

A Tasty Tribute To The Irish

IRISH indeed will your table be on St. Patrick's Day if you serve that old-country dish called Colcannon. A simple combination of potatoes and green cabbage, it won't convert years ago in Ireland and America. Whenever we give the recipe, it continues to charm.

Over 100 years ago Mrs. Hannah Widdifield featured the dish in her "Widdifield's New Cook Book or Practical Receipts for the Housewife" published in Philadelphia. But Mrs. Widdifield called the dish Kale Cannon, even though she specified that it be made with cabbage.

Her name is understandable because kale is a Scottish word derived from "coles" — a term used early in culinary history for cabbage as well as any other plant of the cabbage tribe. In Irish recipes we've come upon "kale" (as we know it) sometimes displaces cabbage in Colcannon.

"The best cook book in existence... every lady should get a copy... worth a dozen times its price" were some of the accolades conferred on Mrs. Widdifield's 1856 cook book, and no wonder. That lady knew how to make a dish rich! To a dozen boiled potatoes and a cabbage she added a pound of butter and a gill (half a cup) of cream. "This is very nice to eat with cold meat," says Mrs. W., and it's easy to imagine why.

Our modest recipe for Colcannon for eight diners is made this way. We cook 2 pounds (6 medium-sized) pared potatoes in a small amount of boiling water with 1/2 teaspoon salt. After draining we mash them until smooth with a couple tablespoons of butter and the same of cream or milk. Meanwhile we shred enough green cabbage on a coarse grater to make 3 cups packed down and cook it until soft in a small amount of boiling water with 1/2 teaspoon salt; after draining, this is added to the mashed potatoes with a small onion that's been minced and cooked in a few tablespoons of butter until it's wilted and golden. Next salt and freshly-ground pepper to taste go in. We reheat the mixture, or keep it hot, over boiling water. If the dish is dry, more butter and cream are beaten in.

To garnish Colcannon for St. Patrick's Day, cook an extra medium-sized potato and after the spuds are mashed, save out one-half cup. Mix a drop or two of green food coloring into the reserved potato and put through a decorator tube in the shape of a shamrock over the cabbage and potato mixture in its serving dish. If you're having a buffet, and own a chafing dish, you'll find it's perfect for Colcannon.

Children Need Encouragement

RALEIGH—When your child shows you a pocketful of crumpled papers—some art work, the 100 in arithmetic or in spelling or his very first writing—he's asking for your recognition and approval.

What was your response the last time you looked at your child's report card? All children need encouragement. They want adults to expect the best of them but that "best" needs to be encouraged. There are many ways you can help your child to feel important and worthwhile.

Mrs. Corinne Grimsley, family relations specialist for the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service, says children take pride in a job well done. Praise often will succeed where criticism fails.

Teen-agers need understanding—adults who know this isn't their house and buggy age and they must be willing to accept "change" although they may not always like that change.

It doesn't take much time to approve your child's efforts. Your approval can give him moral support and help him feel he is worthwhile and capable. He will be motivated to greater efforts if he knows you care and are on "his side."

Be sincere in your reactions to your child's projects. He reads your feelings not only by what he hears you say, but by the enthusiasm in your voice, the shine in your eyes, and the pat or squeeze you give him.

Time, love and companionship will contribute to the happiness of your child as he grows up.

By MAIDRED MORRIS
4-H'ers in Chowan County "look over" radio station WCDJ in Edenton two days last week in observance of National 4-H Club Week. They gave the news, special announcements and had fun spinning records.

Miss Catherine Aman, assistant home economics agent, reports the 4-H'ers solicited for radio advertisements and received a commission on them. The money went into the county's 4-H development fund.

At a recent 4-H Council meeting in Wayne County, Bill Lamm, assistant agriculture agent, showed slides on good and poor landscaping plans. He pointed out distinguishing characteristics of various shrubs and gave a sample to the 4-H'ers.

Miss Sara Fagan, assistant home economics agent, says an identification contest was held following the program. Martin Lancaster and Linda Gardner were the contest winners.

To get 1960 off to a good start, 4-H'ers in Gaston County have started the new year with emphasis on the first meal of the day. Mrs. Marilyn Robbins, assistant home economics agent, reports that a pool was taken to see how many girls ate breakfast.

The girls have tried to eat more breakfast by improving and changing breakfast menus. In this way, they will have a variety of foods at breakfast.

During National 4-H Club Week, a flag raising ceremony was held in front of the New Hanover County Court House. Mr. J. M. Hall, chairman of the county commissioners spoke briefly on 4-H Club Week.

