James Harris of Greenville was elected to serve three years as a member of the advisory board and Corey Stokes of Ayden was elected to serve a two-year term.

Chessman Will Learn Monday If Execution Stay Is Granted

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Convict-author Caryl Chessman, in death row for 11 1/2 years, must wait until Monday to find out if his latest bid for a stay of execution has succeeded.

Chief Justice Richard H. Chambers of the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals said Friday he would decide by Monday morning whether to send Chessman's case back to the appeals court.

If the appeal is granted, Chessman, 33, will not keep his Feb. 19 date with death in the San Quentin, Calif., gas chamber for the 1958 kidnaping with bodily harm of two Los Angeles women.

Chambers will base a decision on a weekend study of the 5,000-

U.S. Accepting 2nd Place In Missile Race 'Til '62

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is committed to second place in the missile race, at least until the end of 1961, says a key Air Force general, and nothing can be done now to change it.

Lt. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever, head of the Air Force's Research and Development Command, said Friday he had pleaded in 1958 and 1959 for more missiles.

But it takes two years to get increased production of missiles, Schriever said, and two years from now new and better missiles should be ready for production.

So it is useless now to urge more production of the present generation of rocket weapons, he indicated.

"Increasing the number of missiles in your inventory isn't like turning a faucet on or off," he told the House Space Committee.

"We are committed now to the number of missiles we'll have for the next two years."

The United States and the Soviet Union are about equal now in the number of missiles, Schriever said.

"But next year, if our intelligence estimates are correct, they will have superiority in numbers," he added.

Even so, Schriever said, this does not mean the U.S.S.R. will have more overall military strength.

"You can't equate the total de-

Local Guardsman Wins Promotion

N. C. Governor Luther H. Hodges announced this week the promotion of Alvin Davis McArthur Jr. of Greenville to the 4th Howitzer Battalion, 113th Artillery in Greenville.

He lives, with his wife and son, on Route 1, Greenville, and is a farmer in that area.

McArthur's promotion was one of 13 in the state's National Guard announced Tuesday by the Governor.

McArthur is assigned to the 4th Howitzer Battalion, 113th Artillery in Greenville.

He served in the Korean War where he served until August, 1953. He rejoined the local NG unit in April, 1958.

The judge flatly told attorneys George T. Davis and A. L. Wirin that the trial transcript will have a major bearing on his ruling.

Javits represents Chessman, while Wirin is counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union.

They had objected to the judge's request for an outline of the trial evidence. Arlo E. Smith, California deputy attorney general, finally handed in the disast.

Smith argued there was no evidence to indicate that Fraser had been drinking when he transcribed the notes. He said Chessman did not challenge the transcript until six years after he was sentenced.

Chambers will base a decision on a weekend study of the 5,000-terent position with the number of missiles," he said.

Schriever lined up with Gen. Thomas S. Power, head of the Strategic Air Command, in urging funds for keeping a large number of armed bombers in constant flight to avoid being destroyed on the ground by any sneak attack.

Power was rebuked by President Eisenhower for taking a "parochial" attitude.

Secretary of Defense Thomas S. Gates Jr. and Gen. Nathan Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have said Power's view is unrealistic.

They have defended the defense budget.

During the questioning of Schriever, Rep. James G. Fulton (R-Pa) complained that missile superiority has become a political football of Democratic aspirants to the White House.

Rep. John W. McCormack (D-Mass), House majority leader and a member of the committee, challenged this.

"Any time we Democrats don't agree with the administration on defense, we're accused of talking politics," he retorted.

"I think you're getting on dangerous ground when you impugn the motives of anyone who questions defense policies."

Schriever said he has been pushing for more money to develop a reconnaissance satellite which could survey enemy territory and detect a missile the instant it was fired.

"I've been hounding them on this for some time," he remarked.

Senator Kennedy Files In W. Virginia Primary

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) has accepted a challenge to run in West Virginia's presidential primary and has renewed his own challenge in Indiana.

Kennedy formally filed early today as a candidate for Democratic nomination for president in West Virginia's May 10 primary, assuring a head-on clash with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) who filed Thursday.

West Virginia has 25 votes at the Democratic National Convention, but the primary is not binding on the state's convention delegates.

Kennedy noted this when he filed, but he said he is still extremely anxious to run in the popularity contest because he considers West Virginia is a good cross section.

"Besides," he added, "Sen. Humphrey has issued a challenge, and I'm delighted to oblige him."

A few hours earlier at Terre Haute, Ind., Kennedy repeated his challenge to other Democratic hopefuls to meet him in the Indiana primary May 3.

"I really don't see how any candidate can go to Los Angeles and expect to get the support of Indiana on the second ballot if he didn't care enough to enter the primary," he said.

The Indiana primary binds delegates to the winner for one ballot only.

Small but fierce tornadoes struck portions of Harnett and Robeson counties in North Carolina Friday night.

Property damage could only be vaguely estimated in the thousands of dollars. There were no reports of injuries.

The first twister dipped to earth about 8 p.m. on the farm of Jim Davis a mile north of Lillington, and virtually destroyed the home of a Negro couple, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCormick.

The McCormicks were at home at the time, but were not hurt, even though portions of the roof fell in, and walls buckled. A chicken house was overturned, and a feed barn was shattered.

Another twister hit half an hour later five miles east of Lumberton in Robeson County. It destroyed a tobacco barn and chicken house on the Willis Walters farm.

Other farm buildings were damaged or destroyed along a 50-foot-wide path several hundred yards long.

Residents said the tornado roared "like a freight train" as it approached and touched down.

There has been a great increase in activity at Reggan, the test site in the Sahara, the agency would run again for treasurer in stead. J. M. Broughton Jr., Raleigh lawyer and chairman of the State Highway Commission, said he was thinking of making the race. He promised a decision not later than Feb. 15.

Dr. I. Beverly Lake, a segregationist, said he will announce whether he will run in a speech at Sanford next Wednesday.

The city of Fayetteville celebrated "Terry Sanford Day" as the lawyer formally announced that he is a candidate for governor.

John D. Larkins Jr., Trenton attorney and first in the race, kept busy and quiet during the week. The Senate campaign began shaping up as a contest between Sen. B. Everett Jordan, appointed to the post by Gov. Hodges, and Addeus Hewlett Jr. of Wilmington.

Jordan, Saxapahaw textile mill owner, filed with the State Board of Elections as a candidate for nomination to a full six-year term. He is serving now by appointment following the death of Kerr Scott.

Hewlett's entry brought the withdrawal of Mayor Melvin Corning of Wallace, who said he would support Hewlett instead.

On the congressional front, Gov. Hodges set for May 23 a special primary to nominate a successor to Rep. Dave M. Hall, 12th District congressman who died recently. The date is the same for the regular primary. Heinz Roll-man of Waynesville is seeking the Republican nomination, while Roy Taylor of Black Mountain has announced as a Democratic candidate.

Mayor Robert Stallings of New Bern got into the running for the 3rd District seat to be vacated by Rep. Graham Barden of New Bern. Stallings was the first to file, although a number of other prospective candidates have been mentioned.

A three-man field was assured for the lieutenant governorship. Dave McConnell of Charlotte announced he would seek the post, and State Rep. H. Cloyd Philpott of Lexington paid his filing fee. State Sen. C. V. Henkel of Statesville has announced he will be after the job.

Trigger - Happy Police Are Suspect In Shooting Spree

HAVANA (AP)—The impression developed today that all the shooting which threw the opening of the Soviet exposition into turmoil came from trigger-happy Cuban guards and police.

Continuing silence at police headquarters and by newspaper handling of Friday's big story contributed to a widely held belief the gunfire that marred Soviet first Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan's visit came solely from official efforts to break up an anti-Communist student demonstration.

Every Havana morning newspaper except the conservative

Diario de la Marina played down the shooting, which erupted in a nearby park minutes before the scheduled inauguration of the Soviet exposition at the Fine Arts Palace.

Revolucion, the organ of Prime Minister Fidel Castro's 26th of July Movement, confined its coverage to a brief box below the fold of the front page. It blamed "rich children" instigated by counter-revolutionaries. The rest of the pro-government press, including the Communist Hoy, either buried the story in back pages or ignored it.

(Soviet and Red Chinese news of organs passed up all references to the shooting. A Tass dispatch on Mikoyan's visit made no mention of any incident. Radio Peiping broadcast a New China News Agency dispatch reporting Mikoyan was warmly cheered.)

Accounts varied as to the number arrested, said 24 were taken in custody—4 from their school and 20 from Havana University. Newspaper figures ranged from 10 to 20. Police would say nothing.

Wild shooting is not unprecedented in Havana. Sometimes it takes the form of celebration, such as that at the International League baseball park here July 26.

Foreign Ministry officials would not comment on whether the question of a resumption in Cuban-Russian diplomatic relations was raised, but other sources presumed it was. Relations between Moscow and Havana were broken during the regime of Fulgencio Batista, whom Castro deposed.

A veil of official secrecy screened Mikoyan's movements today. He was reported conferring with Cuban leaders this morning, but whether in or outside Havana could not be ascertained.

The mystery shots came on the heels of an anti-Communist student demonstration in a nearby park that confronted Prime Minister Fidel Castro with the first open defiance of his be-kind-to-the-Reds policies.

The shooting failed to shake or silence the wily Mikoyan. The veteran Kremlin salesman told the Cubans the secret of the Soviet Union's success lay in "establishing the power of the workers and peasants—and confiscating without any compensation all means of production."

Castro has called his revolution a revolution of workers, peasants and students. He has seized sugar plantations and cattle ranches but has promised compensation to owners.

Friday's violence marked the first open sign of unrest among the students regarded as stalwarts of most of Castro's program, including land reform.

Sen. Johnson Repeats He's No Presidential Candidate

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—Sen. Lyndon Johnson created a stir at the Western Democratic conference with word he will not seek the presidential nomination.

In fact, he said, he couldn't say whether he'd accept the bid if it came to him at the party's Los Angeles national convention in July.

