Southern Senators Keep Talking; To Rest Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) — A procession of Southern Senators kept up today the flood of words by which they hope to prevent or delay a vote on civil rights proposals. The nonstop Senate session went into its third day with every indication the deadlock would not be broken at least until next week.

I. Beverly Lake Enters Contest For Governor

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney I. Beverly Lake of Raleigh has entered the gubernatorial contest with a promise to preserve the state's social order. Lake said, however, as he made his official plunge into the campaign Tuesday, he considers "very good" the state's pupil assignment law which permitted token integration in several North Carolina cities.

Lake, regarded as an avowed segregationist, said "The pupil assignment law was never conceived of by me as an impermissible law behind which we could rest in safety from the invasion of our school system by the NAACP."

Hodges Will Not Ask Bruton To Review Decision

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges will not ask newly-appointed Atty. Gen. T. Wade Bruton to review a decision which brought about a cutback in welfare payments. "I have already had a ruling from the attorney general's office," Hodges said Tuesday. "I do not consider the law changes when a new attorney general comes in."

Stunned Survivors Emerge From Quake Rubble; Fear For 3,000

AGADIR, Morocco (AP) — Stunned survivors streamed from earthquake-ravaged Agadir today. A Red Cross official estimated the toll at more than 3,000 dead and more than 5,000 injured. The grim casualty prediction—2,000 more dead than the initial Moroccan government estimate—was made by Dr. Albert A. Rainhard, who flew to Agadir from International Red Cross headquarters in Geneva. The U. S. Air Force, making these estimates public, said they were conservative.

At dawn broke, smoke from quake-caused fires still hung over the city. Evacuation of the shattered city—population 40,000 before the quake—was ordered. Thousands poured into the surrounding fields for the night.

A massive airlift was in progress, carrying the injured northward to hospitals in other African cities. Europe, America and North Africa mobilized aid for the Atlantic Coast resort shattered Monday night by two earthquakes and a tidal wave.

American military planes flew more than 1,000 injured to hospitals and emergency receiving stations in Casablanca, Rabat and other cities. As yet it was impossible to determine accurately who survived and who had died.

French, Spanish and Italian armed forces and Red Cross experts converged on the scene. A contingent of U. S. Marines and Navy construction workers were flown to Agadir Tuesday night.

Bring Outdoors To Your Table

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor
YOU CAN BRING springtime indoors even before the season of outdoor dining begins. Now is a good time to brighten up table settings, to be in tune with the new season. It's easy to do on your sewing machine, with the aid of some pretty fabric and a dash of imagination. Leaf place mats will dress your table up for spring. Local sewing center experts suggest leaf-shaped mats of green linen or any crisp fabric such as Indianhead cotton, with stems curled over to form full-in napkin rings. Back the fabric with green lawn or organdy. To assure uniform size and shape for the mats, draw a paper pattern on brown wrapping paper or even newspaper, allowing a half-inch for seams and sufficient stem length to make the napkin rings. Stitch around outer edges of the leaf, using a pyramid stitch on your automatic sewing machine or on your zigzag attachment. Set the machine for a narrow satin stitch to outline the stem and to trace leaf veins through the mat. When stitching is completed, trim away excess fabric around outside of leaf and stem, cutting around stitch pattern. Napkins may be simply finished with a narrow satin stitch. Here again, when stitching is completed, excess fabric is trimmed away. These leaf place mats make an effective table setting when combined pale green dishes and sparkling crystal. A centerpiece of spring flowers complete the picture. These mats are perfect for any luncheon party indoors, and may be used later for your outdoor table.

BLOSSOMTIME . . . Cool green leaf mats are easy to make, harmonize with melamine dinnerware in honeydew green. Give your imagination full play, and have the gayest table in town.

Ingredients: 1 cup butter or margarine, 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 cups flour, 1 cup finely chopped walnuts, extra confectioners' sugar.
Method: Cream butter, 1/2 cup confectioners' sugar and vanilla. With a spoon gradually blend in flour. Mix in walnuts. Shape into 1/2-inch balls, rolling in palms. Place about 1/2-inch apart on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake in slow (325-degrees) oven 30 minutes; cookies should be creamy color. Remove to wire rack until just warm; roll in a little of the extra confectioners' sugar; cool entirely; roll again in a little of the confectioners' sugar. Makes 3 1/2 dozen. Store in tightly covered container. Cookies will be rounded shape with flat bottoms.

Luncheon Fetes Book Clubbers

BETHEL—Members of the Sally Tucker Club and several visitors were entertained with a luncheon recently by Mrs. X. E. Manning. A central arrangement of spring flowers decorated the appointed table from which the guests were served stuffed lobster tails, broccoli with sauce, congealed salad with sour cream dressing, buttered potatoes, dessert and coffee. Following the luncheon, Miss Camille Staton was introduced as the afternoon speaker. Her topic, "The Organization of the United Nations," was well received by the group. The distribution of books concluded the meeting.

Jurors Clear Dutch Seafarer In Death

BOSTON (AP) — Willem van Rie was acquitted today of a murder charge in the death of Lynn Kauffman.

The all-male jury took the case at 5:42 p. m., EST Tuesday and returned its verdict at 9:13 a. m. today.

The judge had given the jurors six verdicts from which to decide. They ranged from first degree murder to acquittal.

Van Rie stood up in the prisoner's box and thanked the jurors. His wife, Nella, 31, burst into violent sobbing. She wiped her eyes with a handkerchief.

Judge Frank J. Murray then discharged the defendant.

At the verdict Van Rie raised both arms and clasped his hands to his head.

As he was led from the courtroom, a free man after five hours imprisonment, Van Rie seemed unsteady on his feet, and his head bowed. He wore a broad smile.

Mrs. Van Rie, who has been in the courtroom almost continuously during the three-week trial, was speechless through her tears.

When reporters sought her reaction she could only nod her head and was unable to bring out any word.

Van Rie seemed more composed.

Bernard G. Roetering, American representative of Radio Holland, said his organization had believed in Van Rie's innocence and will find a job for him.

The 31-year-old Dutch seafarer was accused of beating Miss Kauffman, 23, a Chicago divorcee, and throwing her overboard at the end of a shipboard romance which began in the Far East.

Van Rie was the radio operator for the Dutch freighter Utrecht on which the girl was a passenger.

The jury deliberated 15 hours. They took a break just before 7 a. m. to eat breakfast at a nearby hotel.

As they went out to eat they apparently were deadlocked. On their return a decision apparently had been reached.

Some spectators waited all night in the courtroom to hear the verdict.

Shortly before the judge put the case in the hands of the jury Van Rie made a dramatic plea for his acquittal, saying of Miss Kauffman's death: "I never did this."

"As God is my witness," he said emotionally, "I'm telling you the truth."

He admitted he had committed adultery with Miss Kauffman, but insisted "I never kicked, nor hit, nor beat" her.

CORE Keeps Its Passive Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — The Congress of Racial Equality has relied on passive resistance for furtherance of its goals since being organized 18 years ago.

"So we shall continue to press peacefully for equal rights for all in the face of such opposition as Sen. (Richard) Russell of Georgia," was the comment of Marvin Rich, community relations director of the agency.

Russell, leader of Southern senators opposed to civil rights legislation, said in the Senate Saturday night that direction for recent Negro demonstrations at lunch counters and other traditionally segregated public services in the South came from New York City. He specifically named the Congress of Racial Equality as advocating mass efforts by young Negroes to get into segregated places.

Rich explained the organization is non-profit and interracial and has 12,000 members, including residents of every state.

Rich said the organization, generally referred to as CORE, has met with leaders in many communities and established workshops to explain non-violent techniques.

"We continued to do this since the unfortunate and mistaken attack by Sen. Russell," he said, adding, "we shall continue to press peacefully for equal rights for all."

CORE was founded in Chicago in 1942. It operates on a budget of $100,000 and last year spent $60,000.

"In the course of time our methods have been successful not only in ending lunch counter discrimination but securing jobs for Negroes, Mexicans, Orientals and Jews," he said. "We've done work in school integration, public accommodations generally and have been particularly successful in voter registration in South Carolina."

The nonviolent direct action approach, Rich said, "assumes that a lasting solution can best be obtained through a spirit of goodwill and understanding. We oppose discrimination but have only goodwill for he who discriminates."

Elves, Leprechauns, Brownies Really Exist--Says Lecturer On The Subject

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Do you believe in Leprechauns? Brownies, elves, grass sprites? You should, says Ann Moray, singer and lecturer on Celtic mythology and faerie lore, because "they really exist, and one wee person may be nudging you now, hoping for the warmth of your smile."

It could be tiny like a sprite or a larger spirit like an elf, Brownie, Leprechaun or Lurikene, Puca or Fear Darrig—just under a foot high.

If you are a MacClachlan or a MacDonald, you've seen a Brownie, no doubt, the one perhaps who came here from Ireland with your ancestors.

"If you haven't seen him, listen for his merry laugh, and you'll see what I mean," says Miss Moray.

red shoes. The Fear Darrig, two-foot high, wear red hats and long scarlet coats reaching to the ground.

"Fairies gravitate to people on the right wave lengths," Miss Moray explains. "Some people are clairvoyant, have second sight, see them all the time. Other people just don't look or they could see them in action. There are people who keep fires burning to keep the fairies warm, those who keep a bowl of water handy for them to wash in, and some people even supply the tasty foods that fairies like—honey, fower nectar, milk and good wine."

Miss Moray, born in Wales of Scottish and Irish parents, never saw a fairy in Britain. But she saw a large one in Venezuela.

"It swept through the house with a furious roar in a diffused colored light," she says.

Poets, artists and philosophers have believed in them, she points out. Milton described them in "Comus." In "A Social History of Ancient Ireland" Professor P. W. Joyce advises us that the Celtic hierarchy alone could fill an entire volume. Sir William Ouseley found that fairies "do not resemble angels, nor the Cherubim and Seraphim of the Hebrews, the Daemons of the Platonists nor the Genii of the Romans. They do not resemble the fairies of Shakespeare, and neither is their stature diminutive."

The Rev. Robert Kirk, a minister in Hebrides, 17th century authority, wrote in the "Secret Commonwealth of Elves, Faunes and Fairies" that the fairies were of "medium size and of intelligent and studious spirit. They have light changeable bodies, somewhat in the nature of a condensed cloud, and are best seen at twilight."

Does believing in fairies insult our reason?

"No," says Ann Moray, who has lectured on the subject across America. "New scientific developments illustrate there are many unforeseen forces at work. We are getting closer to believing what we cannot see at once."

Miss Moray, who lives in Washington, D. C. with her Venezuelan diplomat husband, Senor Don Juan Lopez de Ceballos, studied music in Vienna and did concert singing before devoting her time to recording Gaelic, Celtic and other songs and legends.

Her songs are song without accompaniment in the age old manner, using 12 or more scales of the Gaelic Celts rather than two—our major and minor. It is music that makes the voice an instrument—mood music, joyous without a literary symbol.

Songs like Na Reubairn, of the sea winds, have a complete poem, but spoken words and music blend so that it is hard to tell where each begins and ends. Her most recent collection, "Ann Moray Presents Gaelic Songs and Legends," includes love songs, sea songs, fairy songs, songs of the saints and lullabies that have been handed down for 3,000 years.

Newcomer In Uruguay Politics Acts As Host

By JOSE MARIA ORLANDO
MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP)

A hefty leader with one day's experience as chief executive is host to President Eisenhower today.

Benito Nardone, a successful newcomer to Uruguayan politics, took over Tuesday as president of the Government Council. This council is a Swiss-style "board of directors" of nine men who head this country's executive branch instead of a single president. The council's presidency rotates yearly among four council members elected at the top of the ticket.

Nardone is 53. Born Nov. 22, 1906, he has come a long way from a poor, unpromising childhood.

He is the son of an Italian immigrant who worked as a longshoreman on Montevideo's docks. His father is still living at 89. The son grew up in the port's tough neighborhood.

He saw his chance for better things when he started a small-time radio program 20 years ago. He beamed it to frustrated peasants and small farmers. Strictly a city boy, he became a champion of the rural masses.

In 1950 he formed the Federal League, a sort of rural union whose thousands of votes catapulted him to the front row in Uruguayan politics.

