WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon's entry into the presidential race sparked both praise and criticism during the weekend.

Nixon became an acknowledged GOP candidate by consenting to have his name and delegate slates entered in three primaries.

Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler had a different description. He termed Nixon a "shrewd, devious political operator."

Two Break-Ins Are Investigated

Two breaking and entering and one attempted break-in were reported by Greenville police this morning.

Officers said thieves entered Respass James Barbecue House at West End Circle sometime Saturday night, stole an estimated $5 in bills and change and broke open the cigarette machine and made off with several packs of cigarettes.

Health's Grocery on Pamlico Ave. fell victim to robbers who broke the front glass from the store, and reaching through the window, stole a small quantity of merchandise from the building. This break-in occurred sometime last night or early this morning, officers added.

Officers said two windows at the rear of the building were broken out in an attempt to enter the building but no entrance was made.

Driverless Car Ran Down Child

A three-year-old Negro boy, suffering from internal injuries, was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital yesterday after a driverless car ran down the boy.

Investigating police said the youth, Robert Lee Taylor of 1208 Factory Street, was playing in and around a car, owned by Charlie H. Brown, 43-year-old Negro of 1206 Factory St., which was parked in the yard of the residence.

Officers theorized the child forced the auto out of gear, then, as the youth started around the rear of the vehicle, it started rolling backward, running over the boy.

Doctors this morning said the child was not in serious condition.

Mitchell Says Steel Wage Pact Can't Set Off Spiral

DETROIT (AP)—The steel wage settlement is in line with others negotiated this year and cannot set off a wage spiral with highly inflationary effects, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell said today.

With good will and good sense, and with awareness that an economic institution like a steel corporation or a labor union must serve the public interest as fully as its own interests, it could be possible—on the basis of this settlement — that the United States will have seen its last major steel strike," Mitchell said.

Mitchell said some news stories on the settlement created misunderstanding. He said they did not take into account the fact that the steel settlement has been described in terms of total employment costs, while other major recent settlements have been described in terms of wages and benefits to workers.

Fashions Enter Into New Era. New Philosophy Is Demonstrated

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—American fashions for the new decade are as streamlined as a jet plane and as weightless as a satellite in space. This is the long-range outlook presented today to more than 200 visiting fashion editors, as New York designers unveiled spring fashions for 1960 at the 34th national Press Week showings. The new clothes transcend boundaries of geography and seasons, and demonstrate a new philosophy of fashion which has been developing for several years. It is a plan which has grown out of the broadened activities of modern women, who require a basic year-round wardrobe, adaptable to any occasion or locale. The accent is on lightweight, travel-happy clothes that can be condensed into capsule luggage, emerging wrinkle-free and ready for come what may. Comfort and functionalism are important requirements of the new fashions, which must allow ease of movement and be easy to care for. New man-made fibers play an important part in the over-all plan, appearing in many fabric blends in combination with cotton, silk, wool and linen. Silhouette news of the new season is concentrated chiefly above the belt, with a variety of new sleeve treatments achieving width at the top. There are capelike sleeves, puffed sleeves, kimono, raglan and dolman sleeves, all designed for a wide-shouldered look without resort to bulky padding. Even coats and suits are likely to have short sleeves, ranging from bracelet length to above the elbow. Suit jackets are generally longer than those of last season, carefully shaped to follow the lines of the figure, but never constricted or nipped in to hamper free movement of the body. Skirts usually are slender, often with a peg-top look, tapering toward the hemline. Some pleated skirts are seen with suits, but these have a slender effect also, hanging straight and close to the figure. For women who prefer short jackets there are plenty of the Chanel-type brief boxy jackets, never longer than hipbone length, casual and classic. Coats tend to be straight or slightly flared in front, loose and capelike in back. The white town coat is an important note of the new season, usually done in lightweight, spongy woolen with a textured surface. The black coat may be worn over a white or navy dress or suit with dramatic effect. Other important colors for both coats and suits are pale beige and gray, in addition to the perennial spring navy. In high colors, the full range of greens continues popular. Fabrics this spring make headline news, both for their beauty and variety and for their new and scientific talents. Textile manufacturers have achieved new triumphs in fabrics which are feather-light, wrinkle-resistant, color-fast, easy to clean and comfortable to wear. Some of the new chiffon-weight woollens, silks and blends appear in precisely tailored styles, others in softly draped treatments. Evening dresses go in for daringly low necklines this spring, whether they are long and slinky or short and full-skirted. The dinner and theater suit is still a favorite outfit, as is the dress-and-jacket costume which can take a woman through a busy day and a festive evening, with no more trouble than removing a jacket after 5.

Teacher Was Famous Spy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A PHILADELPHIA schoolmarm, previously unknown to fame, was established today by a military historian as "the most successful female spy in history." Her name was Ann Bates and she did her spying on the side of the British during the Revolutionary war. She gets credit for her exploits, after 180 years, in a new book, "Turncoats, Traitors and Heroes," by John Bakeless, just published. When the redcoats occupied Philadelphia, Ann Bates was making ends meet by keeping bees and sheep and tending school, as well as teaching school at 30 pounds a year. This life changed radically upon her marriage to a royal artilleryman. Somehow a British intelligence agent sensed her innate ability and asked to see her in New York. Her first demonstration of skill was to obtain an American pass that let her cross New Jersey, even though she was the wife of an enemy soldier. Once under the direction of Major Drummond, aide to General Clinton, she bought a pack of peddler's supplies in New York, pocketed a secret token to identify her to other British agents, and set out. Selling her needles, combs, knives, thread and such to Continental soldiers, she passed from regiment to regiment, prying out the details of their strength. That was just the start of her remarkable career. Time and again she penetrated the American lines and brought back vital information to New York. After two years' service she was allowed to sail at last with her husband to England. But her luck went sour. Deserted by the artilleryman, she petitioned desperately for a 10-pound pension that had been promised her. Her old boss, Major Drummond, confirmed the fact that "her information as to matters of fact was far superior to every other intelligence." It was from such long forgotten records that Bakeless dredged up the long forgotten story of Ann Bates, heroine—or villainess—of a long lost cause.

Pat Crowley—Uncontroversial Actress?

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Digging a story out of actress Pat Crowley could drive a press agent whacky. She doesn't do anything controversial, and she's happy with her career and home life. She definitely is not "good copy." Doesn't lawyer-husband Gregory Hookstraen object to Pat's continued acting? "Heavens no," she replies. "He's glad to have me pursue my career, says I'm easier to get along with when I'm busy. Besides, as an attorney he's associated with things theatrical." There also is nothing heady or heart-rending about Miss Crowley's climb to success. After beginning as a Conover model at 11, she went to drama school, bounced around in stage roles and television and then signed on for Hollywood. "And here I am," she says, just as non-controversially as possible. To prepare gowns for decorative purposes, wash each piece by itself in soap or detergent suds. Missing New York Deb Traced To Paris; No Further Evidence

ANTWERP, Belgium (AP)—Dec. 27 after a society party. Missing heiress Gamble Benedict today was traced to Paris after a freighter trip from New York with a married, Romanian-born chauffeur. New York police said the 18-year-old New York debutante sailed from New York Dec. 31 aboard the freighter Edga with Andre Porumbeanu, 35, onetime chauffeur-butler for Mrs. Arde Bulova, widow of the watch king. The freighter arrived in Antwerp Saturday. Both Miss Benedict and Porumbeanu remained aboard Saturday night, sources in Antwerp said. Sunday afternoon Miss Benedict boarded an express train which got to Paris late in the afternoon. It could not be learned immediately whether she remained in the French capital. When they sailed from New York, she had listed Naples as her destination and Porumbeanu gave Paris as his, New York authorities said. Police said they are closing the case since they are satisfied Miss Benedict voluntarily left her fashionable upper East Side home.