The Texas senator outlined his position at a news conference Friday on his arrival to address Democrats from 13 Western states with 271 of the 761 votes needed to win the nomination.

A year ago in Albuquerque, Johnson was reminded, he had said he was not a candidate. Had he changed his mind? No, he hadn't.

Would he accept the nomination? He'll make that decision at the time it happens—if it happens, he said.

The Senate majority leader was definite on this point: "I will not seek the nomination."

Johnson couched his announcement with statements attempting to refute assertions that he's a conservative and, as such, he doesn't stand a chance for the presidential bid.

Those views were expressed by Paul Ziffren, anti-Johnson Democratic national committeeman from California. Ziffren, talking with newsmen, predicted a candidate from the "liberal pole" would be chosen to lead the 1960 Democratic ticket.

Johnson replied that every fellow has a right to his opinion but that labels didn't interest him. Asked whether he'd concede he didn't belong to the party's liberal wing, he proceeded to note that he first went to Congress on an progressive platform and challenged critics to examine his record.

As Senate majority leader, the Texas said he had helped Senate passage to repeal the poll tax, enact a clean election bill, and vote federal funds for school construction.

He predicted approval of a "reasonable and effective" civil rights bill, a good public works bill, and a farm bill.

In both his news conference and a speech at a reception, Johnson assailed the Eisenhower administration and Republican political philosophy.

He said that basically the Republicans have offered a policy of "can't do or won't do" against the "can do" of the Democratic party.

The Republicans have supported a rocking-chair philosophy, he said; the Democrats have showed social conscience and represented a party of faith.

The key issue of the 1960 camaign, Johnson said, will be that of responsibility.

The Texas senator singled out the administration's farm program saying that Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Benson in his eight years has spent three billion dollars more than all of his predecessors and "with less results."

Johnson contended it is not necessary to bankrupt the federal government to solve problems here on earth or in outer space. The United States, he said, doesn't have to bust the budget in order to maintain its leadership.

He urged a step-up in the missile program and warning system with the comment that he doesn't want to see this country at the mercy of an atheistic, communistic country.

Rose High Paces College Enrollees

By PATRICIA MOORE Reflector Staff Writer

Latest available figures indicate that Greenville has more white high school graduates enrolled in colleges than any other town in the state.

According to a follow-up survey of 1959 high school graduates in North Carolina, prepared by the State Department of Public Instruction, 75 per cent of the town's 1959 white high school graduates have entered a senior or junior college. Greenville makes an impressive showing, therefore, when compared to the state's percentage of about 49 per cent graduates from cities enrolled in college.

O.E. Dowd, principal of the senior high school here, said "We are very proud of the fact that such a large percentage of our students go on to higher education. We think that many of them go on because of the college influence in Greenville and because of the students' desire for higher education."

Dowd added that most of the students who go on to college do very well. He said they go on to graduate; there are few who drop out.

The follow-up survey divided comparisons into cities and counties for both white and Negro groups.

The only town coming close to Greenville's white student enrollment in colleges, was the Greensboro Negro total of 72.2 per cent enrolled in senior colleges.

Other totals show that about 34 per cent of the white graduates from Pitt County schools are attending colleges. The state percentage of white high school graduates attending colleges is about 29 per cent.

Corresponding statistics for Negro high school graduates show that 44 per cent of Greenville graduates are enrolled in colleges, compared to the corresponding total of 37 per cent for the state. Twenty-two percent of Pitt County Negro high school graduates are enrolled in colleges, compared to the state average of about 23 per cent.

The actual figures for the Greenville High School graduates are 81 out of 108 white graduates enrolled in colleges; five are in trade and business schools, nursing, etc.; and 14 are in military service.

For the Negro 1959 high school graduates, 29 out of 45 students are attending colleges; three are enrolled in trade and business schools, nursing, etc.; and three are in military service.

The survey said the percentage of graduates entering colleges decreased slightly from 33.60 in 1958 to 33.57 in 1959, but the number of graduates entering college increased from 13,487 in 1958 to 14,420 in 1959.

Also, the percentage enrolling in business, trade and nursing schools decreased slightly from 8.57 to 8.27. The percentage entering military service decreased slightly from 5.33 to 4.77.

College Installs A New President

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP)—High Point College today inaugurates a new president, 37-year-old Dr. Wendell L. Patton.

The featured speaker was scheduled to be Arthur S. Flemming, secretary of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Two Methodist bishops participated in the program. They were Bishop Nolan B. Harmon of Charlotte, who gave the charge of office to Patton, and Bishop Paul N. Garber of Richmond, Va., who delivered the prayer.

Patton, a native of Spartanburg, S.C., was graduated from Wofford College, and holds a Master's Degree from the University of Georgia and a doctorate from Purdue University.

High Point is a Methodist-supported school with an enrollment of 1,044.

Politically Active Week Behind N. C. Demos

RALEIGH (AP)—A race for the U.S. Senate was set up this politically active week in North Carolina.

The period also featured the withdrawal of one prospective candidate for governor, the uncovering of another, and the laying of the groundwork for congressional district contests.

At week's end, candidates were shaking hands and maneuvering for support among Democrats gathered in Raleigh for tonight's Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising dinner.

The picture for the May primary looked like this for the governor's race:

State Treasurer Edwin Gill bowed off the stage Friday, somewhat regretfully, and said he would run again for treasurer in stead. J. M. Broughton Jr., Raleigh lawyer and chairman of the State Highway Commission, said he was thinking of making the race. He promised a decision not later than Feb. 15.

Young Chiang Is Awaiting Ruling

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Chiang Kai-Shek's grandson, Alan S. Chiang, will learn Thursday whether he must serve a five-day jail sentence on charges of speeding 80 miles an hour on an Oakland boulevard. He seeks diplomatic immunity.

Chiang, 25, a student at Armstrong Business College here, was cited Jan. 23. Chinese Consul General Patrick Pihl Sun appeared in Municipal Court in Young Chiang's behalf Friday. He said Chiang has a diplomatic passport and is entitled to diplomatic immunity.

Judge Charles W. Fisher continued the case until Feb. 11 but told reporters he doubted whether he could depart from court policy of imposing a jail sentence for speeding.

Valentine Ideas

RALEIGH—Everybody loves a party, but some folks seem to feel they need an excuse to give one. This time of year offers lots of reasons for holidays and birthdays.

Miss S. Virginia Wilson, food and nutrition specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, advises you to entertain at home, plan with care, and have the best time of anyone there.

For a valentine party, you could serve assorted heart shaped sandwiches, spiced tea, cranberry ice and tiny rose frosted cakes.

Cranberry Ice 4 cups cooked cranberries, 2 cups cold water, 2 cups sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind.

Rub cranberries through sieve after cooking; add other ingredients. Pour into freezing tray. Freeze until firm. Stir three times during freezing. Serve in crystal or red dessert dishes.

Hot Spiced Tea 3 cups boiling water, 3 teaspoons tea leaves, 6 tablespoons sugar, 6 whole cloves, 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 cup orange or pineapple juice, 1/2 stick cinnamon.

Boil water, sugar and spices for five minutes. Add tea leaves, remove from heat, cover and let stand five minutes. Strain and return to heat. Add fruit juices and heat to simmer. Remove from heat and serve at once. More or less sugar may be used as desired. The pranking chopping of the cherry tree may have been a sore trial to George Washington's father, but it has been a source of many an inspiration for a clever hostess.

One dessert which will be appropriate for valentine or George Washington parties is the cherry tart. You can select your favorite cherry filling recipe for the tart. Pastry shells can be baked up or in cup cake holders. After pouring the cooked pie mixture into the baked shell, you might want to decorate the top with small hatchets which have been cut out of the dough and baked.

If the tarts are for a valentine party, the top can be decorated with whipped cream. It is always good to have some party sweets convenient for unexpected guests who stop by. Here are two simple recipes for simple refreshments.

Nut Fingers 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup butter, 3 cups flour, 1 cup chopped nuts. Mix together—shape with fingers into slender rolls. Bake in very slow oven, starting in cold oven. Roll in confectioners' sugar.

Orange Glace Pecans 1 cup sugar, 1/2 cup orange juice, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 2 tablespoons corn syrup, 2 cups shelled pecans. Mix sugar, orange juice and rind, and water in saucepan. Cook to firm ball or 238 degrees. Add pecans and cook about five minutes longer. Remove from heat and beat until syrup begins to crystallize. Pour onto buttered cookie sheet, slab or large platter. Separate pecans with fork.

Miss Rasberry Party Honoree GRIFTON—Miss Barbara Rasberry celebrated her seventh birthday last Friday afternoon when her parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Rasberry, entertained several school friends and playmates at a party at the Rasberry home on Queen St.

Games, contests and story telling were enjoyed during the play period. The St. Valentine motif was noted in decorations and favors, which consisted of small Valentine boats filled with candies. The cake was in the shape of a heart and decorated in pink and red with tiny red hearts, which was served with ice cream and iced drinks.

Guests included Dianne January, Sara Lilley, Pam McLawhorn, Jo Anna Paul, Olivia Reeves, Deborah Phillips, Debbie Leonard, Connie Barwick, Debbie Branscome, and Beth Onagy.

Her achievements in the field of education and generally raised standards for her race composed an exciting dramatic story. At the close of the program a sweet course was served. Books were distributed and the meeting adjourned.

The meeting of the Aries Book Club was held at the home of Mrs. Troy Dodson Tuesday. After the business meeting a short subject was presented by Mrs. Dodson concerning book clubs in general.

The program for the evening was a book review by Mrs. James Moye concerning the biography of Mary McCloud Bethune, a famous Negro woman educator and close personal friend of the Franklin Roosevelts.

Her achievements in the field of education and generally raised standards for her race composed an exciting dramatic story. At the close of the program a sweet course was served. Books were distributed and the meeting adjourned.

Iron-Clad Agreement Is In Order

Several times within recent years the State Highway Commission has requested the approval of the governments of Pitt County and Greenville for removal of the full-time drawbridge tender at the Grimesland bridge over Tar River.

