Two Sides To Bank Merger Story

What do you think of the merger of Guaranty and Wachovia?

That question probably has been asked more in Greenville and Pitt County in past 48 hours than any other. And as to be expected in a situation of this kind, there are many different answers being made to the question.

For Greenville it will mean giving up the name of Guaranty Bank which has been a symbol of considerable influence in business and banking circles throughout the eastern part of the state for several decades. The fact that Greenville is the headquarters for Guaranty operations in 12 other cities and towns throughout the area has been a source of pride to most residents of the community.

There is also the ever-present realization that here another institution that is native to this section of the state is becoming a part of another larger organization whose home base is outside Eastern North Carolina. It is part of the fear of being swallowed up by bigness, which all people seem to share. There is concern over Greenville losing its identity as a major banking center and becoming merely a little cog in a bigger wheel, rather than remaining the hub of the wheel.

Though most of these reasons may be attributed to sentimentality—Guaranty and its organization has been identified with Greenville since 1901 when it was formed under the name of Greenville Banking and Trust company—it cannot be overlooked that sentiment is a personal and important thing to individuals.

On the other side of the ledger, Wachovia is the largest banking institution in the Southeastern states and the 41st largest commercial bank in the nation. As such it should be in a position to offer more for Greenville and its area than a bank which is less than one-tenth the size. With Greenville an area headquarters for the largest bank in the state, there should be advantages through contacts which are not readily accessible to a bank that is primarily an eastern North Carolina bank.

There is the further consideration that the officers and directors of Guaranty bank should be those most concerned with the future of the bank and certainly equally concerned with other citizens for the future of the area. For years they have dedicated their efforts toward developing the bank and the area in which it operated. They should be the ones most familiar with the needs of modern-day banking and likewise the needs of the area. They are also the ones most familiar with the terms of the merger agreement, and the ones in the most advantageous position to evaluate the advantages and disadvantages such a merger might offer Greenville and the area served by Guaranty Bank and Trust Company. Certainly they would not have approved the merger had they not been confident it would be in the best interest of the community as well as in the best interest of the bank itself.

We are reluctant to see a Greenville institution such as Guaranty, which has served the community well and added prestige to the city over a long period of years, be absorbed by an organization which has its headquarters elsewhere. At the same time we recognize the advantages which might be offered the city and the area through the merger of Guaranty with the largest bank in the state.

We Might Well Share Our Nuclear 'Secrets'

President Eisenhower's proposal that the law be changed to allow a free exchange of nuclear information between the United States and its responsible allies is one which should not be ignored by Congress.

The change in the law should encompass nuclear weapons as well as information on nuclear research. By prohibiting the exchange of such information with our allies, the United States has taken the position that its partners of the free world could not be trusted with certain information concerning nuclear research and nuclear weapons. Perhaps this was not the intention of the wording of the Atomic Act when it was originally passed, but that is the way it has appeared to some allies of the United States.

The world situation has changed drastically since the provision was originally written into law. The United States has long since lost its monopoly on the secrets of nuclear energy and the ability to produce nuclear weapons. If the purpose of the provision banning exchange of nuclear information with our allies was to preserve the U. S. monopoly in this field, it failed long ago.

While the United States probably would not give out all its nuclear information to all its allies, and while it would not place its latest nuclear weapons in the hands of every nation of the free world bloc, there is little to be gained by making believe we still have exclusive title to nuclear research and development.

Through a freer exchange of information on nuclear research, the United States might effect a closer relationship with its allies and thereby strengthen the position of the free world. It would at least indicate more fully to its allies that they have our confidence, and they in turn probably would have greater confidence in us.

Some Progress In Civil Rights

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Progress in civil rights may seem small to Southern Negroes who have been denied them. But some progress is being made, in bits and pieces.

Tuesday the Senate, by a two-thirds vote and without a Southern filibuster, approved a constitutional amendment to outlaw any requirement for payment of a poll tax before a person can vote in federal elections. Only five Southern states still have a poll tax.

The ban won't become a reality unless two-thirds of the House, and after that three-fourths of the states, also approve. The states have seven years in which to act.

Perhaps the long delay before the tax can be banned explains in part why Southern opposition to it was less than all-out. The amendment was even sponsored by a Southerner, Sen. Spessard Holland (D-Fla.).

Maybe a better explanation is that the poll tax as an issue has lost most of its significance. Negroes are better able to afford such a tax now than they were in the poverty-stricken years of the past.

Nowadays Southern whites who want to keep Negroes from voting use other means: intimidation or blocking them from registering. Yet, no longer ago than the 1940s, anti-poll tax proposals were a flaming issue.

Actually, in those days attempts to get through such a measure were the prelude to a political farce in Congress. Almost invariably the House would pass a bill but Southern Democrats in the Senate filibustered it to death. This happened in 1942, 1943, 1945 and 1947. In 1949 the House again approved but the anti-poll tax bill never reached the Senate floor.

Of course there was a great difference between the anti-poll tax bills which the House approved but the Senate blocked and the amendment approved Tuesday. A bill would have become law immediately after a simple majority vote in both houses.

It may be seven years before the states approve the constitutional amendment accepted by the Senate, provided two-thirds of the House members also go along. It is still questionable whether the states will approve.

But the dam against civil rights progress was broken in 1954 when the Supreme Court outlawed public school segregation and made civil rights such a national issue that neither the North nor South could ignore it.

It is doubtful that Congress in 1957 could have passed its first civil rights bill in 82 years—also without a filibuster—if the Supreme Court hadn't broken down the barriers.

Later this year there is a strong possibility that another civil rights bill—perhaps more meaningful than the extremely mild one of 1957—may get through.

The amendment which cleared the Senate Tuesday got some Southern opposition, largely on the grounds that even a change in the Constitution to forbid the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting is an interference with the rights of states to set up their own voting requirements.

Opinions In Brief

"They say it was a Texas millionaire who threw a party at which champagne gushed from a miniature oil well. But we wonder. The true Texas doesn't bother with miniatures." Rockmart (Ga.) Journal.

"The fate of our nation rests upon you and the people you influence. If you want to make a quick buck above all else, if you would trade security for freedom, if you have lost the moral fibre of your ancestors, our nation is in grave danger. For in a free world you do your choosing as to leaders, but they cannot put meaning or purpose or moral standards into your lives. That is up to you. The fate of the world is within each of us."—Beeville (Tex.) Bee-Picayune.

Work Is Serving God

By NANCY ALLEN
St. James Methodist Church
To some men, work is a hated burden. To others, it is a jealous mistress. The business man caught in the "success" pattern finds himself giving more and more of his time and energy to the achievement of the goal that is demanded of him. The professional man can find his work so all-absorbing that he loses himself in it. In these cases work is a tyrant that rules the whole of life, and the worker is a slave.

To others, work is a necessary evil. They give to their work very little—as little as possible. Their place of work is a prison where they are condemned to spend too many of their waking hours. It is possible to give too much or too little of ourselves to our work. A Christian understanding of work can free us from both dangers. Work for a Christian is a way of serving God. It is at the Holy Communion that we acknowledge our work to be the serving of God. We offer bread and wine, perfect symbols of the economic life of man, and thereby offer our work to God. In this offering we acknowledge ourselves to be God's agents in all of our work, and accountable to him for the way we do it. To do our work well, to give to our work what is due to it, is itself the serving of God. Work is cooperation with God in making God's gifts available for the needs of men. And work can be a way of thanksgiving. Through our work we can show our gratitude to God for his great bounty to us; through our work we can give back to God a little of what we have received.

Other Editors Saying... Battle Of Nerves

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
No matter how hard the Free World tries to find a basis for belief in Russia's frequent statements concerning desire for peaceful co-existence, there is always a Soviet-made stumbling block. If Russia has any honest intentions concerning peace—or even international relaxation and agreement—they're doing a pretty good job of disguising those sentiments.

Only a few months ago, following the Camp David talks between President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Khrushchev, many people felt that 1960 would be a year when much could be done about settling East-West issues. Khrushchev's visit to the United States left the impression that the Soviets were, at long last, softening up a bit.

At that time it was felt by many that this spring's summit negotiations would produce wonderful and historic developments. That impression, a dangerous one from the beginning, was shattered. The Soviets, it seems, are playing a nasty game of international politics in which they depend on the relaxing and tightening of tensions to produce confusion. The Reds have always been able to operate best when confusion exists.

The Russian move has an evident purpose—to produce first a period of amiability and hope, quickly followed by a period of strain and tension. They figure this battle of nerves will hurt the West, for with each new crisis the Soviets expect the Western powers to have new trouble agreeing among themselves on how they should stand against Soviet pressures. And the West consistently obliges Russia by doing just that.

That the amiable spirit of Camp David has been killed by Russia's rapid-fire change of intentions can no longer be disputed. Instead of looking to the summit talks to develop worthwhile objectives, we can now expect the negotiations to be grim and even dangerous. The prospects of relaxed sessions capable of producing agreement are no longer visible.

It is quite possible that the recent collapse of talks concerning payment of lend-lease debt to the U.S. may be an indication of what to expect from the summit talks. The purpose of the lend-lease debt talks originally was to arrive at a figure suitable to both countries. The debt, contracted by Russia during World War II, amounted to $2.5 billion. The Soviets had previously offered $300 million and we had asked $800 million. Going into the negotiations it was expected that Washington would be willing to settle for about $500 million.

But the negotiators never got into hard dollar talk, because Russia chose to use the negotiations for another purpose. They tried to force the U.S. into trade agreements indicating that the debt would not be paid until certain trade concessions for Russia were granted by the U.S.

Something of the sort will likely come about during the summit sessions. When it is time to discuss disarmament, Russia might just state that any talk of disarmament must be preceded by certain Western concessions concerning the Berlin problem. When the Berlin situation comes up, they may demand that the West ease its disarmament proposals before any agreement can be reached on Berlin.

That, apparently, is the way Russia plays the game. The Soviets make it difficult, indeed, for free people to have faith in any professed intentions of honesty and peace by the Russians.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
What kind of an automobile are you going to buy next? Oh, no, I am not advertising any particular make or design. I only want to pass on to you what seems to me to be some ludicrous and startling facts. The ludicrous facts are that I am told by an automobile salesman that the things which sell a car most often are the sound of the horn, and the sound which the door makes when it is slammed shut, and the color of the car body. Only a few people want the hood raised and the mechanism of the car explained to them. They carefully examine the wheel caps. They blow the horn. They slam the door. OK—that's the car for me.

The alarming fact which I glean from contact with automobile salesmen is their assurance that there are cars which are definitely prestige cars. They are in the high price field. Why under heaven do people buy them when they can get just as good at a considerably lower figure? "Why, my dear sir," said my salesman friend, "you don't seem to know that there is something in the world called prestige. People buy the expensive cars because it makes them feel superior to their neighbors. It gives them a name. It confers distinction."

Heavens above! What are we coming to? Toot the horn and slam the door and ask what kind of a car the Joneses drive. Should we laugh or should we weep—or both?

Some Office Types

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—One of the best places to study human nature is in an office wash-room.

The white-collar worker at his desk wears a mask. He is on guard. You can't tell what kind of a person he is.

But in the washroom he quits acting. He shows his true personality, and the real man comes through. He feels free there to be himself.

Look around you in your own office washroom. You are bound to recognize some familiar characters.

1. The crusader. He complains the grade of washroom soap is ruining his skin and is eternally circulating a petition demanding that the company put in linen instead of paper towels.
2. The fastidious soul. "Why do people insist on throwing their cigar butts on the floor here?" he asks, shuddering. "They don't do it at home do they? Then why here? Isn't this their home away from home?"
3. The thrifty junior executive. He is so anxious to make a name for himself by saving the company money that he carefully tears off only half a paper towel to dry his dripping face. The result is he has chapped cheeks all winter.
4. The angry wastrel. "If this chincy outfit won't pay me what I'm worth, I'll get even with 'em some other way," he growls, boldly ripping off three paper towels when one will do.
5. The scholar. He never comes to the washroom without at least two newspapers and a copy of Reader's Digest.
6. The master of ceremonies. This guy is a frustrated Grover Whalen. He feels it his duty to give everyone who wanders into the washroom a cheerful greeting and a friendly farewell.
7. The ambusher. He lies in wait and as soon as you enter, he sidles over next to your wash basin and whispers, "By the way, can you lend me 10 bucks until payday?"
8. The office snitch. He creeps around listening to everyone's conversation, and if he hears anything derogatory about the company he gallops out to tell the boss. This male mata hari never realizes that the boss, as well as everybody else, despises him.

9. The secret addict. This poor wretch has publicly proclaimed he has given up the tobacco habit. But every 15 minutes he sneaks into the washroom to grab a few stolen puffs.
10. The hypochondriac. To him the washroom is both clinic and drugstore. He plods in ever hour on the hour to gargle, put drops in his eyes, take a vitamin capsule, drink something to quiet his nonexistent ulcer, or simply stare at his tongue in the mirror.
11. The compulsive washer. He has made a mistake on the job but hasn't been caught. Every few minutes he trots in and scrubs his hand, hoping thereby to wash his guilt away before his error is found out.
12. The juvenile Narcissus. The teen-age office boy is so proud of his duck-tail haircut, garnished with olive oil, that he spends hours combing his locks as he admires them in the washroom mirror. This drives the hard-headed older employees crazy.
Last but not least, of course, is the boss himself. He stomps in, looks bleakly around at the crowd of washroom characters, and remarks dryly: "What's going on in here anyway—a convention?"
Three seconds later the boss has the place to himself.

Tax Waste In Highway Program

By ELMER ROESSNER
President Eisenhower's proposal that Congress use the Federal gasoline tax by one-half cent a gallon probably will be rejected.

Reasons:
1. Congress is reluctant to boost basic taxes in election years.

Gas taxes are already so high that rebellion has set in; thousands of people are buying smaller cars because they use less gas. Small cars require less manpower than large cars, hence the bunny-buses are cutting employment.

Since the lid on a potential new scandal has been tilted, the public and Congress itself will be reluctant to pour in any more tea—especially if it means billions more out of taxpayers' pockets in the form of a rise in the gasoline tax.