According to Miss Emmie Lou Teel, assistant home economics agent, Jack McCarley and Mrs. C. D. Parker, 4-H leaders, appeared on radio programs with other 4-H'ers throughout the week. To climax the week, the 4-H county council had a bazaar.

In Haywood County, the 1800 4-H boys and girls observed National 4-H Club Week by presenting a program on the national slogan "Learn, Live, and Serve Through 4-H" at the county achievement day program.

Miss Patricia Hicks, assistant home economics agent, reports a new 4-H flag was flown under the American flag on the Courthouse lawn in salute to the local 4-H'ers. There were three window displays showing the 4-H story.

Martina Lewis served as chairman of the planning committee for 4-H Club Week in Randolph County. The theme of the parade was "Opportunities in 4-H" and the floats depicted the various activities in 4-H Club work.

As a climax to the week, a banquet was held for 4-H members, parents, and leaders. Miss Sally Brown, assistant home economics agent, reports that Miss Mary Sue Moser, assistant state 4-H leader from Raleigh, was guest speaker. Messick Tuesday, March 15.

Refreshments made by the Home Economics girls were served buffet style. The table was covered with a white linen cloth, the traditional bridal color, centered with a miniature bride and groom. Fruit punch was poured by Miss Kay Mills.

Guests were served chicken salad sandwiches, potato chips, pecan sandies, brownies, banana nut bread and mintes.

Among those attending were Miss Ruby Hudson, Miss Sandra Gaskins, Miss Carole Ann Lassiter, Miss Linda Cox, Miss Margie Taylor, Miss Eleanor Gray, Miss Betty Lou Gray, Miss Kay Mills, Miss Evonne Keeter, Miss Betsy Smith, Miss Carolyn Ann Jones, Mrs. Troy L. # Climax Of Tour By East Carolina Choir

By JERRY POWELL

Friday evening's concert in Wright Auditorium by the East Carolina College Choir was, in effect, the climax of a tour which carried the fifty-four singers (representing six states and the District of Columbia) and their director, Dr. Carl Hjortavang, on a six-day tour, giving concerts in New York City, Washington, D. C., New Jersey, Virginia, and North Carolina.

The program opened with Palerina's "Gloria Patri," displaying a blend which was present throughout the entire concert. The singers were divided into four separate groups, each a complete choir, rather than the four-section arrangement, and the blend was in large part due to this unusual organization.

The Palestrina was "Gloria Patri" by Vittoria. The covered tone quality was especially appropriate, and for all its contrapuntal difficulties, was one of the more beautiful selections of the evening. Next came Neid's "In Mirth and in Gladness," a piece of early sacred music which captures the mood which its title implies, gleeful even more effective by the subdued intensity of the softer passages.

ity, and the solo sections sung by Paisy Roberts added to the musical interest of the selection. "Who'll Be a Witness for My Lord" was presented with a firm and sure-footed delivery, but seemed to lack the rhythmic excitement and drive of a Spiritual of this type. "Go Down Death" by Tom Scott might have been more effective had it had greater dynamic contrast. The number certainly had intensity, however, as bongo drums (played by Barbara Lounsbury) were heard throughout, building to several climaxes before the last notes were sung.

Bonus selections were given during the intermission, with Paisy Roberts singing the "Italian Street Song" by Victor Herbert, and George Seymour presenting "Monarchs of the Road." These numbers were well-received by the audience, as was the entire concert. Three encores, "It's a Good Day for Singing," "All You Need is a Song," directed by Miss Sheffield, and "Gossip, Gossip," a novelty calypso number, brought the concert to a close.

Arraign Youth For 2 Slayings

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — A 20-year-old youth faced arraignment today on warrants charging murder in the slaying of his father and a family friend.

Dist. Atty. Joseph Bloodgood said John "Mike" Hayes, who collected guns for a hobby, admitted he shot his father, Harold, 48, director of the Madison Zoo, and Walter O. Nelson, 34, an insurance man, Saturday night.

Bloodgood quoted Hayes as saying "only God maybe knows why I did it—I don't."

Three other persons, including young Hayes, were wounded during the shooting spree.

Bloodgood said the shooting followed a party at the Hayes home attended by two young couples and the assailant's girl friend. Hayes slapped one of the girls and the guests left.

The district attorney said the youth then evidently went berserk, tearing down drapes, wrecking furniture and lamps and smashing windows.