On each occasion, the city and county government have seen fit to decline to agree to such a move.

The county and city officials—as well as those of several business organizations—have taken the position that once the full-time tender at the bridge were removed, it would be almost impossible at a later date to have the bridge tended full-time if it were in the best interest of the city and county.

Pitt County's Commissioners considered the new request of the Highway Commission for removal of the full-time tender at its last meeting and tabled the matter on its agenda Thursday night and notified the Highway Commission it will have an answer available probably by next month.

Perhaps the City Council and the Pitt County Commissioners should offer the Highway Commission a proposal in which they will agree to the elimination of a full-time tender at the bridge if the Highway Commission in turn will agree to a binding agreement to restore a full-time tender at the bridge at any time the city and county governments feel it is in the best interest of Greenville and Pitt County.

The Highway Commission says it cost last year more than $3,300 to maintain a full-time tender for the Grimesland bridge. Moreover, it points out, the draw span was opened only a half-dozen times during the year to let water traffic pass. Further, the Highway Commission has said it will make provisions to have the draw span of the bridge opened at any time it is needed so long as it has a 24-hour notice.

From the standpoint of highway folks, there is the additional consideration that because of changes in work schedules, two tenders or more will be required if the draw is manned 24-hours a day in the future and the cost will jump from $3,300 a year to the neighborhood of $9,000 a year.

It seems the best interests of both the city and county and the Highway Commission would be served if some agreement could be reached whereby the local governments would agree to the removal of the full-time tender at the bridge on condition that the bridge be tended on a full time basis again any time the city and county governments deem it necessary. Through such an agreement the local governments would be protecting the interests of their respective areas, and at the same time the Highway Commission would be able to take advantage, at least temporarily, of the savings which would result if the bridge did not have to be tended on a full time basis.

It is a matter in which the city and the county governments should work together jointly in order that they will be able to present to the Highway Commission a solid front in whatever solution is proposed.

12th District's Cloudy Future

By LYNN NISBET

CONGRESS — The date set for the special primary in the 12th congressional district to nominate candidates for a probable special election to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Rep. David M. Hall means, in effect, the district will be without voting representation in the rest of the 86th Congress.

In a formal proclamation issued Thursday, Governor Hodges ordered the special primary to be held on May 28, the same day as the regular primary. In event a second primary is required, it will be held on June 25. Whether a special election will be called will depend upon developments. Actually, it will not make a lot of difference except to the new Congressman, for these reasons:

If a nomination is obtained on May 28 it would be impossible to get the vote canvassed, the nominee certified, a special election ordered and prepared for with opening of registration books, distributing ballots, and other details, in time to have the result certified by the first week in July. If a second primary is necessary, the election could not be held before sometime in August.

Congress is certain to adjourn before the Fourth of July, on account of the Democratic national convention starting in Los Angeles on July 11. A new member cannot be sworn in when the Congress is not in session. When the new Congress convenes in January the member chosen in the regular November election will be on hand to take the oath. Chances are the same person will be nominated for the unexpired term in the 86th and the full term in the 87th Congress. That is not certain, because there will be separate filings and separate ballots.

ADVANTAGES — Since the Congress will not be in session and no opportunity to vote, any advantage deriving from a special election would accrue to the man elected, rather than to the district. A check with the Clerk of the House of Representatives in Washington discovered that the staff of a deceased congressman remains on the job and keeps the office going until a successor is elected, or until the end of that Congress. The 12th district will have a congressional office functioning for the rest of this year.

When a successor is elected (and distinction must be made between primary nomination, however certain, and actual election) and presents his commission from the Governor he immediately succeeds to all the rights and privileges of a full member—except the right to participate in debate and vote—before being sworn in. He has the same salary and expense allowance for clerical assistance and other items. Presumably he is accorded the same prestige in dealings with government agencies.

The 12th district (and any other district where similar situation might develop) will have an office with complete clerical staff in any event. Without a special election the staff will be a lame-duck continuation of the Hall regime. If an election is held, the new man will take over with full authority and with his own selected staff. Whether that advantage will be worth the cost of a special election to the people of the district and the new congressman will be the deciding factor in decision about a special election.

There is another contingency which suggests need for an election. In event of a special session being called prior to January, the new member could be sworn in and get the benefit of a full congressional term on his seniority rating. That can be important to the man, and to the State.

SMALL LOANS — Investigation of the operations of small loan companies conducted by the Department of Justice at instigation of Attorney General Malcolm Seawell led to a conference called by Governor Hodges with the Attorney General, the Commissioner of Banks and the Commissioner of Insurance earlier this week. The Governor told the newsmen at his weekly meeting with them that he had requested Charles F. Gold the elected commissioner of insurance, and Ben Roberts, appointed banking commissioner, to cooperate with Attorney General Seawell in formulating regulations designed to relieve the conditions.

The Governor indicated need for further legislation with respect to small loan operations, but expressed the hope that substantial improvement can be obtained through enforcement of administrative rulings. He sees no immediate need to take supervision of small loan companies out of the banking commission, but said he feared the commission has not given sufficient attention to this phase of its responsibilities.

SWAP — One fellow who isn't quite satisfied with the choice offered among the several formal and informal announced candidates for high offices, suggests it might be a good idea to play a "fruit basket turnover" game and switch the candidates for Governor and those for Lieutenant Governor—and see what happens. As the record shows at time this is written that would be C.V. Henkel, Cloyd Philpott and Dave McConnell in the race for Governor; Terry Sanford, John Larkins (and two or three more) in the contest for the No. 2 place. Sure, it's a crazy idea. But it would pep up the campaign.

Can We Idly Stand By While Castro Acts?

Growing indications that Cuba is coming under communist rule through the revolutionary government of Fidel Castro should be a matter of grave concern in the highest government circles in the United States.

It should be of no less concern to the average citizen in the United States. In a recent statement of policy toward Cuba, President Eisenhower said flatly the United States would not intervene in Cuban affairs, that it would not take economic reprisals against Cuba for its unfriendly acts, and further that the United States will continue to strive to create an atmosphere in which better American-Cuban relations can develop.

In the meantime, the experts say Cuba's government is daily embracing more communist principles, communists within the government are gaining more control, and unless something happens quickly to change the course, Cuba in a relatively short time will be a communist state.

The current visit to Cuba by Soviet Deputy Premier Mikoyan is expected to give an indication of whether Castro will follow through with his intimations that he wants Soviet aid and will accept Soviet assistance in solidifying his government's control of Cuba.

The United States is continuing to pour dollars into Castro's government coffers by paying Cuba prices for its sugar that are considerably higher than those for which the U. S. can purchase sugar in the world market. The U. S., through its purchase of Cuban exports, is providing money to support the Castro government as it confiscates property of American companies in Cuba as a part of the program to consolidate its power.

There are probably few Americans who advocate outright U. S. intervention in Cuban affairs. Even so, there are just as few Americans who believe the United States should stand by and watch a communist satellite country developed just 90 miles from the United States.

Side Effect Of Ike's Calmness

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — While President Eisenhower's policy of Calmness under stress has been able to keep the American people cool, it doesn't follow that his attitude will always have the same effect on allies and neutrals.

For example, he has been continually calm on the question of American defense against the Soviet Union. He also has always pursued a policy of avoiding extreme statements.

His two policies fused this week when he was asked to comment on criticism that American military strength was dangerously lagging behind the Soviets.

"I am always a little bit amazed about this business of catching up," he told his news conference. "What you want is enough, a thing that is adequate."

"A deterrent has no added power, once it has become completely adequate for compelling respect of any potential opponent for your future deterrent and therefore to make him act prudently."

This explained why, despite criticism, particularly from the Democrats, Eisenhower has refused to pump as much money into defense speedups as some of his administration's critics consider necessary.

What he said could be put another way: Why trip to build up an armament whose only usefulness is to impress people with its size when it isn't size that counts but the adequacy of the defense you actually have?

This attitude indicates, as much as anything Eisenhower has said since becoming President, the apparent self-confidence he has in the judgement of himself and his aides, at least in military matters.

Nevertheless, there is one possibility which the twin Eisenhower policy of calmness and unexaggerated statement may not be able to anticipate because it applies strictly to American ability to defend itself against the Soviet Union.

What will be the effect on American allies and neutrals if the Soviets continue to build up a gigantic arsenal, plus the kind of "fantastic" new weapons Premier Nikita Khrushchev said is in the works?

Will Soviet accomplishments have a discouraging effect on allies and neutrals — much closer to the Soviet Union than this country—since they can't equip themselves with the kind of defense America can erect?

And will a Soviet armament, if it's much bigger and more glittering than this country's, persuade others that the Soviet Union has outstripped America as a nation and world power?

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NEVERTHELESS THEY EXIST. May we take just a moment to examine the out-of-the-ordinary person. This does not mean the genius. Neither does it mean the person who has considerable business success, or the great scholar, or the fellow or girl with a thousand friends.

The type of person I have in mind is the person who feels and sees things which other people do not feel or see. Sometimes these people are called psychic. A few of them have visions. I have a friend who claims he talks with the angels, and I believe he does. Emanuel Swedenborg was such an out-of-the-ordinary person. St. Francis of Assisi was another. Perhaps you have some friend, or a relative who is of this variety. The person may be a seer. In a few—a very few—cases such people are clairvoyant and in even fewer cases clairaudient.

Don't sell these people short. Most people who hear things which others do not hear and see things which others do not see are in insane asylums and belong there. But there are real out-of-the-ordinary people who actually do see what the rest of us cannot see and hear messages which never reach our ears.

Reserve your opinion if you meet such a person. He or she may be God's rich gift—to you, to a host of friends, to the world.

U. C. Y. M. Devotional Strength From Above

By JEAN SMITH
Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church

The life that Jesus lived, as related in the New Testament, calls us to a deeper and newer consecration of our lives to His teachings and purpose. We often think that we are so far from the experiences He had with God that we are unable to live as He did. But in taking this attitude, we forget that if we place our attention on the Master and pattern our lives after His, we can gain new power. Over the centuries He has said, "Your life can count for God." He assures all young people that by giving unselfishly of love and service to mankind, life can have a deeper meaning. To live for Him is to live with Him.

