Work, now underway on Tenth St., will set the pattern for widening the street to four lanes from Grande Ave. to Charles St.

City Manager Leonard Bloxam said plans call for widening the street to 59 feet from curb to curb. This will allow room for four traffic lanes and parking lanes on each side of the thoroughfare.

Hardee-Harris Vows Exchanged

In a ceremony Sunday, December 27, Miss Jeannette Harris became the bride of Mr. Homer Lee Hardee in the Chiod Presbyterian Church. The Rev. George E. Nichols officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Earl Harris of Rt. 1, Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Helen Hardee and the late Mr. Abram Hardee of Ayden.

Nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Grady Gray Smith, pianist, and Miss Patsy Jones, soloist. The church was decorated with baskets of white mums and pom poms. On the altar were wrought iron seven-branched candelabras holding cathedral candles.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length gown of imported love-knot lace, featuring a figurine bodice with scalloped neckline. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a scalloped crown. She wore pearl earrings, a gift of the bridegroom.

She carried a prayer book centered with a white orchid, surrounded by a cascade of lilies-of-the-valley and white streamers. Mrs. Dewey Horne was her cousin's matron of honor. She wore a street length dress of red taffeta and a small hat made of net.

Miss Elaine Harris, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. She wore a dress fashioned like that of the matron of honor. Their bouquets were of white carnations, greenery and satin streamers. Her hat was styled like that of the honor attendant's.

Bess man was Mr. Frankie Hardee, cousin of the bridegroom. Ushers were Mr. Dewey Horne and Mrs. Stuart Smith. The bride's mother chose for her daughter's wedding a wool jersey orchid-colored dress and black accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a royal blue suit with matching accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden High School and is employed by the Diana Store of Greenville. The bridegroom is a graduate of Chiod High School, Durham Institute of Barbering in Durham, and is employed at the City Barber Shop in Ayden.

For a Southern wedding trip, the bride changed to a beige suit with pink collar and brown accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her prayer book. Mr. and Mrs. Hardee are making their home in Ayden.

After-Rehearsal Party On Saturday night, following the rehearsal of the Hardee-Harris wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Earl Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Frankie Hardee entertained at a cake cutting in the Fellowship Hall at the Chiod Presbyterian Church to honor the bride and groom, members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

The Fellowship Hall was decorated with wedding bells, greenery and satin bows. The bridegroom's mother wore a royal blue suit with matching accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

Want To Get A Man? Wear Black Or White, Says Ceil Chapman

By DOROTHY ROE NEW YORK (AP)—If you want to get your man, wear black or white, advises Ceil Chapman, designer for many of the top glamor of stage, screen and TV.

Following her own advice, she shows a dramatic group of evening gowns in black, white and a combination of the two, guaranteed to make any girl a femme fatale.

The Chapman show climaxed a crowded week of spring fashion previews presented by the New York couture group for 235 editors from all sections of the United States and several foreign countries. It took real designing genius to intrigue a group of women who had viewed more than 50 fashion shows during the week, starting at 7:30 a.m. and ending at midnight or later. But the astute Ceil turned the trick.

For the new decade, Miss Chapman likes new length for evening dresses, 10 inches from the floor, which she calls the "forecast length." She also shows her "candlelight length," just above the ankle, and plenty of flowing, floor-length gowns.

For cocktail and informal evening wear, this designer likes the "beehive" skirt, rounded, draped, and tapering toward the hemline. For afternoon wear she shows a group of brilliant prints. But for cocktail time her love remains black—sculptured and draped to accentuate the lines of the feminine figure.

"The purpose of any dress is to make a man look at a woman—and whistle," says Ceil. Nai Kaplan, preceding the Chapman grand finale, showed a collection of flattering, feminine styles, climaxed by a group of evening fashions. The highlight is a misty gray chiffon short dinner dress, worn with a white satin greatcoat—terrific for blondes.

Then the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Helen Mohan and Mr. Bob King. Mrs. Mohan gave a demonstration on landscaping. Mr. King presented important points on the correct way to plant shrubs and trees.

There will be a film, "You Can't Win," shown Sunday night at 7:45 at the Grace Free Will Baptist Church.

Students must bring sharpened pencils to their exam centers and are asked to proceed quietly once inside the building. Students who wish may study in special rooms set aside for this purpose while not taking an examination.

The homemaking department of the school sponsored this week a display of fine china made by Lenox China, Trenton, N. J. This "command performance" included pieces of the state services of five foreign countries, 10 states of the United States, and that of the government house of Guam.

The display includes pieces of the state services of Cuba, Ecuador, Cambodia, Venezuela and Saudi Arabia. Also included were pieces of the United States Embassy service, used in all United States embassies throughout the world.

Of special interest was the service designed for the Federal Building of the World's Fair of 1939-40, created especially for the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England.

State services designed for Presidents Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman were also included in the display as well as a piece of the service chosen by President Roosevelt for the Presidential yacht U.S.S. Williamsburg. The Roosevelt family coat of arms is woven into the Presidential seal in this service.

In addition, there were selections from the services of Gracie Mansion in New York, home of the Mayor, and that of the Secretary of the Treasury in Washington.

Those states whose official services are represented include Illinois, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Oklahoma, Connecticut and New Mexico.

There were also several very valuable hand-painted museum pieces and some hand-painted service plates. A special display of six plates showed the development of a fine china plate from the rough unglazed plate to the finished glazed plate with 24K gold design.

New officers are: president, Gabriele Calton; vice president, Judy Forbes; secretary and treasurer, Rose Robinson; flag bearer, Jimmy Nunn.

4-H Club Has Regular Session

The regular meeting of the Winterville-Greenville 4-H Club was held in the home of Monroe Waters Tuesday. Andrea Whitchard, president, called the meeting to order. The minutes of the last meeting were read by secretary, Rosa Ann Page.

Carolyn Barnes led a discussion on safety. It was decided that each club member would write down which accidents had occurred around his home in his record book.

Then the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Helen Mohan and Mr. Bob King. Mrs. Mohan gave a demonstration on landscaping. Mr. King presented important points on the correct way to plant shrubs and trees.

There will be a film, "You Can't Win," shown Sunday night at 7:45 at the Grace Free Will Baptist Church.