There are already three investigations under way into the highway scandal. They are:
1. A White House investigation, ordered by President Eisenhower.
2. An inquiry by a subcommittee of the House Public Works Committee, headed by Representative John A. Blatnik (D., Minn.).
3. An investigation by the House Ways and Means Committee, headed by Representative Wilbur D. Mills (D., Ark.) CORPORATE CONSPIRACY

Evidence of the surging opposition to waste of taxes appears in the fact that the current issue of Our Sun, a house organ of the Sun Oil Co., rips into waste of gas tax money with explosives recalling Captain Billy's Whiz Bang.

Reno, Nev., although route 17 blocks away would be cheaper and not rip up the center of town.

House organs are usually conservative publications promulgating Robert Browning's contention that "all's right with the world." But Our Sun, in an article by Judson Laird, rears back and leaves the mudslingers have it, quoting authoritative sources each time. A few samples:
"An Ohio cost estimate was off $9,000,000 because of a typographical error... A Georgia estimate was overstated by $19,700,000 because of faulty arithmetic... The Bureau of Public Roads coerced county commissioners into accepting a highway through the heart of

"A bridge across the Narrows below Manhattan would be the 'key' to the planned waste of $453,000,000 in public road building funds the unnecessary and uneconomic proposals to duplicate, in close parallel, existing U. S. Route 22 from Philadelphia on the Delaware River to Port Newark on the Upper New York Bay with a brand new highway."
There are many more examples of waste, some of it mad, mad mad.

There seems to be two courses open to the citizen:
1. Write floridous letters opposing the proposed increase in gas taxes to his Congressman, Senators, the White House, and local civic leaders, or
2. Get into this highway construction business. There are millions in it.

He's 82 Years Old, Directed To Move His Home

HENRY BENNETT—alone with his chickens.

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Henry Daniel Bennett lives far from his fellow man, in a sense. Although his home is within a short distance of a better residential district of Greenville, he is worlds away.

To reach Bennett's home you take a dirt road off Fifth St. It winds around Greenwood Cemetery and then through the city's garbage dump. Next you come to a modern industrial fence. It's easy to see that the fence is in the process of erection. And it is easy to see that it will enclose a cleared area of several acres.

At the far side of the area, where the fence has not yet reached, you see a strange conglomeration of structures. In the center of it all is a bus body with a little tin chimney sprouting from a window.

As you come close, you see an old man. He wears a battered felt hat, a threadbare coat and a brightly colored, but dirty tie knotted around a dark and wrinkled shirt.

He chops wood as you drive up and dozens of chickens are scratching and pecking through the odds and ends that surround the structure.

This is the home of Henry Daniel Bennett, 82.

The bus body with the chimney is where he lives. The odd structures on each side were built by him with material he salvaged from the city dump. The buildings, perhaps in better condition than his bus, house his flourishing chicken crop.

Would he talk to a newspaperman?

Bennett shrugs his shoulders. He has been living on the city-owned property for about three and a half years. He once lived on a farm near the city but the old house blew over in a storm.

They—he doesn't say who—moved the bus to this area, set it up and Bennett moved in.

But Bennett is soon to lose this crude home.

City officials notified him that the land is needed for a modern sewage disposal plant. He shows you where the fence will go. The stakes marking its location are already there.

"I worked pretty hard around here," he says. He walks over to one of the buildings. "I was going to heat this for the bitties but they told me I'd have to move."

Inside is a masonry flue, similar to the type once used on wood-fired tobacco curing barns.

"When a man 82 years old gets fixed up for winter, then they tell you you have to move...it won't work out right."

Does he have any place to go? "No," he replies. "Let them find me a place to go. They didn't give me enough notice. If this stuff is in their way they can move it. If they had given me enough notice, I would have been all right."

You mention the chickens and the old man's eyes brighten.

"I've got a hundred or more chickens around here. I raise them as sort of a hobby. I don't get as much out of them as it costs to raise them."

He goes to his bus to get a box of corn. As he opens the door, a glimpse inside reveals appalling living conditions. There is no order within. You see the heater at the front. Then you make out the bed where the old man sleeps—on a lumpy mattress at the rear.

Happily, he feeds the chickens. The fowl hurry to him as the kernels of corn drop from his hands. Bennett then tells you that most of his people were from Rocky Mount. He has no children, he says, and his wife died of TB. You get the impression he was in Washington, D.C., at the time.

"The doctors advised me to come back here," he continues. "I came back and my health's good."

Bennett had eight brothers and sisters but they are all dead now. He has some sisters-in-law living in Rocky Mount and a niece.

A brother of his was mayor of Rocky Mount a long time ago. "He's dead now," Bennett says. "Dropped dead of a heart attack."

"I worked hard all my life," he continues. He was a boiler maker and in government work at one time. That was in 1917 when he worked in the Navy yard. He holds up gnarled hands. "That's how I got these broken hands."

How far did he go in school? "Well, back 30 years ago there weren't any grades like they have now. I tell folks I went as high as the second floor. Reading writing and arithmetic was about all we had in those days. My mother was a school teacher and she taught us at home."

"I could tell some of these fellows now—in high school and college," he stopped. "Of course, it's good to have that, but it's better to have a little horse sense, too."

He told of a man in Pitt County who could neither read nor write. But he could figure a load of wood or cotton "quicker than you could on paper."

"I haven't got very much education, but I could figure out stuff like that, you know."

Bennett tells you he has no electricity in his bus. He uses oil for light.

"I read the paper and the Bible and all and I don't have to use any glasses. That's pretty good for a man 82 years old."

His income is $31 a month which he receives from the Welfare Department. The payment was $33 but it was cut recently.

Would he pose for a picture? Again he brightens. "Let me get my chickens." Bennett hurries to the bus, picks up his corn box. The chickens quickly gather around.

"Wait until I get my rooster," he cautions the photographer. Then he spots the rooster racing across the area on which the sewage plant will stand. The bird joins the flock. Now, says the old man with a smile, he's ready.

SAC Commander Is Often At Odds With Top Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Thomas Sarsfield Power, who carries the awesome responsibility of running the Strategic Air Command, has found himself at odds with the top men in the Pentagon more than once.

The personality of this ramrod, stop-watch, spit-and-polish four-star general makes it a distinct possibility it could happen again.

Power's latest disagreement was with Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. in a New York speech last month. Power said that without an ample missile warning system, a surprise attack by 300 Soviet missiles could virtually wipe out in 30 minutes America's bomber and missile retaliatory force. This is the SAC which Power commands. He advocates keeping some bombers in the air at all times to avoid such a sneak attack.

Gates, justifying the administration's defense budget before a congressional committee, said he and the Joint Chiefs of Staff consider Power's estimate unrealistic. He carefully avoided any personal criticism of Power.

Tuesday Power had a chance to back down if he wished. His reply to a Senate Committee was characteristic: "I still stand by my statements in that speech."

Power had a disagreement last year with Gates' predecessor Neil H. McElroy.

Power had written a book called "Design For Survival." Copies of the manuscript circulated on Capitol Hill. Some of it became public. McElroy put a Pentagon lid on the book and refused permission for it to be published. His only explanation was that it was inappropriate for a major Commander on active duty to write a book about his current area of command.

Power, 55, has been called "sensible," "overly ambitious," "dour" and "grim."

He also was called exactly the right man to take over command of the Strategic Air Command in 1957 from Gen. Curtis LeMay.

Power had served as LeMay's right arm at SAC for almost six years, then took charge in 1954 of the Air Research and Development Command, which at that time was developing the Atlas and Titan long-range missiles.

Power hates to waste time or words. He despises sloppy dress and is always immaculate himself.

When he is scheduled to go somewhere in his staff plane, he pulls up in his command car at precisely one minute before departure time. When he steps from the car the starboard engine is started. As he climbs up the ramp the port engine is started. Exactly on time he slips into the pilot's seat and shoves off. If anyone in the party is 30 seconds late he gets left behind.

Power is said to have piloted every type of military plane from the trainers of the 1920s to the massive B58 bomber.

In World War II, he led the B29 fire raids on Tokyo and has won many decorations.

He is an avid golfer and fisherman and enjoys reading history and biography. An expert in judo, he holds the coveted "black belt" rating in the sport.

Power was born in New York and caught the flying fever at an early age around the primitive airports of Long Island. When he applied for air cadet training he found himself short of college credits. He made these up with an intensive course of night study.

He married the former Mae Ayre in 1936 while on duty in the Philippines.

Marathon Craze Invades Fine Old Game Of Bridge

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The marathon craze has returned and this time it has invaded the fine old game of bridge.

Four University of New Mexico students claimed a world record Wednesday of 75 hours and 5 minutes of continuous bridge playing.

The four, Sam Gray Jr. of Santa Fe, N.M., and John Fink, Jim Brown and Terry Duffe of Albuquerque, said they broke the record of 72 hours set recently by a foursome at Cambridge University in England.

They played 687 hands at a table in a downtown hotel lobby. Parents and girl friends brought them food.

Gray almost fell asleep at the 62-hour mark saying, "I don't remember how to play bridge."

A quick shower and a dozen candy bars furnished a second wind. Gray grabbed the shower while he held the dummy hand.

Nudists Mostly Need A Charter

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas nudists, who need a charter worse than they need new clothes, may go to court to get their charter.

Their request for a charter was turned down for a second time Wednesday by Secretary of State Zolle Steakley.

Steakley said such an organization would violate laws against lewdness and indecent exposure.

Rep. Don Gladden, Fort Worth attorney, said the main error in Steakley's decision is the presumption "that the mere absence of clothes constitutes lewdness and indecency."

Gladden asked the secretary to reconsider his first denial, Jan. 25, "before we take action" in court.

Can't Get Rid Of An Odd Duck

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — George appears convinced he's a full fledged member of the Al Thomas family of Phoenix. But he's not.

He's a duck that won't go near the water. If he's a he.

It all began last November when Leslie Thomas, 9, won the duck in a coin tossing game at the Arizona State Fair. Lots of kids did. Most of the ducklings were short-lived. Not so George.

He grew. First he yrew out of small cardboard boxes. Then out of a parakeet cage. Given the run of the yard, he stared longingly into the house through a glass door.

His odd mental quirk showed up this week when the family, with hard won consent from Leslie, tried to ditch him in the lagoon of a city park. There are lots of other ducks there.

"Go on, George," said Mrs. Thomas, as she, her daughter and the reluctant duck arrived at the water's edge. "This is your new home and these will be your new friends."

George wanted no part of it. Mrs. Thomas gently placed him in the lagoon. George flew out as though jet propelled.

Mrs. Thomas tossed him out into the lagoon. George sank for a moment, then clumsily clawed his way back to shore. The performance was repeated.

"Mother, daughter and slightly bedraggled duck returned home."

Now George has a fenced off section of the yard all to himself.

"I guess we're struck with him," said Mrs. Thomas. "We can't give him away. We can't eat him."

Eighteen Years Of Her Life Crumbled At Knock

GARDENA, Calif. (AP) — Irene Marie Robbins knew there'd be a knock on her door someday.

It came Wednesday.

She opened the door and told the sheriff's deputies outside: "I know who you are. I am Ruth Crum. I lived in fear and terror all these years. In a way, I am glad it's over."

With those words, 18 years of Mrs. Robbins' life started crumbling.

To her neighbors, Mrs. Robbins, 45, is the wife of accountant Franklin L. Robbins, the mother of four children and a leader in school and community affairs.

But authorities in Cook County, Ill., know her as an ex-convict who violated her parole. She said she never told her husband about her past.

In 1938, police said, Ruth Crum sat in a car in Havana, Ill., while a male companion committed a burglary. She pleaded guilty to the charge although she maintained she didn't know the man's intentions when he left the auto.

After three years in a reformatory, she tried to make a new life by hiding her past. Authorities said she violated her parole by getting married and leaving Illinois. She was traced through fingerprints taken here last New Year's Day after she was involved in an auto accident and held for investigation.

"I loved my husband but I feared to tell him about my past," she said.

"I always brooded over this problem. I turned to religion and told my troubles to my spiritual advisor he assured me I had paid my debt to society and that there was no need to tell my husband or any of our children as they began to grow up."

Wednesday she phoned her husband and told him: "Frank, you'd better come home — my past just caught up with me."

She was arraigned later on a fugitive charge. An attorney said he'll ask California Gov. Edmund G. Brown to refuse Illinois' extradition request.

Her husband said he would stand by her.

"My wife obviously has been a good citizen these last 18 years," he said, "or her past would have come to light before this."

"Technically she was in error but morally she has stayed within the boundaries of good citizenship."

River Of Lava Continues Slow Course In Hawaii

KAPOHO VILLAGE, Hawaii (AP) — A steaming, hissing river of lava continued on its slow but devastating way today, destroying everything in its path.

Six fashionable weekend houses were burned Wednesday along the Hawaii Island shoreline.

The fiery flow was more than two miles from Kapoho Village, now but a burned-out shell.

Kilauea volcano, meanwhile, was still erupting, sending molten lava streaming from three vents. The continuous outpour shoved the lava further and further along, rolling along the coast in shallow water until it found an exposed area along the beach.

The lava stream, extending as far as half a mile offshore in shallow water until it found an exposed area along the beach.

The lava stream, extending as far as half a mile offshore in places, produced water disturbances and an eerie steam.

Can't Catch Up On The Exercise

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You can't catch up on the exercise you missed all week by killing yourself with activity over the weekend.

Because that's just what you'll be doing — killing yourself — says Dr. George C. Griffith, University of Southern California professor of medicine and heart specialist.

Excessive weekend exercise is the "acceptable American way of committing suicide," he told a businessmen's luncheon Wednesday. To avoid heart stress, he said, businessmen should get moderate exercise every day—even if it's only 15 minutes of calisthenics or a walk."

HEIRESS TO MURDER

By EM. BARKER

CHAPTER 12

Judy Rayburn sat up in bed, fear clamping an iron hand around her heart.

For a dazed minute she wasn't sure whether the awful soul-shattering noise she had heard was real or whether she had been dreaming.

Then it came again, a woman's shrill scream of shock and horror. It was Bella Gamel's voice and she kept on screaming. Judy swung out of bed and ran down the hall in her bare feet. The sound was coming from downstairs, and as she ran through the dark halls, Judy placed it as being in her uncle's study.

Suddenly a light showed in the big living room as the door was flung open and Bella stumbled out. She had stopped screaming now, and was crying with great racking sobs.

"What is it, Bella?" The girl raised her tear stained face, looked at Judy, then dropped into a big chair.

"It's Uncle Pete," she sobbed. "He—he's dead! Murdered!"

