

Twenty Armed Criminals Break Out Ivy Bluff Prison

IVY BLUFF, N.C. (AP)—Twenty of North Carolina's worst criminals broke out of Ivy Bluff prison...

They found the arsenal of weapons. They dressed in guards' clothing and captured the tower guards.

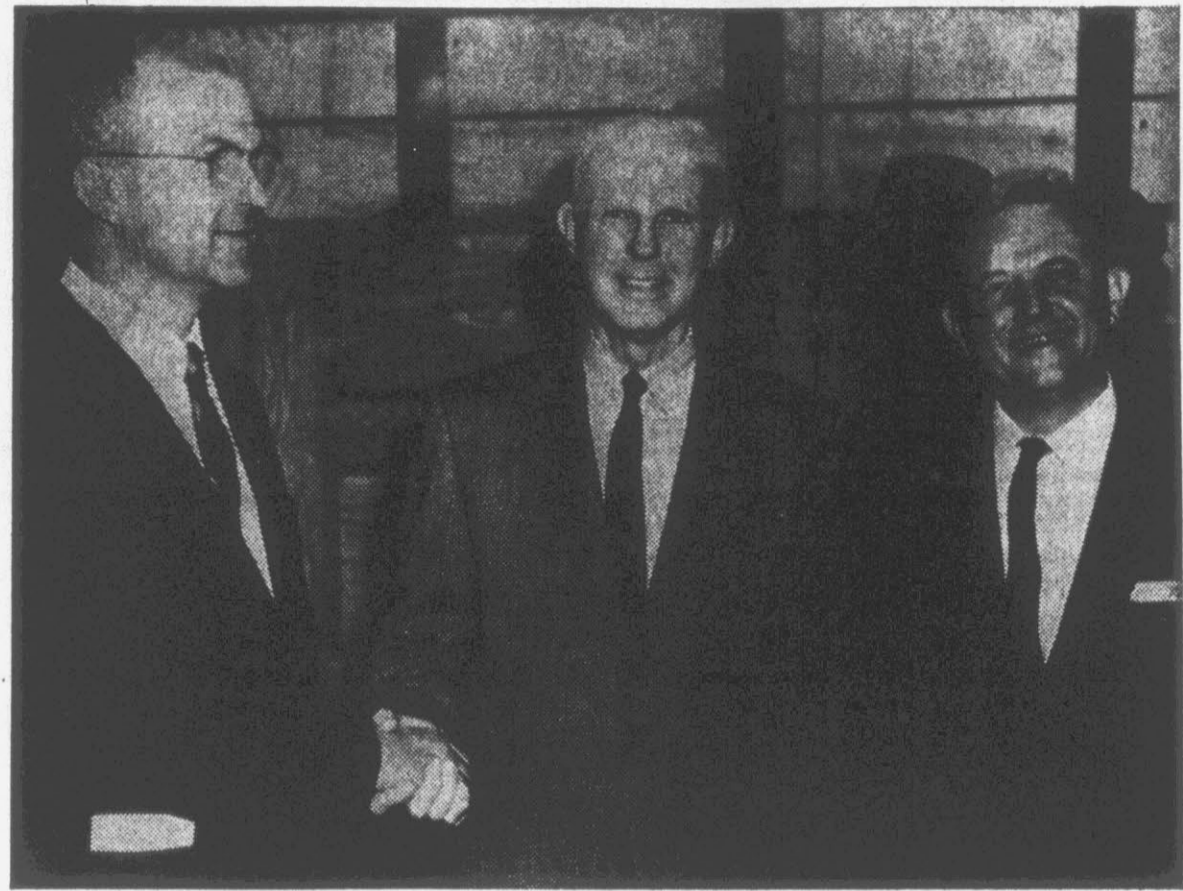

They locked up the guards and left in a prison truck and car. The car was found wrecked nearby...

Among the escapees was James Christy, 26, from Concord. He also took part in the sensational escape from Raleigh's Central Prison Oct. 25.

Stewart is serving 25 years from New Hanover for armed robbery and highway robbery and Christy is serving 19 to 25 years from Mecklenburg for manslaughter and three years more for escape.

At their escape trial, Stewart complained bitterly that he had been mistreated at Ivy Bluff. He said he had injured himself in order to be brought from there to the Central Prison hospital.

Eisenhower Urges All National Leaders To Help Disarmament

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP)—President Eisenhower, speaking to a crowd reflecting this nation's poverty, today called upon all national leaders "worthy of the name" to join in an enforceable system of disarmament.

He witnessed a cricket match and a breathtaking display of spectacular Pakistani horsemanship.

Observing Pakistani tradition he put on covers for his shoes before placing a lily wreath on the tomb of Pakistani's founder, Mohamed Ali Jinnah.

He and Ayub Khan whisked over the city in a U. S. Marine Corps helicopter to look over a Pakistani rehabilitation center for refugees.

They reaffirmed satisfaction over increasingly "close cooperation between Pakistan and the United States."

Eisenhower's spokesman, press secretary James C. Hagerty, later said that so far as he knows Eisenhower has no intention of reducing military aid to Pakistan.

Pitt Education Board Supports Foes Of Routing

The Pitt County Board of Education gave its support to resolution adopted by three different Ayden governmental and educational bodies yesterday at its December meeting.

The report reviewed yesterday came from Bethel High School. It showed that, during the past 10 years, 47 of 225 Bethel graduates have completed or are completing academic activity leading to a degree from some institution of higher education.

WORSHIP CENTER . . . featuring the Madonna surrounded by artificial magnolia blossoms and foliage, and backed by a candle, is part of the decorations that will be viewed in the V. S. Harrington home during the Christmas Home Tour here Wednesday. From left to right are Mrs. Harrington, Mrs. R. W. Davenport, president of W. S. C. S. at St. James Methodist Church, and Mrs. I. J. Mrs. Waldrop Discusses Meaning Of Christmas

The Greenville Woman's Club held its regular meeting Friday at the Woman's Club building. Mrs. J. H. Waldrop gave the program on "The Christian Meaning of Christmas". Mrs. Waldrop said many have lost sight of the real meaning of the Christmas story and do not realize the beauty, majesty, wonder and glory of it. With all the commercialism and irrational rejoicing, it is difficult to avoid being cynical. She said she made no plea for a joyless or puritanical Christmas, but it is sad that only a tiny minority know what it is all about.

"Let Christian men rejoice, but know why they rejoice," and know that "the birthday they celebrate is real, live and contemporary," she said. We need to think more deeply about that which we have known since children and see with new eyes the meaning of God's visit. "Let us do all that we can to make known the astonishing mystery that God became one of us that we might become like Him," Mrs. Waldrop continued.

Following the program, Mrs. Harvey Tripp, president, presided over a brief business meeting. She welcomed the visitors, Mesdames Ellen Pietrie, Hubert Joyner, and J. A. Collins, Sr., and Mrs. Tripp's mother, Mrs. Griffin.

New members, Mesdames Tom Davis, Scott Forbis, Joseph Le Conte, Herbert Harris, Pete Lauter, Ed Laughter, Paul Ricks and Earl Windley were recognized.

Mrs. Tripp thanked the Garden Club Department for the decorations in the club, and also the following hostesses for the afternoon: Mrs. J. A. Piver, chairman, and Mesdames W. G. Pollard, J. B. Spillman, N. O. Van Nortwick, P. E. Wells, S. E. West, Dink James and A. A. Hines.

The number of indigent children in the schools was brought to the attention of the Club. Members voted to give a check to help these children. A donation to The Salvation Army was also approved. Collection was also taken for a needy family recommended by Mrs. Ed Ricks, chairman of Help A Home Committee.

Mrs. H. R. Rogers, chairman of the American Home Department announced their meeting will be at the Home Demonstration Laboratory on Friday with a program on "Christmas Foods".

Adlai Remains A Popular Figure

Adlai (Stevenson, that is) keeps the political spectators guessing.

It wasn't so long ago he was leaving questioners convinced he wouldn't undergo the pains and strains of campaigning for anything in the world. In short, he'd had it.

Oddly enough, pollsters kept including the 1952 and 1956 candidate's name in their figuring; and whether this was due to a sort of natural reflex on their part or whether it was due to voluntary expressions of endorsement among the polled public, was never really made clear. But despite Stevenson's refusal to give anyone any hope he might run, his name continually ranked high in samplings of public opinion.

This past Sunday he was queried once again on that favorite question about his reactions to the opportunity of being president.

His answer left a loophole you could drive a wagon through.

In effect, Stevenson told the nation that the question of accepting a draft offer would have to be faced when and if he was confronted by it.

He explained that such an offering is not expected.

As to that, we wonder.

