No Bomb With Her Withdrawal

NEW YORK (AP) — Esther Breslau says no one was more surprised than she was to find that the withdrawal slip she presented a bank teller Tuesday said: "Give me all the money. I have a bomb."

Now Knows Value Of Good Spelling

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A North Braddock woman now knows the value of good spelling. Josephine Plock, 30, appeared in court Tuesday on a charge of malicious mischief. She was accused of smearing paint on the walls and floors of her home before she moved out.

ADENAUER HAS FLU BONN, Germany (AP) — Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was confined to his home today with a mild attack of influenza, his office announced. Adenauer, 84, is subject to occasional colds and influenza in the winter.

House Rules Body Agrees To Clear Civil Rights Bill President Plans Address Nations On Trip, Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Rules Committee agreed informally today to clear a stalled civil rights bill for House consideration. Formal action sending the measure to the House floor probably will be taken Thursday. The decision to act was made at a hurriedly called session this morning.

That maneuver went unchallenged by Sen. B. Everett Jordan (D-NC) who had been posted as a sentinel by Southern opponents to rally them to fight against bringing up any civil rights measure. Jordan has denied he was posted as a sentinel, and leaders of the Dixie forces in the civil rights fight rallied to his defense in Senate speeches, with assists from Johnson and Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill) the GOP Senate leader.

President Plans Address Nations On Trip, Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower will go on nationwide television and radio Sunday evening to discuss national defense and his forthcoming South American tour. The President announced this as a news conference today. And—in cold anger—Eisenhower called it despicable for anyone to suggest that he may have misled the nation regarding its defense position.

More Violence In Sitdown Protest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Negroes and whites battled with bricks, bottles and rocks Tuesday in High Point, N.C., after they were ordered to quit congregating on downtown streets. The violence, connected with a two-week demonstration by Southern Negroes protesting lunch counter segregation, occurred at an intersection near the city's Negro residential area.

Gaylord Is Named Terry Sanford's Chairman In Pitt

Louis W. Gaylord Jr., prominent Greenville attorney, today was named Pitt County manager for the gubernatorial campaign of Terry Sanford.

The announcement, which was made today by Bert Bennett, Sanford's state campaign manager, was the first announcement of a county campaign manager by the Sanford organization. Sanford's campaign headquarters opened yesterday at the Carolina Hotel in Raleigh. "We are delighted that Louis Gaylord has agreed to take on the responsibility of being campaign manager for Pitt County," Sanford told The Daily Reflector today.

LOUIS GAYLORD, JR.

Could Authorize Airborne Alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top defense officials conceded in writing today they have full authority to order an immediate airborne alert of the Strategic Air Command. They agreed with Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) that this includes the right to spend from 600 million to a billion dollars, if necessary, which Congress voted for other defense purposes.

Flu Subsiding, More Measles Within City

County Health Director Dr. Georgia Mills said yesterday that though flu cases are subsiding, there has been an upsurge of measles in Greenville, with the majority of cases among students of Agnes Fullilove School. As of yesterday afternoon, the total cases of measles reported to Dr. Mills were 57. Fifty four of those came from Agnes Fullilove with a few from Elmhurst. Three cases were reported by private physicians. Last Thursday, Dr. Mills said there were 16 cases of measles reported in the Fullilove School. On Friday there were 30 cases from that school.

Commission Will Hear Two Guests

Special guests are scheduled to appear before the Pitt County Development Commission at its February meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Pitt Courthouse to describe the operations and future plans of a pair of new additions to the Pitt County industrial family and to discuss the work of the East Carolina College business department in furnishing the Commission with statistics and data.

Internal Revenue Service Relaxes On Joe Louis

WASHINGTON (AP)—Although the case of Joe Louis is still open, the Internal Revenue Service does not expect to get any more tax money from the former heavyweight champion. An IRS aide summed up the government's attitude Tuesday: "We're not chasing Joe. We're not going to make life miserable for him."

Tobacco Health Researchers Are Filing Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists, working under grants from the tobacco industry, produced 38 reports of cancer, heart disease and other fields last year, it was announced today. Dr. Clarence Cook Little, scientific director of the Tobacco Industry Research Committee, said all 38 of the scientific papers were condensed in the committee's 1959 annual report.

Big Eye

WASHINGTON (AP) — A superpower radar station able to spot Soviet missiles thousands of miles away will be set up in England for U. S.-British defense, the State Department announced today. The huge metal screen—bigger than a football field set on its side—is to be built at a 120-million-dollar cost at Fylingdales Moor, Yorkshire. This is midway up the east coast of Britain, between London and Edinburgh.

Argentine Fleet Said 'Too Small'

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A complaint by Argentina's navy secretary that his fleet isn't large enough to trap a mystery submarine led today to the elusive intruder has escaped. Navy sources reported Tuesday the sub had not been detected in the southern Argentine gulf since Sunday.

Joint Industrial Development Work By Pitt, Martin Talked

Discussion revealed both local and Martin County interest in the possibility of the expansion of the Pitt County Development Commission to include Martin County in its "industry hunt." A trio of Martin representatives met here yesterday with local industrial development officials and leaders to hear advice and suggestions concerning the operation of the Pitt Commission.

Air Battle Over Formosa Strait

TOKYO (AP) — The Red Chinese claimed today to have damaged one Nationalist Chinese plane in the air battle over the Formosa Strait Tuesday. The Nationalists announced from Formosa earlier that they had probably knocked out one Red Chinese MIG in the battle between four Nationalist planes and 10 Communist aircraft. They said their four planes had returned safely.

Area Weather Will Be Cooler

The weatherman says it will be somewhat warmer here today and tonight, but it's going to be cooler tomorrow. Temperatures here will reach at least the high 50s, maybe even the lower 60s during the afternoon. Increasing cloudiness and cooler with chance of rain in the west portion, spreading eastward at night, is forecast. In Greenville, the 4 a. m. temperature was recorded at 29 degrees. It had risen to 35 by 9 o'clock this morning. Yesterday's high was 55 with a low of 28 degrees.

For Nikita, Less Bounce To The Ounce Is Apparent

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — A not-so-bouncy Nikita Khrushchev discussed possible new Soviet economic aid to neutralist Burma in talks today with Burmese President U Win Maung and resurgent political leader U Nu. A government source said the Soviet Premier and the Burmese leaders also touched informally on relations between Burma and Communist China and the China-India border dispute. Khrushchev reportedly applauded the agreement Jan. 28 settling some disputed points on the Burma-China border and agreeing to negotiate the others.

(Items this week from Greene, Cumberland, Chowan, Orange, Iredell, and Macon Counties.)

