ROME (AP) — President Eisenhower discussed Western summit prospects today with Italy's Premier after pledging to strive for "a better life" for his grandchildren than he had himself.

From the embassy the President went to Quirinal Palace and started his talks with Segni and other Italian leaders.

D. Zellerbach, the President told his audience "I do know the United States is not always admired."

The monkey and his capsule were recovered from the Atlantic Ocean 200 miles off the Virginia coast some three hours after he had been lofted from Wallops Island on top a Little Joe booster rocket Friday.

Christmas Season Ushered In Friday As Santa Appears In Annual Parade

The Christmas season was ushered into Greenville late yesterday afternoon as Santa Claus appeared in the annual Christmas Parade here, waving greetings to the many youngsters who lined the streets in eager anticipation of his arrival.

Thousands of people watched as the floats, bands, scouts, mounted escorts, pretty girls and Santa marched by wishing a joyous Christmas season to everyone.

The parade, which started at 4:15 at the intersection of Ninth St. and Dickinson Ave. took almost an hour to travel down Dickinson Ave. to Five Points, then down Evans St. to First.

Clarke Stokes, chairman of the Christmas Decorations and Santa Parade Committee of the Merchants Association, said he was "well pleased" with the event.

Flood Toll Is Now 221 Dead

PREJUS, France (AP)—Five grim-faced government ministers today inspected the flood-stricken Reyran River Valley and stood silently at the cemetery where open graves await more victims of the Malpasset Dam disaster.

More Than 10,000 Watch Farmville's Santa Parade

FARMVILLE — Ten elaborate floats, five marching bands with majorettes, a former Miss North Carolina, and a comical runaway automobile stirred the crisp, evening air in Farmville last night and set the stage for the local Christmas Parade's grand finale—Santa himself.

More than 10,000 spectators jammed Farmville's business district for nearly an hour and a half as the well-organized procession paraded through the town's main streets twice.

The sparkling entourage, including at least a dozen clowns, marching scouts, and the Farmville National Guard, made a complete cycle from Home Ave., south down Main St., around a block via George, Pine, and Wilson Streets, and back north on Main to its origination point on Home. A Color Guard from the local National Guard unit led the way.

ONE OF TEN . . . elaborate floats adorning Farmville's annual Christmas Parade that attracted more than 10,000 to line the streets.

New Atmosphere In This Vatican Visit

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

President Eisenhower visits Pope John XXIII Sunday in an atmosphere vastly different from that which prevailed when another American President met another pontiff 40 years ago.

There was an air of almost diplomatic intrigue about the meeting between President Woodrow Wilson and Pope Benedict XV—and a police incident that left Wilson livid with rage.

The time was Jan. 4, 1919. World War I had ended less than two months before and Wilson was en route to Paris with his 14 Points for peace.

It wasn't easy for a chief of state to visit the Pope in those days. Diplomatic relations between Italy and the Vatican had been strained since 1870 when the Italians seized Rome from the Pope.

Some 200,000 people thronged St. Peter's Square and cheered wildly as the President and the Pope sat together near an open window in view of the multitude.

The crowd was the reason for the unpleasant incident. It has been made known that Wilson would speak to the people. But when it came time for him to leave the Pope, he found that Italian police had dispersed the crowd.

The police explained they were afraid the crowd would get out of hand. Mrs. Wilson, in her memoirs written 20 years later, had a different explanation.

"It seemed that the government," she wrote, "seeing the outpouring of the people feared that if the President addressed them he would say something which would enlist their support for his 14 Points.

The dispersal of the crowd, she wrote, "was a gross discourtesy and when I got back to the Quirinal he (Wilson) was already there and fairly blazing with anger."

The Wilson visit to the Pope also produced protests from American Protestants, so steps had to be taken to mollify them.

Mrs. Wilson did not accompany her husband to the Vatican, fearing that her presence would give the visit a personal, rather than formal, air.

And the same day, the President met representatives of the Evangelical Churches in Italy at a reception in the vestry of the American Protestant Episcopal Church in Rome.

LIKE A MOUNTAIN NAMED FOR YOU?

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Not one of these, certainly! They're here today, gone tomorrow. We'd gladly lend our names to a timeless peak like Everest—not to a heap of shifting sands rolling before the desert wind.

Of course, we have to identify ourselves with many a transitory idea and institution. We are busy most of our days just trying to keep up with this ever-changing world...

But our deeper self gropes for the Eternal! God understands this yearning. He breathed it into our souls.

A voice crying in the wilderness... across the shifting sands... of the TRUTH and LIFE that are ETERNAL.

And God answers it: In Christ! In Scripture! In the voice of a neighbor inviting you and your family to Church.

Fireside Games Return

Family fun is in style again. Maybe it's the effect of television. Maybe it's just the swing of the pendulum. Whatever the reason, the Gay Nineties custom of parlor games is back again full force.

FOR FAMILY FUN . . . Game based on television show puts a premium on concentration and memory.

The new game crop for this Christmas is long on games intended for the whole family rather than just the children. Competitive interest is scaled to fit the abilities and interests of both parents and small fry. Some are based on popular television show formats. And the popularity of the game endures even after the TV show is off the air. After all, nobody is going to accuse a family circle of "rigging" a quiz game.

One new game, a top hit throughout the country, is based on concentration and memory. It's a streamlined new version of rebus puzzle solving, a favorite family game in great-grandmother's day. An ingenious rollomatic puzzle changer, providing 30 feet of rebus wit challengers gives an up-to-the-minute touch. Players compete for fabulous make-believe prizes such as mink coats, diamonds and cars, represented by pictures.

Other currently popular games are based on Wild West adventures, often tied in with a television show cast. Some of these Western thrillers include Restless Gun, Wells Fargo, The Rifleman, Cheyenne and Sergeant Preston. Clear plastic score cards give another modern touch to versions of old favorites. A wipe-off target game, for example, bases play on tracking down missiles and provides each player with a radar screen.

You Get Only What You Insist On

Who can argue with the assertion that low quality of public schools can only be blamed on the low quality of support the schools receive from parents and citizens?

In an address delivered before the annual meeting of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association, Henry Belk, editor of the Goldsboro-Argus declared that the quality of high school instruction and of public schools generally reflects the demands and attitudes of patrons of the schools.

No one can deny the fact that conditions which exist in our public schools, including the quality of instruction offered youngsters of this state, is entirely the responsibility of teachers and school officials. There is no getting around the fact that the entire citizenry is largely responsible for the calibre of public schools that exist in North Carolina.

In the words of Editor Belk: "Create an attitude and atmosphere which requires high standards, which frowns on hasty or shoddy class work, and the level of accomplishment in the schools is raised."

Have the people of North Carolina placed sufficient emphasis on these things in lending support to the schools of the state? Or have they been more concerned with other things pertaining to the public schools?

Under the democratic form of government, the citizens generally get what they want. If they demand better highways and set about to get them, they usually succeed. If they want better law enforcement, better fire protection, better garbage collection, they make their demands, assert their initiative and usually bring about the desired results.

The same thing applies to the public schools of this and every other state. As long as the people are willing to have a school system of less than the highest quality, they will have it. And it will not be the fault of the teachers or school officials. It will be the fault of the citizens generally.

When the day comes that citizens insist that the quality of our public schools be raised, when they put forth the necessary effort to raise the standards of education, better schools and better education for our young people will result.

Progress in this direction is being made. But the progress is far too slow for the times in which we live . . . and each year there goes out from our public schools a group of youngsters who missed the advantages of a higher calibre of education that might have been given them.