Students must bring sharpened pencils to their exam centers and are asked to proceed quietly once inside the building. Students who wish may study in special rooms set aside for this purpose while not taking an examination.

The homemaking department of the school sponsored this week a display of fine china made by Lenox China, Trenton, N. J. This "command performance" included pieces of the state services of five foreign countries, 10 states of the United States, and that of the government house of Guam.

The display includes pieces of the state services of Cuba, Ecuador, Cambodia, Venezuela and Saudi Arabia. Also included were pieces of the United States Embassy service, used in all United States embassies throughout the world.

Of special interest was the service designed for the Federal Building of the World's Fair of 1939-40, created especially for the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England.

State services designed for Presidents Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman were also included in the display as well as a piece of the service chosen by President Roosevelt for the Presidential yacht U.S.S. Williamsburg. The Roosevelt family coat of arms is woven into the Presidential seal in this service.

In addition, there were selections from the services of Gracie Mansion in New York, home of the Mayor, and that of the Secretary of the Treasury in Washington.

Those states whose official services are represented include Illinois, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Oklahoma, Connecticut and New Mexico.

Ed Rawl To Appear On Quiz Show

There is some excitement in the Ed Rawl Jr. family this weekend—he has been chosen to appear on the Television Show, "The Price Is Right," Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

In New York City for the Boat Show, Mr. Rawl just found out last night that he would appear on the show. In the audience giving him their support will be his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Vance Harrington, who accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Rawl to New York.

Mr. Rawl called his mother, Mrs. E. E. Rawl last night to tell her about the show. He had planned to return to Greenville on Sunday night, but the television show changed his mind.

The Rawls, who live at 1048 E. Rock Spring Dr., have three children, Eddie, Bubber and Josie. You can bet all three of them will be watching television Monday morning with their grandmother.

One-Sided View As To Use Of Land

Concern of soil conservation officials over the loss of good farm land for sites of housing projects, highways, industrial plants and other uses outside agriculture is, it seems to us, somewhat premature, if indeed it is valid at all.

It is true, of course, that millions of acres of land that once was farmed has in the past few decades been diverted to other purposes. Some of this land diverted to other uses was at one time excellent farm land, but a good part of it also was marginal land and some of it was land that was not used at all in the production of agricultural products.

It is also true that from the long range standpoint we can ill afford to have all our good farm land converted to other uses if we are to provide for the necessities of our growing population. With the abundance of land still available in this nation, and with the continued progress in agricultural research and methods to increase production, it is difficult to imagine that farm land that has been used for other purposes has so far damaged the overall agriculture of the nation.

In the past few years millions of acres of good land have been taken out of production in an effort to bring agricultural production of many commodities more in line with demand. Advancements in agriculture—both from the standpoint of increased per acre yield and also in quality—suggest that land now under cultivation may fill the needs for a considerable time to come.

Land use, on the other hand, must be considered from an overall standpoint, not from the standpoint of one segment of the economy or of the society.

When it comes to building roads, certain specifications must be met if a proposed highway or secondary road is to fulfill its purposes. A super-highway, for example, is designed to meet specific transportation needs with respect to travel, centers of population, most direct routes and many other considerations. If a super-highway were to be planned on the assumption that it could not cross good farm land, chances are it would not fulfill the purposes for which it was intended. The same might apply to a secondary road primarily designed to provide farmers with good routes from farms to markets.

It is obvious that the development of cities and towns has taken many acres of good farm land in the past few decades, but in most cases—particularly in agricultural areas such as Eastern North Carolina—it was a matter of expanding into areas that were being farmed, or into areas that were suitable neither for farming nor residential areas, or not expanding at all. The same may be said of industrial expansion which has taken place. If new plants are to be built, land must be available on which to build them, and often good industrial sites are likewise good agricultural acreage.

By and large, it would be just as difficult to build a residential area or an industrial plant in a swamp as it would be to attempt to farm the swamp.

Even with continued expansion of our highways, our cities, our industries, it appears certain that we will continue to have sufficient acreage of good farm land available to meet our needs if sound land use measures are followed.

Neutrality, As In Old Pattern

By LYNN NISBET

NEUTRALITY — The preparatory statement which Governor Hodges read and then handed to reporters at his latest news conference about his neutrality among prospective candidates for Governor in the upcoming primary was essentially the same made some months ago. It was noted then, and is still true, that the pledge of continuing neutrality has little meaning, because of the kicker in the concluding sentence that "This does not mean that I shall not feel free to defend the policies of the administration during the past five years." It is already apparent that administration policies, especially with respect to highway setup and concentration of authority over all State government in a Department of Administration, will be significant issues in the upcoming campaign.

PATTERN — In maintaining neutrality at this State Governor Hodges is conforming to the pattern established by his predecessors. Preference of the retiring executive among candidates to succeed him has not usually developed until later. But it has been evident and potent as the campaigns progressed. If Hodges follows precedent he cannot remain neutral.

In the 1932 campaign it was known from the start that Governor Max Gardner did not want Lieutenant Governor Dick Fountain to succeed him. It was not until after filings had been closed that he showed real preference for Blucher Ehringhaus over Allen Maxwell, and in the run-off between Ehringhaus and Fountain he threw all the weight he could for Ehringhaus—and nominated him.

It was apparent to all observers early in the 1936 campaign that Ehringhaus did not want Ralph McDonald to succeed him as Governor. It was much later before it was equally apparent that his choice was Clyde Hoy over Sandy Graham and further protestations of neutrality were absurd.

The 1940 campaign presented a more complex picture. There were four candidates with approximate equal claim to support of the Hoy administration, and with recognized ability to make a good chief executive—J. M. Broughton, Lee Gravelly, W. P. Horton and Allen J. Maxwell. The retiring administration probably owed more to Horton and Maxwell than to any of the others. Governor Hoy played a Casey game of public neutrality. There were background and inside manipulations, and after the first primary it was the Gardner-Hoy influence that took Horton out of a run-off and ceded the nomination to Broughton.

Came 1944 with the choice between Gregory Cherry and Ralph McDonald. There is some reason to believe that Governor Broughton might have preferred McDonald, although he was outwardly neutral until the final days of the campaign. McDonald attacked the Broughton administration, almost charging malfeasance with respect to some ABC operations during the war time liquor rationing period. Self respect required Governor Broughton to answer these charges and to give what help he could to Cherry.