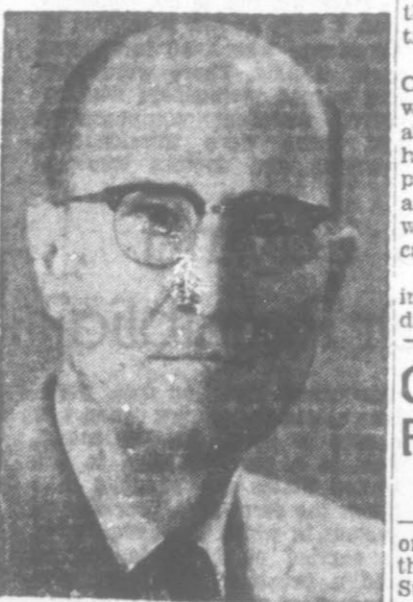

When Hayes and his wife and two other couples returned home the youth opened fire. Bloodgood said. The elder Hayes and Nelson were cut down in the driveway by .22 caliber rifle bullets.

Another shot struck Arnold Rasmussen, who with his wife had attended a dinner gathering with the Hayes and Nelson.

The youth then opened fire on a neighbor, Larry McCollough, 16, striking him in the arm.

Sgt. Charles Lullins entered the home and found Hayes hiding in a bedroom. He fired at the door and Hayes fired one shot, the bullet striking his own foot. Then he threw the gun out the door and surrendered.

The youth was a Navy veteran with a medical discharge.

DR. KERMIT EBY, professor of social studies at the University of Chicago, will appear today, Tuesday and Wednesday at East Carolina College as a speaker on the Danforth Lecture series. Programs, open to the public, will take place at 8:00 p.m. in the Joyner Library. Dr. Eby's talks, based on the Danforth topic for the year (Risks and Responsibilities in a World of Revolutionary Changes) are entitled "Know What You Believe," "Get A Base," and "Go To Work."

Navy Band Plays Here In 2 Concerts Tuesday

COMMANDER CHARLES BRENDLER

The United States Navy Band rolls into Greenville Wednesday, March 16, to give matinee and evening concerts at East Carolina College. Their travel complement consists of two buses, an automobile and a van for instruments and apparel.

Programs are scheduled for 2:30 and 8:15 p.m. in the Wright auditorium. The college Entertainment Committee is sponsor of the two concerts here.

This 31-date tour, bringing the United States Navy Band to Greenville, is one of their two annual tour movements — spring and fall. Their last tour to this part of the country was made during the spring of 1957.

The evening concert will be directed entirely by the Band's noted Conductor, Commander Charles Brendler. Possessor of a Doctor of Music Degree, he is also an honorary member of the exclusive White House Correspondents' Club. He is a member of the National Press Club, and during 1954-55 was President of the American Bandmasters Association, which lists among its members the names of America's most outstanding Band Conductors.

Local turnout for the two programs will probably reach an all time high.

National Teacher Exams Slated April 9, Oct. 8

Students at East Carolina College who will be graduated between May 1960 and the fall quarter of 1961 and who expect to teach in North Carolina will take the National Teachers Examination April 9 or October 8.

Dr. Frank A. Scott of the East Carolina psychology department, who will administer the tests, has announced that the examinations here will be open also to other prospective teachers in this area and also to in-service teachers who wish to raise their certificates.

Testing will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Austin building on each date, he stated, and latecomers will not be allowed to participate. Application to take the tests must be made to Dr. Scott before 4:30 p.m. March 18.

The examinations to be given at East Carolina are a part of a state-wide research testing program authorized by the 1959 General Assembly and conducted at state expense by the N. C. State Board of Education.

Data collected will be used in a study of preparation of teachers in institutions of higher learning in North Carolina.

The examinations, which will cover an entire day, will be administered in two parts. A general test is required of all students who are prospective teachers. A second test covering specific subject areas is optional.

Scores will be used for research purposes and will not affect the certification or the salary of the student entering the teaching profession.

Churchman Plans For Third Party

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — A religious leader says he will organize a third political party, the Church of God party—next Sunday at Fulton, Mo., and run for president.

Bishop Homer A. Tomlinson of the Church of God, Queens Village, N.Y., said if he is elected he would try to change the United States government from a democracy to a theocracy where tithing would replace taxation.

"The two-party system has served its day," said Tomlinson, 67.

While here Sunday, he performed what he called his "symbolic coronation" as king of Utah. It was the 23rd state in which he has conducted this ceremony.

Threat Said Made When Finch Jury Was Debating

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Wrangling by jurors in the Finch murder trial almost erupted into violence as the seven women and five men deliberated to a bitter, exhausting deadlock.

This was the report today of two members of the panel—one a woman who said that at one point a male juror threatened to throw her out a window of the locked jury room.

His Albino Frogs Get Tender Care

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—A Florida State University zoologist has three frogs in a bathtub in his office and he's giving them loving care.