Silence Is Almost Golden At University Of Detroit

DETROIT (AP)—Silence was almost golden Sunday night. It cost up to five bucks a ticket. The occasion was a "silent record concert and recording session" with benefits going to the University of Detroit Chorus tour fund. While the silence from the stage was punctuated by some rather loud noises, the audience churned up sound waves with laughter and applause. Much of it was for TV comedian Henry Morgan, who tip-toed onto the stage in stocking feet and delivered a silent monologue, then erupted into some loud witticisms. The U. of D. chorus gave a silent rendition of "When the Saints Come Marching In." But a record billed as "Scottish Highland Silence" produced the loud wail of bagpipes. The program was an outgrowth from a silent record craze that started at the University of Detroit when students complained that jukeboxes in the Student Union interfered with studying. Records were produced which gave three minutes' silence for a dime. Some were played so often they produced noisy needle scratches and had to be replaced.

Tricolored Icicle 4 Stories High, Part Of Craze

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Pedestrians and motorists along Memorial Drive look with amazement at a tricolored icicle four stories high outside a Massachusetts Institute of Technology dormitory. The creation of bigger and better icicles is a new college craze hereabouts and three residents of Baker House claim a record. Steve Raphael, Brooklyn, N.Y., Robert Ratner, Short Hills, N.J., and William Tobin, Colorado Springs, Colo., explained their icy creation this way: They tied an ice cube to a string and lowered it from their window. Then a trickle of water was siphoned from a barrel down the string. By using colored water at times, they got a red, white and blue icicle, which at one point is about 14 inches wide.

His Coin Could Be Valuable

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—It's a penny, or maybe a quarter. But to Tulsa C. O. Riley it could spell dollars. Riley, a coin collector, has come up with a coin the color of a penny, slightly larger than a nickel and containing markings of a quarter. The coin was received by a Tulsa bank in a shipment of new quarters and is what dealers term a "minting error." Riley recalled a similar mistake was made in 1954 when a half dollar was stamped on a quarter planchet—a disc cut the size of the coin to be minted. "The man who owns that coin was offered thousands for it," Riley said. Chances for such an error escaping U.S. Mint inspectors is considered one in a million.

Sheds Princess, Weds Countess

LONDON (AP)—Having finally won his freedom from a Bourbon princess, Bolivian tin tycoon Antonio Patino slipped off last Friday and married an Italian countess. Patino and Countess Beatriz di Rovasenda were married "quietly in England" at a civil ceremony, attorney Frederick W. Ratcliff announced. Patino was married in 1931 to Princess Maria Cristina de Bourbon of Spain. They separated about 13 years ago, and four years ago he began a legal battle for a divorce in Mexico, charging adultery and abandonment.

Five Thousand Letters To Be Mailed

BIG MAILING JOB—Lillie Briley, Bernadette Fuller and Rose Brooks at work on 5,000 letters.

Five thousand letters have been prepared for mailing Tuesday to Pitt County residents in behalf of the new March of Dimes. Mrs. Louise Carrigan, director of the local campaign, disclosed yesterday a team of helpers had been working on the solicitation-by-mail part of the drive. It was also announced that Saturday's Blue Crutch sale proved to be one of the most successful held in Greenville. The young volunteer workers reported receipts of $125.00. Next Saturday night, the Women of the Moose, Greenville Chapter 1308, who are sponsoring the March of Dimes, will hold a tacky party and dance, with all proceeds going to the campaign. Admission will be a donation of one dollar per couple. The National Foundation, for whom the annual March of Dimes is the major fund-raising effort, announced over the weekend that paralytic polio claimed 83 per cent more victims in 1959 than in 1958. Preliminary figures from the U.S. Public Health Service showed 5,695 paralytic cases last year.

Humphrey 'For' UN Supervision

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) proposes the United States salvage the deadlocked nuclear test talks at Geneva by recommending a series of underground nuclear bomb tests under the direction of the United Nations. The tests would be conducted cooperatively by the atomic powers and would show how an adequate system of detection and inspection could be developed, Humphrey said in an interview Sunday. The Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States resume the test ban talks in Geneva Tuesday. They recessed last month in a deadlock over Soviet rejection of findings by U.S. scientists that underground atomic blasts could be hard if not impossible to detect. Humphrey, here on his campaign as a candidate for the presidential nomination, said the U.N.-supervised test series probably would take two or three years but would clear up the major point of dispute in the Geneva talks. Humphrey said the United States should also "call for banning of nuclear tests in space, the atmosphere and underwater," but indicated there would not be much disagreement over that since "all three of these types can be properly inspected."

Blames Reds For Anti-Semitism

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP)—An escalator that can move around corners has been registered with the U.S. patent office. Maj. Gen. A. J. Drexel Biddle, Pennsylvania adjutant general, says the current wave of anti-Jewish vandalism was touched off by Communist agents. "There is no doubt in my mind that the first match was struck by Communist agents as a part of a deliberate plan to discredit West Germany in the eyes of the West," Biddle said Sunday at the 37th annual observance of Pennsylvania day. New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids, stop itching, and relieve pain—without surgery. In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—discovery of a world-famous research institute. This substance is now available in suppository or ointment form under the name Preparation H. Begin Inquiry Into Increased Aerial Accidents

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate inquiry starts today into what Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D-Okl.) called "the startling increase" in fatal accidents last year by both commercial and private airplanes. Representatives of the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) and the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) will be the first witnesses, said Monroney, chairman of the Senate Aviation subcommittee. He called it a fact finding inquiry aimed at finding out the causes of the crash and what can be done both by government and industry to increase air safety. The CAB recently reported that domestic airline accidents last year cost the lives of 198 passengers and 28 crew members. In addition, CAB figures showed that 779 persons were killed in private flying accidents last year.

Admits Stabbing Of Stepdaughter

MILWAUKEE (AP)—An unemployed steamfitter admitted Sunday night the fatal stabbing of his stepdaughter, Margaret Nowicki, 13, in their Chicago home Jan. 4. "I want to get it over with. I'm ready to go back and face it," Edwin J. Conrad told Detective Capt. Matthew Deehr. Conrad, 39, hailed a police car and told officers Robert Hoffman and Bernard Parys that he had stabbed his stepdaughter. Deehr said Conrad insisted the girl's death was an accident. Deehr said Conrad admitted an early morning drinking spree on the day of Margaret's death. Conrad said he had called to Margaret to get out of bed and go to school. Conrad said he was using a butcher knife to cut down a Christmas card display when his stepdaughter came up behind him with outstretched arms. Conrad told Deehr he tapped around and the knife was holding plunged into her body. Conrad said he fainted and could remember nothing more until the ringing of a telephone awakened him.