Strawberry Chain
Plans are underway now in Greene County to start a 4-H strawberry chain. Miss Joyce Foster, assistant home economics agent, reports that five boys and five girls will be selected to receive 500 strawberry plants each. Each 4-H Club member will be responsible for caring for his strawberries and returning 24 quarts of berries to the Strawberry Show and Sale in payment for plants received.

4-H Achievement
Carrie Tyson, Fayetteville, Rt. 7, has found that 4-H project work pays off if good records are kept. Recently at the 4-H achievement program, she was announced as county winner in frozen foods home management, food preparation, home improvement, dairy food demonstration, and safety. Carrie received $65 as project winner in these fields.

Mrs. Era K. Robinson, home economics agent, reports that Carrie is now serving as president of the southeastern district 4-H organization.

Litter Bags
Miss Catherine Aman, assistant home economics agent in Chowan County, says that 4-H Club members are busy selling litter bags as a county council project. The litter bags are green plastic with the 4-H emblem and the slogan "Keep North Carolina Clean" on the front of the bag.

One hundred bags have been sold so many of the 4-H families now have a litter bag in their car. More bags have been ordered.

Housecleaning Chores
Junior 4-H girls in Orange County have proven that they liked the demonstration on "Help Mother With Housecleaning". They recently exhibited dust cloths they made following the demonstration. The girls reported 97 dust cloths were treated and 58 dust gloves were exhibited.

According to Mrs. Kathryn P. Miller, assistant home economics agent, ribbons were awarded to the girls exhibiting dust gloves.

Craft Experts
Thirty 4-Hers in Macon County recently attended a craft workshop. The majority of the group chose to work with wrought iron and reed. Hot dish mats and letter holders were the favorite articles made.

Mrs. Jessie D. Abe, assistant home economics agent, reports the Cartoogechaye Junior 4-H members have chosen crafts and tree identification as group projects. Miss Sally Kesler, 4-H leader, will supervise the group.

Health Program
"Would you like to solve a mystery?" That was the question asked 4-H members in Iredell County at recent club meetings. The mystery was "The Case of the Missing Clover, Good Health."

Miss Doris Teeter, assistant home economics agent, reports that Sue Stradley, Iredell County's queen of health for 1959, conducted a special program at her senior club meeting. Several health committees are being organized to stress good health habits throughout the year.

Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Adkins Fete Executive Board

ROBERSONVILLE—Mrs. C. T. Smith and Mrs. R. K. Adkins were co-hostesses to the Executive Board of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Rocky Mount District Thursday at the home of Mrs. Smith.

Eighteen of 24 District officers and one conference officer were in attendance to discuss business and make plans for the ongoing of the work.

Mrs. J. W. Benson, district secretary of promotion, Wilson, presided in the absence of Mrs. R. K. Adkins, president of the district.

The theme for the District in 1960 is "Thy Kingdom Come." Mrs. Sam A. Dunn, conference secretary of Missionary Education and Service, Enfield, reported that the Woman's Society of the North Carolina Conference has been chosen by the Southeastern Jurisdiction of the Woman's Division, the Board of Missions, the Methodist Church for "special study and action." She stated, "This is interpreted as an honor."

Mrs. Dunn also announced "The Spiritual Life Retreat for the N. C. Conference and its School of Missions will be held at Duke University August 6-12."

The Annual Conference will be held at Grace Methodist Church, Wilmington, April 6-7.

The spring district meeting will be at Nashville Methodist Church April 19 at 10 a.m. The Southern-Central Sub-district will meet in Hamilton Methodist Church May 3 (date tentative) at 10 a.m. with Robersonville Methodist Church co-hostess.

A luncheon of baked country ham, corn, congealed salad, rustic apple rings with cheese, biscuits, cherry tarts and coffee was served. Mrs. J. W. Benson and Mrs. E. H. Measmer, district secretary of Spiritual Life, Aulander, were co-hostesses for the luncheon.

Adopted Child's Memory Book

A new memory book, the first one of its kind, is dedicated to the adopted child.

"All About You," by Marion A. MacLeod, has been designed to serve not only as a storehouse of important records for the child, but also to open and lighten the way for adoptive parents to unfold lovingly the adoption story to their child.

Pages include "Your personal history," "This is what we did to find YOU," "This is how WE looked when you first saw us" (with spaces for photographs), "This is how YOU looked when we first saw you," (spaces for photographs).

The page announcing the adopted child's arrival shows a cherub with a trumpet, and suggestions for listing family names.

Other pages explain why the child's name was selected, the child's looks and appearances when it arrived at its new home, how the child's room looked, early callers that welcomed the child to his new home.

The book is published by C. R. Gibson and Co., of Norwalk, Conn.

Work? Sure, She Says

NO STAY-AT-HOME! ... Lee Mathison, a former model and now personnel manager of a big employment agency, champions the cause of the working woman.

ATLANTA (AP)—Why shouldn't an American mother work if she wants to?

Lee Mathison, a former model and now personnel manager for a big employment agency, poses this question.

"A few years back, maybe not," she says. "But now with all the household helps—automatic kitchens, dishwashers and the like—why, it's simply silly.

"A mother has a perfect right to work, supplement the budget and help make a better living for her family. With her children a reasonable age, there is no reason why she shouldn't.

"You say she will neglect her children and they will become delinquents. How illogical!

"The very opposite is true. She will set an example of industry and honesty for her children. She will provide them with a better living—remove that feeling of insecurity so provocative of delinquency.

"You show me one working mother with delinquent children and I'll show you a hundred—or a thousand—with children on the way to becoming resourceful, productive and useful citizens."

For 14 years, Miss Mathison has been with a Chicago organization providing part time office help and business service to firms in many cities. As personnel manager, she tours the country.

She cites a U. S. Department of Labor report as backing up her conviction that juvenile delinquency does not result from mothers working.

She also holds that age is no deterrent to gainful work. Most business executives, she reports, prefer an office help married woman who are middle-aged or past.

A definite gain from working outside the home, even for one day a week, she declares, is that it often improves a woman's home relationships.

Miss Wilson Feted At Coffee

FARMVILLE — Miss Pattie Leach of Wilson and Mrs. Charles H. Carr of Farmville entertained at a coffee hour for Miss Dorothy Wilson, bride-elect, Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. J. C. Corbett.

Upon arrival, the honoree was presented a corsage in Valentine design.

Red carnations, red and white hearts and white chrysanthemums decorated the home. The refreshment table was covered with a cut-work cloth and centered with a Valentine arrangement.

Coffee and tea were served by Miss Pattie Leach and the guests helped themselves to assorted party snacks.

The hostesses presented the bride with a silver sandwich tray as a remembrance.

Eighteen guests attended, including the honoree's mother, Mrs. Myrtle Wilson of Greenville, and the bridegroom-elect's mother, Mrs. Robert L. Corbett of Farmville. Mrs. John Zeh, an attendant in Miss Wilson's wedding, was among the guests.