For several years before 1958 it had been known that Charles M. Johnson, long time State treasurer, would seek the governorship then, and from 1946 on he and his friends thought they had the nomination "sewed up". Then Kerr Scott moved onto the scene. Governor Cherry did not publicly avow support for any candidate, but it was commonly known that he and Treasurer Johnson were not on cordial terms. It is an open secret that Governor Cherry helped Candidate Scott in such indirect ways as he could. Scott won. (It is also of record that neither Gregg Cherry nor Kerr Scott was ever admitted to full fellowship in the inner circles of the then controlling party council.)

MODERN HISTORY — William Umstead, former Representative and Senator in the Congress, was a recognized potential for Governor in 1952 long before that time. Governor Scott did not like the idea, and some weeks later than the present comparable date, he encouraged Hubert Olive to enter the race. Olive had been affiliated with the same group with Umstead and his entry was surprising and embarrassing to many voters. As the campaign progressed it became evident it was more a contest between Scott and Umstead than between Olive and Umstead.

Umstead won, suffered a heart attack two days after his inauguration, and died before he had served two years as Governor. Luther Hodges, Lieutenant Governor, stepped up to the top office, completed the Umstead term and was elected for a full term in his own right in 1956 without opposition of consequence.

D-DAY—Now Governor Hodges is approaching decision day as to his attitude with respect to a successor. There is no reason to question the sincerity of his profession of neutrality as of now. But—for students of political history in North Carolina, and for those who know Luther Hodges, it is unthinkable that he can maintain a neutrality throughout the campaign. Current efforts to get him staked out for or against some avowed candidate is on one hand tribute to his political prestige, and on the other is recognition of the historic fact that no candidate for Governor has been nominated, except in the 1952 Olive - Umstead race, without the openly avowed or generally understood support of the retiring chief executive.

Coeds Get Big Bang!

By JUDY LEWIS

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—Missouri University coeds are proving that if you can't get a man with a gun, you can at least get a rabbit.

Gun-totin' girls may be seen at most any dawn these days, accompanying campus sportmen on early-morning rabbit hunts. And when a pretty coed draws a bead on a scampering cottontail, the admiration of her male companions is unrestrained.

Rabbit hunting has been a favorite sport of male students in these parts for years. But only recently have the girls joined the shotgun brigade.

Gun Girls

Students say that they have taken up the sport to disprove the current belief that the new generation is too "beat" to do anything but brood morbidly, write glum poetry, paint modernly or pound monotonously on bongo drums.

A rabbit hunt before breakfast, they point out, is healthful, wholesome, invigorating and fun. The girls taking part in the new campus craze are not only the female agriculture students who prowl the campus in blue jeans and 10-gallon hats. Enthusiastically in their midst are sorority girls bent on proving that they, too, are interested in the outdoor life, and can shine on the hunting range as well as the dance floor.

Coed Pioneers

The girls are shattering old beliefs about feminine squeamishness at the sight of blood or the sound of guns. The frontier instinct just naturally takes over when you tramp the hills and dales with a gun on your shoulder.

These sports-minded coeds do everything, including fire the gun. Often they are seen in the role of retriever, when the faithful hound is not available. And this willingness and skill wins amazed admiration from the boys. The best thing about it, say the young men, is that the girl hunters not only can get their rabbits—they also can cook them when the hunters come home.

What more wholesome start for an academic day than a rabbit bake for breakfast.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE GROWS OUT OF DEATH — "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it dies it bringeth forth much fruit."

We plant our fields and raise our crops and seldom realize that we are standing in the presence not only of a great mystery but of a great divine pattern. For it happens in so much of life that death must take place before life begins. This is of course true in the case of all seed, for seed must die in the ground and disintegrate before the living germ starts to produce a growth. Also out of the death of brave men have come those liberties which we take so for granted today. Out of the death of Christ came human salvation. Out of death comes life—it is a strange circumstance, a divine pattern.

When we lay this pattern down over our lives, when we try to make it work in our daily living, we see the significance of the Biblical statement that unless a grain of wheat dies in the earth it can bring forth no harvest. For at the basis of all religious living lies the reality of death. It is never until we surrender our own will that we can do the will of God. We have to die unto self before we can live unto God, before we can serve our loved ones and our fellow men the way we should.

Mustn't Let Russian Words Stampede Us

The 1,200,000 man reduction in its armed forces announced by the Soviet Union reflects again Soviet initiative in the propaganda battle, and once again puts the United States and the rest of the free world in a defensive position.

While the Soviet announcement will be given the full propaganda treatment as another indication of the Soviet desire for world peace, it should not stampede the West into hasty and perhaps unwise action.

The Soviet's, after all, have considerably more men under arms than the United States. Even with their announced reduction in military personnel, they will still have considerable numerical superiority . . . not to mention, of course, the size of the land army maintained by their Red Chinese ally.

After World War I and after World War II, the United States through bitter experience saw first hand the position in which it could place itself by rapidly scrapping a military might adequate to meet its needs. It should not make the same mistake again by another ill-considered move on the heels of this latest Soviet announcement.

1956 Campaign All Over Again?

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Are the Democrats going to make their 1960 presidential campaign against President Eisenhower, the Republican party, or Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the only Republican candidate in sight?

The Democrats will be fighting their 1956 campaign against Eisenhower all over again if the course taken Thursday by Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) is an example of what's to come.

Kennedy, now running for the Democratic presidential nomination, made a speech before the National Press Club. He not only attacked Eisenhower's presidential performance but said: "The central issue in the 1960 contest is 'not the farm problem or defense or India' but the 'presidency itself.'"

Although Eisenhower is not the 1960 candidate, Kennedy accused him of lack of leadership and do-nothingism. His point was that the country needs to elect as its next president a man who is the opposite of Eisenhower. This is exactly the course the Democrats pursued in 1956 when Eisenhower ran for his second term.

It was fatal. The voters showed what they thought of the Democratic argument by re-electing Eisenhower overwhelmingly. And at this moment, when Kennedy is blazing away at him, Eisenhower is probably at or near the highest mark of his popularity in his two White House terms. Which raises a question: If the voters ignored the Democrats' arguments against Eisenhower in 1956, what makes Kennedy or any other Democrat think the voters won't do the same this year, especially since Eisenhower isn't even running?

