Commissioners Ask Listings Of Tax Delinquents

By HENRY HOWARD Reflector Staff Writer

In its regular November meeting this morning, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners instructed the county's Tax Supervisor and Tax Collector Robert S. Moye to periodically provide the Board with a list of persons having tax debts of more than five years old.

The action was taken after a discussion of the practicality of instituting action to collect delinquent taxes. The Board also studied the county auditor's reports for past years before handing out its instructions to Moye.

Tentative plans are to begin action for collection of taxes unpaid for five years. A letter received by Commission Chairman Robert L. Martin announced that the Veterans Commission has approved the establishment of a district office here.

According to the letter, the office will be ready for operation by Jan. 2. It is expected that the office will be located in the old mental health building behind the jail.

The Commissioners voted to send requests to both the Cherry Point air station and Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro to seek a remedy to the explosions resulting from aircraft breaking the sound barrier over Pitt County.

All the Commissioners reported there have been numerous complaints from Pitt citizens. Complaints ranged from the explosions rattling windows of farmhouses to their "shaking the court house."

In other action, the Board voted to consider the "practicality and feasibility" of the installation of an elevator in the court house. Along with County Attorney W. W. Speight, the Building and Grounds Committee will study the matter.

The Commissioners approved, at the recommendation of County Auditor H. R. Gray, the investment of $300,000 of county funds in U. S. Treasury notes or "whatever else, in anything, seems best."

Gray reported to the Board that over $17,000 was earned by similar investments last year. This morning's approved investment for 90 days and will come from Pitt's current bank account of more than a half-million dollars.

Moye's report showed the Commissioners that tax collections from July 1, through October amounted to a total of $851,327.06. Collections for October alone were listed as $291,437.27. The figures showed that collections are running some $75,000 ahead of last year's totals through October.

The Board adopted a resolution requesting the N. C. State Highway Commission to assume maintenance of a new truck route on U. S. highway 258 through Farmville. According to highway representatives, the streets formerly used by the town as the U. S. 258 truck route will automatically become a part of Farmville's maintenance responsibility under Powell Bill funds sometime next year.

The Highway Commission reported to the Board that it is not authorized to install paving to Pitt County's new school bus garage. The Board asked for an estimate of the cost of paving the access road to the new structure which should be obtained within a few days.

Leroy C. Venters, recently resigned from the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, was commended for his services by a commission-adopted resolution.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sen. John F. Kennedy is drawing big crowds in Governor Edmund Brown's backyard. But he doesn't think other Democrats should tangle with Brown in a California primary election.

"He is a favorite son of a large state," the Massachusetts Democrat told a TV audience of the California governor Sunday. "Most leaders are reluctant to see a primary divided. He has done an excellent job as governor. He is entitled as a potentially serious candidate to have his state uncontested."

Kennedy arrived in Los Angeles Sunday for a two-day stay.

WAYNESBORO, Va. (AP) — "Things were all quiet, no moans, no groans." This was the way a 33-year-old union official described the aftermath of a crunching impact against a Virginia mountainside in which 26 persons aboard a twin-engine airliner lost their lives. He alone survived.

"I yelled to see if anyone else was alive, but no one answered," said E. Phil Bradley of Clifton Forge, Va., as he told of his 36-hour ordeal in the wilderness following the crash of the Piedmont Airlines DC3 Friday night.

He suffered a dislocated hip and minor cuts. Within a few hours after Bradley was taken to a Charlottesville hospital Sunday, 26 bodies, wrapped in tarpaulins, were laboriously carried to the summit of Bucks Elbow Mountain near Virginia's famed Skyline Drive.

Bradley, who said he noticed his watch showed 8:40 p.m. moments after the crash, was first reached at the wreck scene by Air Force Sgt. John Weis of Pittsburgh. Kennedy arrived in Los Angeles Sunday for a two-day stay.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Van Doren testified today he was given answers, and even given a regular script to memorize, when he appeared on the supposedly unrehearsed "Twenty-One" television quiz program. He said he was coached in mannerisms too.

Van Doren admitted he testified falsely last year before the New York grand jury investigating the quiz programs. He told the House investigating subcommittee "I was deeply involved in a deception."

Van Doren said he would give anything to reverse the course of his life since his big-money quiz performance three years ago. Van Doren named Albert Freedman, producer of the show, as the man who persuaded him to cooperate in rigging the show and then coached him.

A telling argument Freedman used, Van Doren said, was that as the scion of a famous literary family and a member of the Columbia University faculty, Van Doren would "increase public respect for the intellectual life, for the teaching profession" by making a good showing.

He said Freedman also told him "it was all entertainment" and coaching of contestants was routine. "Perhaps I wanted to believe it," Van Doren told the committee. "Foolishly and wrongly I persuaded myself it was all true."

Van Doren appeared before a packed audience with crowds waiting outside. This time his questions and answers were not televised, since such broadcasts are prohibited by House rules.

Van Doren started his testimony with a prepared statement telling how he was coached and given answers. He admitted he testified falsely before the New York grand jury.

Van Doren said he stood by on the Twenty-One program for several weeks without actually appearing. Finally, he said, Freedman summoned him to his apartment and took him into a bedroom. The producer told him, Van Doren went on, that Herbert Stempel, then the "champion" on the Twenty-One show, was unbeatable but that he was not an attractive contestant. He asked Van Doren, the witness continued, if he would agree to an arrangement under which he would let Stempel add to the entertainment value of the program.

Stempel was a major witness earlier before the subcommittee and the New York grand jury. He testified he was given answers and thoroughly coached for his Twenty-One appearances. Van Doren said he pleaded to be allowed to compete honestly, but was persuaded otherwise.

At first, he said, Freedman guaranteed him $1,000 winnings for appearing on one show. Ultimately Van Doren won $129,000. After his Twenty-One career he signed a $50,000 a year contract with the National Broadcasting Co. Since the question of his being in on rigged TV shows arose he has been suspended from that job.

It took Van Doren about half an hour to read his prepared statement. When he had finished, Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark) said: "I want to compliment you on this statement." And Robert Lishman, committee counsel, said he had no questions to ask because the statement in itself was "so complete" an exposure of "this whole sordid mess."