God is still looking for people like us to do His work in this world. One of the big questions in a young person's mind is, "How can I be fit to do the work God has planned for me?" "Where will I get the power to take on such heavy tasks?"

We say we would do what has been planned for us, but we don't have what it takes. But here again we forget, that if we are willing to do, we gain the strength from a higher power.

Other Editors Saying For Our Defense Effort

(The Raleigh Times)

History records so many instances of how sudden rays of light and hope burst beautifully through the gloomiest darkness at just the psychologically right time.

Remember that bleak winter for the American Revolution when things looked so black until Washington crossed the Delaware?

Remember how black things looked during the Battle of the Bulge until that American general snapped out his "Nuts" answer to the Nazi demand for surrender?

And, remember how worried all of us have been recently over the Russian missile situation? How we have been told by some that the Russians are so far ahead of us? And, how about all the comfort we've been able to garner during these dark days has been President Eisenhower's peevish reply to criticism that he knows more about defense than anybody and that he's satisfied?

Well, at last we have down in black and white something which must be infinitely superior to anything similar the Russians might have. It has come to light that our very own Air Force has a manual instructing enlisted men how to be good servants for officers. The Russians may have such a manual for their air force, but you can bet your last ruble it just can't be as good and as complete and as superior as our's.

For example, where in the annals of military writing could you find anything so stirring to the patriot as:

"Feeding pets may become part of your daily chores. Occasionally pets require baths. The best way to accomplish this is by using soap, water and plenty of elbow grease. The fingers are better than any mechanical device for applying soap. Rinse animal thoroughly by pouring water over him, then keep him warm until he is dry."

The manual also gets away from pets and to human beings in these deathless words: "At times you will be called upon to prepare beverages such as cocktails. Generally it is only necessary for you to know how to mix a few of the most popular ones."

On the subject of luncheons, the manual waxes truly superb: "Lace is one of the correct cloths. While light damask is never used, colored damask is appropriate. For tea tables you may use embroidered or hemstitched tea cloths."

And, if the patriot hadn't been fully impressed by such flowery talk, the manual confides: "Your contribution to the overall mission of the Air Force can be even more important than that of an aircrew member, a mechanic, or any other individual airman."

That last paragraph should really get them. It is hard to see how an airman who read that manual could be restrained from literally shedding his blood on one of the correct luncheon cloths, or washing the dog daily, instead of just when he smelled like he needed a bath. And, can't you imagine the stirring discussions going on between armen over whether the embroidered tea cloth or the hemstitched tea cloth would aid more to the American defense effort?

Unfortunately, the Air Force, after a bit of Congressional prodding, has withdrawn this manual. Presumably copies of it are even now collector's items bringing shopping prices on the black market.

But, with this manual out of the picture, what do we have that will top the Russians? At least, the country, after it got over its feeling of mixed bewilderment and disgust, can get a real solid belly laugh out of the thing.

Jazz Breaks The Ice

By KATHRYN JOHNSON

Jazz may hit a sour note with the Soviet government, but in many Russian homes it's nudging out Tschaikowsky in popularity.

Willie Ruff, a 28-year-old French horn and bass musician who says he's the first to give an impromptu jazz concert in the staid Moscow Conservatory of Music, explains:

"The government office of culture in Russia regards jazz as decadent and bourgeois. U. S. jazz as such is not officially banned, but the culture commissars take pains to ridicule it."

Nightclub jazz is discouraged, says Ruff, and the only place he found what approached a formal jazz club was a small cabaret in Leningrad. There, however, the musicians were up on every style of U. S. jazz—they had learned it from taping everything they heard over the Voice of America.

Russ says Russian popular music has a strong propaganda flavor. "It's boy meets quota, not boy meets girl," he quips.

Consequently, the Russians enjoy their jazz in small groups in the privacy of their homes. One American jazz record is recorded hundreds of times.

Ruff got both his bachelor and master of music degrees at Yale University on the GI bill. Last summer he and his partner, pianist Dwike Mitchell, 29, accompanied the Yale Chorale on its annual trip to Russia.

There he met Prof. Lev Vlasenko, who was runner-up to Van Cliburn in the Tschalkowsky piano competition a couple of years ago. Vlasenko was so impressed with the Ruff-Mitchell jazz duo he set up the conservatory concert.

Now a jazz enthusiast, Prof. Vlasenko looked up Ruff and Mitchell as soon as he got to New York recently with a delegation of Soviet students touring America. The three, with Van Cliburn, took in a Carnegie Hall concert together, non-jazz.

"He had been so helpful to us in Russia," says Ruff, who's now playing a New York night spot. "At the conservatory after our concert hundreds of students clustered around for a discussion of the technical qualities of jazz." Russ and Morrow, both Negroes, had been invited to join the chorus for the Russian trip to answer questions about the race situation in America.

After concerts, the Yale group almost all of whom spoke Russian, including Ruff, broke up into individual groups and spoke to Russians on street corners.

Opinions In Brief

"The Russians are paying us the supreme compliment of imitating our commercial agriculture. They imitate in order to compete. They acknowledge us as the world leader. Everywhere we went on the Soviet collective farms we saw posters urging the Russians to catch up and surpass the United States in agricultural production." — Sec. of Agriculture Ezra Benson.

"Says one hotel man of most conventions today, they are 'somewhat dignified affairs, a mixture of business and coeducational family-type fun'."

"Dignified, yes, and mostly dull, brother, deadly dull. We have a sneaking suspicion that those hotel magnates got together to promote the 'coeducational' convention as a means of saving on breakage." — Greenville (S.C.) News

Expense Accounts? Play It Safe

By ELMER ROESSNER

Business executives can play it safe this year by being careful in handling expenses on their income tax form.

Two actions are insisted upon by the Internal Revenue Service: 1. Do not deduct nonreimbursed business expenses unless records substantiate the claim.

2. Enter as income all expense money received above actual and provable expense spending.

The Internal Revenue Service has sounded similar warnings every year. As each payment day approaches, it has said that it was about to be tougher than ever.

Don't laugh. Its checks have become stricter every year. And it will become even stricter in 1961, because starting this year businesses are required to keep additional records showing allowances paid to officers, partners and employees.

What's the PROOF OF SPENDING? Many executives have unreimbursed expenditures. In a few cases, their salaries are supposed to take care of minor expenses; in a few other cases executives may spend more in entertainment and travel than the company allows; in many cases they have expenses that are legitimate but not chargeable to the company.

One executive pays $4,000 a year to speech writer. This surely helps him do a better job for his company, yet he dare not ask for reimbursement because the company regards him as a great writer of speeches.

Even if all these deductions are legitimate, the IRS insists that the taxpayer have records showing the purpose of the expense, the name of the person or company to whom paid, the date, the amount, and what was the product or service received.

THE HIDDEN BONUS
The IRS is giving attention to use of expense accounts as fringe benefits for executives.

Top administrators are about as smart as union leaders, and as the rank and file gained untaxed fringe benefits, the bosses have been figuring some out for themselves. Stock options, split-dollar insurance pension plans and other benefits have provided low-tax or tax-free advantages far greater than union members have gained.

One of the biggest benefits has been expense accounts. The extent of items thereon has been limited only by the employer's willingness and the employee's imagination.

They have included such things as trips with the wife along as a company employee at a token salary; refurbishing and restocking the playroom bar because the executive entertained customers at home; memberships in clubs where prospects may be happened upon; inspection tours of Florida or California branches in winter months and of Canadian affiliates in summer; company autos; permanent hotel suites for entertaining customers; clothing outfits as preparations for conventions and on, on, on.

THE CHARGE-IT CHITS
Credit cards have complicated the problem, especially since they take in vendors of almost everything. Twelve pairs of hose; female customer or wife?

A weekend at a resort hotel; prospects or girl friend? As far as the IRS is concerned, a company can send an executive around the world, or underwrite his one-man campaign to catch up with alcoholic distillation. If it's business, okay. But if it is a reward in lieu of pay, the IRS wants taxes on the money.

To Conference

Kathryn Johnson of Greenville, editor of the East Carolinian, student newspaper at East Carolina College, has been chosen by a selection committee from the Overseas Press Club as a scholarship participant in the 1960 Student Editors' Conference on International Affairs. This is the second year in succession that Miss Johnson has received the award.

The conference will take place February 19-22 at the Overseas Press Club in New York City. Sponsors are the Overseas Press Club and the U. S. National Student Association.

Air Force Team Visiting College

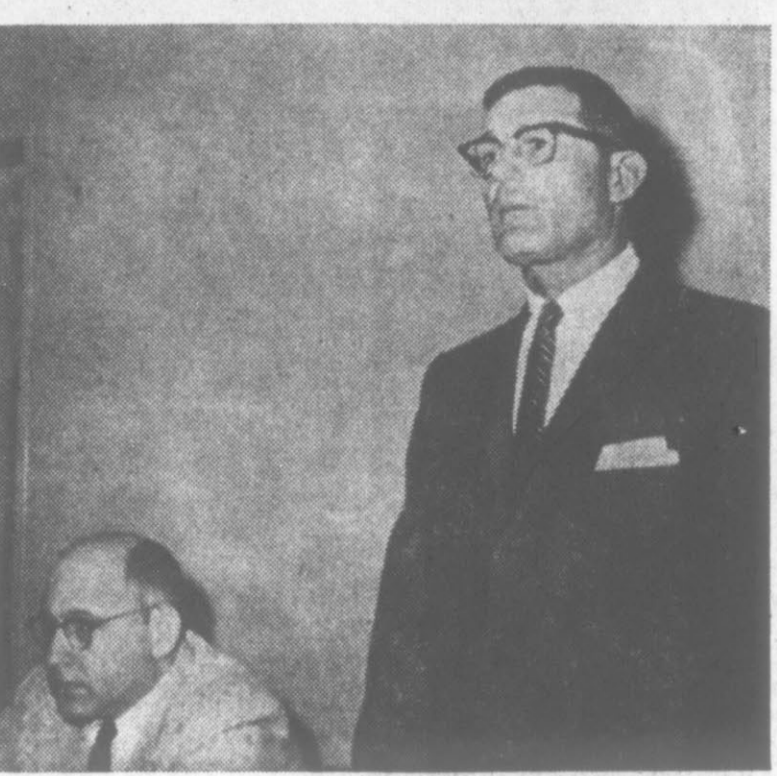

The U. S. Air Force has announced that an Air Force Aviation Cadet Selection Team will visit East Carolina College on February 9 and 10.