Kennedy dwelt at length on the kind of active White House leadership he said the country needs from now on. He didn't say whether Nixon would imitate Eisenhower or be different. He didn't mention Nixon at all, directly or otherwise. While Eisenhower retain both his popularity and the presidency the voters three times in a row—1954 — 1956 — 1958 — repudiated the Republicans as a party by giving control of Congress to the Democrats each time.

The story got worse as it went along. In 1958 the voters drowned the Republicans by giving control of Congress to the Democrats by the biggest majority in both House and Senate since early New Deal days.

It was thought then that Eisenhower, unable to run again, would be trampled on by the swarming Democrats in Congress, and probably pretty much ignored by his own Republicans too, since he was in the last two years of his presidency. The contrary happened, for since 1958 Eisenhower has shown more active leadership than at any time since he first took office. This has been widely attributed to the loss of the two men he depended on most: Sherman Adams, his main assistant, through resignation; and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, through death. The reasoning here was that Eisenhower had to depend more on himself and therefore did so.

But that analysis may be incomplete. By sheer forcefulness—and perhaps Democratic uneasiness in the face of his popularity—he had the Democratic-run Congress eating out of his hand in 1959. The Republicans there followed him like sheep. There seems a logical explanation for the Republicans' docility: As a party they had been ignored three times in a row by the voters and probably felt lucky to be able to identify themselves with the popular Eisenhower.

If they were to win in 1960 they had to hope that his performance — and some of his popularity — would rub off on them.

Things You'll Run Into

You never know what you'll hear on the streets of Greenville these days.

Take Thursday when the Air-ROTC drill squad was in the midst of its March of Dimes marathon in front of the court house.

Your columnist was walking along Third headed for the Reflector office. We were "wool-gathering" as usual, so that the commands being thrown at the troops in the background were hardly heard.

Then we heard among the commands: "ready . . . aim . . ." Shades of Fidel Castro, we thought, as we considered hitting the gutter. We turned on the command, fire, just as 18 M-1 rifles barked in unison.

They were loaded with blanks, of course, but we must say, it was unexpected.

City Manager Leonard Bloxam said the other day he didn't waste any time in making one of our New Years' column predicted that some of Greenville's narrow streets would be widened during 1960.

The words were hardly spoken before crews went to work on perhaps the worst street of all. Moving state funds, the city is moving back the curbing on Tenth St. from Grande Ave. to Charles St. It is the first phase of work that will eventually transform the heavily traveled street into a four-lane drive.

The work was in the planning stage long before we took up the prediction business, but we're glad to see it.

When the work is completed there will be four traffic lanes on the street from Grande Ave. to Charles.

Received word from Congressman Herbert C. Bonner yesterday that the Voice of America transmitters will be known as the Greenville facility. Although the component areas are equally proximate to Washington, N. C., Bonner was told by the Voice of America director that to designate it as the "Washington Facility" or the "Greenville - Washington Facility" would be hopelessly confusing because of the location of the Voice of America headquarters in Washington, D. C.

It just illustrates what's in a name. "Wisdom is knoping what 'o do. Skill is knowing how to do it. Success is doing it."—Anderson Independent.

"We moderns are finding it more and more difficult to locate places where we can be alone and listen in private to the Eternal." — The Everett (Wash.) Daily Herald.

"North Carolina is solidly behind education, high and low, and is willing to foot the bill for it. But at the same time, as veteran legislator and long-time champion of education John W. Umstead told Henry Belk, the other day, this willingness presupposes emphasis upon quality education, reduction and even elimination of frills and non-educational accessories, and assurance and demonstration on the part of educators that our education dollars are well and wisely spent. North Carolina wants a dollar's worth of education for every expenditure. The present is no time for unnecessary plush."—Greensboro Daily News.

Other Editors Saying .. Time To Retire

(Henderson Dispatch)

Senator Theodore Francis Green, Rhode Island Democrat, announces he will not be a candidate to succeed himself in this year's elections in his State. He is retiring at the age of 92 as the oldest person ever to serve in Congress. If his goal through the years has been to establish a record that will stand for the foreseeable future, he has apparently succeeded in that ambition. Certainly no one is in sight at this time who can or will even remotely approach that age in active service on Capitol Hill.

Green had cataract operations on both eyes in the past year and in addition is experiencing difficulty with his hearing. Either is a distinct handicap, although in times past totally blind men have served in Congress, the late Senator Gore of Oklahoma being an outstanding illustration. Moreover, he ranked high in the Senate in the esteem of his colleagues and his constituents and was rated an able legislator.

The fact of recent years of making retirement compulsory at some arbitrary age has in many instances worked injustice upon both the victims of the rule and upon the concerns which they have served. Establishment of a limit of 65 or 70 years has been partly political and partly a sop to younger people who coveted jobs held by their seniors. In a number of instances employers have suffered along with those easing up on their activities. Any individual who is in good health, both mentally and physically, who is competent and who wishes to continue on the job should be permitted to do so. Slackening of the pace would be willingly accepted in many cases if those who hand the torch over to others were economically secure. But most individuals who have had their nose on the grindstone for a lifetime will fade away more quickly by simply slumping into an easy chair at home, folding the arms and sitting around all the livelong day with nothing to do but watch the hands of the clock tick away the hours. They are deprived of incentive as well as a moderate occupation to absorb their interest.

Instead of lengthening life, this practice could actually shorten it for many persons. It is not normal for any individual to have nothing to do but eat and sleep, walk the street and gossip, or find that time hangs heavily upon him.

Senator Green - has demonstrated the monotony of the retirement theory as it is more and more coming to be accepted at an earlier stage of life. And yet, it is an odds on bet that he supported more than one retirement project that has been enacted into law during his long tenure in Congress.

How much discretionary spending do you have

When the old paycheck is segmented for food, shelter, clothing, taxes, instalment payments, dues and other commitments, just how much do you have left over to spend or save as you please.

Precious little. Well, you must have some, because American savings have been running well over $20 billion a year. On the other hand, some of that saving may not be discretionary. The man who is committed to Christmas club or office savings plans, Savings Bond deductions, life insurance payments, savings and loan plans, investments clubs and other systems may have little discretion about either his spending or savings.