Nardone, a 5-foot-10, 200-pounder who smiles little and talks slowly, patiently waited for his league to become a powerful movement before jumping into the political wagon.

When he finally did it, the league was decisive in gaining back power to the conservative National party in 1958 elections.

He describes himself as an independent "Christian Democrat, with no political strings."

The votes he controlled gave him the No. 2 spot in the National party ticket for Government Council members in the last elections. With his help the National or Blanco party beat the Colorado, the other old, traditional Uruguayan party, out of power.

Socialist-minded Colorados had controlled the government for nearly a century, turning the country into the world's biggest welfare-state setup outside the Communist nations.

Nardone and the Blancos are slowly but firmly driving Uruguay toward a free-enterprise, back-to-the-country economy.

California HQ For Kennedy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Californians for Kennedy" — a group supporting the presidential hopes of Sen. John F. Kennedy — have opened headquarters in Los Angeles.

Branch offices are planned in San Francisco and other cities, a spokesman said. He added that the local organization has not consulted Eastern campaigners for the Massachusetts Democrat.

Kennedy and other potential Democratic presidential candidates so far have stayed out of the California primary because Gov. Edmund G. Brown has declared as a favorite-son candidate.

Selecting Jury To Try Youth

RALEIGH (AP) — Two jurors and an alternate remain to be seated before the state can begin presenting evidence in the trial of a high school football star, Howard Laws, charged with murdering his mother.

Police quoted the youth as saying he pulled the trigger when his mother, Mrs. Ruth H. Laws, who had been drinking, refused to heed his warning not to go out for more beer.

Ratio Of Mechanics To Motor Vehicles Is Small

NEW YORK (AP)—Whenever Mel Turner sees traffic flowing along busy thoroughfares he almost automatically begins to see them in blocs of 100, a vision that pains him.

For to Turner each bloc is a fresh reminder that in the U. S. there is an average of only one mechanic to serve every 100 or so cars.

"What's more important," Turner says, "is the question of how many mechanics can service or repair automobiles: which have complicated systems for air conditioning and automatic braking, steering and window control."

Turner, a Chicago service operator who is director of the Automatic Service Industry Assn.'s vocational education program, says that the day is long past when a man could practically repair anything on his car with a screwdriver and wrench.

"The home grown grease monkey can't possibly keep up with the new developments," he says. "For a nation whose economy really depends on wheels, this is a serious threat, and it could be disastrous in case of a national emergency."

Turner, in New York for an A.S.I.A. convention, spied off these figures to show the growing gap between the number of cars and the men available to service them.

In 1950, there were 49 million vehicles and 670,000 mechanics—73 cars per mechanic. In 1955, it was 68 million vehicles and 700,000 mechanics—a ratio of 82 to 1. By 1965, there'll be an estimated 81 million vehicles and 745,000 mechanics to keep them rolling—or one mechanic for each 108 cars.

"We consider 60 to 1 as being a healthy ratio," says Turner.

What is the industry doing about it?

"We work closely with schools throughout the nation to help them develop programs for modern up-to-date shops," Turner says.

"The manufacturers train some mechanics to familiarize them with new models but the number who get this training represent a drop in the bucket. Obviously, an inventive kid who likes to tinker with a car isn't going to learn by himself how to service the new and highly intricate power plants of new cars. So they must get this training in vocational schools. What we want to see is schools that are adequately equipped and up-to-date instead of having them trained in some school shops where they do their learning on an old Reo."

Wants More For Space Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Space Committee has approved a bill to authorize 915 million dollars for the national space program in the next fiscal year.

Chairman Overton Brooks (D-La.) said Tuesday he wishes it was even more.

"I'm still disturbed that there is not enough feeling of urgency in this program," Brooks said.

Lt. Governorship In The Back Seat

With a vigorous field of gubernatorial candidates in North Carolina this year, the post of lieutenant governor seems to be taking more of a back seat than usual in state politics.

And traditionally it has had a seat far back on the political train in the state.

Justified or not, most Tar Heels have looked upon the office of lieutenant governor as sort of a dead end. Few men have moved from that office into the governor's mansion. For the most part it is looked upon as an office from which the man who occupies it presides over the State Senate every two years and does little else.

As the number two post in the state administrative organization, the office should carry considerably more responsibility than it does. Certainly it should command a greater interest on the part of the voters of the state when election times roll around. In the East, however, there is little evidence of any genuine interest in the race for lieutenant governor now.

Perhaps it is because the three candidates for that post are all from another section of the state this year. Or perhaps the situation which exists in the East is fairly general in other parts of the state as well.

By the time the Democratic primary is held in May, most voters will have become familiar with at least the general platforms of those men who are seeking the office of governor. Between now and then there will be considerable newspaper space devoted to what the various candidates have to say about many matters.

If the average voter is going to familiarize him-

Hollow Ring In GOP Boasting

By LYNN NISBET

REPUBLICANS — A post mortem inquest over the recent Republican state convention discovers a number of interesting facts. Analysis of statements by party leaders in public speeches, news interviews and casual conversations gives the impression that the Republicans at national level is pretty strong, but not very healthy; that at state level the party is healthy but not strong. That comparison is not as paradoxical as might appear on the surface.

Tarheel Republicans are confident their party will retain occupancy of the White House and they have an honest—but less reasonable—hope they can capture control of the National House of Representatives. That is evidence of strength in the nation. But the fact that the issues paramount now are almost the same upon which the Republicans captured the presidency in 1952 and 1956, and those issues being personal rather than political, indicates lack of vigorous health.

In North Carolina the situation is almost reversed. Republicans have no remote hope of electing any officer in a statewide race. They talk glibly about capturing two or three additional congressional districts, increasing membership in the General Assembly and "taking over" more court houses. Much of this boasting has a hollow ring. It was apparent that the folks who were talking didn't believe themselves. That is evidence of weakness, almost impotence, of the Republican party in North Carolina.

Yet, the Republicans manifest a healthy attitude in that they paramournt principles and potential issues rather than personalities in their in-state program. No North Carolinian in the Republican party can dominate the scene to anything like the degree Eisenhower and Nixon do at national level, or Governor Hodges in the Democratic party in the state.

DEMOCRATS — Lee Potter, assistant to the Republican national chairman in charge of the Southeast, predicts that Richard Nixon and his running mate for Vice President (and Potter said he would like to know who that will be) will carry North Carolina and several other Southern states. But he admitted that the vote for Nixon and for Republican members of the Congress would be determined more by the Democrats than by the Republicans.

In other words, he thinks the Democratic platform, which will be influenced by Butler, Humphrey, Stevenson, Truman et al, will be more obnoxious to the South than will the Republican platform. Also, he thinks Nixon will be more acceptable to the South than any of the present likely Democratic candidates for President.

It is further evidence of unhealthy conditions that a reasonable Republican leader will admit that the opposition party will largely influence popular voting. In other words, he thinks his party will profit by a rebound from a more obnoxious Democratic ticket, rather than because of inherent merit within itself. Potter said he thinks platform declarations will be of some consequence, but that the personalities of the candidates will be far more important.

In that connection it is noted that North Carolina is one of very few states, if indeed it is not the only one, which permits citizens to vote for candidates for President and Vice President. Most of the states, as was the case in North Carolina until about 25 years ago, list on the ballot the names of Presidential Electors rather than Presidential candidates. And in some, including neighboring South Carolina and Virginia, the electors are not necessarily bound to support the presidential nominee of their party.

POSELYTES — There were some attendants at the recent Republican state convention who were there for the first time, having been affiliated before with the Democratic party. Also some old familiar faces were present, including former Republican members of the General Assembly and candidates for other offices, who have since transferred allegiance to the Democratic party.

Your reporter had opportunity to discuss some of these changeovers with Sim DeLapp, former Republican state chairman and recognized as one of the real leaders of the party. He believes in party discipline and party responsibility, as well as individual right of choice. We mentioned several men of national prominence and a number in the state who have switched parties in recent years.

"I have the utmost respect for a man or a woman who changes political affiliation or goes from one church to another for reasons of conviction and honest belief in the tenets of the adopted faith. I have nothing much but contempt for the men who switch allegiance solely for his own advantage."

One noticeable feature of the recent convention was that a preponderant majority of the attendants, although they knew they were in the minority so far as State control is concerned, were evidently proud of their affiliation with the Republican party.

self with how the candidates for lieutenant governor feel about important state matters, he is going to dig a little harder.

In the interest of good government, voters of North Carolina should be keenly interested in who occupies the second highest office in the state as well as in who occupies the post of chief executive

This Time The Allies Take A Positive Step

The "spirit of Camp David" that has been gradually vanishing in East-West relationships since shortly after Soviet Premier Khrushchev ended his U. S. tour may get a final push with the Allied decision to reassert its right to high altitude flying in the air corridors to Berlin.

It has been almost a year since Allied planes have flown above the 10,000 foot ceiling in the air corridors. The Soviet Union has asserted flights above that height are a violation of East German air space. The Allies, while not recognizing the ceiling as official, have for almost a year kept their planes in the corridors below that ceiling.

Now, Allied planes are to resume flying at higher altitudes. It remains to be seen whether Soviet fighters will challenge this new Allied move. If they do, it may well be expected that the tension over Berlin will again begin to mount. If they do not, the Allies will regard this latest move as a victory in the quieter, but realistic war of nerves that has been going on between East and West since the Eisenhower-Khrushchev meetings.

With another meeting between President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev scheduled in the coming months, tensions may not mount to the crisis level in the meantime. Even so, unless the Allies do support their claims to higher ceilings in the Berlin air corridor by going above 10,000 feet, they will in time forfeit their right to higher levels of flight.

At least this time, it is the Allies that have taken positive action rather than waiting for the Soviets. This time it will be up to the Soviets to react to the Allied initiative.

Wise Step In Keeping Trial In A Courtroom

Raleigh officials made a wise decision in deciding that the trial of some 40 Negro youths charged with trespassing in connection with the lunch counter demonstrations will be heard in the regular courtroom rather than in huge Memorial Auditorium.

The trial, originally slated for last week, was postponed after officials said the courtroom and building were so crowded with spectators as to create a hazard. Subsequently the possibility was mentioned of moving the trial to Memorial Auditorium where there are enough seats for all spectators who wanted to come.

Such a move, in our opinion, would have lowered the dignity of the court and would have placed the trials more in the light of a public spectacle than as part of the work of a court of law. It would have made the trials more sensational than the merits of the cases deserve, and it would have invited more public demonstrations to interfere with the work of the court.

When Castro began the trials of those charged with crimes against his revolutionary movement, he chose Havana's largest stadium, and the trials assumed the appearance of sports events rather than legal proceedings. Had the trials of the Raleigh youth been moved from the courtroom to Memorial Auditorium, they would have been a similar suggestion of an interest in sensationalism rather than administering justice.

Raleigh officials made a wise choice in keeping the courtroom as the site for the trials. After all, that's what our courtrooms are for.

Senate Heading Toward Chaos

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's around-the-clock fight over civil rights is headed for organized chaos before it's finished. This looks like the worst civil rights fight in recent years.

The Senate leaders — Lyndon Johnson of Texas for the Democrats and Everett Dirksen of Illinois for the Republicans — have agreed on around-the-clock sessions endlessly to smash the Southern Democrats' fight against any civil rights measure.

The idea is to make them shut up finally through exhaustion. This is disorderly enough. But the usual way of doing Senate business has also been abandoned, leaving the door open for a free-for-all.

This is the orderly way: Bills on a certain issue, like civil rights, after being introduced in the Senate are sent to the appropriate committee whose members and staff examine the bill for good, and bad parts, workable and unworkable parts, and gimmicks.

Hearings are held so both sides can speak their piece. Then the committee senators agree on one bill, or put together a combination of bills, and send the finished product to the full Senate for action, with a report and explanation.

On the floor, of course, changes can be made in the committee — approved bill through amendments offered on the floor. But by this time the senators have, or should have, a pretty good idea of what they're voting on.

But this year civil rights bills have been stymied in both House and Senate committees which are headed by Southerners. So Johnson and Dirksen decided to go ahead and try to get some kind of civil rights bill passed without committee approval.