Should Learn Cause Of Disaster

Although Civil Aeronautics Board officials have confirmed earlier speculation that the National Air Lines plane that crashed near Bolivia disintegrated in the air, there remains the important question of what caused the airliner's crash.

In all probability it will take several days yet, perhaps even weeks, for officials to piece together bits of information and clues found at and near the scene of the crash to determine the cause. It is important not only to the people in North Carolina, but to the entire nation that the cause of the crash be determined if at all possible.

Nothing can be done about those 34 persons who died in the disaster. Even so, if the exact cause of the crash can be determined, it may help to prevent a similar tragedy in the future.

In spite of the tremendous advances made in air travel safety in recent years, it is obvious that a great deal more needs to be done to reduce the number of plane crashes that occur month after month. Air travel in the United States has increased rapidly and seems destined to continue to account for an increasing larger proportion of commercial passenger transportation. Airliners have been made safer, and at the same time they have been made larger and faster. When an airliner crashes today the loss of life which results is apt to be considerably larger than was the case several years ago.

While the crash near the North Carolina coast has received considerable attention in this area because of the geographic location of the crash, it is only part of a growing problem of national importance. In spite of advances in air safety, considerably more effort in that direction is essential if the desired degree of air safety is to be achieved.

He Gave Unselfishly To Community Work

Selection of Roy Hardee as Greenville's Young Man of the Year for 1959 is a fitting tribute to a young man who has contributed significantly to the betterment of Greenville and other communities throughout Eastern North Carolina and the state.

In a large measure this young man has afforded the leadership, not only in 1959 but also in previous years, that aided greatly in the establishment and advancement of the Greenville Rescue Squad. As chairman of the state organization of community rescue squads, he has been a moving force behind the establishment and advancement of other similar units in North Carolina during the past year.

It would be difficult to count the hours of volunteer service Roy Hardee has spent during the past aiding individuals and families in distress and seeking to provide better accident prevention as well as better rescue work in every phase of daily life. In addition to this area of endeavor, however, Greenville's Young Man of the Year for 1959, also found time to participate in almost every other community-wide civic undertaking during the past year.

He has given unselfishly of his time and energies for the betterment of his community and other communities throughout North Carolina. The time and effort he has expended, the personal sacrifices he has made to be of service to his fellow citizens reach far beyond that which is normally expected of a person who sincerely shoulders his responsibilities as a good citizen.

For his selection as Greenville's Young Man of the Year for 1959, The Daily Reflector joins with others of this city in offering its congratulations to Roy Hardee. For his unselfish and untiring efforts to make this community a better place to live, not only now but in the years ahead, we express to him our sincere appreciation.

Settlement Had Some Surprises

By RALPH ROBEY
It has been assumed that the steel strike would be settled before the expiration of the eighty day injunction period. The basis of this assumption was that both economic and psychological factors would lead the companies and union management to reach an agreement. None the less announcement of the settlement came as a major surprise.

It was a surprise because the final hearings of the presidential fact finding board were as harsh as such a meeting could be. The union president, David McDonald, was extremely caustic in his comments were trying to break up the union. The chief of the company negotiators, R. Conrad Cooper, also was caustic, insisting the union was making inflationary demands. Even the chairman of the committee saw no possibility of working out an agreement because it was evident that, judging by these hearings, union and management were not only as far apart as ever, but were taking a harder position on their stands.

It appeared certain, therefore, that the next step would be to have a vote by the employees on the last offer of management. But there was no hope that this would be accepted by the workers. There was no hope on this because the record shows that the union always makes this a vote of confidence in the union leader, not on the terms of settlement offered by management. In these circumstances it is almost inevitable that the final offer be refused.

The next step would be termination of the injunction and presumably another walk out by the workers. At that point the Administration and the Congress would be expected to step in with some kind of a forced settlement, and perhaps new permanent legislation designed to meet the problem of industry wide strikes.

What the general public did not know was that some weeks ago Vice President Nixon started a series of private meetings with both the union spokesmen and management, trying to resolve their differences. Along with him was Secretary of Labor Mitchell. The final session was held here in Washington and lasted twenty-two hours. This was followed immediately by a press conference announcing the settlement.

The terms of the agreement go substantially beyond anything management had offered previously. Over the thirty-month period the cost will amount to an estimated forty-cent increase per hour. In the aggregate the cost will amount to over one billion dollars, according to Roger M. Blough, chairman of U. S. Steel. Some of the steel companies probably can absorb this rise in the cost of production, but others can not. Before too long we shall see higher steel prices. That will lift the cost of production of all steel using companies, and many of them will be forced to raise prices.

The only offset to this is the fact that we shall have so-called peace in the steel industry. That the public has paid, and will pay, an enormous price for this peace goes without saying. Even more dismal is the thought that there is no basis for concluding that the same thing will not be repeated again and again and again—just as it has been over the past many years.

The Natives Are Restless Tonight

By SAUL PETT

Parlous Times, Indeed

NEW YORK (AP)—These are indeed parlous times.

A whole way of life may be in jeopardy. A culture, an economy, a philosophy, an entire set of customs, habits and values may shortly be shattered. Why? The Internal Revenue Bureau says that this year it will examine more closely than ever before deductions for business entertainment, travel and other expenses. This may be the beginning of the end of the age of the expense account. Consider what might happen if the government suddenly began to disallow many of the income tax deductions it now accepts.

The liquor industry would receive its worst jolt since Carry Nation picked up her hatchet and went party-poopng. Credit cards, now such handy proof for the tax collector, might easily disappear and be replaced by that ancient, gauche, germ-ridden thing called cash. Remember cash?

At least a hundred famous restaurants around the country, where people come to be seen despite or because of the outrageous prices, nightmarish decor and mediocre food, might have to shut down or be replaced by supermarkets or pizza parlors.

In the big cities, the big black limousines rented by visiting business men would revert to their original function—funerals. Many private and corporate yachts, only yesterday the scene of lavish and deductible business entertainment, would begin rusting at their moorings. Private and corporate airplanes, whose fuel was the expense account, would be grounded.

Country club memberships would go begging for people willing to pay for their own. Headwaiters would find smaller tips in their palms and the ace of the deductible grand gesture would end: Americans once more would return to the way of their forefathers and start out-fumbling each other for the check. It might even make waiters civil.

Once more Americans would acquire an old-fashioned respect for money because the money they will be spending will be their own, not Uncle Sam's. There will be more wives cooking their own dinners and more men going on the wagon rather than break the habit of a lifetime and start buying their own. The theater would suffer, night clubs would be staggered and baseball fans would suddenly replace out of town buyers in the corporate boxes at the World Series.