She seemed to make a fierce effort to pull herself together. "I couldn't sleep, I was worried about him after that quarrel he had today with Walt! Then a little while ago I thought I heard a shot! I—I got up to see about it and I found Uncle Pete—dead!"

Judy went round her and into the study. The lamp was still burning on the corner of Rayburn's big walnut desk and it threw its light squarely on the man's body.

He lay on his face with his hands outstretched, and Judy knew without touching him that he was dead.

Instinctively she backed away. Her face puckered up and tears alid down her cheeks. She hadn't known her uncle long, but her grief was almost as great as if she had known him all her life. Bella Gamel came to the doorway and seemed to have regained some of her composure. For several minutes other sounds of life had been stirring in the big house.

Then Dwight Mitchell came to the study door. "Bella! Judy! What is it?" he demanded. Then as his eyes fell on the body on the floor, his face turned a sickly grey.

"No!" he gasped. He stumbled to the chair by the big desk, dropped into it and buried his face in his hands. Bella went over and laid her hand on his shoulder, but she didn't speak for a minute. Then she turned to Judy.

"Run get some clothes on, Judy. Maybe you'd better wake up the boys in the bunkhouse. I'll have someone go for the sheriff. We'll get out of here and see that nothing is disturbed until he gets here."

Judy nodded and turned to go. In the half lighted living room she bumped into Rosina and Pedro Aragon. Rosina caught her by the arm. "Senorita! What is it? What has happened?"

Judy's throat was too tight to talk. She shook her head dumbly and jerked a hand towards the door behind her. With some remote corner of her or her mind she heard Bella Gamel speaking softly to Dwight, but it was not until later that she remembered well enough for it to have meaning for her.

"Walt Hollenger, Dwight!" Bella was saying. "And I would never have believed he would do it—even after he quarrelled with Uncle Pete today!" A half hour later the night wind fanned Judy's cheek and lifted the tendrils of hair at her temples as she kicked her horse into a lipe.

It had seemed odd to her that none of the others had thought to send word to Don Luis Morales that her uncle had been killed, but in a way she was glad of it. She had seen how close the two men were, and she liked Don Luis. He would appreciate her coming. She knew it would seem odd to Bella when she found out that Judy had saddled and ridden to the old Spaniard this late at night.

But she had wanted to get away from the house. There was nothing she could do there; it was strange how the house that had seemed warm and friendly to her only a short time ago, was now a pile of cold, ominous stone. Judy took a long breath of the cool night air. Crazy impulse or not, it felt good to be out in the dark, alone.

When she had talked to him that morning Don Luis had asked her to come and see him, and told her how to find his house. His directions had been clear, and even by moonlight she had no trouble following them.

His small stone house was set squarely on top of a rocky knoll overlooking the small green pocket of valley on the Sombbrero that they called the Vega Bonita.

Late as it was, there was a light in the house, but she decided Don Luis had fallen asleep. In spite of her effort to keep calm, her voice was unsteady.

"What's wrong with Pete? Is he sick?" he asked. "He's—he's dead. He's been murdered!" In spite of the shock in his face he set the candle down on the table with a kind of slow deliberation. "Dead? Murdered?" he repeated unbelievably. "But—how?"

"He was shot in his study while writing a letter," Judy twisted her hat between her fingers. "There's something I wanted to ask you, Don Luis. You are a good friend of Walt Hollenger's?"

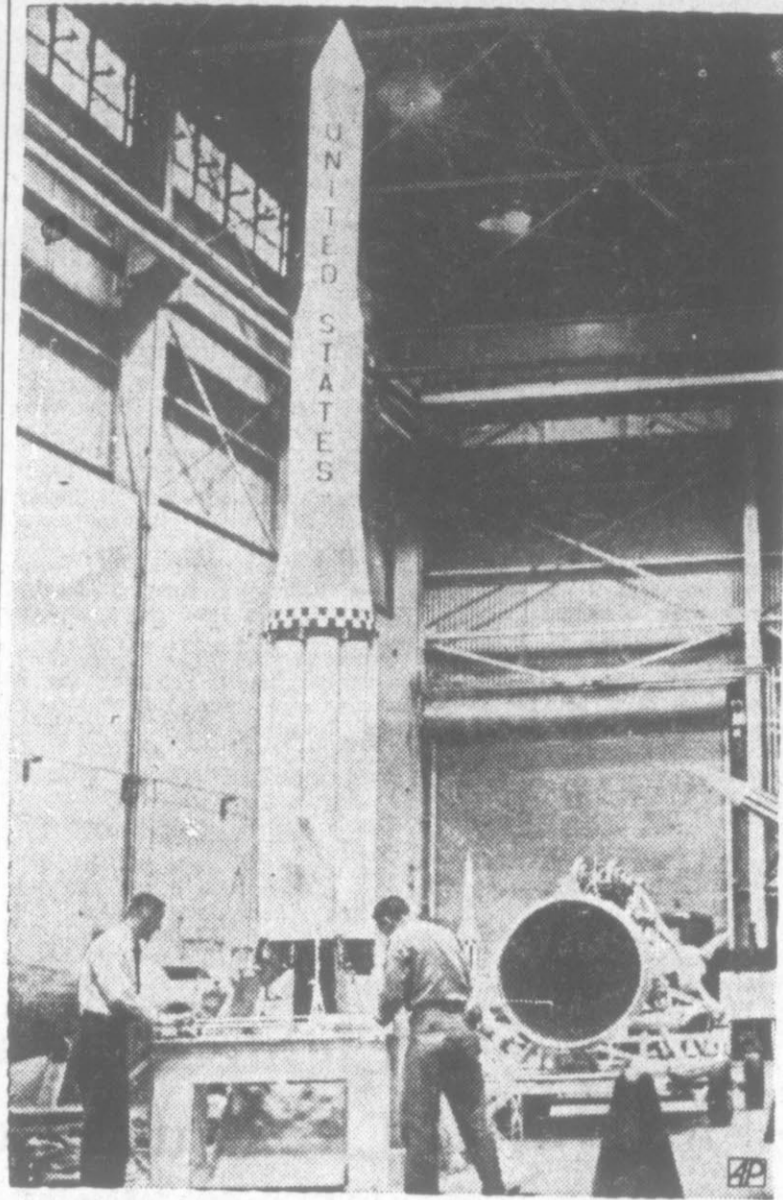

He looked at her sharply. "What has Walt to do with this?" She shook her head. "I don't know. They—that is, Dwight and Bella seem to think he did it."

"Because of the quarrel today?" "Partly that. And then, Don Luis, when he was killed he was writing a letter to you. In it he said he was afraid Walt Hollenger was a dangerous and violent man, like his father, and that since he was afraid his life was in danger, he wanted you to have the letter—to be used as you saw fit after his death. That's all he had written. The murderer interrupted him before he finished it."

She looked at Morales. He shook his white head slowly. "You don't believe Walt killed him, do you?" There was a quick lift of eagerness in her voice.

"Did Peter have a gun?" "There was one in the top drawer of his desk and the drawer was open, but he didn't have one in his hand."

Don Luis shook his head again. "No man ever really knows for

U.S. Leaf Aided By Growing Use

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Foreign Agricultural Service said today increasing world use of cigarettes is slowing a trend away from the United States as the world's largest source of leaf tobacco.

American tobacco prospects in foreign markets are being helped also, the agency said, by improved gold and dollar reserves in most countries.

An analysis of U.S. tobacco prospects in world markets was given by the service in a new report. It said American tobacco exports in 1960 are likely to be close to those of 1959, which were about 480 million pounds, American tobacco is popular in many countries as a cigarette tobacco.

"Consumption of tobacco is rising in most countries of the world," the report said. "Gains in cigarettes and to a lesser extent in cigars and cigarillos are more than offsetting declines in use of other tobacco products."

Cigarette manufacture is gaining at the rate of almost 5 per cent a year, with the world total output near two trillion pieces in 1958 — up 25 per cent from the 1951-55 average. The United States still easily leads the world in cigarette output but its proportion of the world total dropped to 24 per cent in 1958 from an average of 26 1/2 per cent in 1951-55."

Used Containers For Pizza Pies

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—When a television station failed to find some program film left on its back porch by a deliveryman, an investigation was started.

It was found that some youngsters had taken the film, which was found in fields, garbage cans and in one youngster's home. To top it off, a station official said, "The boy's mother was using the containers to bake pizza pies."

His Blood the Subject of Heart Fund Study

Medical mystery is posed by the blood of John Hageman, Toledo brakeman: It clots normally over skin cuts, but refuses to congeal in test tubes. Dr. Oscar Rainoff of Western Reserve University, left, aided by the Heart Fund, seeks to determine if "the Hageman factor" can be used to avert blood clots responsible for "heart attack."

Corporate treasurers have worked to achieve better coordination of payments and receipts. The availability of an increasing volume of money-market instruments — Treasury bills, finance company paper, etc.—has provided enlarged means for investment of temporary idle funds.

Money turnover speeds up during good times and when interest rates rise. During recessions corporate cash tends to pile up out of inventory cutting and the lack of lure of declining money rates.

As to the money supply itself, the bank holds that it was abnormally inflated during the 1930s depression and World War II. In postwar years this excess money has been drawn into active use and turning over faster. "not only financing more trade but also accommodating wage and price inflation."

Rubber and other valuable trees are increasing under supervised cultivation in Ethiopia.

Some Say Money Isn't As Tight As Claimed

By SAM DAWSON NEW YORK (AP)—Has money been as scarce and credit as tight as many contend? A couple of doubting Thomases say it hasn't been. And anyway, in the last few weeks it has been easing seasonally.

The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, which is charged with regulating the supply of cash the banks can lend, points to all the other sources of funds that can be tapped by borrowers.

New York bank economists say the way people use money and their other liquid assets plays a much more important role in making credit tight or easy than the Fed itself does.

The Fed's chairman, William McChesney Martin Jr., points to the expansion of credit and debt last year by 60 billion dollars, which he says isn't pennant. He sure what another man will or will not do," he said slowly, "but that doesn't sound like Walt Hollenger. I think I know. Walt's a fighter. Sometimes he's got a temper, but I can't see him sneaking in that house at night and killing an old, unarmed and sick man. No — it doesn't fit!"

CAMERA Angles

CAN YOU STOP MOTION at snapshot speed? Yes, if you pen or swing your camera to follow the action itself. Here's how John Gorman did it at 1-25 second to win a prize in a Ppular Photography contest.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Camera fans are full of questions from the moment they first get interested in photography. Often, the most urgent questions come when experts aren't around to answer them.

Take the typical photo amateur buying a camera or equipment. He may ask a few general questions and think he understands it all. But doesn't he wish he had the salesman handy later when he is actually loading film or trying to focus with the split-image rangefinder?

Editors of Popular Photography have been saving the most commonly asked questions for 14 years. These were turned over to Robert L. McIntyre, Chicago camera editor, who selected the choice ones and the correct answers to make "1,000 Photo Questions Answered by Experts" (Ziff-Davis). This can take the place of the salesman who isn't handy or the friend who knows everything or the instruction sheet which was tossed away.

Just about every possible category you might have a question about is covered—cameras, lenses and shutters, films, filters and exposures, portraits, printing and enlarging, movie making, outdoor and indoor picture taking. There are also chapters on shooting stereo and travel photography, camera trickery, slide shows and the legal side.

Here are a few questions picked at random from the book: 1. Are the taking and viewfinding lenses of a twin-lens reflex camera exactly alike? 2. What can I do if I want to take pictures when the light is too dim to shoot with my box-type camera? 3. What is an f-number? 4. Should silicone-treated cloth or paper, used in cleaning eye-glasses, be used in cleaning lenses? 5. What is the difference between the three types of flash synchronization in use today?

Here are the answers: 1. The taking and viewfinding lenses of a twin-lens reflex are not necessarily exactly alike. The viewfinding lens sometimes has a wider aperture in order to give a brighter image and it need not be as fully corrected as the taking lens. However, both must have exactly the same focal length.

2. There are three things you can do to shoot pictures in dim light with a box-type camera: (a) increase the light by using flash or setting up floodlamps; (b) use extremely fast film and give more than normal development time in processing; (c) make a time exposure with the camera mounted on a firm support.

3. An f-number is used to calibrate the aperture settings of most lenses. Theoretically, any two lenses will form equally bright images at the same f-number. The number is derived by dividing the focal length of the lens by the diameter of the aperture. Thus a 4-inch lens with a 1-inch aperture would be rated as f-4.

4. Silicone-treated cloth or paper should never be used on coated lenses. The surface coating of a lens is porous and will take up silicone, changing its optical properties and making it less effective.

5. The three types of flash synchronization are: (a) Class X, for electronic flash, with a delay so small it is considered as zero. Contact is made as soon as the shutter is fully open. b) Class F, for gas-filled flashbulbs, provides a 5-millisecond delay since these bulbs reach their peak 5 milliseconds after contact is made. c) Class M, for most other lamps, has a delay of 20 milliseconds.

Drove 51 Miles On One Gallon
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Driving nonstop and averaging just over 25 miles an hour, M. P. Thomas of Corona Del Mar, Calif., got 51.281 miles on one gallon in economy tests at the Daytona International Speedway. He drove a Rambler American.

Bill Stroppe of Long Beach, Calif., did the next best in the three-day tests ending Wednesday. He got 44.614 miles a gallon in a Ford Falcon.

Tobacco Tips

By S. J. WEEKS
Pitt County Tobacco Agent

The county wide soil test drive, which was conducted in Pitt County from November 27 through December 15, 1959, revealed some interesting information concerning the soil on which tobacco is to be grown in 1960. To date, we have received reports on a total of 449 tobacco fields.

82.40 per cent of these fields were very high in phosphorus content. A total of 426 of the 440 fields were either high or very high in phosphorus. 87.53 per cent of the fields were classified as medium to very high in potash. Generally, in soils with a medium or above level of potash not over 110-120 pounds of actual potash was recommended.

One of the more interesting observations is that 35.86 per cent of the fields to be planted in tobacco need at least 1000 pounds of lime per acre. Only eight farms out of 161 needing lime required more than 1000 pounds per acre for the production of tobacco. A total of 424 fields showed a pH or soil acidity index in the desirable range for tobacco production. All fields with a pH below 5.2 showed the recommendation of at least 1000 pounds of lime per acre. In addition to the fields with a low pH some fields had a low amount of calcium content. For these fields the use of lime was suggested even when the pH was in the desirable range.