The bill supposed to get first consideration was proposed by the Eisenhower administration. First, it was offered in bits and pieces last year. This year Dirksen put all the pieces together and offered them in one bill.

But there probably have been more than 200 civil rights bills, with all kinds of proposals, introduced this year, not one of which got through a committee.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), leader of the Southern Democrats, said Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) has by himself introduced at least 57 civil rights bills.

When the filibuster is broken, if it is, then the Senate will vote on the administration bill. But any senator can offer other bills as amendments to this one. And the Southerners, to water down the Northern amendments, or to foul them up, no doubt will offer more amendments of their own.

Since none of these proposals has cleared a committee, there is a good chance the Senate will often have only a vague idea of what it's voting for or against. Does that sound strange? It shouldn't.

In 1957, when the Senate passed the first civil rights bill in this century, neither the Southern opponents of it nor its Northern advocates knew precisely what the bill would do, although they had had months to examine it.

Russell, the Southern captain that year, suddenly announced he had discovered a "cunning" gimmick in the bill: It would permit the use of federal troops to back up one section of the bill. It seemed strangely late to be discovering that.

It was Russell hadn't discovered it. Instead, a lawyer for the Senate Judiciary Committee discovered this provision and called it to Russell's attention. Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), leader of the fight for a civil rights bill, expressed astonishment at Russell's disclosure. What had happened? Neither the Southerners nor the Northerners had really done their homework on the bill at all.

Too Much Opportunity

An interesting quote? "It seems very much as though Patricia Moore and the virus have become allies and conspired against the Common Man (how common can you get?) in avoiding colonizing. "Therefore, be it resolved that you — being the commonest us, do once again take up the cudgels and pinch-hit in the way of putting words into a column (any old words—like CAT DOG BOY YOU ETC.) and we'll run it tomorrow, thank you verrrrrry much."

Interesting ain't the word for it. What do you do when you come prancing airily up to your typewriter and catch the villain red-handed composing the aforementioned quote? And on your own typewriter, too?

It's far from strange to see similar notes or quotes or whatever you-want-to-call-them adding your typewriter, but this marked a first. What audacity one must possess, or be possessed by, to utilize Communist Man's only weapon against him!

Such verbal deprecations, though, are to absolutely and positively no avail. Woe is me, I'm faced with writing a substitute column — a sub-column. Not that that's so very bad. Indeed, it's quite an opportunity. But it's rough. You know how it is sometimes. You already have your course of action (?) planned and are just ready to begin.

Suddenly, some unexpected something hopelessly blocks your path. All your inspired thoughts vanish like pipe dreams. Well, perhaps it's just as well.

Still, your train of thought must quickly reciprocate and just as quickly proceed into the darkness of a new direction. You reach out into the blackness to grasp something worth something — or just SOMETHING. It's a unique situation. It's the only time that, even though you can't see it, everything's hopelessly tangled and securely knotted. Quite a problem, isn't it?

But the more you deplore your darkening predicament, the darker and more hopeless it becomes. Of deadline-timed necessity, you must courageously reach into the abyss and clutch something — anything. As your fingers close around the only tangible object you can find, you've installed the tiny light that will penetrate the deep blackness — just enough for what you so vitally need.

Finally you think you know just where to begin. There will definitely be a column tomorrow. It might even be a good one. You've hit the jackpot.

...and how! All of a sudden you're back to earth from your depressing, melancholic world of black and are simply flabbergasted to see all that glaring white column space filled with words — any old words, remember?

It just goes to show that, in so very few isolated cases, lamentations, properly timed, can be a definite help.

Quote . . .

"Whether one realizes it or not, advertising is perhaps the most wonderful development of the modern commercial age. It is the maker or breaker of business, big or little. It is the one factor of successful sales that is most apt to be overlooked by the merchant and businessman of small towns and cities." — Richland (La.) Beacon-News.

Other Editors Saying The Bar & World Court

(Wall Street Journal) A move to have the American Bar Association rescind its opposition to the Connally Reservation which limits jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice solely to international affairs was defeated by a close vote the other day in Chicago.

The vote has been hailed as a great "victory" by the adherents of the proposal to permit the World Court to decide what is and what is not a domestic matter. Instead of reserving that right to the United States alone, as the Connally Reservation now does.

The "victory," though, came only after the president of the Bar told the House of Delegates that he had private assurances that Senator Humphrey's resolution to withdraw the Connally safeguard would not come before the Senate this year. Since no such assurance would have been given if the supporters of World Court jurisdiction had been convinced their cause would prosper in the Senate, it is a hollow victory indeed.

Since the question will arise again both in the Bar and in the Senate, two issues are worth examining. One is the banner under which the World Court adherents march. It goes like this: "No one should be the judge in his own case."

A sound principle, indeed, but worthy of close examination in this particular context. This is much less an attempt to judge one's own case than it is a decision whether to accept the jurisdiction of a particular court. This is done all the time: a lawyer who thinks his client may suffer unduly in a hostile climate may ask for a change of venue—to another place and another court.

A man sued in a state court may seek the transfer of his case to a Federal court. This is common practice, as all lawyers know, and the lawyer who did not seek to "judge" in what jurisdiction his client's case would have its better chance would be derelict in his duty. If our domestic law gives some the right to "judge his case" by deciding which jurisdiction is preferable, is that too much to ask of our Government when the Constitution may be involved before the World Court?

We think not, and apparently a considerable number of lawyers think not, also, as the vote just the other day shows. The vote itself, viewed against the background of world government and the World Court, clearly indicates, we think, growing concern about U. S. sovereignty.

It is a difficult matter, always, for men to stand up before their fellows and admit mistakes. Yet some did the other day; some of the leaders who now support the Connally Reservation were against it 13 years ago. The two votes are significant. In 1947, the Bar's House of Delegates condemned the Connally Reservation by vote of 85 to 45 of a membership of 248. The vote the other day upheld the earlier objection by only seven votes—100 to 93. Thus, supporters of the World Court gained 15 votes and opponents gained 48 votes. That, too, can hardly be called a "victory."

The American Bar Association's House of Delegates will meet again in six months. There is time for serious reflection, then, by both lawyers and Senators on a most serious matter. It may be that granting the World Court the right to determine whether Federal law, state statutes and village ordinances are matters of international concern is the ideal way to promote world peace.

Frankly, we have our doubts. But we haven't many doubts about what will best promote the interests of this Republic.

Bell Is Dropping Letter System

By ELMER ROESSNER

Good-bye Pica-dilly, farewell Temple-bar, au revoir MAIN. AT&T, in its Bell Telephone Magazine, says that letter prefixes are on the way out. No more Murray Hill no more Cadillac, no more Hollywood.

Letters were dropped and numbers substituted on a trial basis in Wichita Falls, Tex., in January, 1958. "The trial showed that customers liked the system," that they dialed numbers more quickly and with fewer errors, and found it easier to "use." William A. Sinks, AT&T engineer, reports in the Bell Magazine.

He concedes that the ability of customers to remember "all-numeral numbers" is "difficult to evaluate through a field trial." For example, can a person remember 468-2148? Or 468-2148? At present, Bell engineers are recommending that all offices not yet converted to two-letter, five-number calling convert to all-number calling. This will be done in the first large city, Omaha, this September.

Eventually, letters will disappear from the dial entirely. Only the numbers will remain and testing is under way of punch-button numbers as replacement for dials. The buttons are arranged with numbers thusly:

Instead of dialing work 2-9237, the caller will push buttons 9, 6, 2, 9, 2, 3, 7. In that order. AT&T doesn't explain what will happen if somebody pushes all buttons at once but whatever blows up, it's probable the pusher will lose his dime.

The Bell Magazine says that with all-digit dialing, international telephoning will be possible. Many countries use or are planning to use all-number systems, including Venezuela, Australia, Japan and Germany. The humorous possibilities in testy old gents being awakened at 2 a.m. by someone who says, "So sorry, please!" are enormous.

BROADENING THE RANGE At present, the magazine reports, only 540 central office codes are possible under the present plan; with all numerals there could be 800. That's largely because there are now no letters with 1 and 0.

It concedes what phone users have long known: "Customers and operators continue to misspell names, e.g.: MU instead of ME for MEYER, LI instead of LY for LYRIC. Similarly, confusion when dialing between the letter 'O' and zero, and the letter 'I' and the numeral one, present the same problem." (That confusion has helped fatten AT&T dividends for years!)

The use of all digits, the magazine says, will simplify the spread of DDD, which stands for Direct Distance Dialing. This is in operation in much of the country and will soon

Upper Crust Status

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING

FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC. Society, spelled with a capital S, is that element in the social structure which declares itself to be superior to others by birth and position. In Europe, Society is established by the status of birth; that is, royalty and the nobility are remnants of feudalism and are recognized as such. Many European countries have rid themselves of kings and queens and the nobility which persists often has neither legal nor social status. A Russian prince, for instance, is an anomaly. Most Russian princes, dukes, etc., are no longer Russian and none of them are titled, as Russia only recognizes one distinction, Tovarish. In other European countries, former legal titles continue to have social if not economic value. A prince, duke or count might have married a show-girl or a manicurist, but she regards herself as a princess and gives herself feudal airs.

In the United States we are free of feudalism and therefore of titles of nobility. Our Society was composed by the children of the older families marrying the new rich. Thus, the Vanderbilts, who descend from a Staten Island Dutch ferryman who went in for railroading, married into very old and social New York families and became themselves leaders of Society. The Rockefellers, who descend from a Cleveland bookkeeper, never bothered about Society and have done very well without it.

The Income Tax and the Inheritance Tax have done much to change to Society because money is hard to keep. All that those who claim to be Society have left is status, but even in this respect, Society is being challenged by Cafe Society, a vulgarization of status. Cafe Society is made up neither of scions of the old families nor the new rich. Anyone can manage to get in if he knows the man at the door. As everybody in Cafe Society calls everybody else by his first name, friendships are formed, persons become intimate, and are readily forgotten. As those in Cafe Society wish to be noticed more actively than the older families, they get into the gossip columns more often. A dozen mentions and one is made. But what does such making really mean? It involves little more than being invited to a few parties.

What makes me think of all this is a television program, supervised by David Susskind, dealing with the "Upper Crust." By the Upper Crust was meant those who possess the status of being in Society. Ward McAllister, who created "the 400" of a former generation, would not have accepted anyone on Susskind's program as among the 400, except one guest, Colonel Serge Obolensky who was once an authentic prince.

Certainly if McAllister could manufacture a "400," Susskind can recognize an "Upper Crust." But what is the basis for selection? McAllister chose the rich and famous, the well-bred, those of ancient lineage in this country. It was a snobbish, exclusive Society designed to keep itself such. Parents in it aspired that their children should marry within its ranks and every device of discrimination and segregation was set up to maintain its exclusiveness. Despite its obviously undemocratic nature, Americans, of the time, relished its existence and paid it tribute by being shocked when one of Susskind's Upper Crust is nothing like that. With the exception of Serge Obolensky, none of his subjects were particularly notable as members of either the old or the new Society.

It is all very amusing because it only proves that even in the most egalitarian of societies, there are always men and women who try to set themselves up as superior and even look ridiculous in the attempt. Today, two factors enter into status — one, the willingness to spend night after night in better saloons being seen — just being seen and noticed. The other factor is association with an aggressive clique that pushes into publicity. These cliques are better for women than for men, particularly women who are willing to accept patrons. The men in such cliques

Awards Are Announced In ECC Student Auditions

Tasker Polk of Greenville, sophomore at East Carolina College, emerged as a double winner in the State Student Auditions of the N. C. Federation of Music Clubs held at East Carolina College during the weekend. Successful competitors, all pianists, who were awarded scholarships in the auditions here have just been announced by George E. Perry of the East Carolina music faculty, chairman of the event.

Polk received the Marie Morrissey Keith Scholarship of $250 a year for two years and the Williamson Scholarship of $125 given by the Northeastern District of the N. C. Federation of Music Clubs.