On a recent occasion columnist James Marlow pointed out that two personalities figuring in the 1960 guessing-game stood head and shoulders above the rest of the field insofar as public awareness was concerned. One was the Vice President, Richard Nixon; the other was two-time loser Adlai Stevenson.

The stigma of losing two elections could be a handicap for Stevenson. That cannot be overlooked in his 1960 prospects.

On the other hand, one has this to consider: In 1952 and 1956 he was opposing the most popular public figure of the day. Many observers were inclined to believe that the outcome might have been different had the Democratic candidate been running against any other opponent.

Even so, in running against a national hero, Stevenson amassed a respectable total of over 27 million voters in '52 and a little bit over 26 million votes the second time around.

For lucid statements on current affairs, the public is still strikingly interested in Stevenson's views. And despite individual learnings toward the several untested aspirants for the presidency, the Stevenson name retains an aura of honest respect and liking in the minds of many.

Come time for the National Democratic Convention, it might well be these factors will all be weighed and re-weighed by party chieftains.

Whatever the outcome; it won't be dull.

Not Yet Ready To Go So Far

By LYNN NISBET

SENATOR? — The suggestion that Haywood Robbins, or anybody else from Charlotte, might seek to replace Everett Jordan in the United States in the eastern two-thirds of the state. The east-west rotation plan for selecting the Governor and Lieutenant Governor is not held as sacrosanct as it used to be, but the voters generally are not ready to elect both United States Senators from the same community—THE WESTERN half of the industrial Piedmont and living only 65 miles apart. Sen. Sam J. Ervin lives at Morantown. With a 60-mile radius of Charlotte lives one Senator and four Representatives in the Congress—Paul Kitchen of the 8th district at Wadesboro, Hugh Alexander of the 9th at Kannapolis, Charles Raper Jonas of the 10th at Lincolnton, and Basil Whitener of the 11th at Gastonia. Three of the congressmen live within a 30-mile radius, as does the incumbent Lieutenant Governor. And two of the seven Justices of the Supreme Court.

Within a circle drawn around and 60 miles from Charlotte there lived for the 1950 census more than a million people, about 300,000 of them in South Carolina. That leaves about 700,000 of them in North Carolina. That leaves about 700,000 for North Carolina, the second most populous area in the state. A similar 60-mile radius circle with Greensboro as its center would embrace considerably more than a million North Carolinians in 1950. (It is assumed that the two areas have grown proportionately since that time). Within that circle would be one Senator, two Representatives, in the Congress, and the incumbent Governor.

These two circle areas with 60-mile radius (slightly overlapping) contain more than one-third of the state's population, a possibly larger percentage of voters participating in elections. And they have both the Governor and Lieutenant Governor, both United States Senators, and six of the 12 Representatives in Congress.

GEOGRAPHY — Economic geography is becoming increasingly more significant than physical geography in determining qualifications for public office. It is also true that North Carolina's economic geography can no longer be divided as the agrarian East and the industrial West. Industry is spreading all over, and the growing importance of livestock and poultry in the agricultural scheme has depreciated the dominance of the East. Advanced methods of communication and travel have to considerable degree eliminated sectional lines. But not entirely.

Feeling persists in coastal and mountain areas that unless some semblance of the rotation plan for Governors and east-west distribution of Senators is retained, the people in those sections

Overlooked A Basic Lesson Of Long Ago

Glory be!

The importance of a basic education has even reached into bank-robbing circles.

A little item in Monday's paper told of a young man banging away at a bank vault, and his labors interrupted by a ring of watching policemen. Seems he had fair warning, too; because there were signs aplenty the bank's vault was hooked into an electronic alarm.

The captive explained "I guess I don't read so good".

Well now; he could have gone further.

He might have added that a working knowledge of metallurgy would also be helpful; and in his case, especially, some time spent studying applied electronics was a necessity.

Too, a man involved in this kind of occupation should be carrying some sort of hazard insurance (something we bet he never considered). And the news story gave no hint as to whether or not our subject was able to prepare an income tax report that would explain away the anticipated loot.

There are many thought-provoking oversights to be considered in the downfall of this misguided youth . . . the greatest of these not necessarily being an inability to "read so good" nor having tasted the fruits of higher education.

He forgot one of the earliest lessons of all: "Crime does not pay".

Nixon Waiting For A Harvest

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon is like a farmer whose planting is finished and who is sitting now on his front porch, keeping cool, and waiting for the crops to grow.

For an ambitious politician he's in an enviable position. He is front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination and at this moment everything is working for him. His troubles—if they come—won't come until next year. So he doesn't have to do much talking or scamparing around.

With President Eisenhower out of the country for almost a month, he is the top-ranking government official in the United States. He'll be the man for the politicians to see and the Eisenhower Cabinet to talk to.

Just by being here he'll stay in the public eye, which has been a pretty permanent location for him ever since 1953. If somehow, while Eisenhower is away, he can be a factor in settling the steel dispute, that's so much extra gravy.

Nixon's predecessors in the vice presidency had little to do. Eisenhower changed that. He has made more use of his vice president than any other President. That fact alone has kept Nixon in the national consciousness for almost seven years.

Nixon's assignments from Eisenhower and the way he made use of them, could not but help him politically.

For instance: his trip to the Soviet Union, his arguments with Premier Nikita Khrushchev,

Apparently Ready To Go

By HENRY HOWARD

Yesterday afternoon at the monthly meeting of the County Commissioners after the politics had selected a new Board Chairman.

The former chairman was excused a bit early since the major issues had been attended to. After donning his overcoat, he turned at the door.

"Who's giving the Christmas party this time?" Bob Martin wanted to know.

Everybody in the room, including myself, looked at everybody else for a silent brief moment. Then there were several comments about past Yule flings remembered for this or that.

Woody Wooten allowed he'd hosted the annual social gathering last year and mentioned, incidentally, that he'd been the most recently retired Board chairman.

Then somebody pointed out: "Bob, it looks like the party is a courtesy shown by the retiring chairman."

Still standing in the door, Martin said, "If I did give a party, you reckon anybody'd come?"

Grinning from behind his cigar, Woody answered, "Try us and see!"

Last night was my first meeting after joining a local organization.

An employment cohort of mine was kind enough to pick me up at 7:30 and escort me to the meeting place.

We arrived and he, exercising implicit courtesy, began opening doors for me introducing friends to me, buying me refreshments, and other such things.

As we began filing into the meeting hall, a man stationed at the door began handing out numbered tickets for some sort of door prize. This time, this friend entered the room before his "guest."

Well, the meeting progressed and I never gave the "rude" incident at the door another thought. At least not until a short time later.

Just before the meeting's end, there was the drawing for the door prize. The voice boomed out, "0-0-1-6-7-2." I thought a second, then hurriedly fumbled in my coat pocket for my ticket. I just knew that number sounded like something I'd seen very recently. I looked at the number. It read: "0-0-1-6-7-3." Three! I thought it was two.

Just at that moment, this friend of mine stood up and strolled up front to collect the prize.

I thought to myself, "Here, I missed that by one number—and I would've had the right number if he'd let me go first at the door a while ago."

I couldn't help scolding him mildly when he returned to his seat: "You and your manners," I said.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

We frequently find people of pronounced Christian character who are members of other faiths.