In addition to correcting the soil pH and calcium content of the soil, the use of lime improves the soil in other ways. The bacteria aid in decomposing organic matter and releasing nitrogen. The availability of phosphorus and some other elements is increased when lime is used. Another beneficial effect of raising the soil pH by liming is to reduce the solubility of elements such as aluminum and iron. Under extremely acid conditions the concentration of these elements in soluble form may be great enough to cause reduced plant growth.

Dolomitic limestone is recommended when lime is needed. In addition to calcium, dolomitic limestone supplies magnesium which is essential for plant growth. Calcitic limestone and marl supply only calcium.

Rocketeer Says No Doubt But U.S. Is 'Second'
ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—Dr. Ernest Stuhlinger, a member of Dr. Werner Von Braun's rocket team, said Wednesday there was no question that the United States is second to the Soviet Union in missile and space fields.

"Our national space effort needs men, not committee members," he said in a speech at Washington University. "It needs doers, not talkers. It needs decision, not half-hearted and controversial opinions."

"The way out of this dilemma is not only through a higher budget, but through a different attitude."

Dr. Stuhlinger said the Von Braun team, now under the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, will attempt four more satellite launchings this year.

The Student Council Association met Tuesday morning with SCA Pres. Linda Smith presiding. The minutes were read by the secretary, Linda Clark. The main topic of discussion was the hall patrol system. The president and SCA advisor, Principal Warren, urged members to be conscious of their duties and responsibilities to the school and reminded them that the purpose of the hall patrol system is to prevent unnecessary noise in the halls, and to keep order.

FAR NORTH ROUNDUP

Reindeer are the cattle of Lapland, the bleak, barren land that stretches across the northern part of Norway, Sweden and Finland. From them the Lapp gets his tent, his blanket, part of his clothing, and his food.

Some of the reindeer wander wild, but others are herded like cattle on our western plains. They feed on mosses and lichens that cling to rocks and trees, visible above the snow that blankets the land for most of the year.

For the Lapps the most exciting time of the year is when they round up the reindeer from the snowy mountain pastures for the annual redivision among their owners. The big roundup is called the "Vendemia." It is a lasso-swinging operation in a setting of glistening white. The herdsman sing as they work.

Not only do the short, sturdy Lapps separate their respective herds into work animals and those destined for slaughter, but they also make this the occasion for their annual reunion with friends and relatives after long isolation in the snowy wastes some 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle.

PROUD LAPP. Standing in the midst of his reindeer herd, a Lapp herdsman holds a young reindeer by the antlers.

LASSOING LAPP. With perfect aim, a Lapp herdsman snares a reindeer during annual roundup.

A reindeer calf is held for ear-marking. Each herd owner has his own ear markings.

Bunching and running together, these reindeer are being driven into an enclosure after roundup.

Roundup time is happy occasion for reunion of friends and relatives after long isolation in the snowy wastes.

ECC BAND—Members of the East Carolina College Concert Band are hard at work practicing for their annual winter concert to be given Friday night at 8:00 in McGinnis Auditorium. Earl Slocum of the University of North Carolina will be guest conductor at the program. Saturday night, high school band members attending the Eastern Division of the All-State Band Clinic, to be held at the college Friday and Saturday, will present a concert in Wright Auditorium at 8:00. No charge will be made either night. Next week the ECC Band will go on its seventh annual tour, traveling to South Carolina to play several concerts, and ending the trip next Friday in Raleigh.

E. Carolina College Concert Band In Annual Winter Program Friday

The East Carolina College Concert Band will appear in its annual winter program Friday night 8 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium. Playing under the direction of Herbert L. Carter of the faculty, the ensemble will present outstanding selections for the band by leading composers and arrangers.

The concert will be a special attraction of the Eastern Division of the All-State Band Clinic, which will be in session on the campus during the weekend and will bring to the college more than a hundred high school instrumentalists, band directors, and teachers of music.

The East Carolina College Concert Band will follow its concert here with its seventh annual tour, beginning Wednesday, Feb. 10. The tour will take the group to Hartsville, Bishopville, Sumter, Columbia, and Camden, South Carolina, and to Hamlet, Lumberton, and Raleigh, North Carolina.

Included on Friday's program here will be the Chester Overture by William Schuman; Elsa's Procession to the Cathedral from Wagner's Lohengrin, in an arrangement by the noted composer and arranger Lucien Cailliet; Praeludium and Allegro by Vittorio Giannini, a recent visitor on the East Carolina campus; and other selections by well-known composers.

Soloists on the program will be Gayle Eaker of Drexel, N.C., sophomore at East Carolina, who will play the Allegro con spirito from Johann Nepomuk Hummel's Trumpet Concerto, and Steven

Clements, junior from Raleigh, N.C., who will appear in Robert Leist's Timpati. The Hummel work belongs to one of the most brilliant periods in the history of music, the late Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries. The composer was a student of Mozart, a protegee of Haydn, a friend of Beethoven, and a teacher of Czerny. Miss Eaker, who will perform the movement from the concerto, is a pupil of Thomas Miller of the college music faculty. Leist's Timpati calls for a full band accompaniment and an outstanding solo part for three tympans. The world demands considerable technique on the part of the performer and is characterized by difficult tempo changes. The soloist, Mr. Clements, is a pupil of Andrew Preston of the music faculty. Other numbers on the program are Intermezzo by Donald Bryce Thompson, contemporary composer; J. Mark Quinn's Portrait of the Land, a painting of America in musical terms; Arioso by Clifton Williams, a modern work which builds from a soft beginning to a stirring climax; and the colorful Procession of Nobles from Rimsky-Korsakov's Mlada.

Saturday night Feb. 6, the All-Star Band of the Eastern Division of the All-State Band Clinic will appear in a concert under the direction of Earl Slocum of the University of North Carolina department of music. The program will take place at 8 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. Both concerts are open to the public.

No Objections To Probe Of National Park Service

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP)—A call for a congressional investigation and a National Park Service official's reply that "we have no objections to being investigated" are the latest developments in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park dispute.

A resolution by the Swain County N.C. Board of Commissioners protesting that the park service had no plans for completing a federally-sponsored Bryson City-Fontana road set off the latest developments.

Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-NC) said Wednesday night he would insist that Congress investigate to find why North Carolina failed to get "its rightful share" of funds in the development of the park.

Meanwhile, in Washington, Director Conrad L. Wirth of the National Park Service said plans have been made for early construction of the Bryson City-Fontana road in Western North Carolina. Wirth revealed this after being told of the commissioner's resolution.

Wirth said the park service has put "every cent that has been appropriated" into the Great Smoky Mountain park. "We have no objections to being investigated by Congress," he added. "In fact, we'd welcome it."

Jordan visited the park boundary Monday where the state has built a 2 1/2 mile road designed to be carried on by the National Park Service. The senator agreed with the Swain commissioners, who asked the North Carolina National Park, Parkway and Forests Development Commission to seek the congressional probe.

The senator said, "I will insist Congress do everything and anything that is necessary to see that the National Park Service keeps its commitments. (and) find out why we have not had our share of funds on rightly and obligated projects."

The sprawling Great Smoky Mountains National Park covers areas in both North Carolina and Tennessee.

Fuel-Laden Jet Tanker Crashes Killing 6 Men

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — A fuel-laden jet tanker plane spun out of control on takeoff from Walker Air Force Base Wednesday. It crashed into two sister ships, some parked cars and a hangar, killing six men.

Two other men were missing. The Air Force planned to sift the ashes of the hangar today in another search for bodies.

Five of the dead were aboard the four-engine KC135. They were S. Sgt. George W. Short, Bell Gardens, Calif.; 1st Lt. James J. Miller, Woodbury, N.J.; Maj. James F. Kelleher, Geneva, N.Y.; Maj. James W. McCormick, Homer City, Pa.; and Maj. William L. Burke, 40, of Flint, Mich., the instructor-pilot.

Identities of the sixth dead man, and the two missing men, were withheld until next of kin are notified. Flames which engulfed the 4 1/2 million dollar tankers were fed by tons of jet fuel, triggered by exploding magnesium flares.

RESOLUTION IN MEMORY OF JAMES BURTON JAMES Adopted by Pitt County Bar Association

THAT WHEREAS, on November 2, 1960, James Burton James, familiarly known to his friends as Burt, was called by the Great Master from the sphere in which he had been active for half a century into the light which exists beyond the shadow of death, and those of us who were his friends and practiced at the Bar with him have suffered in his passing a distinct personal loss and desire to make note of our esteem and long-continued friendship.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

FIRST: That the passing of our friend and brother after fifty years of active practice at the Bar, during which time he was recognized as a leader of his profession and enjoyed many positions of honor and esteem, including, among others, the presidency of the Pitt County Bar Association, presidency of the State Bar, and membership of the Judicial Council, has left a vacancy which the ensuing years may never fill.

SECOND: That in addition to his recognition as a leader of the Bar, in token of the esteem and honor with which he was recognized, he served the City of Greenville as mayor; he occupied the position of Chairman of the School Board of Greenville, during which time the growth of our schools, both in buildings and in recognized educational progress, was phenomenal.

THIRD: That for many years he was an active member and leader in the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, enjoying the position of steward and superintendent of its Sunday School.

FOURTH: That as a lawyer he enjoyed a large practice, was recognized as a counselor and advocate of marked ability. He never swerved from the high principles of ethics so necessary in the making of a true lawyer.

FIFTH: He was a devoted husband and his companionship with his beloved wife and their devotion to one another was indeed ideal. He was a devoted father and no sacrifice was too great for him to make for the happiness and welfare of his children and friends.

SIXTH: That in the memory of all of us he shall continue to live as an honest public servant, as a strong advocate, a wise counselor, a devoted husband, a fond father, and a loyal friend.

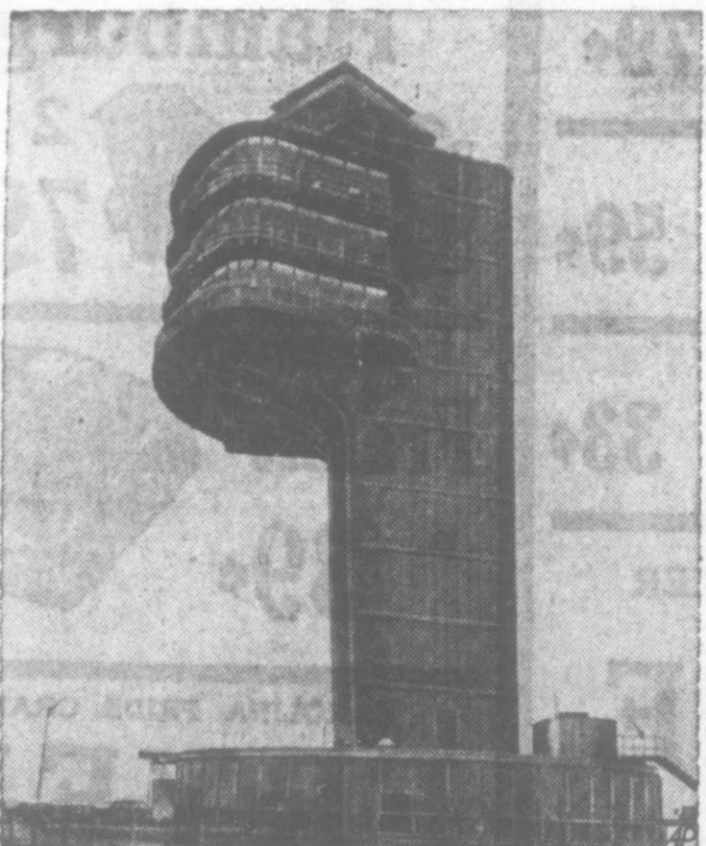

This Resolution unanimously adopted by the Pitt County Bar Association, this the 12th day of January, 1960.

Elections Could Start Civil War

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP)—Bolivia's presidential campaign, already marred by almost three dozen violent deaths, including a lynching, could explode into civil war.

Two men — bitter political and personal enemies — are engaged in a desperate struggle for the presidency of this landlocked South American nation. They are Victor Paz Estenssoro, president from 1952 to 1956, and Walter Guevara Arze, now foreign minister in President Hernan Siles Zuazo's cabinet.

General elections will be the

REPORT EARTHQUAKE

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Sydney's Riverview Observatory recorded a severe earthquake today about 1,100 miles north northeast of Sydney — probably in the Solomon Islands region.

first Sunday in May.

Paz Estenssoro threw his hat into the ring some time ago and is campaigning vigorously. He is the chief and founder of the country's only major political party — the Nationalist Revolutionary Movement (MNR) and therefore already in control of many votes.

Guevara, a square-jawed revolutionist, broke from the MNR almost six months ago and organized his own supporters.

Both factions are extreme leftists. Neither would go out of its way to court U.S. friendship. Bolivia is in one of the most desperate economic positions in the world and depends almost entirely on U.S. aid for its survival. Its whole economy is based on tin.

Guevara has said privately he would resign soon and really start rounding up support. He said he would attend the MNR party convention Feb. 15 but he believes it is already rigged in favor of Paz Estenssoro. As a result, he may call a convention of his own faction.

There are those here who feel armed peasants in the mining districts might decide to shoot it out rather than let the votes decide.

Some fear the revolution-prone country may be in for a bloodbath.

American Ballet Company To Appear Here Monday

The American Ballet Center Company, which will appear at East Carolina College Monday, Feb. 8, will be headed by eight of America's most sought-after young dance stars. The company has as its artistic director Robert Joffrey, brilliant choreographer; creator of the famed American Ballet Center in New York City; and head of the Robert Joffrey Theatre Ballet.

The company, including 25 dancers and an orchestra, will appear here under the sponsorship of the East Carolina College Entertainment Committee as one of the chief attractions to be offered here during the present school year. The program is scheduled for 8:15 in the Wright building.

Monday's program at the college will be made up of works by the world's foremost choreographers, including Balanchine, Joffrey, and others. Featured will be classic, romantic, dramatic, and comic ballets. It will open with a classic "white ballet" and will include excerpts from the modern school.

Leading soloists with the company have appeared with some of the renowned ballet groups, such as the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, the American Ballet Theatre, the New York City Ballet, and the New York City Opera Ballet.