Dr. John A. Davison hopes they can be nursed to maturity and that he can use them to initiate what he thinks will be the first pure strain of albino frogs in the world.

The albinos showed up as an accident of nature in the cross-breeding of normal colored frogs to get tadpoles for research on blood circulation. They are lacking in pigment, the material that gives color to the skin.

After producing a pure strain, Davison plans to give the offspring to other scientists conducting research in genetics, pigmentation and embryology. It takes a year or more to raise the frogs to the breeding stage.

"The only albino frog in any other country about which I have heard is an adult male discovered recently in England," Davison said.

The jury was dismissed Saturday after failing to agree whether Dr. R. Bernard Finch, 42, and his mistress, Carole Tregoff, 23, had plotted and killed with a bullet-in-the-back the doctor's estranged wife, Barbara Jean Finch.

The wealthy surgeon and his onetime receptionist broke into sobs when the jurors announced they were deadlocked. They faced another trial. A date will be set Thursday.

While all seemed outwardly serene during the eight days of deliberations, reports of shouts, insults and near-violence came from two jurors—Louis Werner and Genevieve Lang.

Mrs. Lang, 34, a secretary, said a male juror turned the locked jury room into a panic Friday when he shouted at her: "I'm going to pick you up and throw you out the window."

She said the juror, whom she did not identify, started "to pick up the juror table—he started to take off his coat—I was scared."

"One woman ran for the buzzer and buzzed for the bailiffs. Another screamed hysterically at the door. It was terrifying to realize we were locked in that way."

After bailiffs quoted the dispute, Mrs. Lang said: "I want off the jury." However, she stayed on the panel and the next day they announced the deadlock—10 to 2 to convict the balding surgeon of second-degree murder and 8-4 to acquit his pretty mistress.

Werner, 66, retired sales manager, identified the two male jurors standing between Finch and a five-year-to-life prison sentence as Dolores Jalme, 33, and Eddie Lindsay, 28, both Los Angeles postal employees.

"We voted our convictions," said Jalme.

"Basically, the other members of the jury just didn't accept other people's views and argued irrationally," said Lindsay, a Negro.

Finch and Carole remain in county jail. Their attorneys say they will ask for their release on bail. The district attorney says he will oppose such a move.

Actor Talman Facing Charges

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor William Talman, the district attorney who always loses to Perry Mason in the TV series, faces narcotics and morals charges with seven others arrested at a Hollywood party.

Raiders said they found Talman and others nude or partly nude and said "all were high on marijuana."

Among those arrested Saturday were television producer James H. Baker and Richard Reibold, 81, in whose apartment the arrests were made.

Talman, 45, said that he just stopped by the apartment for a drink. "There must be some kind of a mistake," he said. "This could ruin me."

Sheriff's Capt. R. B. Brooks said his office had had Reibold's apartment under surveillance for some time. Raiders said they found several marijuana cigarettes and a quantity of loose marijuana.

Baker, 39, said that he didn't even smoke tobacco. All those arrested—four men, four women—denied the charges. They were booked on suspicion of possession of marijuana and lewd vagrancy, a morals count.

The eight were later freed on $1,050 bail each. Among those arrested was actress Lola Dewitt.

Nobody. Camp learned this painfully while the car—dog inside—was on a service station hoist. The keys were inside and Camp couldn't get in the locked car. When he tried to pry open the ventilator window, his dog snarled.

Camp finally had to call for his wife, who brought a spare set of keys.

Majority Cool To Radical Plans

It should be amply clear now that a majority of the members of the Senate are not in favor of the radical civil rights proposals offered by the Eisenhower administration or similar proposals offered by some Northern Democrats.

The Southern delegation in the Senate was not the only group opposed to some of the drastic proposals that have been made under the name of "civil rights".

By a vote of 49 to 35 the Senate killed the first section of the administration's civil rights bill which would have made it a federal crime to interfere with court orders in school desegregation cases. The final vote killing the measure came after the Senate had voted to broaden the measure to include court orders concerning labor disputes as well as those concerning school segregation.

It was apparent that many of the most ardent supporters of the punitive proposals aimed at the South were not willing for them to be written into law when they were made to include court orders other than those pertaining to school segregation issues.

So far as the country as a whole is concerned, if violations of orders of the court are punishable in one specific instance, certainly the same rule should apply in other instances.

This development, coupled with the fact that the Senate earlier defeated a move to limit debate on the civil rights issue, points up clearly that the opposition to proposed civil rights legislation is not altogether represented by Southerners. The unwise and far-reaching proposals that would have given the attorney general broad new powers in civil rights cases likewise was defeated decisively by the Senate.