Miss Wilson and James E. Corbett will be married Sunday at the Eighth St. Christian Church in Greenville.

A United Effort Paved The Way

Enactment of federal legislation to help stabilize tobacco support prices is a measure that is sure to improve the position of American leaf in world markets and be of benefit to flue-cured tobacco growers.

The new bill on tobacco support prices has been passed by the House and Senate and now awaits the signature of the President which is almost assured in spite of the fact he vetoed a similar piece of legislation last year. This year the legislation, supported by the tobacco industry as a whole, has gained at least the lukewarm approval of Agriculture Secretary Benson and apparently the approval of the President as well.

Passage of this new legislation is a tribute to the united effort put forth by the tobacco industry from the growers to the exporters. It will mean more realistic price supports for tobacco based on the farmers' cost of operations; and it will tend to slow the upward movement of support prices that has put American tobacco out of the price reach of more and more foreign purchasers.

The new price support program for tobacco should enable American growers to regain some of the export business they have lost in recent years. It will enable American tobacco farmers to compete more effectively in the world market with foreign producers of similar tobacco. In the long run it should create a greater demand for U. S. tobacco and be reflected in increased production in the tobacco areas of the United States.

In addition to its effect upon the export of U. S. tobacco, the new price support program may well increase domestic consumption of tobacco in the United States, and this too will enhance the position of tobacco producing regions.

For several years the tobacco industry has recognized the handicap that was placed upon it by the unrealistic old price support formula which tended to push tobacco price supports higher as the supports for other commodities were lowered. It took considerable time for the industry to effect a united front for the new price support program. It took even more time for the industry to convince Congress and the administration that the new proposals were sound and in the best interest of the industry and the nation.

Approval of this new support program by Congress and the administration removes a major obstacle which threatened the entire tobacco industry. The fact that the industry has been able to solve one of its major problems by a united effort of all segments of the industry should encourage a similar united approach to other problems which the industry as a whole still faces.

New Procedure As To Platform

By LYNN NISBET

PLATFORM—One of the most important items on the agenda of the Democratic State committee when it meets here Friday afternoon, March 4, will be the selection of the twelve members of the Platform and Resolutions committee which will prepare the party platform to be presented to the full State Convention in May.

This will be the first time the platform committee has been named before the date of the convention when its members were chosen in congressional district caucuses. The 12 members so chosen generally have gotten together about noon and been handed a text of a platform, kept top secret from everybody until that time, with expectation that the committee would approve it, submit it to the convention which would adopt it. That procedure resulted in the work of one man secretly picked by the State Chairman, preparing the document that went out under the guise of the deliberate composite opinion of the Democratic party.

The revised Plan of Organization calling for selection and publicizing of the platform committee more than two months ahead of convention time assures a chance of every Democrat to make suggestions. The revised plan, however, has one big gap. It simply provides for the executive committee to elect one member from each congressional district for the platform group. As soon as the selections are made, the State Chairman is to designate one member as chairman and one as secretary, and there is procedure for giving notice of meetings. The big omission is no reference to the way in which names proposed for the platform group shall be presented to the full executive meeting.

Several State officials and party leaders have received inquiries about that. In absence of precedent or rule the procedure suggested is this: Each congressional district has 18 members on the State executive committee—nine men and nine women. In addition to these 216 district members, officers of the committee, members of the national committee, the YDC president and members of the YDC national committee are ex-officio voting members—for a total of 224.

The suggestion is that the district members get together in Raleigh earlier in the day Friday and hold a caucus at which a nominee for the district will be selected. Nobody has authority to call such a caucus, but it should not be too difficult to get 18 people together. If not 18 people, at least 18 votes. Although proxies have been accepted and voted for many years the Plan of Organization recognizes their legality for the first time.

Only other stated business of the State committee will be to fix dates for precinct meeting and county conventions, and time and place for the State convention. There may be some vacancies to fill in the committee membership, some eulogies for departed Democrats and if time permits some oratory about the virtues of the party.

LONG CHANCE—There is a long-shot chance that somebody who does not like the Plan of Organization as revised two years ago may seek to change it. The Plan provides for its own amendment in rather casual fashion. It says: "The State Democratic Executive Committee shall, by a majority vote of the full committee, have power to amend this plan of organization." No requirement for advance notice of proposed amendments. The committee could, but is unlikely to, repeal the provision for naming the platform committee ahead of the convention and go back to the old plan of secret individual authorship of the platform.

HEROES—Hats off and cheers and recommendation for hero medals for two special groups of people for their functioning during the weekend snow storm. And maybe a bit of sympathy for the pathetic plight of the folks who have come to depend so largely upon the electric switch they are completely lost when it doesn't respond to the thumb.

First on the hero list: The rugged men who made up the repair crews for electric power and telephone lines, who worked 18 to 24 hours at a stretch to restore as quickly as possible the vitalizing current that keeps modern civilization alive. Second on the list, but not far from top: The mother of several small children, living in a home equipped with all push-button conveniences, but without facilities when the pushed button didn't produce, who retained her sanity and a semblance of domestic tranquility in a house without light, without heat, without radio or TV, and with three or four hungry kids who could not be fed a hot meal.

The past weekend snowstorm emphasized two things for the people in the Raleigh area. To considerable degree to people throughout the state. One is the undue and unreasonable degree to which able bodied men and women depend upon a little button on the wall to take care of all of their problems. The other is the limits to which the big utilities companies and the big business who make them big by reason of their loyal services will go to see that the little buttons respond when pressed.

Sure there was discomfort and inconvenience because of too great reliance on the button. But heretofore there was no real tragedy because of the heroism of the folks whose business it is to see that the buttons respond to need.

Rural Civil Defense Is Not Simple Affair

Rural Civil Defense, a topic on which farm organizations and agencies were briefed yesterday in Raleigh, is certainly as important as urban CD measures.

True, the dispersal of rural residents makes for a potential of fewer casualties in time of disaster than in heavily congested areas. Nor does the rural resident figuratively live under the hazardous conditions of having his home in theoretical "target areas".

These are advantages to be considered in the event of war; but while Civil Defense was conceived as a means of survival in war, it has also been proven to be of value during peacetime disaster.

One can conceive any number of instances in which organized civil defense could be of value to rural residents; such things as fire, flood, epidemic, storm or even drought can all be best faced by an organized effort.

Still, the role of CD is primarily one of preparedness during wars and today that includes for the civilian population both the means and knowledge of coping with nuclear explosions and resultant radioactive fallout.

As the State CD Director, Edward F. Griffin puts it, "It is ironic that the greatest threat of nuclear weapons to rural residents is the one menace of these weapons from which we can defend ourselves. Radioactive fallout can cover thousands of square miles far from the actual explosion."