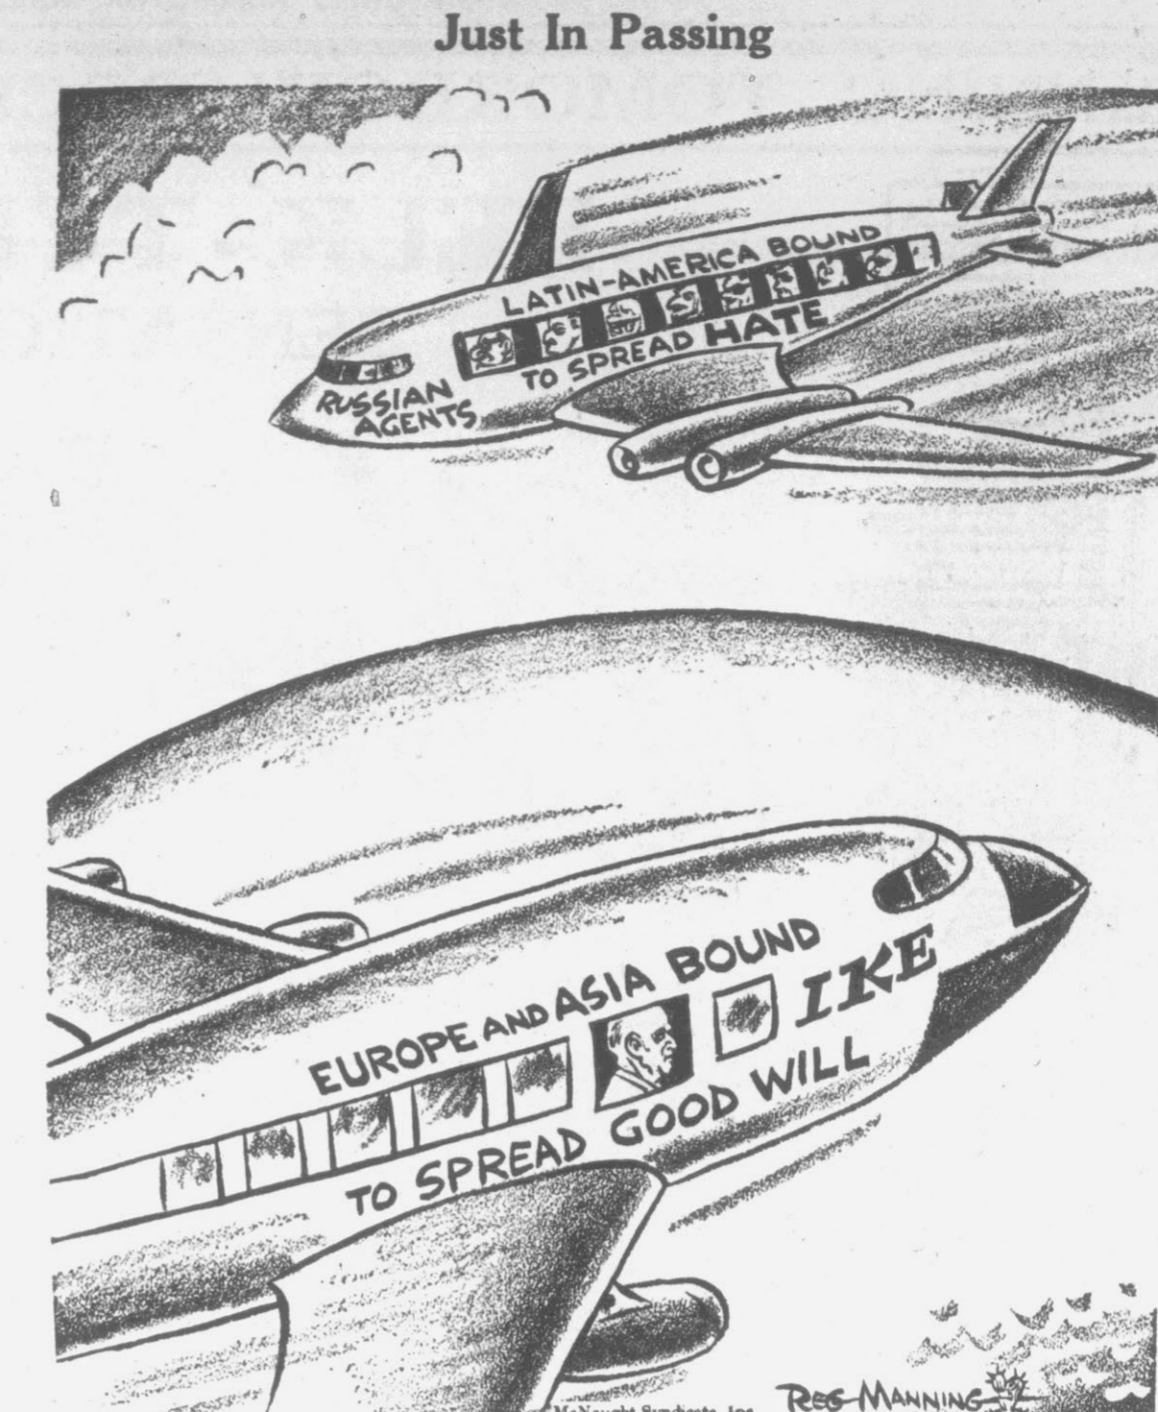

Gandhi, the Hindu leader and mystic, was such a person. Certainly he was not a Christian insofar as the orthodox definition of that term goes, but there was much about Gandhi that was Christian.

Probably you and I do not read our New Testaments as regularly and eagerly as Gandhi read his. He never became a Christian. He clung tenaciously to the Hindu faith of his forebearers. But he was unqualified in his praise of Jesus, as regarded the New Testament as the greatest book ever written. He studied it with a devotion which would shame a large majority of Christians.

One of the things he loved most were Christian hymns. At his funeral service the hymn "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" was sung.

"We the whole realm of nature mine, That were a present far too small; Love so amazing, so divine Demands my soul, my life, my all."

It is certainly not true to say that any one religion is as good as another. Each of us feels that his religion is best. But this should not blind us to the fact that there is some good in all religions.

Other Editors Saying If Aycock Spoke Today

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

No man of North Carolina at any time ever excited the full and forceful following of the people as did Governor Charles B. Aycock. From the time of his work for the Democrats about 1898 through the period of his serving as Governor (1901-1904) and until his death in 1912 his name was a byword among the people.

We have been re-reading Aycock's address in connection with preparing material upon the occasion of the 100th anniversary of his birth last November 1.

As we have read we have found ourselves asking: Would Aycock get the hearing and the following from the people today equal to what he had in his day?

The speeches are logical, well organized, forceful, well-written. They do not appear to have, though, the marks of exceeding greatness with which we now associate the champion of equality and universal education.

The magic of the man, his ability to inspire and challenge, one must deduce, sprang probably more from his superior genius as an orator than from the content of his messages. No man in North Carolina made such a vivid and lasting impression on the people. There dwell among us today men such as Col. John D. Langston of Goldsboro and Col. William T. Joyner of Raleigh who still thrill at the recollection of some address Governor Aycock made.

When he spoke men forgot all but this master of eloquence there before them. Time and place and the world ceased to exist for the hearers and they were freed from everything but the lifting hypnotic force that gave them new strength and confidence and assurance.

WHAT'S IN IT? (The Asheville Citizen)

There's money (we hope) in your wallet. Besides that, can you from memory list the contents of it? Odds are, says Business Week, you can't. Yet most men have nothing but memory to serve them when they lose their wallets.

Of course, you'll remember your wallet contains such important items as your driver's license, car registration and social security card. But most likely you'll skip a number of others, perhaps credit cards. Chances are you don't have the cards or license numbers recorded anywhere else.

So, it is advised, take an inventory, listing not only the contents but the pertinent data such as serial numbers. If you keep a copy at home or office, it can save you a lot of inconvenience in case of loss.

Living Cost To Go Up Next Year

By ELMER ROESSNER

The cost of living will go up next year.

That's no glimmer in a crystal ball; it is a statement based on facts already developed. Witness:

1. There will be a rise in steelworkers' wages. The men were out so long and the defiant statements have been so strong that the union cannot go back without a substantial increase. We are amused at the Orientals' concept of "face," but "face" is an accidental factor, too. Union leaders would not disembowel themselves if they failed to get a substantial increase, but they would plunge the country into an economic hara kiri rather than lose face.

Everybody knows this. So the final settlement—with some face-saving by the steel companies as well—will provide a substantial increase in pay, and this will lead to a rise in price of steel, and in turn a rise in price

Sounds Harder Today

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Many an elderly grandfather dreams this time of year of the joys of the old-fashioned Christmas.

But when he describes the Yule seasons of long ago to his modern city-born grandson, the boy wonders whether weren't a form of punishment rather than a pleasure.

"We didn't buy our tree at a supermarket," recalls Grandpa. "We went into the woods and found the one we wanted, and chopped it down ourselves, and lugged it all the way home on foot."

"Didn't you get caught?" asks the grandson.

"Oh, it wasn't against the law in those days," says Grandpa. "And we didn't buy our ornaments from a store. We decorated the three ourselves. We'd get needle and thread and make long strings of cranberries and popcorn, and wind them around the tree. And we'd cut out a pasteboard star and cover it with a piece of tinfoil and put it at the top of the tree."

"We didn't have electric lights. We lit the tree with candles."

"Didn't anybody turn you in to the fire department?" asks the modern lad.

"No, the nearest fire cart was 10 miles away in town," chuckles Grandpa. "We kept a bucket of water handy in case the candles set the tree on fire."

"I can still remember how shivery cold it was on those Christmas mornings," continues Grandpa.

"Why didn't you just turn up the thermostat?"

"There wasn't any thermostat in those days because there was not any furnace. I had to light the fire in the kitchen and parlor stoves."

"What presents did you get, Grandpa?"

"Oh, my sister usually got a doll, and I'd get maybe a sled or a new sweater."

"Is that all?" asks the child.

"Yep, that was it."

"You didn't even get an electric train and a bicycle and a space helmet and a rocket gun and some games?"