The team will be at ECC Student Union Center on this date from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. The Aviation Cadet Selection Team will counsel, and test anyone having the required qualifications, for two phases of the Aviation Cadet Training Program, pilot and navigator. Also, the team will counsel and assist anyone interested in the Officer Training Program.

Lt. Robert White states that his selection team invites all students of ECC and anyone from this locality to contact the team on this visit for information and testing.

The pilot and navigator programs offer extensive training and graduates receive commissions and flying ratings. The Officer Training School program, called OTS, is for college grads; accepted applicants receive commissions and are utilized in their field of college major or may receive flying training. OTS is a commissioning program for men and women. Male applicants for OTS may be married and have dependents. Age limits are: OTS 27 1/2 (flying candidates 26 1/2); navigator and pilot programs are open to single men between ages of 19 and 26 1/2 and who have completed high school, and can meet mental and physical requirements. OTS applications are accepted by the Air Force 135 days prior to graduation.

More Spent On Cancer Than N. C. Contributes

AT CANCER SOCIETY MEETING . . . Dr. Howard Gradis listens as Dr. Max Schiebel speaks to the group.

"The American Cancer Society spends more money on research in North Carolina last year than was contributed by the citizens," according to a statement made by Dr. Max Schiebel of Durham, who spoke to the Pitt County Unit of the society last night.

Dr. Schiebel, an Associate in Surgery at Duke University School of Medicine and Assistant Clinical Professor of Surgery at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine, explained the three-fold mission of the society; service, education and research.

Dr. Schiebel emphasized the important role of lay members of the society in the educational program of the Cancer Society, indicating that a successful educational program would lead to the "conquest of fear" which he declared "was half the job." He gave the "seven danger signals" and cancer films and lectures as important factors in the overall educational program.

The three major types of research; basic, applied and clinical; were also reviewed by the speaker.

Dr. Schiebel closed with the statement that, "one out of every four persons now living in America will become a cancer victim by the end of this year and with the present ratio of cancer, one out of three will develop cancer by 1970."

It was announced at the meeting that the officers and directors for the coming year will be announced in the near future.

Dr. Howard Gradis, vice-president of the unit presided at the meeting, held in the Community Room of the Guaranty Bank.

He Just Wanted A Female Genius

TORONTO (AP) — "Female genius required. Kind, benevolent boss wants punctual secretary to drive my Thunderbird," read the advertisement Frank Ogden ran only once on the comic page of Toronto papers. He got 237 replies.

The job went to Mrs. Sheila Courrier, 24, a blonde mother married to an office worker. She is working at Ogden's spacious, air-conditioned office, complete with hi-fi set and built-in bar, for a weekly salary of 360 "plus laughs."

The ad also said: "Give yourself a raise whenever you think you're worth it."

Ogden finances mortgages and runs 150 commercial buildings but recently branched out into aircraft sales and swimming pools.

"That's where I thought Sheila would be handy," said Ogden, a 39-year-old bachelor. "She is an ardent skin diver and she could demonstrate some of the pools we have."

Said Sheila, formerly employed by an insurance company: "I think the offer to let me drive his Thunderbird attracted me. It was also the idea I would have responsibility without a lot of bosses."

Plane Falls In City, Three Die

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Two men were killed and a third fatally injured when a light plane crashed in mid-San Francisco Friday night, impaling itself on a eucalyptus tree.

The injured man, Joseph Pardo, about 34, of Redwood City, was trapped in the smashed wreckage 40 feet above the ground for eight hours before he died. It was another hour before city firemen could get the body free.

Killed instantly in the crash were Anthony Kirsinagi, 27, of Santa Clara; the pilot and father of two; and John Drew, 24, of Redwood City.

The trio was returning from working at a housing tract near Napa for the American Shower Door Co. of San Carlos when the plane slammed into the trees.

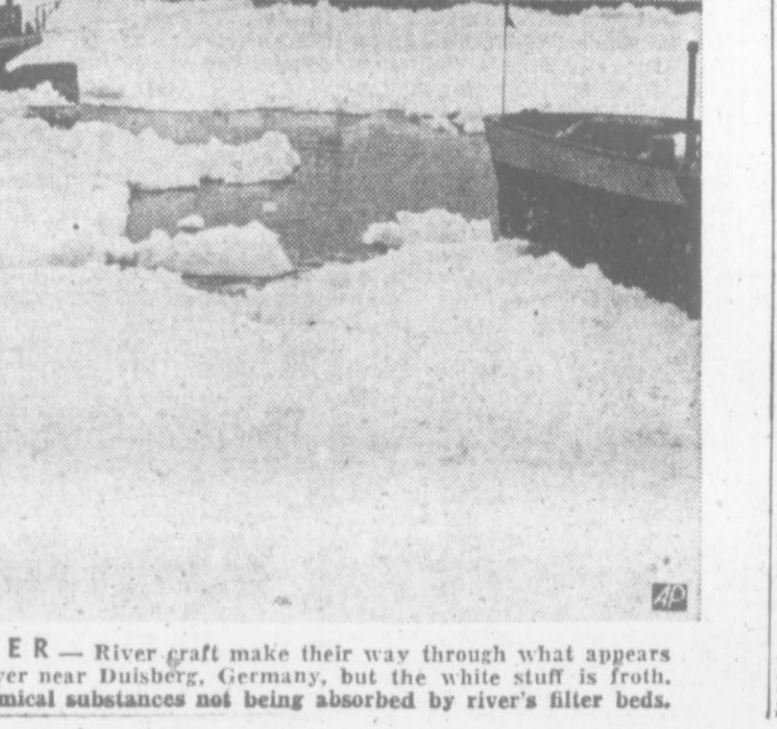

W. M. S. of Memorial Baptist Church will meet Monday evening at 8:00. The Loula Fleming Circle, Mrs. H. L. Andrews, chairman, will have charge of the program. The topic will be "In Word

Last Year's Accidents Fatal To 91,500; Cost $12 Billion

CHICAGO (AP) — Accidents killed 91,500 Americans last year. They injured 9,300,000 men, women and children.

They cost $12,600,000,000.

The National Safety Council, in so reporting today, said the 1959 death toll was just 1,000 higher than in 1958, an increase of one per cent.

Traffic accidents topped the list with 37,800 deaths, followed by home accidents with 26,500, accidents at work with 13,800 and accidents in public—excluding traffic fatalities—with 16,500.

Fatalities rose in all those classes except in the home, where there was no change in comparison with the previous year.

The council said the population death rate—the number of accidental deaths per 100,000 population—declined to a record low of 51.9.

The economic loss was calculated for both fatal and non-fatal accidents and it included wage losses, medical expense, production delays and equipment and property damage.

Falls, always a major killer in accidents, resulted in the death of 19,300 persons last year, about the same as in 1958. Deaths from burns totaled 7,400, an increase of 1 per cent from last year, while 6,500 persons drowned a decrease of 1 per cent. Firearms deaths of 2,200, were 1 per cent more than in 1958.

The council said only one catastrophe last year caused more than 50 deaths. Sixty-five persons were killed when an airplane plunged into the East River in New York City. However, there were four other accidents in which 25 or more persons died.

The council said the bulk of the accident total, as in past years, was made up of one or two-death mishaps.

The traffic death toll was 900 less than in 1957 and nearly 2,000 under the 1956 toll. The increase in deaths last year was less than half of the 5 per cent increase which occurred in motor vehicle travel, the council said.

The council said that 193 passengers and 28 crew members were killed in 1959 in 8 accidents which occurred in the domestic passenger-carrying operations of scheduled air carriers.

In the first eight months of 1959, the latest information available, 1,346 persons were killed in all categories of railroad accidents compared with 1,437 in 1958. The preliminary estimate of fire losses, made by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, was $1,047,000,000, 1 per cent lower than the comparable preliminary estimate for 1958.

(Continued from Page 4) of answer to the questions just raised: If American defense against the Soviet Union is adequate to prevent a Soviet attack, since it would in effect be a worldwide defense, it would be just as much a protection for the allies as for America.

Meanwhile, of course, the military front is not the only one on which the cold war in the years ahead will be fought.

For instance, this country will probably step up its aid to other nations, particularly neutrals like India, to stiffen their backbones and put them in the American camp, granted American and Soviet power come down to being equal in necessary power even though different in size.

Club Hears Talk On Insurance

"Your Insurance Policy" was the subject of a talk last night by J. C. Lawrence, assistant district manager of the Goldsboro District of the N. Mutual Life Insurance Co., at the meeting of the Les Hommes Club at the home of I. A. Artis.

Lawrence pointed out the public is too careless about insurance investments. He said investors should examine policies often enough to keep coverage in line with economic advancement, avoid making a minor a beneficiary where there are no other "clean" funds, and should the present beneficiary die before the policyholder, name a new beneficiary immediately.

The next Les Hommes Club meeting will be at the home of J. J. Brown, 222 Barwick St., Ayden.

Mystery Sniper Has 2 Victims

NEW YORK (AP) — A mysterious sniper wounded two pedestrians Friday at an entrance to the Empire State Building. The shootings took place over a span of three hours.

Both victims were in good condition after treatment. More than 40 policemen searched the busy area in midtown Manhattan without finding a clue.

Shortly before 11 a. m., the first victim, Mrs. Kathleen Cleary, 46, of Brooklyn, was nearing the 34th Street entrance to the world's tallest building when she heard what she thought was a firecracker. She felt a sharp pain in her hip.