It is this fallout which mostly poses a danger to urban America. Not only the people must be protected from radioactivity, but their livestock, as well.

We are all of us generally familiar with the general scope of fallout shelters for humans; but should a similar plan be required for the multitude of fowl and animals to be found on a typical farm, then we can conceive costly complications involving such a shelter . . . as well as the protecting of feed and water supplies.

Too, some of the darker estimates as to fallout damage raise prospects of large areas of cropland heavily contaminated; and that is another condition that offers complications.

Rural Civil Defense is not, in our eyes, a simple matter. On the other hand, it is something which must be studied and acted upon without an undue loss of time. Generally speaking, activities in this field have been lagging.

Involved are points of individual responsibility and teamwork. There is also a matter of survival that may be at stake.

Problems Await New Leadership

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—One thing we don't know about the present quiet relationship between the United States and the Soviet Union is whether it's the result of an accident of history—the personalities of two men at the right time.

President Eisenhower and Premier Nikita Khrushchev both came to power when relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, because of Korea, were at their lowest point since World War II.

President Truman and Joseph Stalin had been the leaders during a period after World War II in which relationships between the two nations steadily got worse.

Truman, who met Stalin only once at the end of the European war, left office in 1953 just a few weeks before the old dictator died. By then both men had become harsh antagonists.

Eisenhower, succeeding Truman, was more restrained. Khrushchev, moving up steadily after Stalin's death, sought to establish a new relationship with the West by denouncing Stalin.

Thus the air was cleared for a fresh start. Still, it probably never would have been possible except that the personalities of the two men had something in common.

Both talked peace and good will. Both have outgoing personalities, quick to laugh or grin. The bubbly Khrushchev is even more the outgoing type than Eisenhower.

It's hard to imagine anything like the present period of clamor and hope that things may get better, if the sullen, suspicious, introverted Stalin had been the Soviet leader facing Eisenhower these past seven years.

It is quite possible the outspoken Truman, who believed in the stern fist, wouldn't have gotten along with Khrushchev who can snarl and threaten when he thinks it's necessary.

No matter what the Soviets have said about American foreign policy and tactics since Eisenhower took office seven years ago they have been careful to avoid potshots at him.

Eisenhower doesn't take any needless digs at Khrushchev. If they had ever let personal hostility develop almost certainly there would have been no Khrushchev visit or a summit meeting arranged.

But Eisenhower is moving toward the end of his presidency, with less than a year to do. Khrushchev is no chicken any more. In a few years he'll be off the scene.

Then what happens? It isn't pleasant to think what may happen if a Soviet leader with the sour antagonism and violence of Stalin or the hardened attitude of Molotov moves into Khrushchev's place.

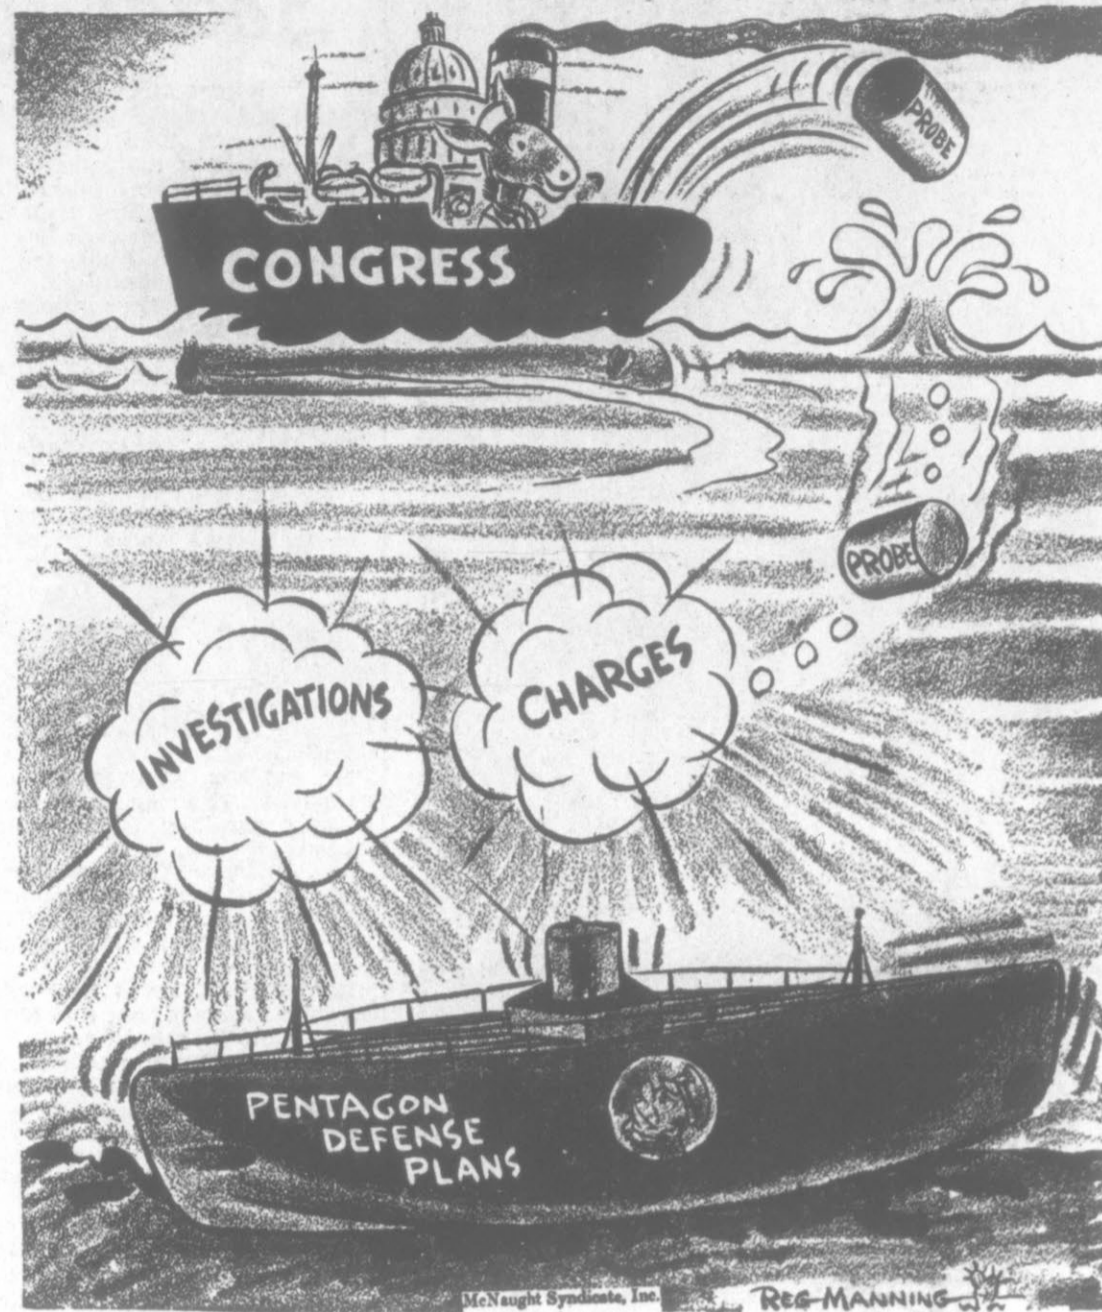

By the same token a President who let temper get the best of him might turn Khrushchev or his successor into a bull.