Rep. Walter Jones of Farmville gave the dedicatory address yesterday that christened Pitt County's new mental health building the Walter C. Humbert Mental Health Clinic.

Named in memory of late Dr. Humbert, Pitt County Health Director from September, 1951, to August, 1957, the new structure is situated on the 17-acre Pitt Memorial Hospital and Health Department site. Speaking to persons gathered for the ceremony, Jones described the Pitt project as "the first building in the entire state of North Carolina, to the best of my knowledge, to be built for the exclusive purpose of housing a mental outpatients' clinic."

He continued, "May this serve as a challenge to the State and Federal governments to take a deeper interest in this phase of mental health." Jones credited the man whose name the new building bears with the origination of the idea of construction of such a mental health center. "With all our pride and enthusiasm we feel today, it is tempered with sadness and regret that he is not with us to see the fulfillment of his dream," the Pitt representative told the group.

Jones' address expressed appreciation and gratitude to the donors of the property on which the new structure was built, to the Pitt Board of County Commissioners, to the Pitt Health Department, and to the Pitt Medical Society for cooperation in making the building a reality. In addition to Jones' address, Dr. M. W. Aldridge of Greenville was on hand to present the plaques to Pitt Health Director, Dr. Georgia V. Mills.

The new building was completed in 1958 and has been used for the county's mental health services since that time.

Hunting Mishap Saturday Claims Life Local Boy

Levin Eugene (Lew) Ward, Jr., 15-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Ward of Ragsdale Road, was instantly killed in a hunting accident near Keysville, Virginia, early Saturday morning.

Funeral services were conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock by his pastor, the Rev. Thomas Money, assisted by the Rev. C. C. Cribb, pastor of Greenville Pentecostal Holiness Church. Burial was in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Information received here was that Lew, Crogie Andresen and Roger Collins, III, all of Greenville, were spending the weekend on a farm at Ontario, Va. about five miles from Keysville in Charlottesville County.

The boys saw a ground hog run into a barn. Crogie crawled under the barn with a .12 gauge shot gun, according to information received from Virginia. Lew went around the other side of the barn and stooped down to look underneath. As he peered through some bushes, Crogie mistook him for the ground hog and fired. The blast struck Lew in the right side of the face and death was instantaneous.

Charlotte County is located near the North Carolina border almost due north of Henderson, N. C. No charges were brought by Charlotte County authorities. Lew was born in Washington and had been living in Greenville since 1948. He was a sophomore at Junius H. Rose High School and was a member of the Junior Varsity football team. He was a member of Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

Surviving are his parents; a brother, W. Ray Ward of the home; a sister, Susan Ward of the home; and his grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. W. Hutch Ward of Greenville, and Mrs. Mary C. Swindell of Washington, N. C.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Nehru says his government is taking all necessary steps to meet the Chinese threat along the border. He rejects suggestions India change its neutralist foreign policy. "China may be a big country but India is not small," he told 50,000 followers at a rally of his ruling Congress party Sunday. "We are not afraid. We are not weak. If our national security is challenged, it (the challenge) will be met."

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A European man and woman have been arrested in the Belgian Congo city of Stanleyville after spear and arrow fighting with police which took 20 lives and injured at least 16. The Europeans are accused of teaching revolutionary techniques to African nationalist leader Patrice Lumumba, who also was arrested.

Discussing school integration problems, Hodges said that "racial problems, prejudices and discrimination" are not confined to either the United States or the South, but "are world wide and need the attention and understanding of people everywhere."

Hodges said North Carolina's approach to the problem has been one of placing responsibility in the hands of local school boards. "So far," he said, "our North Carolina approach of moderation has operated satisfactorily; several of our cities have voluntarily accepted Negro applicants to white schools although the vast majority of the Negro children are voluntarily attending their own public schools."

Mrs. Jean Clark Named 'Breakfast Clubber Of The Year'

BREAKFAST CLUBBER OF THE YEAR . . . is Mrs. Jean Clark, center. Mrs. Polly Dall, outgoing president, and Lester Turnage, sponsor, look on.

By ROSALIE MOORE

Mrs. Jean Clark was chosen the Outstanding Breakfast Clubber of the Year Friday night at the 11th year Installation of Officers and Bosses' Night held at the Greenville Moose Lodge. She was presented a silver Paul Revere Bowl by Lester Turnage. Turnage, a sponsor of the club, enumerated the attributes necessary to win and the qualifications of Mrs. Clark.

The Credit Women's Breakfast Club entertained their bosses, members and guests at a banquet. The sponsors of the club were hosts at a Hospitality Hour preceding the banquet.

Decorations were carried out in a motif of green and gold. The head table was centered with a key arrangement, representing the Key Installation, and yellow pom-poms.

President Polly Dall presided. Song leader Elbert Bennett led the group in the opening song, "She'll Be Coming Around the Mountain." Invocation was given by L. M. Buchanan. President Dall welcomed the guests and the response was heard by Herbert W. Lee. A toast to the bosses was given by Miss Alma J. Paramore.

Awards of achievement were given by Mrs. Dot Copeland.

Those members receiving recognition for perfect attendance were Mrs. Sallie Broughton, Mrs. Jean Clark, Mrs. Dot Copeland, Mrs. Polly Dall, Mrs. Bett Gray, Mrs. Cora Powell, Mrs. Peggy Sawyer, and Miss Clara Seago.

Mrs. Catherine Walsh, Mrs. Catherine Stokes, Mrs. Mildred Porter, Mrs. Mary Seymour, Mrs. Lillian Hawkins, Mrs. Emma Schmidt, Miss Alma Paramore and Miss Marguerite Rouse.

Entertainment was given by Marie's School of the Dance and Eibert Bennett, accompanied by Mrs. Florence Scott, pianist. State president, Mildred Richardson of Greensboro, installed the new officers, using the Key Installation. Each officer was presented a gold encrusted key as she was installed.

The new officers are: Miss Clara Seago, president; Mrs. Louise Carrigan, first vice president; Mrs. Jean Clark, second vice president; Mrs. Mildred Porter, recording secretary; Mrs. Lillian Hawkins, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Peggy Sawyer, treasurer; Mrs. Dot Copeland, parliamentarian, and directors: Mrs. Hilda Jones, Mrs. Sally Broughton, Mrs. Polly Dall, Miss Alma Paramore and Mrs. Earline Coghill.