Stars of the American Ballet Center Company are Jonathan Watts and Dianne Concor, on leave from the New York City Ballet; Rochelle Zeide of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo; Paul Sutherland of the American Ballet Theatre; Beatrice Tompkins of the San Francisco, New York City, and Robert Joffrey Theatre ballet companies; Gerald Arpino, principal male dancer of the Robert Joffrey Theatre Ballet; Françoise Martinet of the Folies Bergere, Radio City Music Hall, and

New York City Opera Ballet; and Nels Jorgensen of the Boston Arts Festival and television productions.

The company, described as a "brilliant new ballet company with an exciting all-new production," is now on its first trans-commercial tour. One of the top touring attractions of the current season, it is receiving the acclaim of critics and is being given an enthusiastic response by audiences.

BALLET COMPANY has experienced stars.

Mikoyan Visiting Cuba On Friendship Mission

HAVANA (AP) — Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan, an old revolutionary himself, arrives today in the revolutionary Cuba of Fidel Castro on a trade and friendship mission.

The Soviet Union's top traveling salesman has 750 tons of visual propaganda — a Soviet exposition — to help him succeed.

Mikoyan's visit is expected to take in far more than the announced purpose — to swing open the gates to the scientific, technical and cultural exhibit. It is the same one that was held in New York and Mexico City last year.

U.S. Officials in Washington look for Mikoyan to make propaganda hay as a result of the low ebb in American-Cuban relations. They say the 64-year-old Soviet leader may be carrying a briefcase loaded with trade offers, since Castro has indicated he will deal with Moscow. These might propose Soviet technical aid, or an exchange of Soviet agricultural machinery for Cuban sugar.

Another possibility is that he might push for a renewal of Soviet-Cuban diplomatic relations. They were broken off in 1952 by dictator Fulgencio Batista, who accused the Soviets of stuffing their diplomatic pouches with propaganda material.

Mikoyan will open the exhibits Saturday. The length of his stay has not been announced but he is expected to meet with Castro and members of the Prime Minister's Cabinet.

National French Contest In April

DAVIDSON — The annual National French Contest sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of French will be held this spring during the week of April 4-9, it is announced by Dr. A. V. Goldiere of Davidson College, North Carolina Chapter Chairman of the contest. All students of French in public, private and parochial schools are eligible.

Standard, printed, objective examinations in two parts will be given in the schools by the teachers during the scheduled week. It is recommended by the national chairman that wherever possible, especially in cities where there is more than one school participating, contest centers be organized for administering the examinations at one time to all students.

The divisions are as follows: French I-1st or 2nd semester of first year French; French II-1st or 2nd semester of second year French; French III-1st or 2nd semester of third year French; and French IV-1st or 2nd semester of fourth year French. The examination is the same in each division for either semester.

A certificate will be awarded by the AATF to the outstanding student of French in each school participating in the contest. Medals, college scholarships, book and magazine subscriptions, records, etc. are awarded at the chapter, regional and national levels.

Nike-Zeus Test Rocket Fired; Proves Success

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — A Nike-Zeus test rocket has been fired successfully and then purposely destroyed before it left the northern limit of this southern New Mexico test range.

The Zeus firing Wednesday was a success in two respects, the Army reported.

The first was that of the test missile itself. The second was the first evacuation of 32 ranch families from a 40-mile extension of the missile range.

The families have agreed to leave their homes for 12-hour periods on 20 different days this year so an additional 1,600 miles could be used for the test range, and there would be no danger if a missile strayed.

ARRESTING SPIES

BERLIN (AP) — Three more arrests were announced today in the investigation of a Communist spy ring working within the West Berlin police force. The seizure of a former policeman, 59-year-old Erich Lieske, and two women employees at police stations brought to 12 the number jailed. One of the women is the wife of a policeman arrested in a roundup last month.

Joanne Woodward Has Retirement In Mind

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Retirement for Oscar winner Joanne Woodward? She says it's likely. "I don't see any other course than a gradual retirement from acting," she says. "I won't be separated from my husband (Paul Newman) and it gets too complicated to try to adjust my movie plans to his."

Last summer she was able to do "The Fugitive Kind" in New York while he was doing "Sweet Bird of Youth" on Broadway. Their situation is ideal now; both are working in "From the Terrace." But he next goes to Israel for "Exodus," and that will mean a long absence from film work for her.

Wouldn't she miss acting? Not necessarily, she said. She has other engrossing interests, such as her study of psychiatry and Hebrew. I asked how her studio, 20th Century-Fox, feels about her probable retirement.

"I don't think they're ready to accept it," said Joanne with scant concern. Alfred Hitchcock says his current "Psycho" is his first real horror picture. Only one of his films came close. That was "The Lodger" (1928). "But it was more of a suspense film about whether the man who lived upstairs was really Jack the Ripper."

He has a diabolical scheme for producing a real thriller: "When the picture starts, the audience is sitting in a well-heated theater. Then I would have the manager

Lay Paralyzed In Her Bathtub For 35 Hours

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — A 74-year-old widow lay paralyzed in a bathtub for 35 hours before rescue came Wednesday night.

Eleanor Strachan was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in serious condition. Doctors said she apparently suffered a stroke.

A visiting grandson alarmed by her failure to answer the door kicked out a window and discovered Mrs. Strachan. He called firemen.

Mrs. Strachan said she had been in the tub since 9 a.m. Tuesday. Her bathroom was kept warm by a portable electric heater she had taken there with her. She apparently was unconscious part of the time.

"I tried calling over and over," she said, "but I couldn't yell very loud. More than anything else, I prayed."

$1,000 IN TIPS

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Viet Nam has sent $1,000 for tips to hotel employees and others who attended him during his recent visit to Formosa. The money will be distributed by the South Viet Nam Embassy.

Provided With Man-made Aorta

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Santiago Corona, 60, remained in critical condition Wednesday night after a team of surgeons equipped him with an artificial aorta.

The doctors gave him a fair chance of survival. Physicians and surgeons at Robert B. Green Hospital replaced about 30 inches of Corona's aorta, a major blood vessel, with a braided dacron tube.

Victim of aneurysm in the arch of the vessel, Corona underwent a refrigeration process before surgery was possible. His aorta ruptured after he entered the hospital.

Three surgeons and five doctors performed the operation. The Puritan Parliamant banned Christmas carols being sung in England in 1647.

East Carolina At Wilson In North State Cage Tilt

By JOHNNY HUDSON
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina and Atlantic Christian strike up an old family feud tonight in Wilson when the two lock horns in an important North State tussle.

Both coaches, ECC's Earl Smith and ACC's Jack McComas, will dig deep into their bag of tricks, hoping to come up with a victory. Both clubs need a win bad but for different reasons.

IKE RIDDICK

Jerry Fritz who ran into scholastic difficulties. The Bulldogs have been looking for a winning combination since the loss of Fritz but have been impressive in only a few games.

Smith and his club will be in quest of their seventh victory in the last eight games. They are expected to carry a large following with them to Wilson.

Faced by Ike Riddick, East Carolina has been one of the hottest shooting clubs in the loop this season, averaging 81 points per game and hitting 47 per cent of their shots from the floor.

Riddick, an All-State candidate, has been the leading point-getter and is near the top of the ladder in the North State scoring race.

Through Monday's game with Appalachian, Riddick has scored 279 points and is averaging 23.7 points per game.

Two other Pirate starters are also hitting in the doubles figures. Cotton Clayton, having a tremendous freshman year, has a 16 point average and Don Smith is 13.8.

The other two starters just gained their berths since the Christmas holidays but have been coming along fast. Lacy West, freshman forward, is 9.1 and Benny Bowes, sophomore center, has hit the nets at a 6.8 pace.

Atlantic Christian, 12-11 for the season, will start with forwards Herb Ward and Dale Pillingame, center Ernie Oden and guards Bobby Dunn and Dick Knox.

Tonight's game will be played in the Wilson Community Center and starting time for the varsity game will be 8:00. The junior varsity squads of the two teams will meet in a preliminary.

Riddick Doubles Scoring Average

By KEN ALTYA
CHARLOTTE (AP)—Help may be on the way for Clemson's battered basketball forces — if Coach Press Maravich can hold out a while longer.

When Daniel High of Clemson whipped Liberty for its 13th victory of an unbeaten season the other night Ronnie Maravich, son of the Clemson coach, scored 29 points. He's a junior.

Daniel also won the "B" team game and another Maravich, Pete was high scorer with 23 points.

The basketball season brings a batch of statistics, but among the most interesting are those carried as a footnote in the column of Johnny Martin of the Anderson, S.C., Daily Mail.

Johnny reports, in "Martin's Basketball Meter", that in 4 1/2 years he's seen 288 college games, 318 high school contests, traveled 40,597 miles and seen 192,563 dribbles.

Mercifully, he's not included games he's seen on TV.

South Carolina's new basketball coach, Bob Stevens, is finding out that coaching the Gamecocks is no task for a fellow who can't take a little excitement.

His Birds have been involved in eight games decided by six or less points. They've split four one-point games, including one that they lost in overtime.

Al Bunge of Maryland, ACC basketball scoring leader for several weeks, is carrying quite an offensive burden for the Terps.

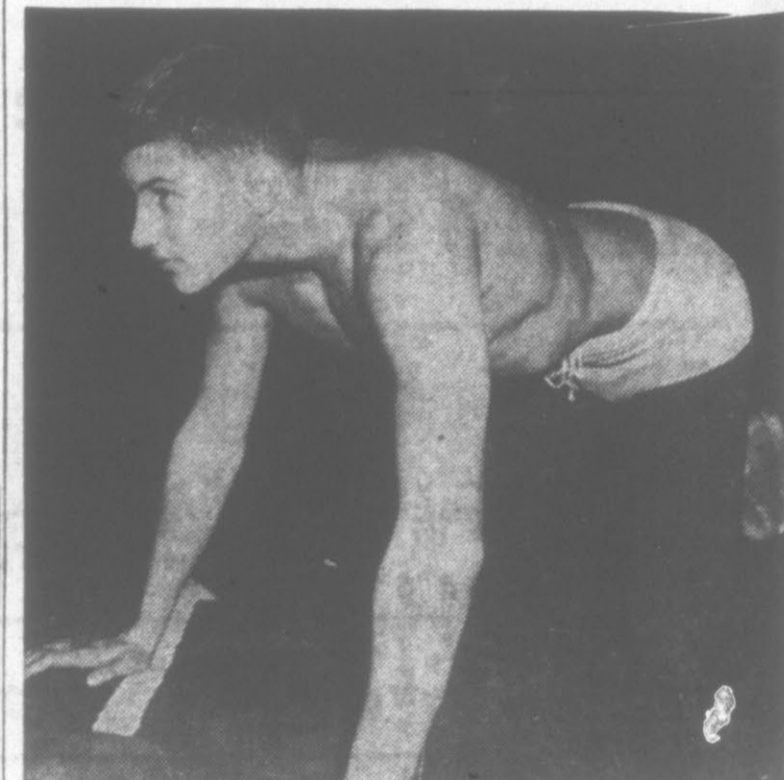

After Bunge's 19.3 average through 12 games you have to go all the way to 18th place to find the next Maryland scorer in the latest official listings. Soph Paul Jelius is No. 2 Terp at 11.2.

Ike Riddick of East Carolina is more than doubling his scoring pace of a year ago.

The Greenville senior averaged only 11 points last season, but his current 23.7 has him well up among North State Conference leaders.

There's a 6-10 high school cager up in Connecticut, has at least one Atlantic Coast Conference coach interested.

Has a long name, too — Ed Slomcenski.

RUGGED MATMAN—Senior Jeff Fountain has lost only one match for the Rose High wrestling team this year.

Last Year Of Tennis For Pancho Gonzales

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Pancho Gonzales says this is his last year of bigtime tennis but one thing could lure him back to the courts — an open tournament.

"If, as they say, we have an open championship in 1961 I'd break my legs trying to get in shape to win it," the swarthy pro king said in a brief stopover here Wednesday.

"It's a matter of pride. I would like to finish off my career by winning the first big open. I would play only if I were convinced I could win. Then I'd crawl back in the hole."

It's not that Pancho, at 31, is getting too old or that pressure is becoming too heavy. He is in the best shape and playing the sharpest tennis of his career.

"I've toned down — I weigh only 182 compared with my usual 187 — and I feel great," he said. "But I don't figure on waiting until I'm over the hill. I have other plans."

One of these plans is marriage in June to Madelyn Darrow, striking 23-year-old model. Pancho admits that Madelyn prefers that he quit the tour.

"I'm going to school, learning real estate," he said. "I plan to set up a real estate office on the Pacific Coast."

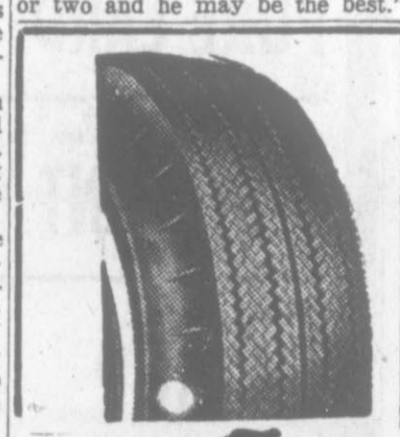

Gonzales' playing companions are amazed at the change that has come over him in recent months.

Once a surly individualist who insisted on travelling alone and who was constantly feuding with his boss, Jack Kramer, the pro king has become "one of the boys."

He travels with the rest of the troupe and joins them in friendly jibes. Main target of his verbal darts is the tour rookie, Alex Olmedo. He has only nice things to say about Kramer.

Who is likely to succeed him? "Well, Olmedo is really surprising," Pancho said. "He's great. But he needs experience and I think he must improve his speed. He's not as good as Lew Hoard and Ken Rosewall were when they turned pro. But he has tremendous potential. Give him a year or two and he may be the best."

Fresh Snow For Olympic Teams

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Fresh snow in the Sierra today greets the first large foreign contingent arriving for the Winter Olympic Games.

Seventy-three persons, from Italy, Austria, France and Switzerland, were due to arrive by charter airliner at Reno.

Wednesday's all-day snowfall left an estimated foot of new snow in the valley.

Writers Fail To Add Names To Hall Of Fame

BOSTON (AP) — The selection procedure for the Hall of Fame appeared headed for critical review today. Reason: The Baseball Writers Assn. of America, scattering votes among 129 players, failed to add any names to the immortal scrolls for the second straight time.

As top man in a losing field, former Cincinnati and New York Giants outfielder Edd Roush mustered 54.3 per cent of the record 269 ballots cast.

Under present rules, 75 per cent is necessary for election which this year would have been 202.

