Sen. Russell Doubts Civil Rights Compromise Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leading Senate Southern forces, in a bitter filibuster fight against civil rights legislation, voiced doubt today that any compromise is possible.

There was a lot of somber talk, however, in debate and among the members as to whether one or more of them might collapse during the planned marathon debate.

The vote was 67-16 against a 5 p.m. adjournment, but Russell and six other Southerners voted against the motion in an apparent effort to blunt his test vote claim.

Already some members were discussing whether it would be proper for the Senate to let the marathon session overlap into Sundays.

Officials Shoot For Man In Space In 1961; Midas Satellite Is Failure

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS When this country puts a man in orbit around the earth—possibly late next year—he'll have to be something of a chatterbox.

Officials are hoping the first man-in-space flight will be made from Cape Canaveral, Fla., late in 1961.

and it will land in the Atlantic Ocean near Puerto Rico. Low said. Parachutes will be used to slow the descent and ships will be deployed in the area to pick up the capsule, he said.

er it is launched through use of infra-red sensors. Plans call for six or eight of these satellites. They will whirl about the earth in polar orbits to provide the United States with 30-minute warning of a missile attack.

Capital Punishment And The Churches

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Religion Writer

Is capital punishment ever justified in the eyes of God? Churches, the guardians of moral law, have been debating the question for centuries, long before Caryl Chessman became a cause celebre.

Most of the major churches, with the notable exception of the Roman Catholic Church, deplore use of the death penalty. Some have never taken an official stand on it.

The Methodist Church's stand against capital punishment has been part of its discipline since 1940. It reads:

"We stand for the application of the redemptive principle to the treatment of offenders against the law, to reform of penal and correctional methods, and to criminal court procedure.

"For this reason, we deplore the use of capital punishment."

The United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. condemns the death penalty as tending "to brutalize the society that condones it."

Its General Assembly in 1959 went on record as "believing that capital punishment cannot be condoned by an interpretation of the Bible based upon the revelation of God's love in Jesus Christ."

The General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church more than a year ago, resolved that "the taking of this human life providence of God and not within the right of man."

Many Jewish congregations agree with the dominant Protestant view on the death penalty.

Last fall the Union of American Hebrew Congregations asserted its belief that it "brutalizes the human spirit."

"We believe," said a resolution passed at the biennial General Assembly, "there is no crime for which the taking of human life by society is justified."

The Canadian Catholic Conference, an agency of the Catholic bishops in Canada, though it necessarily last week to reiterate the church's stand while Parliament debated a bill to abolish the death penalty.

"When a criminal endangers the common good by evil-doing, the state has the right to put him to death, if necessary," the conference said.

But, the conference added: "While defending the state's right to inflict capital punishment for the reasons noted, the Catholic Church has never either demanded or urged capital punishment as the only means of punishing criminals or preventing crime."

The United Lutheran Church in America, however, has had a study group poring over the question since last October at the request of its Rocky Mountain Synod. The report is expected in late April.

The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has discussed the question at various pastoral conferences and, says a spokesman, "the Bible seems to permit the possibility of capital punishment."

Like the United Church of Christ has no official position and no specific plans in mind to study it.

Sleeping Habit Ended Marriage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Her husband's fondness for sleep broke up their marriage in less than a month, a secretary testified Thursday.

Ruth Osborn, 29, obtained a default divorce from George L. Osburn, 32, charging her husband "wouldn't talk to me or my mother and he would fall asleep."

On the day of their separation last Dec. 4, she said, Osburn again fell asleep. Later, they quarreled, he packed his bags and left.

The Little Things

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Day	Book	Chapter	Verse
Sunday	Matthew	18	1-6
Monday	Psalm	141	1-8
Tuesday	1 Peter	5	6-7
Wednesday	Corinthians	119	9-11
Thursday	Psalm	61	1-4
Friday	Psalm	61	1-4
Saturday	Matthew	6	9-13

A child's faith is beautiful in its simplicity and in the little things it encompasses. Like, for instance, the nightly ritual that comes at the end of prayer, "God bless Mommy and Daddy and Cousin Peter and Kitty Kat and my blue teddy bear."

To a child, there is no reason why God should not bless also a crumpled and slightly soiled teddy bear, and a pet kitty. For God is goodness and love and kindness and tolerance... not perhaps in those words, but in the feeling this child has as she says her prayers.

Prayer, to the child who has been taught to pray, is a natural thing. It should be as much a part of everyday life as eating and sleeping and playing. To pray for what is good... to give thanks for what one has is an all-important step in that all-important right direction on the road of life.

Wedding Set May 7

MISS MARGARET TUCKER MOYE . . . is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Rountree Moye Jr. of Greenville, who announce her engagement to David Edgerton Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Caho Edgerton Lane of Reidsville. The wedding is planned for May 7.

Girl Scout Sunday Is March 6

The Girl Scout Leaders Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Herbert Hadley, with the president, Mrs. Howard Waldrop, presiding. Girl Scout Sunday, March 6, marks the beginning of Girl Scout Week and leaders were urged to take their troops to church on that Sunday. The annual scout cookie sale and parties celebrating the birthday of the scouting movement are to be held during the week. Mrs. R. E. Cramer introduced the guest speaker, Miss Rosalind Rouston, teacher of English, Radio and Television at East Carolina College, who discussed "Using Dramatics in the Girl Scout Program." Miss Rouston stressed that this should be fun and suggested charades, pantomime, choral speaking and voice dramatics as ways of developing interest. Good posture, good grooming and poise are also assets gained from this type of work and play. The club will meet with Mrs. J. Knott Proctor in March.

Istanbul, Turkey--Their Destination

By PEGGY SMITH Reflector Woman's Editor "Anlamiyorum, Anlamiyorum." This Turkish word which means "I don't understand" will probably be used frequently by the Beverly Brockdorff family during their stay in Istanbul, Turkey for the next three years. Col. and Mrs. Brockdorff and their three children have lived in Greenville for the past three years while he has acted as commanding officer of the Army Reserve Training program for Eastern North Carolina. Col. Brockdorff will be an engineer-adviser to the First Turkey Army Division. Having received orders to be in Turkey by May 1, the Brockdorffs have many preparations to make. According to Mrs. Brockdorff, "We must plan to live from suitcases for approximately two months. And realizing this, I shop for clothes which are wash and wear types. "In packing, I am considering four ways. First, our suitcases; and then, the basic items to be placed in foot lockers; and finally our household furniture which we expect to arrive in four months after our departure." From her understanding, she thinks they will "probably depend on a mail-order catalogue in the States since the PX facilities are extremely limited" and the Turkish shops do not carry what most American families expect to find. "We plan to carry our kitchen appliances, but from service information, the water and electricity in Turkey is erratic, and the appliances will not function as properly as in the U. S. In the summer, water is rationed except for two hours a day. "Stoves and closet space will be one of our main problems we will face in Istanbul since closets are non-existent in this city of over a million population. "But you can always make the best of what you have," she added. "Everything will be adequate but not as convenient as here." For instance, all vegetables that are bought in the city market must be soaked in a chlorine solution and water must be boiled before drinking. "But, you find this in all remote areas," she added. The Brockdorff children, Jenny, Ellen and Peter, have had their complete immunization shots and are looking forward to their new home in this cosmopolitan center. There will be no television to their dismay; but, Mrs. Brockdorff feels it will be a mixed blessing. She hopes they might be able to do more things as a family. There is also a chance for socializing in Istanbul for the service persons since the wives have organized a Woman's Club. "Beaches, fishing and hunting are known to be outstanding in this area," she said, "and this is good, since my husband is an outdoorsman at heart. The climate is quite like that in Washington, D. C." Continuing, she noted that Turkey is a land of contrast. The rural areas adhere to the old customs while the cities have acquired the western way of life. When asked how she felt about being near Russia in the light of international tensions she quickly exclaimed, "If there's going to be a war, it will be all over. Bombs will fall any-

Club Receives Charter The Marion Bartlett chapter of the Future Nurses Club at Rose High School has become the first club exploring careers in nursing in North Carolina to receive a Future Nurses Club National Charter. The National League for Nursing, New York, granted the charter. The charter signifies that the Bartlett chapter has fulfilled requirements established by a national advisory committee on Future Nurses Clubs. The charter was granted on the recommendation of Orren E. Dowd, school principal. The Bartlett chapter is participating in a national youth program to help the nation meet future nursing needs. The club's activities are designed to aid members in exploring opportunities in nursing and other related fields. Nurses and student nurses discuss nursing with members and answer questions. Films aid in illustrating various aspects of health care. Field trips to nursing schools, hospitals, and other community health agencies expand career horizons and enable members to see, first hand, the conditions under which nurses work. The local chapter has made trips to the University of North Carolina School of Nursing, Greenville Public Health Department, and the Greenville Mental Health Clinic during the past year to observe nurses at work. Community projects also aid the members in their quest for knowledge concerning nursing. The local chapter fixed Christmas stockings for needy families, made out a directory for doctors of the charity helping clubs in town, helps at the hospital and bloodmobile, and serves as co-hostess for Medical Armistice Day. The members will also help sell Easter flowers. The Marion Bartlett chapter now has 40 active members. Officers include Vicki Avery, president; Carol Jean Barlow, vice-president; Lona Presser, secretary; Jean Trahey, treasurer; and Judy Thielen, corresponding secretary and historian. Mrs. Grace Carraway, home economics teacher, advises the group while Mrs. Marion T. Bartlett of the Medical Auxiliary serves as the club's sponsor. The local club is one of 3,000 clubs throughout the United States formed for a similar purpose. Total membership is over 80,000. Most of the clubs organized since 1950, many with the active help of women's auxiliaries to the local medical societies and other civic groups.

Annual Children's Play To Be Given

Dr. Kathleen E. Stokes, president, announced today that the Greenville branch of the American Association of University Women in cooperation with the East Carolina Playhouse will again present the annual children's play. The play to be presented this year will be "Jack and the Beanstalk." The play's director, Dr. J. A. Withey describes the play as, "One of the classics of Children's Theatre. This play is full of magic. From the first act, when the beanstalk grows up in full view of the audience, miracles begin to happen. Up in the Giant's house, above the clouds, Jack is nearly caught in a breath-taking chase over the stage, and escapes only with the help of the Giant's wife. "Then, as Jack climbs down toward home, there is a beautiful and magnificent scene on the beanstalk, where the Man in the Moon tests his courage. Jack proves his mettle by managing not only to rescue the Giant's wife, but also to save his own mother from being cheated by a wicked farmer. And then he finally chops down the beanstalk—with the Giant on it." Performances will be given March 16, 17, and 18, with the performances of March 17 and 18 being presented in McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina campus. Tickets for the play will be sold.

Music Workshop To Be Conducted Here

A Northeastern District Music Workshop will be conducted here Wednesday morning, with Dr. Arnold Hoffman, music consultant for the public school music program, as feature speaker. This workshop is being conducted for all people in the Northeastern district, not just for home demonstration club members who are included in the district. The program will be held in the education building of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, with the morning session beginning at 10 o'clock. The afternoon session will begin after a luncheon, and will be held from 1:30 to 3 p.m. A special invitation has been issued to church personnel, including choir directors, to participate, and to people in general who are interested in learning to lead group singing and getting a better background in music, according to home agents here. Mrs. Ichabod Allen, vice president of the Pitt County Home Demonstration Council, will give the devotion. Mrs. Albert Bell, president, will deliver the welcome. Music program plans for the year will be given by Mrs. John F. Griffin Jr., Northeastern District chairman. The music workshop will be conducted by Dr. Hoffman during the morning session. The afternoon session will consist of the program "Music" by Dr. Hoffman and a discussion period.