And on Madison Avenue, desolation. The four-martini, three-hour lunch would disappear. Young men in gray flannels would dine out on park benches salami sandwiches out of hand-dipped Moroccan leather attache cases.

Stocks Poor 'Hedge'

By ROGER BABSON
BABSON PARK, MASS.—I don't see how buying Dow-Jones common stocks now can be a hedge against inflation. This is not to say that they may not go higher; but these stocks are already too inflated to be bought as "inflation hedges" by intelligent people.

REQUIREMENTS FOR AN INFLATION HEDGE

First, good inflation hedge characteristics must be based upon tangible and marketable assets and not on "good will" or temporary earnings. Second, these tangible assets should be land or natural resources such as oil, gas, minerals, water power, or woodlands. These usually go up in price as the dollar goes down in value. This assumes fair taxation and no harmful legislation. There is no hedge against an opportunistic Congress or a Communist government which takes title to private property fair recompense. Theoretically it would be wise for readers to go into debt and borrow money now, provided they made sure they would have the cash to pay up the interest on the loan and pay up the loan at maturity. Otherwise, instead of making money, they could be wiped out completely.

If it is wise to borrow now in order to pay up with depreciated dollars later, then it is unwise to loan money now. This means "Don't buy new long non-convertible bonds or preferreds unless you plan to sell soon. They are not now a safe "permanent investment."

WHAT ABOUT LIFE INSURANCE?

In a general way this reasoning applies to most life insurance policies if you buy today and then live twenty years or more while the value of the dollar declines. Actually, you should probably buy, say, double what you ordinarily would, to be sure of having the money to pay the premiums over the twenty or more years.

The insurance feature, of course, may offset the risk of inflation—your family could get a big sum if you should die within a year. Hence, I believe in simple life insurance, with no endowments or frills.

WHAT ABOUT STOCKS?

Neither railroad nor utility common stocks should be bought as inflation hedges because during an inflationary era, operating costs could go up so that dividends would be reduced. At best, net earnings would lag behind any rise in rates; and most railroad stocks should be avoided for other reasons also.

Don't depend upon the most popular stocks of today. Fashions in stocks change as quickly as fashions in dress. A popular stock today is usually not a good inflation hedge. For reasons, write my friend Mr. Humphrey Neill, the great contrarian of Saxton's River, Vermont.

COMPANIES WITH LARGE ACREAGE

Most industrial stocks are poor inflation hedges, as already indicated. However, industrials with large land or natural reserves or other tangible holdings should be the best of the industrials. The most sought after by wise investors are those with good management—plus heavy depreciation charges and sufficient working capital.

I am not acquainted with all of Central America; but I once owned and operated a school in Guatemala City. Hence, I know of the constructive work of the United Fruit Co., which has grown to great importance with reportedly the largest acreage in the Americas, having sunshine, water, and a long growing season. It raises not only the finest bananas, but also cocoa, palm oil, cattle, and timber. The company has a fleet of six steamships, oil reserves in Colombia, and large net current assets, excluding railways, buildings, and a complete wireless system. United Fruit stock, however, is only one such; there are several good industrials with large acreage. And land—whether the lot next to you or lands in other parts of America—should be the best hedges against inflation.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
FASHIONED JUST FOR US
Jesus Christ is all of God we can understand and use.

Have you ever thought of our Lord in that way? There is undoubtedly more of God than we find set forth in Jesus. Philosophers would say that there is an absolute quality about God which we could not understand if they were explained to us and which we could not use or implement. In the fullness of His wisdom, God sent us Jesus Christ—that Being in whose nature there was all of God we can understand and use.

We can never plumb the depths of Christ's nature, but we can keep on trying. Jesus Christ is like us because for slightly more than thirty years He bore the mantle of flesh as we do. He shared the life of this planet. He was a man among men. We cannot understand His teachings fully, but the glory of the Christian life consists in our trying more and more to understand these teachings and to have them to open out before us under the power of the Holy Spirit.

He was a man, yet vastly more than a man. He was God, in all those aspects of deity our minds can comprehend. He was suited by divine foreknowledge to our needs.

Perfection is the goal Jesus set for us. He bids us look at Him and see what God's purpose for humanity is. He is all of God that the human mind can understand and use.

Other Editors Saying... Held In High Esteem

(Lenoir News-Topic)
The high esteem in which Lieutenant C. Frank Kennerly is held in his community was partially demonstrated here last night when 60 business and professional men, along with law enforcement officers and city and county officials gathered to pay tribute to him.

Mayor Earl H. Tate declared that the Tar Heel State has the finest patrol organization in the nation, and that Frank Kennerly was one of the men who had helped it to reach the top position. The mayor also said that during the many years that he had known Kennerly that he had never heard anyone make a derogatory remark about him, even by those "of us" he has caught for violating traffic and motor vehicle laws.

Kennerly joined the patrol 25 years ago and has been stationed in the Lenoir area for the last 15 years. He and his wife and daughter have made many friends here who will regret to see them transferred to Greenville. The Kennerlys are active members of the First Presbyterian church here.

Lt. Kennerly has been an active worker in the Lenoir Optimist Club. He is also a Mason, York Rite Mason, and noble of Oasis Temple of the Shrine. He is also a member of Caldwell Lodge, Knights of Pythias. In addition to his patrol duties in Caldwell, Burke, Watauga, McDowell, Ashe, Mitchell and Avery counties, Mr. Kennerly has made hundreds of talks to civic groups and school children in connection with promoting highway safety. He has been a regular attendant at the district and annual safety conferences and has been active in support of the Governor's Traffic Safety Council, and Speaker's Bureau. His relations with the press have been perfect.

During his years in this territory, Kennerly has cooperated wholeheartedly with all city and county law enforcement officers, and also with the Federal and State Bureaus of Investigation.

He has gone about his duties in a quiet and unassuming manner, and has been able to retain his composure under the most trying conditions which is a rare gift. We join the many friends of the Kennerlys in wishing them every happiness as they move to Greenville for his new post of duty with the North Carolina State Highway Patrol.

He will be sworn into his new rank at ceremonies to be held in the State Highway Patrol offices at Raleigh at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and the public is invited to this event.

GIVE THE UNITED WAY

An Unpredictable Session

By ELMER ROESSNER
This is to predict the new session of Congress will be unpredictable. Some of the most expected actions will not come off; many unexpected turns will come. This will be true because of the most predictable things in the world: all Congressional action will be influenced by the coming Party conventions and the Presidential election.

Whether many pending bills are pushed or dropped will depend on answers to the questions: "Will this bill aid our party?" and "Will it embarrass the opposition?"

However, some coming trends are still subject to forecast. For instance: More investigations. A good muck - turning investigation is proving one of the most successful ways for Congressmen to get into print or on the way. Every Congressman needing a few flickers of limelight will intensify the scandal-digging in those committees in which he has influence—and every Congressman has one such committee.

MEDICINE, PAYOLA'S
In general, the themes that produced most headlines in 1959 will be played this year: high prices for wonder drugs; payola in commercial as well as entertainment fields; television shenanigans.

The pressure on TV may lighten later on as more Congressmen and politicians seek live cameras.