Close behind the 146 Roush received were 143 for outfielder Edgar (Sam) Rice and 142 for south-paw pitcher Eppa Rixey. They were the only candidates to poll more than 100.

At present, 10-year members of the BBWA vote biennially — the even years — for players who stopped playing not more than 50 nor less than five years from the time of balloting.

On the odd years a special committee set up by the heads of baseball is empowered to select players from back beyond the 30-year limit.

Two years ago when the writers failed to elect a player from among 145 candidates on 266 ballots. Commissioner Ford Frick said he was pleased by the outcome.

But Wednesday, Frick and Paul Kerr, secretary of the board of directors of the Hall of Fame, expressed disappointment at the outcome.

Hy Hurwitz, secretary-treasurer of the writers, who conducted the vote tabulation and announcement was unhappy over the results and made it plain the association might take under consideration the possibility of revamping the present voting system.

The most recent additions to the Hall of Fame were Joe Cronin and Hank Greenberg in 1956 — bringing the total to 83.

This year, back of Roush, Rice and Rixey, among the leaders were Burlingame Grimes (92), Jim Bottomley (89), Red Ruffing (86), Red Faber (83) with Luke Appling, Kiki Cuyler and Hack Wilson tied at 72 each.

Among those eligible for the first time, former slugger Johnny Mize was top vote-getter with 45 followed by Marv Marion with 37.

NAIA Champs Meet U. Of Florida In Swim Contest Here Tonight

A national upset and added prestige to East Carolina and the NAIA will be at stake tonight in Memorial Pool when Coach Ray Martinez and his defending national champions take on unbeaten U. of Florida.

The meet, which is to start at 8:00, is considered the number one attraction on the Pirate swim schedule this year. Although the visitors are favored, the meet has been billed as one that could go either way.

With recent victories over U. of Georgia, and Georgia Tech, the Gators have a solid club that has been in the national swim spotlight often. Last year, Florida put the skids to East Carolina and also ended the long winning streak of the University of North Carolina.

East Carolina gets the first shot at the visitors tonight and Carolina will get its chance for revenge on Saturday.

The Pirate mermen have dropped a couple of meets to Carolina this season and have defeated VMI, Southern Conference champion.

Martinez, who has already produced two NAIA championship clubs, readily admits that his team is not solid in depth but has some outstanding individual performers.

Jack McCann, breaststroker, has not been beaten this year and has suffered only a couple of defeats in his collegiate competition in this event.

Bob Kingrey and Glen Dyer have ranked among the best in diving this season although Florida reportedly is strong in this event.

Co-Captains Jim Meads and Jake Smith are the top freestylers for the Pirates. Both were on the championship club last season.

Others that have been stand-outs this season include Tommy Carroll, Jeff Faucette, Butch Edwards, and Tommy Tucker.

Tickets have been on sale since Monday for the meet and will be available at the door tonight. A special section has been roped off for local merchants and fans. Starting time for the meet is at 8:00.

Carolina Causes Stir In Rankings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
North Carolina, thanks to a big boost from Wake Forest, sits firmly atop the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball standings today.

The Tar Heels, ranked 17th in the nation, stopped Maryland 75-66 Wednesday night for the fifth straight conference win without a setback. Meanwhile, Wake Forest bounced into second place, upending Duke 80-63.

The top four conference teams saw action against each other and after the smoke had settled here's how they stand:

North Carolina 5-0 and 10-3 overall is first, Wake Forest (7-2 and 12-4) second, Duke (5-2 and 9-5) third and Maryland (4-2 and 9-4) fourth. Before last night's action, both Duke and Maryland had only one loss on their ACC record and could have moved to first with a North Carolina loss.

Wake Forest made the biggest leap, from fourth to second. Meanwhile, Duke and Maryland dropped a notch from their second and third positions.

Playing before 14,000 fans at College Park, Md., North Carolina, marking the return of Doug Moe, took an early lead and never trailed after the first seven minutes.

Moe, the Tar Heel standout of a year ago who sat out the last semester following scholastic troubles, popped in 11 points. However, it was York Larese, the 6-foot-4 junior from New York, who propelled the Tar Heels with 25 points. Close on Larese's heels was big Lee Shaffer, who added 23.

Maryland's Al Bunge, the ACC's top scorer, contributed 21 points—almost two above his 19.3 average. Paul Jelus, the sharp-shooting Terp sophomore, added 15 in the losing cause.

The win was North Carolina's fifth straight, and snapped a three game Maryland victory string.

Wake Forest's two starting sophomores—Lenny Chappell and Billy Packer—contributed 38 points between them to Duke's downfall. However, it was Chappell, a 6-foot-8 240 pounder, who was the big cog, scoring 27 points and taking off 23 rebounds.

Packer had 11 points, Winston Wiggins 15, and Dave Budd 13 for the Demon Deacons.

John Frye, Duke's 5-foot-11 junior, counted 13 to pace the Blue Devils. Chappell was assigned to Duke's leading scorer, Carroll Youngkin, and limited him to one field goal and eight points.

Wake Forest, bouncing back from two losses last weekend on a swing into Ohio, dominated the backboards. The Demon Deacons, again with Chappell leading the way, pulled down 60 to only 40 rebounds for Coach Vic Bubas' Duke.

After Wednesday night's two game flurry, ACC teams are idle tonight. Thursday night Virginia visits South Carolina, seeking the Gamecocks' sixth place spot in the ACC standings.

Bethel Takes Third Place In County Race

BETHEL — Bethel's Indians pushed Ayden's Tornadoes out of third place in the Pitt County Conference basketball chase and took it for themselves Tuesday night here by downing the visitors 60-45.

With southpaw forward John Smith leading the way Walter Latham's cagers jumped into a four-point lead at the end of the first period and breezed through their 10th PCC win of the season. Smith dropped in 14 points; Dewar followed with 11. Mills led with Ayden effort with 14 markers.

In the doubleheader's opener, Bethel's girls captured their third conference battle, 62-57, and climbed into seventh-place tie with Chocod.

Cobb paced the Bethel lassies with a sparkling 30-point performance. Highsmith and Chesson followed with 15 each. Twenty-three points by Braxton and 19 by Rouse paced Ayden's girls in a losing cause.

Bethel travels to Farmville tomorrow night for a conference encounter there.

Athletics Hope To Be Improved

By BOB ELLIOTT
SAN DIEGO (AP)—Since I am new to the league, it is going to be somewhat difficult for me to evaluate my own players on the Kansas City club let alone those of the other clubs.

The front office has done everything possible to improve the Athletics and make the club a more interesting one for the fans to watch. And I think everyone of the trades we made will help us in 1960.

Since the close of last season, we have purchased pitcher Bob Trowbridge from Milwaukee, acquired pitcher Tom Acker from Cincinnati and catcher Pete Daley from Boston, pitcher Dick Hall and shortstop Ken Hamlin and catcher Hank Foiles from Pittsburgh and drafted third baseman Bob Johnson out of the Detroit chain and catcher Lou Holdener from the Cleveland organization.

Added to this was the major trade that brought us outfielders Hank Bauer and Norm Siebern, pitcher Don Larsen and Marv Throneberry from the New York Yankees.

I can now see an outfield of Bauer, Bob Cerv and Bill Tuttle against lefthanded pitching and Siebern, Tuttle and Russ Snyder or Whitey Herzog. I also feel we are very much stronger in the catching department with the addition of Daley and Foiles to help Harry Chitt.

Last year's biggest disappointment seemed to be in the pitching

Tar Heels Eye Championship; Blast The Terps 75-66

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Frank McGuire's North Carolina Tar Heels have that championship look again as they head into the stretch run in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

Jan. 16 and fortified by the return of Brooklyn's Doug Moe, the Tar Heels whipped Maryland Wednesday night 75-66 to retain their hold on the ACC lead.

It was the first of 10 straight ACC games North Carolina will play this month and Moe, a 6-4, 205-pound junior, showed he'll be plenty of help the rest of the way.

It was North Carolina's first victory at Maryland in three years.

In dropping Maryland (4-2) to fourth place behind Wake Forest (7-2) and Duke (5-2), North Carolina ran its winning streak to five and its overall record to 10-3.

Sophomore Len Chappell had 27 points, and grabbed 23 rebounds as Wake Forest moved into second place in the ACC with an 80-63 rout of Duke. Detroit sophomore Dave DeBusschere set a school scoring mark in a 65-58 victory over Marquette, and Providence and Dayton boosted their winning streaks in other top games.

Providence (12-3) won its ninth straight, 65-53 over Brown, and Dayton (16-3) ran its streak to eight by whipping Miami of Ohio 72-60.

Southern Methodist pulled into a tie with idle Texas A&M for the Southwest conference lead by cuffing TCU 79-73 and 11th-rated Miami of Florida made it 18-2 with a 74-73 squeaker over Tampa. Toledo (14-2), ranked 12th in the nation, tied Ohio U. for the Mid-American conference lead by cruising past Western Michigan 67-48.

William and Mary, the team that axed West Virginia's 56-game Southern conference streak, routed The Citadel 79-65. Xavier of Ohio's scored a 52-45 victory over touring Portland (Ore.).

The service academies turned in a sweep, with Air Force whipping Wyoming in overtime 59-54, Army nipping Albright 66-65 and Navy rallying for an 84-72 decision over Temple.

In the first racially-mixed sport's event in Louisiana in four years, Loyola of New Orleans beat Chicago Loyola 66-64. Clarence Red and Bud Dawson of Chicago Loyola were the first Negro athletes to appear against whites in Louisiana since fullback Bobby Griener played for Pitt in the 1956 Sugar Bowl football game.

By ALLAN CLINE

Associated Press Sports Writer
SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—How much will it cost of take in the Winter Olympics here Feb. 18-28?

Much depends on your bank-book, where you want to stay, and how far you have to come.

It might run over $1,000. Much less, if you watch your pennies.

There's a choice of three areas in which to find accommodations within a 50-mile radius of this Sierra valley—Reno, 50 miles east; the North Shore area of Lake Tahoe, 18 miles south; and the South Shore, 40 miles from here around the lake.

There's still time to get into Squaw Valley itself, a community of about 175 homes. About 40 still are available for rentals. The cheapest, a three-bedroom house, goes for $1,000 for the month of February.

As an example of expenses, the budget for one person, coming from New York, staying in Reno and traveling first class, might look like this:

Air fare-jet, $41.06; admission seat in the ice arena, $200; car rental for 11 days, $180; room, $154; meals, $110; total: $1,054.06.

Our traveler can get into the games for $60 with a season ticket, but that does not admit him to the arena. His Reno motel room is figured at $14 a day. It costs as much for one as for two in a motel during the games.

The economy-minded might make it on this budget again from New York:

Air fare-coach, $226.50; admission, $60; round trip bus fare from Reno-$6.60 daily, $72.60; meals-$6 daily, $66; room-$9 daily, $99; total: $524.10.

Again the room prices if figured for two.

Should a spectator want to get in the ice arena for one or two days, the Olympic Committee has established this daily admission schedule: $25 for each of the first five days, $15 for the next three and $25 for the final three.

Daily admission tickets to the site are $7.50. Plenty of tickets are available, both on a season or daily basis.

ECC President Keeps Eyes On Plans For Growth

DOCTOR JENKINS . . . President of East Carolina College.

IN CONFERENCE . . . with the committee on foundations at the school.

TALKING WITH STUDENTS . . . an important every-day activity.

DISCUSSING COLLEGE GROWTH . . . with a State Legislator.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

As president of East Carolina College, Dr. Leo W. Jenkins is "constantly watching the needs of the community" to do all that he possibly can to help satisfy them.

Dr. Jenkins is charged with putting into effect the policies and regulations of the Board of Trustees, who appoint the president.

The presidency is a responsible position. He is responsible for the educational programs and requires a constant program of explanation to the public, through speeches.

The job is a "very challenging one," also, according to Dr. Jenkins, "but the transition from dean and vice-president is not as great as most people think," he added. The dean, vice-president and president work very closely together and many of their duties overlap, he added.

On top of his list of "likes," Dr. Jenkins places "contact with young people. It is "very satisfying to see them develop into mature and successful citizens. "I do not like to see people who have much talent wasting it," the President noted, adding, "It is almost criminal" for a young person to be lazy or misguided and not take advantage of his talent."

As seen through the president's eyes, the future of East Carolina College is a bright one, including expansion in both the physical plant and in the academic field.

Proposals to be brought before the next General Assembly include construction of a new field house which will seat several thousand people and facilitate a much needed expansion in the intramural program; a new structure to replace the "now outdated and dangerous" Austin Building, and a new modern elementary lab school.

The lab school is a "must," Dr. Jenkins noted, because "people from all over Eastern North Carolina come here to see an ideal situation. They see teaching at it's best, but the facilities are out-dated and not impressive."

With "one of the best music programs in the state," additional facilities are needed to take care of the tremendous growth, he added. A native of Elizabeth, New Jersey, Dr. Jenkins graduated from Rutgers University with a B.S. degree and received his M.A. degree from Columbia University. His doctor's degree was awarded from New York University. He became Dean of ECC in 1947 after serving as Assistant to the Commissioner for Higher Education of the New Jersey State Department of Education. Dr. Jenkins, a Major in the U.S. Marine Corps, served on Guadalcanal, Guam and Iwo Jima during World War II and was awarded the Bronze Star and two Presidential Citations while in the Pacific.

During his spare time, Dr. Jenkins likes "building, painting portraits, fishing and following college athletics."

While speaking of athletics, Dr. Jenkins noted that, "I would be less than honest and feel guilty if I did not say I feel we are fully able to hold our own if we are admitted to the Southern "Conference."

"We would probably be at the top in swimming and baseball and near the middle in basketball, while we would be low in football. If invited to join, I would most heartily recommend that we do so, and I feel the people of Eastern North Carolina will support us generously as conference members."

Dr. Jenkins pointed out that the school, if admitted to the conference, would be the third largest institution in size.

Dr. Jenkins is married and has three sons and three daughters.

Air Force Dropping Dog-Washing Guide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has sheepishly withdrawn a nicely illustrated manual telling enlisted men how to wash the general's dog, set his table, make drinks for his guests and shine his shoes.

Members of a House Manpower subcommittee pounced on the blue-bound brochure Wednesday and read portions aloud to Stephen S. Jackson, deputy assistant secretary of defense.