FUND-RAISING PARTY

After rigid examinations, Anna Pavlova was accepted at the Russian School of Ballet when she was ten years old. Training was arduous, and included academic and cultural subjects, as well as training in the art of ballet. She left the security of the government-sponsored ballet program when she was in her twenties because she wanted to "bring a few hours of pleasure" to people all over the world. Organizing her own company, she covered practically all parts of the world, always including the "Dying Swan" on her program. Pavlova felt that technique was not everything; the dancer must feel the dance or it was not worthy. A sweet course was served, and books were exchanged.

Johnson Created The Situation

Southern Senators have made it clear they intend to use filibuster tactics in the senate as long as feasible to prevent passage of the conglomeration of civil rights legislation now being presented.

How effective the effort will be remains to be seen.

Both the Republican administration and a good part of the Democratic party leadership are anxious, for political purposes, to enact new legislation under the name of civil rights before Congress adjourns. As in recent national election years, civil rights will be an issue in the 1960 campaign in some sections. There are those on each side of the political fence who want to be able to point to their part in passing stronger civil rights laws.

While many Southern senators will participate in the effort to prevent passage of civil rights legislation, their strength is limited by numbers if nothing else. They can delay the matter for a while through filibuster, but probably not indefinitely.

There is also the matter of other legislation the partisans want passed in this election year. Too long a delay over civil rights might leave insufficient time for other legislation of political importance to members of Congress.

Under these circumstances, it would not be surprising to see a compromise emerge from all the behind-the-scenes maneuvering now going on in the Senate. Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson is probably in command of the situation that he chose to bring about. He will not risk losing Southern support for the Democratic nomination by going too far with civil rights legislation. On the other hand he felt obliged to bring the matter to the floor of the Senate. Without some such move on his part, he could hardly hope to garner sufficient convention support from other areas to have a chance for the party's presidential nomination.

In spite of all the words flying around in the Senate now, we get the feeling that Sen. Johnson is in command of the situation. This master legislative tactician probably already has definitely established plans as to what kind of civil rights legislation will emerge from the debate . . . and when.

He created a controversial situation in which he will have to play the key role of compromiser. It is not unlikely that he will use his experience and influence to effect the compromise he desires at the time it is most advantageous to him and his future plans.

Bank Merger Could Be Helpful To The Area

Stockholder's approval of the merger of Guaranty Bank and Trust Company of Greenville and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company of Winston-Salem leaves only formalities to be completed before the merger of the two financial institutions becomes effective.

It means, of course, that Guaranty Bank, identified with Greenville since its organization here in 1901, will no longer exist. In its place in Greenville, and the other 12 Eastern Carolina communities where Guaranty operated, the name of Wachovia will replace the Guaranty name. It will mean that Greenville will no longer be the supreme headquarters for a banking institution operating throughout a broad area of Eastern North Carolina.

On the other hand, the merger means that Greenville and other areas served by Guaranty will find in their midst an office of the largest bank in the southeastern United States and access to considerably larger financial resources represented by the institution. This could be of considerable importance to the economic growth of the area. There will be the additional aspect of the present personnel of the Guaranty system being retained by Wachovia following the merger. For Greenville, the local office, officials say, will continue to be the Wachovia headquarters for branches in the Guaranty system.

Through the merger, Greenville in one respect will relinquish its position as a locally owned banking center for a broad area in this part of the state. By becoming a headquarters for Wachovia's operations in this section, however, its potential as a banking center may well be enhanced. Even so, it is with some reluctance that we see a locally owned institution that has served Greenville and other communities of this area for more than half a century become a subsidiary part of a much larger banking concern.

Odds Are, They Won't Be Active

By BEM PRICE
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has promised South America a duck dinner — if the United States can catch a very elusive duck.

That seems to be a pretty fair summary of what President Eisenhower has offered our neighbors to the south on his current, four nation goodwill tour.

To be more precise the President said: "Permit me to renew this pledge, which I have made repeatedly: the United States ready . . . to devote a substantial portion of the savings made possible by disarmament to vast constructive programs of peaceful developments."

But such savings, like the duck, may be hard to come by. Eisenhower made the offer in Brazil where President Juscelino Kubitschek proposed a sort of Inter-American self-help plan called "Operation Pan America" in a speech in May 1958.

Under this plan nine nations would pool resources and technical skills to attack the problems of economic underdevelopment.

The President said the United States was joining Brazil in urging an Inter-American meeting to "accelerate the formulation of specific projects needed to translate this plan into a working reality." But any money the United States supplies probably will have to come from other sources.

In any case, wise South Americans probably aren't looking forward to tapping Uncle Sam's disarmament savings account any time in the very near future.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been talking disarmament off and on since 1955. Since November 1958 this nation, the Soviet Union and Great Britain have been talking unsuccessfully about a nuclear test ban.

There is another East-West disarmament conference scheduled for March 15 in Geneva.

At last report the Western allies — the United States, Britain, France, Canada and Italy — were having difficulty in working out a single disarmament agreement among themselves.

And, mind you, these nations are friends. Each of the Western nations may take its own plan into the meeting with the Soviets and the latter's satellites, Bulgaria, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Romania.

If you want to assume that by some miracle there is an East-West agreement in March, or any month in 1960, that will only be the beginning.

The United States concedes that a disarmament agreement would be ineffective unless Red China concurred. But Red China hasn't been invited.

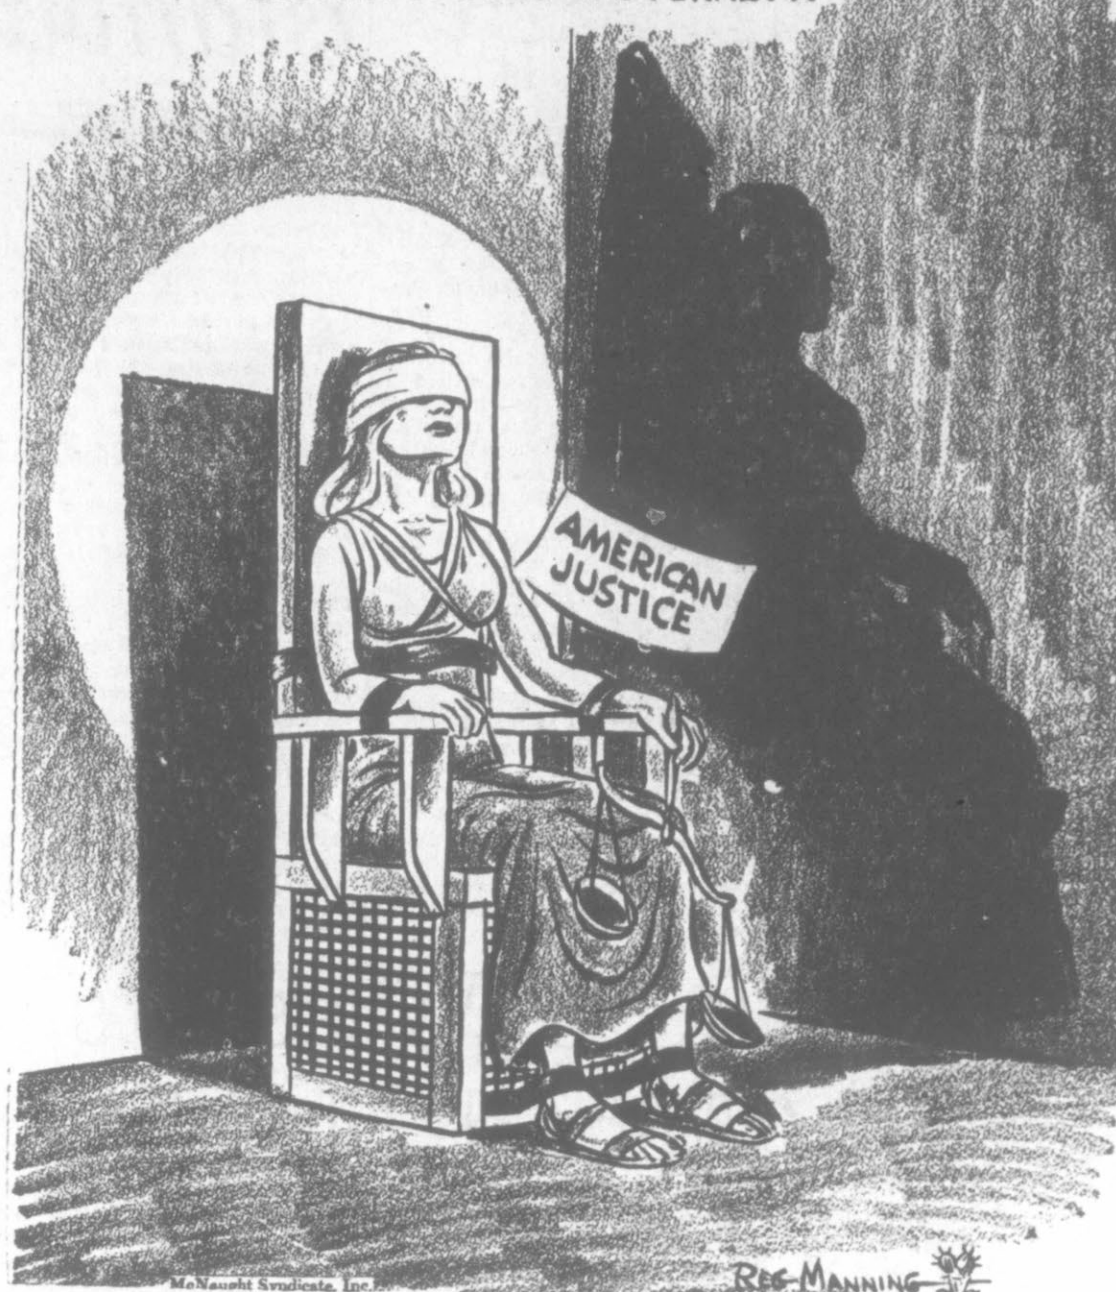

All this means, of course, that after a successful disarmament agreement everybody will have to sit down with Red China for another round of conferences on the same subject.

So long as Red China is armed no other nation can afford to disarm substantially.

If the South Americans are counting heavily on a slice of the disarmament duck, they probably are going to be pretty hungry.

Plot Didn't Work Out

Some of the boys around here instigated and carried out a plot yesterday that didn't quite produce the desired results.

During the morning a couple of them sneaked downstairs and into the parking lot behind the Reflector office to plant a booby trap — some sort of smoke-whistle-bomb or something.

They carefully connected little wires to the engine under the hood of one of the press room boys' car. Just like undercover agents, the two stealthily crept away and back up stairs.

The long wait began. The remaining minutes before lunch dragged slowly by and the upstairs force kept checking the rigged auto through the rear windows. They could hardly wait for the payroll to be distributed when this auto's owner would certainly take a quick motor trip to the bank.

As the time drew nearer, the jokers grew more and more tense with anticipation.

Finally, the owner picked up his check and walked slowly out the back door, straight toward his wired car. Obviously preoccupied with his thoughts, he was totally unaware of the anxiously his "small pace" was producing in the upstairs boys gathered around the windows to see the fireworks.

He covered the 100 feet to his car, opened the door and paused for a long moment that seemed like eternity to the plot's instigators. Then he started to get into the front seat.

Abruptly, he moved away from the car as if some little voice or something had warned him of the danger at hand. He closed the car door and walked away. He'd decided it was such a nice day, he'd just walk to the bank.

