New Delhi's Multitudes Stun Ike By Tremendous, Near-Hysterical Ovation

NEW DELHI (AP)—A joyously hysterical throng of more than one million — sometimes terrifyingly out of control — surged about President Eisenhower tonight as he rode for miles through this capital of India.

unable to keep back the surging crowds that stopped the motorcade a number of times. Some screamed out: "American Badshah! (King)!"

Bacteria Thrives In Modern Living

By NORMA GAUHN
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—The family

wash these days too often is a warm water witches brew. It stirs around bacteria but doesn't destroy it.

Rusharound Americans are prone to the quick shower, which refreshes the fopside but is likely to leave the remainder undone.

Wall to wall carpeting, air conditioning, deep upholstered furniture—all aids to gracious living—also provide a fine living for unscrupulous germs.

These may sound like harsh words. But they come from an expert, Dr. Carl W. Walter, who says they're no exaggeration.

Dr. Walter has pioneered in tracking down the sources of hospital epidemics and infectious outbreaks. He is associate clinical professor of surgery at Harvard Medical School and a medical researcher at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston.
His warning is this: new antibiotic-resistant germs are one of the most pressing health problems facing the nation.
In the past 20 years drugs have enabled us to stamp out or virtually eliminate most infectious diseases—mumps, measles, diphtheria.

But hospitals, set up for the collective care of the sick, concentrate disease. Unless there are rigid antiseptic controls, certain hardy strains of bacteria, known as staphylococci, can thrive and swap hosts with abandon.

This danger of cross infection is ever present in hospitals. And Dr. Walter says it is an increasing hazard in the home.

It can come from the newborn infant or freshly discharged hospital patient, or from some unknown carrier. In Boston, 97 families were infected by a baby-sitter who was a carrier.

"The problem," Dr. Walter says, "is to persuade the housewife, without alarming her unduly, to do the things that grandma used to do to control the skin infections caused by these bacteria."

He says that housewives, with every labor saving device at hand for cleanliness, feel it unnecessary to apply the most important ingredient: old fashioned elbow grease.
"Hygiene is almost a forgotten word today," Dr. Walter says. "Remember when every school had a class in it? We all need re-education on basic cleanliness."

Modern washing methods may be convenient, but are not as germ-killing as those when the housewife dumped the clothing in boiling water and gave it the scrub-board treatment.

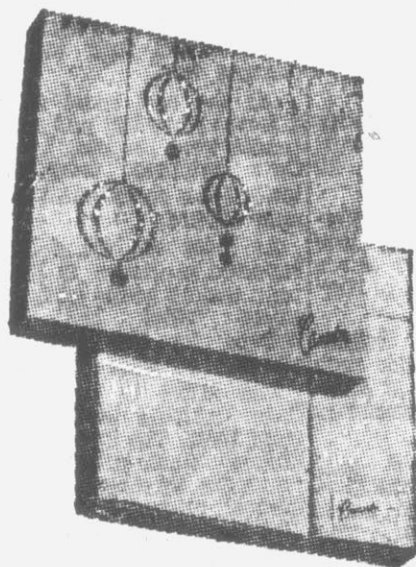

"The modern washing machine doesn't have hot enough water to destroy bacteria, which requires 190 degrees for four minutes. The average home laundry is only 115 degrees—or less, when the housewife doesn't wait for hot enough water."

Human Failings At Root Of It All

There's a nerve-tingling sensation involved in reading of the escape of a dangerous convict from an institution. All the elements of high danger to quit, law-abiding citizens or to law-enforcing personnel, are involved.

But when twenty such, said to be among North Carolina's worst criminals, break out of the state's top security prison . . . the threat of further violence becomes multiplied . . . by twenty.

No question about it; Ivy Bluff prison was a hard place. It was intended to be so. Moreover, it follows that some of the most stringent precautions were exercised to avoid just that which took place early Tuesday morning.

Assuming that the relatively new and modern physical plant, and the security regulations involved, were adequate to handle the most desperate of desperate men; then it falls on an element of human failing to bear brunt of the blame for the break-out.

Prison officials report the suspected ringleader had sawed one or more bars to his cell.

Perhaps that marks the beginning of the "human" failings that made the escape possible. A guard, or guards, neglected somehow to insure no saws were in prisoner's possession. A guard, or guards, failed to hear the sawing . . . failed to see the sawing in progress . . . failed to see evidence of the sawing.

Surely there were other failures involved; for it is inconceivable that procedures and facilities of a security prison would fail to allow for the contingency of one or more prisoners getting out of their cell. So again, somebody slipped up.

Such oversights always raise the possibility of violent death for someone in the pursuit of the escapees. The possibility in this instance is heightened because the men in flight are hardened criminals and they are armed.

Remedial action always comes after the milk is spilled; and we may presume that already steps have been taken to rectify the lapse of security that permitted the break-out.

If there is a point to be made, this is it: There are times when remedial action is always too late; whatever comes of the great manhunt now underway, a chain of events has been unleashed which need never have happened.

We would hazard a guess though . . . there'll be no more break-outs at Ivy Bluff for a long, long time to come.

The Reflector Family Has Suffered A Loss

For twenty-one years Mrs. Marguerite Warren was a member of The Daily Reflector's "family".

She died this week of a lingering illness, and in passing left a gap in our lives here much like that felt in her own family.

To a great many of Greenville and Pitt County people Mrs. Warren was their personal contact with The Reflector. For years she handled their subscriptions, their want-ads, their announcements and stories that went into the women's pages.

Over a period of years Mrs. Warren served The Reflector as cashier, bookkeeper, women's editor and receptionist. Her personal interest and loyalty to the paper were made manifest in so many ways they simply cannot be counted.

Too, she was a friend. Kind, helpful and understanding in her dealings with all whom she came in contact.

We sorrowed in her illness, we miss her now she is no longer with us.

On-The-Spot Office Could Help A Lot

Decision of Tobacco Associates to establish an office in Europe next April, to assist in promoting sales of United States flue-cured leaf, sounds much like a needed and overdue step.

For some time now, tobacco interests in this country have been aware their sales abroad were being whittled away by other tobacco-producing areas.

Last November, when the Hodges party was touring Europe to spur industrial interest in North Carolina they were reminded of the competition they faced. It happened in Stuttgart.

There they were told of a sale of several hundred thousand pounds of Rhodesian tobacco for twenty-nine cents a pound, with the American bid seventy cents. "The Rhodesians are just waiting for you flue-cured growers to get yourself out of business; then they'll raise the prices, but they'll put you out of business first. The only answer for the flue-cured area is to greatly increase production and sell it competitively. You're pricing yourself out of business the way it is today," he said.

Well, there's a limit to how much price-reduction American growers can achieve; production costs being what they are. But an on-the-spot office manned by Tobacco Associates people, might prove a partial answer to our tobacco export needs. We can hope.

Uncertain Fate Of Demo Rocket

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Democrats' manifesto, blasted out at their New York meeting, is like a rocket shot at the election moon of 1960.

It's a 22-point blueprint of programs, put together by the party's bigwigs on the Democratic Advisory Council, for their platform in next year's elections.

But what the Democrats can't tell is whether this heavy document will reach its target or burn up or wither in the political atmosphere of 1960. They can't foresee what the public mood will be during next year's campaign.

The public mood will be the most important factor. If it's complacent and contented, as it seems to be now, the voters may be indifferent to calls for changes or vigorous action and make their decision more on the candidates' personal abilities than on party programs.

Democrats and Republicans pull apart and are easily identifiable as separate parties during periods of national stress. They tend to coalesce and look like twins in periods of public contentment.

There was a real separation during President Wilson's fight with the Republicans over the League of Nations after World War I. This was a fight between internationalism and isolationism. Internationalist Wilson lost.

The public, fed up on conflict, elected Republicans three times in a row in the 1920s. That was a complacent time,

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
WHY?

Michelangelo was one of the greatest geniuses ever to appear in the stream of human history. St. Peter's, and the vast array of painting and statuary by Michelangelo strewn all over Italy, call forth the admiration of everyone of us who visits that land so rich in artistic treasure.

Yet Michelangelo was said to have been of mean and jealous disposition. Nobody liked him. He was almost pathologically suspicious. Although he outdid everybody, in his genius as artist and sculptor, that did not seem to satisfy him. The people who admired him most very often seemed to dislike him most heartily.

Why does it so often happen the period of so-called normalcy. There wasn't much difference between the parties.

Then came the depression and the end of complacency. The public, desperately needing a change and vigorous action, chose Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was a time of intense stress and the question of how to deal with it split the parties.

The Democrats were New Dealers, the Republicans anti-New Dealers. The New Deal, for all practical purposes, ended in 1937 but the Republicans didn't seem to know it.

World War II pulled them together, but after the war they split again in the period of readjustment. Some of the Republicans were still isolationist and were still fighting the New Deal.

But the country moved into the rich 1950s. The public, tired of 20 years of the Democrats and the conflicts of the Truman administration, switched to the Republicans.

By 1953, when President Eisenhower took office the Republicans were no longer anti-New Dealers or isolationist. The parties began to lose their visible differences.

This blurring of the Democratic and Republican images went hand in hand with the fact that the country, rocking along on prosperity, was pretty complacent again.

Nothing illustrates better the present melting away of differences between the parties than what happened in 1959.