Opinions In Brief

"Notwithstanding the involved 'explanation' by the small loan company president, who lives in Elon College, it occurs to us that something is grossly wrong in a business which requires the payment of $40.52, in assorted interest, fees, insurance and service charges, in order to borrow $60.48 for a period of nine months." — Greensboro Daily News.

"Since the only way the Government can raise revenue is through taxes, subsidies have got to be made up one way or another. Where everybody becomes a Paul to be paid by Uncle Sam, then everyone must also become a robbed Peter." — Wall Street Journal.

Probing In Depth

By HENRY HOWARD

Now Called 'Smokehouse'

People around Greenville generally agree we have a pretty good fire department around here.

It has a good record and its firemen are constantly on their toes to prevent and extinguish fires. Besides the regular crew, there are a substantial number of volunteer firemen who loyally devote their services to the welfare and safety of the town and its property.

With this background, here's a little experience that came to one of the local volunteer firefighters late yesterday afternoon.

According to our reports, this particular one was leisurely driving home from work when he spied white smoke billowing from a tool shed in a neighbor's back yard.

Thinking quickly, he ran into his house, pulled the receiver from hook, and dialed the fire department. He reported what he had seen and then rushed out the door.

Across the street and to the neighbor's house he ran. He banged on the back door excitedly and exclaimed to the woman who answered, "Lady, your tool shed is on fire!"

"Oh, no," said the lady, "it's not on fire. We're just smoking a few hams. But thank you anyway."

Feeling sort of numb, the volunteer fireman hurried back home to call off the firefighters' trip. Too late.

The truck had already departed and was screaming its way to the "false alarm." From there, the process was strictly routine. It wasn't the first wild goose chase—nor the last, probably.

Somebody said this morning the volunteer fireman, victim of his good intentions, had suddenly inherited the nickname "Smokehouse."

Well, that's the way people will be sometimes. They'll adorn other people who make honest mistakes with all sorts of elaborate nomenclatures.

This one'll probably wear off with time, but let's hope it doesn't take this particular fireman's alertness with it when it goes.

East Carolina's Opera Theater is going through final rehearsals for its one-hour opera to be presented twice this weekend.

The cast has devoted many long hours of preparation to the production that will be free to the public both Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Written by Gian-Carlo Menotti, "The Medium" has a good plot and the ECCO orchestra adds what no Opera Theater production has had previously. The story involves the supernatural and promises good entertainment for local opera-goers.

It might be time well-spent to drop around to McGinnis Auditorium either Saturday or Sunday and take in the Theater's production. After all, what can you lose?

Earl L. Douglass gives them the benefit of your ever thought how much you could help and support somebody by trusting him—or her? This is not a plea for sentimentality. Neither is it the all out for anyone who stands suggestion that we should cast reality to the wind and go all out for anyone who stands ready to victimize us and make a fool out of us.

What we mean by trusting a person is simply this—giving a person the benefit of a doubt, assuming the "best" to be true before all the facts are known, going along day by day in the conviction that practically all people will do the right thing if given the opportunity to do so, and most important of all, being sure that anything as valuable as human personality demands our respect. Try to get into the habit of believing in people rather than disbelieving in them. Do not allow yourself to be deceived into thinking that you are an intellectual and a person of exceptional discernment and wisdom simply because you take everybody apart and lay the pieces out on the table. The supreme type of personality—is not the person who dissects and doubts but the person who regards his fellow men with respect and warm affection, who loves to think well of people, who trusts them and believes the best about them before all the facts are in.

The body can be killed by one blow; the soul can be killed by someone's cold refusal to trust a fellow man.

Judges Out Of Politics

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
The American Bar Association is pressing for more judges. It is requesting that vacancies be filled and that Congress meet the fact that in the U. S. District Courts, there is a backlog of 66,000 civil cases and 8,500 criminal cases.

The president of the American Bar Association, John D. Randall, said bluntly, the result of neglect to provide for our judicial system is that the judiciary is unable to cope with the current caseload and cases must be delayed rather than tried. Effective justice is denied to many litigants.

Delayed justice can be and often is a miscarriage of justice. It deprives litigants of the freedom to deal with their affairs; it continues the blot of the probability of impropriety that would have been acquitted and cleansed of the allegation of wrongdoing. Randall called for the appointment of 43 additional Federal judges.

The need for this has been apparent for a long time. The delay is due to politics, small politics. Congress is Democratic; the President is a Republican. The theory is that if the Democrats delay the creation of new judgeships, a Republican President will not be in a position to appoint Republicans. Senator Eastland and Representative Emanuel Celler are in control of the Senate and House Judiciary Committees and they can determine what is to be done about a bill for new judges. They have delayed action for a long and unreasonable period. In fact, it is disgraceful that the Federal Courts are so undermanned in a time of government waste.

Randall said: "Almost invariably this delay will be a financial hardship on at least one of the parties. Often witnesses die, disappear, or their recollections become hazy after the passage of time. The result is the denial of justice."

Those who have been litigants even in small matters know how true this is.

It would be sound administration of government for judicial appointments to be taken out of politics altogether. A Federal judge is appointed for life or good behavior. It ought not to make any difference whether the judge is a Republican or a Democrat, a Methodist or a Baptist, a Catholic or a Jew—as long as he knows the law, has good character, if of a judicial temperament and is loyal to this country.

Actually, there ought to be a procedure in this country for judges to be elevated from a lower rank to higher judicial honors. Some who are appointed are not of the aloofness from affairs which is required to assure impartiality. Some are so close to partisan politics that it is psychologically impossible for them to tear themselves away from former associations and former biases. On the other hand, it is astonishing what great changes are wrought in some men by judicial honors; they emerge to unexpected greatness and achieve distinction for scholarship for which they had heretofore not been recognized.

Other Editors Saying... What Price Tranquility?