Addressed to enlisted men assigned as aides or stewards to general officers, it said at one point: "Occasionally pets require baths. The best way to accomplish this is by using soap, water and plenty of elbow grease. The fingers are better than any mechanical device for applying soap. Rinse the animal thoroughly by pouring water over him, then keep him warm until he is dry."

Jackson and Brig. Gen. Albert B. Clark, Air Force personnel director, listened uncomfortably. The red-faced Clark conceded the manual was a mistake, especially the part about the dogs. Jackson said it would be withdrawn, and a new directive would prohibit "assignment of enlisted personnel to duties which contribute only to the personal benefit of officers."

But the subcommittee members made them squirm for awhile before they reached this stage. Rep. Frank J. Becker (R-NY) sarcastically quoted this from the manual: "Your contribution to the over-all mission of the Air Force can be even more important than that of an aircrew member, a mechanic, or any other individual airman."

If the manual had been written by a Communist, snorted Becker, it couldn't have been better calculated to destroy morale.

"Answer the door properly and invite the guests in," it said. "At times you will be called upon to prepare beverages such as cocktails. Generally it is only necessary for you to know how to mix a few of the most popular ones."

"Shoe polishing isn't a large task, but does require some exacting effort," said the manual then went on for five paragraphs on the proper way to polish shoes.

STEP IN IT—STEP OUT IN IT

Get the quiet proof of Chevrolet's superior performance on the road— No other car in the low-priced three can match the borne-on-the-wind sensation you get from a ride in the 1960 Chevrolet. But that's not surprising when you consider to what lengths Chevy has gone to provide for your comfort at no extra cost to you. As you drive, count the ways Chevrolet has been thoughtful:

Supple Full Coil suspension— Coil springs at all four wheels melt bumps as no other suspension can. Taking the punch out of rough roads is their only function—they don't have to anchor the rear axle.

Butyl rubber body mounts— Thicker, newly designed body mounts further insulate you from the road.

Body by Fisher— Only Chevy in its field offers the polish and craftsmanship of Body by Fisher.

Foam cushioned seats— Chevy offers foam cushioned seats in both front and rear in all series but one.

Safety-Girder frame— X-built and not merely X-braced, the Safety-Girder frame affords greater rigidity to minimize twisting and squeaks.

Hydraulic valve lifters— Oil hushed hydraulic valve lifters reduce engine noise to a whisper.

Cushioned steering shaft— A universal joint and cushioned coupling keep those annoying road tremors from the steering wheel.

Precision balanced wheels and tires— Here again Chevy has shown concern for your comfort by eliminating vibration in this vital area—tire life is longer, too.

Easy steering ratio— Chevy's high ratio Ball Race steering takes the work out of steering for you.

Superior weight distribution— Chevy rides better, handles better and stops better because the car's weight is more equally divided between the front and rear wheels.

Wide choice of power teams— Choose from 24 different power combinations to satisfy the itchiest driving foot—more than any other car.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Don't misunderstand. We're not talking about those individuals who have enough of the green stuff to afford swank vacation homes far removed from their regular habitats. We mean the Americans who might loosely be categorized as middle-income families, living in homes costing between $10,000 and $20,000. Within Driving Distance

The second homes, in these cases, cost far less than the regular almost-year-round houses. And they usually are located reasonably close to large metropolitan areas, so that they can be reached by automobile in one two or, at the least, a few hours.

We saw some figures on this second-home trend the other day: how the business of developing home sites for second homes hit the three-quarter billion dollar mark in 1959 and will pass the one billion figure this year. So we sought out the vice president of a company that handles a large percentage of the financing of second-home sites and asked him some questions about the subject.

How does the second-home buyer go about making arrangements for his part-time house Arthur I Meyer gave us these facts:

First Select Sight

The purchaser first selects a site, makes a small down payment and pays it off in monthly installments. Usually, this takes less than five years. Once the site is paid for, the buyer arranges the deal for his house. It's in the $5,000 class more often than not—and it's usually a prefabricated house. In many cases, the lots are used as down payments.

Meyer says the second-home starts off very modestly, with only a few of the most necessary conveniences. Later, the owner begins to add a central heating plant, a modern kitchen, an extra room, a garage or any one of half a dozen other things in the comfort line.

Oddly enough, the buyers of these second homes usually are young people in the skilled worker or junior executive class, far away from the retirement age. They want the houses for relaxation and they figure that having their own places for vacations and weekends will be cheaper in the long run than taking the family on trips far from home.

Kind Of A Hurry; His Car On Fire

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Assistant Fire Chief Jim Fairbanks of Lockbourne Air Force Base says a man sauntered into one of the base fire stations and asked: "Say, do you guys know where I can get a fire extinguisher?"

Thinking he wanted one for home use, the fireman on duty answered: "We have some here, but we can't loan them out. Maybe you could get one from base supply tomorrow on a hand receipt."

"Well, I really wanted one before that," was the reply. "I'm in kind of a hurry. My car is on fire."

On Global Hunt For Iron Ore

NEW YORK (AP)—The American steel industry is on a global hunt for new sources of iron ore to offset the depletion of the richer deposits in Minnesota's Mesabi range, traditional source of food for the nation's blast furnaces.

Steelways, publication of the American Iron and Steel Institute, says the industry has invested more than two billion dollars into this project in the last 10 years in Canada, Venezuela, Chile, Peru, Brazil and Liberia.

Congress May Be Asked To Give Allies Atomic Arms

The Old-Time Religion In Africa Jolted By Graham

By LYNN HEINZERLING
LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The old-time religion in Africa has had a severe shaking up since Billy Graham pitched his first pulpit in Monrovia late in January and then headed south through the palm trees.

Graham's nine-man team of evangelists is spreading the gospel in this turbulent, primitive continent as it never has been done before. Old-time missionaries—plagued by slow river boats, long jungle hikes and malarial mosquitoes—wouldn't believe it.

Every move, every meeting, almost every prayer, has been planned in advance with a precision that would charm a general.

The American evangelist wound up his crusade in western Nigeria Wednesday night before a crowd of 40,000. About 850 came forward to embrace the Christian faith, including Moslems and Animists—a primitive religion whose followers believe all objects possess souls.

The Graham organization said in the first eight days of his African tour 2,306 persons were converted and about 7,000 Christians rededicated.

He has run into some hostility but the over-all reception has been enthusiastic.

Much of the credit for the crusade's smooth operation goes to two associates, Jerry Beavan, 41, of Bethesda, Md., and Charles Riggs, 43, of Nashville, Tenn. Beavan is a former teacher, news broadcaster and sports editor. Riggs worked seven years in the Texas oilfields and spent four years in the Army before he joined Graham.

Last May, the Rev. Howard Jones, an American Negro and Baptist minister from Cleveland, visited Africa. He went down the West Coast and up the East Coast and recommended meeting places. Beavan and Riggs then took over.

They spent seven weeks last fall flying all over Africa, arranging for local committees, making hotel and airline reservations for a tour which started at Dakar, extended as far south as Bulawayo in Southern Rhodesia and then proceeded up to Ruanda-Urundi, Tanganyika, Kenya, Ethiopia and finally Egypt.

They checked the food and water at dozens of hotels. They tried out the hotel beds and looked out for air conditioning.

They also made accommodations for Graham's associate evangelists, the Revs. Grady Wilson, Joseph Blinco and Leighton Ford, to reach each stop about a week or 10 days ahead of Graham to hold preliminary meetings.

One important element of the crusade is known as "Operation

Andrew." It is so called because it is based on the 41st and 42d verses of the first chapter of St. John's Gospel, where it is said of Andrew: "He first findeth his own brother . . . and he brought him to Jesus."

Operation Andrew is an organized effort among Christians in the community "to bring their uncommitted friends under the sound of the Gospel by making certain that they are in attendance at the campaign meetings."

Wake-Up-You Is Her Specialty

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—"Would you rather lose two hours' work because you overslept, or spend a dollar a week to make sure you're there to greet the boss when he comes to work?"

With this logic, Mrs. Jean Danenfesler explains why her service for sleepyheads has become a thriving enterprise, not only for her but for several women in Indianapolis who copied it.

Several months ago Mrs. Danenfesler and her husband were at a party. She complained she would have to get to bed because as a neighborly gesture she was responsible for waking a couple of neighbors.

"Why don't you start charging for the service?" asked Danenfesler, who didn't want to leave the party.

Today the Danenfeslers' "Wake-Up Service" has 35 customers and is growing.

Mrs. Danenfesler, the company's president, arises at 3:30 a.m. "I have my coffee and get awake myself before making my calls," she says.

For the next few hours, her telephone probably is one of the busiest in town.

"My conversation with the clients depends on how sleepy they are," she says. "I usually give them the temperature and weather report and anything I think will make their day brighter."

"If they seem tired, I tell them: 'I'm gonna call back and check on you!'"

There's not been a single complaint since the service began. "I'm very proud that I've never been late," the boss said.

Her husband, a molding superintendent, serves as business manager.

Couple Attended Wrong Wedding

ROCKY FORD, Colo. (AP)—An out-of-town couple drove here for the wedding of a relative. Cars were parked around the First Christian Church. The couple went inside, deposited their gift in the reception room.

The bride walked down the aisle. "That's not her," the wife exclaimed. The couple departed hurriedly, finally found the wedding they planned to attend in progress at the First Methodist Church.

Travel teaches toleration, said Disraeli, who was twice prime minister of Great Britain.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower probably will send Congress a special message later this session asking authority to supply some U.S. allies with atomic weapons.

A final administration decision on taking this step has yet to be made. It may be influenced by congressional reaction to the idea of sharing the weapons as well as by the impact on world opinion. Present law permits limited sharing of some types of nuclear information, but requires that this country keep full control of nuclear weapons it produces.

Distribution of atomic weapons to nations which do not have them has long been a controversial issue. The present atomic powers are the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union. France has been reported at the point of exploding its first atomic test device.

The President told a news conference Wednesday that he had always believed "that we should not deny to our allies what the enemies, what your potential enemy already has."

"We do want allies to be treated as partners and allies, and not

Shade Assured By Giving Trees

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Perhaps, as Joyce Kilmer said, only God can make a tree, but the city of St. Louis can, and does, give them away.

The city's residential sections have long been known for their shady tree-lined streets. But the trees, many of them planted more than 100 years ago, are beginning to die off.

So the city department of parks recreation and forestry raised some shade trees, and they're free to any St. Louis home owner or renter. Each tree is from eight to 10 feet tall.

Friends United After 60 Years

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (AP)—Anthony R. Mazullo was looking through the Atlantic City Press when he saw a photo of a man and his wife celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. The man looked vaguely familiar.

A phone call confirmed Mazullo's suspicions. He and the man in the photo, Michael Aluse, had been childhood friends in Philadelphia but had not seen or talked to each other in 60 years.

as junior members of a firm who are to be seen but not heard.

"So I would think that it would be better, for the interests of the United States, to make our law more legal."

Later his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, indicated the administration was actively exploring the desirability of seeking amendment to the present law.

In addition, administration officials said privately that it is entirely probable the President will ask Congress to change the law so that in some cases at least the United States can provide its allies with the most modern atomic weapons suitable to their military requirements.

France particularly has rejected exclusive U.S. control of atomic weapons at French bases. A change in the law, officials said, could strengthen both diplomatic and military ties with the allies.

Administration thoughts of seeking a change in the law developed after it was unable Tuesday to obtain support from the Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy for a new interpretation of the present law. The new interpretation would have permitted some limited sharing of control over weapons.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D-NM), chairman of the subcommittee, took no direct stand on Eisenhower's suggestion, but said in a statement the law would have to be changed to carry it out.

He said he hopes Eisenhower will "now go ahead and disclose to the American people the full details of his thinking on this subject and that he request his desired change in the law so that the tremendously important question may be fully considered" by the committee, the Congress and the public.

But support for the idea came from Rep. James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.), senior GOP House member on the committee.

"What the President proposes is what had to come," Van Zandt said. "As conventional weapons are displaced more and more by nuclear weapons, we have to arm our allies with the new weapons if they are to play their part in the alliance."

The British Foreign Office had no comment on Eisenhower's statements. Officials indicated Britain would seek more information on them.

French officials likewise declined comment, but obviously were pleased with the possibility of a chance to share in U.S. atomic weapons.

U.S. officials reported that behind the concern over this problem currently are several practical problems both military and diplomatic.

One involves the combat readiness of intermediate range ballistic missiles set up on bases in Britain and to be set up on bases in Italy and Turkey.

With the missiles and their nuclear warheads under separate control, time would be required to assemble them in case of emergency.

Also, they say, if a change were made, British aircraft which might fly alert missions could be supplied with U.S.-made nuclear weapons. The result would strengthen the total deterrent power of the Western alliance.

On the diplomatic side, officials said the ban on transfer of atomic weapons has been a cause of serious trouble in U.S. relations with France. France has been unwilling to agree to the establishment of IRBM bases on French territory unless it could have some control over the warheads as well as the missiles.

Officials believe that if the United States could share control of nuclear warheads with France the problem of getting the De Gaulle government to accept missiles bases might be resolved.

France also might be persuaded to play a more active role in NATO generally and U.S. aircraft which some months ago were removed from French bases could be returned.

Higher Goal For Li'l Abner Star

CLOSTER, N. J. (AP) — Peter Palmer, the husky star of both the stage and screen versions of "Li'l Abner," has loftier ambitions than playing a Dogpatch hillbilly.

He is a tenor and is studying opera, with a goal of singing at the Metropolitan Opera within three years. He feels he has one distinct advantage: most tenors are short but Palmer is 6 feet 4, good for heroic opera rolls.

Palmer lives here with his wife and four children.

Regional Arts Exhibition Slated Open Here Feb. 20

The annual regional exhibition for Eastern North Carolina of the 33rd National Scholastic Arts Awards will be staged at East Carolina College Feb. 20-March 5.

Under the sponsorship of Station WNCN-TV of Greenville and of the college, junior and senior high school students in approximately 40 counties will display during this period their original work in various types of arts and crafts.

Students who wish to exhibit should submit their entries by Feb. 7, according to Dr. Wellington B. Gray, director of the department of art at East Carolina College and chairman of the exhibition.

Young artists from grade 7 through grade 12 may compete in either the junior or the senior high school divisions, he said.

All types of works in about 18 categories will be included in the art show. Paintings and drawings in all media, sculpture, color and black-and-white photography, pottery, weaving, graphics, lettering and other commercial art, are among types which may be entered in the show, Dr. Gray announced.