Magnolia Leaves Await

Magnolia leaves are in hot demand for Christmas decorations, so we're told. We know where you can get all of them you want just by breaking them off the trees. S. Eugene West's construction company is clearing away Quinerly Manor at Washington and Third Sts. to make way for a new bank.

There are some ancient magnolia trees on the property which must come down according to plan. The trees are too large to be simply be chopped down and hauled off.

So, says West, folks who want the leaves can come and get them.

We understand that the leaves are sprayed with silver or gold paint and used in Christmas decorations.

Ever wonder why household gas smells like it does?

As we understand it, the natural gas which local customers will soon be using, has little or no smell. If it came into the local lines as it is in the cross country lines users would be unable to detect it if it escaped from gas appliances.

So yesterday an "odorizer" was unloaded at the gate point where the local lines tie into the main line. Its purpose according to Utilities Superintendent Leonard Bloxam, is to put the "stink" in the gas.

Thus if gas should escape in the home through a leak, the user should detect it by its odor before it does too much damage. The odorizer to be installed at the gatepoint, will be located west of Memorial Drive.

The name for the odor which will be used locally should make the perfume makers sit up and take notice. It's "Alert 88".

We've been told of another honest person in Greenville. She is Mrs. Lucile Tripp, a waitress at Carolina Grill.

George Saad, proprietor of the restaurant, said Mrs. Tripp found a bill fold while cleaning up a booth the other day.

She checked it for identification and finding none turned it over to Saad. He searched the wallet more carefully and still found no identification, but he did see that there was a large sum of money within.

Saad held on to the wallet and soon an elderly man came in and reported losing it. He properly identified it and Saad learned that the money within represented most of the man's life savings.

Another check of the bill fold showed that it contained close to $1,000.

The owner gave the honest waitress a reward, according to Saad.

Other Editors Saying 1st Congressional District

(Washington Daily News)
North Carolina's First Congressional district, represented since 1941 by Herbert C. Bonner, comprises 14 Northeastern counties having a population of 247,894 persons, according to the 1950 census.

Pitt county, with a population of 63,789 or more than one-fourth the total population of the district, is by far the most populous county. The next most populous county is Beaufort with 37,134 people.

For more than a half a century Beaufort county has had the congressman from this First district. Beaufort county's tenure goes back to John Small. Then came Lindsay Warren, and for the past 18 years, our congressman has been Mr. Bonner.

We give these background facts for one reason. We see some handwriting on the wall. It appears likely now that Mr. Bonner will have opposition in the next Democratic primary. And if we are to judge by recent signs, a lot of political talk is going to be made over the fact that Beaufort county has been the holder of this congressional seat for so long. There is talk of jealousy among other counties because of such a long tenure by one county.

If a congressman coming from a certain county makes his home county the favorite in all his attentions to the detriment of other counties, then we would not blame the other counties for being jealous and wanting to break up the monopoly.

Apparently, the question of whether Mr. Bonner is a good and able congressman will take a back seat to the fact of where he lives. If the cry is going to be "we must break Beaufort county's monopoly," then residents of other counties would do well to look into the record thoroughly to see if Beaufort county has benefited as much or more than the other 13 counties of the First district.

If Mr. Bonner has opposition, he is going to lose some votes right here in Beaufort county. And one big reason why he is going to lose as many votes as he does is this. There are many people in Beaufort county who say quite conclusively that "our own Beaufort county has received honor in the fact that we have the congressman, while the other counties receive whatever economic or physical favors a congressman can mete out." In other words they say "other counties get the gravy while we get the honor."

We hope that if there is opposition to Mr. Bonner this time that the issues to be fought out in the campaign will be based on the record of service rather than on the residence of the office holder. If political campaigns in our congressional district are to be based on geography, then we have found a truly new attack in political warfare. If all else is to be forgotten and the main emphasis placed on where a man lives rather than what he has done, then service to constituents becomes less important than service to one county.

Every man and every woman qualified to vote in the First Congressional district has a right to run for office. We do not condemn any man or woman for seeking public office. That is a right which all of us must protect.

From the standpoint of land area covered, the First district, we believe, is the largest in North Carolina. It is a long trip from Grifton, in the Southwest, to the edge of Pitt county, to Knott's Island, in the North eastern edge of Currituck county.

We do not mean in any way to minimize the importance of geography here. But we do say that other factors are far more important. If a political race shapes up in our district, then the issue may well be decided in 12 counties. If opposition develops, it probably will come from Pitt county in the person of Mr. Walter Jones, a representative in the State General assembly from Farmville. If for the sake of argument we say that the vote in Pitt and Beaufort counties will about offset each other, then the real race will be outside the dates. And more than 40 percent of the Democratic vote is cast in Beaufort and Pitt counties.

We may well have a congressional race. And in the campaign we say that the record is far more important than geography.

Lady Of Big Affairs

By NORMA GAUHN
NEW YORK (AP)—There are not many tycoons you think of as being cute.

But the word fits one French tycoon—Madama Camille Olry Roederer.

She's a grandmother and in her 70s. But she applies a sharp brist under her neat blonde coiffeur to these impressive affairs: —Owning and managing a 400-acre vineyard that produces quality champagne.

—Owning and supervising a 150-horse stable that includes Europe's No. 1 money-winning trotter, Jamin.

—Owning and operating a wood cutting business on a 1,000-acre tract of forestland in Normandy. Yet to see her you'd think she had nothing more pressing on her mind than choosing a new gown.

At a business conference on one of her infrequent trips to New York, Mme. Roederer wore a soft pink wool suit, dark mink hat, bright pink (but low-heeled shoes) and a quantity of her favorite gold jewelry.

"I like bright colors," she says. "All colors—except green. That I hate—it's an obsession." Although France isn't a country quick to elevate women to executive positions, Mme. Roederer sees nothing unusual about her status. And she pooh poohs any suggestion that she might run into resentment from male colleagues.

"Never" she says. "I make the decisions as I see them. What is there to resent?"

Madame became head of the family champagne firm—founded 1784—after the death of her husband in 1932.

At company headquarters near Reims, Mme. Roederer is on hand after the harvest to supervise grape pressing and fermentation and the important blending of different wines.

At her Stables of the Red Earth in Normandy, 100 miles west of Paris, Madama keeps close track on breeding, conditioning and training.

She flew to New York in August to watch her prized Jamin win his first U.S. competition, the International Race for trotters. She returned to France in September, then came back for a wine-selling trip.

The fabled woman's touch isn't too apparent in Mme. Roederer's wine-making interests. But it creeps out at times in trotting affairs. When Jamin got off his feed in this country, Madame gave the word that he was to be fed artichokes as an appetite-tempting delicacy.

Mme. Roederer has no magic formula for staying young. Bluntly she says, "I am a question of character. My character is very young."

But she has one firm rule before going to sleep at night: "Make the mind happy; forgive any bad things that happened. Remind yourself only of the good."

Opinions In Brief

"American women have been accused of taking on too many masculine traits and the benefits are doubtful. In this fast changing world, a return to the feminine characteristics still possessed by the Southern Belle may not be amiss."—The Oak Ridge Oak Ridger.

"It may be a tough world for youngsters today, but it'll be a tougher one for adults tomorrow. And young criminals who find they can hoodwink easily-going law enforcement officials will more than likely grow up to be adult criminals. The price is high, and the public pays it. The only answer to crime—in youths as well as in adults—is punishment."—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

"We could insist upon more leisure time is good for us in an economic world which is swiftly adopting some of our more competitive tricks, and—all else to the contrary, we could raise our prices in the world market to our great disadvantage."—Charleston (W.Va.) Daily Mail.

CATALOGUE SELLERS MADE TAX COLLECTORS
Out-of-state merchants have become tax-collectors for the state of Pennsylvania under a new law signed by Governor David L. Lawrence. Out-state catalogue houses must now apply for a license and collect the State's 4 per cent sales tax when applicable. The law will probably be fought to the Supreme Court on the grounds that states cannot levy on interstate commerce.

Robersonville Book Club Meets

Mrs. B. L. Stokes presided Tuesday when the Book Lovers' Club met at the home of Mrs. Vance Roberson after the brief business session.

Mrs. Stokes gave a program on Thanksgiving, starting with the earliest festival by the Pilgrims at Plymouth in October of 1621. President Madison issued a proclamation in 1815, she said. In 1863, Abraham Lincoln appointed the last Thursday in November to be observed as a day of thanks. While in office, Franklin D. Roosevelt changed the day to the third Thursday to lengthen the interval between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Two years later in 1941 Congress passed a resolution making the fourth Thursday the legal holiday, she said.

At the conclusion of the talk, Mrs. V. L. Roberson presented her daughter, Miss Becky Roberson, who presented a review of her six-weeks tour of Europe. While showing colored slides, she

A number of Greenville firms opened after hours to the shopping party of 20 women. Monday night's purchases were wrapped in Christmas finery at the various stores; after which, the ladies returned to the Lodge to wrap still another collection of presents for the children.

These gifts, combined with a basket of food, will be distributed to each family invited to attend the Moose Christmas Party.