Other clubs represented were Wilson, Rocky Mount and Kinston. Special guests were Jack Berry, state sponsor of Greensboro; Mrs. Vallie Henderson, southeastern director of Raleigh; and Miss Mildred Richardson, state president. Approximately 75 attended the installation and banquet.

Following the installation, door prizes were drawn.

Egyptian Linen Lasts 2,000 Years

CAIRO (AP) — While modern Egypt has the best cotton, ancient Egypt had the best linen, or at least the toughest linen.

Recently an official of the Egyptian Department of Antiquities in Luxor came across children playing tug-of-war with an old cloth for rope. The cloth on examination was found to be 2,000 years old and had been used to wrap a mummy. It had withstood the pulling of the youngsters.

An Egyptologist recalled when the tomb of Tutankhamen was discovered 30 years ago, it was difficult to tear the cloth containing his mummy.

Linen making is one of the oldest arts practiced in Egypt. The Cairo Museum has samples belonging to the Neolithic Age dating from the Fifth Millennium B. C. — that is 7,000 years ago.

By the time of the First Dynasty (3,100 B. C.) there was little in the realm of plain weaving that is known today that was not practiced by Egypt.

The yarn was spun by hand.

mostly by women using a small spindle. The earliest looms were horizontal, but by 2,000 B. C. the upright loom was introduced.

The reigns of Thutmosis and Tutankhamen apparently saw the full development of linen manufacturing. From this period we have remarkable accordion pleatings at right angles to each other, colored linen tapestry as well as elaborate applied needle-work of the utmost refinement.

Many drawings in ancient Egyptian tombs show the methods used in treating flax and making linen. The Cairo museum contains models of looms and methods of making thread. The finest materials were the product of temple looms and were known to the classical world as byssos. These were used in mummification, for dressing god statues and garments of priests.

Check Growth Of Mildew Now

RALEIGH—This summer's hot humid weather was ideal for the growth of mildew. If you haven't checked all your winter clothes yet, take time to do it.

According to Miss Julia McIver, clothing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, you should be careful not to spread the mildew spores throughout the house. It is best to take the article outdoors and brush it. If the garment or clothing articles are washable, treat the mildew spots while they are fresh, before mold growth has a chance to weaken the fabric.

Wash mildewed article thoroughly. Dry in the sun. If stain remains treat with a chlorine or sodium perborate bleach or hydrogen peroxide.

For nonwashable articles send to the dry cleaners while stain is fresh.

Demonstration Shown Club

"Pork Around the Clock" was the demonstration used by Mrs. Sue May, Pitt Home Economics agent, at the recent meeting of the Timothy Home Demonstration Club.

Various reports were heard during the session. Mrs. Herbert Taylor presented the financial report. Devotional was given by Mrs. Lloyd Wiggins.

Hostess for the meeting was Mrs. T. G. Wall. The session was presided over by Mrs. Alton Gardner, president.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Mack Ross.

Washing Can Help Life Of Gloves

RALEIGH—Are you taking good care of your gloves? To simplify care and lessen wear there are certain rules to follow.

Miss Mary Em Lee, clothing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says that if you follow certain recommendations your gloves will last much longer.

Select gloves that fit both palm and finger length. Gloves should be chosen for the kind of wear they will get. If hands perspire freely wear fabric gloves.

When you put on your gloves, ease them on slowly. If gloves are pressed down between fingers the stitching may crack. East the fingers in first and then the thumb.

Keep the gloves in shape as you slip them on.

Between wearings store light and dark gloves in separate containers or wrappings. After storage manipulate and soften leather gloves.

Be careful about your rings. If stones of the rings are turned to palm the gloves are not strained by them.

Miss Lee recommends use of lukewarm water with a mild detergent when washing gloves. Rinse thoroughly and roll in turkish towel to remove moisture. Ease into shape by blowing into them to open fingers. Hang by wrist seams with clip clothes pins or use glove forms. Dry at room temperature.

Polish People Brave

By ROGER BABSON
 WARSAW, Poland — Warsaw is the capital of Poland, located not quite midway between Berlin and Moscow. I will not now discuss the government of Poland, although it claims to be a free democracy with officials and "parliament" elected by the people; yet 85 per cent of the property is owned by the municipality or state and practically all the people work for the government. It is much like Russia in many ways; but its people claim not to be Communists. The Polish people take part in no propaganda, but ask only to be let alone and left free to run their own affairs. They claim to be 100 per cent neutral, but surely appear friendly toward the Russians yet hate the Germans who bombed them unmercifully during World War II.

HISTORY OF POLAND

The city of Warsaw was founded in the tenth century and Sunday I attended a church dating back to 1187, although Christianity was formally introduced into Poland in 962 and was actively practiced in Warsaw in 1241 when the Polish armies repelled the Mongol hordes. In fact, the whole of Southern Europe owes its freedom to the armies of Poland. Again it was the Polish armies which stopped the Turks from overrunning Europe in the 17th century. The whole of Europe owes a great debt to the Polish people whose kings fought continual attacks from all sides. Poland has a most marvelous history; and through the centuries has enjoyed periods of peace and prosperity, enjoying the culture of science, art, and literature, starting with the great astronomer Copernicus and ending with the great pianist Paderewski.

Unfortunately, Poland was torn asunder during World War II and Hitler gave it a terrible and unnecessary beating, principally because of the large number of Jewish people who had escaped from Germany into Poland. As a result, nearly 800,000 innocent people perished in Warsaw between September 1, 1939 and January 17, 1945. This was not only the result of ruthless bombings, but of great fires and massacres, all under Hitler's directions. As a result the population of Poland dropped from 35,000,000 before World War II to about 28,000,000 in 1958.

POLISH PEOPLE CONTINUE TO BE COURAGEOUS

Notwithstanding the barbarous treatment by the Germans, Poland's people continue to be happy and courageous. The people are poor, there being very few automobiles and almost no bicycles. Living costs and taxes are high; but the people are very industrious and saving. Looking out of my hotel window this morning, I counted only three automobiles, but saw five horse-drawn wagons with the shafts made of poles cut from forests and the harnesses of the faithful horses made of worn-out iron tires from broken cart-wheels. Yet Warsaw is now mostly rebuilt and I should be proud to live in it.