While the so-called civil rights proposals have been pictured by some politicians as measures which are drastically needed—and are opposed by only one section of the nation—action by the Senate during the closing days of last week pointed up vividly that there is considerable opposition to the proposals outside the South. It also pointed up the fact that some of the most avid supporters of punitive "civil rights" measures aimed at the South are not willing for the same proposals to apply to situations that exist in their own sections of the country.

In spite of the big show that has been made by some extreme advocates of civil rights legislation, it is becoming more evident every day that they represent probably a smaller minority of the Senate than those in the Southern bloc who are violently opposed to the passage of any measure which carries the civil rights label.

It is still probable that some legislation with a civil rights tag will be passed by Congress this session, but the developments late last week seemed to assure that any legislation passed will be much more realistic and much more reasonable than the extreme and unwise proposals offered by the Administration and some Northern senators.

Candidates Are Hard At Work

By LYNN NISBET
PLATFORMS — The several candidates for Governor in the upcoming primary are busily engaged in making speeches, giving interviews and preparing printed material in which they seek to inform the voters of their plans for a better State, if elected to head the State government. That is deemed a proper, in fact an essential, duty of the aspirants for the highest office.

The Governor of North Carolina is required by the constitution to make recommendations to the General Assembly, respecting all phases of operation. As statutory director of the budget he is required to submit a budget, in which proposed appropriations are guaranteed by anticipated revenue. And he is charged with responsibility for administering expenditures within the limits of available revenue. If enough money does not come in to meet appropriations, he is obliged to tailor spending to keep outgo within income.

In view of this tremendous power vested in the chief executive it is the right of the people to know in advance of his election how he feels about government problems. Since the people have a right to know, the candidate has a duty to tell them.

LEGISLATORS — Candidates for legislative positions, in both branches of the Federal Congress and the General Assembly, have the responsibility of enacting laws, including the levy of taxes, the allocation of tax moneys to the various needs, and for the operation of governmental functions in education, health, welfare, law enforcement, and the regulation of commonplace activities of all citizens. Even when this power is delegated, as it often is, the primary responsibility remains with the legislature.

LEUTENANT GOVERNOR — Obviously, candidates for purely administrative executive and judicial offices have no need for platforms. They can express opinions, attempt to exert influence, and otherwise seek to bring about changes in laws—but they have no real authority to make the changes.

There is a lively discussion going on in some circles about the extent to which candidates for Lieutenant Governor should promulgate platforms and propose policies in government. The constitution prescribes as the only certain duty of the Lieutenant Governor to preside over the Senate. He has a vote only in case of a tie. Custom and Senate rules accord him the right to appoint committees. What gives the No. 2 position real significance is the possibility of his succession to the governorship. Luther Hodges in late 1954 was the first man in this century to be called upon to fulfill that part of the job. His experience has made the voters conscious of the possibility that it might happen again any time. One school of thought contends that since the Lieutenant Governor has no authority to recommend legislation, and only on rare occasions a vote to influence enactment of laws, it is presumptuous for candidates to be spouting off declarations of policy or purpose.

The other side is that since the Lieutenant Governor might at any time be called upon to assume the duties of the top office, with all its powers, prerogatives and responsibilities, the people have the same right to know and he the same obligation to tell them, what he thinks about pending issues, as does the candidate for Governor.

There is logic and precedent for both positions, and the current aspirants for the No. 2 place must decide, each for himself, which way to go.

DISTINCTION — While in many respects the position of Lieutenant Governor of North Carolina is comparable to that of Vice President of the United States, there are very significant differences.

Candidates for President are nominated before candidates for Vice President, and in nearly every instance the presidential nominee actually picks his running mate. Once nominated, the President and Vice President run together on the same ballot. The voter cannot choose one without the other.

In North Carolina candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor are nominated in popular primaries at the same time, without relationship to each other. After nomination the voting is independent. It is entirely possible to elect a Democratic Governor and a Republican Lieutenant Governor, or vice versa. There is more likelihood of having a Governor and a Lieutenant Governor of the same party, but of such widely divergent factional opinion as to be almost political enemies. That almost happened from 1928 to 1932 when Max Gardner was Governor and R.T. (Dick) Fountain was Lieutenant Governor. Ever since that administration there has been reasonable cooperation between the two top executives.

Governor Hodges, perhaps because he was smarting under real or fancied snubs during the two year regime of Governor Umstead, has enhanced the prestige of the Lieutenant Governor far beyond its former status. He has recognized Lieutenant Governor Luther Barnhardt as the real No. 2 man, and has called upon him many times to fill in at top level when the Governor had to be out of the state.