Broadening Social Security. Proposals to add health and hospitalization benefits to the over - 65 package are gaining wide support. Both pensioners and young people burdened with the care of ailing elders like the idea. So do many under 65 whose current physical condition indicate the need for considerable care in later years.

TOUGHER CASTRO STAND
Tougher Cuba policy. Congressmen from sugar-producing states, determined anti-leftists, and representatives of other interests seized by the Castro government will join in demanding a firmer policy against the Cuban regime. They will be backed by religious groups who fear that Castro will turn against the church. The State Department itself seems ready to assume a firmer stance.

And outside of Washington, the big forecast is: Higher state taxes. Rises in levies in prime business in many state legislatures meeting this month. Federal taxes, because of the coming elections, will be held at present levels. In some states, some marginal taxes will be reduced, but the general direction will be upward simply because citizens are demanding more services and services are costing more to give.

BOTTLE INDEX SHOWS MORE PROSPERITY AHEAD
"I predict continued good times on the basis of the Bottle Index," the Old Promoter announced on his visit today.

"Bottle?" we asked. "You've been tipping it?"

"Of course not," he said. "I mean the count of deposit bottles discarded. Along a mile of one highway I counted 108, two-cent bottles and 19 five-cent bottles today. A year ago there were only 70 two-cent and 3 five-cent. The boys at the city dump tell me they are making $5 a day on returns, whereas they made only $2 or $3 a year ago. When people don't bother to return deposit bottles, it's a sure bet they are counting on sustained good times, and that kind of thinking helps to insure prosperity."

Jimmie Davis Wins Demo Runoff In Louisiana; To Be Governor Again

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Ballot-winning Jimmie Davis, winner of Louisiana's Democratic runoff for governor, today sought to return this political topsy-turvy state to "peace and harmony." Davis also pledged to keep hands off an independent Legislature and promised he would not build a political machine in this state that remembers the web-like control of Huey P. Long. A record turnout signaled the end of the Long era. The ticket of lame duck Gov. Earl K. Long, Huey's brother, was soundly whipped in the Dec. 5 primary. Davis piled up a 71,000 vote lead over New Orleans Mayor deLeesseps S. Morrison, seeking to become Louisiana's first Catholic governor since 1884. Davis, a Baptist, got 486,095 votes to Morrison's 414,258 with returns in from all but three of 2,109 precincts. His decisive bulge carried Davis' entire ticket to victory. Farmer, businessman and teacher, Davis rose in the American political tradition. He was a sharecropper's son, one of 11 children reared in Jackson Parish in north Louisiana's red hill country. It was the overwhelming Davis note in the predominately Protestant north and central parish that swept him to victory. Equalizing important was that Davis ran close behind in Morrison territory — the southern parishes and in New Orleans. Davis picks up the reins of office May 10 from Gov. Long. He must defeat, Republican nominee Francis Grevenberg and States Rights candidate Kent Courtney in the April 19 general election, but his victory is assured in this one-party state.

A quiet-spoken, neatly dressed, conservative politician, Davis differs sharply from the rambunctious, suspenders-snapping Long, who made summer headlines battling out of mental institutions. Many Louisianans fondly recall Davis in his salad days. At 42, he came out of public service commissioner's job in Shreveport in 1944 to win the governorship. He had a boyish look and a winning smile. He charmed weary voters on the stump when he sang and made famous his own "You Are My Sunshine" to the twang of hillbilly guitars. "When folks are singing, they aren't fighting," drawled Davis. Davis rode the crest to Hollywood where he made grade-B Horse operas while in office. Opponents criticized him but he left behind a surplus in the budget. "Will I continue singing? Sure I will," said Davis. "I don't suppose I'll stop until I'm 100 years old. I'll keep right on singing if they develop some kind of pill that will keep me alive that long."

U. S. Businessmen See Coming Seizure Of Holdings In Cuba

By HAROLD K. MILKS

HAVANA (AP)—Many U.S. businessmen in Havana expressed doubt today that the United States is prepared to be firm enough with Fidel Castro's regime to save their threatened investments in Cuba from seizure.

Deep pessimism continued in American business circles as U.S. Ambassador Philip W. Bonsal returned from Washington, presumably with a new U.S. policy toward the Castro regime.

Bonsal, arriving Sunday night after a month in Washington, declined to say whether he would relay a policy statement to Cubans. But he expressed hope for an early meeting with Cuba's acting foreign minister, Marcello Fernandez.

"Time is running out for us fast," commented one American business executive, citing a speed-up in Castro's program of intervention—direct government supervision of operations—and expropriation.

Several businessmen with heavy investments in Cuba said a Washington statement indicating compromise with Castro "will be worse for us than a Munich."

Bonsal's return coincided with a mounting crisis in two areas of Cuban industrial and commercial life—sugar and tourism. Both are also areas of major foreign investment.

Castro's Institute of Agrarian Reform has served notice that after the harvest now under way, it will start taking over the sugar fields, including those owned or controlled by American companies which produce about 35 per cent of Cuba's crop.

About all the United States, can do, however, is to press for quick, adequate compensation for the American owners. The U.S. government recognizes the right of foreign countries to expropriate lands and privately owned businesses abroad, provided fair restitution is made.

The situation also is worsening for Havana's big American-owned or operated hotels.

With virtually no tourist trade—save for a brief yearned spurt sparked by a government cut-rate plan—the hotel men say they may not have enough money to pay their employees at the end of January unless the Castro government helps them.

Leading American and Cuban hotel men recently appealed to President Osvaldo Dorticos for some sort of government aid. They said during the past year Havana's luxury hotels have had five times as many employees as patrons.

Failing to get help from Dorticos, they went to Maj. Ernesto (Che) Guevara, Argentine-born colleague of Castro and new president of Cuba's National Bank. The hotel men said Guevara met them with biting sarcasm and told them to take their troubles to Castro.

Among the hotels in trouble are: the 400-room Nacional owned by the Cuban government and operated by Intercontinental Hotels Corp.; the 400-room Havana Riviera, in which a U.S. syndicate has a 15-million-dollar investment; the 5 1/2-million-dollar, 250-room Capri, built and operated by a syndicate of Miami hotel men, and the 630-room Havana Hilton operated by the Hilton hotel chain but owned by the retirement fund of the Cuban Catering Union.

Some said their only hope was to salvage what they could and pull out.

Push Evacuating Of Ice Floe Base

By HAROLD K. MILKS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—The Air Force today stepped up plans to remove 20 men manning a scientific outpost on a crumbling ice floe in the Arctic Ocean.

The floe, known as Station Charley, was reduced to a fifth of its original size when two huge chunks cracked off the ice pack Sunday night. The floe has been slowly disintegrating since Wednesday.

It originally had been planned to keep the men on the island until all scientific equipment had been removed. But officials at Ladd Air Force Base here said a flight to the station today would pick up four men.

The latest ice disintegration tore off about 200 feet of runway, but the Air Force said the loss was not expected to affect aircraft landings or takeoffs.

The floe, originally two miles wide and four miles long, has crumbled to an area one mile wide and one mile and a fourth long.