Last week, in Germany, I was amazed at the energy of the Germans and noted their great activity. I wondered why their energy was not used to curb Hitler in his wickedness. It almost seems as if a vast number of Germans — in their own minds — hoped that Hitler would win. I further feel that many Germans believe another "Hitler" will arise who will have all of his energy but who will be without his sins!

Each of my readers — many of whom are loyal United States citizens — may though perhaps of German descent — must decide for himself; however, this is my reaction: Although I came to Central Europe an optimist, hoping to find some attractive German stocks and bonds to recommend, I am returning home pessimistic. The fire ignited by Emperor Wilhelm II and his Prussian followers may be yet smoldering. "Wise are those who now invest their money only in the United States of America or in Canada."

Sowing Some Seed In Distant Land

Gov. Hodges' boldest venture in his quest for new industry for North Carolina has now begun with the caravan of Tar Heels in London today and on the continent tomorrow.

Accomplishments of the industry hunters during the next two weeks may not be evident when they return to North Carolina, but the seeds of interest in Tar Heelia they sow abroad may in time bring a profitable industrial harvest to the state. Only time will tell whether it is worth the money and effort that is going into it.

Without question, there has been and still is more skepticism about this industrial safari of Gov. Hodges than any he has so far undertaken. Even the first of the series of organized trips in the quest of industry for the state was not viewed with the apprehension of this European trip. To the average Tar Heel, Europe seems a long way to go in quest of industry when there are so many areas closer home that might be further cultivated. To some extent this is reflected in the conflicting reports in recent weeks concerning the enthusiasm with which the European campaign was greeted by major businesses in the state that normally send representatives on industry-hunting excursions.

Part of the skepticism about the European trip stems from the fact that Americans are accustomed to thinking that U. S. capital traditionally goes abroad to develop industry rather than foreign capital coming to this country for the same purpose. In reality, this exporting of capital is a two-way street. Properly exploited, North Carolina may find itself equally effective in importing capital from abroad for its industrial development as it has in bringing in capital from other areas of our own country for the same purpose.

Certainly the present industry-hunt is the most imaginative so far undertaken by an imaginative governor of our state. As in other similar trips, proof of the pudding will not be in what our Tar Heel travelers bring back in their pockets, but what follows them back to North Carolina in the months or even years ahead.

They Hold Future Of Mental Health Clinic

Pitt County's Mental Health Building, dedicated yesterday afternoon, will stand as a perpetual monument to the pioneering spirit and farsighted leadership of the man in whose memory it is named, the late Dr. Walter C. Humbert.

It is the first building in North Carolina, we have been told, built specifically for the purpose of an outpatient clinic for mentally ill. In the years ahead it will prove an example that will be followed in other areas as greater emphasis is placed on preventive medicine for mental illness.

The late Dr. Walter C. Humbert who served as Pitt County's Health Director from 1953 until his sudden death in 1957, raised the county health department from a place of mediocrity to one of the outstanding county health departments in North Carolina. The Pitt County Mental Health Clinic, whose service has since been recognized as unique in North Carolina as well as in a broad area of the nation, was the brainchild of Dr. Humbert. Without his vigorous leadership, his inexhaustible energy and resourcefulness, it is unlikely that Pitt County would have its Mental Health Clinic today. It is unlikely that a broad area of Eastern North Carolina would have mental health service on the scale it does today had it not been for Dr. Humbert's leadership.

The building itself affords facilities for carrying on the work of the Mental Health Clinic, but the service in this field rendered by the clinic will rest largely in the hands of those responsible for its operation. We trust they will continue the operation of the clinic with the same energy and devotion exhibited by Dr. Humbert in bringing about its establishment.

Should We Act To Ban Strikes?

By RALPH ROBEY
 Late last week it appeared that the steel workers would be back on the job as of now. No matter when the strike ends, however, it will be months before the economy, the workers, and the companies fully recover.

The hoped for ending of the strike was the result of the injunction obtained by the Administration requiring the steel employees to return to their jobs. Under the law, sixty days after the return to work, a secret vote must be taken of the employees on the final offer of the company. If this offer is accepted, the strike is over for the duration of the contract. If the offer is voted down, the strike may be resumed twenty days later.

Should such a resumption of the strike occur it would come just as the new session of the Congress is getting under way. This would mean that there would be enormous pressure to pass some kind of law to make it impossible for the public welfare to be undermined in such a manner. Among the suggestions which would be made are:

1. Prohibit all strikes in basic industries. THIS IS UNTHINKABLE. In the first place the determination of a basic industry is not easy, and secondly, and more important, THE RIGHT TO STRIKE IS BASIC IN SO FAR AS PRIVATE INDUSTRY IS CONCERNED AND IT MUST NOT BE PROHIBITED.
2. Provide for the appointment of fact finding commissions with the authority to make recommendations. FACT FINDING COMMISSIONS TODAY DO NOT HAVE THIS RIGHT AND IT SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN TO THEM. They do not know, and

Strength In Brief For Today Opinions

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
 Collector of Beautiful Things
 A home in which I am frequently entertained is filled with beautiful things—beautiful books, antique furniture, plaques, pictures, and things artistic gathered from all parts of the world. Recently I asked the gracious man and woman who went about it to collect so many beautiful things, be on the lookout for them all the time, and visit the places where you expect to find them."

I was struck by the fact that the principle underlying this declaration is unusually applicable to the living of every-day life.

Look for the beautiful, seek it out, go where it is. This is sound advice for anyone seeking a happy life and peaceful relationships with others. Strife generally arises from a disposition to look for trouble; unkindness from refusal to tolerate the weakness of others. If we are alert for the beautiful, we shall be surprised how often we find it where we least suspect its existence. If we seek out the places where beauty is to be found, it will refresh and strengthen us and send us away with its benediction of peace.

