Rep. Wooten Up For Re-Election

Greenville attorney Frank M. Wooten Jr. announced today he has filed for re-election for a third consecutive term as one of Pitt County's two representatives to the House of Representatives.

Wooten said he filed last night with D. Spruill Spain, chairman of the county elections board, as an entry in the May 28 Democratic Primary.

Wooten, a member of the Municipal Government Study Commission, created by a bill he introduced in 1957, is the first candidate to file in Pitt County, though several have begun to file during past weeks throughout the state.

The Greenville lawyer was first elected in 1956 and served during the special session during the summer of that year called to discuss the Pearsall Plan for the state's public education system.

He served in the regular sessions of 1957 and 1959, receiving one of nine appointments to the Municipal Government Study Commission in the former session.

Recommendations of the commission, created to study problems confronting municipal governments in the state, were adopted with minor changes by last year's General Assembly.

Wooten told the Daily Reflector this morning the next Assembly will surely be confronted with urgent matters that will take careful thought and consideration to solve.

He indicated many of these problems will require temporary solutions until proper courses can be carefully plotted for the state's future policies of solution.

Iraq Says No To Red-Run Radio

CAIRO (AP) — Iraq's Premier Abiel Karim Kassem took another big step away from Moscow Wednesday night.

Bahad radio announced the Premier had refused to license the Moscow-backed Iraqi Communist party of Abdulla Bustani as an official political party. Instead, Kassem granted a license to a splinter Communist party headed by Daoud Sayegh, which international communism has denounced as a "disrupting gang."

Diplomats in Cairo believe Kassem's action may bring open conflict between Bustani's powerful forces and Kassem.

Maternity Nurse Is Moving In

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth's maternity nurse is expected to move into Buckingham Palace in the next 24 hours in preparation for the birth of the Queen's third baby. Latest medical examinations show the baby is likely to be born this weekend, authoritative sources said. The Queen sent word to the nurse Helen Rowe to stand by for an urgent call.

Big Wine Tanker Saved In Storm

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The tanker Angelo Petri was ready to return to port for repairs today, her cargo of 2 1/2 million gallons of wine still intact, after 26 hours of heavy buffeting in a storm.

The seven-million-dollar 23,500-ton ship, world's largest wine tanker, spent the night at sea near the San Francisco lightship, 12 miles from the Golden Gate.

The tugs Mikimiki, Sea Wolf and Sea Fox had lines on the Petri, ready for a tow to the Bethlehem Shipyard here.

The storm that almost wrecked the 530-foot vessel abated Wednesday.

No life was lost. The full extent of her damage still was to be tallied.

The Petri, bound for Houston, Tex., was only four miles from the Golden Gate Tuesday morning when huge waves poured through her ventilators, shorting out her controls. As the crew struggled to control the ship, they found her rudder had been lost.

The crew at first thought the ship was going to break up. Fourteen of the 41 men aboard were brought ashore by Coast Guard helicopters. Then Capt. Edward A. Lehn Jr. decided she could be saved.

Coast Guard cutters and tugs worked through the night Tuesday to get tow lines to the Petri. They towed her out to deeper waters, and awaited today's tides to bring her back into port.

Local Firemen Among Crews At New Bern Blaze

NEW BERN — Fire-fighters from six near-by towns, including Greenville, were summoned to help fight a fire of undetermined origin which destroyed a two-story brick building in downtown New Bern early today.

The blaze, fanned in its early stages by winds of 25 to 30 miles-per-hour, completely destroyed the building which housed the Ace Electric Co. According to Sgt. Ray Wetherington of the New Bern Fire Department, the structure also housed a furniture store warehouse and a refrigerator concern.

The high winds subsided and only periodic gales hindered the fire fighters some three hours after the alarm was turned in at 12:50 a.m. Rain also started falling and helped contain the blaze.

Unofficial estimates placed damage at up to $100,000.

Nine Greenville firemen; Capt. Ray Smith and Jessen Allen, James Hathaway, Jimmy Smith, Roy Hardee, Lee Dail, Stuart Savage, Roger Page and Harrol Ross; and a 750-gallon-per-minute pumper made the trip to New Bern.

Other departments sending aid to the city include: Cherry Point, Bridgeton, Vanceboro, Washington and Kinston.

New Bern fire department spokesmen said the other departments were called when it was feared the winds might cause the blaze to quickly spread to other buildings in the town's business center. Officials added that fire departments in this area have an agreement to lend aid to any town in the event of an emergency.

Ohio Industry Is Moving To N.C.

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Ohio Rubber Corp. a Marietta, Ohio, industry since 1951, announced Wednesday it will move its entire operation to Waynesville, N.C., within a month.

Sponge Rubber, a subsidiary of Dayton Rubber Co., manufacturers urethane, a foam substance used in furniture construction. The Marietta plant employs 115.

The firm announced its decision to move is based on the fact the North Carolina site is closer to the center of the furniture industry it serves and should result in important transportation economies.

Britain Building Five Reactors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A member of the British Atomic Energy Authority says Great Britain now has under construction five new nuclear power plants which will produce two million kilowatts of electricity. Sir William Cook, here to make an address, said the output would be more than any other nation in the world. Britain now has eight reactors supplying 300,000 kilowatts, he said.

'Dark Satellite' In Orbit Suspected Soviet Origins

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dark satellite that the Pentagon said may be of Soviet origin tumbled through space today in an orbit of mystery.

Its path over the poles was one that would be desirable for any type of "seeing eye" space spy. Moscow was saying nothing about it.

Here's all that's known about the mystery object, according to the Defense Department:

It appears to be in a near polar orbit. It is dark and is probably less than 19 feet long. It is silent, as far as U. S. monitors are concerned.

But American space scientists have not ruled out the possibility that the satellite could be sending messages if triggered by a remote receiving station in the Soviet Union. However, these scientists have learned from experience that it is difficult to receive signals from a space vehicle tumbling in orbit, as this one appears to be doing.

At Jodrell Bank in England, scientists at the British radio telescope said they knew of no satellite sent aloft by the Soviets recently and that they have no information on any new satellite around the poles.

Navy tracking stations first spotted the object about three weeks ago, but the Defense Department said nothing about it.

There was no official comment until after word was publicized Wednesday that the Pentagon was buzzing with "what is it?" speculation.

American scientists quickly eliminated the possibility that the space traveler was one of the known American or Soviet satellites which had been launched in

Nikita Addresses India Parliament

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, welcomed to India by perhaps 250,000 persons, told Parliament today all international disputes should be settled on the principle of peaceful coexistence.

"The way out of all disputes should be sought through negotiations and not through pressure and dictation," he said in the first major speech of his four-day tour of Asia.

Khrushchev, wearing a light blue suit, received a huge ovation from standing members as he passed down the aisle, clasping his hands before his face in the traditional Indian greeting.

Vice President Sarvapalli Radhakrishnan introduced Khrushchev as "a courageous fighter for peace."

Khrushchev seemed either unaware or undaunted by the difference in the welcome given to him and to President Eisenhower.

More than a million turned out to welcome the U. S. President. Khrushchev told India's lawmakers "the principles of panch shila are living reality, owing in considerable measure to the peace loving efforts of India."

"Our sympathy always has been on the side of countries like Cuba, which is actively defending its national and economic independence," he said.

between India and Red China over 50,000 square miles of their border territory.

Since the border dispute led to the death of a dozen Indian soldiers last year, the term "panch shila" has suffered a tremendous loss of popularity in this country.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower announced today a new four-point U.S. plan for international restrictions on nuclear tests. Aimed to break the deadlock with Russia, it would exempt low power underground test explosions from the proposed ban.

Eisenhower told a news conference the plan was being introduced immediately at Geneva where the United States, Russia and Britain have been negotiating a test prohibition for more than 15 months.

In a statement, Eisenhower said the new proposal "would end forthwith, under assured controls" the following types of explosion:

1. All nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere.
2. All nuclear weapons tests in the ocean.
3. All such tests "in those regions in space where effective controls can now be agreed to."
4. All tests "beneath the surface of the earth which can be monitored."

Low-powered underground tests would thus be exempted as not subject to effective monitoring.

"These are steps which offer an opportunity to consolidate the important progress made in the negotiations thus far," the President said. "It is our hope that the Soviet Union will join with us in this constructive beginning."

In effect this means that the United States is abandoning at least temporarily the quest for a total ban on all nuclear weapons tests because government officials believe there is no way to police the smaller underground explosions—reported to be those below 20 kilotons, the size of the Hiroshima bomb.

Eisenhower said the United States has sought throughout the Geneva negotiations for complete abolition of weapons testing subject only to agreement on "adequate methods of inspection and control."

The essence of the underground control problem is that U.S. scientists have advised the President and have informed the British and Russians at Geneva that relatively low yield explosions are difficult to distinguish from earthquakes and their shock waves may be deliberately damped by firing the shot in a large hole.

Eisenhower said his four areas of the proposed limited ban constitute "readily attainable steps toward a complete ban on nuclear weapons tests."

He contended:

The plan would "prevent increases in the level of radioactivity in the atmosphere and so allay worldwide concern."

It would permit "through a co-ordinate program of research and development" an extension of the prohibition to areas not initially covered as adequate control measures are devised.

A parallel White House statement said that the U.S. proposal "would ban those tests which cause seismic magnitude readings at 4.75 or more" because that is the level which "can now be adequately monitored."

Demonstrators Continue Effort

RALEIGH (AP) — Negro college students resumed their sitdown protest against segregated eating practices today.

Lunch counters at Kress' store, near the State Capitol, and at Walgreen's drug store closed promptly when the Negro youths sat down for service.

Kress and Walgreen's had reopened today after closing down their lunch counters Wednesday, along with four other stores, when the spreading sitdown movement hit Raleigh.

Two other variety stores, Woolworth's and McLellan's, did not attempt to reopen their lunch counters today. Counter stools had been removed overnight at both places.

A department store, Hudson-Bell, kept its luncheonette closed to the public, but served food to its employees.

Eckerd's drug store, which closed its lunch counter Wednesday, was operating as usual today. It displayed "no trespassing" signs.

All six of the stores promptly closed their lunch counters Wednesday after the Negro students appeared.

Things were quiet today at several other North Carolina cities where the sitdown movement struck earlier. Many of the variety stores in these cities also had closed their lunch counters.

A tense situation developed in Raleigh Wednesday when groups of whites, mainly youths in their teens, moved into the affected stores. They moved along the aisles near the lunch counters, occasionally making low - voiced threats.

At Woolworth's at least one egg was thrown from the crowd of whites. It landed on the counter and splattered on some of the Negro students. They ignored it.

Raleigh Mayor W. G. Enloe declared in a statement that the city "is going to enforce all laws" of the state and city "in the interests of peace and tranquility without discrimination and with the utmost promptness."

Wind Gusts Here During Night Reached A Peak Of 51 MPH

Winds in gusts of 51 miles per hour here last night blew out plate glass windows of the White Chevrolet Co. as well as tearing off railroad crossing barricade arms and signs in parts of town.

The winds, 47 miles per hour in gusts between 11 p.m. and 12 midnight, reached peak gusts of 51 miles per hour about 1:30 a.m. Winds literally picked up chairs off porches of some homes and hurled them into bushes and shrubs.

A sign on one of the Carolina tobacco warehouses was also reported blown down by winds. Drink stands at some of the filling stations were toppled.

However, little damage was reported to utilities lines around the county.

The amount of rainfall was recorded at exactly .78 of an inch here.

City Manager and Utilities Superintendent Leonard P. Bloxam said there was very little damage in Greenville and around Pitt County as a result of the storm. Utilities here were not damaged, he said.

Farm Agent S. C. Winchester said he hadn't heard of damage to farmlands, though there might have been some to tobacco beds, especially the bed covers.

In Ayden, City Manager Cleveland Paylor said there had been slight damage, with one broken utility pole as the major trouble. The pole on Blount Street broke off, he said, cutting power off in that section for about 10 minutes.

Aside from a few small limbs broken off trees, Paylor said Ayden "came out mighty nicely." There was heavy rain in Ayden, but it caused no damage either.

In Grifton, Luther Lewis said the only damage was a few limbs which broke off trees. They already have been cleared off the streets, he said. Lewis works as parttime Grifton policeman.

Temperatures recorded yesterday were a low of 53, with a high of 69. The 8 o'clock temperature this morning was 57 degrees.

RAILROAD CROSSING BARCADE . . . broken off during storm.

BROKEN GLASS . . . broken out by high winds last night at White Chevrolet Company on South Dickinson Ave.

Three Purposes For First Aid, Says Speaker

There are three purposes for First Aid, according to Mrs. S. R. Bartlett, who spoke to the Brookgreen Garden Club on "First Aid to Gardeners" yesterday morning at the home of Mrs. Percy Cox. First Aid is to prevent accidents, train people to do the right thing at the right time, and to prevent added dangers.

Mrs. Bartlett told the group some "do-nots" during her talk. They included never to mow the grass when wet, avoid breathing poison vapors and dusts used for preventing diseases and insects, never leave poisons unmarked or near foods, never let young children even handle poisons or spray for shrubs, and not to neglect what you think is a minor prick or accident.

She said, "Do all you can to prevent accidents in the yard. If they occur, act quickly to prevent complications."

Mrs. Plato Evans, president, directed the meeting and welcomed the guests. Mrs. E. M. Martin, mother of Mrs. Selby Coffman; Mrs. Hartwell Campbell and Mrs. Powell Speight.

New officers were presented by Mrs. Charlie Bissette, chairman of the nominating committee, and accepted unanimously. They are Mrs. Howard Moye, president; Mrs. Ray Masten, vice-president; Mrs. Alvin Bunting, treasurer; and Mrs. Move Dall, secretary.

Mrs. Cox, hostess, served the club date-nut muffins, cheese straws, hot sausage rings and home-made decorated mints with hot coffee prior to the meeting.

Her home was decorated with pink camellias, yellow chrysanthemums, and greens.

Decorations were in keeping with the approaching Valentine season. Three tables were arranged for the bridge games and on arrival the guests were seated and served a dessert with coffee. Later in the afternoon drinks, nuts and candy were served.

Mrs. Sanford was remembered with a gift from her hostesses and the prizes for bridge high scores went to Mrs. Paul Fisher and Mrs. Sanford. The consolation went to Mrs. Richard Cavanaugh and the slam prize to Mrs. W. B. Lambert.

Frozen sandwiches will thaw, at room temperature, in about three hours.

Stretching Dollars

RALEIGH—Weekend shoppers should compare red meat cuts on per serving basis for best buys. Sometimes a boneless roast is cheaper than bone in roast on a per pound basis.

Large supplies of top quality beef is appearing at markets bringing attractive prices to consumers. Mrs. Ruby P. Uzzle, consumer marketing specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says pork prices will remain steady on most all cuts. Fresh hams and loin roasts are top bargains. Veal cutlets show lower prices.

Choose eggs for economy. This is the season for low prices, high quality and plentiful supplies. Both large and medium size remain budget buys. Heavy hens are being featured at below-average prices.

Vegetable supplies have been shortened by the recent cold in Florida. Cabbage, celery, carrots, green onions, leafy greens, sweet potatoes and white potatoes are in good supply at moderate prices. Cucumbers, squash, and winter crop tomatoes are in limited supply at higher prices.