As winner of the Marie Morrissey Keith Scholarship, Polk will make a tape recording of his performance as a pianist for competition in the Southeastern Regional Contest to be held at Spartanburg, S. C., later this month. This contest is preliminary to national auditions. Polk, pupil of Robert Carter of the East Carolina music department, has won other honors which place him at the forefront of the state's young pianists. In 1958 he won the Musically Advanced State Solo competition. In 1959 he received top award in the Student Musicians' Competition of the N. C. Federation of Music Clubs. Last fall he was selected to appear as soloist with the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra, and on May 8 he will again appear with the orchestra, performing the Liszt A Major Concerto in the annual concerto program sponsored by the college department of music.

Isabel Fourgusan of Duke University was recipient of the Williams Piano Scholarship of $125, given by Lena Williams of Chapel Hill. Betty Bullock of Hamlet, N. C., was awarded the Perry Piano Scholarship of $50, given by George E. Perry of East Carolina.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James K. Polk of Warrenton.

Find 5 Children Left By Parents

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)—Five children found hungry and cold in a shack with the front door nailed shut were declared neglected and dependent and placed in foster homes Tuesday.

Investigating officers said the children, ranging up to 7 years of age, were using newspapers for fuel in a stove. The only food in the house was a few pieces of fried bread and four eggs.

At a hearing, the father, Woodward Miller, a Negro farm hand, said that he and the mother had separated and that she had brought the children to Corpus Christi. Mrs. Miller, who was later found in a phone booth, told the court she had not been working.

Bulldozers Help To Save Indians

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP)—Rescue crews using bulldozers battled through six-foot snowdrifts today to reach 30 Navajo Indian families reported trapped near Ft. Defiance.

A spokesman for the Navajo Tribal Council said 15 families are stranded near Crystal on the western slopes of the Choiska Mountains, about 20 miles north of Ft. Defiance. The others are in the sawmill area, about 25 miles west.

The spokesman said some have been marooned more than a week. All were reported low on food. Their sheep and cattle were said to be suffering.

Up to 30 inches of snow are reported on the ground in most areas of the 16-million-acre reservation.

Curiosity Broke Up The Burglary

MELROSE, N.M. (AP)—The curiosity of a boy broke up a bank burglary Tuesday.

The boy, walking home in the early morning darkness, saw a light flickering in the First National Bank. He looked through a window. One of two burglars threw a crowbar at him.

The boy, unidentified at the request of the FBI, fled, bleeding from glass cuts. He ran home and called police. The burglars left without any loot.

Neither Pensions Nor Pity Termed A Real Substitute

By EARL AYKROID CHICAGO (AP)—"Neither pensions, charitable assistance nor pity can substitute for the sweet dignity of a productive life." So says handsome Dwight D. Gullfoff Jr., crippled 37-year-old executive named "Handicapped American of the Year" by the President's Committee on Employment of the Physically Handicapped (PCEPH).

Regrets Furore On Cranberries

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The man who started all the fuss about tainted cranberries says he feels so sorry for the growers "I now drink cranberry juice for breakfast instead of tomato juice." D. B. T. Shaw of the U.S. Agriculture Department disclosed this at a reception Tuesday night where he was honor guest. It was Shaw who first noted that parts of the 1959 cranberry crop from Oregon and Washington were contaminated by a weed killer that can produce cancer in rats.

Shaw said there was no doubt the weed killer was being used improperly but he did not believe it was dangerous. "Tests proved that a person would have to eat 350,000 pounds of cranberries a day to endanger himself to cancer," he said.

The Jivaro Indians in Ecuador shrink a human head to the size of an orange as a token of their victories in battle.

On May 5 President Eisenhower is to present Gullfoff an award at a meeting of the PCEPH in Washington. The citation is for outstanding help given by Gullfoff to scores of physically handicapped despite his own impairment.

He has received numerous other citations for his efforts over the last 10 years.

An aerial photographer for the Air Force in World War II, he suffered spinal meningitis and polio in service and spent two years in a hospital. Confined to a wheel chair he found it impossible to obtain employment.

In 1950, Gullfoff and about 60 other paraplegics decided to pool their resources and set up their own business.

"We decided from the start that we were not going to weave rugs or make baskets, or indulge in any of the usual workshop enterprises," Gullfoff says.

The group founded Paraplegics Manufacturing Co. in a one-story factory building in suburban Franklin Park. The firm assembles mechanical, electrical and electronic parts.

Gullfoff became president of the company. Today the company has about 100 workers. Only two are not handicapped. Most of the others work from wheel chairs.

In addition to paraplegics, there are the blind, polio victims, amputees, cardiacs, the deaf and mute, and a number with progressive disabilities such as muscular dystrophy and multiple sclerosis.

With the exception of 1954 and 1955, the company has shown a profit each year. The last several years it has paid dividends on its stock, most of which is held by employees.

Gullfoff says the company now is doing a $750,000-a-year volume of business and expects to reach a million by the end of this year.

Wage scales at Paraplegics Manufacturing Co. equal those of general industry for like jobs. The productivity and workmanship exceeds industrial norms, Gullfoff says.

"Charity can be a form of slavery," the executive says. "The overwhelming majority of physically handicapped men and

Little Change In Flyway Count

WASHINGTON (AP)—Waterfowl on the wintering grounds of the Atlantic Flyway number about the same as last year, the Fish and Wildlife Service reported today.

The annual survey was conducted in the Atlantic coastal states plus West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Vermont early in January.

Atlantic Flyway findings were considerably better than those for the Central and Pacific flyways. A 42 per cent decrease was recorded for wintering flocks in the mountain and prairie states which make up the Central Flyway, with the ducks down 47 per cent and geese up 17 per cent. In the Central Flyway are Kansas, Wyoming, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas, the east coast and interior of Mexico and part of Canada.

An 18 per cent decrease in ducks was found in the Pacific Flyway, along with a 4 per cent drop in goose populations and a 17 per cent drop for coots. This area includes Alaska, Washington, Oregon, the west coast of Mexico, Idaho, Nevada, California, Arizona, Utah and a portion of Canada.

Results of the study in the Mississippi Flyway will be made public later this week. This will be followed by a summary of the Continental situation.

CHAPTER 35

"I think Don Luis is all right," Johnny Hume told Walt Hollenger. "At least I saw tracks that I took to be that big, old spay-footed horse of his. They were heading off across the short-cut trail to your place, and going fast. Likely he'll be back with Rusty McGowan before long."

Walt had finished tying up the sheriff and started on the deputy.

"It wasn't only Don Luis I was worrying about. I was thinking of Judy Rayburn too. She went off with Dwight Mitchell."

Johnny grunted. "Take the advice of one old man to another," he said sourly. "You're wasting your time worrying about any dame. I never saw one yet that couldn't lie her way out of the back room of hell."

"So that's the way it is?"

"That's the way it is!" Johnny's young voice was hard and bitter. "And don't ask me questions. I'll get over it, I reckon, but it sure galls me to know I been played for a sucker by a—"

"Murderess!" Walt finished for him.

Johnny winced. "I guess so. Bella sent me around to warn you that Dwight was coming, then had him open up on me the first chance he got! I reckon I knew what she was all the time, only I tried to keep myself from thinking about it!"

Walt had most of the picture now, and mindful of Johnny's feelings he didn't ask any more questions. He finished tying Slim in his time, then stepped across the sheriff's horse.

"Take it easy, Johnny," he said. "I got them tied up so they aren't going to make you any trouble—but keep an eye on don. Probably Rusty and Don Luis will be along pretty soon."

"I'll be all right. If you see Bella, tell her I'm still alive—and able to talk."

Walt had known, as soon as he had time to think it over, where Judy had gone with Dwight Mitchell. There was only one dickering she could make with the young heir to the Sombbrero that would interest him now.

She must have promised to help him find Pete Rayburn's missing papers, and in so turning over to him any new will that might have been made she was at the same time giving up her own chance to inherit the ranch. He rode fast spurring the sheriff's big horse mercilessly. Where the short-cut trail cut off out of the wagon road, and over a low hump-back of piny ridge towards his ranch, Walt looked across the wide valley and in the distance saw five riders coming at a fast lope.

Rusty McGowan was way out in the lead, and it looked like the Hampton brothers and Wade Bennett were close behind. Don Luis on his old white horse, Walt took off his hat and waved, hoping they would recognize him, and know he was safe, but he kept on going.

He had reined up his horse below the old Don's house and was tying him to the hitch-rack when he heard the first shot.

His long legs carried him up the crudely laid rock steps at a buck-jumping run. Two more shots followed in quick succession, and then there came a woman's high, wailing, heart-broken cry.

Walt flung open the kitchen door. For a moment the overturned table and chairs blocked off his view of everything but Joe Gamel's body. He heard a girl sob, and he took a quick step forward.

Bella Gamel was sitting on the floor with Dwight Mitchell's head in her lap. Tears were streaking down her cheeks, and her shoulders rocked back and forth in a paroxysm of grief.

Around the other edge of the table a dark, tousled head poked itself up cautiously. Then Judy Rayburn jumped to her feet with a little cry. "Walt! Oh, Walt—you're safe!"

His arm went around her and held her tight to him, but he kept his eyes on Bella and Dwight.

"You all right?"

"Yes."

He left her then to go and stand over Dwight. Bella looked up at him, her face empty and desolate. "I shot him," she said brokenly. "I didn't mean to, but I did."

"She tried to shoot me," Judy said quietly. "Dwight saved me. He threw himself in front of me."

Bella bowed her head in her hands again. "I never dreamed he would do that!"

"Why, Bella?" Walt asked quietly. "Why all these killings? Pete Rayburn thought a lot of you. You'd have been taken care of all your life."

She sat as if she hadn't heard him, her shoulders bent, her breath catching with soft sobs. Finally she raised her head.

"Now that Dwight's gone—nothing else matters any more. You won't understand, but I may as well tell you. I never had anything. I was nobody, worse than nobody. I was dirty Joe Gamel's daughter. Dwight fell in love with me—he was going to make me mistress of the Sombbrero some day. Can you guess what that meant to me—me, Bella Gamel?"

There was a quick clatter of running steps on the stones outside and Rusty McGowan, Wade Bennett and Don Luis crowded into the room. Don Luis gave a choked cry. He went and laid a hand briefly on Bella's shoulder, then quickly withdrew it.

Bella didn't even seem to be aware of his presence. She went on talking, in a low, lifeless monotone.

"Dwight began to get tired of me—and I had to do something to hold him. I had learned a lot about drugs from my father, so I slipped some in Dwight's food. Then he'd do the things I wanted him to. Then he'd love me again."

"I wanted him to be afraid to leave me, afraid not to marry me. But I knew if Pete Rayburn died quickly—and Dwight didn't marry me soon—that he never would. So I put slow poison in Uncle Pete's food, until he began to get suspicious. He had a letter from Judy, and we knew he had talked some of making a new will."

"Then Judy came. Uncle Pete liked her—and I had to act fast. Uncle Pete quarrelled with Walt. I saw the letter he was writing and it seemed like a good chance. So I killed him."

She sighed deeply. "I thought I could manage everything—but it didn't work. Dwight was afraid of me—but he began to hate me, too. I—I really loved him. But you folks wouldn't understand about that—how a real woman would do anything to keep what is rightfully hers."

Don Luis looked down at her coldly. "No. We can understand not having money, but we cannot understand good people turning evil to get it as you have!"

Bella's head flashed up. "You're a great one to talk!" she said angrily. "You're Don Luis Morales! You're used to having people bow and scrape for the privilege of being asked to drink a glass of wine with you."

Don Luis shook his head at her. "I used to admire you a great deal, Bella. Nobody hated you."

Bella looked at him. "Will you bring me a drink of water?"

He gave her a courtly bow and limped over to a bucket of water on a table in one corner of the room.

"I could think," Wade Bennett said slowly, "that Dwight would have killed you long ago. I can remember when Dwight seemed like a nice kid. I couldn't figure out why he'd changed."

Bella stroked Dwight's curly blond hair. She raised her head with a touch of arrogance.

"He was afraid of me! They all were—Clint and Miguel Pineda, too. I had to plan everything!"

She took the glass of water Don Luis brought her, slipped a small white tablet from her breast pocket and washed it down with water before anyone could make a move to stop her.

The story comes to a conclusion here tomorrow.

"The Star Spangled Banner," was a lawyer.