Every community in North Carolina could have better schools to better equip its youngsters if its citizens demanded. But as long as the public attitude toward the quality of our schools is indifferent, the calibre of public education will not reach the level it should.

One More Step For Man's Flight In Space

The 13-minute space flight of Sam the monkey moves the United States a little closer to the time when one of the astronauts will enter a capsule and attempt the first manned flight into space.

While officials have said this latest experiment was primarily to test the escape mechanism that would return a man to earth from space, it is evident even now that considerable additional information was secured by the successful test Friday.

From the standpoint of space travel this latest test may not compare with previous successes by the Soviets of sending vehicles to the moon, but from the standpoint of man's entry and return from space the test completed successfully by Sam is of importance. It points up the fact that the United States is continuing to make progress in its space program, and that in spite of its previous spectacular failures in moon rockets it is carrying on a broad and successful experimental program.

High Optimism By Eisenhower

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Historians will have to list optimism among President Eisenhower's most persistent traits.

As he departed on his 11-nation pilgrimage Thursday night he still seemed optimistic about the steel dispute. Yet, so far for him this has been a steady frustration going back to last spring.

All three things he wanted to avoid have happened: A strike, inflation, and government interference. To complete the irony Eisenhower, who protested against interfering himself, has been accused of interfering himself.

1. There is still no settlement in this steel dispute which began with the negotiations opening May 5 and turned into a strike July 15. The strike, longest in steel history, lasted 116 days, was finally stopped for 80 days by court injunction.

Now, unless settlement is reached within these 80 days, the strike begins again. Eisenhower wants to avoid a second strike.

2. The President wanted to avoid inflation through an upward thrust of steel wages and prices. But the long strike itself has already caused some inflation, since the result of it was loss of revenue to the government.

The lost revenue means government income in fiscal 1960, ending next June 30, will almost surely be less than government spending, thus creating a deficit for the fifth year in a row.

3. Eisenhower wanted both sides to reach agreement by themselves without government interference. But the government had to interfere, through the 80-day injunction to stop the strike. It may have to act again to prevent another strike.

And AFL-CIO President George Meany has accused Eisenhower himself of interfering on the side of the steel industry—with his caution about bargaining had a chance to begin.

Just before he embarked by plane for Rome Eisenhower called on both sides—as he did as long ago as March 25—to settle their problem. But he gave them a warning, even though it may have seemed mild.

He said if the union and the industry can't act responsibly, their countrymen will see that they do. He used the word "countrymen" as a synonym for the government. He meant government.

Nevertheless, his optimism still showed through.

"What great news it would be if, during the course of this journey, I should receive word of a settlement of this steel controversy," he said in his talk Thursday night.

Last March 25 when Eisenhower asked both sides to reach a non-inflationary settlement in the negotiations due to begin in May, he indicated he would not stand idly by if a wage boost pointed to a price boost in steel.

Whether he still feels that way—after what the 116-day strike has done to the economy—or would just be happy if there was some kind of settlement, whether or not it caused more inflation, is not clear.

In his talk his anxiety seemed mostly directed at a renewal of the strike. He didn't say anything about price boosts. He did say he wanted a settlement fair to all sides, including the public.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said Nov. 8 Eisenhower would send Congress, when it returns in 1960, recommendations for ending the strike if it starts up again.

The proposal the Steelworkers Union made Thursday night—that it is willing to make a settlement within the framework

Mostly About Traffic

I missed yesterday's Santa parade . . . all of them.

My feelings weren't altogether hurt, had plenty of observers from home and office to fill me in on the story. Not that attending a parade by proxy has any special qualities, but it beats nothing.

One aspect of the afternoon held my special attention, that was the traffic. In other years, I remembered a frustrating half hour or so in traffic when the crowds broke up. It seemed as though all the cars in Greenville were in the business district at one time.

In the back of my mind this week lurked a report issued by the Automobile Manufacturers Association advising what to expect in the way of growing vehicular traffic.

They say there are 82 million drivers today, and by 1975 there will be nearly 90 million more. (That, neighbor, adds up to a lot of motorists.)

The actual predictions are for 111 million drivers by 1975 and for an increase of 2,400 miles of driving per year for the average driver.

On reading that kind of data, the natural thing to do is to project it to the local scene, and in contemplating the growth of Greenville, aside from the rise in our vehicular population, you can see there's going to be traffic problems all over the place.

That was why my interest was more in the traffic problem than whether or not Santa appeared as scheduled.

This I know: banning cars from along the parade route strained available parking facilities. Solid lines of cars were parked for blocks along streets feeding into closed-off parade route.

My informants tell me that once the post-parade traffic began to roll, it was a smooth operation; just a lot of cars in motion.

But I learned, too, that others beside myself were thinking of future downtown traffic needs, and, inevitably the controversial "mail" solution was raised.

It was brought up that a smaller city, such as Greenville, would find it easier to develop the necessary off-street parking than would one of the larger, older cities.

Still another voiced the opinion that with the growing automotive population a "new approach" to city life would be needed.

All indicative that a number of people are looking ahead.

Oh yes, that AMA report of many more drivers—by 1975 included a bright side, too. U.S. government forecasters are also looking for a decline in the national traffic fatality rate from last year's 5.6 per hundred million vehicle miles to 4.4 by 1975.

They are looking to youth education as a big factor. Organized traffic safety education programs, running from kindergarten years through high school, are expected to glow and their impact be felt.

Sure hope so.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS CROWDS

In a world fashioned as ours is, we soon discover that we cannot live without the presence around about us of other people. There probably are a few real hermits in the world, but they are so few as to be negligible. We are gregarious by nature. We cannot live without one another.

Therefore, we have to settle ourselves to the problem of learning to live with one another. And, of course, his problem becomes more overwhelming with

Santa's Biggest Helper

By NORMA GAUGN

The Santa Claus with the biggest pack on his back this Christmas works from the cold flats in a social worker's casebook.

At first glance it may seem alien to the joy of giving to organize it in platoons of statistics on just who needs what.

But in practice, it brings order out of the might seasonal confusion resulting from the burst of generosity that strikes people at Yuletide.

This mammoth Santa is the Christmas Bureau of your local United Fund or Community Chest.

It is set up long before Christmas to act as a confidential agent between people who want to give and people who need help.

Suppose Joe M., at the county home for old people needs a set of dentures. Someone tells the local Christmas Bureau. A community women's club turns in $150 as a gift. The needy and Joe gets his false teeth.

A probation officer told a Syracuse, N.Y., bureau about 15-year-old Jimmy, who was buying a second hand bike for his newspaper route. Then it was stolen when he still owed $20. A couple who annually give through the Christmas Bureau bought Jimmy the present he wanted most—a new bike.

Every year more employes groups give up office Christmas parties and exchanges of inter-office greeting cards. One such office collected $700 and turned it over to the Christmas Bureau which used the money for gifts, clothing and turkey dinners for eight large families. Individual wants were considered and agency volunteers delivered the gifts so the parents could act as Santa Claus.

There may be critics who complain of a cold heartedness in organized Christmas giving. But there are plenty examples of disorganized generosity.

The Milwaukee Christmas Bureau reported 743 potential gift duplications. Another said that without checking, two families would have had help from four different donors and 11 by three donors—while other needy cases were ignored.

Six different service clubs may descend on a single children's home with quantities of candy, mittens and toys. Two blocks away a family can live in real want, unnoticed at holiday time.