The plotters could hardly stand it. He'd come so close, yet he'd foiled them completely as he had.

To allow the matter of capital punishment in California or any other state to become a political matter is to throw the issue all out of perspective. One Republican legislator has called for the impeachment of Governor Brown, a Democrat. It is that bitter.

In future years in California this matter of capital punishment will affect many criminals. There will be murderers, arsonists, rapists, and others who will stand before the bar of judgment to be sentenced. Their names are not now known because in so many instances they have not yet committed the crimes which could now send them to their death.

So much of the future will be forgotten. It would appear that the individual legislators, in voting on retaining or abolishing capital punishment, will in reality be voting on taking or sparing the life of one man—Caryl Chessman.

All other cases will or may be forgotten temporarily. Capital punishment should not become a political issue particularly when the issue revolves around one man.

Regardless now of what the California legislature does about this matter of capital punishment, the decision will be a political issue for many years to come in that state.

And the life or death of one man becomes more important than the sum total of the lives and deaths of many future criminals in that state.

He'd ironically decided to hoof it instead of taking his regular drive.

That was bad enough for the plotters, but the worst was yet to come. When the starter was finally turned and the bomb ignited, the whistling began, smoke started rolling from beneath the hood, and the little bomb exploded harmlessly with a bang.

Result: The owner hardly batted an eye. "That's happened to me before," he said. "In this same parking lot, too. It's all in a day's work!"

Yesterday was full of all sorts of things. Around lunch time, one of the plotters in the afore-mentioned episode was excitedly seeking to gather spectators to watch the explosion that just didn't make the schedule.

Just as the planned victim was strolling out to his car, this instigator raced into the newsroom to sound the alarm. As fate would have it, a young lady was just leaving after a brief visit.

She had just walked down the short hallway leading to the stairway when this character burst into the newsroom. Mistakenly, he was certain the young lady was someone else and dashed to the corner and hollered, "Hey!"

The visitor about-faced and stared questioningly into a startled face that was suddenly as red as the hair on top of it.

Opinions In Brief

"If all the world's people were our brothers, and we were our brothers' keepers, they would also be our keepers. We would be among the kept. In the slave societies of totalitarianism, from the Baltic Sea to the sad coasts of Siberia and China, everybody is required to be his brother's keeper—to maintain a sharp watch on him and blow the whistle the minute he deviates from total obedience." — The Saturday Evening Post.

"American income per capita in 1959 is running 53 per cent higher than ten years ago, reported the Taxpayers' Federation of Illinois . . . Less than half the increase is real—most of it is inflation." — Sterling (Ill.) Daily Gazette.

"Understanding in the United States of the issues we face is absolutely essential to our well being." — President Eisenhower. (Continued on Page 6)

First, There's A Duck To Catch

By LYNN NISBET

WOMEN—Both Terry Sanford and John Larkins have paraded the expected support of women voters in their ambitions to be Governor of North Carolina. There is evidence that women may have a larger part in the 1960 political campaign than they have had before. But, so far there isn't much evidence that women are interested in State or legislative offices. Reports from over the state indicate very few women are thinking about running for the Legislature, and none at all for statewide elective office.

There are more women than men of voting age in North Carolina, and the women can—if they desire to do so—call the turns at the ballot box. They have not shown much interest in holding public office. There have been several women appointed to high administrative office, the superintendent of public welfare being perhaps the highest such post. There have been a number of women elected to county office (clerk of court and register of deeds). Only one woman has been a candidate in the Democratic primary for top elective office. That was Mrs. Helen Robertson Wohl, who ran for treasurer in 1936.

Miss Jane Pratt was nominated by the executive committee and elected to Congress to fill an unexpired term in 1946, but did not seek election for the full term.

LEGISLATORS — In the 19 regular sessions of the General Assembly held since woman suffrage came to North Carolina in 1920 only twelve women have held seats, for combined service of 21 terms. No women were included in the membership of the Legislature in 1923, 1929, 1941 and 1951.

The first woman to serve in the North Carolina Legislature was Miss Lillian Exum Clement of Buncombe in 1921. The suffrage amendment was ratified after the 1920 primary but before the November election and Miss Clement was named to fill a vacancy on the party ballot, and was duly elected to the House of Representatives.

Other women Representatives were Miss Julia Alexander of Mecklenburg in 1925; Miss Carris McLean of Mecklenburg in 1927; Mrs. Lily Morehead Mebane of Rockingham in 1931 and 1933; Mrs. Charles H. Hutchins of Yancey in 1935 and 1937; Mrs. G. W. Cover of Cherokee in 1943, 1945 and 1959; Mrs. Walter G. Craven and Mrs. Joe Ervin of Mecklenburg in 1949; Mrs. Grace Taylor Rodenbough of Stokes in 1953, 1955, 1957 and 1959, and Dr. Rachel Davis of Lenoir in 1959.

On the Senate side Mrs. E. L. (Gertrude) McKee of Jackson county served in 1931, 1937 and 1943, and Mrs. R. S. (Sue Ramsey) Ferguson of Alexander in 1947. Both Senators McKee and Ferguson subsequently were appointed on the State Board of Education, McKee by Governor Broughton and Ferguson by Governor Cherry.

A glance at the record will show that Dr. Davis is the only woman legislator ever to come from the eastern half of the state. During the 19 legislative sessions each with 170 members, the aggregate membership was 3,230, of which only 21, or less than two-thirds of one per cent, were women. Since women can cast more direct votes than men, and by the methods in which they are skilled can influence a great many more, the conclusion seems inescapable that they are just not interested in politics or in holding public office.

STRATEGY—For many years the Plans of Organization of both the Democratic and Republican parties have called for approximately equal representation of men and women on all party committees. Yet the common practice has been for the men to go ahead and run the business, without bothering much with the women. And the women have to very large extent submitted to that treatment without effective protest. There have been instances when the women mildly protested that they were not being treated right — but never an instance when they moved in and exerted the power they have of majority voting strength to control the situation.

It will be interesting to watch procedure at the State Republican convention here Saturday and at the Democratic Executive Committee meeting here next Friday. Betting odds are 100 to one that a few men will run both meetings—and that after the meetings the women will complain that they have not been accorded proper consideration by the menfolk. And all the while and at any stage of activity from precinct to state level, the women had the power, if they had wanted to exercise it, to control proceedings.

Some of the men are beginning to ask if, in view of the manifest lack of interest on part of the women, they should be allowed to retain equal representation on party committees. There is some sentiment for ignoring sex and giving places of honor and work in the party councils to the persons who show interest in government.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
A RARE CAPACITY
Reflection is defined in the dictionary as "the mental consideration of some subject matter, idea, or purpose, often with a view to understanding or accepting it, or seeing it in its right relations." Which is sort of a fancy way of saying that some people have the profitable habit of thinking about the significance of life itself and all its events. They reflect upon them. They read something and then think about it. They look back over their lives and evaluate what has happened to them. They consider what is going on around about them and turn over in their minds the implications to them and to others of this event or that.

These people are reflective in nature. But there is all too little of this mood in modern life. We are so busy that we jump from one thing to another. We seldom have time to reflect upon the meaning of life's events—and almost never upon the meaning of life itself. If life has relationship with great and perhaps cosmic issues, we simply shrug our shoulders and say that thoughts of that sort are for the philosophers.

The New Testament gives us a picture of Jesus as a man of deep reflection. Let no one think that His marvelous parables were thought up on the spur of the moment. He had long reflected upon the significance of human life.

We would get vastly more out of life ourselves if we would take time to reflect on the meaning of its events.

Trend Is To More Luxury Trade

By ELMER ROESSNER
Ours is a luxury economy. There were grim moments last year. The steel strike, rising unemployment, lengthening relief rolls and stock market tremors made the year seem more austere than 1958.

But department store sales reflected strong trends to more luxury.

The Federal Reserve has just published a report on department sales by departments in 1959. It's not complete, covering something less than half the country's sales, but the trends it discloses are probably general.

Of the stores reporting, main store sales last year were up 5 per cent, while basement sales rose 2 per cent. That is basic; significant: there are few luxuries in the bargain basements.

The executive's wife must dress well, good times or bad. But when the family is luxury-minded, spending for the teenagers rises—and it rose greatly last year.

The second largest increases were in fine jewelry and watches, and in radios, phonographs and television sets, both groups up 12 per cent.

The other gains of 5 per cent or more were: linens and towels, up 6 per cent; laces, trimmings, embroideries and ribbons, up 5 per cent; corsets and brassieres, up 6 per cent; (possibly reflecting richer diets); underwear, slips and negligees, up 5 per cent; handbags and small leather goods, up 7 per cent; women's shoes, up 5 per cent; girls' wear, up 10 per cent; women's and misses' inexpensive dresses, up 8 per cent; better dresses, up 7 per cent; blouses, skirts and sportswear, up 8 per cent; aprons, house-dresses and uniforms, up 8 per cent; men's clothing, up 6 per cent; men's furnishings and hats, boys' wear, up 5 per cent; furniture, up 6 per cent; rugs and carpets, up 6 per cent; major household appliances, up 6 per cent; and gift shop, up 7 per cent. The only basement department to exceed 5 per cent was dresses, up 7 per cent.

FURS DECLINE
At first glance, aprons, house-dresses and uniforms do not seem to be luxury items; at second glance it will be seen that luxury-minded women often buy them for their domestics.

The only department not to go along with the trend was furs, where sales were 3 per cent under a year ago. Other departments not showing gains are non-luxury: woolen yard goods, down 3 per cent; cotton yard goods, down 2 per cent; blankets, comforters and spreads down 1 per cent; art needlework, unchanged; handkerchiefs, unchanged; women's, children's

Live Up Should To Goal

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
"Can you tell me when Flight X from Los Angeles will arrive? I understand it is delayed."

"I'll find out for you," says a sweet voice. After a pause, she comes back: "It was delayed three or four hours for mechanical servicing. We can only say that it was supposed to leave at 1 p.m. (The last time I phoned, the girl said that it would leave at noon.) We have no notice yet that it has left. Call in about an hour."

I say: "A passenger on that plane is due for dinner at 7 p.m. and for theater after that."

"Well," says the sweet voice, "in this mechanical age, anything can happen. It does not matter what business you're in, the machines do go wrong sometimes."

This is a very cheerful philosophy but not very encouraging. The airlines ought to have sufficient equipment so that they take the risk of a mechanical default. All they have to sell is time—speed. If the airplane does not give the passenger the advantage of reaching his destination on time, speedily, safely, surely, it does not perform its objective. The same is true of railroads. The same is true of busses. When the airplanes do not arrive on time or close to time, it can only be that their system is defective and requires correction, unless the failure is due to weather or another unfavorable act of God. A four or five hour delay in departure is a betrayal of the essential function.

The excuse of the airplane companies has always been that safety is more important than any other factor. It is not a valid excuse. In their calculations as to the cost of operations, they ought to include the item of stand-by equipment to replace any which may suddenly get out of order. In a word, if at 10 a.m., it is discovered that a plane cannot leave, because of a mechanical defect, a substitute plane ought to be made available to bring the passengers in.