Mrs. Cleary continued on to a branch bank in the building. She is employed by a Wall Street branch of the same bank and had been sent to the Empire State branch to help out there.

Inside, she found blood on her dress and was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where a .22-caliber bullet was removed from her right hip.

At 1:50 p. m. Knute Kyvyk, 59, also of Brooklyn, a messenger employed in the building, was nearing the same entrance — just 50 yards from Fifth Avenue — when he felt a sting in his left shoulder. Not until he got home and took off his shirt did he discover the bullet wound.

Kyvyk was taken to Long Island College Hospital. It appeared that a small-caliber bullet had pierced his shoulder from the rear, coming out in the front.

Police believed the same weapon fired both bullets, from above street level.

Four In Family Suffocate Today

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Four members of a northeast Philadelphia family suffocated today in a fire which created intense smoke and heat.

Police identified the victims as Peter Danksha, 44, a Norristown, Pa., machine operator; his wife Jane, 40; and their two children, Kathleen, 5, and Mary Ellen, 10. There were no survivors.

Police Lt. Thomas Gleason said the fire started in a sofa in the living room of the Dankshas' two-story brick home. The blaze was confined to the living room.

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo authorities today indicted 21 Japanese students as ringleaders of a riot staged at Tokyo's International Airport Jan. 16 in an attempt to block Prime Minister Nobusuke Kishi's departure for the United States.

The students belong to a left-wing group which opposed the new U. S. — Japanese security treaty which Kishi went to Washington to sign.

Boy Robs Store With Toy Pistol

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A 14-year-old boy held up a grocery store with a toy pistol Friday night, escaped with $60 but was captured making his getaway on a stolen bike.

Deputy T. S. Hood nabbed the boy a few minutes after the holdup. In the basket of the bicycle was a cap pistol and a sack of money he had taken from manager Earl Bridges.

The youngster told detective J. R. Leavelle he staged the holdup to "get money to buy me a car."

Find No Trace Of Young Bandit

RALEIGH (AP) — Police reported no results Saturday in their search for a youth who held up a loan company office Friday and got away with $838.

George F. Hannon, manager of the Federal Acceptance Corp. office, told police the youth came in during the lunch period while he was alone and inquired about making a loan. Hannon got an application blank.

"That'll take too long," the robber told Hannon. "Just give me what you've got in the drawer." Hannon said the youth slapped him, breaking his spectacles and told him:

"Don't be a hero. I've got a gun in my pocket. Do you want me to use it?"

Discuss Ethics At Faculty Meet

Long Day For The Prison Guard

GUARDS . . . as they take their weapons from the locked steel chest.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The day of prison guard starts early and runs late. They go to work at 6:15 a.m. and if they are lucky, they get off at 5:45 in the afternoon.

If they are unlucky, they have the "duty shift" and work all night and all the following day. Half of the guards at the Pitt County Prison camp are unlucky every other night.

The guards who pull duty at the camp the night before arise at 5:45 a.m. about the time the other men, who were able to go home, arrive.

The prisoners are awakened about 6 o'clock and fed for the day.

At 7:15 a.m. the trucks are brought from the highway shops to the prison to take on their load of workers for the day. But before the prisoners are allowed to enter the trucks, each vehicle goes through a routine shake-down procedure which is conducted by the guards.

The prisoners are then lined up in the prison yard, counted by the foreman and, while the guards are posted around the trucks and in the tower, the prisoners are loaded into the waiting vehicle.

Contrary to popular belief, practically the only time guards are on duty in the towers at the corners of the prison yard are when the vehicles are loaded and unloaded.

When the prisoners are safely tucked away in the trucks, the foreman again counts the men, then the guard, to make doubly sure, counts them again, and mounts his trailer while the foreman holds his shotgun.

The guard, employed by the prison department, is responsible for the custody and safety of the prisoners. The foreman, an employee of the highway department, is in charge of working the convicts.

As the caravan pulls from the prison yard the trucks go their separate ways to their jobs. Later, as the truck pulls to a stop at the site of the days work, the guard dismounts and again the prisoners are counted as they climb down from the truck. The prisoners are counted each time they are loaded and unloaded and many times in between.

All day long the guard stands beside the road, his watchful eyes ever on the men who are working, hoping one or more of them will not try to escape. If they do start to run, he would be forced to level his gun at the fleeing men and fire, hoping to stop them. Most of the days are peaceful.

The trucks return to the prison about 5 p.m. and the inmates are unloaded. They wash, eat supper, sit around the cell block, then go to sleep.

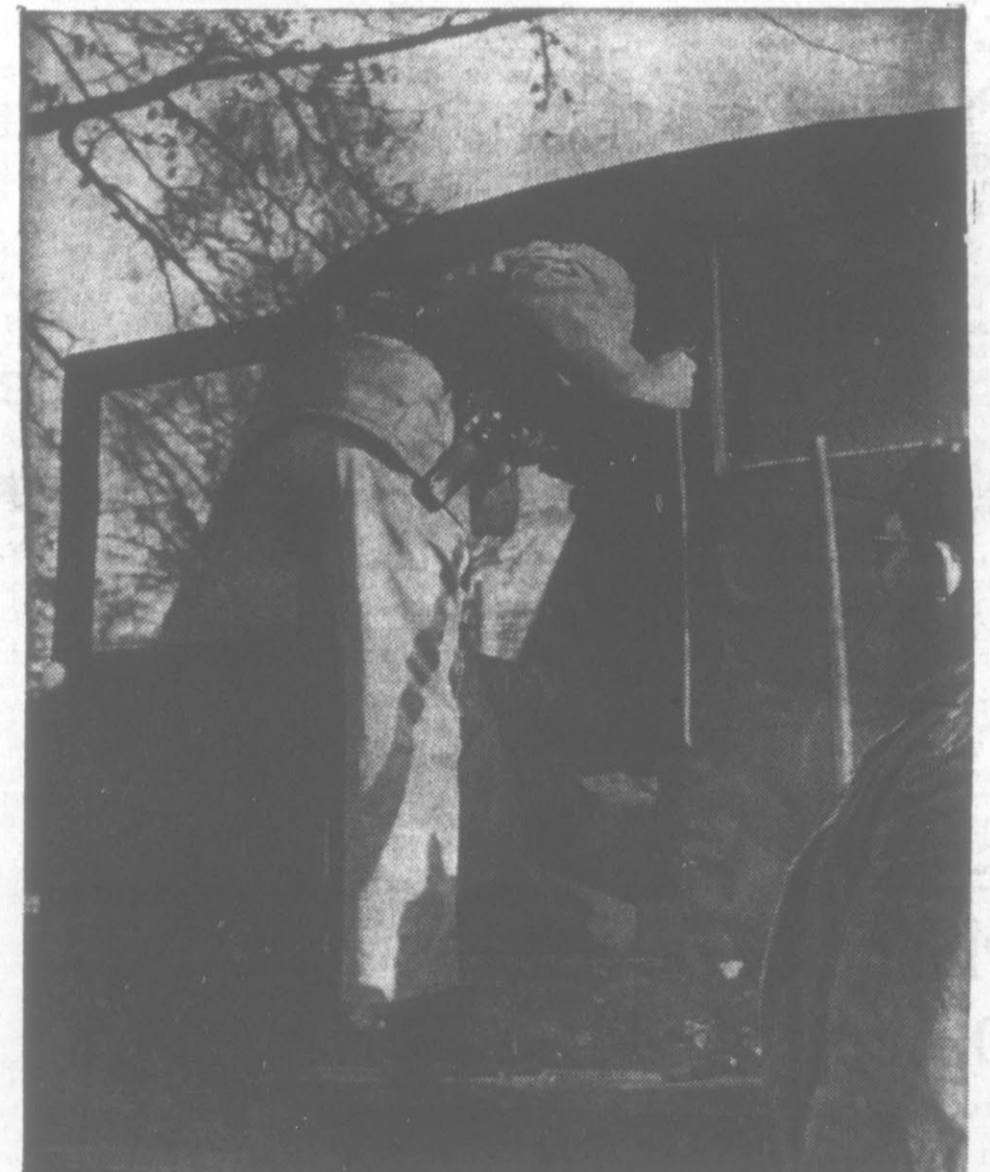

At 5:45 p.m. the guards who kept watch over the barred windows and high wire fence the preceding night are allowed to go home to their wives and children while "the lucky ones" from the night before settle down for a period of watching and waiting, and hoping that nothing will happen.

HIGH UP . . . on a tower overlooking the trucks as they load.

AFTER LOADING . . . guards hurry to mount their trailers.

WHILE GUARD . . . climbs into trailer, the foreman holds his gun.

THE USUAL ARMS . . . 38 caliber pistol and .12 gauge shotgun with "O" buckshot.

THE CUSTODIAN . . . a guard with prisoners "under the gun" leads a hard and lonely life and is charged with a great responsibility.

CIA Director Seen As Top Spy By Soviet Satellites

By ENDRE MARTON
WASHINGTON (AP) — During the bloody purge trials in the Soviet satellite countries in the late 1940s, the defendants were usually confronted with a photograph.

"Do you know this man?" they were asked. The answer usually was a blank stare. The picture of the court was told, showed the most dangerous spy of the "imperialists," the arch - enemy of communism and the chief agent of U.S. intelligence.

The carefully handpicked audience frequently reacted with a snicker. It was hard to believe that the bespectacled, white-haired man with a benevolent smile should be a top expert in cloak and dagger operations.

who is utterly relaxed, not disturbed by anything and blessed with the rare talent to view the world around him with cool objectivity.

He regards this gift as essential. Every morning a terse summary of CIA's intelligence reports winds up on President Eisenhower's desk. It simply could not be written with the slightest tinge of subjectivity, Allen Dulles believes.

Business Group Elects Officers

Ronald L. Henry of Kinston has been elected president of the Society for the Advancement of Management, organization of students of business at East Carolina College.