Apples and citrus top the list of economical fruit buys. Florida oranges and grapefruit remain in good quality at attractive prices. Apples out of storage are appearing on markets at somewhat higher prices than last year. Red and yellow Delicious, McIntosh and Staymans are the varieties available. There is a slight decrease on bananas, red grapes, lemons, and pears. Big supplies of raisins and prunes are now available.

Supper Planned

A chicken or ham supper, sponsored by the Simpson Home Demonstration Club, will be held at the Simpson Community Building Thursday from 5 p.m. until 8.

Lemon and syrup-preserved ginger, both sliced thin, make fine additions to cooked dried figs.

GA Presentation Service Set Sunday

FOUNTAIN—On Sunday night, members and guests will observe the first G. A. Presentation Service ever held in the Fountain Baptist Church.

Members of the local Girl's Auxiliary who will be recognized as Maidens are Hazel Price, Janice Abrams, Jean Baker, Jane Thompson Mary Lois Bradshaw. Those who already rank as Maiders are: Dianne Bell, Eve Hobbgood, Edna Beasley.

At this service, Edna Beasley will be recognized as the first Lady-in-Waiting for the Fountain church.

Leaders for the local Girls Auxiliary are Mrs. H. G. Thompson and Mrs. Ed Keeter. G. A. Director is Mrs. E. B. Beasley Jr. Mrs. R. P. Speight is president of the Woman's Missionary Union of the Fountain church.

Flags, world globes, maps, dolls of many nations have special meaning for members of Girls Auxiliary, which is a Southern Baptist missionary organization for girls, ages 9-15. In these symbols they see the people of many nations whom God loves and for whom He gave His only begotten Son.

Through Junior and Intermediate auxiliaries, girls gather missionary information and inspiration and have opportunities for Christian witnessing.

Along with the missionary programs, mission study, community missions, prayer and stewardship, a special emphasis of Girls Auxiliary is Forward Steps. Junior and Intermediate girls advance from Maiden to Lady-in-Waiting, to Princess, to Queen. Two advanced steps are reserved for Intermediates only: Queen-with-a-Scepter and Queen Regent.

The requirements for these steps are as varied as the interests, needs and abilities of the girls who work to attain them. Bible study and memory work, group and individual participation and service, mission reading, research and handwork are among the requirements. The girls learn to do well the Lord's work. Their work is approved by the counselor. Then each girl must pass satisfactorily before a Reviewing Council.

The Coronation or Presentation Service is a culmination of the cooperative work of girl, parent and Girls Auxiliary leadership. The service not only presents the girls and the work they have done to attain the various steps, but also serves as a means of inspiration and information to the congregation.

All interested persons are invited to be present at 7:30 p.m. February 14. A social hour honoring the girls and their leaders will be held in the social room of the church following the Presentation Service.

Mrs. Wilfong Is New President Of Lakewood Pines Garden Club

Mrs. R. E. Wilfong was elected Tuesday as the president of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club when the club met at the home of Mrs. Robert G. Hunt.

Other officers selected unanimously were Mrs. H. R. Billica, vice-president; Mrs. J. T. Barnhill, secretary; Mrs. T. J. Morris, treasurer; and Mrs. Lewis Tebeau, corresponding secretary.

"Wild Flowers" was the topic of the program presented by Mrs. Robert J. Gilbert. She showed slides of the Wild Flower Garden she and her husband planted in their yard.

The slides, in color, showed many types of wild flowers native to eastern North Carolina, as well as several that have been imported by the Gilberts from other sections of the state and country.

Mrs. Gilbert described the settings and pointed out that one of the particular joys of a wild flower garden is its natural growth and ease of care.

Yankee Family Accomplishes A Miracle

By DOROTHY ROE

Associated Press Women's Editor GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP)—Civil War is over at last down here on the Delta.

It took a Yankee family from Binghamton, N.Y., to accomplish this miracle in the hearts of the Deep South where antebellum mansions are still preserved with loving care and where until recently "dameyankee" was all one word.

The head of the peacemaking clan is Mrs. Sumter Gillespie, a lovely little Dresden doll kind of lady, publisher of the up and coming Greenwood Commonwealth and generally conceded the Delta's hostess with the mostes.

Her aides are her tall good-looking son, Bill Richardson, general manager of the paper, and her daughter, smart and pretty Mrs. William Michael Biggers, women's editor.

Another daughter, Nancy Richardson, teaches music at Ole Miss. It was 12 years ago that the widowed Mrs. Richardson of Binghamton came down to Greenwood for a visit and was wooed and won by the late Sumter Gillespie, Commonwealth publisher.

Daughter Jane then was persuaded to quit her fashion job in New York and join the staff of her stepfather's newspaper.

In less time than it takes to say General Robert E. Lee she was married to big handsome Mike Biggers, dived in the wool son of the Deep South.

After the recent death of publisher Gillespie his widow found herself the head of the company. FRIENDS FROM THE North said of course you'll come back home now, but Marion Gillespie lifted her small firm chin and replied, "Home, this is my home and here I stay."

In the last year the Greenwood Commonwealth has undergone extensive face lifting. The building is now a gleaming modern structure with a new rotary color press. The news room is lighted by a radiant-paneled ceiling. The front office is separated from the composing room by panels of butterfly glass.

More important, the paper is gaining circulation and making money.

You might think the old plantation families of this rich and aristocratic Delta country would resent the invasion of these modern Yankees, but not so. The charming and businesslike Marion Gillespie has a finger in every Mississippi political issue. Her opinions are sought and respected by leaders of government and industry throughout the state. Her parties are the most popular in the Delta.

The clanish bluebloods agree the best thing that ever happened to the Delta was the arrival of Marion Gillespie.

As for Marion she speaks with a soft Southern accent now, entertains at morning coffees, afternoon teas and evening dinners in her beautifully appointed home. She streaks off to Europe or the Orient every now and then, charms everybody in sight at home and abroad and says there is no place like the Delta.

Reading Begins At Home

Reading is fundamental to all education. We hear a lot these days about reading disabilities and we certainly see some children who nevertheless master reading to the point where the printed word gives them pleasure.

There are of course a few extreme cases where a serious organic difficulty interferes with learning to read, but the fast majority of normal youngsters can and do learn to read. Some children lap up print with joy and enthusiasm and some learn just enough to get by.

One of the big differences between those children who love to read and those who don't is the attitude of the home in which they live.

Children who come from homes where books, magazines and newspapers are part of life absorb in their very early years the knowledge that pleasure lies between the pages of a book.

Read to your child. See that there are plenty of books around the house with pictures that he can understand.

Andy at 4 loved to "read" the Story of Pokey Bear. He knew the whole story "from the front to the back," as he said. He turned the pages, looked at the pictures and recited the events that make Pokey Bear become a Fast Bear. Andy loved all sorts of stories and poems. Both of his parents read to him before bed, whenever there were a few spare moments. They talked about the stories, made up new stories, encouraged Andy to tell stories. Andy loved the stories about the olden days when Mother was a little girl and Daddy a little boy.

One day Mother brought home a small notebook and with Andy at her elbow she started to write down some of Andy's favorite stories. She printed the words so they looked a little like those in a real book. Mother couldn't draw very well but she managed to get some real animation into stick figures. Andy loved their book. Writing books became one of that family's greatest joys. One of Andy's favorites was called "Prunes For Breakfast" and related an episode in which Andy ate the pits of his prunes (fortunately without dire consequences).

Long before Andy went to first grade he was anxious to read. He knew about books and he knew there was pleasure and fun and excitement between the covers.

One day when Andy was able to read his primer quite well he said to his mother: "Will you still read me stories when I can read for myself?" "Of course," said Mother. "Don't you know how Daddy and Mother often read aloud to each other?"

That evening after Andy was in bed, Mother repeated his remark to her husband.

"You know what," he said. "I believe Andy would love to take part in reading a play out loud. Let's see if we can't get some simple stories in play form and we will each take a part and read them."

Of course Andy loved it and before long they were making up their own plays or adapting some favorite stories into dramatic form.

Parents who love books, who read and talk about what they read can instill in their children a desire to learn for the pure joy that comes with it. Such children seldom have reading disabilities.

Toddlers Need Lots Of Exercise

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, MD.
At about one year, your baby will master his legs and make the marvelous discovery that they will take him places. Then he wants to walk. He is likely to drop all previous activity.
He wants to walk, walk, walk. He still needs your finger to hang onto before he will venture into the open spaces of the center of the room. A baby can wear you out with his demands for your supporting finger. But walking is very good for him. Not only is he practicing how one foot goes in front of the other foot, but he is exercising all the muscles used to keep his body erect and move it about.
Finally the day comes when your baby becomes a true toddler and can go off on his own. For a while he will still like to walk just for walking's sake, but eventually he masters the art sufficiently so that the pure joy of putting one foot in front of the other has lost a little of its charm.
Small Aerobics
Now your little fellow wants to run and skip, go sidewise and backward. He wants to pull something after him. If he spies a wall he must walk on top of it, or a big piece of pipe must be crawled through. These are all variations of the art of walking. Each brings in a few extra sets of muscles all of which need use to develop their full capacities.
Go on walks with your toddler. When you start, make the distance short so that he can make the round trip on his own legs. When your toddler is in the house he still needs to be doing things. He will run, jump, pull things around after him. He will climb over the furniture and drive you crazy.
It's a good idea to provide some spot indoors where strenuous physical activity can go on without harm to the child or to your possessions.
Exercise Mat
This is the time to get an exercise mat. A discarded mattress is fine if you can find a large enough floor area to lay it.
Help your child to learn to somersault. Let him put his head and hands on the mat, rear stuck up in the air—a gentle push from you will send him over. He will chortle with glee and soon learn to do it without your push. It's an excellent exercise.
Do you know how to play wheelbarrow? Let the child lie on the floor on his abdomen. Pick up his legs and let him walk forward on his hands. The closer to his knees you hold him the easier he finds it to go forward on his hands. Gradually move your support back to his feet and then even let go one foot. This is a wonderful exercise for the shoulders. Children enjoy playing this game among themselves.
Muscle Development
The wheelbarrow game leads to standing on head and hands. Muscles grow strong and supple when youngsters use them vigorously for exercises like this. But muscles become flabby and weak when the chief indoor activity is watching T.V. Quiet activity has its place in the life of a child but it must not take the place of the vigorous muscle building games. The early years are the important ones in which to develop sturdy bodies which will be a joy to their owners all their lives.
In the toddler years do not slip into the easy way of turning on the TV whenever you want a little peace and quiet. TV has many good things to recommend it but it can be greatly abused. If we are not careful our children become watchers, not actors. If we let them slide through childhood without vigorous physical exercises they will wake up in adolescence to discover that their bodies are more of a liability than a source of strength and pleasure.

Demos Should Accept Challenge

It may have been President Eisenhower's intention to put the Democrats on the defensive by challenging them to offer a better farm program this year than the one he proposed in his special message to Congress on agriculture.

In our opinion, however, the President's challenge to the Democrats was a veiled admission that the administration hasn't solved the nation's farm problems, and furthermore isn't quite sure now what would be the best method of building a sound program for agriculture.

There is no question about this most recent statement of administration policy toward agriculture programs being a departure from the position the Republican administration has taken in the past seven years. In prior years the administration has been adamant in its assertion that what it proposed for farmers was the best possible solution for the farmers and for the nation. Now the President has in effect told the Democrats if they can come up with something better—within certain limits—he will consider it.

This position by the administration appears to be a move to help the GOP with the farmers in this important national election year. It seeks to give the impression that the Republicans are interested in doing what the farmers want done.

Perhaps a more accurate interpretation of the statement might be that the Republicans are about at their wits end over the farm problem. The program they have followed during the Eisenhower administration has failed to improve the lot of agriculture in the nation. Although GOP leaders would under no circumstances admit it, the statement suggests an underlying feeling among Republicans that the Democrats are more capable of building a sound program for agriculture that will best serve the interest of farmers and the nation alike.

In this, at least, the administration probably would receive concurrence with most of the farmers throughout the country.

The statement itself, if it was designed to attract farm support for GOP candidates on the ballots next fall, probably will backfire completely. Farmers are well aware of the difficulty they have had in attempting to get across to the Eisenhower administration a genuine understanding of what the farmers really need. They are aware of the decline in farm income that has taken place in years the Republicans have controlled the White House. They are aware of the fact that suggested improvements in the farm program that have originated from farming areas have repeatedly been rejected by the Republican administration.

Democrats in Congress should by all means accept the challenge of the President to write a better farm program this year than the one recommended by the administration. The Democrats are fully capable of producing a better farm program and they should not hesitate to see that one is placed on the President's desk or his ratification or rejection.

Congressional Races In Review

By LYNN NISBET

CONGRESSIONAL — Information picked up from attendees at the Jefferson-Jackson Dinner last week indicates there will be real primary contests in only two congressional districts, the third and sixth, in both of which veteran incumbents are retiring.

The 12th district also has a vacancy due to the death of David Hall. At one time it looked like there might be a knock-down drag-out primary scrap there. Recent developments indicate that Roy A. Taylor of Buncombe will get the Democratic nomination without difficulty, for both the unexpired and next full term. Heinz Rollman, who spent in excess of $50,000 in unsuccessful effort to get the Democratic nomination two years ago, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination.

The district is also safely Democratic, and the big Buncombe county vote in the party primary will depend largely upon efficiency of organization, since the men have about the same general political philosophy and background. Both are superior court solicitors. Murdock has a longer record in that office and his district embraces three of the four congressional counties. But in the general election for congress in 1956 (latest gubernatorial-presidential year) Guilford county cast 34,090 votes, compared with 39,021 in Alamance, Durham and Orange combined.

THIRD—In the 9-county third district where veteran Graham Barden is retiring the situation is more confused. R. L. Stallings, mayor of New Bern, has announced his candidacy. James O. Simpkins, New Bern merchant, incumbent State Senator, who ran against Barden in 1956, is certain to announce this week. Dr. David J. Rose of Goldsboro, retired surgeon and State senator, is expected to get in the running. Another almost certain candidate is David Henderson of Wallace, a popular young lawyer. On the prospect list are Roy Rowe of Burgaw, several times State Senator, and Grady Mercer of Beaufort, member of the State Industrial Commission.

Sam Whitehurst, Craven county legislator, gave serious thought to running for Congress, but has decided against it. L. K. Alderman of Jacksonville, Barden's secretary, was pressured to run. Odds are 100 to one he will not. Except for eight years—two terms for Duplin and two for Wayne—Craven county has had the congressman since 1898. The big voting western counties of Wayne and Duplin claim priority right to the post now. Looks like a free-for-all among five or six candidates is building up for the first primary, with a run-off necessary—and all bets withheld pending developments. The third district congressional race could well prove the most interesting in the state, except thought to running for Congress Governor.

Primary contests are indicated in the first district where Walter Jones of Pitt is challenging veteran incumbent Herbert Bonner of Beaufort, and in the fifth where Allen Ivey of Leakesville has filed against incumbent Ralph Scott of Danbury who is seeking a third term. On basis of reports brought by J-J Dinner guests odds favor re-election of the incumbents.