BUBBLE PRICKED For many years, advertising and marketing men have been talking about, and drawing charts about, this "discretionary spending."

The term appears to have been popularized by Dr. Arno Johnson, economist for the J. Walter Thompson advertising company.

His concept was that discretionary spending was the difference between what a family earned and what was necessary to maintain its established standard of living. Thus if a family earned $100 a week after taxes and needed $90 to maintain its established standard, it had $10 discretionary spending power, which it could blow or save.

It's this margin that so many manufacturers and distributors have been bidding for. So have savings institutions.

The aggregate size of this discretionary margin has been variously estimated, always in the billions per year. It was big and easily influenced by various advertising techniques. It was pie in the sky with solid gold pecans. A QUESTIONING VIEW

Now comes Stanley C. Hollander, a well-known marketing expert, who raises some disturbing questions about the size. The Professor of Business Administration of Michigan State University, writing in the current issue of Challenge, raises several points.

One is that while the standard of living keeps rising with the income level, the discretionary margin does not tend to increase. When families use their margin for, say, frozen foods, those foods become part of their standard and there's no more discretionary margin until income increases.

Furthermore, Dr. Hollander points out, the margin is constantly changing. When two wage earners marry, the discretionary spending is momentarily increased, but some of it is promptly reduced by new non-discretionary purchases: new furniture, new entertainment, etc. Then if a baby comes, the amount is drastically reduced. One wage income ends, new demands appear.

Consumer credit, Dr. Hollander points out, also affects the discretionary margin. At the start, there must be a discretionary bit to make the down payment. Thereafter discretionary spending is reduced by the amount of the periodic payments. As instalments rise, discretionary spending declines.

In effect, the Michiganander questions the entire premise of the discretionary spending, and then he adds this thought: We may now be approaching the limits of physical consumption; the man who goes hunting cannot use his workshop; a couple going to the theater may buy fewer books. He concludes: "Perhaps the final test of our discretion will be not how we use our money, but how we use our time."

Elizabeth City Defeats Rose High Cagers By 47-44

ELIZABETH CITY — Fate seemed to play havoc with Greenville's Phantoms, last night, as they went down to defeat before Elizabeth City, 47-44, in an overtime period.

The Phantoms opened the ball game by taking a slim lead over the host Yellow Jackets, but by the end of the first quarter the Jackets had tied it up, with a "8-8" deadlock.

Second quarter play continued at the same pace, and the Yellow Jackets forged ahead by a score of 16-14 at the intermission, due to the effective shooting of Jacket forward Charlie Smith.

Throughout the rest of the game the Elizabeth City quints held their slim margin until waning minutes of the fourth quarter that Greenville tied the score at 42-42.

The game then went into an overtime period which saw the Jackets score five points to the Phantom tally of three points, which gave the Yellow Jackets their first Northeastern Conference victory of the season.

The Phantoms, who took a severe beating at the hands of league-leading Roanoke Rapids, this past Tuesday night in Greenville, were attempting to get back into the win column last night against Elizabeth City. Their comeback, however, was marred by poor shooting, and all-round bad luck which seems to have leached on to them from the Roanoke Rapids game.

The Phantoms played a relatively reined ball game all night, the only bright spot in the contest was the play of 6-3 center Layne Jorgensen. Jorgensen scored 12 points to reign as high scorer for the Phantoms before fouling out. His performance against the Jackets is termed as his best this season.

The Phantom shooting accuracy took a sharp drop from what it has been in previous encounters. The Greenville hit on a poor 19% of their shots the first quarter, which seemed to be the average for the night. The Phantoms, by the end of the game, however, did elevate their shooting accuracy average to about 30%.

High scorer for the Greenville cagers was Jorgensen with 12 points, while Jan Vincent, another Phantom stalwart against Elizabeth City, dumped in 10 points for the losing effort.

For the winning Jackets it was Charlie Smith and Sammy Smith sharing top scoring honors with 10 points each to spark the winning drive.

In the preliminary contest, the Greenville JV's were defeated by a score of 50-46.

Track Star J. Thomas In Action

BOSTON (AP) — John Thomas, world record holder in the high jump, returns to competition tonight from an enforced layoff to begin a stretch drive aimed at an Olympic gold medal.

The occasion is the 34th Knights of Columbus meet at Boston Garden, traditional opener of the major indoor track season.

Thomas, 18, a Boston University student who bettered the world standard with a 7-foot, 1 1/4-inch leap last February, has not faced opposition since a March 27 foot injury which required hospitalization and skin grafts.

Pronounced fit, Thomas tests the healthy left foot against such challengers as Charley Stead, Lt. Bob Gardner, and Lloyd Smith of Chicago who has cleared 6-11.

Thomas' coaches Doug Raymond and Ed Flanagan plan a limited indoor campaign for John as the latter is worked slowly toward a peak for the Olympic trials.

Thomas will be allowed to go as high as he wants to—seven feet and above—as long as he doesn't appear too tired, the coaches agree.

Pole vaulter Don Bragg is another field event specialist with an eye toward the summer Olympics in Rome. Holder of the world indoor mark of 15 feet, 9 1/2 inches, Bragg cleared 15-8 last week in Baltimore. He pronounced himself ready for a record bid in the K. of C.

A three-mile instead of a two-mile event will be held for distance runners to prepare better the athletes for the Olympic tryouts at 5,000 meters, meet Director Ding Dussault said.

Eddie Collymore of Cambridge and Villanova, winner of the 600-yard run here a year ago, is concentrating on the dash for the Olympics. He will face defender Paul Winder of Morgan State and Ira Davis in the 50-yard field.

Olympic champion Lee Calhoun is favored to make it three straight meet triumphs in the hurdles.

Phil Coleman heads a five-man delegation in the mile. Coleman won this event in 1957 and was runner-up the following year. Other entered are Ed Moran, Carl Olaf Home, Velma Muges and Bruce Lockerbie.

Jim Hegan Seen Ready To Retire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It appears that Jim Hegan, the San Francisco Giants' veteran catcher, is retiring after a baseball career spanning 21 years.

Vice President Chub Feeney announced today the Giants had asked for waivers on the 39-year-old player for the purpose of releasing him unconditionally.