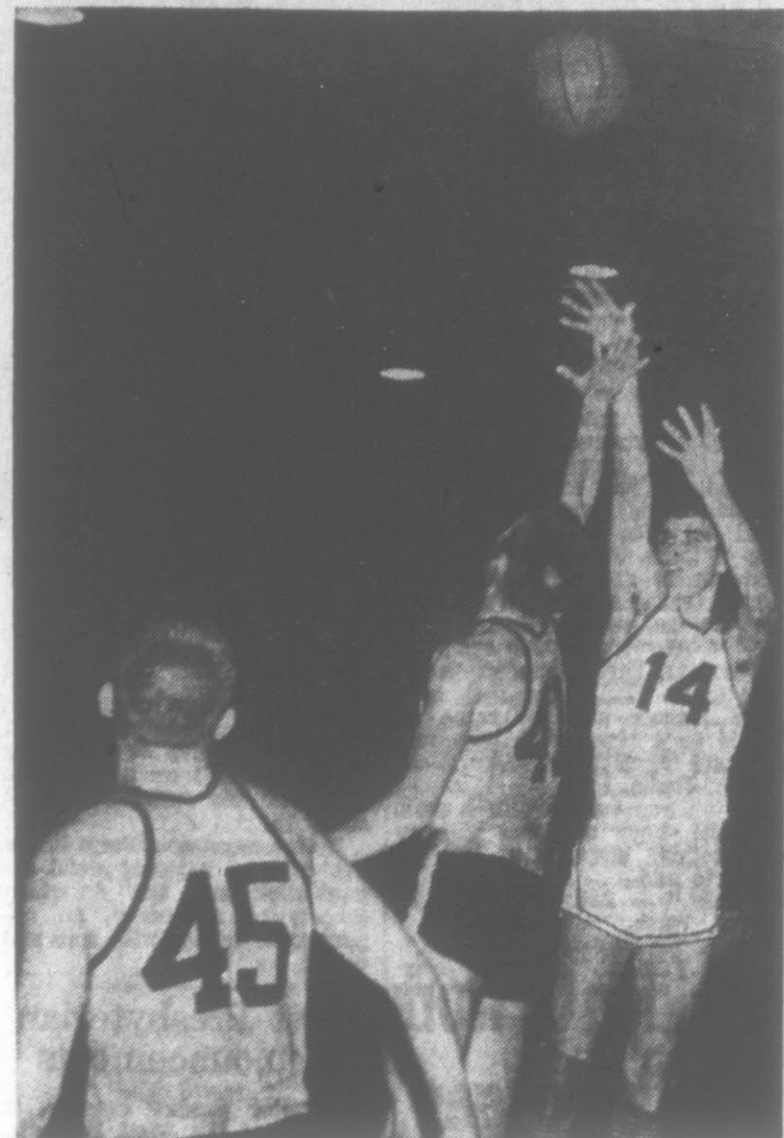

I recognize the enormous cost of such a service, but when a common carrier sells a ticket to bring a person from one point to another, specifying the time of departure and arrival, that is a contract and should be kept. To fail to keep it is an unfair trade practice. Both the railroads and the airplane companies have become careless about time. It used to be that the Twentieth Century Limited of the New York Central boasted that it arrived on the dot and paid a penalty when it failed. Men took time seriously in those days as they did manners, politeness, outward decency.

One girl, in discussing an eight and a half hour delay of a jet plane said: "I'm glad that they turned back." This may be good public relations. She was glad that they turned back; otherwise the passengers might have been killed. However, the alternative ought not to be to death or delay; here could have been a stand-by plane available to take care of trouble.

The transportation system of the United States, like so much else of the post-war period, requires rationalization. The railroads have gone to pot on the whole, particularly the suburban lines of big cities which cannot compete with busses and private cars; crack trains have lost their elegance in competition with airplanes. The airplanes have become as stuck-up as a successful television pitchman. Someday, a clever airplane manager will devise a method of guaranteed performance even if he takes his time about it. He will say that his planes arrive approximately at such and such a time, advising those anxious about arrivals to call a certain number for more precise information.

I pose no simple problem because the cost of anything associated with airplanes is almost prohibitive. On the other hand, a service either stands up or it does not. The function of management is to make it as nearly perfect in proficiency as money and brains can make it. It is not my function to make what is called "constructive" criticism; am not an engineer (Continued on Page 6)

Cardinals Top Yellow Jackets; Kinston Whips Pack

CARD FORWARD . . . Stewart Ellington (14) fires a two-pointer over Roanoke Rapids' Tommy King (41) during Birds' hot third quarter last night. Jackets' Arthur Davis (45) watches.

Jacksonville guard Bill Hargett poured in 12 big third-quarter points after sitting out the second period with three personal fouls here last night to spark an overwhelming second-half surge by the Cardinals that spelled defeat for defending champion Roanoke Rapids, 50-40, and boosted underdog Jacksonville into tonight's Northeastern Conference tourney championship battle against Kinston.

Kinston brushed Washington's jittery Pam Pack aside, 64-41, in the opener to advance to tonight's finale.

Jacksonville, tabbed earlier as the tourney's darkhorse, managed to stay even for the first period, but dropped behind by nine points at halftime, 26-17. The Yellow Jackets' sharpshooting guard Tommy King cumped in Roanoke Rapids' six second-quarter field goals to enable Coach Wimpy Johnson's five to take what appeared to be a decisive lead.

The Birds returned to the floor in the third period with Hargett in the lineup and he connected on six of seven field goal tries during the period. Hargett's points, coupled with six more from forward Stewart Ellington pulled Jacksonville even at 35-35 by the end of the quarter.

An air-tight defense that allowed only three Yellow Jacket field goals in the second half and a torrid shooting percentage after intermission turned the tide for the Cardinals. After a cold 27 per cent in the first half, Jacksonville notched a second-half figure of 65 per cent, hitting on 11 of 27 attempts.

Hargett and his running mate Don Rhyme collaborated to drop in 10 of 15 fourth-quarter free throws to wrap up the victory. Jacksonville played the entire last period with three starters in serious foul trouble. Hargett, Ellington, and center Fred Beacham were playing with four fouls each. Ellington, alone, committed his fifth, leaving the game at the 3-minute mark.

Rhyme enjoyed his best performance of the season, connecting for 15 points, his first double-figure total this year. Hargett was high for both teams' finishing with 18 points. Ellington added 10.

King led the Jackets' losing effort with 14 markers, all coming in the first half. Arthur Davis, star of Doanoke Rapids' 63-53 opening-round victory over Tarboro, was the only other Jacket in the double figures column with 10 points. Johnny Daughtry added nine.

Kinston's Red Devils had little trouble disposing of Washington, using a well-balanced scoring attack that placed four starters in the double figures.

Tommy Matlocks and Captain Donnie Kintz led the Devils with 14-point performances.

Kinston managed a three-point bulge by the end of the first quarter at 13-10. Washington moved cautiously at the outset and neither team could get a field goal until half the quarter was gone.

In the second period, Kinston opened up a 19-point barrage that put victory out of reach for the Pam Pack and left the floor at intermission leading 32-15.

Washington rallied to outscore the Devils by three points in the third period but could get no closer to the classy Kinston five.

Kinston used consistent 40-plus shooting percentage to swamp Washington and added nine points to their margin over the Pack in the final stanza.

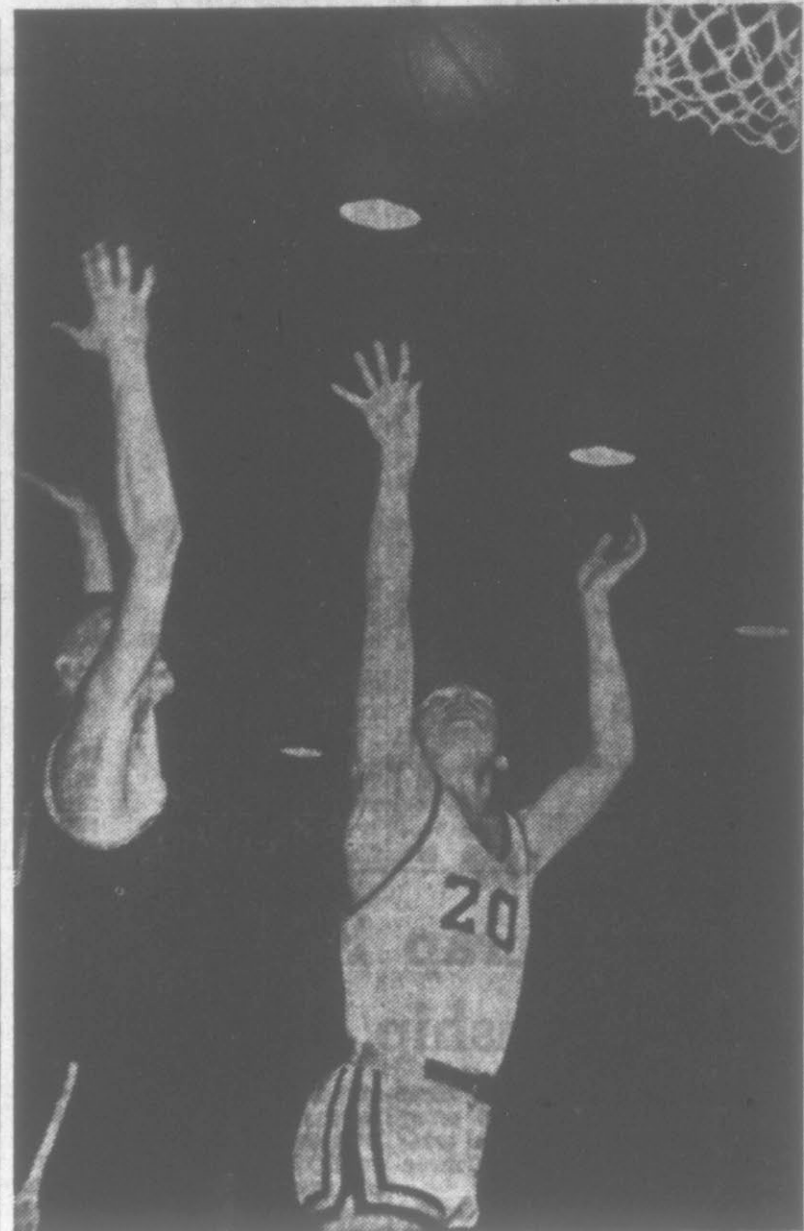

Larry Windley led the Washington effort with 13 points. Pack forward Russell Knowles added eight. Following Matlocks and Kintz for the Red Devils, center Jerry Rice and forward Everett Cameron bucketed 13 and 12 points, respectively.

Kinston meets Jacksonville in the tourney's title game tonight at 9 o'clock in East Carolina College's Memorial Gymnasium. Washington and Roanoke Rapids tangle for consolation honors at 7.

Lenoir Rhyme And Catawba Meet In Finals Of North State Tournament

By KEN ALTYA
LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Lenoir Rhyme, an old hand at winning championships, and Catawba, still seeking its first tourney title after 17 years of trying, meet tonight at 8 in the finals of the North State Conference basketball tournament.

Top-seeded Lenoir Rhyme shook off High Point in the last half for a 78-68 victory and Catawba, the No. 4 seed, whipped Appalachian 72-57 in Friday night's semifinals. The overflow crowd of 3,900 was the largest basketball turnout in Lexington YMCA history.

The winner likely will carry the conference banner into next week's District 26 NAIA four-team Carolina competition, the winner of which will go on to the NAIA tournament opening March 7 at Kansas City, Mo.

Lenoir Rhyme has won four of the 16 previous North State tournaments, a figure equalled only by Appalachian. Catawba, never a winner, lost in the finals last year to Western Carolina after beating Lenoir Rhyme in the semifinals 58-53.