NO CONTEST — At present there is no prospect of serious primary opposition for L.H. Fountain in the second district, Harold Cooley in the fourth, Alton Lennon in the second district, Harold Cooley in the fourth, Alton Lennon in the fourth, Paul Kichin in the eighth, David Clark in the tenth, and Basil Whitener in the eleventh. In the ninth district Bedford Black of Kannapolis has not abandoned the idea of challenging in the state, except Alexander, but chances are less than they were a few weeks ago. David Clark in the tenth is expected to have a clear field in the primary, but will face the redoubtable Republican Charles Raper Jonas in the general election.

In spite of heavy Republican voting in the eighth, ninth, eleventh and twelfth districts, always heavier in presidential years, Democratic nomination is tantamount to election. The tenth district is another story. Republican Jonas has been elected there three times, and though his margin was reduced to the danger point by Dave Clark two years ago, he is accorded slightly better than even chance to win again.

RE-DISTRICTING — The shadow of re-districting falls across nearly all the congressional districts, except the twelfth. On basis of anticipated census returns for 1960, North Carolina will lose a seat in the National House of Representatives, if the rule which has governed for 40 years is applied. That would require rearrangement of all the district lines—or election of all remaining eleven representatives by statewide vote. Addition of Alaska and Hawaii as States, with guarantee of at least one representative each, may lead to increasing the total membership in Congress. If the long established maximum of 435 is broken, it may be increased enough to assure North Carolina keeping twelve members.

World Will Compare Khrushchev Reception

With Soviet Premier Khrushchev off on his two-week tour of Asia, it will be interesting to see what reception he receives from officials and people of Asiatic countries.

The comparison between reaction to his visit to Asia and that of President Eisenhower in December will be almost automatic.

From the comparison, many conclusions will be drawn. Whether the conclusions will be valid is almost anyone's guess, but they nevertheless will be drawn.

The receptions given Premier Khrushchev will be interpreted as an indication of the feeling officials and people of Asiatic countries toward the Soviet Union, just as the welcome which President Eisenhower received were interpreted as a sign of friendship toward the United States.

Communist officials are well aware of the fact that the crowds who turn out to greet Khrushchev will be used as the barometer to measure the following of the Soviet leader in Asiatic nations. With his tour, coming as it does on the heels of the spectacularly successful tour of President Eisenhower, we may be sure the communists have done everything possible to see that their leader outshines the leader of the West.

The reception Premier Khrushchev receives on his Asian tour will be as interesting to watch as the conclusions which are subsequently drawn from comparing President Eisenhower's tour with that of Premier Khrushchev.

Our Experts In Disagreement

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—If you think the Washington confusion over defense is exaggerated, read this.

Last week Adm. Arleigh A. Burke, chief of naval operations, said "I support the President's budget" which asked Congress for less money than the Navy thought was needed for Polaris missile-firing submarines.

But this week Burke said he would ask for a billion-dollar boost in the budget to provide more of the submarines faster. But then he crossed thinking with Gen. Nathan F. Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Burke is a member of the joint chiefs but Twining opposed the admiral's idea of wanting more money for the Polaris sub.

On Monday Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Army chief of staff and a member of the joint chiefs with Burke, said this country's ability to airlift troops and equipment to deal with any emergency is woefully inadequate.

But Twining brushed aside Lemnitzer's concern for the airlift.

Last week Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, who retired as Army chief of staff last summer, questioned this country's ability to fight a limited war. But his successor, Lemnitzer, said "There is no doubt we could do a very good job."

While President Eisenhower's budget for military spending came to 41 billion dollars—with $9,806,000,000 set aside for the Army—Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker told Congress this week the Army should have had peace.

Here is an interesting statement: "There is no one in the United States who needs to be told or reminded that all free civilization rests upon a basis of religious faith. You can find this statement repeated in our own founding document—in the Declaration of Independence. Recognizing that spiritual foundation of our civilization, if we are going to make America better because its children are better trained and better educated, certainly we must start with the very basis on which our whole civilization is founded—and that is a deeply-felt religious faith."

This statement should have some significance for everybody in the world today because the man who uttered these words is none other than the President of the United States.

Why's He Reading By Firelight?

By HENRY HOWARD

Art Is Now Mechanized

On a network television show last night was demonstrated the ultimate method for very frustrated painters.

It was surprising, to say the least, at the results those folks got from less than one minute's "work." The Emcee unveiled this ordinary-looking easel-type thing supporting a clean, white canvas—a potential work of art.

All of a sudden, somebody turned on a switch and the canvas began spinning vertically. As it picked up speed, the "artist" Emcee donned his painting smock and, standing at a safe distance from the whirling, began to slosh paint from small cans onto the canvas. First red, then blue, a touch of yellow, and so on, until he was apparently satisfied with his work.

A rough estimate of his time spent was something like 35 or 40 seconds. Then he called for the thing to halt. Somebody flipped the switch again and the whirling mass of color came to a stop.

Immediately, confusion arose as to which way the "painting" should sit. With minimum negotiations, a desirable top and bottom for the thing were designated and everybody paused to examine the finished product.

Although the colors didn't show up so well on the TV screen, the general design and contrast mechanically produced on the canvas compared favorably (to an ignorant critic's eye) with some of the manually-reproduced impressionistic ideas of our day.

It was evident at a glance that an artist would likely have spent many, many hours creating what mechanical kinetic energy had done instantaneously. Naming the thing came next.

The Emcee opened the floor for nomenclatures. Somebody mentioned "Breaking the Sound Barrier." They never did name it officially. As a matter of fact, the spun colors probably ended up in the garbage can after the show. After all, if they ever need another one, it only takes seconds.

Art-lovers throughout the country who saw the show probably sat in disgust as they watched the exhibition. Some of them may have even indignantly turned off the TV set!

They're probably right, too. Maybe those people have no right to do such a thing.

Still there's this thought: "Why not allow machines to express their impressions along with people?"

The recent marathon march staged here by the East Carolina College Air Force ROTC unit gained further, though slightly delayed, publicity this week.

A reprint of the Daily Reflector's stories on the "March-a-thon" appeared in the appendix of the Feb. 8 edition of the "Congressional Record."

At Lauterbach Jewellers today and tomorrow an exhibit-sale for items made by area blind persons is going on.

A state supervisor, Miss Irene Beaudin, is conducting the special event to raise funds to help the makers of the items.

Included in the exhibit are baskets, foot stools, rugs, spreads, aprons, stuffed animals, and leather belts and purses.

The display is modest, but effectively done, and the items are well-made.

Other Editors Saying Foot In The Door Opinions In Brief

(Henderson Dispatch)

Senator Jordan says he will support legislation in Congress for Federal aid to education

"that will give the State a free hand in administering funds provided by the Federal government." He says he feels such a program is possible on a sound and workable basis. The senator cites his experience as a member of the original Medical Care Commission of North Carolina, and states that from personal experience he knows there was no Federal control over how hospitals in North Carolina operated.

As to operation, we suspect he is probably correct. But approval had to be obtained from Washington on construction programs, and government money was not available until that was obtained.

Our own theory of Federal aid to education is that it is far more a device for control from Washington over the public schools than it is actual assistance, as such. We think the Federal government should stay out of the picture entirely, and that the States can meet their needs and manage their own institutions. Even should such a measure as Senator Jordan envisions be enacted, there is and can be no assurance that meddling will not be permitted later, or that the bureaucrats who disburse the funds would not barge in on the procedure, regardless of what was provided by an act of Congress. We are convinced that they definitely would do it, and that there would be no serious effort on Capitol Hill to prevent it. In this manner those who want to gain control of the public schools would get one foot in the door, and after that it would be only a matter of time until they were dictating the curriculum and otherwise telling local authorities what they could and could not do or teach.

Federal aid to schools is wrong in principle, but it could be lived with, if necessary, if there could be assurance as to the future, which there isn't, and will not be. Seriously and solemnly, is a dangerous procedure and one which ought to be avoided for the good of the young people themselves and for local self-government.

Very probably there has been gross exaggeration as to educational needs in the first place. The problem is growing, naturally, but not so much so that States cannot manage their own affairs.

Under Federal aid, starry-eyed theorists would win their first victory in control of the schools. That's what they have been seeking for years, and it seems they are on the verge of an initial success. With dictation from Washington, all sorts of socialist and leftwing theories would be taught the children. That also is an objective in some quarters, and one which should be resisted at all hazards.

Cuban Perils Ignored

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The most serious problem that faces the United States today is Cuba. A pro-Communist state has been established in Cuba with the clear objective of bargaining with Soviet Russia for the munitions of war in return for the Cuban crops of sugar, rice, tobacco and whatever else is to be offered.

It is impossible to believe that so important a figure as Anastas Mikoyan would spend a week in Cuba, a small, apparently unimportant country. But Cuba can become a very important country, to the United States the most important country because if Soviet Russia establishes an air base, a missile base in the heart of Cuba, it will become necessary for the United States to take immediate action. Cuba is 90 miles away from Miami, Florida. It could be very useful to the Soviet Universal State. It could become the center of revolutionary action throughout the American hemisphere. It is for this reason that Trujillo, the dictator of the Dominican Republic, is taking defensive action against possible revolt in his own country.

But what is the United States doing? President Eisenhower is going to take a trip to Latin America. But even at that gambit we have been beaten by Mikoyan's visit to Cuba, the significance of which cannot be over-estimated. They got there first again. Cuba is thus acknowledged as Russia-supported, and Latin American Communists will accept this visit as representing direct Soviet support for their antagonism to the United States. This is particularly true after Mikoyan said:

"Those who talk of war know that if we can send a rocket to the moon with such precision we can send a rocket with the same precision to any point on earth."

This will not be misunderstood anywhere in Latin America. It points clearly to the United States. Sputnik continues to be the anti-American propaganda weapon. It ought not to be misunderstood in Washington, but much that has occurred in Cuba is either misunderstood in Washington or the Eisenhower policy was meant to send the message to the "Spirit of Camp David," not even the presence of the enemy 90 miles from Miami.

Generalissimo Trujillo of the Dominican Republic recognizes the peril of this situation and is acting accordingly. His actions may be rough but are essential to the defense of his country from invasion by a Communist-controlled Cuba. The real danger is an uprising in Haiti, supported by Cuba. Haiti and the Dominican Republic are on the same small island and Trujillo can no more tolerate Soviet Russia's presence in Haiti (via Cuba) than we could at Coney Island, or as we should in Cuba were we attending to our national business. As long as the United States takes a soft policy we shall be in trouble.

And now, Washington is suddenly becoming worried that President Eisenhower might receive an untimely reception on his Latin American trip from Communist workers and students there. The assumption is that the Third International, which was never really dissolved, has issued such instructions. It is unbelievable that even the weakest Latin American government will tolerate such an indignity.

Surely the people of the United States would respond to such an insult in the only possible way, by immediate physical reprisal. Less than that would condemn us to a shameful cowardice which would destroy our standing among nations. The President of the United States is the symbol of the total nation, of all America. No apology, no explanation can wipe away an insult to him. Possibly this is one reason why Presidents have avoided leaving territorial United States in the past. Today Presidents travel everywhere and now that all the arrangements for this visit have been made, there can be no turning back. At the same time, there must be no risks.

The invasion of Latin America by Soviet Russia is a direct result of the incorrect policy of the renunciation of the Monroe Doctrine. As long as that Doctrine prevailed as the basis of our relations with Latin America, no foreign power dared to invade a Latin American country.

Dead Playwright's Cottage Holds Secret Of Poisoning

(EDITORS NOTE: The following story was written by Rollo Taylor, staff writer for the Spartanburg Journal. Taylor visited the mountain cottage of Edward Chandler Cumming, 26-year-old Harvard University honor graduate, who had retired to the mountains to write a play. Cumming died last Friday night, apparently of accidental poisoning. His wife became desperately ill.)

By ROLLO TAYLOR
Spartanburg Journal Staff Writer
WHITTIER, N.C. (AP)—I'll start believing it again, forget I'm mortal and think again that life is quick as sunlight in a forest, forget that death is in the shadows...

It is not a comfortable cottage. Tuesday afternoon, as cold rain clouds settled over the hills, it was bare and cold.

On Ted's desk are a few pages of his play, with some passages written in verse. Beside that is an unfinished letter to his parents. Ted was explaining why he had withdrawn to that cottage to write.

There is also a neat file for "Counter Point Travel." That's a new touring service he and his wife, Patsy, had just formed. They wanted to get students to see Europe during summer vacations.

The kitchen is just as it was Friday night when Ted and his wife unaccountably swallowed massive doses of a violent poison. A hundred-odd spices and herbs are stored in a cabinet. Espresso Coffee, a favorite of Europe; fennel, tiny red chilies, garlic, sage, marjoram, are there.

Somewhere in that maze, authorities say, lies the clue to Ted's death. In one of those bottles or envelopes is perhaps the deadly poison that killed him and almost killed his wife.

Red China Tries Overseas Lure

HONG KONG (AP)—Communist China is telling the overseas Chinese in Indonesia that a new life—much better than that of the average Chinese on the mainland—awaits them if they return to the motherland.

The promise is part of a stepped-up propaganda campaign to lure overseas Chinese home following the Indonesian government's ban Jan. 1 on alien Chinese traders in rural areas. At least two ships are en route to Jakarta to repatriate Chinese wishing to leave Indonesia.

Edward G. Robinson Declares Most People Don't Really Live

NEW YORK (AP)—"Most people don't live," said Edward G. Robinson. "They worry about the after life—and they haven't really lived here."

"Living itself is a really rare thing. So very few people actually do live. They don't venture forth enough to be what they could be, which is—themselves," he says.

At 66, Robinson, a lower East Side boy who yearned in his youth to be a minister and wound up a rich and famous actor, is convinced that the thing which defeats most people is fear.

"They are afraid of living itself, the torment and consequences of living," he mused over a lunch-steak.

"We are raised up narrow-minded, and if we are to grow we must re-evaluate things."

"Many people are afraid of living because they are unwilling to pay the price. But you can't really duck the price. Happiness and unhappiness are interwoven in every life."

"Tragedy comes to everyone."

He's 96, She 85; They Married

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP)—"Among other things, they got tired of playing single solitaire." So William Holt and Laura Bonner were married Wednesday in an old folks' home where romance blossomed over the card tables.

He's 96. She's 85.

Mrs. Bonner's first marriage ended in divorce many years ago. Her second husband died in 1953. Holt's first wife died about 30 years ago.

Kather Ne Lowe, who runs the home for the Volunteers of America, provided the "single solitaire" explanation.

The newlyweds, who'll continue to live at the home, put it differently. They just said they were lonely and fell in love.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Oilman W. B. Trammell, purchased a home here for $650,000, it was learned Wednesday.

The mansion was purchased from Harmon Whittington, former president of Anderson, Clayton & Co., worldwide cotton firm.

The home was built on a three-acre site in 1951-52 by Albert Plummer, another oilman.

An Aura Of Change Seen Around TV Programming

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It may be the weather, or it may just be the season of the year, but it seems as if everybody either has a bone to pick or is looking for a change.

For instance: The Indians have sent a resolution to Washington, protesting the treatment of Indians in TV Westerns. A group of Italian-Americans are organizing to protest frequently unsavory portrayals in current crime-buster series.

Alfred Hitchcock has decided to leave CBS after a long relationship and hitch up with NBC next season. CBS' Jack Benny is supposed to be flirting with ABC. ABC's Frank Sinatra is rumored to be interested in both CBS and NBC. A lot of other big stars are reported unhappy with their networks, and others are nervously wondering about their TV fate next season.

summer vacation.