"The neutralists have now to consider whether Communism ever really meant to accept the half-way-house neutralism experiment as a temporary expedient. Mr. Gomulka complained earlier this year that it would not be so bad if the Yugoslavs called themselves 'social democrats.' It was their claim to be inside the Communist world and yet distinct from it that was so irritating. It may take some time before the cold wind from China makes a full impact on the neutralist world. There will be no stampede towards the West, and the West, having become used to the idea of neutralism, would not want one. But there may be more floating voters at the United Nations and more understanding of the difficulties of mediation. To start with, it will be good for all concerned if neutralism ceases to be simply an international cliché." — London Times.

Other Editors Saying... Light On Outer Space

(Hertford County Herald)
 Much has been written and much has been said about the nation's space program, or lack thereof. And the more that is said and the more that is written, the harder it becomes for the average American to know what in the world is going on in this country's attempts to get outside of the world.

We cannot say how the governmental space organization should look. We don't know if the army should do this, the Air Force that, or the civilian space agency the other. We don't know if it will take ten years to get to Venus, or ten billion to hit the moon.

But one thing we know: we are not getting any enlightenment on the situation from those who are supposed to know, or who at least are charged with the responsibility of trying to find out.

There seems to be a dedicated effort going on in Washington, if not to hit the moon, at least keep Americans in a super-stellar fog when it comes to knowing what is going on.

From this fog, we discern that the most basic criticism is that which says that the national administration looks on space as primarily a budget problem. More and more we hear that this country is lagging in the "race" with Russia because of a pinch-penny attitude on the part of the administration.
 Now the last thing that should be done is for somebody to up and say: "OK, the purse-strings are off, everybody who thinks he can get into orbit, come and grab a hunk!"

On the other hand, it would seem that the least the administration could do would be to give us a fireside chat. In this chat, we should be told frankly what the administration believes to be the need and the hopes of Americans in outer space. We should be told why a country brimming with milk and money and an industrial complex that can turn out automobiles by the million, cannot turn out space vehicles with the "thrust" of those hammered out in the Soviet factory. We would imagine that if a vote were taken, nationwide, the people of this country would vote overwhelmingly to put into a program all that is necessary to keep ahead of Russians in a race to any spot, including the moon, Venus or Mars.

Somewhere between unlimited opening of the pursestrings and the present policy of checking off every space dream against a budget ledger, there is a middle ground that can give that famous American know-how and desire to win the wherewithall to make us first in space.

Somebody should bend all effort to finding that ground and finding it quickly. And that someone should candidly, and in words of not more than two syllables, tell other Americans what is going on and why.

The Buying Public Is Well Known

By ELMER ROESSNER
 Ted O. Thackrey, who has spread more l'armina' in book form in America than Dr. Charles William Elliot of Harvard, knows exactly to the fourth point beyond the decimal how likely you are to buy a set of encyclopedias at your neighborhood supermarket.

Mr. Thackrey has moved to greener pastures after selling more thousands of encyclopedias than he can count; He can count pretty good, too.

He has been a specialist in setting up deals whereby supermarkets offer encyclopedias at the rate of one volume a week. The first volume is sold for pennies and the succeeding volumes for less than $1 each.

Through experience, publishers and sellers of such sets of books have learned to evaluate their market so accurately that they are able to walk into headquarters of a supermarket chain and offer a certified check for the profits at the signing of a contract.

They can tell just how many books will be sold by the total sales volume of each market. The average total purchase has nothing to do with book sales, whether it be $10 or $20.

 But the ratio of books to total weekly sales volume is almost invariable. There is one minor modifier: encyclopedias sell somewhat better in neighborhoods where there are more children.

They know, too, just how many shoppers will buy the second volume. (The first is almost a giveaway.) And they know how many will buy the third and how many will buy the twentieth.

"It's very easy to calculate the sales," Mr. Thackrey told me. "After the second volume, there is a fall off of 4 to 5 per cent in the sales of each succeeding volume, until the middle volume, when the fall-off drops to 1 to 2 per cent in the sales of each succeeding volume, until the middle volume, when the fall-off drops to 1 to 2 per cent. The number of copies of the tenth volume sold is usually an accurate measure of the average sale of 20 volumes."

A PARTHIAN SALE
 The publishers' representatives agree to prepay freight, furnish racks, replenish stocks and take away the binders. There are usually several binders because it prevents a few more books from being sold. The stocking the next store to handle the books.

 Sales agreements provide that each supermarket must display the books so the backs catch the eye of the shopper just before she reaches the checkout counter.

There are sound reasons, Mr. Thackrey said. Shoppers don't like to buy books before they know what they'll have to spend for food; they don't like to pile other purchases on top of books. At the start, encyclopedias are an impulse item; shoppers may pick them up as a reward to themselves for keeping within their budgets.

This sales pattern is not hypothetical; hundreds of tests have shown books sell best just before the checkout. This fact reassures market operators. They can see that money for books is added spending, not taken out of food budgets. Operators have two advantages: they make a profit on the books and they are assured that buyers will return each week.

While children are an important reason for buying encyclopedias, some people appear to buy them to fill up gaps in their book shelves. "Otherwise, why should anyone stop buying an encyclopedia in the middle of the P's?" asked Mr. Thackrey. The color of the binding appears to be important to some shoppers, that clash with their decors.

Mr. Thackrey is the same Ted O. Thackrey who was editor of several Scripps-Howard newspapers; publisher of two newspapers in China, general manager of the New York Post and once founded a New York daily, the Compass, to support the candidacy of Henry A. Wallace for President on the Progressive ticket. He is now engaged in research and writing projects for a number of very capitalistic corporations.

High Drama In Television Study Of Research Work

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP TV-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The most dramatic program of the weekend was neither a drama nor a so-called special. It was "Conquest," CBS' science series, which returned to television Sunday with a shocker for the sentimental.

It showed film of a research project which is exploding some widely held beliefs on the subject of a child's love for his mother.

Host Charles Collingwood visited the primate laboratories at the University of Wisconsin where psychologists are experimenting with baby rhesus monkeys, in an effort to learn more about human development.

Some of the project monkeys, separated from their natural mothers at birth, have been provided with two substitute mothers: one a metal frame with an aperture through which nursing bottles can be placed; the other, a metal frame padded with cheesecloth.

The little monkeys all chose the inanimate, padded substitute—to play near or on, to cling to when frightened, to hug. They merely took food from the metal mothers. This, said Dr. Harry Harlow, suggests the feeding function of a mother has less to do with the child's reliance and affection than what he calls "contact comfort."