Women taking part in the shopping excursion, other than those included in the accompanying photograph, were: Mesdames Louise Carrigan, Elizabeth Moore, Ann Dunn, Earline Coghill, Grace Harrington, Edna Young, Mary Hardee, Dot Schlenz, Betty Williams, Virginia Garrison, Lillie Bri-

Observer Thinks Soviet Can Equal U. S. Agriculture If They Go All Out

Editor's Note — In a short time, so Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev says, the Soviet Union's farms will be outproducing the United States. Can it be done? In this revealing article, the first of four based on a recent tour of the Soviet Union, an American farm expert evaluates the challenge.

By DICK HANSON
Editor, Successful Farming Magazine
Written for The Associated Press
Can the Soviet Union catch up with us agriculturally? This question could be answered with "yes" or "no," depending on the Soviets themselves.

The answer is "no" in the next 10, 15 or 20 years, if they continue their present rate of improvement. The answer could be "yes," if they should suddenly decide to throw their economic weight strongly behind agricultural improvement.

If they pulled all the stops — as the Russians apparently have done in their rocket program — Soviet agriculture could make tremendous strides in relatively short time.

At present, it appears very unlikely that such drastic steps will or can be taken. The scientific progress being made by the Soviets is probably taking its toll in other areas. Agriculture appears to be one of them. Manpower is still the big tool in increasing production in the Soviet Union as opposed to the United States, where the substitution of machine-power for manpower is the basic approach to increased efficiency.

These are some of the general conclusions derived from my recent tour of key Soviet farm areas. I found that output per laborer is the measuring stick on Russian farms. Comparing a Soviet farm worker's output with the output of an American farmer must be a frustrating experience indeed for Soviet agricultural leaders. There just isn't any comparison.

There are a number of reasons for this poor showing by Soviet farm workers. Much of the work on a Russian farm is done by hand — whether it's digging potatoes or feeding cattle. Consequently, it takes a great many people to do the work. Much of the farm labor is done by women. From the physical standpoint alone, this lowers the production per farm worker.

The location of some of the best land in the Soviet Union is a production handicap in itself. The Ukraine, lying to the north and west of the Black Sea, is often referred to as the breadbasket of the Soviet Union. The land is good, no doubt about that. But the heart of the Ukraine is in the same latitude as Winnipeg, Canada.

This eliminates the possibility of growing a number of crops. It is too cold, and the growing season is too short. There are other areas in the Soviet Union where the climate is more favorable to such crops as corn and legumes, but just how much of this land is available is another matter.

It is doubtful that the average Soviet farm is making good use of fertilizer and other yield-increasing products. Under the Soviet agricultural system, it is much simpler to expand acreage than to increase yields already under cultivation. Thousands of acres of "new" land have come under the plow in the past few years. However, a great deal of this land lies in an agriculturally hazardous sub-tropical and emiarid zone east of the Volga and the Urals.

The fact remains, however, that not even the Soviets can control the weather, and the weather will continue to make the "new lands" area a questionable agricultural endeavor.

If the Russians hope to shorten the gap between their agricultural production and ours, they will have to put more economic help into their system than they are doing at present. Also, keep in mind that we have for a number of years attempted to cut our own production in the face of overabundant agricultural products.

In the years ahead, the Russians probably will close the agricultural gap somewhat. But, we probably won't be standing still either, unless forced to by a continuing surplus production problem.

We know we can produce far more than we are doing at present. The Soviets are not in the same position, nor are they likely to be in the near future.

Takes To Thumb After Forced Landing In Plane

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)—"Cincinnati tower, emergency. Engine failure." That message crackled over the radio channel at Greater Cincinnati Airport Tuesday night from a light plane approaching from Lexington, Ky. Then the tower operator saw the plane falter and fall behind trees.

An emergency crew found the pilot, Paul E. Hays, 30, a Florida executive, apologetically trying to thumb a ride.

Hays, of Jacksonville, was a little ruffled, scratched and cut, and decided to stay overnight at St. Elizabeth Hospital for observation.

Hays bellylanded his four-place plane in a briar patch. It was demolished, sliding 50 feet down a gully and coming apart as it went.

But Hays just gathered up his suitcase, briefcase and two flight books and walked out to the nearest highway.

While he waited for a ride, Hays recorded one last entry in a flight book: "Out of gas."

Can 'Control' Big Explosions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A research engineer came up today with a novel way to control violent explosions.

Basically the technique consists of moving the explosive material at supersonic speed or at the same velocity as the natural speed of the shock wave which causes its detonation.

When the detonating wave can't overtake and spread through the speeding explosive material there is no reaction, no blast.

This procedure, the researcher said, can be used to mix and make products out of chemicals too dangerous to handle by ordinary manufacturing methods. It could be done by slightly decreasing the speed of the chemicals so the detonating wave could spread slowly through them and produce slow-motion reactions.

The process also should make possible short, lightweight, ramjet engines with high fuel economy and with a wide range of speeds at or just above the speed of sound, he added.

Dr. Ebert A. Gross, former chief research engineer for the Fairchild Engine and Aircraft Corp. at Deer Park, N.Y., described the technique before the American Institute of Chemical Engineers. He later talked to a reporter.

The method was developed at the University of California, where Dr. Gross is a National Science Foundation research fellow. It was done with the aid of a supersonic wind tunnel in which dangerous gases were made to travel at six times the speed of sound—too fast to be detonated.

Detonation not only is a hazard in industry but also a headache for motorists, in the form of engine knock. It occurs when piston travel becomes too slow to escape a detonation shock wave which develops in certain fuel mixtures.

Dr. Gross said the wind tunnel experiments constituted the first laboratory production of standstill detonations.

The tests demonstrated the existence and stability of these waves and opens the way for their use in science and industry, he reported.

HIKING TUITION
NEW YORK (AP)—Columbia University's tuition fees will increase next September from $1,100 to $1,450 a year. The school attributed the rise to a need to increase faculty salaries.

Desegregation Harmony Cited

ATLANTA (AP)—The chancellor of the desegregated University of North Carolina says integration has worked harmoniously there, but that he has no idea whether it would also work for Georgia's university system.

"I do not care to pose as an expert on integration here because I am not familiar with the numerous local factors involved," said Dr. William B. Aycock.

"I can only speak for North Carolina, where integration has been no problem."

Aycock said Negroes comprise only one half of 1 percent of the University of North Carolina student body—22 out of 7,959.

He said the reasons for this were that "it is only natural for a student to be more inclined to choose to attend classes with members of his own race," together with the fact that North Carolina has numerous good Negro colleges, and that "it generally is more expensive to attend a university than a small college."

He said there have been no racial incidents on the North Caroming majorities in both houses of Congress this year, thanks to the 1958 elections. With their majorities, they might have tried to turn into reality some of the programs the Democratic Advisory Council now includes in its 22-point manifesto.

But they went along like sheep under the guidance of Eisenhower.

If this cozy relationship between Democrats and Republicans continues through 1960, the voters will have a hard time trying to see any difference between them as parties when they go to the polls next November.

Latin America Described 'Disenchanted' With U. S.

The Latin American countries are in ferment socially, economically, and politically, and we in this country are in ferment because we do not know what to do about Latin America, a nationally known authority on the countries to the south of us told an audience at East Carolina College Monday night.

Dr. Lewis Hanke, historian, author, and director of the Institute of Latin American Studies at the University of Texas, gave the first of two lectures on "Latin America: Continuity in Ferment" before an audience from the campus and the city. Speaking on the 1959-1960 Danforth Lecture Series at the college, he discussed present-day problems in Mexico and Central America and the relationships between these countries and the United States.

"A deep feeling of disenchantment exists in Latin America about the United States," Dr. Hanke said. They regard the Good Neighbor Policy as ended, he explained, because, for one reason, economic and military aid from the United States to Europe greatly exceeds that provided for Latin America. They resent also, he continued, the fact that the United States has seemingly approved the regimes of some dictators and that military aid from this country has been used by dictators against their own peoples.

They do not understand our fear of Communists, about whom they do not worry, he said, and are afraid that in the struggle between the United States and Russia they will be dragged into war. Our insistence on private enterprise rather than government aid as a way out of their economic difficulties is, in general, distasteful to Latin America, he explained. "The Good Neighbor honeymoon," he declared, "has ended."

Taking a quick glance at each of the Central American countries, he stressed the complexities of the situation there. He pointed out such difficulties as frequent political upsets; the struggles between the haves and the have-nots, the intellectual and the wealthy elite and the masses; the economic problems in one-crop countries; lack of educational opportunity; wide-spread poverty; and the existence of great wealth without adequate direction as to how it can best be used for the benefit of the people.

In the Caribbean, he said, the situation is "ripe for trouble." Puerto Rico, which has developed industry by tax concessions and made progress in other ways, he said, presents a "brighter picture" than most of that area.

"Mexico," he continued, "has developed since 1910 in a way no one would have predicted." Political stability, scientific development of the land, and a vigorous intellectual life are among reasons for an optimistic attitude in the country, he stated.

Distrust of the United States is prevalent among the upper classes in Mexico, he said, but many in the middle class are friendly toward this country.

Turning to the question of what we can do to improve our relationships with Latin America, Dr. Hanke said, "A Marshall Plan is not enough. Money is not enough." The establishment of the Inter-American Bank, he explained, should help in solving some of the economic problems of Latin America. But, he said, a money will not satisfy the growing demands for social and democratic advancement.

A free press, developed in Latin America after the fall of dictatorships, will result in a searching analysis of relationships between the Americas. We must be ready, he said, to face a new period in our relationships, one of tense questioning and evaluation.