"The American Cowboy," Wednesday night's CBS special, was a bright and highly entertaining 60 minutes. It was, however, less a satire about that improbable and legendary figure than a series of revue sketches, involving everything from male vanity to method acting. It was just that everyone was all dressed up in horse opera clothes. There was a talented and amusing cast, too: Fred MacMurray, Wally Cox, Eddie Adams and Carol Burnett.

"Talent Scouts," Arthur Godfrey's old night time show, will return once again—and on rival NBC—dressed up as a Startime special Feb. 23. David Garraway will play host, and the scouts will be such celebrities as Joan Crawford, Ethel Merman and Jack Paar.

On the basis of payments to the pension and welfare funds of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, the union estimates that broadcasting performers were paid more than $5 million dollars last year. "Riverboat" will do a repeat Monday because Darren McGavin was knocked out of an entire sequence by an auto accident. Remember Sonny Fox of the defunct quiz show? He's pinch hitting for Bud Collyer on "Beat the Clock" as vacation relief man.

Doctors To Get Closed Network

NEW YORK (AP)—A closed-circuit radio network, supplying special broadcasts for doctors, is scheduled to be launched this fall by the Radio Corp. of America.

The special service will provide soothing music for the ears of patients as they sit in waiting rooms, and medical news and advertisements for the ears of doctors only.

No public announcement of the network has been made, but the New York Times gave these details of the venture today:

Special radio equipment will be installed in doctors' offices and waiting rooms; at a charge of $10 monthly, to pick up special broadcasts by the National Broadcasting Co., an RCA subsidiary.

A 13-hour daily broadcasting schedule is planned, from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The medical information programs, sponsored by pharmaceutical firms, would be for the exclusive use of doctors and would not be heard by their patients.

The medical network will be started in September in 16 cities. Ultimately, it is hoped to expand it into a nationwide system.

Anne Baxter To Wed A Rancher

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actress Anne Baxter will marry a cattle rancher in Hawaii next week.

Her engagement to Randolph Galt, an American with business interests in Australia, was announced by her parents Wednesday. Galt's parents live in Hawaii, where he was born. The wedding date will be set after she finishes her current film.

They plan to live on a ranch in New South Wales, where Galt also has a home. They met last April in San Francisco and became engaged four months ago, keeping it secret until now.

Miss Baxter, 37, was married to the late John Hodiak. Galt was not wed previously.

HEIRESS TO MURDER

By E. M. BARKER

CHAPTER 18

Walt Hollinger carried a bowl of hot soup and a cup of black coffee to Johnny Hume. Johnny had lost a lot of blood from his fresh shoulder wound, but it was shallow and he was young. The hole through his leg was already beginning to heal.

Of course his leg hurt, and maybe he was a little feverish, but it didn't seem to be enough reason for Johnny's lying like he had all day, with his face to the wall, refusing to eat or even answer except in gruff monosyllables.

Walt set the soup and coffee down on a chair by the bunk.

"Want some supper, Johnny?" he asked.

The kid didn't answer. Walt rolled a smoke and lighted it. "If you're worrying about falling so easy into Dwight Mitchell's trap, forget it. All of us do damn fool things sometimes. I know you aimed to help me, but all the damage is another bullet-hole in you. It looks like the sheriff isn't hunting either one of us. He hasn't been around today."

Johnny twisted his head on the pillow. "I wish you'd go away and leave me alone," he said shortly. "I don't want any supper and I don't want to talk."

Walt took a long drag on his cigarette. His eyes narrowed. "Did you kill Rayburn?" he asked deliberately.

The kid didn't answer. For a moment his eyes met the older cowboy's defiantly, then he turned his face back towards the wall. Walt Hollinger began to feel sick.

He eyed Johnny's rigid back for a moment, then said quietly: "I never figured you was the kind to shoot a man in the back, even a man you hated. But you've been acting mighty funny lately. You were gone last night at the time Rayburn was killed. If you saw it done kid, for gosh sakes speak up!"

Johnny sat up abruptly in bed, his eyes a little wild. "Damn it, I didn't do it!" he shouted violently. "And I don't know anything about it! Now will you get out of here and leave me alone?"

Walt felt like rolling him over and using a paddle, but he let it ride. He picked up the supper and carried it back to the kitchen. He knew Johnny.

The kid had absorbed some kind of an emotional shock last night. In a few days it would likely wear off, and then he would be ready to talk.

Myra Hollinger had just finished setting her own and Walt's supper on the table. She looked at the bowl and cup in Walt's hands.

"Take it back, Walt. I'll see if I can make him eat."

"Maybe you can find out what's eating him, too."

Adjusting a crutch under her arm, she tapped her way briskly into Johnny's room.

Rusty McGowan rode past the window on his way to the corral, and Walt set another place at the table. In a few minutes Rusty came in. He had been gone sixty hours with only one short nap. His eyes were red-rimmed and he needed a shave. He dunked his face and hands in the washpan, slicked down his hair, sank down by the table with a tired grunt, and started swearing, although softly, and only after he had taken a quick glance to see that Myra Hollinger's bedroom door was shut.

Rusty had ridden the better part of the day again, guarding the Willow Creek Range, and making one more effort to persuade the small ranchers that now was the time to get together on some plan to save their holdings.

Walt grinned at him. "You sound like you had about the same luck I had yesterday. You don't need to be quite so careful. Ma's in tryin' to spoonfeed Johnny, and she can't hear you."

Rusty swore again as he ladled beans generously on to his plate. "I don't blame 'em much for wanting to wait and see which way Dwight's stick points before they start a big ruckus that will sure make him mad."

"They ought to know already what he's going to do," Rusty said angrily. "How much more sign they going to need?"

He speared a piece of steak as viciously as if he were jabbing a pitchfork into a rattler.

"Joe Gamel's been a mighty busy man today. He beat me to all of them. Got them all stirred up into half believing you killed ol' Pete."

Walt poured them both another cup of coffee. "Yeah?"

No. I went to town for the money for Lem Stallings. Everybody had heard about the killing—but no body acted funny towards me about it. I saw one of Ed Embury's deputies on the street. He was feeling real chatty.

"He said he'd just heard I'd drawn a big sum of money out of the bank and wondered if I was figuring on taking a trip. He didn't mention Pete Rayburn."

Walt took another sip of the hot coffee before continuing. "Lem Stallings and his wife had heard of the killing too, from Gamel, I reckon. They were all lathered up about it—had the deed ready for me—and they're packing up to leave now. Expect to be on their way first thing in the morning."

Rusty looked baffled.

"What do you make of it, Walt? I thought sure the sheriff would be over here after you today."

"I thought so too. All I can do is guess—and I'm guessing Dwight Mitchell knows he hasn't got enough case against me to convict me, and he's holding the sheriff off, hoping that I'll decide to clear out. They're giving me plenty of time and leeway to do it."

Rusty didn't look convinced. "I don't get it."

"Mitchell's a dirty fighter—but I figure he's scared now, because he isn't sure just how good his title is to the Sombbrero. He don't want to risk taking it to court. Pete Rayburn wasn't afraid of anything, but I think Dwight is. Scared and greedy. If he could have killed me housebreaking last night he would sure have had the bag sewed up neat."

Walt paused a moment, then went on: "I'm just thinking out loud now—but suppose he got me on the run. Then he could start putting the squeeze on the other ranchers. He'd keep on with his raiding. He will keep edging down on more of their land, and in a couple of years he could have them so discouraged they'd quit. Sell out cheap—or just plain move out."

Rusty McGowan grinned, without looking much amused. "Got it all figured out, ain't you? Well, what do we do next?"

Walt shrugged. "Me, I'm still alive, and I'm still here. The next move is up to Dwight Mitchell. Unless I miss my guess completely, it won't be long coming."

They heard the tap of Myra Hollinger's crutch, then the door to the back room opened and she came in. Walt pulled a chair out for her and helped her in to it.

"You two have got mighty carrying voices," she said softly, "and the walls in this house are thin. Johnny seemed to want to listen, so I let him."

Walt turned back to the stove and got the coffeepot to pour his mother a cup.

They heard a window raised softly in the back room. Rusty McGowan looked at Walt, then he started to get up from his chair.

Myra Hollinger shook her head at him.

"Let him go," she said quietly. "He's got something worse on his mind than the hurts in his body. We can't help him any by holding him. I tried my best talking to him—but I couldn't get through to him."

Rusty looked unconvinced.

"If he heads back to the Sombbrero, somebody will shoot him," he said with foreboding.

Johnny Hume, thinking only of himself, believes there's good reason for his not talking—that is, not telling the truth. Continue "Heiress to Murder" her Tomorrow.

Tobacco Tips

S. J. Weeks, Pitt County Tobacco Agent

One way to economize in the production of tobacco is to reduce the amount of fuel used to cure the tobacco crop. The amount of fuel can be reduced on many farms by improving the construction of the curing barns.

The curing barn should be constructed with the view of securing equal heat distribution throughout the entire barn space. The amount of water removed from the tobacco leaf which escapes through the ventilation system of the barn in the curing process would cover the barn floor about three inches deep. Therefore, an adequate controlled ventilation system should be included. In other words, a barn should be equipped with ridge ventilators that can remain open during the yellowing stage of curing and gradually closed as the moisture is dried out of the tobacco leaf and stem.

Curing tests have been conducted at the Oxford Tobacco Research Station using a well constructed barn equipped with adequate ridge ventilators. These tests showed that oil consumption could be reduced as much as 48.5 gallons per barn when curing 700 sticks of tobacco.

The entire barn needs walls with the same thickness. The walls in the gable end of the barn should be the same thickness as the body of the barn. A solid sheeted roof, when used with adequate controlled ridge ventilators, will help reduce fuel consumption. Insulation of the barn walls will help save fuel, too. For best results, insulation should be used only when a barn is constructed as described above.

If you have a barn that needs repairing it would be a good idea to improve the quality of construction so that you too can get benefit from maximum fuel efficiency. Building plans for the construction of tobacco barns and ridge type ventilators can be obtained from the County Agricultural Agents' Office.

Unusual Pets Not For Sale

KENILWORTH, N. J. (AP) — Jack Birgel runs a pet shop but says he has two personal pets that are not for sale.

One of his prize possessions is an albino lung fish, native of Africa. The other is a giant fruit-eating Indian bat.

The fish, about 28 inches long, is said to be one of only six ever found and one of the two live ones known to be in existence. Birgel values it at about $1,000.

The bat, which has 30-inch wingspread, consumes its weight in food daily. Birgel says he has been able to train it and has given it the freedom of the house.

SUITSUIT SUI — INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — John H. Head says he caught a cold, and it's all the fault of a cleaning shop. He filed a $500 damage suit, claiming he caught the cold when he scampered home without his suit—which he said the cleaners lost while he waited in a booth.

East Cape, Siberia, is only 56 miles from Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska.

Their Ordinance Was Never Used

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The suburban village of Mackenzie, 20 miles from the nearest street-car line, is revising its ordinances to eliminate one regulating streetcars.

How did the ordinance happen to get on the books?

"Most of the ordinances were copied from other cities, and they contain a certain amount of extraneous matter," explains William Mattingly, the village clerk.

College Offering Tour Of Mexico

A tour of Mexico, with emphasis on art and culture South of the border, is now being organized at East Carolina College as an attraction of its 1960 summer program. Scheduled for June 2-30, the trip will combine travel with study and will take tourists on an 8,000 mile from Greenville along the Gulf Coast, through Mexico as far south as the ancient city of Oaxaca, and then back to Greenville.

The tour is sponsored by the department of art at East Carolina College. Those wishing to receive credit will earn nine quarter hours upon completion of requirements. Others who do not wish to work for credit may also enroll for the tour. Francis Lee Neel of the college department of art will act as director and instructor on the tour. Mr. Neel, a member of the East Carolina faculty since 1948, has visited Mexico five times and has made an extensive on-the-spot study of the arts and crafts of the country. A graduate of the University of Missouri, he has exhibited paintings in this state and in Georgia, New York, and Missouri and has won awards in a number of art events.

The tour will begin June 2 at East Carolina. A three-day trip by air-conditioned bus will take the group to San Antonio, Texas, site of the Alamo. From there Morgan Tours will assume management if the trip. English-Spanish speaking, government-licensed guide drivers will conduct the party. Accommodations at first-class hotels will be provided.

J.O. Simpkins To Seek Barden Seat In Congress

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)—State Sen. James O. Simpkins, 37, today announced he will seek the Democratic nomination to Congress in the Third District to succeed retiring Rep. Graham A. Barden.

Simpkins is the fourth candidate to jump into the race. New Bern Mayor Robert Stallings and Morehead City businessman Skinner A. Chalk Jr. have filed with the State Board of Elections. David N. Henderson, young Wallace attorney, has announced he will be a candidate for Barden's post.

Barden announced recently that he is retiring from Congress after this year.

Simpkins, in his announcement, cited education, farm problems, the low per capita income picture, the commercial fishermen's problems, and the small businessman as his chief concerns.

"The long-term weakness of the United States is in education," he declared.

"The real key to our prosperity and the answer to most of our problems is education," he said, adding:

"The counties cannot afford to carry the load alone and there is too much politics and too many pressure groups in state government to get an adequate amount of money to reach the national average. Congress owes it to the people to pass legislation that will enable every child in the United

Yachtsman Just Brushes Off A Cruise In Junk

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A young British yachtsman who crossed the storm-lashed North Pacific alone in his 32-foot Chinese junk, dismissed it as "an interesting experience."

Brian Platt, 29, sailed the High Tea from Hong Kong to Eureka, Calif., and reached San Francisco Bay Wednesday.

He was at sea 70 days before reaching Eureka Dec. 25 after the longest leg of the 7,500-mile voyage.

He said the weather "wasn't really a problem" although he battled a typhoon off Japan and wintry storms in the North Pacific. On the way here from Eureka, he rode out high seas that disabled other craft Tuesday.

"But I do not regard small-boat cruising as a way of life," Platt commented. The former British consular service agent plans to sell the junk here and enter business in Vancouver, B.C.

States to get the best education possible."

Simpkins, a native of New Hanover County, attended Springfield College and the University of North Carolina. He was voted "Young Man of the Year" in 1955 by the New Bern Junior Chamber of Commerce. He was cited by the National Safety Council "for outstanding contribution to highway safety." He served on the city board of aldermen of New Bern before being elected to the State Senate in 1958.

The ninth annual exhibit-sale of articles made by blind persons of Pitt and neighboring counties began this morning at Lautares Brothers Jewelers in downtown Greenville.

Continuing through tomorrow, the annual event, sponsored jointly by the local Lions Club and the Greenville Service League, features an estimated 50 categories of items. A total of more than 200 pieces were on sale this morning as the exhibit began.

Included in the exhibit are stuffed animals, whisk-brooms, woven baskets, and many other items.

Proceeds from the sale will go to the blind persons who made the articles.

Miss Irene Beaudin, Supervisor of Industries for the Blind of the N. C. Commission for the Blind, is supervising the exhibition-sale. Assisting here are members of the Service League and Lions Club.

The annual event is staged as an educational program as well as a funds-raising project.