Baby monkeys, when frightened, flung themselves upon their cheesecloth mothers, soon becoming calm and regaining their feeling security. This was followed by their curiosity about the very thing which had frightened them.

Baby monkeys which had neither real nor substitute mothers, were pathetic little beasts which huddled forlornly in the corner.

The experiments show that all babies must have something to love—even if it is only a padded metal frame—if they are to develop. If they don't have this contact comfort at a critical period in their young lives—Dr. Harlow suggests this period is between three months and a year in human babies—they may never be able to learn to love at all.

It was a fascinating, enlightening and thought-provoking program.

Milton Berle's NBC special turned out to be another hour-long "I Love Lucy," which was no better, no worse, and not even much different from those recent CBS hour-long shows built around the Ricardos' adventures. None of them has been up to the standard of the old half-hour Lucy series.

This one had Milton and Lucy, in Las Vegas, getting mixed up with some jewel thieves. There was a lot of running around but not many laughs and it was a dull, pedestrian hour.

Sec. Of Treasury Forces A 'Re-Appraisal'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Robert B. Anderson, the quiet man who is secretary of the Treasury, has quietly brought about a hard-eyed reappraisal of the U.S. foreign aid program.

Just as important, he has put across a new policy designed to insure that a bigger proportion of U.S. loans to underdeveloped countries are spent in the United States.

Working behind the scenes, Anderson won administration backing for these major policy moves without touching off an acrimonious public debate.

His performance has solidified the widespread impression here that he is the most influential member of President Eisenhower's Cabinet.

While the secretary's aides take pains to point out that Eisenhower made the decisions and the new policies are administration policies, Anderson was the architect.

He acted because he felt some changes might be made in the aid program that would help stem the outflow of gold and dollars from the United States.

This outflow, measured in terms of the country's balance of international payments, will reach four billion dollars this year. Since trade produces a surplus, all of this deficit results from military spending abroad, foreign aid and private investment overseas.

As the Treasury chief, it is Anderson's job to watch this deficit because it inevitably affects the stability of the dollar.

Critics say that the benefits to be gained from tying development loans to purchases in the United States are piddling compared to the potential harm.

They say it represents a turning-away from this country's liberal trade policy and may encourage protectionist forces.

Anderson does not see himself as a protectionist but as an internationalist. He believes the payments deficit itself would strengthen protectionist forces if it is not curbed.

To the plain-spoken, mild-mannered Texan, the new development loan policy makes plain horse sense at a time when this country is losing dollars.

An aide, echoing Anderson's views, said: "What if we provide cash for a country and say, 'go buy yourself a power plant in West Germany.' Would we be helping that country or West Germany, which doesn't need any help?"

In dollars and cents the new policy is unlikely to have a profound effect soon. From Anderson's point of view, this may not be too important.

The secretary has always emphasized the importance of confidence, which often can be influenced as much by psychology as by measurable developments.

In one sense, the new loan policy is a psychological move. It is intended to show the world that the United States will take any action necessary to maintain confidence in the dollar.

This in itself could help inspire confidence, though Anderson's critics aren't buying this argument.

Anderson takes much the same view toward a balanced budget. He has conceded privately that a small deficit would be no financial disaster. However, he insists on seeking a balance because otherwise, he believes, people would lose confidence in the government's fiscal responsibility.

In his advocacy of conservative fiscal policies and his almost mystical preoccupation with confidence, Anderson perhaps is displaying two sides of his personality.

The secretary is both a businessman and an amateur poet, and perhaps looks more the poet. Tall, gangling and bespectacled, he walks with a slight limp which dates from a childhood polio attack. No desk pounder, he speaks softly and sometimes rambles in a fashion that belies his success in influencing high policy.

Anderson, now 49, was the 600-year manager of the Waggoner Ranch in Texas before coming here, a Democrat for Eisenhower, as secretary of the Navy in 1953. After moving up to deputy secretary of defense, he left in 1955 to become president of Ventures Ltd., a Canadian mine holding company.

In July 1957 he was back as secretary of the Treasury—this time as a registered Republican. His rise in influence since then has been such that President Eisenhower is known to believe that Anderson would make a fitting successor in the White House.

Algerian Rebellion Enters Sixth Year; Terror Goes On

ALGIERS (AP)—The Algerian nationalist rebellion against French rule began its sixth year Sunday with the usual daily hit-and-run terrorism and French military operations in the mist-shrouded mountains.

Terrorist attacks killed 4 persons and wounded 30 at various points in the North African territory. Military casualties were not announced. But the daily average, according to French figures, is about 80 rebels killed or captured, and 10 killed and 50 wounded in the French forces.

The long for peace was great among Algeria's one million Europeans and nine million Moslems. But peace seemed far away in the atmosphere of suspicion, fear and despair.

Rebels struck in bands and individually in Algiers and other cities Sunday.

Terrorists threw bombs and grenades into cafes and crowded streets, let loose with machinegun fire, derailed a train 25 miles south of Algiers and cut high tension wires near Sidi Aissa. A village chief was kidnapped and killed near Ain-Temouchent. A French territorial guard was killed by a rebel patrol in Affreyville, southwest of Algiers.

The semi-official French News Agency said about 250,000 persons have been killed, injured or imprisoned since the rebellion broke out Nov. 1, 1954.

The agency gave this breakdown: 120,000 rebels killed, 60,000 taken prisoner; 10,000 French soldiers killed, 22,000 wounded; 1,700 European civilians killed, 4,500 wounded, 300 missing; 12,000 Moslem civilians killed, 9,000 wounded, 10,000 missing.

Gestures towards negotiations to end the fighting have aroused misgivings among both the Europeans and rebels.

The French government only three days ago gave assurance to worried Europeans and their Moslem collaborators that France would not abandon the territory or engage in political negotiations with the rebels.

President Charles de Gaulle has promised a free referendum in Algeria within four years after peace is restored and offered three possible choices—integration with France, home rule under the protection of France or independence.

De Gaulle made the offer with the warning that choosing independence would be disastrous for Algeria. But French colonists feel any referendum will be the beginning of the end of French rule.