"I bet you went out riding on your new sled right away, Grandpa."

"Nope. In those days everyone had his chores to do. I had to go out and slop the pigs, and water the horses and chop firewood for the kitchen stove, and carry out the ashes and—oh, it might be afternoon before I got to try out my sled."

Turning to his grandson he asks: "Well, sonny, how'd you like to have an old-fashioned Christmas like that?"

"Grandpa, I'd turn in daddy and mommy to the police—and I'd turn in Santa Claus, too. Nobody can treat little kids like that anymore — and get away with it."

Grimes-Keel Vows Exchanged

ROBERSONVILLE—Miss Catherine Ann Keel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dallas Keel of Robersonville, and Mr. Edward Alton Grimes, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Grimes of Robersonville, were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the Gold Point Christian Church.

The Rev. Harold F. Brown, pastor and former teacher of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Wiley Burris Rogerson, pianist, and Miss Janie Gurganus, soloist.

The vows were spoken in a background of seven branched candelabras with lighted tapers, ferns, other greenery and floor baskets of chrysanthemums and gladioli.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of chantilly lace over net and satin. The long sleeve fitted bodice was designed with Sabrina neckline with covered buttons extending down the back to the waistline.

The floor length skirt was fashioned with tiered ruffles of applied lace, cascading into a short train.

The finger tip veil of illusion was attached to a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white feathered carnations and English ivy centered with an orchid.

Miss Fay Wynne, maid of honor, wore an ice blue dress with a matching headdress. Her cascade was of yellow roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Dot Moore of Washington, D. C., and Miss Kay Weaver. They wore light blue dresses with matching headpieces and flowers like those of the honor attendant.

Miss Nan Vanderford, Miss Peggy Crawford Mizelle and Miss Cinda Bunting, the honorary bridesmaids, wore dresses in pastel shades and carried miniature nosegays of pink carnations.

Mr. Bob Grimes was his brother's best man. Tom Brown and Bobby Whitfield served as ushers.

For his daughter's wedding, Mrs. Keel chose a dress of powder blue net over taffeta and a matching feather hat. Her corsage was a lavender orchid.

The mother of the bride groom wore a slate blue suit with a lavender-purple-throated orchid.

Following the ceremony the bride and groom received in the vestibule of the church.

For a trip to Charleston, S. C., the bride selected a green suit with a pink collar and brown accessories.

The couple will make their home with her parents.

Cake Cutting After the rehearsal Saturday night, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Keel entertained at a cake cutting in the Social rooms of the church, honoring the Grimes-Keel wedding party.

Mrs. Wiley Burris Rogerson greeted the guests at the door and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brown presided at the register.

The brides table was covered with a brown linen cloth trimmed with organza ruffles and bows of orange ribbon.

The floral centerpiece of bronze pom poms, yellow gladioli and autumn leaves was flanked with silver candelabra holding yellow tapers.

Mrs. Grimes, mother of the bridegroom, served lime punch. Mrs. Keel, the bride's mother, served wedding cake after the bridal couple cut the first slice.

Miss Peggy Crawford Mizelle, Miss Cinda Bunting and Miss Nan Vanderford assisted in serving. Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Rogers said goodbyes.

Something Old, Something New

By VIVIAN BROWN AP Newsfeatures If you're not satisfied with that old-fashioned bed, turn it into a new-fashioned one.

You can do it either with an outmoded bedstead that has been relegated to attic or barn, or with the bed you now use. Headboards can be perked up with a variety of materials—leather, plastic, paint, wallpaper, felt and with odd motif to be found in furniture stores.

One can even purchase a bed conversion kit that helps convert an old bedstead into a new style bed. The kit is particularly useful where there is a good headboard but missing side rails.

The conversion kit contains a spring and mattress with adjustable plates that attach to almost any headboard dimension.

It contains a choice of casters—plastic, nylon glides or rug rollers. The adjustable frame is a new idea based on the Harvard bed frame used by people who don't want either headboard or footboard but want to keep spring and mattress as a bed. They place them on the frame.

The new expandable frame can be used on a twin or full size bed. It can be used the entire width of the frame.

An old four-poster could be painted all white with a yellow effect against a pale green wall. A young girl might prefer a pink-and-white scheme against a French blue wall.

An old-fashioned maple bed may be given an Early American flair by the addition of a variety store eagle, either metal or wood, and a pair of finials. Painted barn red it would look handsome against white walls with a quilted bedspread in blue, barn red and other patchwork quilt colors.

Many headboards that are even-ly balanced without curlicues take to the slipcover idea, and that makes for fun and seasonal change. In winter, felt could be used as a headboard and footboard cover, tightened with a draw string, hooked or snapped. In spring, it could take on a more colorful floral motif. Denim and plaid corauro are two washable slipcovers, ideal for a small boy's room.

Any number of handsome wallpaper prints lend themselves to headboards and footboards. Plaid and striped patterns are attractive in small girls' rooms.

Old-fashioned headboards may be pared down if you are handy with a plane. If these old styles have depressed oval panels as so many did 25 years ago, the area could be upholstered with felt—red, green, vibrant blue, and attached with a large brass nail heads. The surrounding headboard area could be painted in a darker or contrasting hue.

And don't forget how interesting an old bed can look given a coat of paint with a stripe of a darker hue bordering the headboard and footboard.

Orchestral Concert Drew Big Audience

By JERRY POWELL
 "Neither rain, nor hail, nor sleet..." More than 1200 people were present to hear Sunday afternoon's East Carolina College Orchestra concert despite the torrents of rain outside. And those who were in the audience will probably agree that they have never heard an ECO Orchestra concert of such scope as this one. The ensemble had a true feeling for each type of music presented, whether it was classical, impressionistic, or modernist. In short, the orchestra never sounded so good, thanks to the musicianship of its conductor, Mr. Donald H. Hayes. In only two years at the helm, this man has led the orchestra through a remarkable period of growth.

The program opened with an orchestral transcription of Bach's Fugue in G minor, a thrilling opener for those who are more accustomed to hearing this work played on the organ. Intonation was good and the thematic entrances were well-defined. Two excerpts from Howard Hanson's "Merrymount Suite" followed which displayed a true contemporary flavor. When we listen, we wonder why we don't hear this work more often. The first excerpt, the Love Duet, was warm and moving, and literally flowed with romantic sentiment; the Children's Dance was a delightful portrait, and showed excellent precision.

Delius' "The Walk Through the Paradise Garden" is a warm piece of English Impressionism. This ingenious work was a times meditative, with perhaps a touch of the sombre, and at times, the ecstatic. One difficulty of this type of music is intonation, and the work came off admirably.

The highlight of the afternoon was the Symphony No. 2 by Vittorio Giannini, conducted by the composer. Here is a powerful opus by an outstanding contemporary composer. The work could easily have been programmatic; it has many characteristics of such music. The first movement is well-developed. It maintained a drive that did not once let down—yet left room for several climaxes which were at times breathtaking. The second movement was lyric, and it too had the quality of the programmatic. The third movement returned to the furious pace of the first, ending with all the gusto and excitement of a train wreck. Special mention must be given here to the percussion section. Before the last reverberation had resounded, the composer-conductor was greeted with genuinely warm applause which lasted for several minutes.

Following the intermission, the orchestra played the first movement of Schubert's Symphony No. 8, the "Unfinished." As far as this writer is concerned the work was finished—a polished performance. Three excerpts from "Rodeo" by Aaron Copland followed the Schubert. Saturday Night Waltz, Corral Nocturne, and Buckaroo Holiday captured all the excitement of the Wild West. There was some discrepancy in certain of the tricky rhythms, but these were somewhat covered by the intricacies themselves.

The program ended with Wagner's "Ballad of Brotherhood" in which the orchestra was assisted by the East Carolina College Choir. The work is modern in all respects, consisting of much parallelism and rich harmonic progressions. The blending of voices and orchestra in live concert was a new experience for many of the people in the audience, and was notable if for this reason alone.

In closing may this writer say that the persons who form the orchestra are for the most part students who are trying to broaden their scope, townspeople who are there because they want to be a part of a musical organization, and faculty personnel who perform because they want to keep up with the performing end as well as the teaching end of their careers. Considering this, and the fact that some of these people have had little experience in concert work, we can be doubly proud of our orchestra and look forward to even greater things of it.