Greeters Told To Be Courteous

BOISE, Idaho (AP)—Gov. Robert E. Smylie of Idaho told state officials who will greet the touring Soviets today that they should be courteous, no arguments.

They may try to needle you at times, he said. "They may ask some questions you regard as bothersome."

But Smylie said: "If they do, I think we should simply say that this visit is to promote peace and understanding between our nations and that we feel that type of question does not further that aim."

Stepinac Rites Set Saturday

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP)—The body of Alojzije Cardinal Stepinac lay in state today in the little parish church of Krasic, denied burial in his cathedral at Zagreb.

Yugoslavia's Communist government refused permission for the cardinal's body to be moved to Zagreb, seat of his archdiocese, where he normally would have been buried. The authorities said he would have to be buried at the church in Krasic, his native village, where the Communists kept him confined as a paroled prisoner.

The funeral will be Saturday. The Red authorities said all 22 Roman Catholic bishops of Yugoslavia, members of the Zagreb Cathedral chapter, all members of the cardinal's family and all persons of Krasic parish could attend the requiem and burial service.

Cardinal Stepinac, 61-year-old spiritual leader of Yugoslavia's seven million Roman Catholics, died Wednesday after five years of Communist imprisonment on charges of wartime collaboration with the Nazis and nearly nine years of confinement to the limits of Krasic.

After his release from prison, the Communists refused to allow him to resume his duties as archbishop of Zagreb. But to the Vatican he remained Yugoslavia's primate.

He had suffered for years from a blood disease which resulted in an excess of red corpuscles. First reports said he died of pneumonia and a heart condition.

Faint Is Feint To Flee Police

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ramel L. Perkins complained of chest pains while being questioned by police about a theft.

He told police he had a history of heart trouble and then slumped to the floor. One officer dashed to call an ambulance; another left to get some damp towels after Perkins didn't react to smelling salts.

Perkins recovered quickly. He leaped out of a window and escaped.

A couple of hours later, though, he was back in custody.

SALISBURY — East Carolina choked off a late Catawba surge here last night to defeat the Indians, 73-71, and move a step closer to the North State leadership currently shared by Lenoir Rhyne and High Point.

The victory—a hard-fought one—was the sixth in a row for the Pirates in their late season glory-seeking expedition. The triumph kept ECC in a third-place tie with Appalachian who needed a last second shot last night to edge Elon, 64-62. Both teams have identical 9-4 records within the conference.

EC Captain Ike Riddick continued to close in on High Point's Danny Sewell for the individual scoring title last night as the Pirate six-footer tossed in 27 big points. His point production gave him an average of 24.7 for 20 games.

Motivated by the 19-point scoring feat of Doug Chalk, Catawba staged a rally in the second half, overcoming a 12-point halftime deficit. The Indians moved to within five points of East Carolina in the final two minutes of action but a final field goal by Bob Flynn at the buzzer brought Catawba as close as they could get.

Field goals by Riddick and Lacy West in the final minute kept Catawba from making its second half comeback a success.

With Riddick scoring 12 of the first 16 points for East Carolina, the Pirates took charge of the game in the opening minutes of play, leading 16-6, Catawba, using a bulldog defense, fought back and closed the gap to two points, 23-21.

Riddick and crew almost broke the game wide open in the final minutes before the rest period, hitting 11 quick points while the Indians could collect only one.

The halftime score saw East Carolina boasting a 34-22 lead.

Coach Earl Smith chose to go with his "prolific five" most of the way. Only in the final two minutes did the ECC mentor

6-6 center, got into the lineup during the final minute of action. It was the ninth win for East Carolina in the last ten games and pushed them to within one-half game of first place.

Don Smith, Lacy West, and Cotton Clayton joined Riddick in the select double figures circle.

Benny Bowes, the fifth EC starter, made only one point in the first half but hit a couple of timely baskets in the final stanza to tally seven points.

Chalk finished the night with 24 points to lead the Indians. Horace Medford had 16 and Bob Flynn 15.

For the Indians, noted as the giant-killers after wins over Lenoir Rhyne and High Point, it was their first defeat on their home court this season.

The surging Pirates meet Elon in Greenville on Saturday night.

New Leader

With a 27 scoring spurt against Catawba last night, Ike Riddick, East Carolina guard, took over the unofficial scoring lead in the North State Conference. Riddick's average is 24.7.

Danny Sewell, scoring leader in 1959 and season-long pacesetter this year, scored only 11 points last night as Western Carolina upset High Point. Sewell's average is now 24.5.

The win by the Pirates moved them within one-half game of loop-leaders, High Point and Lenoir Rhyne. East Carolina has three games remaining including a game at High Point next Wednesday night.

and then prepare for the showdown battle with High Point at the latter's home court next Wednesday night. EC closes out the season on February 20 against Atlantic Christian.

Rodriguez Wants Shot At Jordan

By GENE PLOWDEN
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Luis Manuel Rodriguez, the best welterweight to come out of Cuba since Kid Gavilan, wants to fight Don Jordan for the title in his next ring appearance.

Rodriguez proved he is ready to the satisfaction of 3,105 ring-side spectators and a nationwide television audience Wednesday night when he knocked out previously unbeaten Carl Hubbard of Philadelphia.

The end came in 1:53 of the fourth round in a scheduled ten rounder and surprised many Rodriguez followers who looked on him as a fancy boxer but short on knockout punches.

"He could handle the other guys by just 'slapping them around and boxing them," said Angelo Dundee, Rodriguez' American manager. "But he was insulted by so many people saying he was a fancy Dan and could not punch, and he was determined to knock Hubbard out."

EC Swimmers Are Host To Georgia U.

East Carolina's swimming team will be back in action tomorrow afternoon, meeting the U. of Georgia in Memorial Pool at 4:00. The Pirate mermen have lost successive meets to the U. of North Carolina and U. of Florida but have been hampered in recent weeks with a flu epidemic.

Coach Ray Martinez's swimmers, weak in depth, will be underdogs to the visiting Georgia club of the Southeastern Conference.

NIT Entries Become Frequent Upset Victims

By BEN OLAN

Associated Press Sports Writer
Maybe those teams which jumped at the chance to get into the National Invitation Basketball tournament would have been better off waiting until their regular season schedules were further along.

In the past week five teams, Detroit, Providence, Dayton, Memphis State and Villanova, accepted bids to play in next month's NIT in New York.

Then the trouble started. Detroit lost to Toledo 69-61 Saturday. Providence was beaten by St. Bonaventure 90-89 in triple overtime Tuesday. And Wednesday night, Dayton was upset by Duquesne 79-66. Only Villanova and Memphis State have emerged unscathed since saying "okay" to the NIT.

On paper Dayton figured to have an easy time against Duquesne. The Flyers had a 16-3 record for a 4-11 mark. However, the Duquesne had lost seven in a row for a 4-11 mark. However, the Duquesne had lost seven in a row for a 4-11 mark.

In other major games, 11th ranked Toledo beat Bowling Green 76-56; Kansas edged Kansas State 64-62 and knocked the Wildcats out of the Big Eight Conference lead; Marquette downed Louisville 78-70 and Maryland nipped Virginia 44-43.

Toledo moved into a tie with Ohio University for the Mid-American Conference lead. The Rockets took the lead for keeps early in the first half and led 35-27 at the intermission. Toledo has a 16-2 record.

Kansas swept to a 20-point first half advantage, but had to beat off a Kansas State rally for its fourth victory in seven conference starts. The setback dropped Kansas State a half game behind Colorado, the big eight leader.

Mike Wroblewski of the losers was the game's high scorer with 22 points. Bill Bridges led Kansas with 16.

Maryland beat Virginia Tech at its own slowdown tactics in the first half. However, the Cavaliers moved to within 42-41 in the closing seconds. Then Paul Julius, Maryland's top scorer, scored on a layup for the clincher. It was Maryland's fifth triumph in eight Atlantic Coast Conference tilts.

Marquette trailed Louisville by eight points in the second half and then scored 12 straight points to take a 65-55 lead. Don Kojis had 21 points and Walt Mangham 20 for the winners who broke a five-game losing streak and put their season mark at 10-8. Fred Sawyer was Louisville's ace with 29 points.

A Philadelphia doubleheader, Jack Egan scored 29 points in leading St. Joseph's (Pa.) to a 78-73 victory over St. Peter's of Jersey City, N.J. and Bill Kennedy scored six points in the final two minutes to lead Temple to a 68-60 triumph over Muhlenberg.

Elsewhere, the Feldman twins, Jon and Jeff, scored six of eight overtime points for George Washington to spark a 78-67 victory over Georgetown (DC); Al Butler connected for 38 points as his Niagara team walloped Syracuse 83-64; Washington State beat Montana 74-70 and Arizona defeated New Mexico 64-62.

In other news, New York University accepted an invitation to play in the NCAA tournament. The Violets, 11-3, will play as an at-large representative in a triple header at Madison Square Garden March 8. They will face the Atlantic Coast Conference champion for the right to advance to the next round at Charlotte, N.C. March 11-12 against the Mid-American Conference winner.

Houston Selects A Stadium Site

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Houston moved closer to major league baseball Wednesday with selection of a site for a stadium and an offer by backers of the Continental League to buy or merge with the Houston member of the American Assn.

One of the five founders of the Continental Baseball League, the Houston Sports Assn., offered to buy control of the Houston Buffs for $184,000.

But Russell Rowles, Buff board chairman, indicated the cash offer would be unsatisfactory. He said, however, he would recommend that stockholders give study to an alternate proposal submitted by continental backers that the two groups be merged.

Phants Capture Five Events In League Meet

Greenville's wrestling team captured five titles in the eleven event Northeastern AAA Meet yesterday but still fell short in total points.

Sammy Pugh, Garriss Evans, Dalton Owens, Don Joyner, and Jeff Fountain won individual titles for Greenville. Scott Smiley reached the finals but lost to Baxter of New Bern.

Coach Odell Weiborn cited "lack of over-all team strength" as the big factor in his club's third place finish. The Rose High coach noted that the Greenville club was "a young one."

Last Day Of Qualifying For Racers

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Stock car racing drivers get their last chances today to qualify for NASCAR's weekend racing program with its $124,720 total prize list.

Fifty cars already have qualified for a pair of 100-mile races for late models that will be run Friday, each with $5,000 in prizes. The way they finish in these races will determine starting places for the 500-mile sweepstakes Sunday with $88,245 in prize money.

Cotton Owens of Spartanburg, S.C., and Jack Smith of Atlanta, Ga., are the pole and outside positions in the front row of the 500 by winning a pair of 25-milers Jan. 31. They can run in the 100-mile races if they want but don't need to.

A wild scramble is expected to make the field of 68 starters in Saturday's 250-mile race for modified and sportman type cars. There were 35 qualifiers through Wednesday but faster cars today can bump slower ones previously clocked.

Any cars not qualified among the top 60 in this division by 5 p.m. today, or those bumped by faster cars, will run a pair of four-lap races. The first four in each event get in the field for the Saturday race.

Fireball Roberts of Daytona Beach set a record qualifying speed of 150.087 miles an hour in a modified Ford Wednesday. He set the old record of 149.253 last year. Earl Moss of Creedmore, N.C., was third at 136.013 in a modified Ford.

Curtis Turner of Charlotte, N.C., led Wednesday's qualifiers in the late model division with a speed of 144.346 m.p.h. in a 1960 Ford.

Other late model qualifiers of the day were Speedy Thompson of Charlotte; Bob Welborn of Atlanta; Johnny Allen of Atlanta; Charlie Griffith of Chattanooga; Brownie King of Johnson City, Tenn.; Jim Whitman of Wood Ridge, N.J.; Tiny Lund of Harlan, Iowa; and L. D. Austin of Greenville, N.C.

Deacons Battle Carolina Tonight In TV Contest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wake Forest visits North Carolina tonight in an Atlantic Coast Conference feature hoping to chip away at the Tar Heels well fortified hold on first place. It will be the "rubber match" of three meetings, the first two being settled by three points each time.

Front-running North Carolina has a 6-0 ACC record and faces eight straight conference foes in a span of 16 days.

Meanwhile, second-place Wake Forest, fresh from Lenny Chapel's peck-sparked wins over Duke (5-3) and Maryland (5-3), will be gunning for its second win in three tries with the Tar Heels. Wake won in December's Dixie Classic finals 53-50, but UNC bounced back for a 62-59 win last Monday.

In Wednesday night's only game Maryland played it Virginia's way and slowed down the game. After Maryland held a 15-4 halftime margin, both teams pepped it up in the final 20 minutes and the Terps edged out a 44-43 victory. Coach Billy McCann started three sophomores for the Cavaliers, but it was old reliable Paul Adkins, a senior, who led the scoring once again, marking up 15 on the Virginia side of the ledger.

Virginia limited Maryland's high-scoring Al Bunge to only eight points, but sophomore Paul Julius came through with 12 — high for the Terps.

The win, which tied Maryland with Duke for third place in the ACC, gave the Terps an 11-5 overall record. Virginia, last in the loop, now stands 1-7 and 5-10.

Both teams shot little, Virginia hitting 15 of 37 from the floor and Maryland 18 of 29 for 62.1 per cent accuracy.

Only one other contest is on tonight's card and that finds South Carolina playing Furman in Greenville, S.C., seeking a second win over the Southern Conference club. South Carolina takes a 7-12 overall record into the battle.

North Carolina takes an 11-3 overall mark into the Wake Forest (13-6) tilt. The Tar Heels will toss a veteran outfit, led by Lee Shaffer's 19.5 points-per-game scoring, at Wake Forest.

The Demon Deacons can counter with their 6-foot-8 soph, Chappell, who has been scoring at 14.7 p.p.g., including 27 and 24 in wins over Duke and Maryland last week.

North Carolina, now boosted by the return of highly-regarded Doug Moe, has won its last six games and has not tasted defeat since losing to Wake Forest in December.

The Wake Forest-UNC game will be televised from Chapel Hill over a four-station North Carolina network. UNC Athletic Director said these stations would carry the game: WTVD, Durham; WBTV, Charlotte; WNCT, Greenville and WFMV-TV, Greensboro.

Derby Prospect Was Destroyed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, 64-year-old trainer, apparently has lost his best chance of saddling a fourth Kentucky Derby winner.