Tonight's game is the third between the teams this season. Each won on its home court. Lenoir Rhyme beat Catawba last month 64-57 in an overtime battle. Catawba won on its home floor two weeks ago, 73-68, leading most of the way.

In routing second-seeded Appalachian last night Catawba did things pretty much its own way, leading from the early minutes. Doug Chalk, a sturdy sharpshooter, threw in 20 points to lead the way, although he sat out the last 11 minutes. The biggest of the Indians, 6-6 Horace Medford, followed with 14 points.

Wayne Proffitt made most of his 17 points in the last five minutes to lead the Apps whose Don King added 15 points.

Machen's Stock Raised By Scoring TKO Against Billy Hunter In 9th Round

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Machen still has Ingram Johansson on the brain and he's not going to get him off until he gets another crack at the heavyweight championship.

Machen, who ran into Johansson's right back in 1958 and has been trying to get a return ever since, stopped Billy Hunter of Detroit in 2:11 of the ninth of a 10-rounder in Madison Square Garden last night, but he was inclined to slug it off.

"I knew I could outpunch him," Machen shrugged. "I'm glad he pressed me in the early rounds. I knew I'd catch up to him one way or another."

This was an important fight for Machen, though, and his stock has risen again in the heavyweight division.

After winning seven in a row last year, he dropped a decision to Zora Foley last month and fell right back down the ladder. He had "run up a streak of 25 when he lost to Johansson. Hunter, a sensation from Detroit, had a knock out and a decision over Alex Mitoff in his credit.

"I think I've reached my peak now," said Machen. "In the past, I've been too tense. Now I'm more relaxed. I wouldn't take anything away from Johansson. He's a great fighter. But now I think I've got the know-how to beat him."

Machen looked good, indeed, he wants Johansson, too. "But," he sighed, "while we're waiting for him, we'll fight any heavyweight in the world."

Machen looked good, indeed, against Hunter. He knew he had one problem right from the start. That was to get inside Hunter's left jab.

He solved that by the third round and from then on it was just a matter of how long Hunter would last. As it turned out, Billy was still on his feet when Referee Al Bert called a halt.

Machen was using him for a punching bag. First, he staggered him in a neutral corner. Then he was banging away right over Hunter's corner when the end came.

"I fought as well as I could," said Hunter. "I have no excuse. I just couldn't get off. Machen took charge in the second half of every round and I couldn't do anything about it."

There was only one knockdown. That was in the fourth round when Machen measured Hunter and connected with a right cross. Still, it was strictly a technical knockdown. Hunter swooned, went into a deep-knee bend, but never did hit the floor. Bert tolled the mandatory eight, though.

The bout drew a crowd of 3,500 and the gate was $8,000. It was televised by NBC.

CIAA Basketball Crown At Stake

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP)—Third-ranked Winston-Salem Teachers College and eighth-ranked St. Augustine's of Raleigh clash here tonight for the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Assn. basketball championship.

St. Augustine's, the giant killers who eliminated top-ranked Johnson C. Smith of Charlotte, followed up Friday night with a 63-55 semifinal victory over Virginia State. Winston-Salem knocked off Hampton Institute of Virginia in the other semifinal game.

The outstanding performance of Friday night's game was a 30-point spurge by Cleo Hill of Winston-Salem, which sparked Winston-Salem's come-from-behind victory. Teammate Tom Montario followed with 20. Nat Trader got 22 for Hampton.

Al Shirrup, with 24 points, led St. Augustine's which led Virginia State from the start.

Record Field In Skating Event

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — A record 88 skaters, including the Olympic champions coming directly from Squaw Valley, Calif., are entered in the 1960 World Figure Skating Championships opening here Tuesday.

Olympic singles champions Carol Heiss and David Jenkins of the United States and Canada's Olympic pair champions, Barbara Wagner and Bob Paul of Toronto, led the list of competitors from 13 countries.

Miss Heiss, Jenkins and the Wagner-Paul duo will be defending world titles won last year. The pairs title will be decided Wednesday night, the women's singles Thursday night and the men's singles Saturday night.

Shaky Lead For Hanson, Wright

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Bev Hanson and Mickey Wright, two of the toughest competitors among golfers, shared a shaky lead going into today's second round of the $7,500 Tampa Women's Open.

Miss Wright, of San Diego, Calif., turned in a 34-38-72 Friday. Miss Hanson, playing out of Palm Desert, Calif., got her 72 with sides of 35 and 37.

They were two strokes over men's par for the 6,966-yard Palma Celia layout, which was drenched by a rainstorm that brought cancellation of Thursday's opening round and cut the tournament to 34 holes.

In second place, one stroke back, were Betsy Rawls of Spartanburg, S.C., and Murie MacKenzie of Pinellas Park, Fla.

Traditional Duke-U.N.C. Game Wraps Up AC Slate

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Regular season play in the Atlantic Coast Conference gives a last gasp tonight with the traditional Duke-North Carolina match catching the spotlight of the three scheduled games.

The Tar Heels must beat Duke to finish in a first place tie with Wake Forest. North Carolina goes into the game with an 11-2 conference record and 18-5 overall.

Wake Forest has completed its season, 12-2 in the ACC and 19-6 overall.

Duke, fourth in the ACC at 7-6 and 12-9 and a disappointment thus far, would like to upset the Tar Heels and avenge an 84-57 drubbing inflicted by North Carolina on TV.

The other ACC game saw third place Maryland (8-5, 18-7) at fifth place South Carolina (6-7, 16-14) in the weekly regional TV offering (2 p.m. EST). A Maryland victory would assure the Terps of undisputed third place, leave Duke in fourth no matter how they fare against North Carolina, and give South Carolina fifth.

Completing tonight's schedule will be a non-conference go sending Washington and Lee to Virginia.

Scrapy Clemson forced Maryland in two overtimes last night before bowing to the Terps 66-59.

Maryland didn't hit a field goal in the second overtime, but had eight one-and-one foul situations and hit 10 free throws while Clemson got three points.

The Red-hot game was tied 11 times and the lead changed hands 18 times. Tom Mahaffey of Clemson stole the ball with 1½ minutes remaining in the regulation game and scored on a layup to send the game into overtime.

Bruce Kelleher led Maryland's scoring with 22 points while Clemson was led by George Krajack. The victory clinched at least a tie for third for Maryland and left Clemson seventh with a 4-10 ACC record and 10-15 overall.

Travelers Top Ruritans Cagers

BELOIR—The Falkland Ruritans Club bowed to a talented Arkansas Travelers women's basketball team in the Belvoir-Falkland High School gymnasium last night 56-46, despite a pair of 15-point scoring performances by Ruritans Dan Wooten and Ed Warren.

Francis "Goose" Garrouette led the professional touring girls with 25 points as the Travelers outclassed the local Ruritans before a capacity crowd of 600.

In spite of the loss, the local club netted some $325 to be used for a scholarship fund for Belvoir-Falkland graduating seniors. The club awarded one scholarship last year and plans to sponsor two more this year.

Scholarships for local seniors to attend East Carolina College in Greenville are awarded after selection by the Ruritans membership on the basis of ability and need.

Warren, high-scoring Ruritans forward, announced this morning he felt spectators were well-pleased with the Hazel Walker Travelers' performance and added he is attempting to book a return engagement for next season.

Harry Rainey and Lou Hall of Greenville donated their services as referees for last night's battle.

Spectacular Ski Jumping Sunday

By ALAN CLINE

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—Olympic athletes fly through the air Sunday in the windup spectacular of the 1960 Winter Games. The event is the 80-meter—262.46-foot—special jumping competition.

A crowd of thousands surrounding the huge hill plus a television (CBS) audience will watch 46 skilled men fly off the jump at speeds up to 55 miles an hour, then land perhaps up to 94 meters—308.39 feet—below.

This year at least 10 men could take top honors.

Helmut Recknager of East Germany already has scored 94 meters in practice. Torbjorn Yggestad, Norwegian exchange student at the University of Washington; Gene Kotlarek, 19-year-old American hope from Duluth, Minn.; Finland's Juhani Karkinen and his brother, Kalevi; and Otto Leodolter of Austria, all have surpassed the 90-meter mark.

The men make two leaps and are judged on form as well as distance.

The Olympic hill is rated one of the best in the world.

From 1924 to 1952, the Norwegians dominated this event. But now outstanding jumpers from many nations, including the United States, are entered.

Other Americans besides Kotlarek are Jon J. S. Andre, Ishpeming, Mich.; Ansten Samuelstein, Boulder, Colo.; and Bob Weedin, Iron Mountain, Mich.

Webb Ekes Win Against Calhoun

By HARRY JUPITER
SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Spider Webb, the NBA's top middle-weight challenger, today bid for a title fight with champion Gene Fullmer after squeaking to a loudly booed split decision over under-ranked Rory Calhoun.

But the Chicago Spider doubts the Jordan, Utah, kingpin will give him a crack at his crown. He predicts Sugar Ray Robinson will regain his New York-Massachusetts title from Paul Pender and Fullmer will give Sugar an NBA title fight.

Calhoun, from White Plains, N.Y., asserts Webb doesn't deserve any such title consideration. "How could they do that to me?" sobbed Calhoun after 10 head-battering rounds before 2,551 fans in the Cow Palace.

Judge Vern Bybee's card, 97-93 for Calhoun, was announced first. Judge Eddie James' 97-93 for Webb aroused long, angry boos. Then announcer Jack Reed called out the third, and deciding, tally. Referee Jack Downey's 96-94 vote for Webb.

The booling resumed and fans threw paper and pennies into the ring.

Calhoun was so angry and disappointed that he missed his way to his dressing room and had to be forcibly returned.

Sports writers unanimously scored for Calhoun: 98-93, 98-92, 97-93, 97-92, 98-94, 96-92 and 95-94.

Calhoun started as if he were the favorite, not the 2-1 underdog. He caught Webb off-balance and sent him staggering backward halfway across the ring in the first round. Then he dropped Webb for a no-count.

OWES ONE BOTTLE

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—The Russians owe American Hockey ace Bill Cleary a bottle of vodka. An interpreter promised the ex-Harvard star the bottle if the United States defeated the Canadians, which they did, 2-1.

Hockey Game May Decide Gold Medal For U.S.

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—America's chance for a third gold medal in the 1960 winter Olympic games hinges today on the battle between the surprisingly tough U.S. hockey team and the rugged Soviets.

Interest in the game outstripped that for the 10,000-meter men's speed skating and the 50-kilometer cross country ski marathon that precede it.

Heavy crowds were expected for the final weekend. The 11-day program ends Sunday. Attendance for the first nine days was reported at 188,904.

Dave Jenkins won the second gold award for the United States Friday when he captured the men's figure skating title. It went well with the ladies' title won by New York collegian Carol Heiss.

Never has the United States won a gold medal in hockey, but this scrapping club holds a 3-0 record in championship round play here. Knocking off Canada 2-1 gave them one of the games' greatest upsets. It left only the Soviets and Czechoslovakia ahead.

The Soviets, tied by Sweden, must still meet Canada after facing the Yanks. So the odds favor the United States taking the title the Soviets won from them 4-0 four years ago at Cortina, Italy.

"This is the one we've been pointing for," declared Capt. Jack Kirrane, a fireman from Brookline, Mass. Bill Cleary, former Harvard star, said "beating the Canadians was the biggest sports thrill of my life, but knocking off the Russians will be even bigger."

Goalie Nikolai Puchkov of the Soviets, a star of the 1956 games, said "The team that has the most luck will be the one that wins. This is the strongest American team that I've seen."