Contributions to parties for needy children may make a merry few hours for all concerned. Contrast that, agency people say, with the lasting good of money to pay for braces for the crippled; picnic baskets, box cameras and folding chairs for a club of elderly persons; play equipment for the often forgotten youngsters in detention homes.

There is a wide range of ideas for gift giving where it counts. One group of school children turns in pennies to buy a food scale for a 12-year-old diabetic boy; a men's club reconditions TV sets at an orphanage; people give trading stamps to a Christmas Bureau to buy toys and clothing.

There are some 200 Christmas Bureaus throughout the nation, developing from a program started more than 40 years ago. They offer a giant pack for would-be Santas to fill.

the passing of time. The story is sometimes told of pioneers on the frontier a hundred or two hundred years ago who moved out of the crowded areas of the east and headed west when people began to live within ten miles of their homes. But now with large cities, with the people on the same floor of our apartment house to whom we have never spoken and whom we would not know if we passed them on the street, the situation becomes entirely different. There are places in some cities where five thousand people live in one block.

This is a tremendous test of character. The closer we live to people, the more we must discipline ourselves, put ourselves aside, think of others rather than ourselves. There is really just one great social problem today—how can I live peacefully and pleasantly with people who crowd in upon me?

When we have answered that question, we have peace. Without a proper answer we have chaos and misery.

More Lookaheads For Business

By ELMER ROESSNER

Here are more look-aheads in business, based largely on analyses of developing trends:

Fresh demands for credit controls: The continuing rise in consumer credit is alarming many conservative economists. Every day from now through December 24, a new high mark in outstanding credit will probably be set. The total outstanding is approaching $30 billion. That's more than one-eighth the annual total of all personal income.

Americans are meeting their payments all right. But a sharp downturn would slow payments and increase defaults, thereby worsening conditions.

Some economists are concerned because present high interest and service charges on consumer credit is diverting a large share of expendable funds away from trade and industry to money lenders.

NO ONE SHOOTS SANTA CLAUS
Cash spending goes 100 per cent to merchants and flows back to distributors and manufacturers. Of credit spending, 6 to 18 per cent, perhaps an average 10 per cent, flows to suppliers of goods.

However, there will be no serious demands for restrictions on consumer credit until next year. Charge and installment purchases are swelling the volume of trade. And no one, not even serious economists, takes a shot at Santa Claus.

Slide in housing. We are approaching the winter downturn in home building, but tight money may make it steeper than expected. High interest rates are only one cause. Most prospects are aware that they can re-finance mortgages if the rate falls. But at the present, private lenders are insisting on larger down payments and that keeps many out of the market.

NEW TAX ANGLE
Push for m.s.t. With Federal tax rates their most thorough manipulators' sales tax. Many people, including manufacturers, favor such a tax on the theory that it would permit reductions in income, corporation and excise levies. However, the opposition will be strong, chiefly on the grounds that taxes on manufactured goods tend to pyramid, and that consumers would pay $2 for every $1 the manufacturer pays.

Less tax selling. Every December there is a large volume of stock selling to establish losses for income tax purposes. There will be notably less this year because many canny investors sold when stocks dipped in the fall. Thus they have established capital losses and, by reinvesting their receipts, are on their way to making new capital gains.

Big brokerage profits. High turnover in stock markets, higher commission rates and higher dollar volume have swelled brokers' earnings this year. Several of the biggest Wall Street firms will show record-high profits for 1959.

Fullmer Decisions Spider Webb; Eyes Higher Rung

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer
LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Power-punching Gene Fullmer, reigning solidly as king of the NBA middle-weight class, contemplates stepping up a rung to challenge venerable lightweight champ Archie Moore.

Or possibly he might clear the 160-pound picture by fighting Sugar Ray Robinson again if Robinson has any desire for such a bout.

Fullmer took solid possession of the NBA diadem and won the right to do some bargaining for future fights by scoring a unanimous decision over Spider Webb in 15 grueling rounds at the Utah State University Fieldhouse Friday night.

This time noncollegian Fullmer — from West Jordan, Utah, and weighing 159½ pounds — proved the master of Webb, who fought on the Idaho State College team before turning pro in 1953. The Chicagoan Webb weighed 157½. Both are 28 years old.

Fullmer switched strategies frequently during the nationally televised fight as his manager, Marv Jensen, called code numbers from the corner. Fullmer fought out of an arms-crossed defense, led with

Narrow Win For Rupp's Wildcats

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
Associated Press Sports Writer
Baron Adolph Rupp heaved a sigh of relief today after his Kentucky Wildcats escaped with a narrow victory over UCLA on a weekend visit to the West Coast.

The Wildcats, expected to be one of college basketball's powers this season, nipped the spirited Bruins 68-66 Friday night on some clutch shooting by Sid Cohen.

In other games, California, the defending NCAA champion, and West Virginia, the team the Bears defeated 71-70 in the finals of the tournament, posted impressive victories.

California overpowered California's Santa Barbara branch 59-47 behind husky Bill McClintock and 6-10 Darrell Imhoff. The triumph was the Bears' 17th straight.

All-America Jerry West and Lee Patrone spearheaded West Virginia to a 98-76 decision over The Citadel. The success stretched the Mountaineers Southern Conference winning streak to 51 games.

Cohen, a back court general Brooklyn, look charge in the last 90 seconds to pull out the Kentucky squeaker. With the score tied 64-61, the 6-1 senior scored on a three-point play to sew it up.

Locals Win

GOLDSBORO — Greenville Junior High's Phantoms, playing their first game of their 1959-60 cage season, got things off to a rousing start here tonight by soundly thumping Goldsboro's Junior High by a score of 59-36.

Chester Walden led the Phantoms winning effort with a 21 point scoring tally. He was backed up by Kenneth Allen and Dale Gidley, who score 13 and 78 points, respectively, for the winners.

Coach John Jones, of the Greenville team, stated of the win, "I was well pleased with everybody's playing." Coach Jones made mention of the fact that the Phantoms, in the second half, played without the fact that the Greenville team played without the services of their ace center Dan Johnson, who injured his ankle in the waning minutes of the first half.

The next Greenville encounter will take place next Friday night in the Greenville Junior High Gym, when the Phantoms play a return engagement with the Goldsboro Junior High squad.

East Carolina Swimming Team Faces Hard Schedule

East Carolina's swimming team, defending NAIA champions, will once again have a rugged schedule facing them for the coming season which gets underway December 9th against the University of North Carolina in Memorial Pool.

Included on the 1959-60 schedule are such powerhouses as UNC, V.M.I. U. of Georgia, U. of Miami, U. of Florida, and Florida State. The Pirate mermen will have six meets at home which is a change from past seasons.

Coach Ray Martinez opens the new season with seven returning lettermen but the veteran tutor will be missing a couple of small college national title-holders, Bob Sawyer and Ken Midyette.

Tommy Carroll, Jim Meads, and Jake Smith head the list of returning tankmen. Others back to bolster the squad are Jeff Faucette, Jack McCann, Tom Tucker, and Glen Dyer.

With the exception of one meet, the Pirate swimmers will go against the same foes as of last season. The new addition to this year's schedule is the Norfolk Division of William and Mary College.

The schedule is as follows: Dec. 9, UNC at home; Dec. 12, V.M.I. at home; Jan. 13, UNC at Chapel Hill; Feb. 2, Wm. & Mary at Norfolk, Va.; Feb. 5, U. of Florida at home; Feb. 12, U. of Georgia at home; Feb. 19, Miami U. at home; Feb. 20, Emory U. at home; Feb. 28, U. of Florida at Gainesville, Fla.; March 1, U. of Florida State at Tallahassee, Fla.