At his Lakewood, Ohio, home, Hegan said he could have reported for spring training this year but preferred to stay with the trucking line of which he is a sales executive.

"I kind of hate to make the final break," he said, "but I think my career has been pretty long."

Hegan spent most of his major league years with Cleveland of the American League from 1941 to 1957, during which he caught three no-hitters.

In 1948 he batted .248, had 14 homers and 61 runs batted in and led the league with 87 putouts and 78 assists. That was the year Cleveland beat Boston in the World Series in six games. Hegan caught in all six.

He went to Detroit in February 1958 on a trade and was released to Philadelphia of the National League that July. He joined the Giants last season and caught in 46 games, mostly for San Francisco's young pitchers.

PLAQUE FOR NELLIE
NEW YORK (AP) — Nellie Fox, star second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, has been voted the Sid Mercer Award as player of the year by the New York chapter, Baseball Writers Assn. of America. A plaque will be presented Fox at the writers' 37th annual dinner Jan. 31.

RETAINS TITLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Edward Lee of the New York A.C. retained the National Amateur three-cushion billiard title Friday night when he defeated Stanhope Adams of Chicago to complete tournament play unbeaten in six matches. Lee won 50-40 in 62 innings. Adams finished second with a 4-2 record.

Scout Sitting Pretty

HAPPY SCOUT—Former big league catcher Fred Hofmann beams as he looks over the list of young prospects on the Baltimore roster. Hofmann collects a $490 monthly baseball pension.

Seals. They sold him to the Yankees for $25,000 and five players. "Berra was a kid in St. Louis when I coached the Browns. He was my buddy, Joe Garagiola, got $500 for signing with the Cardinals; Yogi wanted the same. He had pride. I offered him $300. When he was 16 I saw him hit a ball on the right field roof in Sportsman's Park. So did John Schute, a Yankee scout. He wrote Joe McCarthy and got permission to sign him."

But about the pension? "Well, I had 10 years as a player and 13 years as a coach," says Hofmann. "But I paid in only $450 a year for three years."

"Three years ago when I decided to collect $490 a month, people said I was crazy. If I waited until I was 65 I would have had $1,540 a month. But I collected $1,750 before I was 65, and to make that up I'd have to live to about 90."

Hofmann, a St. Louis native now living in Dunesville, Fla., scouts the Florida area for the Orioles. One of his prizes is John (Boog) Powell, a 6-foot-4 230-pounder from Key West.

"He can hit a ball as far as Babe Ruth did," says Hofmann. "He was my only 18 last August. He was an outfielder but Paul Richards (Oriole manager) suggested we make a first baseman out of him. Twenty-six big league scouts saw him in Florida state schoolboy playoffs at Fort Pierce."

"Last season Powell played for Bluefield, W. Va., in the Class D Appalachian League. He had one home run for every 13 trips and batted about .352."

Powell is on the Baltimore roster as protection against the unrestricted draft of first-year players. So is Arne Thorsland, a young Bluefield pitcher who fanned 23, 20 and 19 in three games last summer.

Hofmann caught behind Yankee Wally Schang for five years. Although he got in only two World Series games he was on three American League pennant winners in New York and one with the Browns, for whom he coached 12 years.

"When Bill Veck moved into St. Louis he cleaned house," says Hofmann. "I became a scout and when the Browns became the Baltimore Orioles, Bill DeWitt (now Detroit president), kept me as a scout."

"The game has been good to me. I worked under three owners and five different managers in St. Louis. Scouting keeps me young, especially when I see so many good looking prospects coming out of high school."

"We miss a lot of boys because there are few baseball scholarships in college, and the athletes who want college are getting scholarships for football and basketball."

Walker Named Atlanta Manager
ATLANTA (AP) — Rube Walker, a Lenox, N.C., native who caught 11 years in the National League, will be the playing manager for the Atlanta Crackers this season.

Walker, 33, caught for the Brooklyn Dodgers, now the Los Angeles Dodgers and operators of the Atlanta club.

He managed Houston in the American Assn. part of the 1959 season and comes to Atlanta from St. Paul, a Triple-A Dodger farm team.

Weather Eases At Yorba Linda
YORBA LINDA, Calif. (AP) — Clearing skies and warmer weather were promised today as dark-horse Tony Lama of San Leandro, Calif., led the way into the second round of the $20,000 Yorba Linda Golf Tournament.

Fog, showers, a reluctant sun and then cold, cloudy skies made conditions miserable for the 180 players Friday.

They didn't have much to complain about after a study of first-round scores. No fewer than 40 pros and 1 amateur broke par 36-36-72 over the Yorba Linda Country Club course.

Mid-January Slowdown About To Begin For ACC

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The annual mid-January examination slowdown is about to set in for Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams. But before it does they'll play a full round of four conference games today.

Thereafter, they'll play only four league games in the next two weeks as the battle of the books replaces the hardwood heroics. All were idle last night.

Duke, seeking to close out the first half of the campaign in first place, is at home in Maryland in an afternoon (2 p.m., EST) game that was televised regionally.

North Carolina, Duke's chief challenger, meets Virginia at Greensboro, N.C., Wake Forest plays at North Carolina State and South Carolina is at Clemson in night games.

Howard Hurt (14.4) was the only Duke player among the top 12 ACC scorers when the official averages were announced earlier in the week. He was ninth on the list, seven points behind the pacesetter he'll face today, Al Bunge

In the girls' game, it was Grimesland emerging as the victors with a 59-76 upset over the Griffon girls of Coach E.S. Bright.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Lakers, $50,000 in the red this season, said today star Elgin Baylor isn't for sale—even for $250,000.

Laker owner Bob Short reportedly refused a New York Knickerbockers' offer of $100,000 for Baylor some weeks ago. Since then the Lakers have switched coaches, dismissing John Castellani and hiring ex-Laker star Jim Pollard, and lost more money.

The National Basketball Assn.'s shaky financial situation has led to increasing speculation that it is headed for a new home next season. Short admits this is a definite possibility.

"But I said the same thing a year ago and we came on sprinting in the last months and got into the final playoffs, and made $50,000," Short said.