It takes seven hours to make the roundtrip flight from Ladd AFB. The floe is located 400 miles northwest of Barrow, Alaska.

Three of the four men to be evacuated were identified as Sgt. Thomas A. Boger, Greensboro, N.C.; Airman Hilton H. Carter, Ft. Smith, Ark.; and Airman Franklin D. Yates, Ypsilanti, Mich.

The 20 men on the island include 14 of the original party. The other six were flown to the floe to aid in packing and removing the 180,000 pounds of scientific equipment.

Youths, Church Leaders Lead Attack On Neo-Nazis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Youths and religious leaders kept in the vanguard today of a mounting counterattack against the world-wide displays of anti-Semitism.

Thousands of young people in Paris and West Berlin took part in demonstrations Sunday protesting a revival of Hitler-like racism.

A group of leading American Protestant clergymen—including evangelist Billy Graham—warned the wave of Jew-baiting "shows a central organizing force of the same vicious type that existed in Nazi Germany."

Swastika signs kept popping up in widely scattered countries over the weekend—including on the wall of a Roman Catholic college in Brazil and a Catholic church in Ypsilanti, Mich.

In West Berlin, the showing of a French-made documentary film about the horrors of Nazi concentration camps drew a capacity crowd of 1,300. It was sponsored by a youth organization of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's Christian Democratic party.

The Paris demonstration against anti-Semitism saw Protestant pastors, Roman Catholic priests and two members of the French Communist party's Politburo joining about 1,000 young people, mostly Jews.

They marched in a parade organized by the Representative Council of Jews in France. Some in the parade wore the striped uniforms of concentration camps. The marchers filed past a memorial to an unknown Jewish martyr who went on to the Paris town hall, shouting "Down with the Nazis" and "Death to the hangers-on."

Five teen-agers—16 to 18—were arrested in New York City for planting "Down with Jews" on a municipal building. Two others, 12 and 13, were seized Saturday for painting a red circle on a synagogue in Brooklyn.

While the spread of hate slogans raised grave concern everywhere, there were still sharp differences in assessing the significance of the outrages.

Benjamin R. Epstein, U.S. director of B'nai B'rith's Anti-Defamation League, said in New York the smearings were the work of imitators "excited by the dramatic aspect of this thing."

U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits (R-NY) told an audience in Montreal the wave of anti-Semitism is a "kind of chain reaction by ultra-right-wing elements" set off "by the neo-Nazi spark in West Germany."

Javits praised Adenauer's Bonn government for taking quick action.

In Chicago, the Midwest Jewish Council called for congressional legislation to outlaw anti-Semitic and anti-American movements.

Several psychologists and psychiatrists in New York City relate the anti-Semitic incidents and vandalism around the world to crises and fads. One recalled the "Kluge was here" scribbled by American GI's in World War II. Others cited rock 'n' roll and the hula hoop epidemic.

Prisoners Quiet After No Food

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. (AP)—"I think that's the best way to handle a man—go through his stomach," says Sheriff Herman Laas.

Laas cut off all food to 15 prisoners at the County Jail for three days after they tampered with the locks on their cell doors and gave him the "horse laugh" when he tried to talk to them about it.

The 15 prisoners were given three regular meals Sunday after subsisting on tap water from their cells for more than 80 hours. "Everything has settled back to normal," the sheriff said. "The case is closed."

Still In Beaufort Razed Saturday

Pitt County ABC officers J. M. Ward and Walter Taylor assisted Beaufort County ABC officers and federal ATU agents Saturday night in destroying a large illegal distillery in the Camp Leach section of Beaufort County about five miles west of Bath.

A 100-gallon still and two 55-gallon stills were found at the site with a 200-gallon boiler, a 100-gallon preheater and two 55-gallon doublers.

Also destroyed were 57 55-gallon mash barrels containing 500 gallons of mash, two copper condensers, a gas water pump, one hand water pump, five gas tubes and 17 gallons of illegal booze.

According to the officers, the unit, heated with bottled gas, was still hot when the raid was made. Pitt ABC Chief J. M. Ward said the operators fled the still site just before the raiding party arrived, taking some of the freshly run-off liquor with them. No arrests were made, Ward noted.

Beaufort County officers Stokes and Hawkins and Federal ATU agents Speight and Harmon of Williamston took part in the raid. Friday night Pitt ABC enforcers charged a 70-year-old Negro, Sam Gainer, with illegal possession of non-tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale when officers found three and one-half pints of non-taxed booze under a pile of hay in his stable, in the Yankee Hall section of Pactolus Township.

Gainer was recognized to appear in County Court tomorrow to answer the charges. Taking part in the arrest were officers J. M. Ward, H. B. Lilley and Walter Taylor.

Ask Governor To Be 'Favortie Son'

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—California Democratic leaders have asked Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown to head the state's 81-vote delegation to the national convention as a favorite son.

The Democratic State Central Committee at a meeting Saturday declared Brown has a "strong record as governor."

GAL AMONG GUYS SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Rosemarie Bitchnau, a WAF lieutenant at McClellan Air Force Base, has an assignment a good many girls would envy.

Ready For Two Masked Bandits

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (AP)—Country store proprietor Stanley Rhodes, 50, watched two men come into his store, and leave, in nearby Parisburg.

Later, he saw the pair sitting in a car in front of his store—both masked.

He called the sheriff's office. A few minutes later, the two men walked in, one holding a .22-caliber revolver, and demanded money.

Rhodes was ready. He grabbed his own revolver and fatally shot Thomas R. Mayse, 23, and wounded Tildon R. Watts, 26, in the arm. Both were from Marion.

When deputies arrived, all Rhodes had left to do was to tell them about it.

CHAPTER 27

The phone rang and I answered to the familiar voice of the high school principal. He wanted to know if I would teach at the high school for the next three days.

I opened my mouth to say no because of my daughter Tilghman and the baby being at our house. But I remembered I might have to call on him for another speech for the FTA banquet for National Education Week in November, and his wife Mrs. Peoples, was one of Rutledge's good clients when she had trouble with the houses she rented.

So I said certainly, I would be glad to, and what was I? And I hoped it wasn't mathematics, as my Winthrop professor had not considered me promising.

Mr. Peoples said, has there never had been a Colhoun who was not bright as a whip, and that it was biology for Miss Pipwheat.

Miss Pipwheat had taught me, and I said I hoped there wasn't anything wrong with her? Mr. Peoples said that Miss Pipwheat's sister had died up North, and he would, he said, send the lesson plans and book to me by Brantley.

When I told my husband Rutledge he looked at me like I had said I was sending box tops to the Eatle - Wheatle cereal contest. "But," you haven't taught school for..."

"I know," I said hastily, seeing no need in bringing it right out loud in the open like a birthday.

Rutledge said from what he could gather progressive education had practically nothing to do with reading, writing, and arithmetic, and the Lord only knew what they might be doing in biology.

I said that Miss Pipwheat had taught me, and they were probably still taking field trips to pick flowers, and mounting butterflies.