The "red flannel underwear" approach is not a good one for us to follow, he stated. We must not assume, he said, explaining his phrase, that what is good for us is good for Latin America. We must avoid also, he said, an attitude of self-righteousness in dealing with our neighbors to the south.

It is wrong for us to assume, he continued, that dictators are the causes of all the difficulties of Latin America. The situation is far too complex, he explained, to be solved by the overthrow of governments.

He advised an increased effort on the part of the Americas to arrive at better understanding and a great respect for each other.

Enjoyable Show In 'My Three Angels'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The Tuesday night NBC Startime shows are proving to be the most distinguished and enjoyable programs of the current season. Tuesday night's "My Three Angels" must certainly rank among the best of them.

It was a Broadway show of some six seasons back and some of the TV cast were members of the original company, including the incomparable Walter Slezak.

It was a merry, sly and thoroughly wicked comedy by Sam and Bella Spewack, whose plot may seem defiant and outrageous with all the current concern over television's moral standards.

Three Devil's Island convicts—a swindler and two murderers—arrive at the establishment of a Cayenne shopkeeper at a moment of great trouble. The kindly convicts solve all his problems, by arranging the violent demise of the absentee shopowner and his heir and by committing a little incidental forgery and blackmail. There were also a number of forbidden words used, including one of seven letters.

It is doubtful, however, that many were corrupted by the 90-minute play. It was obviously all fun and besides it is hard to come by tropical snakes which conveniently fight on cue.

Slezak was wonderful—funny, lovable and knowledgeable. Barry Sullivan and George Grizzard were the other two angels and complimented him beautifully.

The National Assn. of Broadcasters' TV board recently pointed up its code to ban rigged or controlled quiz shows, deceptions, misleading advertising and plugs. Only about half the nation's TV stations, however, are NAB members who subscribe to code requirements.

Next subject on CBS' radio "Hidden Revolution" series will be "The Face of Retirement," on care of the aging—scheduled for next Tuesday night. Rock 'n' roll music again wound up at the bottom of the list of musical popularity in a listener survey—this one by Ohio State University—but the 14-to-18 crowd said they preferred the big beat overall other types of music.

Thursday night's Playhouse 90 starring Richard Boone, is a TV original about the Civil War.

While there is a hue and cry over TV violence, the heroes of the Westerns and the private eye shows are still having their weekly quota of fights. The vicious chops on the back of the neck is still the most popular way to subdue a villain.

Guest Soloist In Yuletide Concert

Judith Hearne of Henderson, student of music at East Carolina College, will appear as guest soloist in a Christmas concert presented in her home town by the Henderson High School Band. The program will take place Wednesday, December 16, at 8 p. m. in the High School auditorium in Henderson.

A clarinetist, Miss Hearne will play Weber's "Concerto for Clarinet," an outstanding classical composition in the literature for the instrument. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Dolores Matthews Fraiser of Henderson, pianist, who is an alumna of East Carolina College.

The Henderson High School Band will play selections appropriate to the holiday season.

Miss Hearne is a sophomore at East Carolina College, where she is majoring in music and is studying clarinet under Herbert L. Carter of the faculty. She is a member of the college band, orchestra, and choir and of the East Carolina College colony of Alpha Delta Pi, social sorority.

CHAPTER I

Friday was damp and drizzly so I decided to clean out the desk drawers. When the sun shines and you live in a country house in South Carolina that has battled the elements for almost two hundred years, you have no time for non-essentials.

In our mild climate things are always popping up and have to be constantly weeded, watered, mowed, mulched, sprayed, staked, pruned, or harvested. Those colored pictures you see in the magazines with columned Colonial mansions and liveried Negro servants leaping nimbly from chore to chore are merely propaganda put out by our state politicians in Columbia to further confuse the Yankees, my husband Rutledge Colhoun says.

I recall that when I finally got around to reading Gone With the Wind we were right in the middle of tobacco. "Never mind," Rutledge said, "I don't want you to read it anyway. It has some very bad parts in it."

"It has?" I said with interest. So between the tobacco and the grass and the borders and the new slip covers and the Garden Club luncheon I read. And read.

"Have you come to the bad part yet?" Rutledge would ask me when he came home from the office in Florence where he practiced law with his cousin John Caldwell Calhoun—which doesn't mean a thing, as everybody in South Carolina is a cousin.

"No," I said in a defeated tone. "Not yet."

But one morning when Rutledge came home I managed to tear myself away from the book long enough to register alarm. "What in the world are you doing home this time of day?" I said in capitals. My husband gave me a look—the kind that said, Women, but in a nice way. "It is twelve o'clock," he said. "The time I always come home for dinner." Then he added kindly, "You must have come to the bad part."

I began with the marble-topped highboy in our daughter Tilghman's room. The drawers, that had bulged so cozily with size forty sweaters and Bermuda shorts and crinolines until Tilghman's June wedding ten months ago, now seemed strangely empty in spite of the tumbled confusion of letters, recipes, tax receipts, odd gloves, and green stamps.

Old letters are my downfall, Rutledge says, because I can never bear to throw away a single one. Tilghman's were, of course, on the very top, and I sat down and read them all straight through, beginning with the first one from Bermuda: "Dear You-all: Honey-moon divine"—down to the very latest: "Dear You-all: He kicks so we think he is going to be twins . . . track men, Pete says, fighting for starting position . . . And no, like you told me, I am not wearing high heels, and no, our apartment does not have a cat, and yes, I am being careful, and how are you two going to like being grandparents? Ha, ha, ha." So that by the time Rutledge got in for dinner I was in a state.

"What are you crying about?" he said, giving me a light peck on the driest spot. "Old letters again?"

Husbands, I have found, simply do not understand about old letters. I blew my nose. "How would you like to have a baby way out in Colorado in one of those Army tents?" I said.

My husband admitted that he wouldn't like to have a baby at all, and they didn't live in tents. "And b-bizzards," I said, "and no m-modern conveniences."

By the time Old Beck brought in the pit Rutledge had finally got the general idea. "Well, why don't you write and ask Tilghman to come home and have the baby here?" he said.

I said, why, what a simply grand idea and why hadn't I thought of it myself?

"But I wouldn't count on it too much," Rutledge said. "Pete seems to take his responsibility very seriously and will doubtless want to see the thing through there by himself."

I said that Tilghman probably wouldn't want to impose all that extra work and expense on us either, and in any case they were both still so much in love they probably wouldn't want to be separated all that time.

All in all, it looked like a pretty slim chance, but I would, I decided, call Tilghman right away on the off-chance that something might come of it.

Pete, it turned out, was more than willing to forego seeing the thing through there by himself. "Great!" he said when I called. Tilghman too was delighted with the idea. "Lovely!" she screamed, and nobody minded, apparently, about the impending separation—least of all Tilghman and Peter.

W HEN I hung up I saw that Old Beck had left the kitchen and was busily cleaning the back hall where the telephone was.

"What Miss Tilghman say?" she asked.

I hesitated. Telling Old Beck that company was coming always brought on the "misery" in her back. But I had to tell somebody. Lord, wasn't that grand, Old Beck said, and when was she coming? We hadn't decided, I said, but probably in two weeks or so. And I patted the gnarled dark hand warmly, because suddenly for the first time I really felt like a grandmother. And it was lovely and new and exciting.

When I finished at two-thirty, and started to town to pick up the girls at high school, Old Beck was waiting at the door.

I said let's tiptoe out so we wouldn't have to bother with the dog this time. But when we opened the door of the station wagon, Punch, the black cocker, was waiting on the back seat.

So the three of us headed down the road toward Old Beck's. Old Beck's husband, General (Robert E. Lee), sharcropped for Rutledge and lived on our plantation.

Old Beck lived close enough so that in good weather she walked and ate breakfast with us—which I fixed. In bad weather I went for her after I dropped off Maggie and Brantley at high school in town.

Maggie as usual was waiting at the curb with her nose buried in a library book—The Writer's Handbook. Maggie was taking sophomore journalism. Maggie was all, so the kind of person who did everything with her whole heart. I had no doubt that she would someday be a James Gould Cozzens, if she so decided, which right now seemed likely.

She needed desperately to make the grade in something because, as far back as seven, she had divined the fact that she had neither Tilghman's beautiful brains nor Brantley's lovely charm, and was she adopted? We assured Maggie that she was not—which she wasn't—and that she was our very seriously and will doubtless want to see the thing through there by himself.

Brantley came along presently, bounded on all her lovely sides by masculine genders, and walking as though she had a book balanced on her head—which she usually did, as she was practicing for the lead in Dear Ruth, the senior play. With the book it looked all right. Without the book the effect was rather startling.

"Hey, Fanny," she said. Fanny

- I said how was the play going? And Brantley said, oh, everything was in orbit. The other boys with her were members of the cast, she explained. By "other" boys she meant the ones that were not Poo. Brantley and Poo had been "going steady" now for six months—so steady, in fact, that to our dismay they had decided to get married after graduation instead of going on to college.
- I told them about Tilghman's coming home to have the baby, and Brantley threw her arms about my neck with an ecstatic shriek.
- Maggie turned white.
- "Well," I said too loudly, "no use to make all this fuss. People have babies every day after all." Which fooled nobody.

Rose High Drops Home Opener, 65-50

TWO-POINTERS—Kroghie Andresen (14), Greenville guard, drives in for a lay-up in the top photo. Andresen led the Phants in a losing cause to Rocky Mount. Tulloss (31) makes a...