(The Washington Post)

Well, there's a hot time about the Milltown all right. Perhaps—in case you don't read the medical and pharmaceutical journals as carefully as you should—we ought to remind you that Milltown is the trade name for meprobamate, one of these tranquilizing drugs that you can get at almost any drugstore if you have a prescription from your family physician or psychiatrist. It is manufactured by Carter Products, Inc., which was also the manufacturer of this case the meprobamate is bought from the Carter company—which holds the patent—by the Wyeth division of the American Home Products Corp. which then markets Equanil under its own label. What struck Senator Kefauver as decidedly odd about this arrangement is that when these two drug concerns bid against each other for government business—as for example on a contract to supply tranquilizing pills to the Veterans Administration hospitals—their bids are almost invariably identical. At the same time Attorney General Rogers announced that he has instituted a civil suit against both drug concerns, charging them with conspiracy to monopolize the "mild tranquilizer" trade.

Sooner or later, no doubt, the public will be better informed about all the rights and wrongs involved in this litigation. Meanwhile, our advice is not to worry too much about them—worry where you too, might need a dose or two of meprobamate at any price.

The objection to the Milltown pills, however, is not that they do not tranquilize but rather that they tranquilize you to the extent of not giving a whoop about how much you had to pay for your tranquility of spirit, that state of mind which has been so much commended by sages and poets, including St. Paul, Lucretius, Epicurus, Persius, Goldsmith, Wordsworth, Coleridge, and Byron, would have been no Khrushchev visit or a summit meeting arranged.

But Eisenhower is moving toward the end of his presidency, with less than a year to do. Khrushchev is no chicken any more. In a few years he'll be off the scene.

Then what happens? It isn't pleasant to think what may happen if a Soviet leader with the sour antagonism and violence of Stalin or the hardened attitude of Molotov moves into Khrushchev's place.

New Assault On Fringe Benefits

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Internal Revenue Service is making one more effort to put the bite on part of executive fringe benefits. These have flippantly been called fringes with the sure on top. Inappropriate. It's often been a Cadillac on top.

The IRS demands that an income tax filer report the value of his fringe benefits. The IRS will report to 25 of the highest-paid corporate officers. Individual proprietors will have to report on all partners' expense allowances.

But if the executive stuffed most of the bills into his own pocket (he's blue-eyed, you know), the IRS would regard it as income to the executive and put the tap on for taxes.

Similarly, the IRS cannot complain if the executive vice president is given $30,000 a year to entertain customers—as long as the $30,000 is spent for that purpose. But if the v.p. spends $20,000 on entertaining customer and $10,000 on amusing himself, the IRS calls that income and wants its share.

CONFUSION AHEAD
So that's why the IRS is demanding reports on expense accounts this year. This may pick up a few cheats, and frighten a few executives away from cheating.

But on the whole, it is likely to prove ineffectual. Since executives and others have been foisting top management for years with tricky expense accounts, why can't the IRS be swindled as well?

The expense account gyp is generally regarded as the biggest "fringe" leak in business.

But if the IRS succeeds in plugging it up (which it probably won't), there will be many other ways of leaking tax-free income to top executives. They can be given paid memberships in country clubs because the company says they will meet prospects there; they can be sent on winter trips, with wives as secretaries, to inspect the California and Florida branches; they can be sent to Paris, with wives as interpreters, for conventions there; they can be given the use of company Cadillac, with the fringe on company-paid chauffeurs' uniforms; they can get split dollar insurance; stock options; insurance, pension rights, warrants; weekends at the company president's shooting lodge, and on and on.

In general, business can be counted on to be five years ahead of IRS and 10 years ahead of Congressional legislation plugging loopholes.

A CASE NOT IN POINT
Time out for an anecdote: A rising young executive asked for a salary increase a few years ago. The president persuaded him to drop the request in exchange for a $100-a-week expense account. "Just turn in any voucher a little above or below that figure, and I'll see that it's paid," the president said. "There are no taxes on expenses, so it's as good as a $200-a-week raise."

A short time later the corporation was sold. The new owners insisted on itemization and the "tax free raise" vanished.

HITRESS TO MURDER

Copyright © 1959, E. M. Barber, published by special arrangement with The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N. C.

Her eyes, when she looked at him, were wide and troubled and dark. "Did you kill Uncle Pete? Tell me the truth, Walt! Please don't lie to me!"

"No, I didn't!" "Then why did you come back for that letter? That was so foolish. We had all read it anyway. Stealing it wouldn't have done you any good."

"I didn't go after the letter. I thought I could head Johnny Hume off before he got there, and when I couldn't I had to go in and help him get out. He's just a kid. He thought stealing that letter would solve everything."

"Why did he do that? Did he think you had killed Uncle Pete?" "I don't know what he thought, but he's been acting funny ever since. He got hurt that night at the Sombbrero, but not bad enough for him to just lay in bed all day with his face to the wall. He won't even talk to my mother, Johnny was."

Walt broke off abruptly, remembering that Joe Gamel was listening. He realized with a shock that he had been on the point of telling this girl the thing that had had his mind going round in circles for twenty-four hours.

Judy didn't seem to notice that he had broken off in the middle of a sentence. Doubt cleared away from her eyes. "Somehow," she said softly, "I find myself believing you. In spite of everything they tell me at the ranch."

He leaned over and caught her hand. He gave it one quick little squeeze, then let it go as if the touch burned him, for as good as her words made him feel, they were also a painful reminder of the fix he was in.

"He couldn't tell her how he felt now, so what he said was, 'Hearing you say that means a lot to me, Judy.' The way he said it, it seemed to be enough, and she moved closer to him.

"I'll be free again in the morning and you'll be sorry! Joe Gamel warns Walt, as the story continues tomorrow.

Baruch Critical Of Loan Sharks, 'Pay Later' Idea CHARLESTON, S.C. — (AP) — Bernard M. Baruch, South Carolina-born financier, has some financial advice for South Carolinians.

The 89-year-old Wizard of Wall Street assailed "loan sharks" and "buy now, pay later" financing. "Loan sharks are taking advantage of people," he said Tuesday. "These people who borrow from them—many of them don't even get receipts" for their payments.

Baruch, visiting here from his Little Hobeaw home at Kingstree, noted that he spoke to Congress recently "about this 'nothing down and a dollar ever so often' business. This idea of inducing people to take a strip around the world and pay for it later is a great mistake."

Doubting that easy money lures could be legislated away, he said, "We've been looking for a cure for the primeval motives and cupidly and folly of man for thousands of years. We haven't found a way yet."

tion for the mandatory retirement of all judges who have passed their 70th year. I can imagine no greater waste of knowledge, experience and wisdom. Of what value is it to keep men alive if they are to be made useless by retirement? Today, when I write this, I lunched with Herbert Hoover who, at 85, is at the height of his intellectual powers, devoting himself to writing history, raising funds for Boys' Clubs, helping to erect a building in New York for engineering societies and directing the affairs of his great library at Palo Alto. Recently, I dined with Henry Galeman, age 90, an inventor of note whose conversation was swift and at times, brilliant. I dropped in to see Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, on his 85th birthday and got into a political discussion with his wife, Harriet, age 91.