After dinner I got baby Colhoun and brought her into my room so Tilghman could get a nap, and I had to be upstairs anyway fixing up some cotons to wear to school the rest of the week.

Colhoun slept, so I went down and called Maria and asked her to pick up the girls for me after school, as Pete had our station wagon in Sumter.

Maria said of course, and I told her about teaching for Miss Pipwheat the rest of the week.

Maria hesitated for a moment, and I was sure she was thinking how many years it had been since I had taught English and world history for one year before I married Rutledge. But the difference between a sister-in-law and a husband is a husband says what he thinks.

Maria said how grand, and she knew I would simply love it.

I said, oh yes, that I had all ways adored teaching, and Miss Pipwheat had certainly had it easy just teaching all these years.

Maria paused, and didn't say anything for a minute. Then she said how, when a person loved teaching, it made all the difference, she thought.

I was just feeding Colhoun when Maria brought the girls home, so everybody had to hold her. Brantley handed me the biology book and lesson plans the principal had sent, and as soon as Maria had left I took Colhoun upstairs and went right to work.

The biology book was attractive with brightly colored birds, insects, flowers, and the alimentary canal. And I saw with relief that the current project was conservation.

Brantley said what was Mr. Peoples sending me all that stuff for?

I explained about teaching biology the rest of the week for Miss Pipwheat.

For a minute Brantley was too stunned to say anything. Then she said, "Boy, will those kids be glad to see you!"

I was not quite sure where this put me, so I looked at Maggie, who merely giggled and went to the kitchen for a glass of milk.

The lesson plans were simple and quite clear, I saw, with emphasis on soil and wild life—both of which I felt perfectly at home with.

Rutledge came in with tight lines about his mouth and we might as well have been fertilizer spreaders for all the attention we got. He was quiet and abstracted as though he were trying to untangle something inside.

After supper the girls went up to study, and Rutledge and I settled down in the living room—me with my biology lesson and Rutledge with the newspapers.

I found my homework simply fascinating—especially the part about all the babies being born I asked Rutledge did he know that every twelve seconds when the light flashed it meant that one person had been added to our population?

Rutledge said crossly, "What light?"

I said the light on the Department of Commerce Building in Washington.

Rutledge said suspiciously that was biology?

I said certainly, and did he know that when America was discovered a squirrel could start at the Atlantic coast and stay in the treetops until it reached the Mississippi River?

Rutledge said was that non-stop?

I said I bet he didn't know that half a square mile of trees may have to be cut just for one edition of an average Sunday newspaper. And that it took thirty to forty years to grow a pine in the South large enough to be used for lumber, and seventy-five to one hundred fifty years up North.

Rutledge said was I really serious about this teaching thing, and was I really going through with it?

I said of course I was, that I had always loved teaching.

Rutledge reminded me of the gaga knifings in the newspapers.

I said they were only up North, that we didn't have gangs in our schools. And that discipline was no problem at all —just a matter of setting up the proper climate in the classroom. All the psychologists said so.

Pete came in then from Sumter and kissed me and shook hands with Rutledge. Then he said quickly was Tilghman all right, and the baby?

I said of course, and Pete bolted upstairs.

Pete said why did Pete shake hands with him and kiss me?

I said he had spent the day in Sumter, and did he really mind if other men kissed me?

Rutledge merely grunted in a mechanical sort of way and looked at his watch like he was the stationmaster and I was Engine Number 49 leaving on Track 6.

The girls and I took turns in the bathroom rolling up our hair, and Brantley said again that those kids sure were going to be glad to see me.

I said why?

Brantley said, oh everybody was scared stiff of Miss Pipwheat, and she wouldn't let them lift a brow in her classes.

Maggie said she hoped I wouldn't get that awful Jake Reding or Bob Beard.

I knew what Brantley meant about Miss Pipwheat because even after all these years, I was still scared stiff of her myself. I said that discipline was just a matter of setting up the proper climate in the classroom, and I would be all right.

The girls looked at me the way Rutledge had when I told him about the light on the Commerce Building, so I said good night and crawled into bed.

Nine European Nations All But End Cash Curbs

PARIS (AP)—Nine European nations have practically removed all restrictions on the amount of money its residents can spend for travelling to foreign countries, the Organization for European Economic Cooperation reported today.

Belgium, Denmark, West Germany, Luxembourg, Portugal and Switzerland have no ceiling.

Only Denmark still puts a limit —$72.50—on the amount of local currency that can be taken out of the country.

Great Britain and Ireland grant allowances of $706 a year automatically, but provide for unlimited supplementaries on request.

The Netherlands' allowance is $529 for each trip with provisions for additional special grants.

The allowances in other member countries of the OEEC for foreign travel range down to $50 a year in Spain. Only Iceland and Turkey make no automatic allowance.

THEY JUST OVERSLEPT DELPHOS, Ohio (AP)—When the bridal couple failed to appear for a morning wedding here, the minister was slightly alarmed.

But a series of phone calls cleared up the difficulty. The bride, groom and attendants all had overslept.

The musical "Oklahoma!" ran 2,246 consecutive performances on Broadway and 1,543 showings on the London stage.

Will Go Deeper In Ocean Depths

GUAM (AP)—Scientists said today the U.S. Navy's bathyscaphe

Trieste—which dived to a record depth of 24,000 feet Friday—soon will try for 30,000, more than 3½ miles under the sea.

The cigar-shaped craft with its underlung, gondola-like ball, sank to the record depth in the Mariana Trench 50 miles southeast of this western Pacific island. It eclipsed the 18,600 feet roached by the Trieste in the same area Nov. 16, by Dr. Andreas B. Rechnitzer, head of the underwater research team, and Dr. Jacques Picard.

GOING TO INDIA

NEW YORK (AP)—Arthur Godfrey will leave Feb. 10 for India to hunt tigers and to take films to show later on television. Godfrey, who had a lung cancer operation last year, intends to visit Hong Kong and Tokyo on his return trip to New York. Sam Levenson will fill in on Godfrey's morning radio show.

Costa Rica mustered 500 men in its armed forces during World War II, the smallest force of any participating nation.

Sewing is the most demanding of eye tasks. If you sew beside an end table lamp, the bottom of the lamp shade should be 39 to 42 inches from the floor . . . with a wide, light-colored shade . . . a diffusing bowl to spread the light . . . and a 150-watt bulb.

For study, set up a study desk for the student. The bottom of the shade should be about 15 inches above the desk top . . . with a wide-light-colored shade . . . a diffusing bowl . . . and a 150-watt bulb. Or you can use two pin-up lamps, each with a 100-watt bulb. A light-colored desk top (or a light desk blotter) make for more comfortable seeing.

All through your home, use good lighting to protect eyesight, and to make your home bright and cheerful.

Seaway Had It's Headaches, Too

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY
CHICAGO (AP) — The first deep-water season of the St. Lawrence Seaway was one of hurrahs and headaches.

The huzzas greeted ocean ships that steamed into Great Lakes ports last spring. Those vessels were pennant-spangled symbols of the linking of North America's vast interior with the sea lanes of the world.