Andresen Stars For Rose High In Losing Effort

Rocky Mount used overwhelming rebound strength last night to bury Rose High cagers 65-50 in the opener for both teams. The Phantoms, boasting a complete new lineup from the one that gained a share of the regular season title last year, started slow and it took a reserve, Kroghie Andresen to break the scoring ice.

Grimesland Nips B-F With Final Quarter Rally

Grimesland fought back in the fourth period to capture the Pitt County Conference affair by a three point margin. Hardee with 17 and Cayton with 10 paced the Grimesland victory. Little tossed in 15 for the losers and Roy Smith had 10.

Table with columns: FG, FT, TP for various players and teams like Greenville, Rocky Mount, and Grimesland.

Wednesday Short Stuff . . . Coach Ray Martinez and his defending NAIA champs open another season tonight and their task is a rough one. Carolina, ACC champion for the past two years, will be the foe and the Tar Heels rate as heavy favorites.

Swimming Receives Big Response

Since its first meet here, East Carolina has always drawn a lot of attention in the water sport. It usually always has a good crowd at the home meets and the rugged schedule against national powers has enabled EC to proclaim national recognition in swim circles.

Local Area Sees Rebuilding Era

Last year, Greenville fans were able to view a veteran high school team that lost very few games and a college outfit that rated with the best in the North State Conference.

This winter, they will find both local clubs going through a rebuilding stage and victories may be few and far between. Lack of a big man and inexperience seems to be the biggest problem for Coaches Bo Farley at Greenville and Earl Smith of East Carolina College.

East Carolina may prove to be the most successful of the two. The Bucs have some outstanding boys and need only to get some experience under their belts. They do not have a proven big man but such shooters as Cotton Clayton, Ike Riddick, and Don Smith may offset this handicap.

Farley enjoyed one of his better years last winter with five seniors carrying the load as the Phants soared to a 11-3 record and a share of the regular season title. This year, the starters are gone and it could be a lean year out at Rose High.

Layne Jorgensen could be the needed big man but after him there is not much to choose from, height-wise. The veteran coach may rely on speed and he may have the horses to make his club a potent weapon.

Pitt County Notes

Grifton seems to be entering a new era in the Pitt County basketball scrapbook. The Bulldogs have broken a couple of barriers with victories over Ayden and Bethel—a trick that hasn't been pulled in a number of years. The Grifton girls were ranked as a strong candidate in the loop this season but the emergence of the boys as a powerhouse has been surprising. . . . Coach Walter Latham has the distinction of claiming the only State Title in Pitt County. Latham carried his club to the crown in 1948. No other Pitt County representative has advanced that far. . . . Coach Zeke Coggin is having his troubles this season in his first year as a prep coach. The former ECC graduate lost his top scorer, Don Hardison, a couple of weeks ago when he was badly injured in a farm-machinery accident.

MacPhail To Be Orioles' Prexy

BALTIMORE (AP)—Lee MacPhail, general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, will become president of the club when he is elected by the board of directors

Friday. MacPhail, 42, will succeed James Keely Jr., who announced his resignation Tuesday as president of the American League baseball club.

EC Mermen Open Tonight

Chicod Edges Bethel With Final Shot

BETHEL — Chicod's Raymond Fornes dumped a two-pointer in the closing moments of an overtime period as Chicod's Hornets squeezed by Bethel last night by a score of 68-66.

It was Fornes all the way for the winners, bucketing 31 points for high scoring honors of the night. Murray Porter was the runner-up for scoring honors with 13 for the visiting Chicod quintet.

For Bethel, Smith was the leader with 26 points. Lewis scored 15 for Bethel's losing effort.

In the girls' game, Forward Janice Mills led the Chicod girls to a 53-39 victory by scoring 30 points. She was aided in the winning effort by 15 points registered by Mary Hudson.

For the Bethel girls, Cobb was the leader with 24 points, while Highsmith and Chesson bucketed 7 points each to share runner-up honors for the losers.

Table with columns: Girls, Boys, listing names and scores for various teams like Chicod, Bethel, and Fornes.

Tonight will open a new season for East Carolina's swimming team as the mermen of Coach Ray Martinez tackle Atlantic Coast Conference champion, U. of North Carolina in Memorial Pool. Starting time for the home meet will be at 7:30.

Martinez sent his club through extra work over the weekend in hopes of getting better prepared for the Tar Heels. Last year the Bucs dropped a couple of meets to Carolina but finished the season strong, winning the NAIA championship.

The Tar Heels won the opening meet 50-38 last year and then had to rely on the final relay to overcome East Carolina 44-42 later in the season.

A veteran squad is back for East Carolina but the losses of two national champions — Bob Sawyer and Ken Midyette—is expected to be felt. Martinez is hoping that improvement on the part of his other returnees will help to offset the loss of his two champions.

Heading the list of veterans on the Pirate roster include Glenn Dyer, Tommy Tucker, Tommy Carroll, Jake Smith, and Jack McAnn. Martinez is also hopeful that a couple of freshmen will develop enough to help his depth-shallow squad.

Carolina, rolling along with only one defeat in four years, will be heavy favorites with their individual star Harry Bloom back for his junior year. Bloom set two school records last winter as a sophomore.

Other returning lettermen for the visitors include Randy Dodson, Jacky Rudy, Joe Kalkhurst, Bob Hunter, Ham Hamrick, Chuck Wrye, Sam Douglas, Vinny Simonanton, and Barney Barrett.

Apps Run Wild In Easy Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS North State Conference teams were casting worried glances to the west today, following Appalachian State's 112-58 lopping of the College of Charleston.

The Apps, in winning their third game in as many starts, jumped to a 58-18 halftime margin over the outclassed non-conference foe. Five Appalachian players counted in double figures in Tuesday night's game at Boone with Rick Howe garnering 24.

In the only other action, Davidson used a last minute goal by Bill Shinn to jump into the lead and nip Catawba 67-62. The loss gave Catawba a 3-3 record—all against non-North State Conference opposition.

Tonight's schedule has Atlantic Christian at Pfeiffer and Lenoir Rhyne and Belmont Abbey in Charlotte. Both are non-loop affairs.

Defending Pitt Champions Look For Bright Season

By ROY MARTIN
Reflector Sports Writer

There may be a bright star in the horizon for Chicod basketball coach Bob Howell as another season in the Pitt County conference rolls along at full steam.

Howell, former Greenville Phantom cage great, has returning for the 1959-60 season, three of the starters from last year's championship team. Howell also is fortunate in that one of the conference's most highly-touted guards, Raymond Fornes, is back for another year, and is expected to occupy the core position of the Chicod scoring machine.

The youthful Howell, embarking upon his first season as cage coach at Chicod, cites as his primary problems, the lack of depth in his squad. "Man for man, our first five can stand up to any five in the conference, however, we are weak on the bench, all we have there are sophomores and juniors, who are somewhat inexperienced", states Coach Howell.

Missing from the Chicod quintet this season, via graduation, is All-Conference forward Phillip Smith. Smith was a mainstay on last year's championship team, and according to Howell, his absence will leave quite a gap in the Hornet forces.

Another drawback in this year's Chicod five is the lack of height, says Howell. "We are hurt by not having any height," he relates, "we don't even have one man over six feet tall, however, we do have good experience and good shooting, and that's what we need most."

The performers expected to carry the load for Howell's Hornet five this year are, Guard Raymond Fornes, Chicod's golden boy, who Howell classifies as potential All-Conference material. Also Murray Porter and Ephraim Smith, forwards, are expected to handle many of the scoring chores for the defending champs.

The girls' team, also coached by Howell, poses a somewhat contrasting picture to the boy's squad according to its coach.

"We don't have any tall guards", declares Howell, "but we do have two forwards and two guards coming back this year that should help us a lot."

The two forwards returning from last year's team are Janice Mills and Mary Lewis Hudson, the returning guards are Nancy Jo Dixon and Lois Ann Mills. These girls should show up well this year, and carry much of the scoring load, says Coach Howell.

"We don't expect to be up there competing for the conference championship", comments Howell. "We'll be interested primarily in improving our team from week to week, by the end of the season, we should be able to give any team in the conference a good game."

Included in the slate of games for the Chicod Hornets are: Dec.

8, Bethel, away; Dec. 11, Grifton, home; Dec. 15, Bath, home; Dec. 18, Ayden, home; Jan. 5, Ayden, away; Jan. 8, Grimesland, away; Jan. 12, Stokes, home; Jan. 15, Bevoir, away; Jan. 19, Farmville, away; Jan. 22, Bethel, home; Jan. 27, Grifton, away; Jan. 29, Winterville, home; Feb. 2, Vanceboro, away; Feb. 5, Grimesland, home; Feb. 9, Bath, away; Feb. 12, Bevoir, home.

Tripp backed up the efforts of Manning with a tally of 9 points for the winners. He was runner-up close second for runner-up scoring honors.

NCS Wolfpack Off To Slow Start; Lose To Gamecocks

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

At the moment, it looks like a repeat performance isn't too much to expect from California and West Virginia in major college basketball. But it's already a long, cold winter of rebuilding for one-time power, North Carolina State, California, defending NCAA champion, ran its winning streak to 18 games with a 65-40 breeze against winless San Francisco Tuesday night. It was the Bears' second victory of the season. West Virginia, beaten by one point by California in the NCAA title game, made it four-out-of-four for the season and 53 consecutive Southern Conference victories with an 84-62 decision over Richmond.