The U.S. girls' alpine skiing team wound up without a gold medal. Canada's blonde Anne Heggtveit captured the Olympic slalom and also the world combined championship of the International Ski Federation Friday. Betsy Snie of Norwich, Vt., won the silver medal just as Penny Pitou of Gifford, N.H., had in the downhill and giant slalom. Penny fell and finished 33rd in the 43-skier field, knocking herself out of the world championship.

Still to be settled was the games' first gold medal beef between goals of Sweden and the Soviets. The latter charged that in the 15-kilometer relay, Sweden's leadoff cross-country skier Irma Johansson ran her skis over those of the Soviets, Radia Eroshina on a turn. The Soviet fell and lost sufficient time to give the victory to the Swedes.

The Soviets continued to pile up points. They have taken seven gold medals and have 153½ points in the unofficial tabulations.

Speed skater Eugen Grishin of the Soviets won a gold medal in the 1,500-meter event Friday for a double slam in two straight Olympic sprints. He won both the 500 and 1,500 four years ago and earlier this week won the 500 here.

But for the second straight time, he was tied in the 1,500 title. His time of 2 minutes 10.4 seconds was matched by Roald Aas of Norway. Both collected gold medals.

In men's figure skating, the 23-year-old Jenkins, from Colorado Springs, Colo., and a medical student at Western Reserve University, needed a terrific free skating performance to beat Karol Divin of Czechoslovakia. Divin led at the end of compulsory figures, but Jenkins finished with 1,440.2 points to 1,414 for Divin.

Symington Sets A Two-Day Tour

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) launched a two-day speaking tour of northern Illinois today by labeling the Republican administration's grain storage program a waste of money. Symington, in remarks prepared for a Democratic luncheon here, said warehousemen make unusually high profits from the grain storage program run by Secretary Ezra Taft Benson. "The Department of Agriculture spends more than a billion dollars a year to preserve the farm surpluses that have piled up under Mr. Benson's extraordinary theories of economics," he said. Symington, unannounced candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is chairman of a Senate subcommittee investigating the Agriculture Department.

Talk Possible Merging Units

RALEIGH (AP) - The State Prison Commission may decide when it meets in March whether to explore the possibility of merging some smaller units with larger ones. Elimination of camps housing fewer than 100 men was suggested Friday by Chairman Linn D. Garibaldi as the commission met here. State Prisons Director W. F. Bailey said the State Highway Commission, which employs prisoners for road work, would have to be consulted on the closing of any camps. There are 84 units in the prison system. Garibaldi said small camps are difficult to control and costly to operate. Requests from county officials for closing or changing custody classification of two camps in Currituck and Ashe counties were placed before the commission. Each has fewer than 100 men. The commission instructed Bailey to cooperate with New Bern officials on plans to build a hospital on prison land inside the city. New Bern officials and Bailey plan to talk the matter over with Gov. Luther Hodges next Tuesday.

Tibetans, Gold Seized In Nepal

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP)—Police seized a group of Tibetans carrying one million rupees—$210,000—worth of gold they claimed belonged to the Dalai Lama, reliable sources said today. The seizure was made at Birganj, south of Katmandu on Nepal's border with India, under a law prohibiting the export of gold confiscated. The Dalai Lama began moving the royal treasures out of Tibet in the winter of 1950-51 to keep them out of the hands of the invading Chinese Communists. He fled himself last spring.

Germany Asked To Drop Project

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States has asked West Germany not to seek military support bases in other European countries without talking it over fully with its NATO allies. At the same time, the French foreign office in Paris said France had offered Germany room for bases on French soil. The Germans also were said to be seeking Spanish bases. Spain is not a NATO member. Britain objected to German bases here, apparently because of Nazi Germany's ties with Spain in World War II.

Mail Indicates TV Viewers Concerned

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Judging from the mail, TV viewers are concerned about the violence on the home screen. A fortnight ago, I clocked the beatings, sluggings, mayhem and murder on the Friday night crime and Western shows. It required perseverance to sit through three hours of blood-letting, but I managed. The findings: One murder every 16 minutes, with the slaughter rate increasing as the night grows older (the networks theorize that more violence is allowable when the kiddies toddle off to bed). The survey brought as much mail as anything in this space for many months. Here are some of the samples: "My compliments to you for 'slain, slugged, stabbed' if critics cause the country followed your example, TV might become a normal medium of entertainment and help curb the present abnormal amount of crime." - Molly Mar-son, Hollywood, Calif. "Congratulations for having nerve enough to print what the majority of people think about our lousy TV pictures. No wonder we have juvenile delinquency in droves. "We bought TV to keep our children home and entertained. They could learn no more crime in the streets. The banned quiz programs were at least entertaining and educational even if fixed." - E. S. S., Los Angeles. Just to show there are two sides to the issue, here are two dissenting opinions: "I think your remarks are groundless, just as ridiculous as lipstick being banned because of coal is dyes used in the coloring of them. Television is for entertainment and perhaps all who watch (violent) shows forget them as soon as they are over. "For my money critics are a lot of cynical, narrow-minded people who enjoy what power they have over ratings and programs. It would be a blessing if they were all sent to Siberia." - Mrs. John Burch, Joplin, Mo. "Can't you take it with a grain of salt? They are just a story and nothing more. Have just one word to add— "Sissy." - Betty Jayne Tuttle, Pasco, Wash.

During a brief business session, the four Exchangeites who attended reported on last weekend's Educational Conference in Rocky Mount. Club President Ray D. Students Assist In Local Development FINISHING TOUCHES . . . are applied to map showing acreage and types of forests in Eastern N. C. by Henry Johnson of Edenton as Dr. Cramer watches.

The largest undergraduate geography department among North Carolina colleges—ranking at least fifth nationally—at East Carolina College here has begun to prove of tangible practical value to Pitt County and the City of Greenville as well as to its students.

East Carolina's department, instituted several years ago, has now grown until it now boasts over 40 geography majors and has begun to emphasize the practical applications of both cartography and city planning.

Upon the request of the Pitt County Development Commission, Dr. Robert E. Cramer and his students undertook the task of compiling data and transferring it graphically onto maps.

Using four base maps as comparative units, the aspiring cartographers achieved surprising results. Included in the program are Pitt County, Pitt and adjacent counties, Eastern North Carolina, and Eastern United States maps. Information displayed on each of these types ranges from market proximity to volume and type of forest trees.

Economic Consultant L. A. Weston of the Development Commission has found "countless uses" for the information conveyed by these maps. He uses the charts to easily convey specific existing situations in Pitt County as an industrial location site in comparison with other areas.

After the project began to take shape, Weston boasted, "Pitt County is unique to North Carolina in that it has access such detailed charts describing specific situations." He describes the geography department's services as "invaluable assistance in selling Pitt County as an industrial site."

Dr. Cramer is "delighted that our students have an opportunity to deal with real rather than hypothetical problems. They have been presented an opportunity to delve into experience that will aid them greatly after graduation here."

The department has recently added now drafting tables to its laboratory equipment on the Graham Building's third floor and is equipped to turn out finished charts that are neatly drawn and attractively colored.

With the beginning of the Spring Quarter, a total of four laboratory courses will be offered, including aerial photograph interpretation and map-reading courses with cartography and city planning. The department boasts a total of 45 different courses, open to all students at the college.

Last year, Dr. Cramer estimates, at least 2,400 students registered for geography courses during the terms three regular quarters and the summer session.

Another project undertaken by the department has been a joint effort by both the cartography and city planning classes. The latter, with 14 students, spent long hours compiling statistics on the city of Greenville.

The city had retained the services of a Raleigh land-planning firm to develop long-range plans for Greenville's future expansion. The planners declared they could undertake the contract here less expensively since considerably vital information had already been compiled and charted—by the East Carolina geography department.

During the Winter Quarter that just ended, the planning cartography classes collaborated talents to produce a series of maps showing varied existing situations in Greenville.

Working with data compiled by city planning students, the cartographers completed maps showing: net density of houses per acre throughout the city; use of land within the city's boundaries, including residential, commercial, public, and commercial; intricate details of land use in the business district; industries, utilities, and transportation; schools, churches, and playgrounds; commercial stores; and many more.

Completed just last week are colored slides of the Greenville series, to be shown to the Greenville Rotary Club meeting Monday night.

In conjunction with the city planning work, Dr. Cramer scheduled a series of guest speakers for his class. "We wanted to help the students understand better what they were doing. Our speakers provided interesting and first-hand information that made the students' work much more meaningful," he declared.

Speakers included were Thomas Rivers of a local consulting engineer firm; Greenville City Manager L. P. Bloxam; Steve Davenport, a graduate student in geography; Rev. William Hadden of the 8th St. Christian Church here; and others.

Growing every quarter, the department is potentially an even greater asset to Greenville, Pitt County, and Eastern North Carolina. It is already turning out competent cartographers and city planners. Many of them are moving from East Carolina into schools that offer geography graduate schools. Others are going into the professional field immediately.

Dr. Cramer is optimistic about the possibility of eventually adding a graduate school for students receiving the Bachelor of Arts degree in Geography. "With a graduate school," comments the department head, "We would stand a better chance of retaining the services of more of our graduates for North Carolina."

LAND USE MAP . . . of Greenville is "important contribution" to maps furnish city planners, says Weston. He and Dr. Cramer (right) inspect finished product.

Spring Of A Census Year Inspires Cities To Talk Annexation Plans

By BRYAN HANSLIP
RALEIGH (AP) — Spring in a census year makes city fathers think of annexation.

While young men have their usual dreams of love, municipal officials see visions of a high population count.
Both subjects are liable for misunderstandings, controversy, and law suits.
A good census showing is more than a matter of pride for a municipality. It means dollars in the decade ahead, since the share of federal and state aid of one sort or another will depend partly on the census figures.

But while city officials and civic boosters urge a high 1960 count, suburbia's citizens protest with vehemence efforts to bring them within the corporate limits they moved to the country to escape.

In order to count in the census, annexations must be carried out by April 1. This is the deadline many cities hope to meet.

Just as a usual thing, annexations stir up disputes and occasional court actions. There's even more to argue about this year because of a law passed by the 1959 Legislature, setting out a new method to follow in taking adjoining territory into a municipality.

A chief feature permits a city to annex developed areas, without a vote of the affected residents, provided the city is prepared to offer municipal services.

Putting the new law into practice has proven a thorny path for the cities which have tried it. Burlington and Winston-Salem already are involved in cases appealed to the State Supreme Court. Similar legal battling appears in prospect for Raleigh.

The North Carolina League of Municipalities has prepared a guide to the new law for city officials. Actually, however, it will take rulings from the court to spell out the law's provisions definitely.

Burlington was the first city to try the new law. Last July, some two months after its passage by the Legislature, Burlington served notice it would seek to use the new method to bring in 1.74 square miles with a 2,400 population. This covered much of an area which had voted earlier against coming into the city.

Residents of the area went to court, basing their protests on the matter of adequate city services. In Superior Court, Judge Reid Thompson ruled with the city, but the plaintiffs appealed to the Supreme Court where the matter will be heard this spring.

Winston-Salem had adopted an ordinance to annex 13 square miles of territory and about 20,000 persons. The annexation would be effective March 30, contingent upon a favorable vote in a 15 million dollar bond election set for March 1. The money will be used to extend water and sewer lines into the proposed area.

The unusual angle of the Winston-Salem situation is the possi-

Some of North Carolina's larger cities have carried out annexations fairly recently and have no census year growth plans.