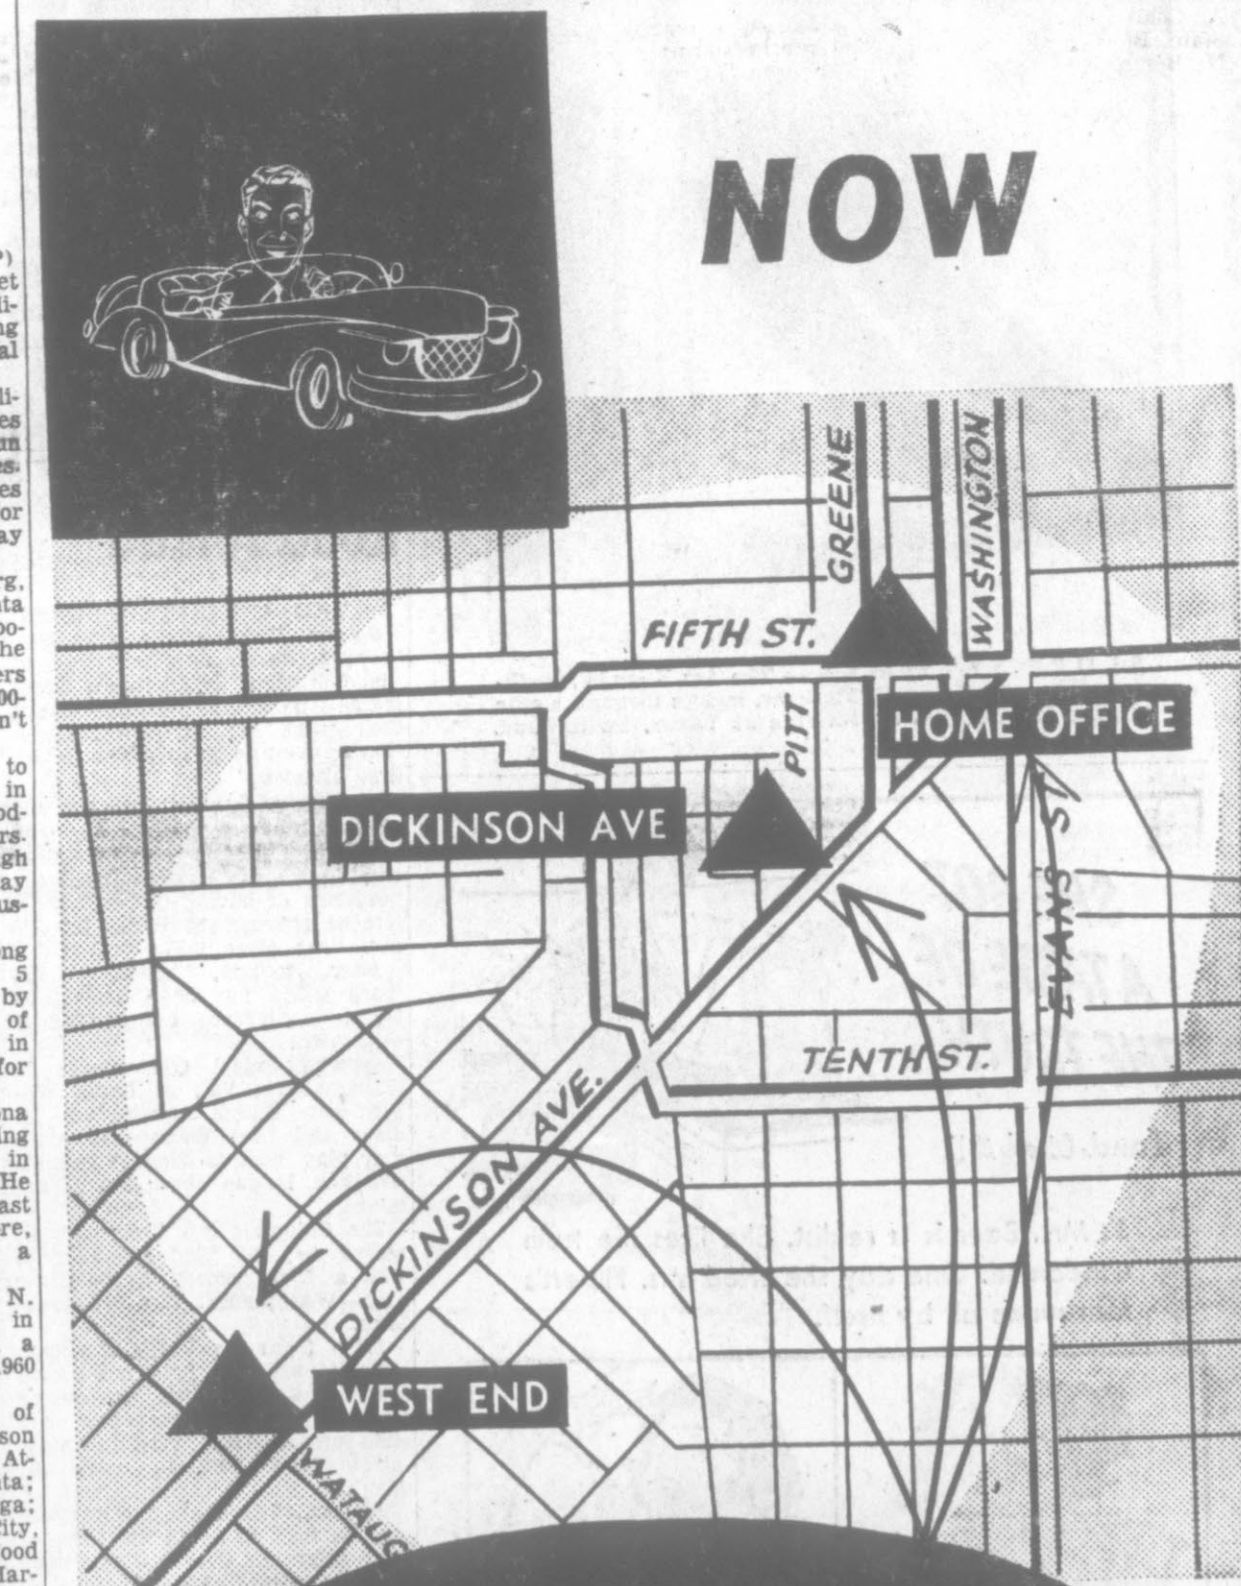

Progressing, a son of Bimelich from the Wheatley Stable, broke down Wednesday in the eighth race at Hialeah Park and was destroyed.

The Wheatley colt won the Pimlico Futurity last fall and looked impressive in a previous start at Hialeah.

Mr. Fitz' saddled derby winners in 1930's, 1935 and 1939.

Littler, Palmer Are Favorites

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Gene Littler, who generally makes a payday on his visits to Arizona, and Arnold Palmer, the year's top money winner, were the favorites today as the touring professionals teed off in the $22,500 Phoenix open tournament.

Littler, of Singing Hills, Calif., has won this tournament twice—in 1953 and 1959—and has finished in the money four of the past five years.

Palmer, the 30-year-old stylist from Ligonier, Pa., has pocketed $15,300 in prize money so far, with $12,000 coming for last week's victory in the rich Palm Springs desert classic.

Getting a big share of attention were Jerry Barber of Los Angeles who fired a 65 Wednesday to win the pro-am prelude and Bill Collins of Baltimore who was low pro with a 64, Jay Hebert, Sanford, Fla., and Bob Goalby, Crystal River, Fla., also had 65s.

Another gallery favorite is Joe Campbell, the former Purdue basketball player, who fired the shot heard round the golf world last week when he sank a $50,000 hole-in-one at Palm Springs.

And there's Doug Ford, the 1955 PGA champion, who is returning after a year's absence: Tommy Bolt, former U. S. Open champion who recently set a course record of 63 at the Palm Springs Indian Wells layout; Mike Souchak; Ken Venturi, the 1958 Phoenix open champ; and Bill Casper, the 1957 winner.

Missing from the lineup, however, will be Art Wall Jr., the leading money winner in 1959, and Dow Finsterwald, Tequesta, Fla., one of the top money-makers in 1960. Both are heading for the Caribbean tour.

The 72-hole tournament will be played over the tricky and troublesome 6,620-yard par 71 Phoenix Country Club course.

Record Field In Women's Open

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — An impressive and record field of 119 golfers tee off today in the $7,500 seventh annual St. Petersburg Women's Open.

Defending champion Louise Suggs of Atlanta and Mickey Wright of San Diego head the field which includes all previous winners and many of the country's top women golfers.

Score of the 72-hole event is the 6,116-yard par 71 Sunset Golf and Country Club course with sub par scores Tuesday.

ECC Second In Offense; Lead In Accuracy

GREENSBORO (AP) — The battle for offensive honors in the North State Conference apparently has settled down to a two-way fight between High Point and East Carolina.

The Panthers, just as they have all season, still lead this week with an 82.1 average. East Carolina is second at 80.3.

They are the only clubs hitting at better than 80 points per game. Appalachian is third at 76.0.

Lenoir Rhyne is the leading defensive club, having limited the opposition to an average of 64.3 points per contest. Appalachian and High Point are tied for second with 66.2 averages.

High Point is far in front in team effectiveness. The Panthers hold an average of 15.9 points a game over the opposition.

East Carolina has hit 47 per cent of its shots from the floor to lead in that department, with Appalachian second at 46.2. Appalachian is tops in free throw shooting accuracy with 78.4 per cent. The Bears also are tops in rebounds, averaging 51.9 a contest.

Danny Sewell is the leading individual scorer with an average of 25.4 points a game. Ike Riddick of East Carolina is second at 24.5.

Final Pairings Will Be Made

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Final pairings for the Virginia-Carolina junior college basketball tournament, beginning here next Thursday, will be completed this week unless a playoff for the eighth spot develops.

Charlotte (2-13) plays Louisville on Saturday night needing a win to gain the final berth. Edwards Military, 2-14, has completed its season and would tie Charlotte for the final spot should the Queen City five lose. If the teams tie, they will play for the eighth spot.

Final standings will determine how teams will be paired.

The defending champion Wilmington College, currently leads the conference with a 13-2 record. Its final game, scheduled tonight is at Campbell.

Teams certain to be in the tournament are Wilmington, Campbell, Louisville, Chowan, Frederick of Virginia, Oak Ridge Military and Presbyterian Junior.

GW Faces Tough Road Ahead

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Washington's Colonials, to hear the coaches talk, one of the Southern Conference's most feared basketball teams, have their work cut out for them if they're even going to finish in the first division.

GW has a date tonight with Virginia Military Institute's Keydets, and the Colonials are likely to shoot down the Keydets from the headlines of having gained a conference tournament berth for the first time since 1955.

After tonight, however, it's tough going for the Colonials as far as conference competition is concerned.

Saturday night GW moves to Williamsburg, Va., to battle William and Mary's fourth-place Indians and next Wednesday night they play host to West Virginia's five-time league champion Mountaineers.

The Colonials ran their over-all record to 12-8 Wednesday night with a 73-67 victory in overtime over Washington rival Georgetown.

Aside from the VMI-GW scrap, tonight's schedule lists non-league encounters for three conference teams. The top attraction has sixth-ranked West Virginia moving to New York to battle St. John's.

Furman, 7-13 against all opponents, is host to South Carolina of the Atlantic Coast Conference and Davidson, 4-16 in overall play, tries to get back in the victory column at Pfeiffer, one of the Wildcats' few victims of this long and lean season.

WC Cats Upset League Leaders

Lenoir Rhyne visits oft-beaten Guilford tonight in the North State Conference's only basketball game and a LR victory would push the Bears back into first place in the hotly-contested race.

Western Carolina's pesky Catamounts held Danny Sewell to 11 points and chopped High Point 76-61 Wednesday night at Culo-wher. The loss was High Point's third in 12 conference games and dropped the Panthers to a tie with Lenoir Rhyne for first place.

East Carolina, meanwhile, battled down stubborn Catawba 73-71 at Salisbury. Ike Riddick, ECC's sharp-shooting senior, bombed in 27 points, mostly from the outside.

In another thriller, Appalachian overcame an 11-point halftime deficit to trip Elon 64-62. Don King, whose shot in the final three seconds was the margin of victory, topped all scorers with 23.

Atlantic Christian won an 82-80 overtime conquest of Pembroke and Belmont Abbey jumped to an early lead and whipped Pikeville, Ky., College 71-52 to round out the action.

Coach Jim Hickey filled a long-standing staff vacancy Wednesday by naming Bob Thalman of Hampden-Sydney College as freshman coach.

Thalman, who was head coach at the Virginia school for the last four seasons, was Hickey's replacement there when Hickey moved to Chapel Hill.

Thalman's teams won 25, lost nine and tied one. He won the Mason-Dixon Conference crown in 1957.

Last season's Tar Heel freshman coach, Joe Mark, will move up to the varsity staff, filling an opening which occurred when George Barclay joined the staff at Tulane University.

Thalman, 37, is a former professional lineman with the old Richmond Rebels. He begins his Tar Heel duties Monday when spring practice begins.

"It is only when men begin to worship that they begin to grow," said Calvin Coolidge in 1922.

ECC Opera Theatre Plans Presenting Menotti Opera

East Carolina College's Opera Theater, student organization sponsored by the department of music, will present Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Medium" in two performances Saturday, Feb. 20, at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Feb. 21, at 3 p.m. in the McGinnis auditorium.

The Menotti opera is one of a series of annual productions by the Opera Theater. Last year's full-length presentation of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride" received high praise from audiences and from the press.

Paul Hickfang, director of the college music faculty, director of the Opera Theater productions, describing "The Medium" said, "we are looking forward to this show to be the most outstanding one this school has even produced. The music is electrifying and powerful—very explosive and beautiful, all packed in an hour's performance. This is a production that will be enjoyed by the average lay music-lover as well as by the opera-lover."

The East Carolina Orchestra directed by Donald Hayes, will provide accompaniment for the Menotti Opera. "The Medium" will be the first production in which a student cast from the Opera Theater has had the support of the orchestra.

A tragic opera, "The Medium" centers its plot around the gypsy Baba, her daughter Monica, and her adopted son Toby, a mute boy. Baba seeks a solution to a penetrating problem involving the world of reality and the supernatural world. The answer seems to lie hidden in Toby's silence.

At the Saturday and the Sunday performances, two of the major roles of the opera will be sung by different vocalists. Mrs. Bradner of Greenville and Jane Murray of Roxboro will share honors in the leading role of Baba. Mrs. Allison Moss of Greenville and Ann Darden of Williamston will appear as Monica. James Gillikin of Greenville will have the part of Toby at each performance.

Other members of the cast are Ronald Knouse of Winston-Salem, Jeanne Peterson of Greenville, Carolyn Elam of Roxboro, and Jessamine Hiatt of Clinton.

Dr. Robert Rickert of the college department of English is dramatic director of "The Medium." John Gordon of the department of art is designer of settings for the production.

Dog Decides To Resume Eating

DETROIT (AP) — Old Brokenhearted, a dog fasting for his lost master, decided to take up eating again Wednesday, thanks to a tiny girl and some chicken.

Veterinarian J. B. Graves took the mongrel in and treated him a week ago after he was found lying beside the road, apparently a victim of an auto.

His owner couldn't be found, and Brokenhearted — as Graves named him — refused to eat.

But Wednesday Amy Graves, 3, the vet's daughter, asked if she could try to feed him a bit of chicken.

Brokenhearted looked at Amy and looked at the chicken. His whiskers wiggled and his mouth watered. Then, gulp! Old Brokenhearted was eating again.

No Justice, Says A Baby-Beater

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Louis E. Long, 28, was sentenced to two-to-four months in jail Wednesday for beating his 18-month-old son.

"There's no justice," he said. "People come into this court charged with murder and get less than I got."

Judge Thomas M. Marshall replied, "I have no sympathy and will not condone baby beaters."

At Ripon, Wis., in 1854, a movement was organized that later became the modern day Republican Party.

Winter's Big Snow In Midwest Diminishes

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winter's most severe snowstorm diminished in most of the Midwest today but the crippling effects were felt in many areas.

The major job, clearing streets and highways of huge drifts, was slowed in many sections. Strong northerly winds swept the snow back onto highways as fast as they were cleared.