But NC State, which lost only four games last season and finished sixth in the final Associated Press poll, was a loser for the second time in three starts, beaten 71-70 by South Carolina on Ronnie Johnson's basket with 3 seconds left.

South Carolina, now 2-1 under new coach Bob Stevens, was behind 45-37 at the half. Sophomore Art Whisnant led scoring with 23 points for South Carolina.

California never was in trouble against San Francisco and had a 14-point advantage at intermission. Darrall Imhoff led the Bears with 16 points.

All-America Jerry West was at it again for West Virginia, scoring 28 points and picking off 16 rebounds. The Mountaineers, slowed a bit by Richmond's zone defense, had their worst shooting night of the season—hitting at a mere .424 clip.

George Washington whipped Virginia Military 90-77 in another Southern Conference game, exploding a 12-point halftime edge into a 25 bulge when VMI failed to hit a field goal in the first 6½ minutes of the second half. Villa Madonna upset Niagara, regarded highly in the East, 77-73 on a three-point play by Jim Stewart in the closing minutes.

Unlabeled Wichita defeated Abilene Christian 91-66 with a full court press in the second half led by Larry Van Eman, who stole nine passes and was in on seven other steals. Marquette was erratic, but beat Valparaiso 75-58 with Junior Don Kojus scoring 20 points. Southern Methodist defeated Oklahoma City 67-56.

Georgia Tech (4-0) beat Alabama 69-53 in a non-Southeastern conference game; Memphis State, whose NCAA probation period ends Jan. 6, whipped Texas Wesleyan 107-48, and Bradley defeated little Monmouth 86-61 as soph scoring ace Chet Walker counted 33 points.

Control tactics and 19 points from Homer Watkins gave Idaho State a 74-58 victory over South Dakota. Jim Darrow, a 5-11 play maker, scored 32 points in Bowling Green's 80-71 victory over Canisius. Syracuse rallied in the closing minutes to hand Cornell its first loss, 68-66. Wesleyan almost blew a 16-point lead, but beat Harvard 77-71. Navy beat Baltimore 90-74, the middies' highest total in 25 games. In other games Washington State beat Idaho 59-15 and Seattle walloped Hawaii 102-68.