Higher Interest Rates Provoke Three Views

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The battle over higher interest rates raging in and out of Congress has brought up three views:

1. Costly money benefits only the bankers and other lenders and hasn't led the individual to save any more than formerly.
2. It hurts everyone who wants to borrow, whether for a new home, a car, or a new outfit for Easter.
3. It discourages expansion of business and thus slows down economic growth and the formation of more jobs.

Let's look at just one phase of this argument, leaving the others for the time to the debaters before Congress—the question of whether higher interest rates have proved an incentive for more individual saving.

Some congressmen are saying it hasn't done so. Some bankers are saying it certainly has.

The bankers admit there has been a lot of switching from one form of saving to another, and in the switching some banks have been hurt. So has the U. S. Treasury, which found many holders of savings bonds cashing them in to invest in something that was paying better.

"One of the surprising things in the banking business over the postwar period has been the responsiveness and sensitivity of savers to offered interest rates," the First National City Bank of New York notes in its March letter.

It holds that the slowing of growth of savings institutions last year was actually due to higher interest rates—higher, that is, in other forms of savings. It specifically mentions the increasingly attractive rates of the U. S. Treasury securities.

Individual holdings of marketable U. S. securities increased by seven billion dollars. Some of this increase was due to switching from other form of savings. But the bank economists insist that much of it was new savings, new investments.

Individuals also increased their holdings of state and local government securities by around 3½ billion dollars and their ownership of corporate bonds and notes by 100 million dollars.

Commercial banks, mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, insurance reserves and pension funds also showed gains, even if the pace of some was slower than in 1958.

Felt Sorry For Him; But Now—

The man began work at 8 p.m. Monday night. Five-and-a-half hours later Sheppard looked for him.

Sheppard is still looking today—and also for the 33,000 the man took with him when he left.

Air Force Drops Super-Atlas Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has canceled plans to shoot a Super-Atlas nearly 9,000 miles from Cape Canaveral past the tip of Africa over the Indian Ocean. One unconfirmed report was that President Eisenhower personally turned down the idea.

The Air Force has had the Super-Atlas missile on a launching pad at Canaveral for days. Actual firing times were set several times and then postponed because of weather conditions.

When the plans became known in high Washington circles, the State Department reportedly pressed the point that no public notice had been given so ships could avoid the impact area. Air Force officials argued this wasn't necessary because the rocket was intended to burn up in the atmosphere at the end of the trip and so would pose no danger.

The unconfirmed report said the matter was brought to the President's attention during his current South American tour, and he turned thumbs down, at least for the present.

The long shot, if it had gone off as planned, would have traveled more than 2,000 miles further than any previous U.S. missile. It also would have outdistanced recent Soviet missile shots from central Asia into the Pacific Ocean. The Soviet Union claimed a range of 7,760 miles for one of these shots and said the missile landed within 1 1/4 miles of its target.

No reasons were learned for the top-level cancellation, but speculation centered on these ideas:

1. Such a military demonstration might strike a jarring note during the President's Latin American goodwill tour.
2. The President noted at a Jan. 13 news conference that the United States has always given advance warning of missile tests over international waters. The Soviets gave advance notice on their Pacific shots, and outlined the target area.
3. Such a long-range Atlas flight might be viewed abroad as a propaganda stunt, trying to outdo the Soviets in a distance race.

The Atlas already is operational in small quantities at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Normally its range is about 6,000 miles. The longest announced shot has been 6,325 miles.

Conant Calls For Aiding Exceptional Students

By G.K. HODENFIELD
AP Education Writer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—An exceptional student should be encouraged with all the enthusiasm that a high school coach uses on an outstanding athlete, Dr. James B. Conant said today.

The famous educator emphasized however, that no student should be required to take any academic course not required of all students, just as no athlete should be required to play football or basketball.

"It's a job for the counselor or guidance officer," he said in a 22-minute interview.

"The academically talented student should be urged to take all the elective mathematics and science courses possible during his high school years.

"Allowance can be made for the very exceptional student who has truly creative, artistic ability and who might well be advised to go on to a conservatory or an art school," he said.

Conant, in an address prepared for the annual convention of the National Assn. of Secondary-School Principals, told nearly 4,000 delegates:

"If a basketball coach sees a boy well over six feet tall with good coordination, he will urge the boy to try out for the basketball team for his own good and for the welfare of the team and school.

"The same reasoning should hold true for a boy or girl with talent in mathematics and science. His or her own welfare and that of the nation call for the development of this talent. I would also make the same statement about students with talent for foreign languages."

Conant told a reporter that in some areas, particularly the well-to-do suburbs, the problem is not so much to encourage the able student as it is to dissuade the overly ambitious parent.

Some of these parents, he said, "are determined that their children are going on to college and become doctors or lawyers, without taking into consideration that their children just don't have the capabilities."

TV Series On Schools Slated

The School Story, a national series of television programs about school problems and achievements, is scheduled to be telecast each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. over local station WNCT beginning March 6.

Produced by the National Education, the 30-minute films explore a variety of educational issues ranging from how first graders learn reading skills to the curriculum program of a comprehensive high school to the technical labs of a great university.

The Pitt County chapter of the N. C. Education Association and Pitt teachers have urged all parents and civic-minded citizens to see and hear these programs that give insight into today's education.

Even His Dog Voiced Protest

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—See is blind and Mady is a German shepherd.

State Senator Charles M. See usually brings Mady with him into the State House during the Legislature.

In a heated debate Tuesday an adversary's shouted: "I move this bill be recommitted to the finance committee."

"War! war!" protested Mady. "Even the dog knows the motion is no good." See said gleefully.

A Lot Of Testimony Heard On Lipstick

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of women in America have an interest in what's going on in a high ceilinged hearing room in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It's all about their lipsticks.

But you'd hardly know it if you popped in to listen to some of the 1,000 pages of testimony gathered since Feb. 17.

Mostly, the talks is about a special strain of albino rats and what happened to them in Food and Drug Administration laboratory tests.

That can be pretty technical, it turns out. Toxicity, parts per million, spleens, body versus organ weights are words frequently heard. Once in a while familiar things like pepper, beeswax or castor oil are mentioned.

There's so little interest that FDA hearing examiner William J. Risteau, who has charge of the proceedings, can't always get a room in which to hold forth.

Risteau plaintively told the attorneys he hopes they wind things up today because "I don't have a room for Thursday."

The audience mostly consists of FDA specialists. They seem to know what's going on.

Two housewives have been among the regulars, sitting in on behalf of a new organization here "Federation of Homemakers." They listen as witnesses drone through data on nine FDA color tests.

FDA's point in all this is that 14 coal tar colors used in lipsticks can no longer be considered harmless. Seven of the dyes have been fed to rats with sorrowful results. Now, unless the hearings disprove the findings, the agency is required under the law to halt use of the colors that go into most of America's lipsticks.

Industry lawyers say the tests don't prove that any harm can come to the lady who splashes a bit of color on her lips a few times a day and may swallow a minute quantity of dye.

Now that the 10-day-old hearings are coming to a close, one strange feature stands out: Little has been heard from those most affected — the women, and the rats.

Traffic Death Rate Still Mounts

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's traffic deaths rose 4 per cent in January compared to January 1959, the National Safety Council reports.

The increase, from 2,760 to 2,870, centered in six populous states, the council said Tuesday, that collectively accounted for 192 more deaths in January this year.

The six states are Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, New Jersey, and South Carolina.

"We can only hope that this increase will sound an alarm to drivers, pedestrians and traffic enforcement agencies for extra effort to hold down the toll," said Howard Pyle, council president.

Industry lawyers say the tests don't prove that any harm can come to the lady who splashes a bit of color on her lips a few times a day and may swallow a minute quantity of dye.

Hodges Believes Race Relations Being Damaged

RALEIGH (AP)— Gov. Hodges feels current Southwide lunch counter protests, sparked by the tortuous civil rights debate in the Senate are harming race relations.

The governor added, however, he felt the state's traditional moderation on racial matters would bring it through the current wave of protests against segregated eating facilities.

Hodges discussed the racial movement Tuesday at his first news conference since he returned from a three-week vacation in Florida.

He said he was sorry to see the lunch counter protests, sparked by Negro college students, spread.

"I don't think it helps to get a gang of folks together to force the issue," he commented. "I am very sorry to see it happen."

In response to questions, the governor said there was little he could do about participation by students of state-supported colleges.

He said, "The administration can't, under the law, tell boards of trustees what to do."

Industry lawyers say the tests don't prove that any harm can come to the lady who splashes a bit of color on her lips a few times a day and may swallow a minute quantity of dye.

Now that the 10-day-old hearings are coming to a close, one strange feature stands out: Little has been heard from those most affected — the women, and the rats.

Traffic Death Rate Still Mounts

CHICAGO (AP) — The nation's traffic deaths rose 4 per cent in January compared to January 1959, the National Safety Council reports.

The increase, from 2,760 to 2,870, centered in six populous states, the council said Tuesday, that collectively accounted for 192 more deaths in January this year.

The six states are Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, New Jersey, and South Carolina.

"We can only hope that this increase will sound an alarm to drivers, pedestrians and traffic enforcement agencies for extra effort to hold down the toll," said Howard Pyle, council president.

Kansas Moves Into Tie For Big Eight NCAA Berth

Class A Tourney

BETHEL — The opening round of the District 1 Class "A" tournament is set to begin here tonight with a double-header on tap.

Pantego, Beaufort County champs and tourney favorites, meet Hazlebury of Hertford County in a 7:00 game. The final contest tonight will send Grifton, one of the host clubs, against Gatesville, the Gates County representative. The final game is scheduled to begin at 8:30.

Tomorrow night, Chiefton will meet Moyock and Oak City will battle West Bertie.

The winner of the four-day tournament will advance to the state finals next week.

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer
Kansas State and Kansas, those two arch-rivals of the midlands, are so well matched this time in their annual run for the Big Eight Conference basketball title they may wind up settling a whole season of scuffling with a draw from a hat.

Kansas, beating Oklahoma 63-52 Tuesday night, pulled into a first-place tie with K-State at 94—each with one game to go at home against much-whipped Nebraska. If both win, as expected, they'll be co-champs and the conference's berth in the NCAA tournament will be determined by a draw since the teams split their regular season two-game series. The Kansas Jayhawks, after their first Big Eight title since Wilt (The Stilt) Chamberlain quit after his junior season in 1957, have come back into contention behind the improved play of sophomore Wayne Hightower and Jerry Gardner, and veteran Bill Bridges.

They were consistency personified Tuesday night—Bridges and Gardner scoring 15 points and Hightower, who comes from Chamberlain's Overbrook High in Philadelphia, adding 14. The loss was Oklahoma's fifth in 13 conference starts and bounced the Sooners out of anything but a long-shot chance at a share of the title. Streaking St. Bonaventure, getting 59 points from brothers Tom and Sam Stih, ran its winning string to 15 in a 115-56 rout of St. Vincent (Pa.); unranked Seattle snapped Idaho State's winning streak at 17 with an 89-53 shellacking and Loyola of Los Angeles clinched at least a tie for the West Coast Athletic Conference title by defeating Pepperdine 76-60 in other key games.

Elsewhere: LaSalle, still in the running for a bid to the National Invitation Tournament, ran its record to 16-5 with an 82-77 decision over Scranton as all five regulars hit double figures; Duquesne closed its home season with a 73-62 whipping of Fordham; Niagara beat Colgate 92-82 as Al Butler, the nation's No. 3 scorer, hit 28 points; Marquette rallied to beat Xavier of Ohio 67-61; and Washington of St. Louis won a 2-0 forfeit from the University of Chicago.

After the teams had played a 29-29 first half tie, Chicago coach Joe Stampf refused to let his team return to the court, charging poor officiating.

Greenville Industrial Tourney Open Tonight

The Greenville Industrial League concludes its 1959-60 basketball program this week with a two-day tournament starting tonight at the Junior High Gymnasium.

Tonight's action will pit the tournament favorite, Carolina Dairy (15-6), against last place Varina Wholesale Company (1-20) in the second game and The Jewel Box (14-7) meeting Cozart's Auto-Supply (12-9) in the first game starting at 7:15.

Winners of tonight's action will meet in the finals tomorrow night. The losers will play a consolation game prior to the championship contest tomorrow night.