Bowl Bid Stakes Confront Bears

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The football game between Lenoir Rhyne and Southern Connecticut here today borders dangerously close to being anticlimactic for the host Lenoir Rhyne Bears.

The winner of the contest will be the Eastern champion of the National Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics and will play in the Holiday Bowl at St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 19 for the NAIA national championship.

Yet the situation could be ripe for a psychological let-down for the Bears. In winning their final regular season game, 50-6 over Catawba Thanksgiving Day, the Bears captured their fifth straight North State Conference title, the

Grifton Takes 2 Over Visiting Bethel Cagers

GRIFTON — Center Jimmy Rogers led Grifton's Bulldogs with 19 points to register a 56-53 win over Bethel's visiting boys' quintet.

Mahler was second high scorer with 13, backed up Riley who tallied 12 for the winners.

Bethel's Indians were led in the scoring department by Harvey, who dumped in a total of 14 points. Harvey was closely followed by Smith who scored 13 for the losers.

In the female encounter, it was Grifton's Newborn leading the home team with 23 points to give the Grifton girls a 63-40 victory over the visiting lassies from Bethel.

Price was the runner-up for scoring honors with 21 for the winners. Smith followed with a 15 point tally.

For the losing visitors from Bethel, Mazingo led the pack, scoring 18 points. She was backed up by Cobb with 10 points.

According to the Grifton coaches, Alison Burke, boys coach, and Ed Bright, girls coach, "These are

Chicod Takes Two Wins Over Farmville Cagers

CHICOD — Chicod's boys returned to the win column last night with a 52-46 win over the visiting Red Devils from Farmville.

Shrine Bowl Game Today

CHARLOTTE (AP) — For the 23rd year, Carolinas high school all-stars meet in the Shrine Bowl here today, a benefit football game with a slogan:

"Strong legs run that weak may walk."

Local newspapers rated the South Carolina team a slight favorite over the North Carolinians. In past games, North Carolina has won 12, South Carolina 6 and 4 were ties.

The role of the favorite was based largely on South Carolina Coach Slick Moore's announced intention to make it an passing game. Quarterback Tommy McCathern of Columbia bled Lancaster and Francis Wilson of Moncks Corner, and ends Richard McNamee of St. Paul, John George of Gaffney, Dan Lewis of Clinton and Ted Petosky of Columbia were the big factors in Moore's plans.

The Palmetto Staters concentrated on passing all week and only went through one 15-minute scrimmage session.

The North Carolinians, coached by Chippy Wagner, went through three long scrimmage sessions — and in the process suffered injuries to guards Roy Vallery of Fayetteville and Ted Lamb of Reidsville.

Wagner figured to play a more conventional type of game with Asheville quarterback Jim Rossi directing the attack. A likely big gun was halfback Ed Kesler from Salisbury, a 188-pounder who looked good in practice.

Proceeds of the game benefit the Shrine Hospital for Crippled Children at Greenville, S.C.

Long Wait By Citadel Is Ended In Disaster

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Citadel Coach Norman Sloan shook his head in disbelief. He and his basketball team had waited nine months to get a whack at mighty West Virginia, and now the long wait had ended... in disaster.

"What can anybody say?" Sloan asked. "We have no excuses. They just beat the heck out of us, that's all."

West Virginia's first blow in defense of its Southern Conference championship Friday night at Charleston, S.C., had indeed been a haymaker. The Mountaineers won 98-76.

Sloan had a warning for the rest of the conference, whose teams now have bowed to West Virginia in 41 consecutive games. "I think they may be better than they were last year," he said. "They'll be awfully tough to stop. They have such tremendous poise, such excellent floor work. And of course they have Jerry West."

It was the All-America West and Junior Lee Patrone who had the greatest part in doing in The Citadel in its big game.

West scored 21 points, led West Virginia rebounding and, on defense, blocked five shots. Patrone topped the Mountaineer scoring with 23 points.

Art Musselman and Gary Daniels tallied 19 points apiece for the Bulldogs, but it was far from enough as West Virginia made a runaway of proceedings in the second half.

Joyce Aims At Rushing Title

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland fullback Jim Joyce will be aiming at the ACC rushing title today when the Terps take on North Carolina State's football team.

The All-Atlantic Coast Conference back needs only 38 yards to pass South Carolina's Phil Lavoie, who completed the season with 522 yards.

The Terps and the Wolfpack close the ACC season at Byrd Stadium (1:30 p.m. EST) and Maryland has considerably more at stake. By winning, Maryland can retain its third-place hold in the conference and wind up with a 4-2 record.

But a loss would drop Maryland into fifth place behind Wake Forest and South Carolina, which are tied at 4-3. Maryland is 4-3 in all games.

The Terps have sprung back from a poor beginning and registered victories over the league leaders, Clemson and North Carolina.

North Carolina State has gone winless since its opening 15-13 victory over Southern Conference foe Virginia Tech, having dropped eight in a row.

State's attack is led by halfback Ron Podwika, an all-conference second team choice, and sophomore quarterback, 215-pound Roman Gabriel.

Maryland Coach Tom Nugent was confident about closing the season with a victory. "I think we have the best team in the conference right now," said the information exponent.

ACC Cops Win In Florida Tourney

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Seven games are on the schedule for North Carolina small college basketball team tonight, but only one of them—Appalachian at Guilford—is a conference affair.

Western Carolina, the North State Conference defending champion, opens its season against Piedmont in Georgia, a nonleague foe. Two North State teams are participating in the Florida Citrus Invitational tournament at Lakeland. Atlantic Christian meeting Rollins for the championship and Catawba playing Florida Southern in the consolation game.

High Point at Newberry, Pfeiffer at Lenoir Rhyne and Mercer at Belmont Abbey round out the schedule for the Tar Heel small colleges.

In games Friday night, Elon lost to Wofford 77-63. Atlantic Christian defeated Florida Southern 76-74 and Catawba lost to Rollins 69-59.

High scorers included Jerry Fritz, who got 24 for Atlantic Christian; Kenneth Smith, with 21 for Elon; and Doug Chalk, with 19 for Catawba.

Grimesland, Ayden Split Honors In Double Header

AYDEN — Ayden's Tornados, led by the 21 points of Manning, scored a 65-52 win over the visiting boys from Grimesland here last night.

Norris, 6-4 center, was adjacent to Manning in score with a tally of 16 for the winners. Norris was backed up by the 10 point effort of Mills.

For the losing Panthers from Grimesland, it was Hardee leading the way with 22, followed by Cayton, who was runner-up high scorer with 10.

In the girls game, All-Conference Forward Mabel Singleton scored an impressive 51 points to lead Grimesland to a 90-60 victory over the host Ayden girls.

Nichols followed Singleton's lead with 25, while Sybil Howell

Rockingham Wins Title

At Beaufort, a couple of Hassell cousins and the young brothers combined with fullback Ernest House to win the A title for the down-easters. Quarterback Butch Hassell scored Beaufort's first touchdown, after setting it up with 20 and 30-yard passes to end David Jones. Halfback Ray Hassell scored the second touchdown on a five-yard sweep, and Butch Hassell passed to end Calvin Jones for the third, in the fourth period.

Rockingham, which lost 12-0 to Morehead in the title game last year, didn't wait long to put Friday night's game on ice. On the first play from scrimmage Rocket fullback Bob Sanford went down the middle for 69 yards and a touchdown. The next time Rockingham got the ball, quarterback Ronnie Tullih blasted 79 yards for another score. Jim Simmons got Rockingham's third score on a 14-yard run. Dan Gwynn scored for Morehead on a five-yard plunge.