Who talks of age in these days of improved health and vigor, of increased longevity? The day will come soon enough when men will live a century and beyond and will retain all their faculties and their stored-up experiences will be of increasing value the longer they live. Such grey beards should be of enormous value on the bench, because of their knowledge and experience, which cannot be found in books but come from wisdom which can only come with the years.

CHAPTER 23
Judy Rayburn looked down at Walt Hollenger, saw the spot of new blood freshening the older, darker stains on his shirt. "Do you have any whiskey in the wagon?" she asked Joe Gamel.

"Yes, ma'am! Yes, ma'am!" he said eagerly. "I'll get it for you. I had just promised to get some for Walt a minute ago — a damn me for a hot-temper-ed old fool—we got into a sort of argument—and I sorta lost my temper. Sure glad you come along when you did, ma'am. I'd been sorry all my borned days if I'd come anything to really hurt Walt Hollenger. He's always been a good friend of mine. Friend of my daughter's too. I reckon you know my daughter — Bella Gamel?"

"Get the whiskey!" Judy reminded him sharply.

"Yes, ma'am! I sure will!" She followed him to the wagon, holding the gun on him until he got it and climbed out.

Walt was beginning to show signs of coming to. He sputtered and shook his head weakly when she said, "I don't know what this is all about. I rode up just in time to see Mr. Gamel knock you out of the wagon. He was going to kill you and I stopped him. Now I'm taking you both to Don Luis."

Walt thought about that for a moment. The trip in the wagon would give him a little time to rest and build back strength he had lost from his bleeding wound. Don Luis would have bandage material and food.

He nodded. "All right. I'm not hurt bad—I'm just a little shaky. Give me a few hours rest and I'll be ready for the saddle again."

He shifted his shoulders and reached for paper and tobacco but when he tried to roll a smoke his left arm wobbled, spilling the tobacco.

Judy handed him the gun and reached for the tobacco dack. "Let me show you how. You keep that gun pointed at Mr. Gamel for a minute."

She spread the paper between thumb and forefinger, poured in the tobacco, then rolled it deftly with one hand.

Walt grinned at her in amazement.

"Can you cook — and mend socks, too?"

She smiled. "Nope. You do expect a lot in a girl, don't you?"

She struck the cigaret between his lips, thumbed a match and held the light for him.

He took a long draw on it.

"I always wondered what they taught girls at them fancy eastern finishing schools."

She gave him a quizzical look. "So have I," she said. She took the gun again and stood up. "I think you're able to travel now."

She motioned Joe Gamel down off the hill again. "Get an arm under his shoulder and help him into the wagon."

Gamel made no protest. Under the steady threat of Judy's gun, he partially unrolled his own dirty bedroll and propped it behind the cowboy's back in a snug nest behind the wagon seat, where the broad canvas cover would hide him from the outside.

A braver man would probably have seen half-a-dozen chances to turn the table on the girl, but Joe Gamel docilely obeyed the threat of her gun.

Walt was feeling better every minute. He was still weak and shaky, but the faintness and the deadly sickness had passed. He motioned Judy to a place beside him.

"Let Joe drive," he said. "You sit back here out of sight. It ain't too far to Don Luis' place and I don't figure anyone is going to try to stop us. But you'll be safer back here."

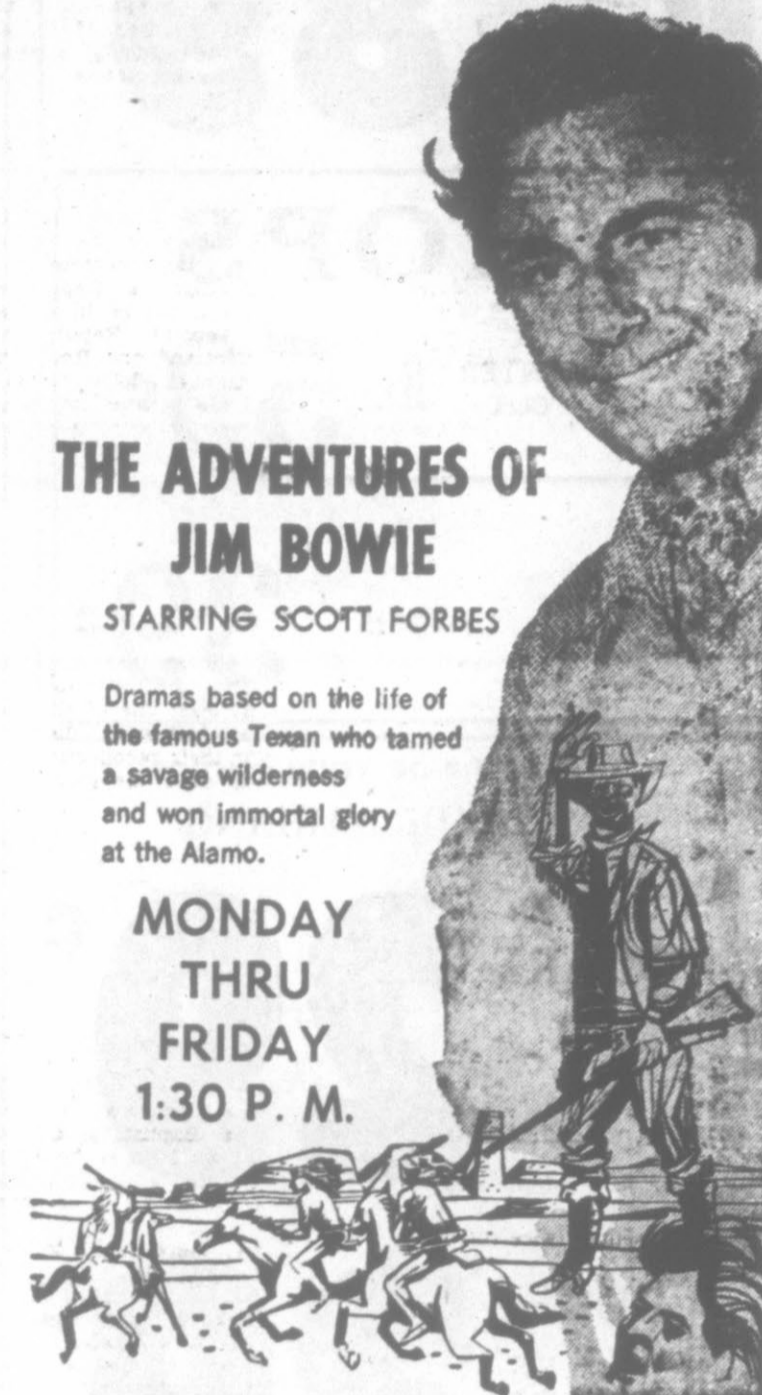

She obediently sank down cross-legged beside the cowboy, gun in hand.