Another 'Temporary' Tax Being Built Up

A re-run of an old play seems to be in the making in Washington where the term "temporary" is tacked to tax increases as a means of fooling the public into thinking the tax for construction of the huge interstate highway network undertaken by the Eisenhower administration.

It wasn't too long ago, most people will recall, when construction of the highway program lagged, as did the rest of the economy. About the same time the nation was going through its most business recession. So, in order to pump more money into the economy, the government decided to speed up the construction program. To do so, it needed more funds. So the one-cent special, emergency, temporary addition was made to the federal gasoline tax.

Taxpayers were assured the extra penny tax would be removed when the recession emergency ended.

Well, the recession has ended now, business has pulled up to a higher point than its pre-recession level. But the highway construction program is still lagging. Periodic revisions of estimates of the cost of the program have brought higher figures with each round. Officials are saying that some of the plans are not now adequate, and more expensive roads must be constructed.

The result is that the "temporary" tax is being looked upon as something that must be retained permanently if the program is going to be carried out. More than that, another one-cent increase in the tax is necessary to meet higher costs being encountered... temporarily, of course.

Congress may seriously undertake to increase the gasoline tax again this year as a "temporary" measure, but it's our guess that the people will not be inclined to continue this "temporary increase" folly. We trust they will speak out in this election year against any such move by Congress.

There may be little hope of eliminating the original one-cent "temporary increase" in the federal gasoline tax, but certainly the people, if they are mind to, can prevent another tax increase being tagged to every gallon of gasoline this year.

Requisites For Healthy Growth

By RALPH ROBEY
It is not possible to say that any one thing is most important for economic growth. There must be capital investment, productive labor, good management, and prices which enable goods and services to be sold without trouble.

But those are end results. To have capital investment there must be adequate saving and the incentive to invest. To have productive labor there must be competition and the lowest possible cost of production.

All of these requisites are affected by governmental policy, and in some instances they are actually controlled by governmental policy, and in some instances they are actually controlled by government. Saving and capital investment are an excellent example of the influence of government policy.

Savings Don't Meet Needs
In terms of dollars, we have an enormous volume of saving each year in this nation. But it still is not enough to meet current needs. This is proved by the level of interest rates. If we had more saving the rates of interest would decline, because the supply of funds would be more nearly equal to the volume of demand.

How can we get more saving? One way which is frequently mentioned is for the Federal Government to run a surplus and pay off part of its debt. Actually, while it is desirable to have some debt reduction, this might or might not result in greater saving. Whether it did would depend upon what particular part of the debt was paid and to whom. If the debt paid off was that held by the Federal Reserve banks, there would be no possibility of increasing saving. This is because the Federal Reserve banks neither "save" nor make capital loans.

If the paid-off debt is held by commercial banks the result will be to give these institutions more lending power. Whether the loans made will be for capital purposes or merely the customary short-term commercial loan, will depend upon the institution. If the paid-off debt is held by an individual, or by a savings bank, insurance company, or some other institutional investor, there can be no increase in saving. The most that can happen in this instance is that the individual or institution which receives the funds in payment merely turns around and re-invests in some other obligation.

Another way frequently mentioned to get larger saving is to reduce taxes. Again the actual results will vary according to the place where taxes are reduced. If the reduction is all in the lowest bracket of the personal income tax, there probably would be some increase of saving, but most of the reduction would go to increased spending. At the opposite extreme, if the tax reduction was in the upper income bracket—which now pays 91 per cent—a much larger proportion would be saved.

Income Tax Rate Return
This does not mean that tax reduction should be made only in the upper bracket, or upper brackets. We need income tax reform from one end of the scale to the other. We need such reform not only because the rates presently are too high, but as well because this is by all odds the best way to get increased saving. To help the incentive for work and investment, and to reduce interest rates.

Such income tax rate reform would be more effective in stepping up the economic growth of the nation than anything else could be.

Can't Have It Two Ways

COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.
It is necessary, because of commitments of the United States, that a comparatively large number of Americans live in foreign countries. They are there in many positions, some governmental, some civilian. It is to be assumed that many of them have become expert in particular fields and particular countries. Some speak one or more foreign languages.

It takes many years to become expert about anything. I know, from personal experience, that many who write about Russia and China, know nothing about the subject. A short tourist visit does not make an expert. Often it produces a conceited, self-assertive reservoir of misinformation.

So along comes Major General William T. Hefley, commander of the Air Materiel Command, European Area, who is of the opinion that an American who prefers "living in foreign countries more than four years is not a good citizen and should turn in his passport."