At Charlotte, Garinger High fullback Phil (The Tank) Raiford scored twice, once on a 16-yard smash and again on a 12-yarder, to help defeat Greensboro. A 20-yard pass from quarterback Gary Black to end Dave Ausband accounted for Garinger's other TD.

Worsley was backed up in the winning effort by Adams who scored 9 points for the Oak City five.

In the female action, Oak City's Tempe McCracken led the pack as the Oak City girls squeezed out a 26-25 win over the Woodland girls.

Yvonne Hill led Woodland with 13 points, with Etheridge following her with a 3 point effort for the losers.

The Other Day

we heard about a Dr. Walter Baade, staff member of the Mount Wilson and Palomar Astronomical Observatories, who knocked into a cocked hat a previously accepted method for measuring distances in outer space.

In technical language, the error was based on the theory that all pulsating stars (Cepheid variables) were exactly alike, and by measuring the period one, a dependable yardstick would then be had for measuring interstellar space.

But now Dr. Baade has shown, with ingenious space photography, that there are at least two kinds of Cepheid variables; that although they both pulse at the same period, one can be much brighter than the other. Those in our own galaxy, the Milky Way, are all of the same intensity, so measurements within this one galaxy are assumed correct, but measurements of all the rest of the Universe have been wrong. It now appears that the Universe is twice as big as we supposed, which means that our own galaxy is no longer the biggest one.

This is one more example of how man can err, but science, like the wise man, acknowledges the error, and starts over again with its new knowledge. In the automobile business, we are always on guard against error or anything that would give us less than complete satisfaction.

Industrial Loop To Begin Play

The Greenville Industrial Basketball League swung into action this week with Cozart's Auto Supply Co. and Carolina Dairy gaining victories.

Daniels tallied 24 points to lead Cozart's Auto to a easy 64-29 triumph over Varina Wholesale Co. Gray was high scorer for Varina with 11 points.

In the second game, Carolina Dairy rallied in the final minute of action to edge past The Jewel Box 48-47. Wingate was high for the winners with 11 points but Dave Carson of the Jewel Box gained scoring honors with 14 points.

Games will be played each Monday and Thursday nights, the first game starting at 7:15. All games will be played in the Junior High Gym and there is no admission.

Wesley Players Offer Drama Monday Night

The Wesley Players of the Methodist Student Center at East Carolina College will present the first of this year's trio of dramatic performances Monday night at 8 in the Student Center building on E. Fifth St.

"The House by the Stable" by Charles Williams will feature an all-student cast. It is an unusual Christmas drama of the emotional conflict between evil and good, according to Advisor Mamie Chandler.

The one-act play features three personality types along with a trio of personal characters. Barbara Wilson of Greenville plays the part of Pride in the production. With Miss Wilson, Ed Lancaster of Vanceboro, appears as Man and James Smith of Newport News, portrays Hell.

The personal characters, Joseph, Mary, and Gabriel, are played by Robert Tilley of Goldsboro, Anne Campbell of Raleigh, and Bob Parsons of Newport News.

"In 'The House by the Stable,' one finds Man both universally true and personally lovable," says Miss Chandler, "and the archangel, Gabriel, both a celestial and human figure. Pride, who seduces man, is a woman as well as the tool of Hell. All the characters seem to be persons one has known, yet they are also personality types."

Another student at ECC, Elizabeth Smith of Fountain, is the play's director. No admission will be charged.

Couldn't Catch Money-Givers

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — "Who the heck was ever able to catch Santa Claus?"

That was the reaction of one frustrated policeman after a well-dressed white man and a Negro handed out thousands of dollars worth of $50 bills Friday in Atlanta and Birmingham, Ala.

Officers were unable to find the pair but the persons who received the bills didn't care. There was whooping and hollering in the streets and joy in many a home.

Atlanta police estimated $10,000 was handed out in two Negro neighborhoods. Birmingham officers reported at least 20 of the $50 bills were distributed to Negroes in that city.

Joel Lawhon, president of Greenville radio station WGTC, was guest speaker at the Kiwanis Club's weekly supper meeting last night.

He reviewed the history of "world's crossroads," beginning with the camel caravans over Asia and Africa, until Columbus discovered America in the late 1400's with the result that the "world's crossroads" became the oceans.

The speaker then pointed out that with the development of airplanes the air became the "world's crossroads," and now the movement is on to transfer the "world's crossroads" to outer space.

"Whoever controls the 'world's crossroads' controls the world," he declared.

Kiwanian J. G. Proctor introduced the speaker. President John A. Collins presided.

Guests of the club were Mrs. J. Hicks Corey and Miss Donna Gammon, daughter of Rev. Richard Gammon. Ken Beatty won the attendance prize.

A Never-Ending Process Is Involved

METER READER . . . James Case leaves utilities plant early every morning for day of reading utility meters.

TESTING BOARD . . . for electrical meters keeps Marvin James busy checking for inaccuracies eight hours every day.

RECORDING READING . . . Case carefully reads one of Greenville Utilities 12,000 electrical meters

By HENRY HOWARD
Reflector Staff Writer

Did you ever stop to wonder how your monthly utilities bill is always so amazingly punctual? Maybe not, but a little investigation will reveal that the never-ending process that keeps tabs on amounts of electricity, water, and gas used each month is a full time job.

The Greenville Utilities Commission is faced with the problem of reading nearly 23,000 utilities meters every month. Included are more than 12,000 electrical meters, nearly 7,000 water meters, and about 3,500 gas meters.

A trio of regular "meter readers" lay the groundwork for the Commission's monthly program of tracking down electricity, water, and gas that flows through the many meters each month.

These men leave the utilities plant just north of W. Third St. every morning around 7 o'clock. They make the rounds, reading all types of meters as they go.

During the first seven days of each month, the meter readers record readings on meters outside Greenville. This completed, they begin reading the 18,000 meters in the city.

They copy readings exactly as they appear on the respective meters and convey the data to the City Hall billing office in downtown Greenville. Here all calculations are done.

Carl Abee, William Crisp, and Mrs. Helen Redd record the readings in 40 different ledgers—23 for the city and 17 for the county. A separate page is kept in the bulky volumes for each customer of Greenville Utilities.

Each meter reading is listed directly under last month's figure on each customer's page. Calculations are then made to determine the charges for each patron during the month.

After the charges have been figured, the billing cards are processed through an addressograph machine, "amount-due" figures are added, postage is applied by machine, and the bills are to be mailed to customers.

Bills are mailed to rural patrons on the 15th day of each month, city bills go in the mail on the first.

What remains to complete the monthly cycle at that point is what everyone is familiar with—the payment of the bills.

Going deeper into the mechanics of the monthly billing, though, investigation reveals that employees are constantly at work to prevent any unfair charges.

A major phase of this surveillance is an extensive program of meter testing. Under the direction of S. E. Briley, supervisor of meters and instruments for GUCO, all three types of measuring devices are constantly checked for accuracy.

Meters are compared through the testing procedure with criteria established by the Federal Bureau of Standards. This agency has set up specific standards on a nation-wide scale to which each meter must comply in order to qualify for use.

Using these standards, Briley has each meter checked at least once every five years as part of the rotation program practiced by Greenville Utilities.

An electrical testing board, operated by Marvin James at the utilities plant, detects the slightest measurement error in electrical meters. James, upon discovering an error (which, he reports, is seldom), re-calibrates the meter to ready it for further use. After each meter is proven to be satisfactory, it goes to the stockpile for installment when it is needed.