The basketball league has been sponsored by the Greenville Recreation Department with the aforementioned firms entering games. According to recreation officials, the league has been better-balanced this season than in years past.

Regular season winner, Carolina Dairy, and The Jewel Box are picked to win opening round games and meet in the finals tomorrow night.

The public is invited to attend the tournament action and there will be no charge for any of the games.

Big Ten Not Expected To Accept Bowl Pact

CHICAGO (AP)—The Big Ten will not enter another Rose Bowl agreement unless some last-minute vote switching is done at the conference's business meeting in Columbus this weekend.

This was virtually assured Tuesday when Northwestern announced it will vote against participation.

Northwestern's stand leaves the league deadlocked 5-5 in a matter which needs at least a 6-4 majority to be carried. Others who are against the post-season game are Minnesota, Ohio State, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Michigan, Michigan State, Purdue, Iowa and Indiana are in favor of another contract.

However, defeating the proposal to continue in the Pasadena classic does not necessarily mean Big Ten teams cannot compete in the Rose Bowl. There is a clause which allows a team to accept a bid to the Rose Bowl on an individual basis. To strike out the clause, a 6-4 vote is needed.

This matter also will be brought up at the meetings beginning Thursday and unless one of the schools in favor of participation switches its vote, the loophole clause will remain. However, there is belief that one of the schools will switch its vote and the contradictory clause will be eliminated from the Big Ten code.

The Rose Bowl committee in Pasadena apparently is not worried. Lathrop Lelishman, head of the committee, said he expects the game to be improved rather than hurt.

The Tournament of Roses has a contract with the Athletic Assn. of Western Universities which provides for the association to come up with a means of selecting an Eastern opponent.

Lelishman said there is nothing to prevent individual Big Ten schools from accepting Rose Bowl bids and added he hopes some will. The AAUW is to announce a plan for choosing an Eastern opponent by March 31.

Moore Is Top Boxer Of Month

NEW YORK (AP)—Davy Moore of Springfield, Ohio, is Ring magazine's "fighter of the month."

The world featherweight champion received the award for his eighth-round knockout of former European champion Sergio Caprari of Italy in their non-title bout recently in Caracas, Venezuela.

Moore was the only world champion to get into action during the last few weeks, so there was little disturbance in the Ring magazine monthly ratings. Two gains occurred in the heavyweight division. Eddie Machen of Redding, Calif., moved into fourth place in the list of challengers through his knockout triumph over Billy Hunter last Friday at New York's Madison Square Garden. Alex Miteff of Argentina, jumped from tenth to eighth after knockout-out Jose Georgetti.

The flyweight rankings also underwent some juggling. Johnny Caldwell of Ireland moved from tenth to sixth on his victory over Risto Luukkonen of Finland. Ray Pacheco of Reno, Nev., grabbed the No. 10 spot after beating Ramon Arias of Venezuela, formerly ranked No. 3.

The middleweight division saw Dick Tiger of Nigeria shift from eighth to seventh after his victory over Gene Armstrong, moving Carmen Basilo to eighth. Also, Joey Giardello, matched to fight Gene Fullmer for the NBA crown, advanced from sixth to fifth, swapping with Spider Webb.

Fireworks To Start In ACC Tourney Tomorrow Nite

Saddle Club

Dr. Joe Bateman of Greenville will be the guest speaker at the Saddle Club meeting scheduled for tomorrow night at the Guaranty Bank building at 7:30.

Dr. Bateman, local veterinarian, will speak on the "Care of Horses." A question and answer period will follow the speech.

C. E. Steinmeyer, president of the newly-organized club, emphasized yesterday that new members are still being accepted and one does not have to own a horse to become a member of the club. At the present time, according to Steinmeyer, no dues or initiation fees are required of club members.

The club now operates with 25 members and "has been moving along nicely." Plans to sponsor a horse show on April 3 are underway with the benefits to go to the Greenville Rescue Squad.

Tomorrow night's meeting will be held on the third floor of Guaranty Bank's new building in the Community Room.

Williams Nears End Of Career

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—Aging, ailing Ted Williams, the last of the 400 hitters, may be through with baseball.

The old hitting master, who will be 42 in August, showed up for spring training Tuesday with the four announcement that baseball's most famous pain in the neck may force him into retirement.

"I guess there is considerable doubt whether or not I'll be able to play this year," he said. "I'm going to test things out here and then make up my mind."

Ted suffered the ailment, a muscle inflammation of his back and neck, in spring training here last season. He was bothered by it all season long and his batting average slipped below .300 for the first time in his career. His .254 average pulled his lifetime mark down three points to .346.

"I had hoped the pain would go away with rest and some exercise during the off-season," Williams said. "It hasn't gotten any better."

"I decided to come out here and give it a try anyhow. I figured the hot sun might take it out of me. If it doesn't, there's nothing left for me to do but retire."

Williams, the oldest active player in the majors, is starting his 22nd year with the Red Sox. In that period, with time out for World War II and the Korean War, he has won the American League batting title six times, the home run crown four times and led the league in runs batted in four times. His most outstanding achievement was a .406 batting average in 1941.

He took a 30-minute workout Tuesday, donning a uniform to do some running and throwing.

No Mystery, He Was Married

MESA, Ariz. (AP)—The mystery of missing second baseman Tony Taylor of the Chicago Cubs has been solved.

Taylor, who failed to report Monday when the rest of the squad assembled, sent the following wire to Vice President John Holland: "I get married report late 4 day (signed) Tony."

Lakers Have Edge For Play-offs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
With the top three playoff spots in the National Basketball Assn.'s Eastern Division and the first two in the Western sewn up, Minneapolis Lakers and Cincinnati Royals now go about the business of settling the last playoff berth.

Neither the Lakers, in third place, nor the Royals, in fourth, could gain an advantage Tuesday night. Detroit beat Cincinnati 108-106 and St. Louis won over Minneapolis 109-101 in a doubleheader at St. Louis.

The Royals have only three games left and trail the Lakers by 3 1/2. But Minneapolis still has six to play and could blow its playoff chances. The two clubs play each other twice more this year.

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — Ralph Bilbrey, 25, was sentenced to ten days in jail for being drunk in jail. Judge Walter Tanner first had allowed Bilbrey to serve a public intoxication term on weekends but Bilbrey kept showing up at the jail drunk.

Torre Predicts Brave Pennant

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—You can take it from Frank Torre that there will be a left-handed first baseman playing regularly for the Milwaukee Braves.

"It will be Frank Torre," Torre predicted when he reported for practice at the Braves training camp Tuesday, four days ahead of schedule.

"With me on first base, the Braves can win the pennant."

The 28-year-old Torre said he was confident he could fight off veteran Joe Adcock for a regular job and help his teammates regain the pennant.

Torre played in 137 games in 1957 and 139 in 1958, alternating frequently with Adcock. He batted .309 in 1958 but last year slipped to .228 in 115 games and Adcock was used more often than Torre.

Adcock, who throws and bats right-handed, hit .292 and had 76 runs batted in in 1959, playing in 115 games.

Manager Charlie Dressen said it will be tough choosing between Adcock and Torre.

"We'll just have to wait and see," he said.

NAIA Stars

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Five schools are represented on the first team of the District 26 National Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics, all-star basketball squad announced today.

Making up the first five are Rick Howe of Appalachian, Danny Sewell of High Point, Ken Norman of Lenoir Rhyne, Ike Riddick of East Carolina and Carl Short of Newberry.

Appalachian and Lenoir Rhyne repeated on the second five by placing Don King and Billy Reecer in that order. The other three selected by the coaches for the second team were Trap Hart of Wofford, Dave Jones of Western Carolina and Dick Knox of Atlantic Christian College.

Honorable mention was awarded to Charles Gallagher, Newberry; Joe Pugh, Pembroke State; Bob Stratton, Presbyterian; Doug Chalk, Catawba; Lawrence Clayton, East Carolina; and Thurston Frye, Pfeiffer.

Rifle Club Wins Match

Greenville's Junior Rifle Club in its first competitive shooting match posted a one-sided 1,895-1,071 victory over the Rocky Mount club's marksmen in a recent match in Rocky Mount Army Reserve Training Center.

Ten club members and five instructors made the trip. Rocky Mount will return the match at the Reserve Training Center here March 12 at 2 p.m.

Members of the local National Rifle Association chapter in the match were Randy Whitehurst, Jack Poley, Robert Moore, Jim Gilliam, Lanny Smith, Tommy Harbin, Phillip Savage, Joe Gaston, Sonny Taylor, and Clayton Thomas.

UNC Cage Fans Will Wait Spell

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Followers of the University of North Carolina's basketball team will have to wait until April 24-26 to learn whether the NCAA Infractions Committee took any action against its recruiting practices.

Dr. W. B. Aycock, university chancellor, said last Saturday he would appear at the committee's three day meeting, which ended here Tuesday, regarding basketball recruiting practices at the Atlantic Coast Conference school.

However, the committee was mum on its actions, saying it would as customary make no public announcement until cleared at the NCAA Council's meeting next month. The meeting probably will be in Atlanta, Ga.

Carroll Heiss Is Sizzling Ice On Way To Crown

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP)—The word "Heiss" means hot in German and that was the way Carroll Heiss of New York City was skating today as she moved into the second round of the 1960 World Figure Skating Championships.

Queen Carroll, holder of the women's title for four years, showed plainly Tuesday she intended to run the string to five.

Two dozen skaters from 12 nations spun through two compulsory figures each on the opening program. After the first one Miss Heiss was leading her closest opponent, Sjoukje Dijkstra of the Netherlands by 5.7 unofficial points. In the second figure she spread this margin to 11.1.

Four more compulsory figures are on the program for the women today. Then they will rest until Thursday night, when free skating will close out the competition in the women's singles.

Gov. Brown Asks End Of Executions

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown, in the face of an uproar over the Cary Chessman case, called upon an obviously reluctant Legislature today to abolish the death penalty in California.

Capital punishment, he said, has been a gross failure.

"Beyond its horror and incivility," he said, "it has neither protected the innocent nor deterred the wicked."

Instead, he said it has primarily taken the lives of "the weak, the poor, the ignorant" and racial minorities.

The governor, in a special message, acknowledged the resistance to his proposal but urged the state's lawmakers to debate the issue "with reason and restraint."

There was no mention of Chessman, the condemned Los Angeles lawyer, in the message, who has fought off execution for almost 12 of his 38 years.

Brown, California's favorite-son candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, provoked bitter criticism when he gave Chessman a 60-day reprieve Feb. 19, hours before his execution, and then announced he would toss the death penalty question to the legislature.

Edwin J. Regan, Democrat Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee which probably will get first crack at the bill, said he saw practically no chance that the measure would ever reach the floor.

Brown himself conceded Tuesday he anticipated great difficulty in outlawing the death penalty this year because of the heated controversy over Chessman.

The repealer would mean life imprisonment for 24 prisoners awaiting execution. They include Chessman, convicted of kidnap-robbery with bodily harm—a capital offense in California—involving sexual indignities against two young women.

The governor, in his message, said he was asking the ban against executions in California "as an act of public conscience and from the experience of over a decade and a half in law enforcement work."

"There are powerful and compelling reasons why this should be done. It is not based on maudlin sympathy for the criminal and depraved," the former district attorney and attorney general said.

Joey Bishop Credits His 4 Minutes

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Four minutes can make a lot of difference in a man's life—if they are the right four minutes.
Ask Joey Bishop. At 42, he's finally hitting the peak of his career, thanks to a precious four minutes.
They occurred last November at a testimonial dinner for Dean Martin. It was one of those strange show business rituals at which a star's peers pay him tribute in reverse. Among those roasting Dino were Danny Thomas, Jimmy Durante, Bob Hope, George Burns, Frank Sinatra, George Jessel, Tony Curtis, Judy Garland, Dinah Shore, Mort Sahl, and Joey Bishop.
"I was the only outsider, the only one from the East Coast," he recalls. "I was scared. And with good reason in that kind of company."
"I was sitting at the far end of the dais—behind a vase. I had the worst possible position on the bill—I was on second, the first stand-up comedian."
Joey walked up to the mike and faced the glittering audience. He started throwing gags like: "I came here not to praise Dean Martin, but to learn how to drink. The big stars up here on the dais were very nice to me. They all spoke to me. Dinah Shore said 'Pass the salt,' and Danny Thomas said, 'Pass the butter.'"
"The results amazed me," said the comic. "The next day I started getting phone calls. I had four offers of my own TV show. Jack Benny wanted me to come on his show. So did Dinah Shore. Hal Wallis talked to me about a film contract."
Now he's riding high. Recently he copped the reviews for holding together the wild Las Vegas act comprising himself, Sinatra, Martin, Pete Lawford and Sammy Davis Jr. He's appearing with that gang in the movie "Ocean's 11." ABC reportedly wants him to head a late-night TV show a la Jack Paar.
"And all because of four minutes," he reflects.