Second Place Is Getting Entries

By LYNN NISBET
RALEIGH — It looks now like there may be more real contenders for the office of Lieutenant Governor than for the top job in State government. Latest prospective entrant is Harry L. (Chick) Riddle Jr. of Morganton. Riddle says he is particularly interested in a more adequate public school system, especially at secondary (high school) level. He would like to make a statewide campaign on that issue, with as much emphasis on better utilization of facilities at hand as upon the need for more money. If he gets in the race, the Morganton attorney will not be long. Indications are there will be half a dozen or more men seeking the same office. Positive announcement is expected within a few days by C. V. Henkel of Irredell, who has been near the top of the potential list for months. Soon thereafter may be expected formal announcement by David McConnell of Charlotte, who has been more or less actively campaigning for three years. David S. Coltrane of Raleigh has his hat in handy ready to be thrown in the ring and Thomas J. White of Kinston is getting his hat shaped up for the same purpose. Robert F. Morgan of Shelby is a probable candidate. Three or four others have shown interest in qualifying for the No. 2 license tax.

Rose High Opens Cage Season Against Rocky Mount Tonight

A couple of clubs that have had little time to prepare for a cage season due to a late football campaign tangle tonight in the Rose High Gymnasium.

Coach Bo Farley will take the lid off his 1959 basketball club when it plays host to the Black Birds of Rocky Mount in the season opener for both teams.

Farley has had to dip deep into his junior varsity squad of last year and at least three of the yearlings may be in the starting lineup tonight.

Alan McArthur seems destined for a shot at a forward position and Billy Neal James will be at a guard slot. Layne Jorgensen has moved ahead in the race for the pivot spot and the husky 6-4 junior will be the only man over six feet in the Phants starting lineup.

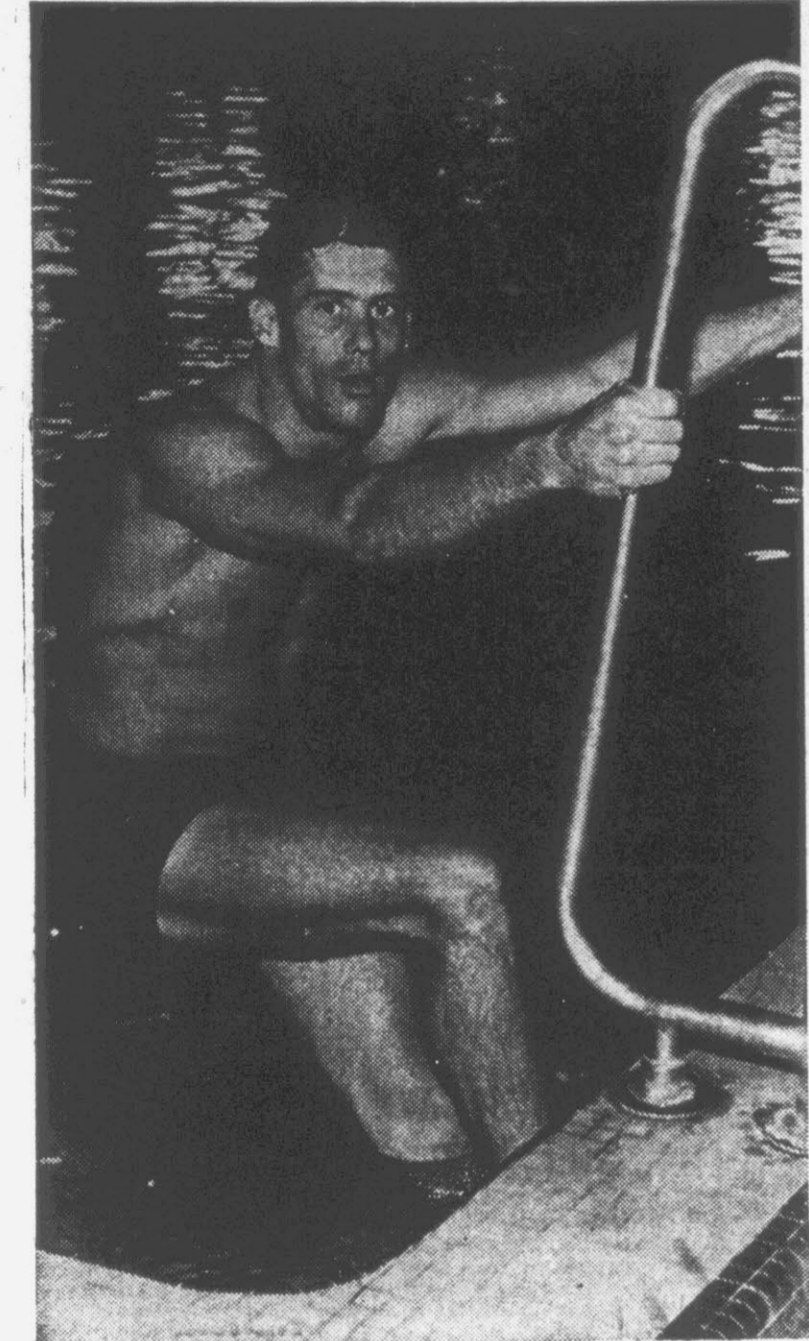

Rocky Mount coaches have indicated that this will be a lean period in Rocky Mount basketball but the visitors are favored to get off on the right foot tonight against Greenville.

Syracuse Rules The Roost In Final Season AP Poll

By JOHN CHANDLER Associated Press Sports Writer

All-conquering Syracuse University wore the national football championship crown today with an overwhelming first place vote in the final Associated Press poll, which also showed the first 12 teams solidly lined up for major bowl engagements.

The final standings, based on ten points for a first place vote, nine for second, etc., with first place votes in parentheses:

ECC FREESTYLER—Jimmy Meads will be one of the swimmers that Coach Ray Martinez will be banking his hopes of an upset on tomorrow night when the defending NAIA champs swim the University of North Carolina here.

The biggest factor may revolve around the rebound control and the Black Birds will have a definite advantage here. Bill Harrison is their tallest man at 6-3 but Jim Speight and Mike Lundy, All-Stater in football, are both over six feet.

Probable starting lineups: Rocky Mount Greenville Harrison (6-3) F McArthur (5-9) Speight (6-0) F Taft (5-11) Lundy (6-2) C Jorgensen (6-4) Tullis (5-11) G James (5-10) Jackson (5-7) G Duff (5-10)

Perhaps never before have the major bowls snatched up such highly ranked college teams. Most were signed up for the bowls more than a week ago. Syracuse accepted a Cotton Bowl invitation Nov. 14 after walloping Colgate 71-0. The Orangemen will meet the Texas Longhorns, beaten only by Texas Christian and No. 4 in the final poll.

Syracuse, in replacing Louisiana as national champion, is the first Eastern team to gain the honor since Army in 1945. Last year Syracuse was ninth in the final

West Virginia puts its phenomenal Southern Conference basketball winning streak on the line against a limping Richmond Spider quintet at Morgantown, W.Va. tonight. But even without the bandages the Spiders would be facing terrific odds for this one.

The Mountaineers have whipped the Spiders nine straight in the past three years, haven't tasted defeat on their home court in 34 straight outings and are riding high on a 52-game conference victory spurt.

Banquet The Rose High football banquet will be held Friday night at 7:00 in the East Carolina College Cafeteria. Coach Hilderbran, an assistant coach at Wake Forest College, will be the guest speaker and will also show movies of the 1959 Wake Forest-Clemson game won by the Tigers 33-31. Trophies will be awarded to the outstanding defensive player, best blocker, and most valuable player. The public is invited to attend and tickets will be on sale for the banquet.

Seeking A Bout With Britisher

STOCKHOLM (AP)—British boxing promoter Jack Solomons will fly to Göteborg today to discuss the possibility of a title match between British champion Henry Cooper and world heavyweight champion Ingemar Johansson, it was reported here today. In an article in Stockhoms-Tidningen, a Stockholm daily newspaper, it was reported Solomons had telephoned Johansson's adviser, Edwin Ahlqvist, Monday. Solomons would not disclose the reason for his visit, the report said, but inferred he would fly to Göteborg immediately.

Cline, 6-2, 210 - pounder from Valdese, N.C., polled 42 points against McGee's 39 and Pitts' 33.

Demo Presidential Possibilities In Appearance At New York Gathering

NEW YORK (AP)—The Democrats held a big, four-hour "beauty contest" of 1960 presidential possibilities Monday night and based on applause, the winner was Adlai E. Stevenson.

Stevenson says he isn't seeking the nomination.

Nevertheless, of seven men who were called to the lectern before a glittering, jam-packed crowd of Democrats, the tops for whooping and hollering went to Stevenson.

The occasion was a dinner honoring the 75th birthday of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. It came at the end of weekend meetings in New York of the Democratic Advisory Council. More than 1,000 Democrats paid $100 a plate to attend the event and look over the field.

It was handled with the essence of tact and diplomacy—so as to indicate no preference for any of the presidential hopefuls.