But the foreign freighters brought problems as well as cargoes. They encountered delays caused by canal bottlenecks, shortages of skilled longshoremen, inadequate loading and unloading equipment.

The Associated Press has made a survey of port cities, looking back to the 1959 season that ended Dec. 3 and ahead to the 1960 season that will open about April 1.

The main findings:
Export and import volume in the ports rose to record levels.

Bit tonnage through the seaway—the 185-mile stretch of canals and river between Montreal and Lake Ontario—fell short of expectations. The total was 20,103,767 tons. That is 20 per cent under advanced estimates of 25 million tons far above the 10 million or so tons in recent years.

There is not so much blithe talk about the future now that the historic opening year has passed. But some planners are moving along the line suggested by the old gambling challenge—"put your money where your mouth is"—and investing millions in port betterment.

Here, in brief, are reports from some ports:

Ocean cargo topped 200,000 tons in 1959 at both Milwaukee and Cleveland, tripling their 1958 totals.

Chicago's export-import business added up to 784,206 tons of general and bulk cargoes, exclusive of grain. That more than doubled the figure for the previous year. Grain exports shot up to 384,412 tons from a meager 18,384 tons.

Buffalo's tonnage soared to 108,267 from 12,650 the previous season. Toledo's direct overseas freight totaled 115,383 tons, a gain of 277 per cent.

Muskegon, Mich., with 45,000 tons of foreign freight, doubled its 1958 business.

Some ports handled their first shipments from overseas. Erie, Pa., had 6,359 tons of export-import freight.

Increasing export and import volume added up to 8,500,000 tons in Montreal at the eastern end of the seaway. Foreign cargo totaled 251,000 tons in Hamilton, Ont., several times the 1958 handle, and more than double in Toronto in reaching a record 700,882 tons.

Calls at Great Lakes ports by vessels in overseas trade increased from 20 to almost 50 per cent. They ranged in number, from 22 in Erie, Pa., and 51 at Bay City, Mich., to 522 at Chicago and 583 at Toronto.

The ships were larger, too, because seaway canals have been deepened from 14 feet to 27.

Eastern ports watched competition get off to a modest start along what has been termed "the new north coast."

New York and Boston reported it had little effect on them.

Philadelphia's general cargo volume held to 1958 levels but grain exports declined.

The Maryland Port Authority commented: "Baltimore has suffered most in grain and coal exports, along with the loss of some general cargo."

The upturn in seaway traffic didn't touch off a wild boom, but it did bring benefits. In Milwaukee, for example, it has been estimated the seaway brought more than 2½ million dollars in additional money into the city and created 200 new jobs, half of them on harbor installations and the others on docks.

The big bottleneck was at the Welland Canal, a link between Lakes Ontario and Erie that detours Niagara Falls. As many as 60 ships chafed and fretted at one time waiting for passage. Delays ranged up to 72 hours.

Improvements are under way, at a cost of $7,500,000, aimed at a 25 per cent expansion of the canal's current capacity of 28 vessels a day.

Notice To Gas Customers Served Off Mains

To Those Living West of A.C.L. Railroad Between The Norfolk and Southern Railroad and the Tar River

Beginning this morning the addition of Natural Gas in your area will be a reality. Because of the higher heat units of Natural Gas, space heaters, range burners and other flames which the user can observe by adjusting the gas control valves should be used in the lower burning position until the appliances can be converted. We suggest that you use the oven of your stove as little as possible especially those that are thermostatically controlled. Non-vented space heaters should be kept cut back as much as possible.

THERE IS NO DANGER IN YOUR APPLIANCE IF THE FLAME DOES NOT BURN PROPERLY. All utility personnel plus some additional help will assist in making these conversions and they will be made as promptly as possible with as little inconvenience as our efforts will allow.

If there is any question with reference to your appliance please call our dispatcher at PL 2-7166. If after your units have been converted several days you notice additional burner adjustment is needed, do not hesitate to notify our dispatcher and such service will be rendered promptly at no cost to the customer.

Improper flame does not indicate any danger!

Your co-operation in assisting us with this conversion will be appreciated as it is another step in bringing another modern commodity to our community.

The above does not apply to bottle gas consumers.

NEW YORK (AP)—Steels and motors took fairly sharp losses as the stock market dipped for the fourth straight session today.

Trading was fairly active early this afternoon.

Leading stocks took losses running from fractions to about 2 points.

While the pivotal industrials were dropping rather badly an assortment of minor issues, several of them low-priced, were advancing in active trading. It looked as if these would dominate the most-active list again as they did last week.

The market was mixed at the start as cross currents prevailed due to uncertainties about tight money and the newly convened session of Congress. The general business news background remained quite good, however.

Busy Week For Gov. Hodges

RALEIGH (AP) — A batch of speeches and a trip to Smithfield for the swearing in of a new Superior Court judge are on the schedule this week for Gov. Hodges.

Tuesday afternoon Hodges speaks at a mid-winter regional meeting of the Junior League here. On Wednesday morning, he will greet delegates to the annual meeting here of the North Carolina Assn. of Soil Conservation Districts.

A third speech comes Thursday night when the Eastern North Carolina Traffic Club meets in Raleigh. Earlier in the day, Hodges will hold his weekly news conference.

The ride to Smithfield is set for Friday morning. Jack Hooks, former solicitor named by Hodges as a special Superior Court judge, will take his oath in the Johnston County courthouse. Hodges will be among those present.

To round out a busy Friday, Hodges will return to Raleigh for a luncheon given by the North Carolina Meat Packers Assn. in cooperation with the American Meat Institute. He will go to Jacksonville in the evening to talk at the annual dinner meeting of the Chamber of Commerce there.

No Robber, Dog Just Broke Out

Officers who investigated the complaint reported the dog, not robbers, had broken the window, in order to get out of the house.

Jessel 'Nominates' Stuart Symington

NEW YORK (AP)—George Jessel nominated Stuart Symington for president Sunday night, and Joey Adams promised to run his campaign. But the senator said not one word about politics. He talked about Israel.

The Missourian, who is being billed as a possible dark horse at the Democratic convention, rushed up from Washington to help honor Jennie Grossinger, a Catskill Mountain innkeeper, who has a medical center in Israel named for her.

Before appearing at the Astor Hotel dinner sponsored by Histadrut, the Israel labor federation, Symington told reporters he wasn't planning to announce any political intentions—that night—or any night soon.

But he had no sooner got up on the dais—along with Eddie Fisher, Elizabeth Taylor and Harry Belafonte—and taken his seat alongside Carmine De Sapio, Democratic national committeeman, than Jessel was calling him "Mr. President."

Symington was introduced by Abraham Feinberg of New York City, chairman of the board of trustees of Brandeis University, Waltham, Mass., who said that "there are those of us who believe that the inexorable force of that which we call the democratic way may call him to higher office and greater responsibility."

Then Symington made a chatty speech about the grip to Israel from which he just returned—"Something I wanted to do a long time—a thrilling, delightful experience."

He said he was impressed with the courage and vision he found among the Israelis—"more than any other country I have ever been in."