For example, Greensboro took in some 29 square miles and 30,000 or so people when its corporate limits were extended by an act of the 1957 Legislature. It gave the city a total area of 80 square miles, and a population of 120,000.

The legislative act got around a vote of the fringe area residents, who protested mightily at a series of public hearings. Now, however, grumblings have subsided and the new city citizens appear mollified.

Durham used the same legislative bill of tiny towns being incorporated in its suburbs if the annexation fails.

Two communities—Hunter Hills and Town and Country—have filed for incorporation under a 1917 act. The city of Winston-Salem went to court to halt the move, on the grounds it was designed to circumvent the 1959 annexation law.

However, in granting the restraining order, the Superior Court left the way open for the suburban areas to proceed with incorporation in the event the annexation fails. The case now is on appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Raleigh is proceeding slowly and cautiously with plans to annex five fringe areas with a population of some 14,000.

Annexation of a portion of the Raleigh area depended on the outcome of an election last Tuesday in which $1,900,000 in bonds were voted to extend city services.

Gastonia has not yet run into difficulty with its plans to use the 1959 law to bring in some 4,000 persons in two fashionable subdivisions. It will be the city's first major addition since 1955.

QUICK RESULTS

ZIONSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — M. L. Barrett ran a classified ad in the Zionsville Times, seeking swarms of bees for four vacant hives he had. One morning he checked the hives and found a swarm of bees had moved into one of them. They didn't say whether they had read the ad.

Kings Canyon, a national park in California since 1940, is famed for its giant sequoia trees.

tive remedy—a local law — when annexation plans there ran into trouble. A 1957 act brought some six square miles and 8,200 persons into the city.

The 1959 Legislature approved an Asheville extension, effective Jan. 1. The annexation, first in 30 years, was approved last August in an election which covered both the city and the proposed area. Precincts inside swung the decision, although the outside areas voted 10-to-1 against.

Charlotte more than doubled its area on Jan. 1 when annexation of a 34-square-mile perimeter became effective.

The move, which added an estimated 40,000 new citizens to the city's population, was planned in 1956, and legislative approval came from the 1957 General Assembly.

To prepare for the annexation the city spent $4.7 million in capital outlay for extension of water, sewer and fire alarm systems. Operating costs were to be upped by about $600,000 in the first six months of this year. That money will go for fire protection, garbage collection, street lighting, police protection and traffic control.

But on the other side of the ledger, the city gained an estimated $100 million in tax valuation and an increase of about $1.8 million in revenue from 1960 property taxes. The increased valuation also boosted the city's bond debt limit some eight per cent, making it possible to borrow as much as $7 million—more than enough to finish financing the annexation.

Hickory brought in several small areas during the last year, but these came into the city on petition from the residents and no controversy arose.

Two years ago, Hickory added some four square miles and 4,500 persons through elections. Bond issues approved in later votes provided the principal financing for sewer and street work in the new areas. Not all the sewer extension has been completed, particularly in areas of rough terrain.

Gastonia officials are hoping to sell annexation and avoid difficulties in use of the 1959 law. Volunteer committees are meeting with residents of the sections proposed for annexation, explaining the benefits of being in the city. In turn, the city hopes to pick up several million dollars in property values.

Although the court appeal in the Burlington case covers the entire annexation area, Judge Thompson allowed the city to redraw maps to leave out property of the protesting residents. He ruled that the remaining territory could be annexed. Thus, last December the city brought in about one square mile of territory and some 1,800 persons.

Police, fire, street, garbage collection and other services have been extended into the areas which now is a part of Burlington. Water and sewer installation is on an assessment basis and is being done on petition of property owners.

WE WANT TO TALK TO YOU, HAKU.

CRIMESTOPPERS TEXTBOOK

FOR SAFETY'S SAKE

WHEN LEAVING YOUR PLACE OF EMPLOYMENT LATE AT NIGHT, STAY IN A GROUP WHILE WAITING FOR YOUR BUS.

LOOK, HAKU KOU, WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE THE RICHEST AND MOST POWERFUL MAN IN HAWAII?

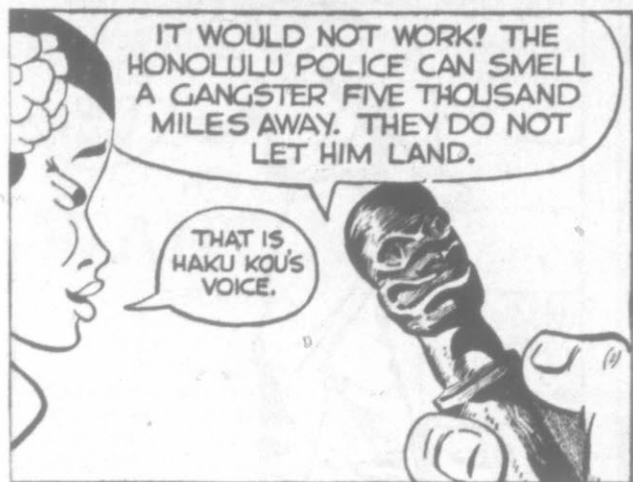

NOT THE WAY YOU DO THINGS, I WOULDN'T. YOU FELLOWS ARE BAD. GO AWAY.

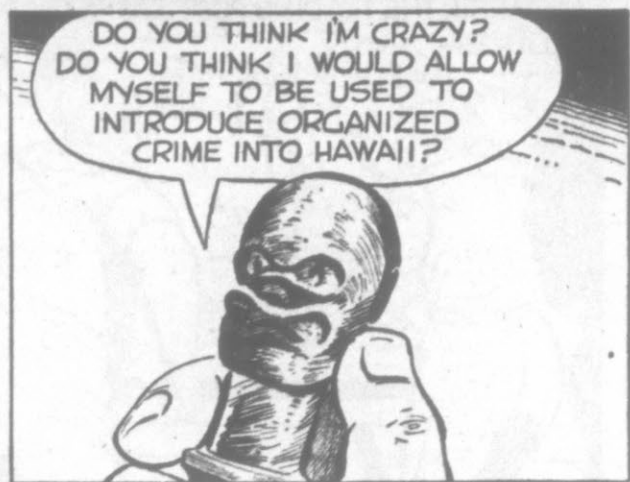

LOOK, HAKU, WE'LL SET YOU UP, PROBABLY IN HONOLULU, AND START YOU OFF WITH $50,000.

YOU'RE A NATIONAL HERO. YOU KNOW EVERYBODY. WE'D SPLIT 50-50.

IT WOULD NOT WORK! THE HONOLULU POLICE CAN SMELL A GANGSTER FIVE THOUSAND MILES AWAY. THEY DO NOT LET HIM LAND.

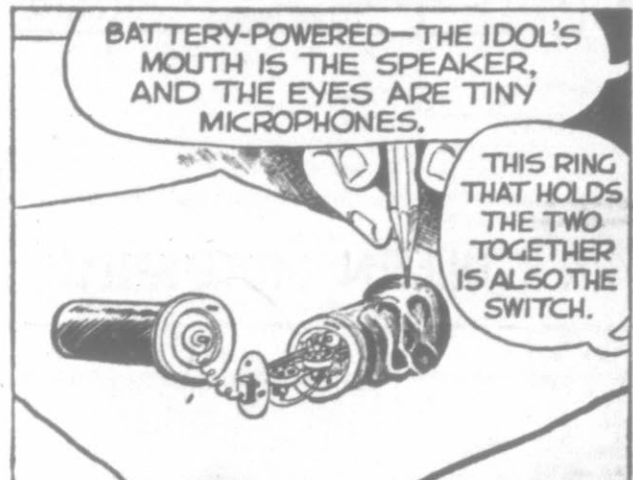

DO YOU THINK I'M CRAZY? DO YOU THINK I WOULD ALLOW MYSELF TO BE USED TO INTRODUCE ORGANIZED CRIME INTO HAWAII?

OH, DON'T GET HIGH AND MIGHTY, HAKU! LOOK, THINK IT OVER. WE'LL BE BACK.

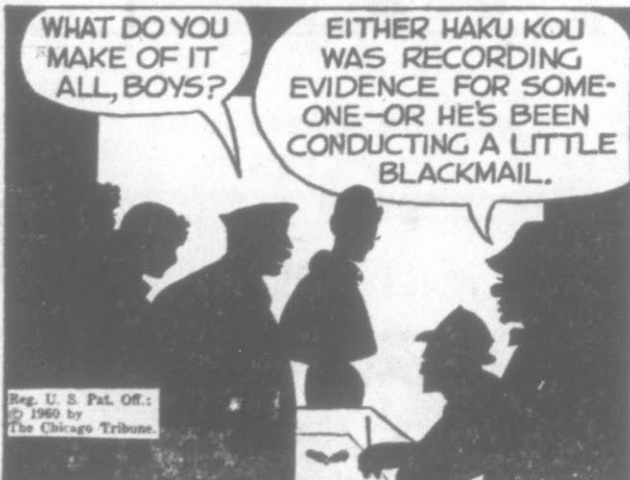

YOU'VE HEARD ONLY THE BEGINNING OF THE TAPE, BUT NEXT I WANT TO DRAW YOUR ATTENTION TO WHAT IS UNDOUBTEDLY THE WORLD'S SMALLEST TAPE RECORDER.

BATTERY-POWERED—THE IDOL'S MOUTH IS THE SPEAKER, AND THE EYES ARE TINY MICROPHONES.

THIS RING THAT HOLDS THE TWO TOGETHER IS ALSO THE SWITCH.

WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF IT ALL, BOYS?

EITHER HAKU KOU WAS RECORDING EVIDENCE FOR SOMEONE—OR HE'S BEEN CONDUCTING A LITTLE BLACKMAIL.

CHIEF, WHAT IS THIS I HEAR?

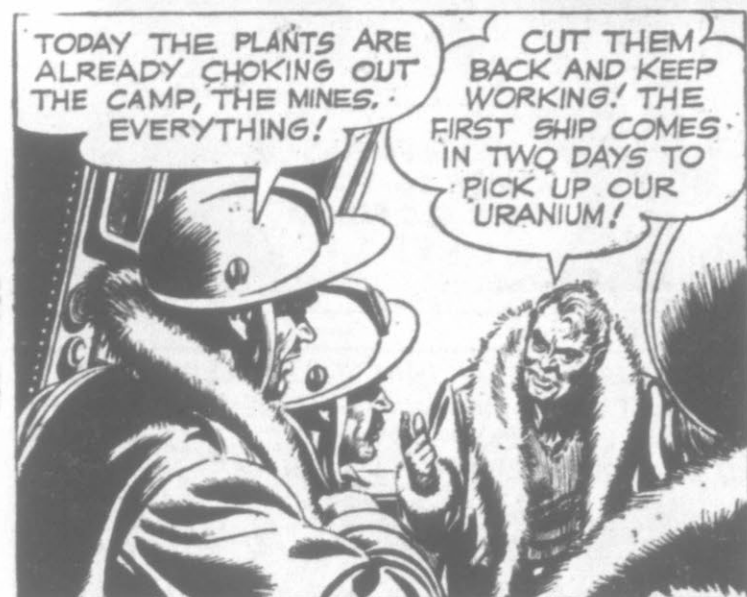

I MEAN ABOUT HAKU KOU?

ALL I KNOW IS WHAT I READ IN THE PAPERS.

CHAPTER 32

Walt Hollenger crouched and peered out of the side of the wagon. His mouth was tight around the corners. "It's the sheriff closing in on this side," he said to Judy Rayburn.

He reached for the whip in the pocket and tied a white handkerchief on the end of it. Judy's face whitened as she watched him.