Why four years and not three or five years? How does the General measure such qualifications in time? How long, for instance, does it take an American to study Arabic and the interrelations of Egypt and Syria vis-a-vis Israel and Jordan, or Iraq and Iran? Does the General know how long it takes a man to become expert in Pushtu and to have a working knowledge of the relations between the Pathans and the Pakistanis and why the Benjaminites are a problem in the Khyber Pass?

I pick two areas where the United States is deeply involved—so much so that the President of the United States, under extremely difficult circumstances, visited Kabul. One real advantage that Russia has had over us in the Cold War is not only that the Russians carefully trained experts for each country but gave the experts status. General Hefley said:

"Most of the people who don't want to go back home don't have the slightest interest in the U.S. except for the high American pay they receive."
Of course, this is not remotely true. I have known hundreds of Americans who lived in various parts of Asia. There were men and women in business who received excellent compensation and there were missionaries, teachers and doctors who received almost no monetary satisfaction but found compensation in their services to God and man. All were fanatically patriotic Americans, more so than those who stayed back home. They were competitive in their patriotism. And many of them, over the years, did jobs for the United States, which brought no titles, no honors, no pay other than the satisfaction of serving.

The General's difficulty arose from the fact that when he sought to make savings and improvements in efficiency, he found a lot of overseas Americans who can live cheaper in Europe, save their money and avoid taxes. He is sound in going after such folks but he should differentiate between them and those who are doing extremely hard work, serving this country in a program of world leadership and world knowledge which our government initiated. The General said:

"I found that when I wanted to cut out wasteful, unnecessary operations, such as warehouse depots, in a program of the civilians who had lived overseas so long that they had lost touch with American life."

All this is sound and correct except that we require experts in many fields and those who are sent abroad by the government should have the responsibility of making themselves expert. For instance, if General Hefley had said that an American in the service of the government, who in four years does not have a working knowledge of each language of each country where he has been stationed, should be brought home, he would be correct. He might also have stated that if such persons could not pass examinations in some fields of history, literature, social customs, etc., of these countries, they should be brought home, he would have been correct.

For the United States it is a total loss to give an American the monetary advantages of working abroad, unless that person and his wife and children prepare themselves to be of service in some degree of expertise for the United States. Time-servers and featherbedders have no value in the enterprise of even peaceful co-existence with Soviet Russia. What we require are carefully trained men and women in a vast variety of fields.

The tragedy will come when citizens cease to put democracy first, when they become so complacent or blind as to yield too much of their sovereignty to the republic. For a republic wielding all the power is but a step away from dictatorship. All that remains is for one man, or group of men, to take control and appropriate that power to himself. Then there is no longer a republic and no longer any democracy. May the people always put democracy ahead of the republic.

Other Editors Saying Democracy Or Republic?

(Winston-Salem Journal)
Malcolm Seawell, candidate for Governor, has reported finding many high school and college students who don't know the difference between a democracy and a republic. And to him that is a tragedy. However, the tragedy, if it is one, can't be confined to students. Ask almost any American what form of government we have in the United States. And the answer will almost invariably be "a democracy" instead of "a republic."

This may reflect a citizenry dull in the knowledge of civics. But it can hardly be taken to mean we are indifferent to our form of government. In a technical sense, our federal government is not a true democracy. The United States is a republic, a form of democracy. The difference between democracy and a republic is one of convenience.

If the United States were a true democracy—that is, a direct democracy after the fashion of the small city-states of ancient Greece—180,000,000 Americans would have to come together and pass all the laws. Obviously, this is impossible. Thus we have a representative democracy based on free, popular elections. A few men are chosen to speak for the many. This is a republic. And in the United States the republic has taken the form of a presidential system in which the government is carried on by a legislature and a president, largely independent of each other.

Still, under the Constitution the people retain the ultimate power. And any government in which the people have supreme power is a democracy. Every generation of Americans has sacrificed blood or treasure to preserve the truth of "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

Invest? Look To Tokyo

By ROGER BABSON
BABSON PARK, Mass. — The recent signing of a new treaty between the U.S. and Japan may one day be reckoned as a major turning point in our history. By this treaty we have raised our mortal enemy of less than fifteen years ago to a new position of prestige in the world community. This should further spur Japan's spectacular postwar recovery, and also help protect U.S. interests in the Far East.

Unparalleled Progress
At the end of World War II, the economy of Japan lay in ruins. Tokyo itself was a pile of rubble and nearly 50 per cent of the nation's industry had been destroyed. Thanks to the enlightened leadership of Gen. Douglas MacArthur and to the amazing capacity of the Japanese themselves, the economic life of the country was quickly restored. Instead of being submerged by her conqueror, Japan regained full sovereignty and then achieved economic progress matched by no other nation.