In Minneapolis and neighboring St. Paul, the Lakers have been averaging about 2,500 spectators a game, a little more than half of course Friday, for a one-stroke lead over the field of 21 other professionals and 64 amateurs. At her heels, with 74, were Kathy Cornelius of Springfield, Ohio, and Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay.

Par 72 was untouchable as the golfers all showed the effects of a long winter layoff, but it was Miss Wright's day from the start. The tall blonde from San Diego, Calif., won the Sea Island title in 1957 and 1958.

Two pretournament favorites for the $6,000 purse faded apparently out of competition in the three-day event. Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., last year's top woman winner, shot 79, and Louise Suggs of Atlanta, 80.

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP)—Pace-setting Mickey Wright bids for her third straight title in the Sea Island Ladies Invitational Open Golf Tournament in today's second round of the 54-hole medal play event.

Miss Wright shot a 1-over-par 73 on the 6,300-yard Sea Island course Friday, for a one-stroke lead over the field of 21 other professionals and 64 amateurs. At her heels, with 74, were Kathy Cornelius of Springfield, Ohio, and Fay Crocker of Montevideo, Uruguay.

Variety In The Policewomen's Work

PARKING . . . tickets and meters are one of the many duties of Mrs. Stubbs.

By ROSALIE MOORE
Reflector Staff Writer

The field of service as a policewoman opened in Greenville only a few years ago. Seven women have given police work a try since 1953, and of these, Mrs. Odell Owens serving today is among the pioneers.

The force now has a two full time policewomen, Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Della Stubbs. The traffic at school crossings is directed by part-time policewomen, Mrs. Lawrence Jackson and Mrs. Alverta Corbett.

"Working with people, and something different and new everyday, are two reasons I enjoy my job," commented Mrs. Owens.

Mrs. Stubbs enjoys meeting people as a part of her job. She became interested in police work because her husband had been in law enforcement for eight years prior to moving to Greenville three years ago. "The longer I work and the deeper involved I get, the more interesting the work becomes," stated Mrs. Stubbs.

Certain qualifications have to be met to become a police officer. An entrance examination is given and a general investigation of the person is made. Special schools or training are not required to become a policewoman. On-the-job training is given. The Greenville police-women have the same authority as the policemen.

The duties of Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Stubbs vary. They may include going out on lottery and whiskey raids, searching female prisoners, communication, identification, issuing parking tickets, directing traffic and keeping a radio and jail log.

Departmental classes, usually held in the fall, are also attended by the women as well as the men. These classes cover nearly all phases of law enforcement. Traffic, searching and seizure, arrests, court testimony and investigations are among the classes taught.

The uniforms worn are regulation — gray blouses, navy skirts and coats.

Whenever time or weather permits, Mrs. Stubbs and Mrs. Owens go out to the police pistol range and practice shooting. Judo is also used by the women to get disorderly prisoners into the cell or the elevator.

Mrs. Owens said, "The only thing I dislike about my job is the people who think the law is made for everyone but them."

The officers are on call 24 hours per day if they are in the city limits. Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Stubbs go to work at 9:15 a.m. and get off at 5:15 p.m. except Saturdays when they get off at 12:30 p.m. They have one day off a week.

THE PROCEDURE . . . for searching female prisoners is illustrated.

TRAFFIC . . . at one of the school crossings is directed by a part-time policewoman, Mrs. Lawrence Jackson.

JUDO . . . is demonstrated by Mrs. Odell Owens and Mrs. Della Stubbs, policewomen.

WORKING . . . on the desk includes answering the phone and keeping a radio log.

MRS. OWENS . . . also works in the identification department, by printing pictures and dusting for fingerprints.

INSTRUCTIONS . . . on the finer points of self-defense with firearms is given by Captain R. T. Rogerson.

CHAPTER 32

My husband Rutledge was late and I was already dressed for the Junior-Senior Dance and through eating by the time he got in. While I had another cup of coffee while Rutledge ate his supper.

He said Dr. Wingate's aunt's plantation was much larger than he had thought, and he'd have to hurry if he wanted to get to that livestock thing at the Agriculture Building.

I said he'd probably have to shower in the milking shed, as the girls were all spread out in the bathroom dressing.

Rutledge muttered bitterly to himself about women and milking sheds and charged up the stairs.

You'd think he would at least notice I had on the beige lace I thought sadly. And you would think he would want to at least see the girls all dressed up.

I followed at a safe distance and was just in time to hear squeals of delight from the girls. Then Rutledge came bolting down the stairs with a clean shirt and a towel and headed for the milking shed.

I went to my room to take a last look in the mirror, and to look at the girls still chattering with excitement, and there was a small package on my dresser. On a scrap of envelope Rutledge had scrawled: "For my favorite woman."

I undid the scotch tape and store wrapping and inside were the loveliest rhinestone earrings! My eyes flitted lovelily, and I was just starting out to the milking shed when Maggie and Brantley and Tilghman burst in.

"Look!" said Maggie, holding up some rhinestone earrings. "Daddy gave each of us some!" Brantley said, "Isn't he the most!"

Tilghman said she couldn't think why Daddy gave her some too because she wasn't going to the Junior-Senior, but wasn't he a darling!

I was pretty shaken but I managed to say, didn't we Colhouns marry the nicest men!

Then Rutledge came back with a glowing, scrubbed look and an air of King Arthur distributing boons. And for a while it was rather like a meeting of the Mutual Admirer Society.

Then Rutledge left to get Old Beck to stay with Tilghman while we were gone. Tilghman said it was silly, that she wasn't afraid to stay alone, but Rutledge wouldn't even listen.

Two of the teachers came for me just as Rutledge got back with Old Beck, so I merely waved and said not to wait up as I would be late.

The Junior-Senior was usually held at the VFW Hut about three miles from town just off the river road. The decorating committee had done a lovely job, and the long ballroom was dazzling with palm trees, hula girls, and banjos.

How exciting for Maggie! I thought, and I was glad we had let her come.

By nine the guests began to arrive, but it was nine-thirty before I got even a glimpse of Maggie and Don and Brantley and Poo. From that point on there was so much confusion and so many people milling about and dancing that it was impossible to keep up with who was where.

During intermission I slipped out for a breath of air, as the hall was rather warm. I hadn't been out long before a tall, nice-looking blond boy with glasses came over to me and said he'd seen Maggie?