"You're giving yourself up?"

"Yes."

"It's because I'm here, isn't it?"

"Of course not," he told her, the lie coming easily. "Sheriff Embry's the law. I've got a chance to talk my way out with him, and a fair trial if I don't."

Finally Judy nodded. "I guess you're right, Walt." She guessed him poked up the white flag on the end of the whip stock, and suddenly her eyes brightened. "I can make Dwight call his wolves off."

She touched Walt's hand lightly. "Dwight won't hurt me! I can dicker with him. Listen! They're coming!" She put her face close to the slit in the canvas.

Walt stood up as the posse stopped outside the wagon, the sheriff on one side, his two deputies on the other. One of the deputies was Shorty Simpson, the Las Barrancas livery stableman.

The sheriff's gun was out, and Walt would have sworn his finger was tight on the trigger—until he saw Judy Rayburn. The sheriff's small, gimlet eyes hardened as they shifted back to the cowboy. "Put your hands up, Hollenger! Get out of the wagon! And no tricks!"

"No tricks from you, Sheriff," Judy reminded him sharply. "Remember it is the law's duty to protect a prisoner."

Sheriff Embry didn't look at her, but his face got red as if her presence nettled him. Judy swung lightly down over the wheel and crouched in tight against Walt's side. Not the sheriff looked at her. He crooked a thumb at a tall, thin deputy.

"Slim, put your saddle on this black nag of Gamel's and take Miss Rayburn back to the Sombrero. This is no place for a lady."

"I'm no lady," Judy told him pleasantly but firmly, "and I'm not going back to the Sombrero. I'm going to Las Barrancas with you—and I'm going to hire a good lawyer to look after Walt Hollenger's interests."

The sheriff's face began to get red again, but before he could think of an answer they heard Dwight Mitchell's gang pounding in.

"Did you get him, Embry?" Mitchell yelled. He swooped his pony to a scidding stop round the corner of the wagon. "Well, what in hell you waiting on? Let's strin him up!"

Then he saw Judy, and like the sheriff his jaw went slack with momentary surprise.

Judy slipped her hand inside Walt's. He looked down at her and saw that her chin was up. "You'd better get on that horse and head for my place," he told her gently. "The sheriff's right. This ain't no place for a woman."

She didn't even seem to have heard him. She was looking at Dwight Mitchell and her voice was icy.

"So that is the game, is it? Well, you can't do it! You don't dare! Remember, I was here when Walt Hollenger surrendered peacefully. If Walt doesn't get a fair trial, I will yell my head off until the whole bunch of you land behind bars! Do you hear?"

Dwight Mitchell stepped out of his saddle. He took a step towards the girl.

"Judy," he said, "you don't understand. This is the way we do things out here when we're already sure we've caught the guilty man."

"Walt Hollenger is not a guilty man," Judy answered him quietly.

Dwight shook his head at her. "We know he killed Uncle Pete. We know he killed Sheriff Embry's brother. That's all we need to know. He's got to pay for this crime and the best way is the quickest way."

Walt began to get about as near panicky as he ever had in all his twenty-four years. He knew by the men's grim faces that the girl's presence and pleading had them bothered, but it hadn't changed their minds.

"Judy," he said quietly. She raised her eyes briefly to his and shook her head. Then she stepped towards Dwight Mitchell.

"Let me talk to you a minute alone, Dwight," she said.

"It's no use, Judy," he said firmly. "It's got to be done this way. I'd do anything for you but interfere with the sheriff's business."

"Let me talk to you a minute alone," she said again.

He looked at the sheriff. "Hold everything a minute, Embry."

Clint Barrow looked at Walt and grinned contemptuously.

"That a neat skirt to hide behind," he said scornfully.

Walt felt the red come up into his cheeks. The sheriff nodded to one of the possemen.

"You might as well be catching another one of Gamel's horses, Shorty," he said drily. "I reckon Hollenger won't need a saddle, as short a ride as he's going to take."

Walt was watching Judy and Dwight. She didn't seem to be begging. She was talking fast, laying it on the line, smiling a little. Finally Mitchell nodded.

They turned and came back to the wagon. Dwight looked a little sheepish, but there was excitement in his eyes, too.

"All right, Clint. You and I and Miguel are pulling out with Miss Rayburn," he said to the two Sombrero hands. He shrugged. "Embry—I've reconsidered. I reckon three men is enough to take care of one prisoner. I turn him over to you. Escort him safely to jail."

Walt saw the look that passed between them, and he hoped Judy didn't. He knew his status hadn't changed at all. The sheriff was as set on a lynching as Dwight Mitchell had been, but he was glad the girl had been persuaded to leave.

She came over and touched his arm. "Goodbye for now, Walt."

She turned and stepped into the stirrup Dwight Mitchell held for her.

Sheriff Embry bit off a generous plug of tobacco and watched them ride away. When they were safely out of earshot he turned back to his posse.

"We'll wait a few minutes till the little lady is out of sight," he said grimly. "Then we'll move on down to the creek. There's some suitable cottonwoods there. We ought to be able to find one that's just right."

"I never killed your brother," said Walt. "Joe Gamel did, and I could prove it to you if you weren't such a damned mule."

"I ain't interested in listening to you flap your jaw," the

Our Jan.-Feb. "Carolina Israelite" has just arrived—a little late as usual—and is full of Harry Golden's customary quotable cracks. We enjoyed especially his lead story about the poor English both Republican leaders habitually use, and we agree with him that neither Tricky Dicky nor Ike has ever come through with a single memorable remark—a sad fact, in view of the noble tradition of eloquence upheld by such past Republican presidents as Abe Lincoln and Teddy Roosevelt, to say nothing of the monosyllabic but sometimes effective sallies of Calvin Coolidge. Here's Harry's conclusion—very well written, we think:

"Literacy is apparently a tradition political parties do not inherit. The present administration governs by cliché . . . People do not understand what Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Nixon are saying for the simple reason that they are not saying—anything. Their words will never shock, instruct, or for that matter, interest anyone. The best that can be said for them is that they do not murder the English language, they only crucify it."

For Athletes

Many of you—even non-athletes—read "Sports Illustrated," and admire all the splendid activities portrayed in it. Now Lippincott the publishers announce a new series of books on individual and team sports that they will put out in cooperation with the Sports Illustrated people. Starting this spring, there will be a "Sports Illustrated Book of Skiing," another on horseback riding, and others on baseball and sailing. Eventually all sports will be covered in this ambitious plan. And speaking of covers, Lippincott says the books will come out in hard covers with jackets, something unusual in this age of the universal paperback.

More Plans

Coward-McCann writes us that a new novel called "The Happy Medium"—reminding us of last week's opera—will be coming out at the end of March and already has all the earmarks of best-sellerdom: Sex, beautiful girls, and TV. It's about a smart career girl who gets mixed up with a big TV executive, written by a smart career girl named Lissa Charell who is in the TV business—though we don't know just how biographical her novel is. Her publishers bill Miss Charell as "the most photogenic author since Kathleen Winsor," if you remember. Judging from her pictures, we would not say that we can't disagree—if Miss Charell writes as well as she looks we'll guarantee you an interesting few hours in "The Happy Medium."

Local Scene

On March 8 Greenville's AA will bring Father Pfau, the famous priest who turned from alcoholism to become one of AA's most successful workers, to Austin Auditorium for a single lecture. Six Churchmen Demand Apology And Retraction

NEW YORK (AP) — Six leading Protestant churchmen have demanded that Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa) apologize and retract what they termed his "untrue statement" charging Communist infiltration of churches.

Walter responded by inviting the church leaders to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, of which he is chairman.

The church leaders also called on Air Force Secretary Dudley C. Sharp Friday to "repudiate and forbid reinsurance in any form of the false and slanderous charges" contained in a withdrawn Air Force manual.

In response to Walter's invitation, two of the church leaders said they would be cooperative "with any agency" of the government that is sincerely trying to get at the truth of the allegations.

The demand in telegrams to Walter and Sharp came from leaders of the United Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal, Congregational, Christian and Reformed churches. Their memberships total nearly 18 million.

An Air Force manual prepared at Lackland Air Force Base, Tex., said a number of church leaders had pro-Communist affiliations. The manual was repudiated by Defense Secretary Thomas S. Gates Jr. after a protest from the National Council of Churches. The Council represents 38 million members in 33 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches.

After testimony Thursday before the committee, Sharp told newsmen: "I have been asked whether I testified that all charges were true. The answer is no. The manual was withdrawn without any determination as to whether charges were false or true."

The committee then released a transcript of the hearing in which Sharp, when asked whether he was "in accord" with statements in the manual, replied: "I am, yes."

Walter said after the hearing he thought the charges were true. He said the Air Force planned to reissue the manual deleting only specific references to persons and organizations, including the National Council of Churches.

Lunch Counter Campaign May Turn Into Boycotts

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Negroes may soon begin using boycotts in their campaign for equal service at lunch counters in the South.

Demonstrations for integrated lunch counters have spread rapidly during the past week.

More than 300 Negroes met in Winston-Salem, N.C., Friday night and voted to boycott stores which operate segregated lunch counters.

The threatened boycott came on the heels of new demonstrations in Henderson, N.C., Orangeburg, S.C., and Montgomery, Ala.

There were slowdown demonstrations Friday at two Henderson variety stores and a drug store counter. A telephoned bomb hoax caused the Rose Five and Ten Cent Store in Henderson to be closed.

Before the bomb threat, witnesses said whites kept the lunch counter filled so that none of the demonstrators gained seats.

The demonstrators, most of them apparently from Kittrell College, eight miles south of Henderson, marched on the F. W. Woolworth store where they sat at the lunch counter reading and studying after their requests for service were ignored. After an hour, the store was closed. They then went to the Rose store, and after it closed, returned to Woolworth's which had reopened. It was closed a second time and cleared of all customers.

A crowd of whites jeered the Negroes when the store was cleared the second time but there was no trouble.

The demonstrations began at Greensboro, N.C., Feb. 1, spread to other North Carolina cities, then to Virginia, South Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and Alabama.

The Negro meeting at Winston-Salem Friday night, sponsored by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, was told by Carl Matthews, the first demonstrator there, "to arouse the sympathies for the masses there must be some suffering, so get ready for it. If you don't wish to help this movement, please don't hinder it by showing a lack of unity."

The group was told that all Negro ministers in Winston-Salem would speak for the boycott from their pulpits Sunday.

The approved motion by the Rev. Jerry Drayton called for boycotting "Kress and Woolworth and any other store in which we aren't treated the same as whites."

Most stores have served Negroes when standing but not when seated.

A demonstration at Orangeburg Friday produced two arrests and conflicting statements from Police Chief Howell Hall and the NAACP in New York. The NAACP claimed a Negro, Melvin Flood, was jumped by several whites and struck on the head when he attempted to take a seat in the Kress store.

Hall said a white man and a Negro were arrested. He declined to identify them but said they exchanged blows. Calling the NAACP's charge "ridiculous," Hall said "no youths were involved in the incident. No one was hit over the head. No one jumped anyone. It was just a mild exchange of blows."

Negro students of Alabama State College at Montgomery demonstrated at the courthouse there for the second day Friday. Gov. John Patterson had said their school might be closed if they did not stop. However, the students said if their school is closed, they will attempt to enroll at white Alabama colleges.

Police kept Chattanooga, Tenn., quiet after violence Tuesday between whites and demonstrating Negroes. Police, prohibiting large assemblies, arrested seven persons Friday, most of them for loitering. Forty-eight persons have been arrested in the past four days.