The task of testing gas and water meters falls to James Roebuck. Using accurate devices for measuring displacement of water or gas, Roebuck can detect faulty registering in gas and water meters. Inaccuracies, when occurring, are corrected and these meters, too, join the stockpile.

In addition to the testing procedure, GUCO is constantly doing a considerable amount of "re-reading." Whenever a customer complains that "this month's bill is too high," or workers in the billing office notice an extraordinary jump in a particular account, the meter readers retrace steps to make sure.

GUCO Supt. L. P. Bloxam reports that less than two per cent of the local Commission's readings have to be checked. He points out that, as a rule, the readings are found to be correct even after the rechecking.

However, many leaks in water or gas lines have been discovered by employee alertness in the billing office and by checking and re-checking of meters, lines, and fixtures by GUCO personnel.

And so, month after month, the process continues—Briley and his men reading, testing, repairing, and installing meters; Larry Brown and his billing department workers calculating, addressing, mailing, and collecting bills; and the customer visiting that familiar counter on the City Hall's first floor.

With all these integral parts continuously functioning, the domestic and commercial wheels of Pitt County and Greenville continue to turn.

CALCULATIONS . . . are made in the billing office to determine charges as bills are readied for mailing. Above, Mrs. Helen Redd records another new meter reading.

CYCLE IS COMPLETE . . . for month as customers pay accounts. Here, C. T. Fleming, Jr., marks Mrs. Bob Howell's November bill "paid."

FTC Outlines Complaint Over Payola

WASHINGTON (AP)—The public has been fooled and competition has been suppressed by nine companies that slipped payola to disc jockeys, the Federal Trade Commission charges.

In return for payola, the FTC said Friday, the radio and TV disc jockeys gave the firms recordings a good spin—sometimes playing the same records as often as six to ten times a day. Because these payments were concealed, the FTC said, the public was deceived into thinking that the records involved actually were among the most popular ones.

A spokesman for the Edward S. Basky Co., a Philadelphia record distributing firm, one of the nine named by the FTC, made this comment to a newsman: "Sure we paid disc jockeys. We met competition. Every company was involved in one way or another. We merely fought the battle to sell records, and that was to pay some of the bigger disc jockeys."

Another of the companies named was the huge Radio Corp. of America.

The FTC did not name any disc jockeys as the receivers of payola.

The television industry Friday amended its code of conduct to ban all rigged quiz shows, payola and deceptive advertising. The television board of the National Assn. of Broadcasters said it was doing so to clean its own house.

The FTC complaints named three manufacturers and six record distributors.

Besides RCA, the two manufacturers named were London Records, Inc., New York, and Bernad Lowe Enterprises, Inc., Philadelphia.

RCA and London acknowledged receipt of the complaints, but referred them to lawyers and had no comment.

All but one of the record distributors were Philadelphia firms. In addition to Basky, they were Chips Distributing Co., Inc., David Rosen, Inc., Universal Records Distributing Corp., and Sparks Music Distributors, Inc.

The ninth firm was Main Line Cleveland Inc., Cleveland, Ohio.

Two disc jockeys for radio station KYW in Cleveland were fired Friday. They are Joe Finan and Wes Hopkins. Finan said he and Hopkins got $50 a week from Mainline Cleveland, which distributes RCA Victor recordings.

But Finan said these were consultant fees, not payola.

There were these other developments on the payola front:

1. FTC Chairman Earl E. Kinter said in a speech at Louisville, Ky., that newspapers and magazines were next after investigators get through with radio and TV. He said his agency will use all its resources to wipe out "bait" advertising, where hucksters lure customers with a low-priced product, then try to switch them to a costlier model.

2. Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark), chairman of the House subcommittee which investigated the TV quiz show scandals, said in Philadelphia his committee will open public hearings next month on various practices in radio and TV. He did not say what practices, but the committee has been looking into payola.

3. A parade of musical personalities appeared at the New York district attorney's office Friday in connection with their appearances on the shows of disc jockey Alan Freed.

Freed has denied taking payola for plugging records, but has admitted taking consultant fees. He has been thrown off his TV and radio shows.

The D.A.'s visitors included singers Don Cherry, Eileen Rodgers, guitarist Les Paul and his wife, Mary Ford. Most of them said they knew nothing of payola.

Miss Rodgers said "I paid no money at all to Alan Freed. I was on his show many times. I got paid for my appearance. I never had to pay him. I never paid any kickback to him."

Singer Bobby Darin declined to discuss the questioning by the D.A.

The National Assn. of Broadcasters, in announcing amendments to its industry code, said they were "strong new provisions to protect the public from rigged TV show deceptive advertising and so-called payola practices."

One of the rebel leaders, Air Force Maj. Heber Tejera, pinned to Buenos Aires in the Pan American Constellation commandeered Wednesday while on a regular passenger run from Rio to Belem, Brazil.

With him was an accomplice, Charles Herba, a civilian mechanic, and a Brazilian senator, Remy Archer, whom they had seized as a hostage.

Kubitschek said his government will try to extradite the "air pirates" from Argentina.

Archer said Tejera Pinto took command of the airliner shortly after it left Rio and forced the four-man crew at gunpoint to alter course to Aragaracas. He said the 36 other passengers were permitted to leave the plane when it landed but that he was held incommunicado.

He said the Constellation remained at Aragaracas all day Thursday, leaving at 5:15 a.m., Friday along with a stolen private plane and three C47 mail planes.

Parachute troops took over the airstrip a short time later, lining it with steel drums. It was reported that one of the rebel planes crashed when it turned back for an emergency landing.

A government spokesman said several of the occupants were captured.

The other rebel planes were reported to have flown deeper in the jungle.

The insurgents had been supporters of Janio Quadros, 42, a former governor of Sao Paulo and an announced candidate in next year's presidential election. But Quadros broke with the major opposition parties last week and withdrew from the race.

Among the passengers on the hijacked airliner released at Aragaracas were two Americans, Mildred Hollman, 32, of the Watch Tower religious society who has lived in Brazil since 1942; and Robert Bartlett, 43, Ludington, Mich., a technician assigned to the U.S. Point 4 program in Belem.

Several of the ringleaders were involved in a similar abortive revolt in 1956 which crushed in 18 days. Kubitschek showed leniency and granted pardons to the officers then.

In the latest propaganda protest the officers charged the Kubitschek government with being corrupt and Communist-tainted. They flew the stolen planes to the small jungle town of Aragaracas, 100 miles northwest of here, and sought to rally support.

Government paratroops took over the town and its airstrip early Friday, shortly after the rebels pulled out.

More significant than the external threats, however, are evidences of opposition within the country of an estimated 2,600,000 people. Long-time local observers report two recent mysterious fires in government offices, the finding of Molotov cocktails (gasoline bombs) in two restaurants, the scrawling of a few anti-Trujillo slogans on some walls, and increased outspoken criticism of the regime.

On the surface the situation is calm. But the government is not taking any chances. It says it has spent an extra 50 million dollars for armaments this year.

Those who know Trujillo best say he is ready to fight any challenge to his rule. At 68 the dictator himself looks fit and healthy. He expresses absolute confidence that he will overcome his adversaries, within or without the country.

In charging the jury, the judge said that "this was not a traffic case" and "ordinarily the automobile is not a deadly weapon."

"It is a deadly weapon if it is intentionally used in such a way that the natural and probable consequences are to cause death," he added.