There was no head table. Each of the aspirants and potential candidates sat with party leaders at separate tables.

When dinner ended, the curtains parted on a stage. There, seated in a semi-circle with Mrs. Roosevelt and Truman in the middle, were three U. S. senators, three governors—and Stevenson—all of whom have been mentioned for the Democratic nomination.

Truman, obviously relishing the role, called them to speak. He was the soul of finesse.

"I won't use any device that might indicate I favor any one of them," he said. "They're all personal friends of mine."

Carrying caution even further, he said he would proceed geographically, moving from west to east across the continent.

That brought Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, governor of California, up first. "A man to be reckoned with," said Truman.

Then came Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, and Sen. Stuart Symington, of Missouri. Having now reached the Middle West, Truman called on Stevenson.

Stevenson registered well-bred surprise.

He had already spoken once, opening the dinner. There had been applause for him the first time.

Now, looking like a schoolboy caught day-dreaming by the teacher, he said: "I wasn't supposed to be included in the company of these handsome, hairy young men"—a reference to his own baldness—"and I'm a little at a loss what to say in view of your assumption that I'm still alive."

Nevertheless, he rose. So did many people in the audience.

Cheers and clapping raked through the ballroom.

Reporters clocked the reception at 29 seconds. Tops up to that point had been the applause for Humphrey, 17 seconds.

Stevenson said he felt a story was appropriate. It was about a drunk, locked all night in a hotel bar. The tagline, which he delivered with an impish twinkle, was: "I don't want to get in. I just want to get out."

Michigan's Gov. G. Mennen Williams, New Jersey's Gov. Robert B. Meyner, and Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts followed in order. The applause for Kennedy lasted 10 seconds.

Once or twice, speakers uttered variations on the theme, "the man who will be elected the next President of the United States is right here in this room."

That seemed to omit a name also frequently mentioned—sen. Lyndon Johnson, of Texas.

Finally, Mrs. Roosevelt spoke in the climax of the event.

"I pray that the next president will be a Democrat," she said, "but Democrat or Republican, I pray he will be someone who understands and can meet the great responsibilities ahead."

Taking Cases To Supreme Court

RALEIGH (AP)—Fourteen Henderson cotton mill strikers, held in contempt of court for violating a restraining order, will carry their cases to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The State Supreme Court recently upheld sentences given the group in trials last spring in Vance Superior Court. However, North Carolina Chief Justice J. Wallace Winborne granted them a stay of execution pending the federal court's decision.

Lawyers for the 14 now must ask the federal court to review the cases.

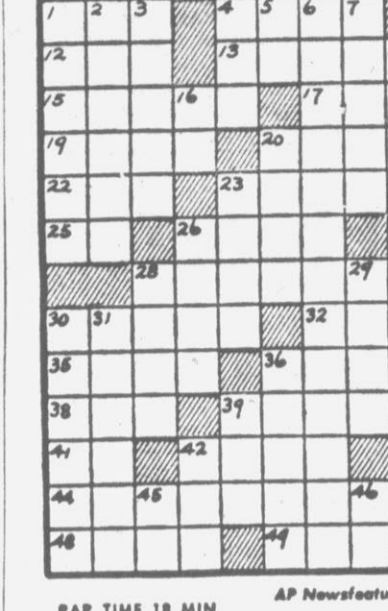

The court order limited picket line activity and prevented violence impeding free exit and entrance of workers of Harriet-Henderson Cotton Mills.

SUSPICIOUS

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Richard Saunders was arrested under Toledo's suspicious person ordinance. He was wearing rubber gloves, had a red face mask in his pocket and let a pistol fall from his pants legs when he stooped over to untie his field type boots.

Nixon-Rockefeller May Tangle In New Jersey

WASHINGTON (AP)—The possibility that Vice President Richard M. Nixon and New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller may tangle in New Jersey's 1960 presidential primary developed today.

Nixon was reported to have canvassed the New Jersey situation informally Monday night with former Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll, a dinner guest. There was no public comment from either after what was described as largely a social affair.

While Driscoll has been relatively inactive in politics recently, his support helped President Eisenhower give the late Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio one of the latter's worst preconvention setbacks in the 1952 New Jersey primary.

Sen. Clifford P. (R-NJ) said it is his judgment that if Rockefeller decides to contest Nixon for the 1960 Republican presidential nomination he is likely to carry the fight to the vice president in the state's April 19 primary.

Case, who is maintaining a neutral attitude between the two potential candidates, said in an interview he thinks most organization Republicans in New Jersey now are for Nixon. But he said this could change.

"It seems to be the general attitude that Nixon has earned his chance for the nomination," Case said. "The organization leaders are for him. But that doesn't mean that they wouldn't change if something should happen which made Nixon look like a bad bet to be elected."

New Jersey's 38 convention votes offer a tasty bit of bait for any presidential aspirant willing to take his chances of publicly endorsing delegate candidates. He might find it less risky, however, to run on a preferential primary ballot in a popularity contest that is not binding on the delegates.

Because the New Jersey test is the first in a populous Eastern state, many politicians think it might provide Rockefeller with an opportunity to demonstrate his vote-getting ability in areas that cast heavy electoral votes in the general election.

As the governor of a neighboring state, Rockefeller is widely known in New Jersey. Whether he could translate this into support at the polls in a battle with Nixon would remain to be seen.

March 10 is the deadline for filing of petitions to get a presidential candidates name on the New Jersey ballot. Rockefeller has delayed any announcement of his intentions.

CHAPTER 36

Without a change of grim expression or the tell-tale quiver of a muscle, Blackpony suddenly pulled the trigger of his Winchester. Jamie 'The Kid' Wiggan was shot through the body and thrown violently backwards.

Blackpony fired again, hitting him in the left shoulder. Jamie's right-hand gun was out and he managed to get off a wild shot before he fell forward and rolled, with his face in the dust of the old parade ground.

"Good," said Blackpony. "No hang now."

It was evening and inside Jamie's hut the coal-oil lamp had been lighted. Jamie was lying heavily bandaged, on his narrow bunk bed.

Juana, suffering from shock and hysteria, had been taken away to another hut.

Sergeant Desportes was alone with Jamie, whose face was chalk-pale, as bloodless as that of a corpse. "You done a mighty good job on me, Sergeant," he said. "But I'm dying, right?"

"I don't know, Jamie. You're shot up pretty bad."

"Crazy Injun," said Jamie. "First time I ever been took by surprise. No... second time. When I fell off the mountain."

"You better stop talking."

"Why? If I want to gab, I better gab fast," said Jamie. "Reach under the bunk."

The Sergeant did so, and brought out a small tin box.

"Key up under the bunk — tied to a slat."

The Sergeant found the key and opened the box. In it there was a big stack of paper money bound with a thick rubber band; and beside the money was the same packet the Sergeant had kept for him in Mesa Encantada.

"You know," said Jamie, "there's something to be said for honesty after all. You see, I can trust you to get this money where I want it to go. There's twenty-four hundred dollars there. One third each to Manuela, to Juana and to Carmen Diaz — she's in La Paz at the Picador. Okay?"

"Okay," said the Sergeant. "Now the rest of that there stuff," said Jamie. "Open the packet."

The Sergeant did so and there was nothing in it but a picture, a locket and some letters.

"Nobody cares a damn about that except me," said Jamie, with sudden heat. "Burn it! Step on the locket, bust it!"

Jamie began to cry. The Sergeant ignored this.

"No," said the Sergeant, "I'll keep it myself — in the night table in my room at Mesa Encantada."

Jamie turned his face away to hide his tears.

He died at a little before midnight.

The Sergeant covered his body with a blanket, blew out the light, and opened the door. Blackpony was squatting in front of the hut, stolidly smoking a cigaret.

"Blackpony," said the Sergeant, "you disobeyed my orders to stay at Mesa Encantada. I explained it all to you. You might have caused the Army great embarrassment. I hereby suspend you from the scouts. You're under arrest. Go back to Mesa Encantada and stay there."

Blackpony threw his cigaret away and got up. "Yes sir, Sergeant," he said, and walked off into the darkness.

A little later the Sergeant heard him leave, his pony single footing across the parade ground.

Time passed, and all was peace in La Paz. The Sergeant and the troopers had left long ago. A new major, a new city marshal, and a new county sheriff had been voted in. And there were many other changes: Delman Mayhew suddenly sold out his huge ranching interests to the Caster brothers and it was said around La Paz that he was headed back to his hometown, Pittsburgh, where he intended to invest heavily in the steel industry, which was now booming.

But before he left, Mayhew did a curious thing; he rode all the long way out to Fort Casa Grande to put some potted plants on the grave of Jamie Wiggan.

The wags around La Paz laughed and said that Mayhew just wanted to be sure that the kid was dead.