With other newly elected officers of the society, Henry will begin his duties at the beginning of the spring quarter, March 2 and will continue in office through the winter quarter of the 1960-1961 school year.

Serving with Henry as SAM leaders are Malcolm James Baldard, Jr., of Wilmington, vice president; Paul D. Jenkins of Newport, secretary; and Floyd Smith of Grifton, treasurer.

Today Dulles displays the same smile when he tells congressional committees about the Soviet Union's strength.

He is regarded as the greatest authority in intelligence since the death of William J. "Wild Bill" Donovan, the man who hired him. All signs indicate the 66-year-old Dulles likes his $22,000 a year hush-hush job. Friends quote him as saying his sole ambition in government is to stay on as intelligence chief for the rest of his life.

Last week Dulles testified before five groups on Capitol Hill, but he didn't seem to mind the added activity. His associates describe him as a "terrific worker" well, which also included his brother, John Foster, the late secretary of state.

Early in World War II Donovan recruited him for the Office of Strategic Services, an outfit concerned with ferreting out enemy secrets. His job was to organize an American espionage center in Switzerland where he found contact with German and Italian underground leaders.

The United States had fairly good knowledge on what was going on in Hitler's headquarters, indicating that Dulles succeeded in planting his agents in Nazi Germany.

Dulles became deputy director of CIA in 1951 and two years later was named to head the supersecret organization.

His only son, Allen, a Marine lieutenant, was severely wounded in the Korean War. The Dullesses (he married the former Clover Todd in 1920) also have two daughters.

English Channel Tunnel Found To Be Feasible

By HARVEY HUDSON
PARIS (AP) — The men who dream of building a tunnel under the English Channel will report next week that the project is technically feasible.

If construction started this fall, trains could be rolling through the double-line railway passage within five years.

The big problem is financial. The estimated cost is 250 to 300 million dollars but the promoters believe the money can be raised if the British and French governments really want the dry-land link first proposed in the 16th Century.

The Channel tunnel study group, which has been looking into the complicated scheme for almost two years, will make its first report to the British and French railway companies, both government owned, at a joint meeting opening Monday in London.

If the railway administrations approve the plans, the next step will be to start negotiating a treaty with the British and French governments. Financial experts are convinced that special tax concessions are needed before they can raise the necessary funds.

No Warning Of Impending Crash

HONOLULU (AP) — Dale D. Klaus, 21, survivor of a Navy plane crash that killed three airmen, said Friday there had been no warning of trouble.

"Suddenly there was a crash and I found myself in the water," said the Highland, Ill., crewman of the twin-engine Gruman tracker that crashed after taking off from the carrier Yorktown near Oahu Island Wednesday.

Skindivers Hunt Plane Wreckage

The pieces will be put through laboratory analysis in Washington to see if they can tell anything more about what caused the crash that killed 34 people. Prevalent theory is that an explosion or bomb blast caused it.

A CAB spokesman said some of the latest pieces were found close to the place Julian A. Frank's body was located. The New York lawyer's body was found about 20 miles from the bodies of other victims. His life was insured for nearly a million dollars.

The CAB said the latest find included three pieces of window plexiglass, a window curtain, oxygen bottle, and a light from the side wall of the fuselage, used by pilots to check on icing conditions.

The backers may ask the governments to limit the tax on profits to about 25 per cent. They believe this would make the project attractive enough to raise the capital on international money markets.

An international consortium has received active plans for the tunnel. Participating are the old Suez Canal Co., a British-French corporation which is 44 per cent owned by the British government; the French Concessionary Co. and the Channel Tunnel Co. Ltd., which actually started digging a tunnel in 1881, and an American financial group called Technical Studies Inc. Each group holds a 25 per cent interest in the present venture.

The plans are restricted to a railway tunnel for several reasons. One is the added cost required for both automobile and rail lines. Another is the problem of ventilating a 36-mile tunnel—22 miles of it under the sea—to remove automobile exhaust fumes.

Then there is the inconvenience of auto breakdowns inside the tunnel. So trucks, buses and autos would be loaded onto freight cars for the trip.

French railway officials are enthusiastic about the possibilities. "It would cut the trip between the center of London and the center of Paris to about four hours," a spokesman said.

Philippine Congress Has Opened Its 'Biggest Show'

MANILA (AP) — The Philippine Congress has opened its annual 100-day session. It is always the best show in town.

Congress has its share of sober, hard-working legislators. But while they are busy grinding out the nation's laws, the spotlight is on a group of congressmen who can manage an hour-long speech at the slightest provocation, or none at all, investigate almost everything in or out of sight, and find time for about one fist fight a week.

One lawmaker once introduced a bill to outlaw typhoons after a particularly bad storm season.

Another burned a copy of an American magazine on the floor with great ceremony because he didn't like an article in it. It turned out he hadn't read the article in question. But his action started a rash of burnings on the floor of the House of Representatives. A whole string of documents that had rubbed legislators the wrong way were put to the torch.

Philippinos play at politics as hard as any people on earth. This is reflected in the 102-member House, where lawmakers often have to be pulled apart physically. The upper house, the Senate, has only 24 members and is comparatively sedate.

The lower house is the scene of most of the grafted and corruption that are a commonplace in Philippine life. These are invariably conducted with at least one eye on the press and an ear to radio broadcasts. Sensational charges are hurled with abandon. In the end, almost no one goes to jail or even loses his job in the government.

At the end of the session, the leadership usually hammers the membership into line, and the nation's bills get passed.

When you get together a group of hand-picked, well-trained performers, and put them under an intelligent and inspiring conductor, the result is certain: a concert of superlative qualities. Add to this musicianly and imaginative insight into the art of good programming, and you have the picture of what last evening's concert by the East Carolina College Concert band was like.

Each year it seems their performances get better in one way or another, but last night showed the band at its best. The most obvious improvement seemed to be in the greater symphonic quality achieved and his was due in a large degree to the overall blend of the band exhibited. It was as if each player was a single piece of a giant jig-saw puzzle; but then when the puzzle is put together, the lines outlining each piece disappear, leaving a completed and unified whole. This was the type of blend the band achieved last evening. Each person, each choir seemed to have been congealed into an inseparable unit. Because of this blend the tone was something not customarily achieved by many bands, even the one in question.

So far as sound is concerned, perhaps the numbers best demonstrating this "new" quality were the opening Arioso by Clifton Williams, and the Procession to the Cathedral from Wagner's "Lohengrin." Both of these showed what a closely-knit tone this band can get. The Wagner was the better done, with an expertly controlled climax which lasted for an almost unendurable time and then crashed in customary Wagnerian fashion. These are the really difficult crescendoes—the long drawn-out ones, in which, if the conductor gives too much too soon, he suddenly finds himself needing more but the supply already empty. The attack opening this number was a wee bit unsteady, and at the end one clarinetist wanted to play one extra note. But the finely executed flute-work and the well-wrought intensity of the music blacked out these two "sour notes." The Williams number, a sustained work with much unison writing, was a real test of intonation, and with the exception of a few measures at the opening, this test was well taken.

The most exciting selections were the Intermezzo for Band by Donald Thompson where the rhythmic difficulties and the contrapuntal writing were well handled (a selection showing off to advantage every choir of the band), and the Chaser Overture by William Schumann, revealing some remarkable work in dynamics, displaying the horns and brass to good effect, and which was momentarily marred at the opening by one flat clarinet.

Dramatically speaking, Giannini's Praeludium and Allegro took top honors. Here was an extremely difficult piece, but which was done with conviction. This, though, and the kind of selection which even a band like this one must grow into (like a pianist with Beethoven's "Hammerklavier Sonata"), and I should like to hear this number again after it has ripened and matured in the minds of the players.

Perhaps the most interesting listening was the Leist number called "Timpat", which featured the tympani played by Steve Clements. This was a piece filled with great contrasts; but the things which made this such interesting listening was the stereophonic effect achieved. The tone seemed to come from first one side, then the other, then from the middle, then from all three together, an effect produced by the clever writing and an intelligent performance.

Gayle Eaker, trumpet, was featured soloist in the Hummel Concerto. Here the difficult feat of soloist and band staying together was deftly handled, with the proper amount of support from the band, and an exhibition of fine tone and technique on the part of the soloist.

Other numbers heard were the Procession of the Hobles by Rimsky-Korsakov which provided the listeners with some thrilling work on the part of the trumpets, and the Portrait of the Land, by Quinn, which closed the printed program. With the few exceptions noted herein, the attacks and releases were uniformly good. One disturbing note, however: the beating of time with the feet was quite audible during many of the selections (and I was sitting a good third of the way back.) Others noticed it, too, so it was not something that disturbed only me. But even this, and the three other "scars," were decidedly minimized by the consummate effect the band achieved, and it is completely understandable that this band, and its director, Herbert L. Carter, are occupying an enviable place in the field of band-music in the south-east

ORDER

As Walt Hollinger turned into the front gate of his Circle H, a bitter, deadly feeling of discouragement made his bones ache with weariness.

He had ridden all afternoon, and either he or Rusty McGowan had talked to most of the small ranchers.

Because they were his friends, they had pretended to listen to him, but he had seen that none of them were seriously worried.

Wade Bennett had a little daughter desperately sick with something that looked like scarlet fever and that was enough to use up all his worry room.

"Damn it, Walt!" he said. "I can't think about nothing like that now!"

Walt touched his arm briefly. "I'm sorry, Wade. If I'd known about Mary I wouldn't have bothered you. We can talk about it later."

Walt stepped into the saddle again. "Me or one of the boys will be past every day or so. You send us word if you need anything."

He rode on to the Hampton ranch. Wiley and Ross Hampton were bachelor twins in their mid-fifties.

They were quiet, hard-working, unsocial men. They were more concerned with the fall roundup and the prospect of getting their cattle quickly to market over a railroad for the first time, than over any faint chance of losing their land some time in the distant future.

But they weren't complete fools. They agreed reluctantly to come to Walt's on the next night and hear what other ranchers had to say.