Awards Made At Cub Banquet

BETHEL—Awards were made a several members of Bethel Cub Pack 15 which held its Blue and Gold Banquet Feb. 25 in the Fellowship Hall at Bethel Methodist Church.
Cubmaster Harold Stalon presided.
Stalon presented the scout executive for the Pitt District, Rudolph Alexander, who presented the following awards: Bobcat Pin, Bill Carson; Wolf Badges, John Weston, Douglas Dunning, Donnie Jenkins; Bear Badges, Henry Weeks and Edwin Gray; Lion Badges, Harvey Taylor; Gold Arrow Points, Harvey Taylor and Hilton Carson; Silver Arrow Point, Ferrell Blount.
Alexander also presented den mother pins to each den mother.
Edwin Gray gave the welcome to the parents and John Lloy Watson responded. Den Two gave a brief sketch on "Fifty Years of Scouting" this being the 50th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.
The cubmaster recognized the Den Mothers: Mrs. F. L. Blount, Jr., Mrs. Kenneth Manning and Mrs. Lloyd Watson.
Skipper Jack Parker of television station WNCN, entertained the group with the assistance of his wife. The pair used puppets and juggling in their act.
The meeting was closed as a living circle was formed by the cubs and their den chiefs. The group sang "Star Spangled Banner."

Manuals Put Air Force In Unwelcome Role

EDITOR'S NOTE: Controversy and confusion surround the Air Force these days as it tries to explain its manuals to churchmen, congressmen, and the public. Arthur Edson takes a sprightly and penetrating look at the situation.

Bans Parades By Demonstrators

ORANGEBURG, S.C. (AP) — Mayor Clyde Fair of Orangeburg says there will be no more marching demonstrations by Negroes in this South Carolina city "in the interest of public safety." Fair announced Tuesday night that he would begin enforcing a city ordinance that forbids parades without a permit. He said, "People may apply for a permit and it may or may not be granted."

By ARTHUR EDSON WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been a long, relentless, fuzzy fight, but the Air Force today finally owns the snafu (situation normal all fouled up) championship of the world. This has taken considerable doing. The competition in this town is fierce. But by steadily pounding away, by resolutely issuing instruction manuals on everything from communism in churches to how to run a successful bingo party, the Air Force steadily muddled ahead. It clinched its title by handling, or mishandling, these episodes so that it wound up: 1. Getting caught in the middle between two large church groups; 2. Attracting the interest of at least three congressional committees; 3. Bringing almost everyone in the Pentagon up to the secretary of defense into the act; 4. Focusing attention on what is primarily a sideshow at a time when a great and vital debate is going on in the main tent over whether this nation's defenses are strong enough.

Yet in all this to-do, some sobering, some hilarious, the manuals must be kept in perspective. Around 2,000 such publications are put out by the Air Force, Army and Navy. Most are routine; probably all but a tiny few are non-controversial. Every service man of World War II remembers these manuals. One had helpful hints to Air Force men unlucky enough to be caught on a desert. Another told soldiers how they should act when they moved into North Africa. One suggestion: If you value your safety and maybe even your life, don't fool around with Moslem women, and that includes Moslem women who want to fool around. The trouble began when the services wandered into other fields. Several congressmen, for example, think the services use manpower foolishly, and prove their case by pointing to manuals. Rep. Frank Kowalski (D-Conn) objects to using military men as servants. His textbook: "Open Mess Operational Manual," put out for Air Force officers assigned as secretaries of officers' or non-commissioned officers' club.

At one time or another during the hubbub Air Force officials have been quoted as saying the manual would be withdrawn permanently, that it would be revised, that a part of it would be rewritten, that it would remain essentially as it is but the names of organizations would be deleted. But the criticism wasn't exclusively with the discussion of the clergy. One passage dealt with stere information and said: "A foolish remark often heard is that Americans have a right to know what's going on. Most people realize the foolhardiness of such a suggestion." This came in for sharp criticism from Chairman John I. Moss (D-Calif) of the special House Government Information Subcommittee. But in all the turmoil one statement—by Chairman Melvin Price (D-Ill) of a House committee studying the whole business—goes unchallenged. "The services aren't getting a benefit from these," Price said "just trouble."

Search In U.S. Turns Up 5 Swords Valued By Nippon

By DAY INOSHITA TOKYO (AP) — To Al Tobey, a former GI from the Bronx, the two samurai swords he brought home from Japan after the war were just "dust collectors."

When Al Tobey of The Bronx referred to his trophies as dust collectors, he could not have known this. What started him thinking was a newspaper report sent to him by a friend. It told of the quest in the United States of Junzo Sato, a former diplomat, for 42 rare "national treasure" swords believed to have been taken there after the war.

—five after Japan withdrew in 1934—is acting as an official of the Japan Artistic Swords Preservation Society. The Japanese government gives him silent backing but no public support. By the San Francisco Peace Treaty, Japan surrendered all claims against the United States including those for weapons confiscated during the occupation. Their former owners in Japan have no legal claim to them.

But now some of the swords are finding their way home to Japan, where they mean something else again. The sword has mystic religious meanings to a Japanese. One of three sacred Shinto treasures handed down from the Sun Goddess to Japan's emperors — enshrined today in the Atsuta Shrine near Nagoya — is, according to mythology, the "sword of heaven's clouds" said to have been removed by the brother of the Sun Goddess from the tail of an eight-headed dragon which he slew.

Tobey's reply to his friend, which is now in Sato's hands, was honest and direct. "When I received the clipping," he wrote, "I was interested to the extent that the sword means something far more important to him than it does to me. All it means to me is a dust collector that I brought back home with me."

Sato estimates that 300,000 to 500,000 swords were taken to the United States during the occupation. Most were lowly regarded ones, mass-produced by Japanese and Manchurian steel mills during the war. A few hundred are rare swords produced by master swordsmiths. Sato claims 42 are part of the 1,607 "national treasures" registered with the government and banned for removal from the country except with the special permission of the education minister.

The few remaining Japanese swordsmiths even today purify themselves before starting work on a blade and wear ritual Shinto garments during work. This is why the sword is regarded as the "Tamashi" — soul — of the warrior ancestors who wore it. In a samurai home, the sword is a family heirloom handed down from father to son. To let it rust is akin to sacrilege. Some swords are considered objects of reverence in Shinto shrines.

Sato's only national treasure find turned up in Washington. Frank Arelio, advertising agent for the Washington Star and former 8th Army staff officer, had planned to pass the sword on to his son as a keepsake. "After I told him how much it meant to Japan," Sato said, "he agreed to give it to me."

Courtland Is No Beatnik, His Role Calls For Beard

By CYNTHIA LOWRY AP TV-Radio Writer NEW YORK (AP) — As everybody knows, the trademark of the male beatnik is the beard. Thus tall, immaculately tailored — and definitely bearded — Jerome Courtland attracts much attention when he walks down any American street these days.

guests will be Genevieve, Charley Weaver, Hans Conried, Florence Henderson and Hugh Downs, all members of the Paar inner circle. Rumors of waning popularity of Westerns seem more wishful thinking than real. Some of the veteran shows remain firmly at the top of the ratings charts, few others have been flops this season, and there is a big new crop of pilots being made for next season. But, if series-in-the-making are a trend clue, next fall will find the emphasis on comedy shows — more than a quarter of some 200 pilots have comedy themes.

Courtland, however, is no beatnik and his beard was grown to comply with fashions of about 800 years ago. Courtland, a Tennessee native, is the star of a new syndicated television series, "Tales of the Vikings," now shown over 120 stations. His beard and his flowing locks present problems of maintenance unknown to intrepid Norsemen of old. Courtland is a definite brunette. But, because nobody ever thinks of a Scandinavian as anything but blond his naturally brown hair must be bleached.

Recommended tonight: "Music for a Spring Night," ABC, 7:30-8:30—debut of a new musical series, with Betty Johnson and Bill Hayes.

"I can't go more than about 10 days with the beard," he explains, "although I don't have to have my hair done more than every three weeks. I've been going through this bleaching thing now for almost nine months, but I'm still embarrassed every time I go in for repairs."

Better Not Rob His Liquor Store

The series is being filmed in Europe. Although the action is supposed to take place in and around Norway, the outdoor scenes actually are shot outside Munich—on and around the Bavarian lakes and mountains. Scandinavian lighting problems — long dark winters and long light summers — were too much to cope with.

IRVINGTON, N.J. (AP) — Anyone who plans to rob Frank Gilfol's liquor store had better think twice and then change his mind. Gilfol put two bullets into a fleeing bandit who tried to hold up the store Tuesday night. There was a blood-stained trail for police to follow. The robbers' score over the years: five attempts, not a cent stolen. Gilfol's score: one bandit killed, two wounded and three disarmed. The 140-pound, bespectacled Gilfol keeps a gun and a club within reach behind the counter. He is 64 years old.

Jack Paar's return Monday night will be a family affair.

NOTICE
 NORTH CAROLINA
 PITTS COUNTY

Under and by virtue of an Order by the Superior Court of Pitts County made in that Special Proceeding entitled, "State Bank & Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Dollie Reeves Council, deceased, vs. Ephriam Rives and wife, Lula Rives; Lenon Rives, widower; and Tim Council, husband of Dollie Reeves Council," the undersigned Commissioner will, on FRIDAY, MARCH 4, 1960, at 11 a.m. at the Court House door of the Superior Court of Pitts County in Greenville, North Carolina, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash that certain tract or parcel of land lying and being in the Town of Greenville, Pitts County, North Carolina, and being more particularly described as follows:

"FIRST TRACT: BEGINNING at a stake in the northern property line of Fleming Street in the City of Greenville, North Carolina, West 120.5 feet from the intersection of the northern boundary line of Fleming Street and the eastern boundary line of Lot No. 16 of the Higgs property as shown on a map thereof recorded in Map Book 1, at page 106 in the Pitts County Registry, and running thence in a westwardly direction along the northern boundary line of Fleming Street 24.1 feet to the southeast corner of Lot No. 14, in the City of Greenville, North Carolina; thence in a northwesterly direction along the common dividing line between Lots Nos. 14 and 15, 150 feet to a stake, a corner; thence in an easterly direction on a line parallel with the northern boundary line of Fleming Street 24.1 feet to a stake, a corner; thence in a southwesterly direction on a line parallel with the common dividing line between Lots Nos. 14 and 15, 150 feet to the northern boundary line of Fleming Street at the point of BEGINNING; and being the westernmost 24.1 feet of Lot No. 15, in Block 'A' of the Higgs property, as shown on map in Map Book 1, at page 106 in the Pitts County Registry, and further being a part of the identical property conveyed to Nixon Reese from J. W. Higgs, et al, which was by deed dated February 23, 1894, and recorded in Book 8-5, at page 216 in the Pitts County Registry, and further, being a part of the identical property inherited by Lenon Reeves, Dollie Reeves Stator Council and Ephriam Rieves from their father, Nixon Reese, by the laws of intestate succession in the State of North Carolina, and further, being the same property described in a deed from Ephriam Rieves and wife, Lula B. Rieves, to Dollie Council, by deed dated August 28, 1956 and recorded in Book G-29, at page 314 in the Pitts County Registry; further reference is hereby made to deeds appearing in Book G-29, at page 301; G-29, at page 299; and G-29, at page 295 in the Pitts County Registry.