EXERCISE BULLDOZER

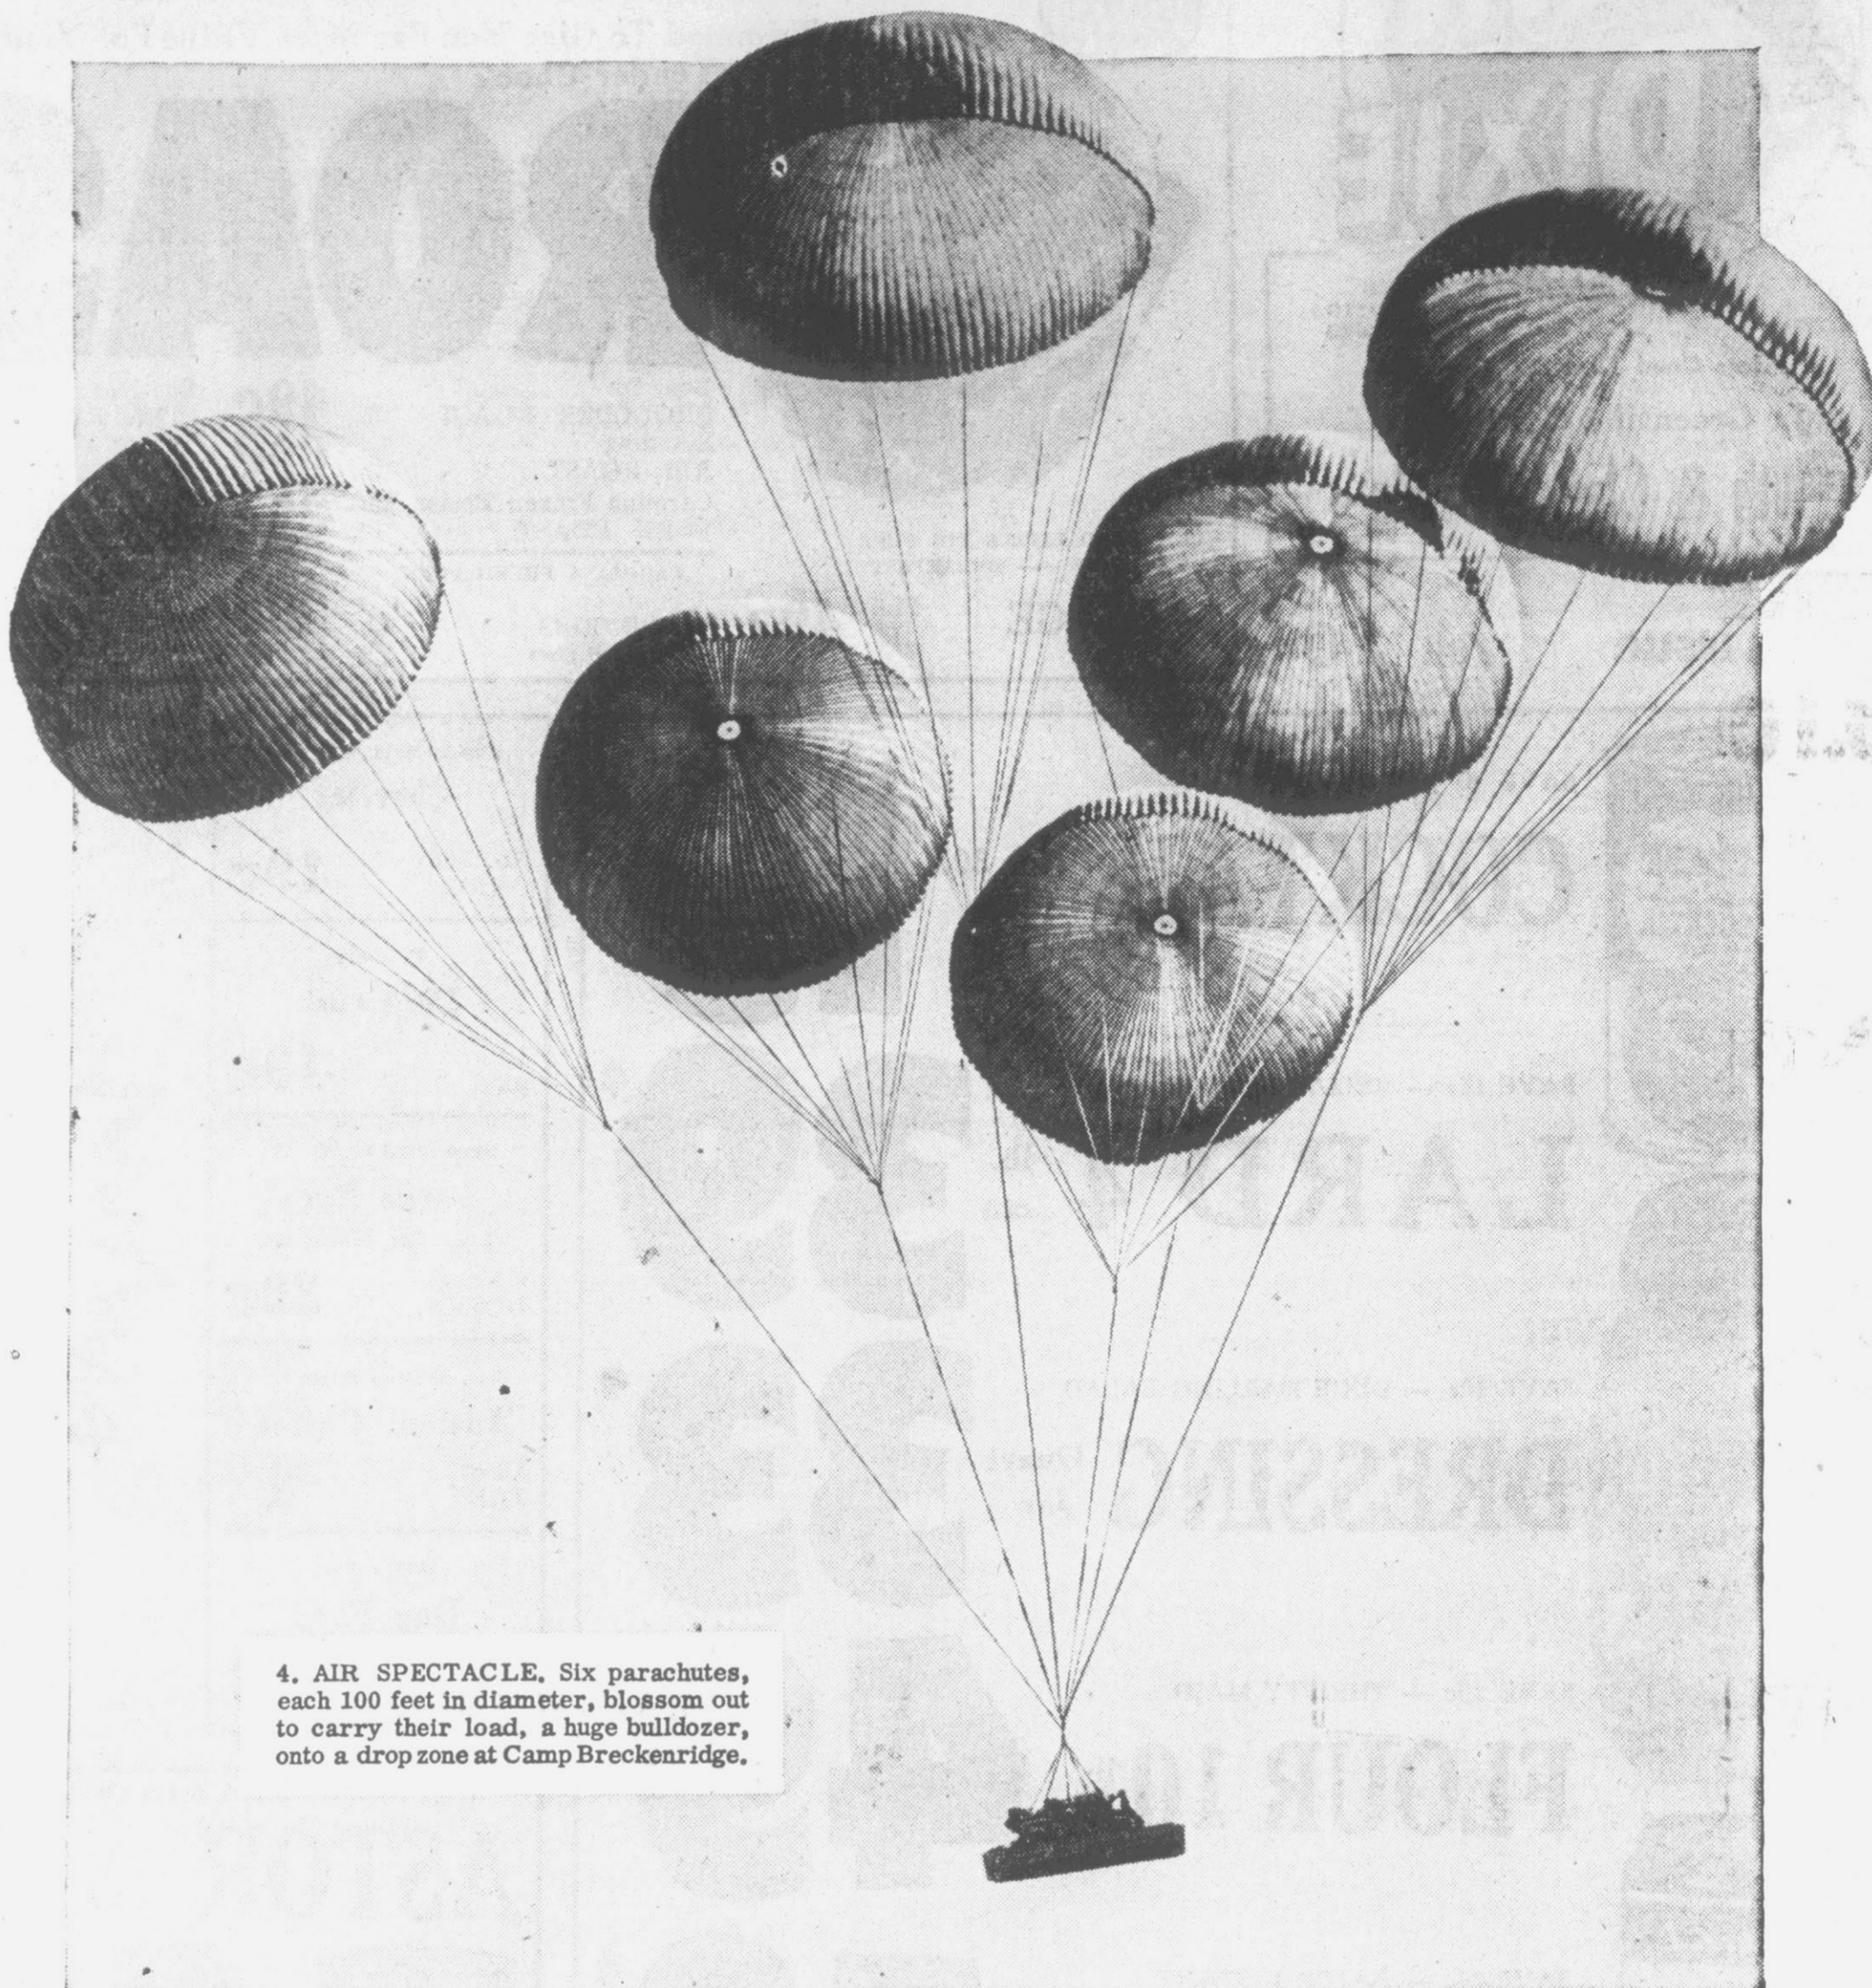

1. MASS LEAP. Paratroopers of the 326th Airborne Engineers, 101st Airborne Division, jump into Camp Breckenridge, Ky.

2. Two members of engineer battalion move out fast from drop zone at Camp Breckenridge after landing by parachute.

3. Meanwhile the loading of heavy equipment into planes for the big drop goes on. This truck is going for the ride.

4. AIR SPECTACLE. Six parachutes, each 100 feet in diameter, blossom out to carry their load, a huge bulldozer, onto a drop zone at Camp Breckenridge.