The exhibition will be hung in the Kate W. Lewis Gallery and the Art Department Gallery in the Rawl building at East Carolina College. Those who wish to see the work of the high school artists are invited to attend.

A number of scholarships in art schools and institutions offering courses in art will be awarded to participants in the National Scholastic Art Awards exhibitions. The student who applies for one of these scholarships must submit a portfolio showing a variety of his work, Dr. Gray stated.

David Mosier of Station WNCN is acting as coordinator of the regional exhibition here.

Serving on the committee arranging the show are Russell Arnold of the art department, Atlantic Christian College, Marvin K. Blount of Greenville, president of the Eastern N. C. Art Society; Mrs. Shirley Smith Gearhart of Wilmington; Laura Boice, art supervisor in Rocky Mount schools; Dr. Bruce Carter of East Carolina College; Mrs. Norma W. Gray and Mrs. Madge Allen, art supervisors in Greenville schools; and Donald Hatch, director of the WNCN art department.

An honorary committee includes Congressman Herbert Bonner of the First Division; Dr. J. D. Messick, former president of East Carolina College; Robert Lee Hummer of Greenville; and Supt. J. H. Rose of Greenville City Schools.

Says Public Can See Stunt-Fakes

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie-makers can't fake the risky stuff as they did in years gone by, says veteran actor Keenan Wynn, and he has a television show to prove it.

"There are too many experts around," he says.

In his TV series, "Trouble-shooters," with Olympic champ Bob Mathias as his co-star, Wynn often is called on to pull some daring stunts. The stories about the heavy construction business use such real props as giant bulldozers and blasting powder.

They have three stuntmen to back them up, Wynn says, but most of the dangerous shots are performed by the stars.

"When you fake something on television," he declares, "you've got to make it look real."

In his first 21 shows, the 43-year-old actor stepped aside for a double only three times, he claims.

"One stunt was a 21-foot motorcycle jump," Wynn says. "I wouldn't have minded doing it myself, but this required a two-man-on-the-cycle bit."

Looking ahead a bit, aren't he and his wife a little uneasy over a prospective traffic jam when all their daughters' boy friends come calling?

"Well, the boys are no trouble yet, at least.
"But all the girls do tie up the phone once in a while. When it used to ring, I'd know it was for my wife or me. Now I don't even answer."

Predicts Balloon Telephone Relay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A scientist predicts telephone calls from New York to California soon will be routed via an instrumented balloon orbiting a thousand miles above earth.

Dr. John Pierce, research director of the Bell Laboratories in New York, told a convention on military electronics Wednesday that westbound messages will be received at a laboratory near Barstow, Calif.

Such a plan would eliminate the need for costly telephone wires.

Girl Is A Real Estate Operator

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Cecilia Samara is a top notch student in high school, a Sunday school teacher, 17 years old and a real estate saleswoman.

When other students used the Christmas holidays for parties, Cecilia was selling houses and renting homes. She's a licensed real estate operator.

She had been helping her father, a real estate broker, and when he was injured in a car accident she quietly began studying for her own license examination.

"The exam scared me at first," she admits. "Then I realized I knew most of it." She made a score of 92 out of a possible 100.

Her biggest problem, she says, is balky locks on houses.

One time she had to crawl through a window when a key failed her. She said she had to call her dad to explain to skeptical observers that she really was a real estate saleswoman.

Somebody Picked Judge's Pocket

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Warning to pickpockets: Stay out of Municipal Judge Floyd C. Talbot's court.

Someone entered his chambers, Talbot told police today, and picked his billfold from his coat. Stolen were his identification and $104.

Only Man In House Doesn't Talk Much

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Virgil Zipper, 37, is the only man in a household of nine women — his wife and their eight daughters.

You might suspect he gets little or no chance to say a word around home. Not so, he'll tell you without hesitation.

"When I got something to say, I say it," he boldly confides. "But then I guess I don't talk much anyhow."

Zipper, a Dallas carpenter-contractor, and his wife, 35, came to public attention last week when the latest addition to their family arrived.

"I heard the doctor talking to a nurse as they came out of the delivery room," related Zipper. "He told her, 'I'm not gonna tell him — you'll have to.'"

It was no surprise to learn his wife of 16 years had borne another daughter — and still no son. Nor was he dismayed.

"Like everybody else," admitted Zipper, "we wanted a boy. But we're happy to take what the Lord gives us."

"They're getting to know my wife pretty well at St. Paul Hospital, and the folks there were kind of pulling for her to have a boy."

"But when she comes from the delivery room, I always ask first how she is. Then I ask what the baby is."

Six-day-old Peggy Jean is the latest to join their all-girl brood. The others are Dorothy Ann, 15; Sandra Lee, 13; Patricia Carol, 10; Judy Elaine, 7; Connie Darlene, 3; Cindy Marie, 2, and Shirley Lynn, 1.

What's it like to live around so many womenfolk?

"I don't know what it's like — I've never lived any other way," said Zipper matter-of-factly.

"We're well satisfied. It's a pleasure to have all the girls around — one doing this, one doing that and another something else."

Does that mean he escapes many of the chores falling to a modern husband, like drying the dishes or changing the baby's diaper?

"No, I do just about a little bit of everything," replied Zipper. "The girls do lots of work, of course — but kids are kids, you know."

Looking ahead a bit, aren't he and his wife a little uneasy over a prospective traffic jam when all their daughters' boy friends come calling?

"Well, the boys are no trouble yet, at least.
"But all the girls do tie up the phone once in a while. When it used to ring, I'd know it was for my wife or me. Now I don't even answer."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—A spurt by rails inspired the stock market to erase an early loss today but industrialists failed to hold many gains and the market was irregularly higher at best early this afternoon.

Overall volume was moderate despite a rush of buying which delayed the ticker tape for six minutes during the rebound.

One of the 1960's major uncertainties—the threat of a rail strike—was apparently removed when the engineers' brotherhood agreed to submit the wage dispute to binding arbitration.

The rails, which had bucked the early downturn before the news came, widened their gains. Motors paced a general improvement in the list.

Coppers, rubbers, oils and air-crafts were lower. Chemicals, utilities, drugs and tobaccos were mixed. Rails carried the burden of generally higher tone.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 40 cents to $218.60 with the industrials down 20 cents, the rails up $1.20 and the utilities up 20 cents.

Corporate bonds were narrowly mixed.

U.S. government bonds advanced slightly.

Youths Draws Fines In Grifton For Speeding, Racing Charges

GRIFTON—Two 16-year-old Lenoir County youths each drew suspended 90-day road, sentences upon payment of $100 fines and court costs yesterday in Grifton Recorder's Court after being found guilty of speeding in excess of 100 miles-per-hour and pre-arranged racing.

The youths were identified as Daniel Edward Hill of Route 1, Kinston, and Joe Francis Rhem of Route 6, Kinston.

A third boy, Robert Derring Phillips, 17, of Route 2, Grifton, a passenger in the Rhem auto, was found guilty of aiding and abetting, speeding in excess of 100-miles-per-hour and pre-arranged racing and sentenced to 30 days on the roads, suspended on payment of $18.70 court costs.

The youths were arrested about 12:05 a.m. January 16 on N. C. 118 east of Grifton after a high speed chase by Patrolman R. E. Tayloe of Grifton.

Officer Tayloe said he first observed the two cars, one a 1956 Oldsmobile and the other a 1956 Ford, "acting peculiar" in Grifton about 11:45 p.m. Friday. He then went out N. C. 118 four miles east of Grifton and drove his car into the woods and walked back to the roadway to watch.

The two cars came into sight, each making a test run down the highway, then lined up side-by-side and took off, headed toward Grifton, with the officer in hot pursuit.

"The Ford, driven by Rhem, was in the left lane all the way," Tayloe commented, "except for one time when he had to drop back to avoid a head-on collision with an oncoming car." Speeds during the three and three-tenths mile chase were well over 100-miles-per-hour, Tayloe noted.

The speeding autos were stopped by a roadblock, set up at Tayloe's request by two Lenoir County patrolmen, S. H. Newman and C. E. Edwards. Newman's car was standing in the middle of the road with its bright red light gleaming in the darkness.

Tayloe quoted the boys as saying they had planned the race while at a grill south of Grifton, "because Rhem did not like Oldsmobiles and Hill did not like Fords."

Patrolman Tayloe, who noted "it was the first case of pre-arranged racing tried in Pitt County courts," added "I hope it is the last."

The two cars, which were taken into custody by the officer at the time of the arrest, were returned to the owners, the boys' fathers. Tayloe noted that if the cars were registered in the boys' names, the court might have taken the cars.

The youths' drivers license will be revoked by the State Department of Motor Vehicles.

Middle East Friction Is Spotlighting UN 'Police'

By MILTON BESSER
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Mounting tension between Israel and the United Arab Republic has focused attention once more on the role being played in the Middle East by the 5,000-man emergency force (UNEF).

It is the first "peace force" ever put in a specific trouble area by the United Nations. But it is not stationed at the current trouble spot around the Sea of Galilee, the scene of armed clashes this week.

It was created in November, 1956, when the Middle East was in a period of crisis, by vote of the U.N. General Assembly.

It was given a two-fold mandate:

1. To secure and supervise the cessation of hostilities and the withdrawal of armed forces from Egyptian territory following the Israeli and French-British attacks on Egypt in November, 1956.
2. To maintain peaceful conditions in the area.

It patrols the frontier between Israel and the Egyptian part of the United Arab Republic—all on the U.A.R. side—and maintains an outpost at Sharm El Sheikh at the entrance to the Gulf of Aqaba. (Syria, where the current border trouble centers, joined Egypt in the U.A.R. after the force was set up.)

Dag Hammarskjold has praised UNEF as a "significant decisive factor in preventing hostilities and restoring calm in a troubled area."

But the secretary general has also pointed out UNEF is not a fighting force, and can be used only for the specific purpose outlined by the general assembly.

It is not equipped or intended to cope with a major military force. Among the firm supporters of UNEF is the United States. It costs about 20 million dollars a year to maintain the force. The United States not only pays about 31 per cent of the total as its regular assessment, but makes substantial additional contributions on a volunteer basis.

This is in marked contrast with the Soviet Union and other members of the Soviet bloc, which have not paid a penny toward UNEF since it was established.

The seven nations making up UNEF all volunteered their forces. They come from Brazil, Canada, Denmark, India, Norway, Sweden and Yugoslavia. In the past contingents were furnished also by Colombia, Finland and Indonesia.

All wear their national uniforms, but are distinguished by UNEF badges, light blue berets, fatigue caps, turbans and helmets. Normally each contingent serves as a unit and is rotated home after 6 to 12 months duty.

Winners are decided by total number of one-cent votes received.

Cancer Society Speaker Named

RALEIGH (AP)—The Rev. Thomas A. Fraser of Winston-Salem has indicated he will fill the post of bishop coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of North Carolina.

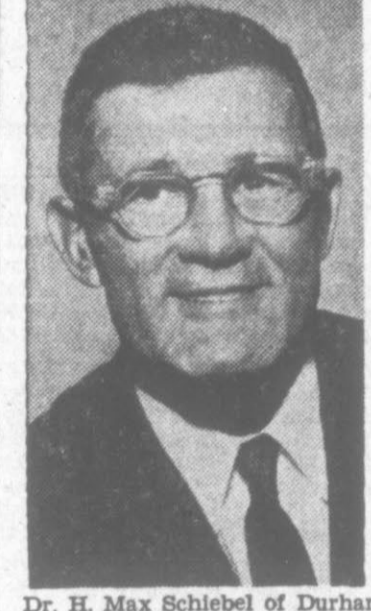

However, at the request of Bishop Richard H. Baker, he decided to refrain from formally accepting until he has time "to think prayerfully and carefully." A coadjutor is a bishop's assistant, usually with the right of succeeding him.

A special diocese convention elected the Rev. Mr. Fraser after an all-day balloting session Wednesday. He received the needed majorities from lay and clerical delegations on the sixth ballot.

"I am sure no one is more conscious of my inadequacies for this office than I am," said the 44-year-old rector of Winston-Salem's St. Paul's Episcopal Church. "All I can promise you or pledge to you is my complete loyalty to the bishop and the diocese, hard work, and, as far as possible, that God's will for his church shall be first in all things."

Bishop Baker told the assembly at Raleigh's historic Christ Church, "I have known this man for quite a long time. I think he knows me, and I believe we can work together as well as any team anywhere."

The special convention was the second called by the diocese to select a coadjutor. When the Rev. George Moyer Alexander of Seawane, Tenn., was elected at the first, and then declined.

Dr. H. Max Schiebel of Durham will be guest speaker at the board of Directors meeting of the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society Friday night, at 8 p.m. in the Community Room at the new Guaranty Bank.

Dr. Schiebel, an Associate In Surgery at Duke University School of Medicine and Assistant Clinical Professor of Surgery at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, is President of the North Carolina Division of the American Cancer Society.

His talk will be based on the American Cancer Society's unit organization, its functions and policies.

Dr. Howard Gradis, first vice-president of the Pitt-County Unit will preside at the meeting.

Three Injured As Tornado Strikes Plantation Area

THIBODAUX, La. (AP)—Three persons were injured, one critically, when a tornado, hidden in a heavy downpour, struck a plantation area and demolished nine laborers' cottages.

Five-year-old Barbara Benoit received internal injuries when the family dwelling was wrecked Wednesday. Her mother, 32, who was cooking supper at the time the tornado hit, had a back injury, and her father, Newman Benoit, 38, was hospitalized with a fractured collar bone.

A half dozen other persons were treated for minor injuries.

Richard Plater Jr., civil defense director, said the tornado, which appeared to be rotating, hit during a heavy rain.

In its path, 300 to 400 feet wide and a mile long, the farm cottages "just sort of exploded," Plater said.

Plater estimated the damage to farm dwellings at about $75,000.

Need For Rescue Squad Is Told Bethel Rotarians

BETHEL—Roy Hardee told Rotarians here that local leaders of the emergency units from 21 squads in the N. C. Association two years ago to nearly 40 now. In addition, he said, there are about 90 rescue organizations in the state, active, forming, or in the planning stages.

The main problem facing organization of such rescue units is a lack of funds. The Bethel Town Board has agreed to match up to $500 any money which the squad can raise. The County Commissioners have been approached but no action has been taken. It would take a minimum of $2,500 to place the Bethel unit in operation, Hardee said.