"SECOND TRACT: BEGINNING at a point on the north side of Fleming Street 72 feet 3 inches west of the Alex Briley line and running thence westwardly with the line on Fleming Street 24 feet 1 inch; thence northwardly 150 feet to a stake; thence eastwardly 24 feet 1 inch to a stake; thence southwardly 150 feet back to the BEGINNING, and being a part of the property formerly owned by Nixon Reese or Reed and left to his heirs, Dollie Reeves Stator, Ephriam Rives and Lenon Rives and further being the identical property conveyed to David Stator and wife, Dollie Reeves Stator, by deed from Charlotte Flanagan and husband, Walter E. Flanagan, dated January 28, 1926 and recorded in Book G-16, at page 237 in the Pitts County Registry"

Both of said tracts hereinabove described shall be sold together, free and clear of all taxes and assessments, with the exception of the year 1960, the highest bidder being required to deposit the sum of ten percent (10%) of said bid with the undersigned commissioner until the final confirmation by the Court.

This the 2d day of February, 1960.

W. H. WATSON,
 Commissioner

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved downward irregularly in moderately active trading early this afternoon.

Lapses of fractions to a point or two outnumbered gains among pivotal issues.

Steels, motors, rails, coppers, oils, aircrafts, rubbers and building materials were among the losers.

Selected gains kept the overall loss modest.

Some of the electronics and specially situated stocks made gains of one or two points.

The market was mixed at the start then assumed a lower tone.

Analysts felt that stocks would have to test recent lows before another rally could be mounted.

A depressing note was the Commerce Department report that manufacturers boosted inventories in January while new orders fell sharply.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off 1.60 to 625.27.

The Associated Press average at noon was down 40 to 217.00 with the industrials off 60, the rails off 80 and the utilities unchanged.

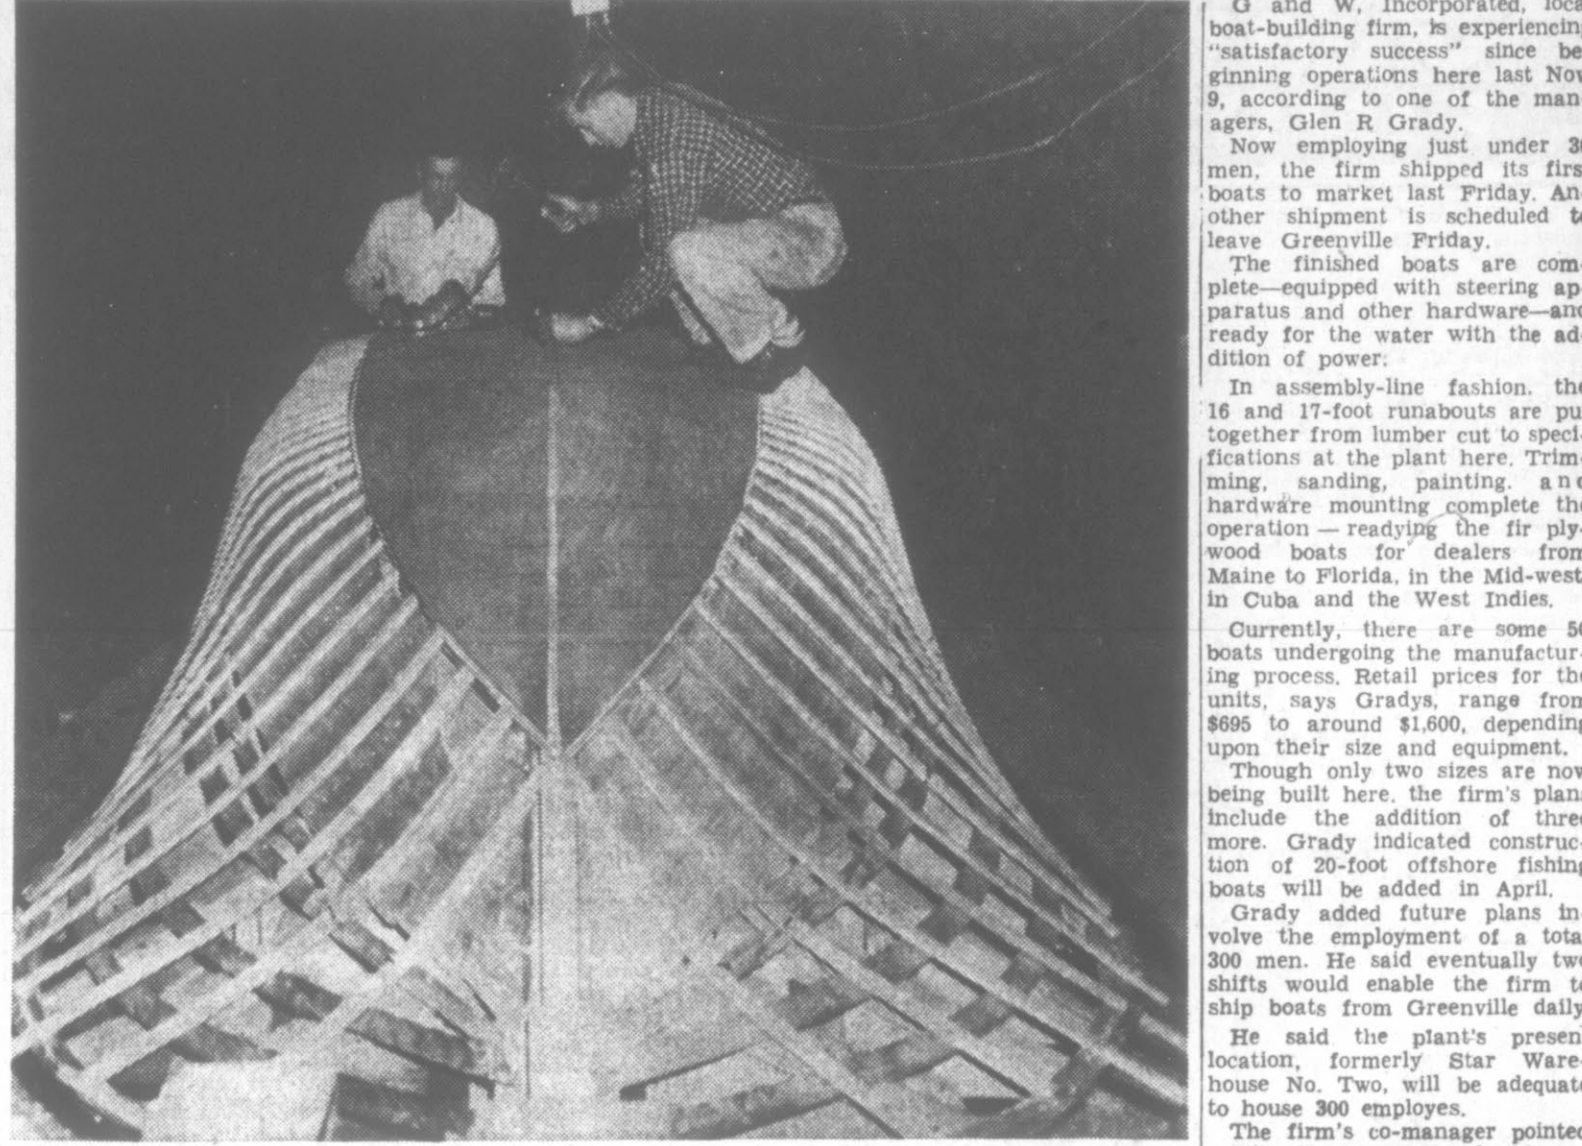

Corporate bonds rose in moderately active trading.

U.S. government bonds edged higher for the third straight day in quiet dealings over the counter.

Scholarships Go To 49 Students

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — (AP) — Forty-nine students have won Morehead Scholarships to the University of North Carolina.

The grants are worth $5,000 over four years to North Carolina winners and more than $6,000 for four years to out-of-staters.

The 49 represented the largest number awarded in a single year since the scholarship fund was established in 1951 by John Motley Morehead of Rye, N.Y., university alumnus and benefactor.

The grants, worth more than a quarter-million dollars, bring to 275 the total number of Morehead scholarships awarded since 1951.

Plymouth To Get Corn Starch Mill

PLYMOUTH, N.C. (AP) — Eastern North Carolina farmers will find a new market for corn in an eight million dollar corn starch plant expected to be in production here by late summer.

Dixon Southern Chemicals Inc. expects to purchase some four million bushels of corn to use in turning out 80,000 tons of industrial corn starch each year. At the start, it will employ about 60 persons, many of them highly skilled technicians.

Fire Guts Front Part Of House

Greenville firemen battled for about 30 minutes yesterday before the last sparks were extinguished at a house at 604 Allen's Alley which caught fire about 11:34 a.m.

According to fire officers, the blaze, which gutted the front portion of the dwelling, started in the front room of one of the duplex apartments. The cause of the fire was undetermined.

About 1,000 feet of hose was used by the local department on the structure which was described as a "total loss."

Local firemen also answered a call to Box 128 at the intersection of Dickinson and Line Aves. at 3:37 p.m. yesterday.

Firefighters said no one was found at the box and no fire was seen.

Funeral Thursday For Jesse L. Braxton

Funeral services for Mr. Jesse Levy Braxton, 27, will be conducted at the Wilkerson Chapel Thursday afternoon at 2:30 by Elder M. J. Jorgensen of the Latter Day Saints Church and Elder Bass of Rocky Mount. Burial will be in Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville. Mr. Braxton died at his home in Springfield, Mass. early Saturday morning.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Crocker Braxton; three sons and a daughter, Jesse Warren, Eddie Levy, Robert Benjamin, and Eleanor Rose Braxton, all of the home; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levy Braxton of near Greenville; three brothers, H. Linwood Braxton of Portsmouth, Va., Charles W. Braxton of Ormondsville, and Franklin D. Braxton of Greenville; and three sisters, Mrs. Robert L. Moore and Mrs. R. B. Board Will Pay $1,000 On Work

BETHEL — A thousand dollars would be paid by the Town of Bethel on a proposed Gridle Creek Canal improvement project.

Bethel's Board of Commissioners voted last night to pay that amount on the proposed water shed project. The town's treated sewage drains into the canal.

The board accepted Wynn's Inc. low bid of $1,872 for a fully-equipped Chevrolet Bel Aire sedan to be used as a police car.

Mayor Clifton Everette said the town's old police car, a 1956 Chevrolet, will be sold. The police car is equipped with two-way radio which will be transferred to the new vehicle.

Curb and gutter for the north end of Main St. was approved by the commissioners upon acceptance of a petition from property owners. The town will pay half of the cost and the property owners half, the usual municipal policy for such work.

The Street Committee was directed to examine and recommend repairs to the sidewalks in the business section on Railroad St.

The board took under consideration a request for annexation from several property owners on the north west edge of Bethel.

Senate Business 'Shortcircuited'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate sputtered along on a couple of legislative cylinders today. Its committee power plant short-circuited by a filibuster.

Instead of the dozen or more committees which regularly handle hearings, bills and investigations daily, only three groups scheduled meetings as the non-stop Senate sessions on civil rights continued.

That may mean trouble ahead for presidential hopefuls who want Congress to wind up its business before the July political conventions.

The Senate conducts only a small part of its total business in its daily public sessions. Most of the real work is done in committees where bills are whipped into shape.

Senators, who head 10 of the Senate's 16 major standing committees, have seen to it that none of them does any work while the filibuster is going on.

That means delays in consideration of legislation involving space, farm, military, banking, finance, foreign relations, government operations, judicial, labor and post office matters.

Because the rules bar most committee sessions while the Senate itself is meeting, the Southerners have been successful in closing down nearly all except the appropriations subcommittees.

BUT NOT BY TRAIN LOGANSPORT, IND. (AP) — Willard Steele, who retired recently after fifty years with the Pennsylvania Railroad, figures he traveled almost a million miles—but not by train. He drove the 70 miles to Indianapolis every working day since 1927.

FBI Silent On Kidnap Probe

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The FBI declined again today to say whether any progress has been made in its investigation of the disappearance of wealthy Adolph Coors III 22 days ago.

Coors, 44, is the chairman of the Adolph Coors Co. brewery and manufacturing complex at Golden.

His wife asked law enforcement agencies to withdraw from the case less than a week after Coors vanished, in order to expedite communication from possible kidnapers. The sheriff's office says it has not re-entered the case. The FBI had no comment.