More heavy snow also continued during the night in eastern upper and extreme northern Lower Michigan as the storm center moved northeastward headed into Canada. An additional covering of 4 to 8 inches was in prospect.

The blizzard-like storms, sweeping out of the Great Plains Tuesday, were the worst in some Midwest areas in many years. Many communities were isolated, hundreds of motorists were stranded and scores of schools were closed. Business and industry slowed due to absenteeism. Many industrial plants in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa shut down.

Colder weather swept into the snow-blanketed regions and dipped as far south as the Gulf Coast. It was below zero in northern Midwest sections.

The violent weather which raked the Pacific coastal areas, the Southwest, South and Midwest was blamed for at least 32 deaths. Nearly half of them were caused by heart attacks suffered while shoveling the heavy, wet snow.

The storm dumped about 18 inches of snow on Milwaukee, with 16.7 inches in a 24-hour period, which the Weather Bureau said was the second largest snowfall on record for the Wisconsin metropolis. Seven deaths were attributed to the storm.

Many Iowa, southwestern Wisconsin and northwestern Illinois communities were snowbound, with 10-foot drifts and foot-high snowfalls. Hardest hit cities included Rockford, Ill., with 118,000 residents; Freeport, Ill., with 25,600 population and Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis.

Hundreds of motorists were stranded in Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois.

East of the storm belt, showers splattered areas from eastern New York southward into South Carolina. In the West, light snow fell in sections of the northern Rockies and the high plains, while showers sprinkled sections in the far Southwest.

Just Too Busy Raising Citizens

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Annie Flanagan, 37, came here from Londonderry, North Ireland, in 1944 with her husband, Harry, but was too busy raising nine citizens to become one herself—until Wednesday.

Then with her husband, whom she met while he was a Marine during World War II, and their nine children present, she took the citizenship oath from Judge John W. Lord of U.S. Dist. Court.

"I wanted to take a course in citizenship a long time ago, but there always seemed to be a baby around the house," Mrs. Flanagan said.

Convinced Missing Millionaire Alive

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Sheriff Art Wermuth said today he is convinced millionaire Adolph Coors III is alive and a hostage of kidnappers.

"It's just a feeling," he said. "I think he's alive but I don't have any proof. It's just my particular idea."

Coors, 44, is chairman of the board of the Adolph Coors Co. here. He vanished Tuesday morning while en route to work from his home in the Rocky Mountain foothills west of Denver. His carryall truck, its motor running, was found abandoned on a small rural bridge.

Blood was found on the seat vehicle, in the dirt beside it and on a railing of the bridge.

The FBI laboratory in Washington identified the blood on the bridge railing as human, but did not immediately say whether it matched the type of the missing man.

Scott Werner, agent in charge of the FBI office in Denver, said only: "We still are investigating."

Werner refused to answer a question whether law enforcement agencies or members of the Coors family have received any contacts regarding the missing industrialist.

Wermuth, a World War II Army hero who was known as the "one man army of Bataan," answered the same question this way: "I personally have not seen any ransom note. I can't speak for 70 or so people in the field, or for Scott Werner."

Wermuth was expected today to confer with Adolph Coors Jr., father of the missing man. The senior Coors, 76, and his wife flew here Tuesday from Honolulu, where they were vacationing.

The younger Coors, a 6-foot-3 outdoorsman, is chairman of the over-all organization at the Coors firm, which produces beer and manufactures ceramic products that include missile nose cones.

Other than the valley areas, most of Syria receives about four inches of rain a year.

Lake Not Running For Governorship

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Segregationist I. Beverly Lake was all but out of the running for governor today. However, he left the door slightly open should he get the needed campaign money.

In a speech to a Democratic party rally at Sanford Wednesday night, Lake said he would not run because of a shortage of funds.

At a news conference afterwards, he told reporters he would not try to raise campaign money, but he added:

"If the money is brought to me, I'll have to consider again in the light of those facts. I hope my mind will always be subject to being changed by new evidence."

Outbursts of encouragement from his supporters interrupted his speech at the rally sponsored by the Lee County Young Democrats Club.

When Lake, 53-year-old Raleigh lawyer and one-time assistant attorney general, said he did not have the needed money, a person in the crowd shouted, "You'll get it." Another hollered, "run anyway, we're for you."

A top Lake supporter, State Sen. Robert Morgan of Harnett County, told newsmen, "We're trying to get him to change his mind and we think we have about got the money lined up."

State Sen. O. Arthur Kirkman of High Point, considered a possible gubernatorial candidate, also addressed the rally but gave no hint of his plans.

Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, who announced last week that he was in the race, told the group, "I would not be honest if I did not admit that Dr. Beverly Lake's announcement has removed a heavy load from my mind."

Sanford was given a rousing round of applause when he stepped up to speak.

Party leaders and top state officials, including most members of the Council of State, were on hand for the rally.

Lake was interrupted several times by applause during his address. He received the wildest reaction when he commented on the recent wave of Negro protests against segregated lunchrooms.

He said merchants should be protected in their right to select the customers they wish to serve.

He charged college officials with the responsibility to prevent what he called "organized, group invasion of private property by the students."

DeGaulle Crackdown In Algeria

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle has cracked down on his political-minded army in Algeria and ordered much power returned to civil authorities.

The French leader and his cabinet Wednesday night approved sweeping reforms aimed at confining the military to its primary task in the big North African territory—suppression of the five-year-old nationalist rebellion.

The cabinet also took away from the French settlers in Algeria their own military arm. It had been one of the chief props of the abortive French uprising in Algiers last month.

In a series of decrees approved during a 2½-hour session, the cabinet:

Abolished the army's psychological warfare branch, some of whose officers were sympathetic to the rebellious French settlers. Dissolved Algeria's territorial home guard units.

Relieved three top generals of their Algerian posts and ordered sanctions against an undisclosed number of other army officers.

Reorganized the Algerian police and transferred control of police services from military to civilian authorities.

Took steps to restore to regional civilian governors (prefects) much of the political power taken over by the army during the Algerian settlers' uprising in 1958 which brought De Gaulle back to office.

The decrees were a major step in De Gaulle's determined campaign to prevent further uprisings and to push ahead with his policy of letting Algeria decide its political future in a free countrywide vote.

The army, chief target of the decrees, had fraternized openly with the insurgents in Algiers and took no action against them until De Gaulle cracked the whip and sent in replacements from other sectors.

The government also announced plans to streamline military courts to speed up trials of nationalist terrorists and said it would conduct new local elections throughout Algeria before summer.

Although the guard units are to be broken up, individual members will be called up as needed for brief periods of service in the army or with the police. The territorial units were organized as a sort of army auxiliary for the fight against the rebels.

In the reorganization of police services, Algerian police now will serve directly under the top government official in the territory—De Gaulle's delegate—general—and not under a military chief.

The cabinet also launched a purge of police sympathizers with the colonial French. Information Minister Louis Terrenoire announced chiefs of police departments in Algeria are being replaced by men from Paris.

The three generals removed from their posts are Jacques Faure, commander of the Grand Kabylie region east of Algiers; Henry Mirambeau, who headed the Southern Oran Department, and Andre Gribus, commander in the Western Sahara.

The government announcement did not mention new assignments, but they probably will be brought home.

Her Solution: A Hex Sign In Tar

DETROIT (AP)—When 83-year-old Minnie Gilland decided her neighbor was trying to "witch" away her husband, she said she knew just what to do about it.

Mrs. Gilland told Judge Gerald Groat she put a tar-and-feather hex sign on the home of Mary Donaldson, 75.