"Drive to the Morales place, Mr. Gamel," she ordered. "If we meet anybody — you be mighty careful what you say. Remember — no monkey business! I'm no lady, and if I have to, I'll shoot you — in the back!"

She had made a believer out of Joe Gamel. He shivered.

"Yes, ma'am!" he said quickly. He picked up the reins and slapped them over the backs of his horses.

Walt eyed Judy's straight shoulders, her firm mouth and chin. He reached out a hand and covered her free one, then drew back quickly when she frowned. "You don't quite trust me, do you, Judy?"

Now! You can get the fast relief you need from nagging backache, headache and muscular aches and pains that often cause restless nights and miserable tired-out feelings. When these discomforts come on with over-exertion or stress and strain — you want relief — want it fast! Another disturbance may be mild bladder irritation following wrong food and drink — often setting up a restless uncomfortable feeling. Doan's Pills work fast in 3 separate ways: 1. by speedy pain-relieving action to ease torment of nagging backache, headache, muscular aches and pains, 2. by soothing effect on bladder irritation. 3. by mild diuretic action tending to increase output of the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Enjoy a good night's sleep and the same happy relief millions have for over 60 years. New, large size saves money. Get Doan's Pills today!

'Well-Pleased' By Dollar Day

In a report to the Board of Directors of the Greenville Merchants Association Monday night, the Trade Promotions Committee of the association reported that merchants of Greenville were "well pleased" with the semi-annual Dollar Day held last Thursday.

It was announced that Secretary Cora Powell will attend the Retailers' Activities Clinic to be held Sunday and Monday at Chapel Hill. The clinic is sponsored by the North Carolina Merchants Association and the University of North Carolina. All merchants are invited to attend.

Mrs. Powell has also been appointed to serve on the Merchants Committee of Tobacco Associates for 1950. The annual meeting of Tobacco Associates will be held at Hotel Sir Walter in Raleigh March 1.

Membership Committee Chairman A. Tyson Bilbro reported two new members have joined the association, L. J. Whitehurst and Mrs. Bethel and Pitt Feeds, Inc. Merchants Association President Herbert M. Wilkerson presided over the meeting.

RALEIGH (AP) — (NCDA) — Hog prices steady to 25 higher. # N.C. Wage And Tax Laws Are Explained

The North Carolina Minimum Wage Law and the North Carolina Withholding Tax were explained and individual questions answered at a meeting held in City Hall last night at 7:30.

H. M. Wilkerson, President of the Greenville Merchants Association, which sponsored the event, introduced the speakers and guests: Lewis Correll, deputy Commissioner of Labor, W. M. Bethune, Field Supervisor of the Department of Labor; Otley Leary, Inspector of Labor; Mrs. Emily Hadley, Inspector of Labor, and E. R. Carraway, Deputy Collector of the North Carolina Revenue Department.

Bethune, in explaining the minimum wage law, stressed the point of an employer first establishing how many employees are exempt, such as those over 65 years of age, students and the like, in order to determine if they were excluded from the provisions of the law. Employers hiring more than five persons after deducting those employees excluded, are covered by the act.

Carraway explained the State Withholding tax and urged all employers to have signed withholding exemption certificates from all employees, noting that employers will be assigned an identification number. If the number is not received by April 15, the department should be notified, i.e. added.

It was brought out that those persons receiving income in addition to their regular salary and employers not deducting the withholding tax are required to file estimated income reports.

Carraway closed by saying it is the responsibility of the employer to keep an adequate record for the inspection of the department of revenue. These records should be kept for a period of at least three years.

An estimated 60 persons from in and around Greenville attended the meeting.

Arrest Trio On Liquor Charges

Three liquor law violation arrests were made in the Ayden area Monday, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson announced.

Cleo Cannon of Winterville and Harvey Lee Dixon of Ayden, both Negroes, were arrested by deputies and Ayden police on charges of possession of non-tax-paid liquor.

A 1957 and a 1951 autos are being held by officers pending court action on the case. The two men will be tried in Ayden court.

Jessie Lane, 32-year-old Negro of Rt. 2, Ayden, was also arrested by the officers on a charge of possession of non-tax-paid liquor Monday, the sheriff said. He will be tried in Ayden court.

Recover Missing Smokehouse Meat

A quantity of cured meat allegedly taken from the W. C. Harris smokehouse on Rt. 1, Winterville has been recovered, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson announced today.

He said seven hams, four shoulders and two stands of lard were located in the Ayden area by deputies with the cooperation of the Ayden Police Department.

The meat was taken from the Harris smokehouse during the weekend.

Arrests are expected to be made in the case, the sheriff said.

Bethel Student On Dean's List

BUIE'S CREEK — Included on the Campbell College dean's list for the fall semester was Betty Lynn Cooper, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. T. N. Cooper of Bethel.

The announcement was released from the office of A. R. Burkot, academic dean of the college. Seventy-eight students qualified for dean's list by maintaining a "B" average in at least 12 semester hours and avoiding demerits and overcuts.

Queen Waits In Maternity Suite

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II moved Tuesday night to the maternity suite arranged for her in Buckingham Palace after her doctors told her to expect her third baby "at any minute."

In what may have been their final prenatal examination, the doctors found the 33-year-old monarch in the best of health. They anticipated no complications.

The Queen moved from her own apartment to the ground-floor Belgian suite, at the back of the palace, which has been converted into a royal maternity ward.

The suite is so named because King Leopold I of Belgium used it on visits to Queen Victoria, a relative by her marriage to Prince Albert. It has accommodations for the father-to-be, Prince Philip, and a lounge next to the room in which John H. Peel, the queen's obstetrician, will deliver the baby.

It was not expected that Elizabeth would leave the palace today. Philip had one engagement, to open an exhibition of architecture in nearby Portland Place.

Queen Mother Elizabeth visited the Queen Tuesday. Prime Minister Harold Macmillan had his usual audience Tuesday night and told her of his trip to Africa, from which he has just returned.

Another Tuesday night event at the palace went on as usual, the meetings of Princess Anne's Brownie pack.

"The princess was very excited," Brown Owl Mary Millican reported. "She kept saying how much she is hoping to have a little sister."

"It flies only on dark still nights"

When the wind has died and night is at its darkest, that's when THE BAT flies.

Should you be out alone on a dark night examine every shadow—THE BAT could be there. When you hear a fluttering, flapping noise in your home, take heed, beware... it could be THE BAT!

No living person has ever seen it. You'll learn more about THE BAT this Friday at the Pitt!