Tourists began to pour into La Paz now from San Geronio, and they all wanted to hear about that wonderful boy, that shining romantic figure of the Golden West, Jamie 'The Kid' Wiggan. Picture post cards of Jamie's grave at Fort Casa Grande were sold by the hundreds, but very few tourists had the hardihood to make that long desert trek, through bleakly desolate country, to see the actual grave.

Though there was much talk in La Paz and rumors all over the Southwest that Jamie was not dead, the Mexicans at Fort Casa Grande were sure that he was. They'd helped the grim Sergeant bury him.

In fact they were so sure, that they began to wish that he'd been buried elsewhere, because Jamie began to walk at night along the weed-grown company street on his tireless pilgrimage to cut beef at the old stone cooler.

The Gomez pup, now a full-grown wolfish-looking dog, had had the daylight scared out of him one night a few hours before dawn... by nothing, nothing at all. He had covered under a shed for two days, afraid to come out. And Mama Romero claimed that she had actually seen Jamie one night. "He was all greenish," she said. "Like a glow-worm."

At Mesa Encantada, technically there was peace, but things were so hectic and hurried now that war would have been a relief.

The silver rush at Tarbush had reached a pitch of frenzied madness unheard of in the Southwest. Oldtimers claimed that Tombstone was a quiet little hamlet in its heyday, by comparison. Amazingly rich silver ore was being taken out just below the grass roots. Claim-jumpers, land-sharks, gun-fighters, gamblers and saloon-keepers descended like a plague of locusts on the once sleepy little desert-crossroads town.

Poor old Natty Bugworth had ready missed the boat. The silver claims that he had practically given away were now worth at least half a million dollars.

Tarbush roared on. Men were killed in the streets almost every day. It got so that no one was safe from the swagging gunmen, many of whom had drifted in from the debacle at La Paz.

Inturated by such anarchy so close to Mesa Encantada, General Etheredge decided to base a full troop of cavalry at an old, partly-dismantled fort two miles from Tarbush. The problems were many and taxing and the General put them in the hands of Sergeant Desportes.

So now the troop was on its way to the new-named Fort Tarbush, stirring up an immense cloud of summer dust which spread a reddish haze over the land.

The Sergeant and Blackpony brought up the rear. The young Apache was the best scout the Sergeant had ever worked with, bar none.

Long ago he'd restored him to the scout roster, after suitable punishment, which included a return to long hair, Indian clothes, and confinement to the Reservation.

Blackpony came to hate the blanket Indians and their stinking wickiups. He'd learned his lesson. A man must obey. He has sworn duties; he must perform them. No exceptions.

They rode along in silence, with neckerchiefs tied over their mouths because of the dust. Miles and hours passed.

Finally Blackpony, speaking through the neckerchief, said: "Jamie say to Sergeant: 'Mi Amigo.' Natty say to Sergeant: 'Mi Amigo.'" He paused for a long time, and the Sergeant turned to look at him curiously. Finally the young Apache continued: "Blackpony — now — he say 'Mi Amigo.'"

The Sergeant smiled and nodded. "Mi Amigo," he said. "Mi Amigo," he said. THE END.

Threats Closed Down Newspaper

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Bomb threats that scared away advertisers forced a weekly Negro newspaper to shut down. Mrs. L. C. Bates, wife of the paper's publisher, says.

Mrs. Bates, president of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said Monday that anonymous telephone callers harassed advertisers in the State Press constantly. She attributed the calls to segregationists.

They would call up the smaller merchants and threaten to bomb their stores if they ran more ads in the paper," she said. Bates announced Nov. 8 that the paper had been suspended and at that time blamed financial losses and the termination of a building lease.

Polaris Missile Again Launched

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Navy successfully fired a Polaris submarine missile for the second straight time Monday. Navy sources said the two consecutive successes apparently means that engineers have worked out the bugs that caused three straight failures in September and October. A five-week delay was called in the test program after the trio of bad shots. Both missiles launched since then have performed almost perfectly over a 900-mile course. When ready for combat use aboard nuclear submarines, the Polaris will be able to carry a nuclear warhead 1,200 miles.

Studio Suspends British Actress

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Twentieth Century-Fox studio has suspended British actress Joan Collins for failing to report in London for a movie role. She is in New York, while her costars in "Sons and Lovers," Dean Stockwell and Wendy Hiller, await her in London, the studio said. The studio said the delay, which will require finding a replacement for Miss Collins, will cost around $50,000.

Pilot Was Weightless And Rolling At Edge Of Space

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rolling and weightless in the black void at the edge of space 19 miles above the earth—that's the story brought back by a pilot who made a successful assault on the world plane altitude record. Navy Cmdr. Lawrence E. Flint Jr. told an interviewer his experience after taking off from California's Edwards Air Force Base last Sunday in a McDonnell F4H Phantom II carrier jet. "I levelled off at about 50,000 feet, doing about 1,500 m.p.h. I pulled the stick back into my belly and headed almost straight up. "The ship was almost flyless at the top—there wasn't any atmospheric resistance to the control surfaces. "The instruments showed I was flying on my back part of the time but I couldn't tell it because I was weightless and it was dark. It was a slow motion sort of thing. "Way above, or actually below, I could make out the layer where the atmosphere thins out. That occurs about 38,000 feet. Also, I could see some of the curvature of the earth's surface. "Then when I fell a little below 90,000 feet I began to get some control over the surfaces of the plane. I knew I was riling but eventually I righted myself and came on down." Because of its weightlessness, the twin jet's speed was only 45 miles an hour as it went over the top of its trajectory. Gaining speed as it plunged back into the atmosphere, the plane grew so hot from air friction that the paint on its nose and tail surfaces peeled away. Flint soared to 98,500 feet, eclipsing the mark of 94,658 feet set in July by the Soviet Union's Maj. V. S. Ilyshin in a TU431 jet. "Under better atmospheric conditions—if the upper air had been colder—I could have gotten a little more out of the engines and could have gone higher," said Flint, a tall, handsome 39-year-old who wears his graying hair close-cropped. "I didn't know I actually had set a record until I came down. It is completely dark up there and I couldn't see my instrument panel. The flight from takeoff to landing took 40 minutes. His period of twisting weightlessness lasted a minute and a half.