Patterson and James Bradley Jr., 23, both of Canton, were drivers engaged in a drag race Sept. 12 when they crashed into a car driven by William Serens, 33, according to police. Serens's wife, Nancy, 32, their son, Ricky, 8, and Serens's father, Rocky, 60, were killed in the collision. William was paralyzed as a result of injuries suffered in the crash.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—It's getting tough for Missouri mules to find work, even in Missouri.

The St. Louis State Hospital has regretfully announced that it is replacing its team, Kate and Pearl, with a truck. The truck is cheaper than a new wagon would be, and the old wagon in which Kate and Pearl have been hauling trash, has broken down.

The hospital has had mules as long as anyone can remember.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A great crash disturbed the peace Magistrate's Court Friday but it brought a quick verdict.

While tenants of five nearby houses were claiming the dwellings were too dangerous to live in, a police sergeant rushed into the courtroom.

"Those houses," he whispered to the magistrate, "the roofs have just fallen in."

The magistrate quickly ordered the houses to be made safe or demolished.

Residents of the houses were given temporary quarters. Nobody was hurt.

Trujillo Defies Many Plotters

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Generalissimo Rafael Trujillo is a lonely but defiant ruler in the Caribbean today. With a revolver on his desk, the white-haired dictator knows that enemies are plotting to destroy him.

His 30-year dictatorship, struggling with serious internal economic problems, is being harassed from all sides.

Small signs of political unrest within the normally tranquil country also have appeared during the past six months.

Dominican exiles in Cuba, Puerto Rico, Venezuela and the United States continue to plot Trujillo's downfall.

More significant than the external threats, however, are evidences of opposition within the country of an estimated 2,600,000 people. Long-time local observers report two recent mysterious fires in government offices, the finding of Molotov cocktails (gasoline bombs) in two restaurants, the scrawling of a few anti-Trujillo slogans on some walls, and increased outspoken criticism of the regime.

CHAPTER 34
Even old Boyne Strapp, the Army scout, showed weariness to-night. He'd just got back from a rough trip.

His horse had stepped into a hole and thrown him, and then had got up dead lame. Strapp had found himself on foot in a remote area and with a horse that could just barely put one foot in front of another. But the old man had not only saved his own hide, he managed to get the horse in.

Now he was sitting in Sergeant Desportes' quarters, with his feet in a tub of hot water, a man-sized hot toddy in one hand and a big black cigar in the other.

"Just like a tenderfoot, damn it," he said, showing considerable embarrassment. "Go for a ride and the next thing you know you're on foot. Well, at least I didn't have to carry the saddle back."

"How you feeling, Boyne?" asked the Sergeant, looking at the old man with concern.

"I'll feel better when I get this hot whiskey down," said Strapp, grinning. "And then maybe you'll fix me another one."

The Sergeant did.

"Trip wasn't a total loss," said Strapp. "At least I heard a rumormongering fellow say that it's just something I heard in a cantina in Guadalupe."

Strapp laughed. "I speak good Mexican, you see, but I don't let on. They see me, them Mexes, an ordinary-looking kind of Anglo, and they don't figure I speak the lingo, so they talk around me. Well, these two fellows was talking about Jamie Wigan, and I gathered he's hoked up at the old fort. Remember Fort Casa Grande? It was abandoned by the Army about twenty years ago. It'll run down to hell now, but quite a few Mexican families live there rent free, you know."

"If that's true," said the Sergeant, "why doesn't he cross over into Old Mexico and then he'd be safe?"

"Don't know. Maybe he crosses back and forth. He's a cunning fox. Can't tell what he might do."

The Sergeant thought it over for a moment, then asked: "How much, faith do you put in this rumormongering?"

"None. I'm telling you what I heard. But I'll say this. It's a good spot. Nobody ever goes there. No reason. And the nearest village is, oh, at least ten miles away, maybe more. Nothing but Mexican. And they all over Jamie. Don't know why, except maybe because he's never killed a Mexican in his life. Only Anglos and Indians—and damned few Indians."

There was a long silence. Finally Strapp said: "Tell you what, Sergeant. In thirty years or so I've run down some damned wild rumors and found some of 'em—not many, but some—true."

"You're right," said the Sergeant. "We'll start tomorrow at dawn."

Evening had fallen at Fort Casa Grande, and the coal-oil flares had been lighted in front of the old headquarters building.

The Mexicans had all come in from the fields and were eating supper, many of them sitting out in front of officers' row and the various barracks where they lived.

Inside, the rooms were lit by candles and coal-oil lamps.

Children ran about everywhere, yelling and squealing and playing tag and other games, all reveling in the cool evening air after a hot day. Insects chirped incessantly in the big clumps of weeds that had now overgrown the parade ground.

A big white moon rose above the ragged palings of the half-dismantled palisades.

Jimmie Wigan was lying back on a bunk bed with his hands under his head, staring at the low ceiling where the coal-oil lamp cast a big round reflection.

His feet were bare and he was wearing nothing but an undershirt and an old pair of work pants.

His gunbelt with the two fight-guns and his Winchester hung from a peg on the wall just above him. He began to hum to himself.

By the time it was midnight, every light in Fort Casa Grande was out except the one in Jamie's room—a room not unlike the Sergeant's at Mesa Encantada, except that here everything was weather-ravaged, heat-split and worm-eaten.

"Look, Jamie," said Juana Bello, who was embroidering him a new shirt. "Look how the gold shines on the red."

"Just like a damn sunrise," said Jamie.

"You don't like it?" Juana demanded, her pretty face showing anxiety.

"Oh, sure, Juana," said Jamie, reassuringly, as if talking to a child. "I like it fine."

"Good," said Juana, smiling with pleasure. "It will look wonderful with your striped pants."

Jamie signed and resumed his contemplation of the round reflection on the ceiling, finally he spoke remotely, as if to himself. "I wonder what it's like to die."

Juana almost dropped her needle and threw him a startled, uncomprehending look. "To die? Why?"

"Well, a man's got to die sometime," said Jamie. "Then, after a while, I've seen lots of men die and it was always like a dog getting run over by a wagon. They just kicked and died. But how can you know what they're thinking?"

"Look, Jamie," said Juana, hastily. "It's a new design. Like a... well, you call it a sunrise. And I'm going to use light blue up above. That will be for the sky. Do you like it?"

"Oh, sure, fine," said Jamie, scarcely glancing at it.

There was a long silence as a dog began to howl. Jamie did not seem to notice. But Juana looked up, startled, and listened; then his face cleared.

"It's that Gomez pup," she said. "He's part coyote. The moon's full tonight and I guess he wishes he was out with the wild animals."

"I guess he does," said Jamie, reflectively. "And I can't say I blame him. I was domesticated for quite some time. Yep, quite some time. Pretty soon I started howl and then I run off and joined the pack."

Juana looked at him and laughed, not understanding. The dog continued to howl.

"However," said Jamie, "it's all one whether you go or stay. For a fellow like me, that is. The Sergeant now, he's got a strong character and then he's got here idea of what's his right and what's wrong. He lives by it. But me, I never could figure it out. Right is just what you say is right, I guess. And there ain't no right at all out there in the desert—except cunning."

"Look, Jamie, how it's hanging up," said Juana. "I'll have it done by tomorrow night."

"Good, fine," said Jamie, and then: "He thought I never tried. He thought I was just a mangy conning dog."

Juana looked up quickly. "The Sergeant? Oh, him! Why do you talk about him so much? He would hang you if he caught you."

"Yes," said Jamie, "he would. And I wouldn't hold no grudge. Specially Jamie burst out laughing. "That's a good one. Like the Irish joke."