Nationalist leaders have declared themselves ready to negotiate a settlement on the principles of self-determination and the unity of the Algerian homeland. But they have never given up their determination to end French rule.

Second: That we extend to her dear ones left behind our sincerest sympathy.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family and a copy spread upon our minute book.

Heavy Traffic

ASHEVILLE (AP)—Lovers of mountain scenery didn't let low level high winds stop their Sunday drives in the Smokies and Blue Ridge Mountains.

A weather observer atop Grandfather Mountain in Avery County reported winds of 72 miles per hour and gusts up to 90. Operators of the privately owned mountain closed off a parking area atop the mountain for a while.

The Weather Bureau said high winds aloft are common and that the air carrying them had dipped lower.

Rangers at the Great Smoky Mountains National Park Gate at Gatlinburg, Tenn., said 1,320 vehicles went through the gates between 2 and 3 p.m. and that 724 vehicles entered the park at Cherokee.

Bumper-to-bumper traffic at many points was reported along the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Louise Mayo Lewis
June 28, 1959

In the untimely death of our friend and Sister, Lottie Mayo Lewis, on June 28, 1959, we have lost a beloved member, whose life has reflected honor on her family, her home, her church, her community and our Eastern Star Chapter.

She is deeply mourned by all those who depended upon her love and devotion, and her memory is a worthy inspiration for all time.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1—That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well; at the same time lifting our hearts in thankfulness to Him for the lovely life lived before us.

2—That we extend to the family of our deceased Sister an expression of our sincere sympathy and our heartfelt condolence, and commend them to the Almighty Father for comfort and guidance.

3—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, and a copy kept for our records.

Hero's Medal For Trainman

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The Carnegie Hero Fund Commission will award a Bronze Medal to a North Carolina trainman who snatched a Negro woman from certain death beneath the wheels of a rolling boxcar.

The Carnegie citation said Carl Singletary, Jr., 34, of Hamlet, N.C., saved the life of Mrs. Hattie Plett, 64, at Mullins, S.C., Sept. 20, 1958.

Mrs. Plett started across a spur track when she looked up, saw the train approaching her and fainted with the upper part of her body across the tracks.

Singletary jumped from the train, raced ahead and threw himself in a flying tackle.

"His momentum carried him over Mrs. Plett, but he retained his hold on her. Claspng Mrs. Plett to him, Singletary rolled with her from the track as the boxcar narrowly missed them and stopped eight feet beyond," the citation said.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED... This is a story of the Southwest in the days after the War between the States when the Indian wars had just finished and the time of the outlaw—of cruel, trigger-fingered Billy the Kid, John Wesley Hardin, and their ilk—was just beginning.

adging seemed to roll across the world, shaking the ground under them. "We sure got down out there just in time," said the Sergeant. "Anyway, looks like the drought's over. The deer'll be back soon, and the cats won't be so ferocious."

As the story opened, Army Sergeant John Desportes had a reunion in the border town of Agua Prieta with his Civil War comrade, Naty Bugworth. Riding back to his post at Mesa Encantada, Desportes rescued a young youth with an injured leg whom he found trapped in a ravine. He had no notion that this strangely arrogant youngster who calls himself Bud Smith is going to upset the Sergeant's life and the whole military post.

There was a pause, then the Sergeant said: "Bud, I been meaning to ask you. What about those two friends of yours? They ought to be brought in. Want me to talk to the sheriff? He'll send a man over to Agua to look around." "Naw," drawled Bud, "let's not go to all that trouble. They'd lie anyway. It would just be my word against theirs. You think it's worth the bother, Sergeant?" "But they've got your money."

CHAPTER 5... Night had fallen and the Sergeant and Bud were still miles away from Mesa Encantada. "You feeling all right, Bud?" asked the Sergeant after a long silence. "Fine," said Bud. "But my leg's stiffening up bad and I'd just as soon keep riding on til we get there if it's all the same with you. A bed's going to feel mighty good."

There was a bustle and excitement in the Army infirmary at Mesa Encantada as Captain Grayson, Army medic, worked on Bud Smith's leg. Bud was stretched out on a table with his pants off, smoking contentedly and looking at the ceiling. "You mean you dragged this boy all the way in from the Divide with a leg like that, Sergeant Desportes?" demanded Doc Grayson, turning to look at the Sergeant.

"I don't doubt that, Sergeant," said Bud. "I don't doubt it for one minute, sir. But I'm more peaceable inclined. And maybe, I'm a little ashamed at being so dumb as to be took like that. Can't we just pass it over?" "If you say so," said the Sergeant, a little disappointed in the boy. Then: "How's the leg?" "Stiff as a poker, but I'm beginning to think Mr. Temple was right. She's not broke. I just pulled some muscles loose, or something."

"He didn't drag nobody," said Bud. "He saved my life. I'd've been starved, or drowned by now." Several hospital orderlies snickered in the background. "Is it broke?" asked the Sergeant, worried by the bluish look of the boy's leg and by the swelling. "No," snapped Doc; "but that splint was too tight and damn near stopped all circulation. On top of that, he's got torn ligaments and one of the worst sprains I ever saw. This boy may be crippled for life."

He'd hardly spoken when there was a deep booming of thunder over distant Big Sheep Range to the west, and they turned in their saddles to look. Now livid-blue lightning flashed along the peaks, outlining them, sharp and black, for a moment, and heavy cannon-

The door was opened and Major Etheredge came in, followed by his aide, Lieutenant Pendergast, whose coat was not buttoned properly and who looked half asleep and very irritable. But the Major, as usual, was spic and span in his tailor-made dress uniform, though it was after two a. m. and he must have been aroused from sleep. The Major was handsome, slender, straight in carriage, about forty-five years old, with a reddish-blond mustache and a deeply tanned, lean face.

"What!" stammered the Sergeant. "Oh, hell," said Bud, "spend most of my time on a horse anyway. Legs don't mean much in this here country." The orderlies laughed again in the background, then before Doc could speak, loud stamping could be heard in the corridor and sharp cries of: "Tenshun! Tenshun!"