Then he introduced himself and said he was Don Gravelly and had seen Maggie, as she was supposed to meet him out here as soon as intermission started so they could get something to eat.

I felt a sort of sinking inside like an elevator going down but I said no, and she would probably be along in a minute.

"But Maggie isn't the kind to be late," he said, and he looked very young in his white dinner jacket, I thought, and really concerned.

I said no, that Maggie wasn't ever late anywhere, and something must have held her up.

"Somebody," he said, I thought, in a funny way.

I decided he was just jealous, and somebody else had proved interested in Maggie too. "She'll be along," I said and smiled.

Don did not smile. "It isn't like Maggie," he said. "She went to the powder room and said she would be straight back, and well, she never has."

The elevator inside me really dropped this time. I said that maybe she started feeling unwell, and was lying down.

Don said no, that he had asked the attendant at the powder room.

I said that maybe Maggie just went outside for a breath of air with some other boy—that is—

Don said no, Maggie wouldn't do that, not if she said she would meet him.

And I knew it was true.

Don took out a large clean white handkerchief, unfolded it, and mopped his face. Then he said, "Would you like to come outside where the cars are parked while I look around?"

I said why should we do that?

Don said, well, he had promised Maggie not to say anything but, well, she might be in real danger!

"Real danger?" I said. "What do you mean?"

Don said it was just something Maggie had told him—in confidence of course, and all he could tell me was that he hoped nothing was wrong. The important thing right now was to find her.

We both knew Maggie wouldn't be in any of those parked cars, and I wondered why Don insisted on making the rounds. Suddenly he pointed and started to run.

A yellow convertible nearby started off with a mad squealing of tires and Don stood looking at it as if he were about to get it as if he were about to get it. "Come on!" and pulling me along by the hand, he got us inside his own souped-up car. "Hold tight!" he said.

There weren't any doors, and I held onto anything I could find that was steady. "Tell me, Don," I shouted, "what is wrong?"

Don shouted that Maggie and Stew Burnside were in that yellow convertible and Stew wasn't out for any good!

Stew Burnside! I said. Wasn't he that dreadful boy with the long hair and the sideburns?

Don said yes.

I said, "Don Gravelly, is there something you are not telling me that I ought to know?"

Don said, "Honest, Mrs. Colhoun, I don't know. I promised Maggie I wouldn't say anything, but we've got to stop them!"

My heart just simply flopped over and stopped, like the freezer during a storm. I said faintly, "You mean he might h-h hurt her?"

Don nodded.

Why had I ever thought Maggie was old enough to take care of herself? I thought in terror.

Don said grimly, if we could pick up a speed cop it would be all the better. And even in my awful fear I told myself that, if my usual luck held, we would certainly pick up a patrolman.

Usually I am nervous when Rutledge goes over sixty, but now, streaking along at well over a hundred like a jet plane, I was only worried that we wouldn't go fast enough to catch Maggie and Stew before he—

But my thoughts stopped there and couldn't seem to go on. The yellow car was merely twin pinpoints of light headed toward the river.

Christian Science

The divine source of all existence will be brought out at Christian Science services Sunday.

Keynoting the Lesson-Sermon on the subject of "Life" is the Golden Text from Psalms (42:8): "The Lord will command his loving-kindness in the daytime, and in the night his song shall be with me, and my prayer unto the God of my life."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read the following: "Because Life is God, Life must be eternal, self-existent, Life is the everlasting I AM. The Being who was and is and shall be, whom nothing can erase" (289:32).

Scriptural passages will include the following from Psalms: "The glory of the Lord shall endure forever: The Lord shall rejoice in his works... I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live: I will sing praise to my God while I have my being" (104:31,33).

Cattlemen Plan Meet In Raleigh

The ninth annual cattlemen's conference is to be held at N. C. State College in Raleigh Jan. 21-22.

Assistant Farm Agent C. J. Goodman said the county agent's office "heartily recommends" that cattle producers plan to attend the conference for important information on growing out cattle.

He said that one of the farm agents will be attending the meeting each day and cattle growers will be welcome to go along. Producers planning to attend were asked to contact the farm agent's office.

Brochure Is In Circulation

COMPLETED BROCHURE . . . advertising Pitt County as industrial site here exhibited by Weston.

After completion little more than a month ago, the new Pitt County Brochure, published by the Pitt Development Commission, has gone into national circulation.

According to Economic Consultant L. A. Weston, several hundred copies of the multi-folder publication are already in the files of industrial prospects around the country.

Printed at a cost of around $2,000, the brochure was assembled in nine separate parts. It includes eight leaflet-type folders inserted into a filing folder.

Each of the eight intergraph parts concerns a different general topic. The leaflets give detailed information about Pitt County's markets, manpower, industry, communities, business climate, transportation, living conditions, utilities, and materials and resources.

The filing folder is complete with five pictures of various facets of Pitt County life and is printed in two colors — red and black on white. The eight leaflets have identical covers — all dark blue with the design in white.

The entire brochure contains some 50 pictures that range from an aerial view of East Carolina College to a hunting scene in Pitt County. There are nearly 20 graphs and charts covering subjects from yearly rainfall to freight rate schedules.

Weston proposed the leaflet-type brochure to the Commission for a definite purpose. The economic consultant explained that up-to-date insertions could be made in this type of publications that could not be included in a bound volume. He further pointed out that additional information concerning specific topics could easily be prepared and included in the unit at the request of a prospect.

Cramer To Talk To Commission

The Pitt County Development Commission office urged today that all commissioners be present at next Wednesday's January meeting to hear Dr. Robert E. Cramer of the East Carolina College School of Geography explain how his services have aided the Commission's activities.

A prepared statement from the office said "Dr. Cramer has been working very closely with this office in preparation of detailed maps showing the resources of Pitt and adjacent counties. Other maps being developed by the School of Geography cover marking areas, population and population distribution, income, and labor availability and type of labor.

The Commission's economic Consultant, L. A. Weston, pointed out Cramer's work has been "very helpful" in helping the office exhibit Pitt County's physical attributes to prospects.

Weston added Don White and Glen R. Grady of the new G & W Boat Company here are planning to attend the meeting to "tell about their operational plans" at Greenville's newest industry.
