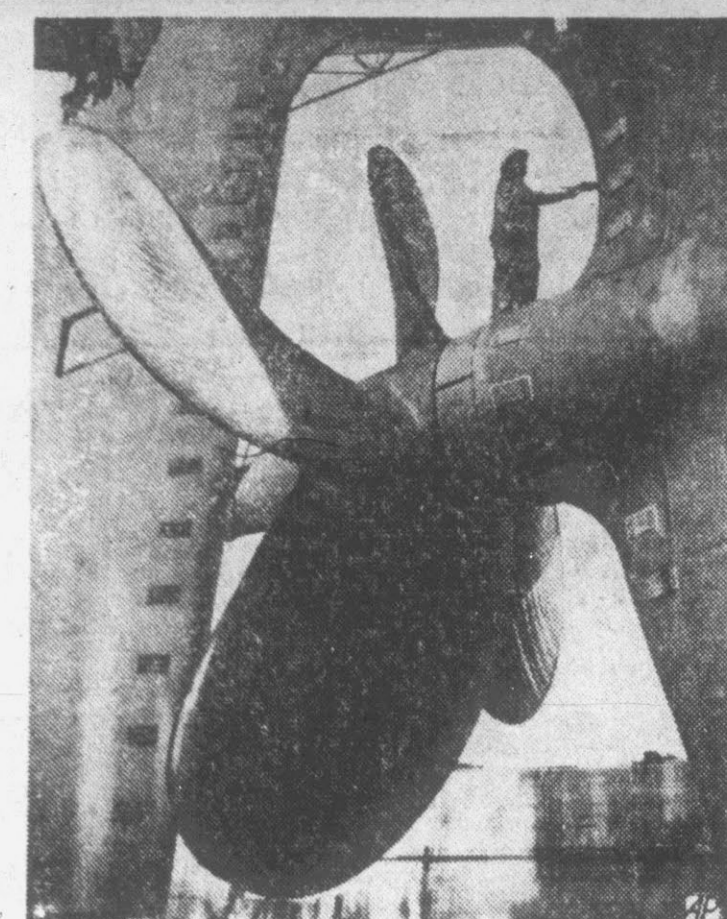

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—A television screen may replace the instrument panel in the airplane of the future, delegates to the Army-Navy instrumentation symposium were told Tuesday.

Douglas Aircraft Co. of Los Angeles has two such devices among displays at the symposium.

One, being built for the Navy's A2F jet fighter, has an upper screen showing that looks like a highway. The pilot follows the hills and curves on the simulated highway to stay on course. A lower screen shows a tiny airplane moving across a map, allowing the pilot to check his position at any time.

A second cockpit features a glass screen on which is projected a picture of the horizon and the earth. The pilot can follow the picture even in zero visibility.

Douglas' chief equipment engineer, A. M. Mayo, said the second cockpit will be operational in the mid 1960s.

Specially Scheduled Classes Are Offered

Fifty-three courses scheduled off the campus have taken advantage of the opportunity to study at the college at hours suited to their needs.

Fourteen departments of instruction are Art, Business, Education, English, Geography, Health and Physical Education, Home Economics, Humanities, Industrial Arts, Mathematics, Psychology, Science, and Social Studies.

Courses range from the freshman to the graduate level. They cover such diverse subjects as research in art, business forecasting, speech development and correction, creative writing, logic, algebra, geography of world problems, clinical psychology, shop in industrial arts, colonial, social and cultural history, and life saving. Methods courses are offered in most departments. All courses carry college credit.

Registration dates at the college are Saturday, September 5, for Freshmen and Monday, September 7, for upperclassmen and graduate students.

Those who wish further information about these special courses may obtain it from Vice President and Dean of Instruction Leo W. Jenkins, East Carolina College, Greenville, North Carolina.

Firemen Called To Burning Car

Greenville firemen answered a call to 225 West 10th St. yesterday when a car, owned by a local auto dealer caught fire.

Fire officials said the small blaze started from a short-circuit in the electrical system under the hood of the vehicle.

Slight damage was reported by firefighters who extinguished the fire with water.

Girl Receives Elks Scholarship

Judy Carol Leonard of Rocky Mount, who will enter East Carolina College as a freshman student, is the recipient of a $100 scholarship presented by the Rocky Mount Lodge No. 1038 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

Miss Carol, a recent graduate of the Rocky Mount Senior High School, won in her senior year the "Most Valuable Student" award. At East Carolina she plans to take courses in pre-nursing and to specialize in physical therapy.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Leonard of 923 Falls Road, Rocky Mount.