Tom Klassen's place was next. Tom was just finishing tacking a loose shoe back on a horse when Walt rode up. He wiped his hands on the sides of his levis, and nodded when Walt told him what he had come for.

"I've been thinking the same thing myself," he said soberly. "That Indian raid business sounds phony as hell to me. The Indians haven't been bothering anybody anywhere for fifteen years. Come on in the house a minute. I expect Liz has got the coffee hot."

His wife called a pleasant, "Howdy, Walt," as they went in. "Liz—Walt and I have just been talking and we both agreed that it's time we done something to really straighten out our titles to these ranches in the valley."

Mrs. Klassen smiled at Walt. "Maybe so," she said placidly. "But somehow I can't be much worried."

Walt took a quick breath, and began explaining patiently again. "I know, ma'am," he agreed pleasantly. "It doesn't seem to make sense to be worried—when these titles have been all right for fifty years. But I'm thinking about the future. Pete Rayburn is a sick man. And when he is gone we are likely going to have to deal with Dwight Mitchell. That may be a different story. I think we'd better take steps to get it settled—as soon as we can."

Mrs. Klassen smiled again. "We won't have nothing to worry about from Dwight," she said. "I think he's real nice. And that foreman of his—Clint Barrow—honestly, he's a card."

Tom raised his eyes from his coffee cup like he was going to speak, and then didn't.

Mrs. Klassen went on unhurriedly: "People gossip about the Sombrero folks just because they're jealous. For my part I never listen to gossip—especially when it's about my friends. I just don't believe that either Mr. Rayburn or Dwight Mitchell will ever mean any harm to any of us that never give them any trouble."

Walt said mildly: "I don't think the Stallings ever gave them any trouble. But a bunch of cowboys dressed up like Indians shot his bull and trampled down his corn patch, day before yesterday."

Mrs. Klassen laughed, but she began to look angry.

"Gossip!" she said scornfully. "I've heard some folks say they thought the Sombrero was behind those raids—but I just don't believe it. They wouldn't be no reason for it. I think it's Injuns doing that devilry, and it's the sheriff's business to stop it. Besides, they ain't bothered us! And that proves what I just said. Nobody's going to harm folks that don't make trouble for them!"

There didn't seem to be much use to try to argue with Liz Klassen's kind of logic. Liz at least was squarely on the other side of the fence. Tom still hadn't said anything. He was looking down at the floor, a slight frown on his face.

Walt picked up the hat he had laid on the floor beside his chair and stood up. He slapped the hat across his leg once.

"Anyhow, Tom, we're still going to have the meeting—and we'll be glad to have you come and speak your mind if you feel like it."

Mrs. Klassen smiled at Walt. "We don't want to seem unneighborly, Walt. I just don't want Tom involved in no gun-fighting trouble. We aren't having no trouble now—and it don't make sense to go out hunting it."

Tom Klassen finally found words. "Thanks for stopping by, Walt. I may be able to come to the meeting, but don't count on it. I'm mighty busy with the fall roundup."

"Sure," said Walt. "I understand."

Tom Klassen followed him, outside. "You see how it is, Walt. Liz is right. I'm a married man with a couple of kids. I can't afford to go hunting trouble."

Walt didn't argue it. There wasn't any use. He could have got mad and sworn and blistered Tom Klassen with his tongue, but all it would have done would be to make an enemy out of a former friend. Liz was calling the tune for the Klassen and Liz was a silly woman.

From the saddle Walt looked down at the other man.

"Look out trouble don't come huntin' you, Tom."

There were two more small ranches on the disputed land, the Ordenez place, and the Bradleys', but they were both across the river and Rusty McGowan was going to see them.

Walt squinted at the sun. It was late but there was some sun time yet. He decided to make the long ride up to Willow Creek and see if the raiders had returned or done any further damage after shooting Johnny. It would throw him late getting home, but he was used to riding after dark.

It was some hours and the finding of one dead bull later that he rode into his own gate.

Rusty was a few minutes ahead of him. His sweat-damp horse was still rolling in the dust of the corral, but Rusty was sitting on the front steps, taking a last drag on a cigaret before going to bed. Walt squatted down beside him.

"It looks like trouble a-brewin' sure enough, Rusty, and we've got no water hot."

Rusty nodded soberly. "Looks that way," he agreed. "You have any luck scarin' anybody?"

Walt shook his head. "They all got other worries that look a heap more fork-tailed than Dwight Mitchell. When I got through listening to Liz Klassen talk about what a nice fellow Dwight was, I rode up to Willow Creek—and found ol' Prince Comino dead—with a bullet through his heart."

Rusty whistled softly. "I talked myself blue in the face," he said. "The Ordenez folks were mighty friendly and hospitable. But the best I could get out of them was a promise to talk to old Don Luis Morales. They more or less agreed to take his advice. With Seth Brady it was nothin' doin' all the way. He agrees that Dwight's a first-class stinker and landgrabber—but the Bradley place is across the river, on the outer edge of the land the Sombrero claims, and he figures he's got a better chance to just shut his eyes and pretend trouble ain't there than to 'ramp up and start lookin' for it."

Walt's late-hour visitor brings an ominous warning. The story continues here tomorrow.

Also Expert On Adult Education

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Miss S. Rand spoke to the Downtown Kiwanis Club recently on the subject of "Adult Education."

Long an advocate of adult education, Miss Rand is also a recognized expert on the terpsichorean usage of the plumes of an ostrich. In other words, fan dancing.

Her first name is Sally.

By Dr. Ed Hirschberg

We will go out on a limb again in favor of English as she should be spoken by calling your attention this week to an article in the new west—February—ATLANTIC, entitled "Grammar Is Obsolete," by Wilson Follett. In it Mr. Follett, who is an author and editor, takes smartly to task the usage criterion of good English which we also have more than once deplored.

His special target is "A Dictionary of Contemporary American Usage," by Bergson and Cornelia Evans, which he says is a compendium of all the bad things that have been done to the English language in America over the past decade or so. Its standard is not, "How can we say it in the best possible manner?" but simply, "Will it do in a pinch?"

not, according to Mr. Follett, nearly good enough, and we will agree with him wholeheartedly. Here is his concluding statement about what he thinks standards of good writing and speaking should be.

"Let those who choose define usage as what a swarm of folk say or write by reason of laziness, shiftlessness, or ignorance; the tenable definition is still what the judicious do as a result of all that they can muster of conscious discrimination. It is time we had a philosophy of usage grounded on the steadfast conviction that the best, whether or not we have it in us to attain it, is not too good to be aspired to. Even though a preposition is what he ends his article with, we're still convinced he has the right idea."

Harvard Report

Every year President Pusey of Harvard writes a report on the activities of the University, and we've just received ours, since he sends it out to all sorts of people. Harvard, as you know, has just completed the biggest fund-raising campaign in the history of private education, and has topped its goal of $2 million and some dollars.

In his report, President Pusey mentioned that over 25 million in construction of new buildings had been completed or was in progress. Concerning their importance he had this to say: "All these buildings are of course only means. The significant part of the University continues to reside in the minds and intellectual activity of the 13,000 students and more than 4,500 members of the Faculty who make up the University community. Buildings, we will agree with President Pusey, are not ends in themselves, but means—means to meet the needs of the students and Faculty, who comprise the true lifeblood of what goes on in every campus community worthy of the name of a college or university."

Local Scene

Both opera and ballet will be coming to Greenville in short order. Carlo Menotti's THE MEDIUM will have two performances, February 20 and 21, with the musical coaching in the charge of Paul Hickfang.

On Monday a new young ballet company, the American Ballet Centre, will be at Wright for a one-night stand as part of the ECC Entertainment series.

On the serious side, there will be a free showing of a very worthwhile film, ASSIGNMENT MANKIND, about the work of the foreign and home news reporters on the international newspaper, the Christian Science Monitor, one of the great news periodicals of the world. The showing of ASSIGNMENT MANKIND will be this Sunday evening at 7:45 in the Joyner Library Auditorium at ECC.

Today's Review

The Chairman of ECC's English Department contributes his comments on a recent book about education, and the Catholic Church.

THE CATHOLIC VIEWPOINT ON EDUCATION, By Neil G. McCluskey, S.J. New York: Hanover House, 1959.

The author of CATHOLIC VIEWPOINT ON EDUCATION is Jesuit Father Neil G. McCluskey, who for the past several years has been Editor of AMERICA, and who is a foremost authority on Catholic education in the United States. The volume is one of a Catholic Viewpoint series of volumes published by Doubleday.

The book concerns many problems relating to elementary and secondary education—public and private (especially Catholic). Some of its pronouncements would also apply to college education. The work presents the historical development of both public and private education in the United States and many problems of each, both old and current. It considers highly controversial matters ranging from basic educational philosophy to bus rides and from the separation of church and state to recent court decisions concerning school lunches.

If ever a book was written to dispel misunderstanding, this one is. No intelligent reader who wants to understand the Catholic viewpoint on education and who reads this book can fail to understand it, for the statements of fact and highly controversial matters documented. The book presents apologies on the highest level. The style employed avoids the extremes of scholarly jargon on the one hand and of false simplicity on the other. No book on a subject of this sort could be written more dispassionately or with more earnestness or honesty. The author understands both the Catholic viewpoint and the thinking of critics of that viewpoint, and so far as is humanly possible for an apologist presents each fairly.

OUT OF THE PAST

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—About 300 million years ago, says the Ohio Department of Natural Resources, a vast inland sea extended from what is now Lake Erie South across Ohio to West Virginia. It deposited salt up to 300 feet thick in some places and this is now the basic ingredient for about 14,000 manufacturing and industrial processes.

Pediatrics Book Is For Collectors

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—A new edition of Textbook of Pediatrics has become something of a collector's item at the University of Tennessee Medical School.

The work, edited by Dr. Waldo E. Nelson of Temple University, has 1,413 pages. In fairness to Nelson, medical sources here say that it was someone else who compiled the index, someone who obviously didn't care much for the job, or pediatrics.

For there among the "B's," between "biotin" and "birth," is: "Birds, for the pages 1-1413."