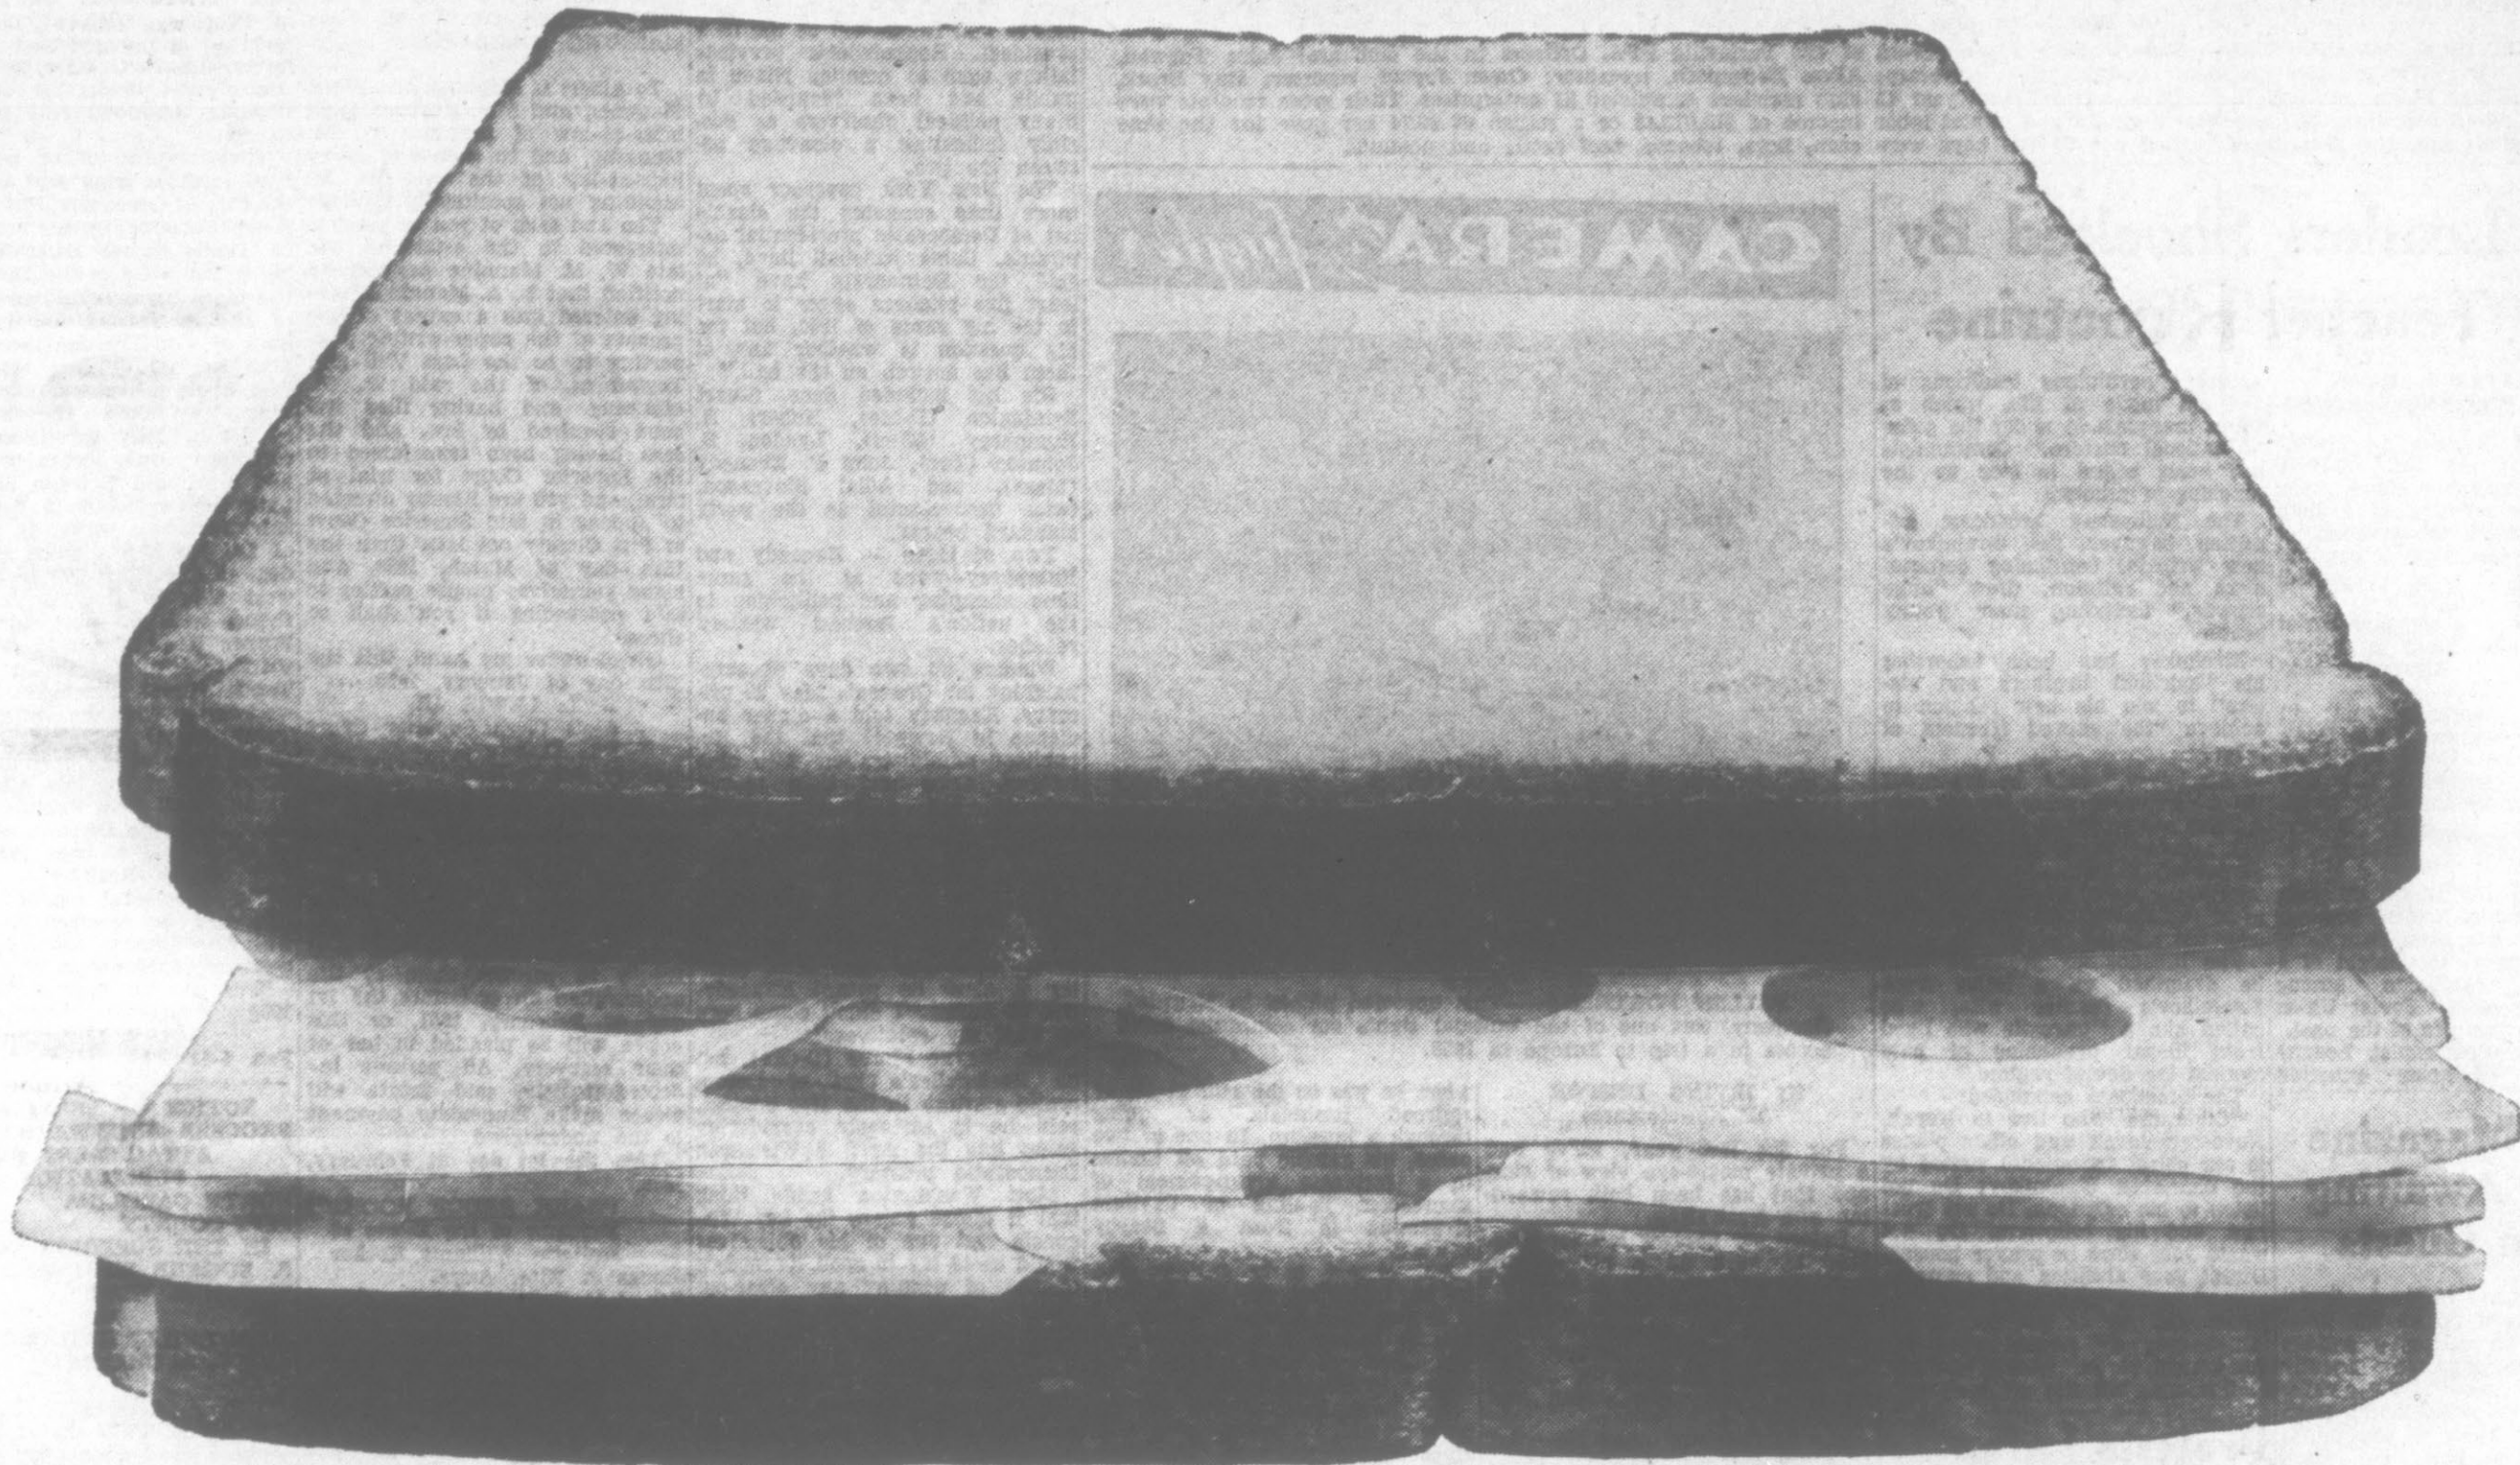

Mrs. Donaldson denied she was trying to steal David Gilland, 65, from Mrs. Gilland. She estimated it would cost $75 to repaint the tarred area.

Judge Groat convicted Mrs. Gilland of destruction of property and released her pending sentence Feb. 24.

"I had to do something," Mrs. Gilland said. "After I had done it I felt better."

Red Leaders Shocked By New Teacher's Doctrine

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

Communist leaders in Kulysh province are aghast. Huge crowds of villagers have been jamming the meeting of a man who calls himself the preacher of "a new holy teaching of communism." Free love is a cardinal tenet of his "religion."

The culprit — a regional Soviet broadcast called him a "charlatan" — is one Alexander Mikhailovich Strelnikov.

Strelnikov reportedly said: "I am in God's business. I am God's spirit incarnate. God's spirit assisted me in creating a new holy teaching of communism. It is the true popular teaching, leading mankind toward a virtuous and blessed life."

This is all the more shocking to the Communist leaders because the preacher has been flourishing in the villages at the height of a concentrated campaign among young people of the Soviet Union to stamp out vestiges of the past.

The Young Communist League (Komsomol) is being exhorted against "pernicious traditions of the old mode of life, which at times masquerade under the guise of national custom." Communists are being urged to step up the teaching of atheism.

The Kulysh broadcast admitted, however, that Strelnikov's new wrinkle, combining communism and religion, drew "huge crowds," including many young people.

Strelnikov has been exhorting his "spiritual brothers and sisters" to join his new religion to achieve "the sacred freedom of love."

"Strelnikov," said the broadcast "is a dangerous man. He not only spiritually corrupted his followers, but seduced them physically. He persuaded a number of so-called 'spiritual sisters' to live with him, after explaining that such conduct was not sinful."

The broadcaster produced what he described as a letter from Strelnikov's former wife, who called him a "parasite who lived from illegal preaching of hate against the Soviet regime."

The broadcast concluded: "Comrades who live in Kryash, Novo-Sergievsk and other places in our oblast (province) visited by the charlatan Strelnikov: Do not listen to his sermons. Do not trust him and his followers. Do not waste your time in prayer houses. Direct your abilities and energies toward useful work. Personal happiness and joy of life can be attained only by honest work for the benefit of our people and our motherland, but not by prayers."

Protests Large Fee For Paving

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Contractor S. W. Gaylord appeared before the City Council Wednesday to protest a street paving assessment of $16,905.30. In September he obtained a $217,919 contract to handle the project. The contractor said the paving would not increase the value of his property by the assessed amount. He owns 1,110 feet facing the project.

No decision was announced by the City Council.

CAMERA Angles

FALLEN FORTRESS—This uprooted pillbox in Neuwied, Germany, was one of the unusual sights our columnist came across in a trip to Europe in 1958.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

For the last year, we've had a private movie-eye view of Europe that has been both rewarding and frustrating.

Before our nephew left for England to work on a government project, we gave him a fast lesson with a turret movie camera. He shipped the processed films to us for splicing, editing and criticism—and to keep the family posted on his whereabouts and activities.

We recommend other families adopting this arrangement when their sons, daughters or relatives are serving in the armed forces overseas, are students or working abroad. It's a perfect way to keep in touch.

The frustrations arose when mistakes were repeated and it seemed as though our criticisms and suggestions were ignored. But now that our nephew has returned to this country, we have his reasons for shooting as he did.

The two worst faults were wild panning and under-exposure. "The pan shots were taken mostly on sightseeing buses or from autos," Herb explains. "The cars bounced and so did my camera. The drivers didn't slow up to suit my convenience so it was a question of getting what I could or nothing at all since each tour was a one-time-only visit."

Now Herb knows he shouldn't rest his elbows on the window sill of a moving vehicle. It's a perfect conductor of vibrations. If he had kept the camera pressed against his face, his body would have absorbed much of the vehicle's movements.

Another good idea is to shoot at a faster film speed. When movies are shot at 24, 32 or 48 frames a second, the final effect on projection is to level out the jerky movements. Of course, the lens aperture must be opened wider to compensate: one full stop, for instance, if shot at 31 frames per second instead of the normal 16 frames.

Herb also took some "desperation" shots in inadequate light when he was on the run at air or railroad terminals or going through a museum. In one or two cases, his gamble paid off thanks to a fortunate arrangement of fluorescent lighting or daylight streaming in from a nearby window.

But enough early footage had to be discarded for us to rush him two suggestions. We urged him to invest in a light meter, and shoot at eight frames per second in dim lighting.

The latter idea worked out especially well in taking neon — lit night scenes of cities. The slower speed doubled the exposure making it just right for wide-open shooting. In viewing, the film is projected at double the taking speed which turned out to be even more effective in the shots of flashing lights.

Some of Herb's best movies were candid glimpses of foreign life and people. From an obscure doorway, he'd train his telephoto lens on passing local types or show merchants and traffic policemen in action. He focused on interesting shop windows, unusual signs and children playing.

Herb did a lot of shooting so even after discarding the mistakes, we were able to turn over to him eight 300-foot reels. This adds up to about four hours of colorful memories...too much for normal showing at one time. We have one more job to do.

We're going to select the top highlights from all 2,400 feet of film and put them together on one 300-foot reel. It will make a 25-minute showpiece which Herb will show when he wants to establish his reputation as a top-notch movie maker.

Kind Words By Rockefeller For Vice President Nixon

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York has broken the silence he has maintained about Richard M. Nixon since he withdrew as the vice president's only rival for the Republican presidential nomination. His view of Nixon: "Clear and forthright."

Rockefeller said those kind words Wednesday night about Nixon's warning to Republicans to avoid a smug, self-satisfied attitude because of past achievement.

But that's all Rockefeller said about Nixon at a Buffalo, N. Y., party dinner. He made no prediction that Nixon will be the next president. Rockefeller's previous failure even to mention Nixon in public had been regarded by many political observers as possibly indicating a cleavage between the two.

The New York governor spent more time scanning the sizable list of Democratic presidential aspirants. Using baseball lingo, he said the Democrats have "at least five pitchers eager to start in the big game of 1960, but the big question is whether any of them has enough on the ball."

His list included Sens. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.), Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), John F. Kennedy (Mass.), and Adlai Stevenson, twice unsuccessful as the party standard bearer.

Two of these — Kennedy and Humphrey — were at the same time stumping and politicking in the nation's farthest western reaches.

Winding up two days of campaigning for Oregon's May 20 primary, Kennedy told a dinner audience in Newport that the Republican administration, with high interest rates and tight money policies, has cost the nation heavily.

Humphrey was in California, starting a five day tour with his eye on the state's 81 convention votes. He said he wouldn't enter the California primary in June unless somebody else does, making it clear he meant Kennedy. But he added "I didn't come here to visit my relatives."

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore.), not on Rockefeller's list of Democratic starters in the 1960 contest, said he is seriously considering going into the April 5 Wisconsin Democratic primary.

Most Washington hands think that if Morse enters the key Wisconsin test one of his objectives would be to try to spoil Kennedy's chance of winning any clear-cut victory there. Morse has criticized Kennedy for his role in the passage of the labor-management reform law last year.

At Miami Beach, Fla., AFL-CIO President George Meany said he is quite sure the 14 million member labor organization will make an endorsement after the Democratic and Republican conventions this summer. In the past that has meant endorsement of the Democratic presidential candidate.

NEW YORK (AP) — A few issues made good gains in a narrowly mixed stock market early this afternoon. Trading was at the slowest pace of 1960.

Small gains and losses, few going to as much as a point, were the general rule for most key stocks.

A scattering of selected issues were up from 1 to about 3 points. The nearness of Friday's Lincoln's Birthday observance had something to do with the extremely light turnover, brokers said.

The major stock exchanges will be open but banks will be closed and many in the financial district will take off today for a three-day weekend.

Airlines showed a degree of firmness, tobacco was steady but steels, motors and chemicals were mixed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was unchanged at 216.60 with the industrials off .10, the rails up .30 and the utilities off .20.

Corporate bonds were narrowly mixed.

U. S. government bonds were irregular.

Alamance Voices Are Raised Against Insurance Rate Boost

RALEIGH (AP)—The chairman of the Alamance County commissioners said today "there is an undercurrent of resentment against the wholesale cancellation of liability insurance policies in North Carolina."

J. B. Long declared that some people whose policies have been cancelled have never been involved in a wreck or violated a traffic law.

Long made his remarks to a newsman immediately prior to a hearing before Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold on a proposed increase in auto liability insurance rates. He said he proposed to make the same comment at the hearing.

The North Carolina Automobile Rate Administrative Office asked Gold to approve rate hikes averaging 9½ per cent on private passenger vehicles. If approved, it would cost Tar Heel motorists up to five million dollars.

Youth Admits He Shot Minister

CHICAGO (AP)—Lonnie Bennett, 15, admitted today, police said, he shot and seriously wounded a white minister and brotherhood leader in an attempted hold-up by a teen-age Negro gang Monday night.

Bennett was one of six Negro boys seized by police in connection with the shooting of the Rev. Leo K. Bishop, 48, vice president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Police said they are seeking another Negro youth and two Negro girls who were members of the gang which terrorized three South Side districts Monday night.

Police said Bennett admitted he fired shots from a .22 caliber rifle when the Rev. Mr. Bishop resisted a robbery attempt. Police, however, said the minister was shot with a .32 caliber revolver, the type of weapon they said had been carried by another member of the gang, Luther Gordon, 18. Police said Gordon admitted firing his pistol, but said he shot it in the air.

The Rev. Mr. Bishop was shot twice while walking with his wife, Paula, 47, to their home from a meeting of a neighborhood improvement organization. He was reported in fair condition in Illinois Central Hospital.

RALEIGH (AP) — Improvement of state highways last year took 74 million dollars, the State Highway Department reported today.

Interstate projects let to contract last year amounted to $30,067,727. Primary and secondary highway construction projects totaled $27,472,310. Betterment and retreatment costs were $2,560,158. The remainder was spent on right-of-way and engineering. There were 298 road contracts let during 1959.

Dowd Speaks To NCEA Meeting

Principal O. E. Dowd of Junius H. Rose High School spoke to the Greenville unit of the North Carolina Education Association at its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon in the cafeteria of Rose High.

Dowd described the philosophies of education practiced at the local high school and pointed out needs of students that should be recognized and given attention in elementary school.

He listed student habits, cultivation of special interests, and self-confidence as major needs of students entering high schools of today.

Prior to Dowd's brief talk, Rose High seniors and members of the music department presented the meeting's devotional, a clarinet quartet, a flute trio, and a singing trio.

Making It Clear Chessman Would Be Executed

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The state is making it clear Caryl Chessman still would be subject to the death penalty if he were retried and convicted of the 1948 Los Angeles kidnap and robbery charges.

Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk told a joint meeting of Oakland service clubs Wednesday night an amendment to the state kidnap law in no way has changed the penalty for kidnapping involving bodily harm.

Chessman, scheduled to die at San Quentin Feb. 19, is asking federal courts to grant a writ of habeas corpus. The defense has suggested his execution is scheduled under a statute no longer on the books.

The law under which Chessman was convicted still stands with one amendment, Mosk said, "It is still a capital offense to forcibly kidnap a person and to do bodily harm to the person kidnapped."

The amendment, he said, removes a technicality when robbery is involved and does not "affect Chessman's case in any way."

Also elected at the meeting were William Woolfolk, First Lieutenant; Roger Page as Second Lieutenant; and William Perry, secretary-treasurer.