"Look at that leg, Major," said the Doc. "Can you imagine the Sergeant dragging him all the way from the Divide with that? It's one thing to be tough; we all know how tough the Sergeant is. He doesn't have to prove it." The Sergeant flushed slightly. Bud remained silent as if overawed in the presence of the Commanding Officer. "I'm sure Sergeant Desportes did what he thought was right," said the Major. "Sir," said Bud, and the Major turned back to him. "He saved

Jury Foreman's Ordeal Wasted

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Grand jury foreman Cecil Galbraith's detailed observations on intoxication—he got drunk in the interest of law enforcement—apparently will not go down in recorded history. The Harris County grand jury's end-of-term report Friday, omitted any reference to its foreman's scientific binge. It was "purposely" omitted, Galbraith, a Baptist deacon, told newsmen. He declined to say why. After an hour and a half of drink-and-see-how-you-feel Oct. 2 his blood showed 256 of one per cent alcohol. State law considers .15 of one per cent proof of intoxication. The grand jury later issued an interim report hailing the experiment. Galbraith concluded that perhaps the state's percentage figure was too high.

CAPTURE 76 REBELS ALGIERS (AP)—French troops captured 76 rebels hiding in a cave near Bougie, east of Algiers, the French army reported today. An army spokesman said the cave had been used as a rebel hideout and supply base. A stone from Bethlehem, Jordan, has been shipped to Christmas, Fla., to be used in the construction of an inter-denominational church.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Electronics, rubbers and the independent automakers advanced in a mixed stock market early this afternoon. Steels and rails declined.

A jump of half a dozen points by Goodyear on hopes of a stock split was an outstanding feature. The issue was up 1 1/4 last week, on the same expectation.

American Motors and Studebaker-Packard continued active and higher. Zenith, up more than 4, continued to star among the electronics.

Steels were down fractionally for the most part as the question of a Taft-Hartley injunction in the 111-day steel strike awaited Supreme Court disposition.

After an active start trading tapered off. The New York Stock Exchange will close close today because of election day. Pre-holiday trading is usually cautious.

Homage Is Paid To C.B. Aycock

FREMONT, N.C. (AP) — Tar Heels paid homage Sunday to the man who opened the door for universal public education in North Carolina.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 Tar Heels — legislators, education leaders, and interested folks — were here to honor the late Charles Brantley Aycock who served as governor from 1901 to 1904.

They heard him described as a man "who greatly loved the people of North Carolina and joyously devoted himself to their service."

The occasion, the 100th anniversary of Aycock's birth, was marked by ceremonies turning over his restored birthplace to the state.

W. T. Joyner, Raleigh attorney whose father served as superintendent of public instruction under Aycock, was the principal speaker.

"For the long pull toward the goals of good feeling and permanent progress, Aycock urged the establishment of universal education," Joyner said. "The Aycock leadership began an era which was good for the state and good for all of its citizens, white and Negro."

State Treasurer Edwin Gill, who accepted the restored home on behalf of the state, said Aycock was subjected to "sharp and corrosive criticism" while in office.

"It is to his glory and honor that he did not sell the truth to serve the hour, but rose magnificently above the petty passions and prejudices of his day," Gill observed.

Wants To Fire A 'Rude Noodler'

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Is Earman H. Tafarella a rude noodler?

Yes, says Samuel E. Vickers, Long Beach city manager, who is trying to fire Tafarella from his job as a clarinetist with the municipal band.

Vickers charged Tafarella noddled when he should have been listening to instructions from the band director. Noodles are the little scales musicians run through when they're warming up.

He also charged Tafarella with talking during announcements, being argumentative and refusing to stand for the invocation at the Iowa picnic.

Tafarella denies all the charges. He wants to keep the $461-a-month job he has held for 16 years and has asked for a hearing before the city civil service board.

Youth Slain In Hallowe'en Prank

CHANUTE, Kan. (AP) — A Chanute High School honor student, Jim McCune, 16, was shot fatally during a Halloween prank.

Police Chief Lige Matlock said the boy was shot accidentally by talking Doudna, 27, a city employe who had volunteered as a watchman to curb vandalism Saturday night.

Doudna was arraigned on a charge of fourth-degree manslaughter and released on $10,000 bond.

Matlock said Doudna saw McCune and another boy toss a wooden bench into a drainage sewer. Pursuing the boys, Doudna stepped into a hole, causing his 22 caliber pistol to fire, the chief said. The bullet hit McCune in the head. He died early Sunday.

The youth was president of the junior class and a member of the high school basketball and track squads. His father, David, is a former city commissioner.

Heavy Damage Reported In Weekend Auto Wrecks

Heavy damage was reported by Greenville police in a series of wrecks during the weekend.

A car driven by Katie Bell Huey, 29-year-old Negro, address not given, collided with two parked cars on 14th Street near the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Saturday, causing an estimated $500 damage to the three vehicles. The woman was charged by officers with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and operating a car without an operator's license as a result of the wreck.

The owner of the car, Hezekiah B. Anderson, 1208 Battle St., was charged with allowing an unlicensed driver to operate his auto.

Officers said the car struck vehicles owned by William G. Morris of Route 1, Vanceboro, and Howard H. King of Route 2, Greenville, which were parked on the south side of the street. Police noted the Anderson car was headed east at the time.

Damage to the Anderson car was set at $300 while damage to each of the parked vehicles was placed at $100.

In a second wreck Saturday, cars operated by Bernice W. Cahoon of 8 Contentnea St. and Larue Dum Haddock of Route 1, Grimesland, collided at Second and Greene Sts., causing an estimated $300 damage to the Cahoon car and about $200 damage to the Haddock auto.

Police charged Miss Cahoon with failure to stop for a stop light as a result of the investigation of the wreck.

A charge of operating under the influence of alcohol was brought against Huey Long Harrison, 25, of 148 West Gum Road following a collision between his car and a vehicle driven by Paul Leo Anthony, 18, address not given.

The collision, which occurred on South Evans St. Saturday, caused an estimated $90 damage to both cars.

No charges were brought by investigators yesterday when two cars wrecked at the intersection of Fourth and Eastern Sts.

Officers identified the drivers of the two autos as William Grant Dunning, 31, of Aulander, and Linda Annette Stokes, 16, of 905 West Third St.

Damage to the Stokes car was placed at $25 while damage to the Dunning car was set at $15.