"A joke? About hanging?" Juana looked bewildered. "You talk very funny tonight, Jamie."

"Yes," said Jamie, "they were hanging this here Irishman, and he said: 'Bedad, this will sure be a lesson to me.' Jamie rolled around on the bed laughing, even if she didn't know what Jamie was talking about and concentrated on her embroidery.

Jamie must kill or be killed. "Better I kill you," he is old. "Then I read the story here to tomorrow."

Louisiana Voting To Pick Governor

By JAMES MCLEAN
NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—About 800,000 Louisianians are expected to vote today on a successor to the state's fiery Gov. Earl K. Long.

Eleven candidates—an all-time record—seek the governorship in the first Democratic primary, which also will nominate other top state officials, a new legislature and hundreds of local officeholders. In Louisiana the Democratic nomination amounts to election.

Five of the candidates for governor are seasoned campaigners. Politicians and public samplings show two are most likely to enter a runoff Jan. 9 unless one candidate sweeps to victory. They are New Orleans Mayor deLesseps Morrison, 47, and former Gov. Jimmie Davis, 53, both promising cleaner, more responsible leadership in the state.

Much campaign pressure has built up for a fresh political outlook, after the shock wave of the 64-year-old governor's confinement in two mental hospitals last summer.

Besides Morrison and Davis, three expected to show big strength are former Gov. James A. Noe, pledging to carry on the Rainach, Louisiana's strong segregationist; and State Comptroller William J. Dodd, one-time Long crown prince who broke with the governor years ago.

The tempestuous Long, robust once again, is fighting political oblivion by backing the 68-year-old Noe, aging wheel of the late Huey P. Long, Long, with five rivals himself, is clinging to power by running on the Noe ticket for lieutenant governor.

Despite the apparent strength of Davis and Morrison, in every gubernatorial primary since the days of Huey Long, the Long candidate has won in the first primary or reached the runoff.

The Democratic nominee for governor faces a Republican contender April 19. GOP leaders have nominated former state police Supt. Francis Grevenberg, who recently changed his party affiliation from Democrat to Republican.

When Long raged at the amazed Legislature last summer, just before his hospital confinements, he said only the Lord and the law would prevent him from seeking an unprecedented fourth term. But the state constitution stood in his way.

The six other hopefuls are the Rev. Mack P. Stewart Jr., Baton Rouge Baptist evangelist; Allen G. Lacombe, New Orleans race track handicapper and sports promoter; Roosevelt Thompson, New Orleans businessman who likes to style himself the "New Louisiana Kingsfish"; Gale Berry, young Lake Charles insurance man; Holt Allen, a country grocer from Jena; and John B. Krey Jr., New Orleans piano store executive.

A record voting of more than 853,000 was predicted. There are 1,108,611 persons—nearly all Democrats—registered to vote. Only voting machines are used throughout the state. Polls opened at 6 a.m. and will close at 8 p.m.

President's Visit Exciting Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—Turkey anticipates the visit of President Eisenhower with an excitement unusual for this silent and often aloof land.

Signs are popping up in strange places—"Turks like Ike too."

In peasant villages almost lost on the desolate plateau of Asia Minor, in sophisticated, cynical Istanbul, evidence of interest runs high.

"Our people seem to have a tremendous personal feeling about your President," a high ranking Turkish official said. "We have had applications from all parts of Turkey to come here to see him. Thousands of them. It's amazing."

During his 17 hour visit Sunday and Monday President Eisenhower will see only the capital of this NATO ally of 25 million people, larger in area than Texas and as contrasting as Montana and Florida.

He will not see the teeming crossroads of Istanbul, the riviera of Turkey's south coast, or the bleak mountains where Turkish soldiers stand guard along the Soviet border.

But in Ankara he will see a capital that reflects Turkey itself—ambitious, unfinished, hardy and poor, born in the East and striving toward the West.

Turkey is too large and rural a country to be defined by a city, but Ankara does it better than any other.

Here Eisenhower will be greeted by leaders he already has met, President Celal Bayar, Premier Adnan Menderes and Foreign Minister Fatih Ruzhu Zorlu. Like virtually all Turks in public life, these men have thrown their support behind Western and American policy. There are no stronger advocates than they of the Atlantic Pact and such regional defense groups as the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO).

Boy Convinces The Authorities

LOS ANGELES (AP)—It took a boy to convince authorities that a stop light won't do the work of a crossing guard.

The guard was removed Monday from an intersection in suburban Highland. Children at the nearby school were carefully instructed how to work the push-button light.

Five-year-old Calvin Landau did it just the way they'd told him to. Principal Olin Graves was watching.

"He got as far as a traffic island, and then he must have panicked," Graves said. "He started to run back and ran in front of a car."

One hundred mothers picketed the crossing Friday.

The crossing guard was ordered back on duty.

Arab Christians make up about 12 per cent of the population of predominantly Moslem Jordan.

Dragged In His Accused Briber

NEW YORK (AP)—It was an unusual court appearance to say the least.

An irate patrolman dragging a man in by the collar with one hand and waving a $100 bill in the other.

The bill, said patrolman Dennis Ryan, had just been offered to him as a bribe by his prisoner, Herman Moskowitz, 46.

Ryan was in court to testify against a defendant charged with having an envelope containing policy slips.

Ryan said Moskowitz approached him in the hall, told him "If you say you can't identify that envelope you can have this," and pressed the bill in his hand.

Moskowitz was charged with attempted bribery. The policy case was postponed.

Limitations On Skunk Bounty

BOERNE, Tex. (AP)—Kendall County commissioners are considering a bounty on skunks but are running into some limitations, forcefully stated by County Judge M. A. Shumard Jr.

The commissioners debated the issue of a bounty and decided it might be a good thing.

Then a commissioner brought up the question of what part of the carcass should be delivered for collection of a bounty.

Judge Shumard suggested skunk tails, but with one provision.

"Of course these would be received on the front steps of the courthouse instead of in my office," he said.

The commissioners will decide the bounty issue in January.

Pakistani Have Great Welcome Awaiting Ike

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP)—The people of Karachi will line up along a 10-mile road from the airport to downtown Karachi to greet President Eisenhower Monday.

This nation is divided into two vastly different parts. One side, including Karachi, is largely desert. East Pakistan, 900 miles away across a wedge of India, is an area of rice paddies wetted by monsoons.

President Eisenhower will spend a day and a half in Karachi, an overcrowded city between the desert and the Arabian Sea. Most of Pakistan's government is still here, although the capital was recently shifted 700 miles inland to Rawalpindi.

Eisenhower also will fly across fertile irrigation projects and the stony barren mountains of West Pakistan, between Afghanistan on one side and India on the other.

The most important link between east and west Pakistan is the Moslem religion. Under the leadership of Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the Moslems won a separate state when freedom came to the Indian subcontinent in 1947. Jinnah died in 1948 and his top aide, Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan, was assassinated in 1951. Pakistan began to slide into corruption. In October 1958 the army chief of staff, Mohammed Ayub Khan, stepped in. The British-trained officer has a reputation for discipline, hard work and honesty.

In a part of the world noted for neutralism, Ayub Khan thinks in terms of military positions and is a firm American ally.

But Ayub Khan has worries of his own. The Soviets are building roads down through the buffer nation of Afghanistan. The Chinese Communists are building roads through western Tibet near disputed Kashmir. Ayub Khan says Pakistan will be under military threat within five years.

This and the foreign aid without which Pakistan cannot continue its economic development programs are likely to be on Ayub Khan's mind when Eisenhower flies in from Ankara Monday.