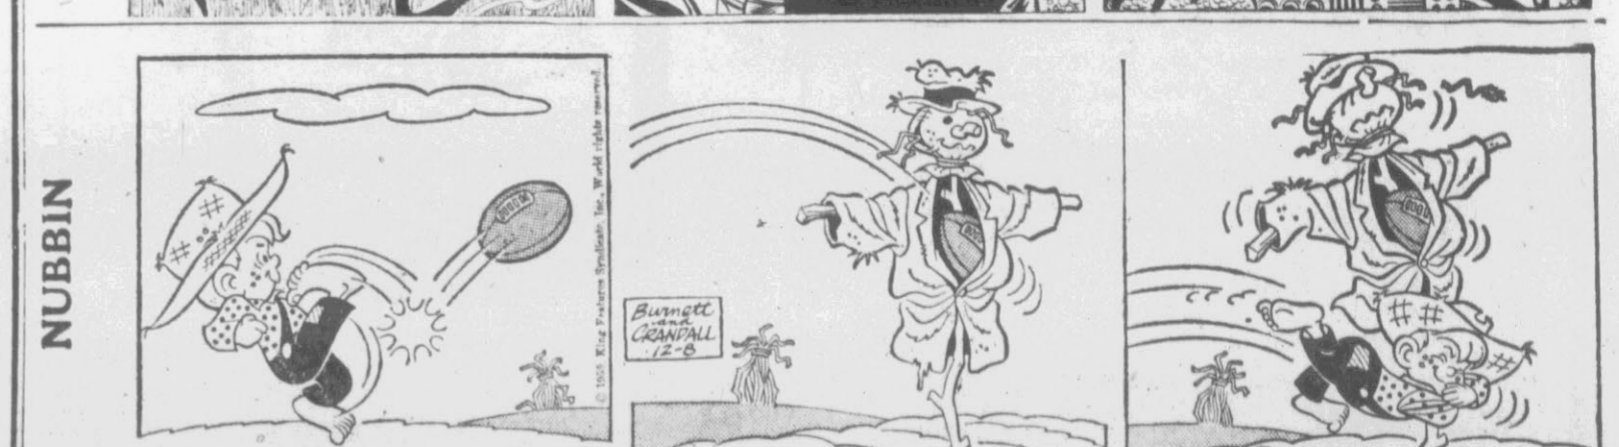

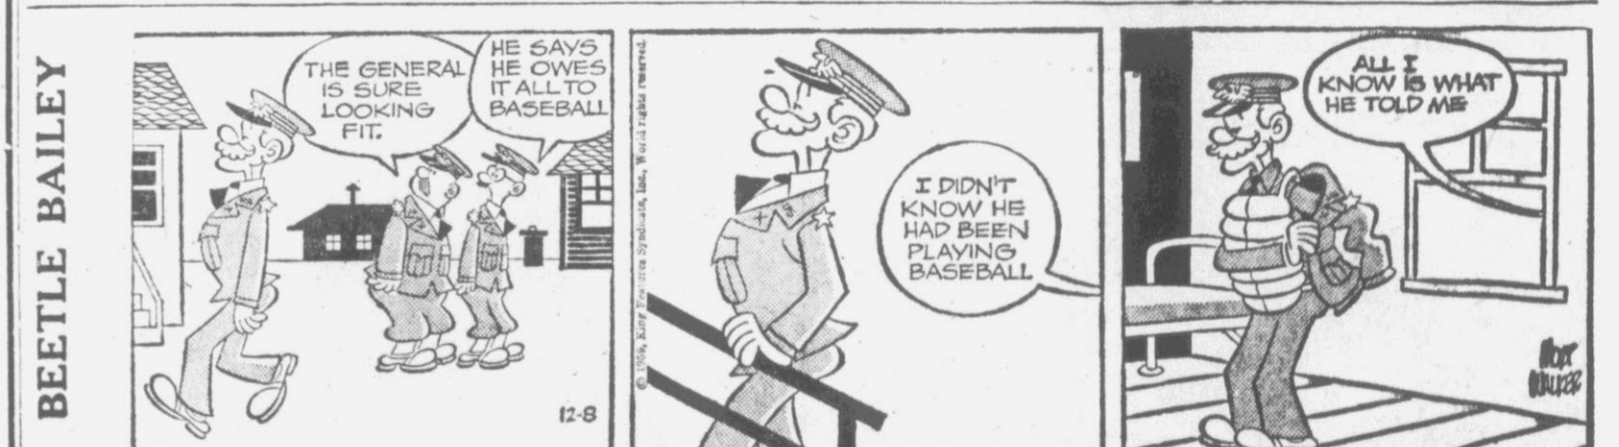

The Navy gave Flint a Distinguished Flying Cross for his feat. He returns this week to his home in Patuxent, Md., where he has a wife, Betty. He soon will begin training other pilots in the use of the record-setting plane.

Lookout Spoiled Raiders' Bid To Nab Bootleggers

Pitt County ABC officers were foiled yesterday in their attempt to catch several "illegal whiskey bottlers" in the act at a still site about four miles Northeast of Pactolus in Pactolus Township. The arrival of the officers, according to J. M. Ward, Pitt Enforcement Chief, was announced to the still-workers by a blast from the lookout's shotgun, a signal to the men to run. The unit, which was in operation was destroyed with axes. Contained at the site were two 55-gallon stills, a 60-gallon drum type boiler fired with wood, a 55-gallon cooler complete with copper Advances and losses were small. Trading was fairly active.

slacking off after the normal opening push.

Wall Street feeling was that the line of least resistance appeared to be upward, although the steady, but slow, progress was hardening. The market has risen minor amounts in the past three sessions after digesting a big spurt in the first half of last week.

Steels showed little reaction to the urging of Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell that both sides in the long dispute submit to a third party, possibly the government, for solution. Changes were narrow and mixed.

Advances by auto makers came as production lines began operating again in Detroit. Chrysler was best, rising nearly 2 points.

Chemicals had an upward tendency with Dupont up more than 5.

Some specialty issues, notably Universal Match and Universal Oil products, were actively traded. The former was up nearly 7 points, while the latter was only narrowly ahead.

United Aircraft, up around 1½, led a strong aircraft section. Drugs continued to sag.

Oils and rails turned irregularly lower.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 30 cents at $226.60. Industrials were up $1.20, but rails declined 5 cents.

U.S. government bonds improved. Corporate bonds were narrowly lower.

Pair Hold Up Bank In Winston-Salem

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Two unmasked pistol brandishing white men quickly made off with $8,868 from the North office of the Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. here late Monday.

Although roadblocks were set up by federal, state and local officers in the area, the bandits were not immediately apprehended and a search continued early today for them.

Roy K. Moore, special agent in charge of the FBI in the Carolinas, said the entire robbery at 4:20 p.m. apparently took but a minute.

The six employees in the office were ordered from behind the counter by the men, who then forced teller T. Blaine Marshall to fill up a brown canvas bag with money.

Employees told officers the men were bareheaded and they estimated their ages at between 30 and 40. Both were described as wearing zipper jackets, and one wore blue jeans while the other had on conventional trousers. Also, one was described as light-skinned and the other dark-skinned.

They were believed to have fled the office, located in a thickly populated area on U.S. highway 52, in a late model blue car.

"We're as nervous as you are," employees quoted one of the men as saying. "Don't follow us or we'll shoot you," they warned as they ran from the building. An alarm was sounded as soon as the men left.

Bank Manager J. Bynum Yarbrough, 55, said the men walked up to the counter and pulled a pistol. He said he advised employees to do as they ordered, and Marshall, the teller, filled the canvas bag with money from a hand cart.

LONDON (AP)—Fierce winter storms lashed Europe and the Atlantic for the third day today. Mountainous seas, blizzards, floods and freezing temperatures took 72 lives.

The latest victims were the eight seamen of a lifeboat crew smashed on Scotland's east coast. The lifeboat had set off to rescue the crew of a drifting lightship and was driven ashore.

The lightship later ran aground that it had been able to stop the drift and was riding out the storm in St. Andrews Bay.

Heavy rains and high winds battered most of the British Isles. Snowstorms and cold again disrupted transport on most of the Continent. Baltic ports in Poland were closed. Hundreds of cars were snowbound in Denmark.

Rain and snow continued in most of Italy, heavily damaging fruit crops.

The situation eased at Frejus on the French Riviera where more than 300 persons lost their lives in a dam break last week. Buses and cargo ships had been ordered to stand by to remove persons from low-lying sections in case of renewed floods.

In the Atlantic, mountainous waves up to 80 feet high buffeted great liners, putting them as much as 24 hours behind schedule.

The captain of a French navy weather frigate reported from far out in the Atlantic: "I have just heard from an American ship. Her captain thinks the storm has put 500 ships in difficulties."

British Coast Guardsmen answered distress signals from the 3,000-ton Swedish freighter Anna, driven ashore on the rocky east coast of Scotland. A line was rocketed to her deck, and rescue teams prepared to hoist the crew to the overhanging cliffs.

Only a few miles away the 217-ton British trawler George Robb had heeled over on the rocks earlier Monday. All her crew of 12 men were lost and a Coast Guard cutter collapsed and died during the search for survivors.

In the English Channel a Dutch tug with two barges in tow found shelter in Torbay after sending out distress signals. Two men were swept overboard from one barge. A lifeboat picked up both, but one was dead.

Off the Portuguese port of Leixoes, the storm smashed a tug towing a 400-ton frigate and a 450-ton barge. All three vessels and 17 crewmen were lost.

Scandinavia caught the full force of the storm. The Baltic was swept almost clean of shipping. On land hundreds of trucks and automobiles were abandoned in snowdrifts. Trains were derailed. Villages were cut off. Snow plows were stranded.

Heavy snowfalls were reported from northern Italy, Austria and Switzerland.

and the people of Israel, I should like to express to you my thanks and appreciation for your effort to bring medical aid to Rami Katz, the young Israeli boy seriously injured in a road accident in Ghana.

"It was your interception of the shortwave radio appeal from Ghana which set in motion the process which brought an American surgeon from North Africa who was first on the spot to bring help to this boy.

"As it transpired, the brain surgeons decided not to operate on young Rami Katz, but you can be proud that it was your speed of action which resulted in a humanitarian operation showing human nature and international cooperation at its best."

The discussion revealed that many rural families who actually need the supplies would not qualify since they were tenant-farming families who already have crop arrangements for next year. Regulations forbid such families obtaining the surplus supplies.

that, at the current absentee rate, the Greenville system will miss over $16,000 from its state funds next year.

He emphasized the fact that Greenville does "comparatively well" in attendance but introduced these figures: White school absentee daily — 25 of 3,000 enrolled; Negro school absentees daily — 88 of 2,000 enrolled. Absentees included in the figures omitted absentees due to communicable diseases.

Rose emphasized that Greenville's schools are doing no worse this year than in years past, but opined that the situation should be called to the Board's attention.

Instruction Supervisor, Mrs. Ellen Carroll, gave a report on the city system's child testing program. It pointed out Greenville students are consistently above the national average in all grades.