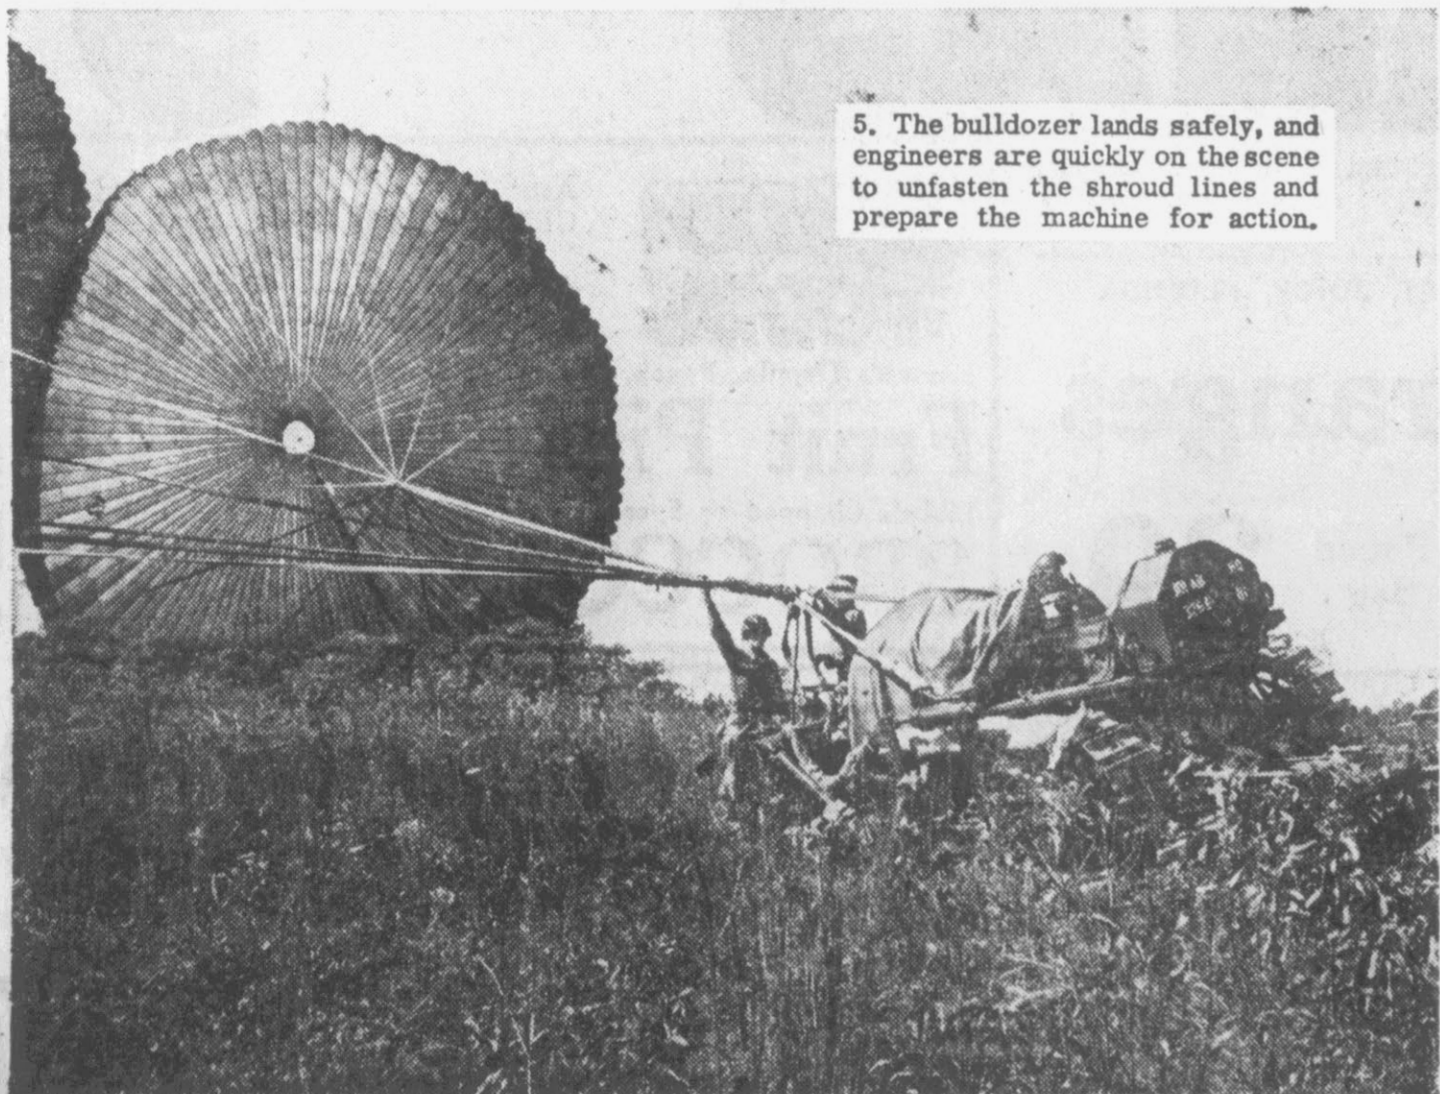

It rained bulldozers recently at Camp Breckenridge, Ky. They were part of 22 monster loads of heavy equipment parachuted to engineers of the 101st Airborne Division. Their mission: to build a 2,500 foot airstrip. They accomplished it in 52 hours.

The drop, first successful one in American military history, also included dump trucks, graders and jeeps. Each made the descent via six parachutes, 100 feet wide. From dozens of planes, 333 engineers jumped ahead of the equipment. By early afternoon, the engineers had cleared away enough ground so that the airstrip's pattern was clearly visible.

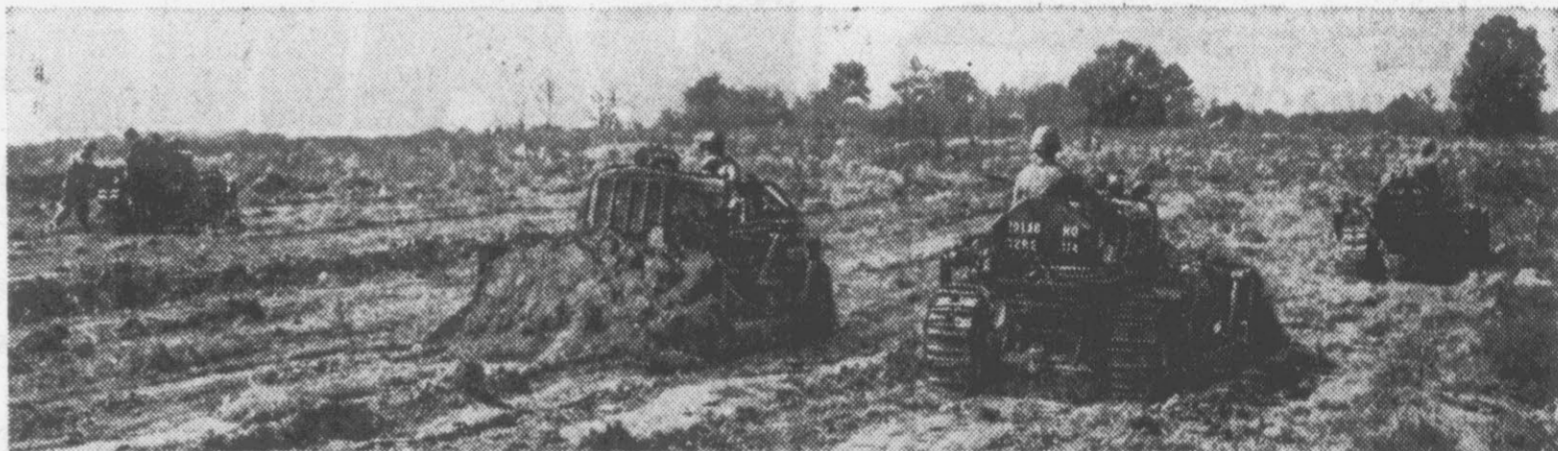

Exercise Ranger Bulldozer, the name given the drop, did not mean an added airstrip for the military base. The engineers dismantled it later.

Maj. Gen. W. C. Westmoreland, division commander, said afterwards that "we knew it could be done. Now we know we can do it." He said such drops would be invaluable to infantry units that had captured a remote outpost or set up a base in a foreign land. He also predicted it would have a future impact on the civilian economy, too.

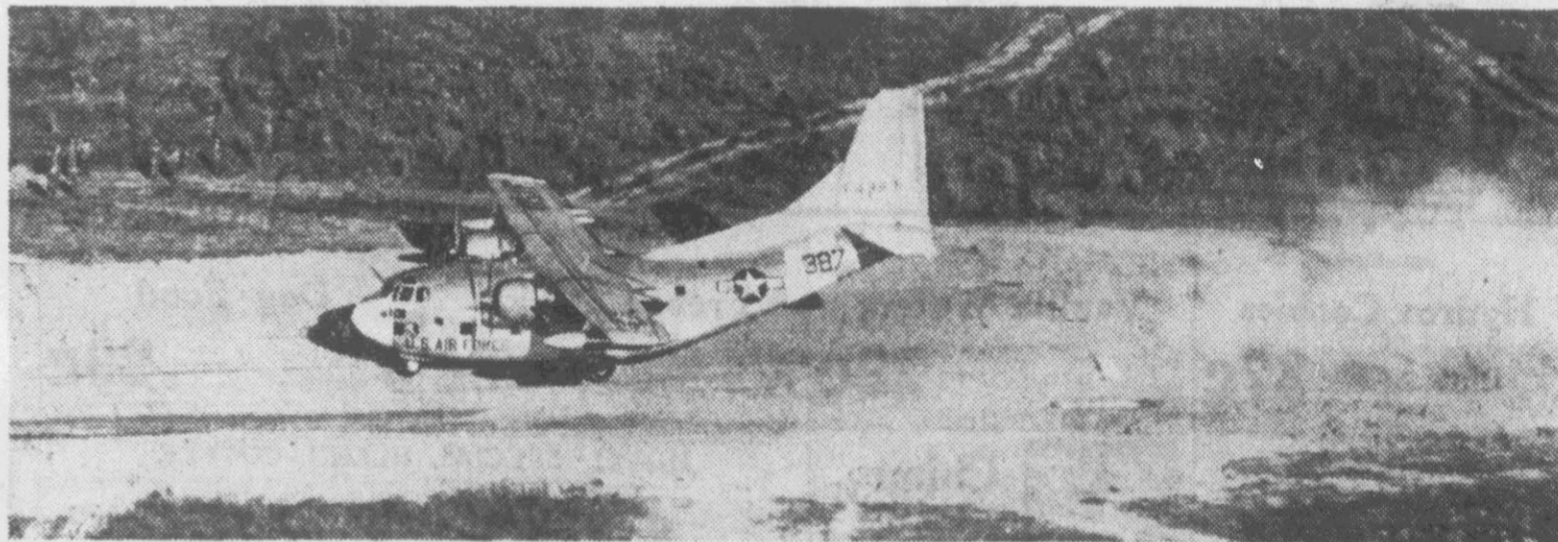

"The possibilities of dropping heavy building equipment into virgin territory — Africa, South America, anywhere — are unlimited," he added.

5. The bulldozer lands safely, and engineers are quickly on the scene to unfasten the shroud lines and prepare the machine for action.

6. Four bulldozers which had been parachuted from the skies start moving earth on a 2500-foot long airstrip.

7. A C-123 troop transport plane lands on the airstrip which did not exist 52 hours before it set down.

Bandit Wouldn't Take 'No' In Bank

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A tall robber wearing sports clothes wouldn't take no for an answer. Police said he ordered a teller at a Citizens National Bank branch to fill a bag with money Monday.

"I can't. It's not my money," she said.

He moved, revolver and sack in hand, to the next window. "I can't. I'm just a clerk here," said a second teller.

He moved to a third window. Perhaps it was his look of impatience: At any rate, he got $1,000 there. It wasn't enough.

Fifteen minutes later a man with the same description handed a note to Security-Frist National Bank teller: "Give me all the money."

She put $1,500 into his bag. He moved to another window.

"Where's your gun?" demanded teller Bruce Penneck.

The bandit turned and stalked out.

Bank Broadens 4-H Support

A Greenville banking firm has joined with other North Carolina banks in national support of 4-H Club work, according to J. T. Marston Jr., president of the State Bank and Trust Company here.

The contribution was made, Marston said, to the National 4-H Club Foundation near Washington, D.C. as part of a nationwide fund-raising program.

The Greenville firm has supported local 4-H programs for several years, the president said. It was felt, he stated, that the National Foundation provided an excellent opportunity to broaden support of the 4-H movement.

The Foundation, a privately financed arm of the Cooperative Extension Service, is currently responsible for three major programs: (1) the International Farm Youth Exchange in which over 2000 rural young people are exchanged each year between this country and 40 other nations of the free world so they may live and work with farm families and promote better international understanding; (2) the National 4-H Club Center in Washington, which was formally opened in June by Pres. Eisenhower as a working demonstration of the philosophy of the 4-H movement; and (3) a broad program in human development and human relations for training youth leaders in how to work more effectively with young people.