Japan's gross national product has more than doubled during the past short ten years. There has been a 400 per cent increase in industrial production. While per-capita income at $70 per year is very small by U.S. standards, it is the highest in all Asia. Since prices are still low in Japan, this sum will purchase three times as much goods and services as in the U.S. If Japan can escape war in the next ten years, I predict she will double her present living standards.

GREAT STRATEGIC VALUE
Although much smaller than Red China in population, in territorial size and in natural resources and in military might, Japan possesses the most concentrated and most readily usable industrial power potential in the Far East. That, plus her location, makes her strategically important to us, or to the Communist bloc.

Japan stretches some 2,000 miles across the principal approaches to East Asia. Opposite her islands lie the southeastern extremities of Russia, the cruelly partitioned land of Korea, and the middle east coast of China. If you look at your globe, you will see that the "Land of the Rising Sun" occupies a geographical position relative to East Asia similar to that which Britain occupies relative to Western Europe.

EXPANDING SECURITIES MARKET
Japan's ancient culture has been derived mainly from China, but her modern culture is largely Western and American. She is bound to the Free World by ties of strategy and economy and has good reason to steer clear of the Soviet camp. Thus Japanese postwar growth is now following traditional capitalistic lines, for the most part.

A significant aspect of that growth has been the development of a very active securities market. The rising need for venture capital is being met by the high yields and low prices of Japanese securities attract funds from all over the world. In my opinion, however, the advantages Americans can gain by buying Japanese stocks and bonds are outweighed by currency exchange problems, taxes, and other restrictions. Nevertheless, this phase of Japan's development will bear watching.

DREAM OF WORLD LEADERSHIP
The Japanese are ambitious, resourceful, and hardworking. They have not abandoned their old dream of world leadership, but they may have earned the right to try to conquer by arms. With nearly 100,000,000 people compressed into 142,644 square miles, they must export or die. As they struggle to exist, their skill in finance, craftsmanship, industrial management, and commerce poses a more immediate threat to our U.S. world trade position than do current Russian policies.

Certainly world trade will become increasingly competitive and it will do us no good to hide behind tariff walls. Already Tokyo is the world's largest city. Some day the world's economic center of gravity—which moved from London to New York in the forefront of this century—may pass to this oriental capital. Other large cities, in order of rank are: (Continued on page five)

Big Auto Sales Push In Spring

By ELMER ROESSNER
The biggest auto advertising and promotion campaigns ever will break this spring.

The industry is tooled up for high production. But sales, partly due to the weather, have lagged. There have been cutbacks on assembly lines.

In the next three months, the industry will attempt to prove that it really was the weather, not new models or lack of public enthusiasm, that has slowed sales. Newspapers, magazines and television will be used heavier than ever to induce sales. Industry heads believe the buying power is there and the models are good. They think promotional catalysts will make sales.

STORM BREWING
Here are other business forecasts, based on analyses of current developments:
Red sales protests missing. Commerce Department's announcement that millions of dollars worth of technical information might be exported to Iron visit them with their families, Sundays are becoming more important as days for closing sales on big-ticket items—and for encouraging a bit of recklessness in filling the market basket. Strong economic factors are at work and, unless religious opposition grows, the Sunday shopping day will remain as a big business factor in the U.S.

Higher minimum wages. Labor Secretary Mitchell's approval of an increase in the hourly minimum to $1.10 an hour will be brushed aside. Since this is an election year, few Congressmen will dare stop on the low side of $1.25. In fact, some Congressmen depending on low-income constituents for votes, may urge even higher minimums.

IRRESISTIBLE TREND
More Sunday shopping. That's certain, except where large states outlaw it. Small states can't because people can drive across borders. Despite religious opposition in many areas, Sunday openings help shopping centers thrive. Because fathers can

"Old enough to know better!" we snapped. "Evasive answer," he commented. "Where were you born?" "Oakland, California," we answered. "Reasonable answer," he said. "Married, single or looking? If looking, what for?"

"What's the idea?" we demanded. "When do friends ask such questions?"

"Oh, I'm just practicing for a job as census taker," the old man answered. "Are you assuming that the government is your friend? Or just your big brother?" I concluded the old one was having me on. I was sure of it a few minutes later when he tried to collect his fee from me instead of the Census Bureau.

He Waited A Long Time To Pilot Sleek Rocket Plane

By RALPH DIGHTON
EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — "I've been waiting a long time to get my hands on that plane."

That's the test pilot Joe Walker talking about the X15 rocket ship. He makes his first flight this week in the sleek black dart that eventually is expected to fly 100 miles high at 4,000 m.p.h.

The plane Walker will take up has been flown only once under power. North American Aviation's Scott Crossfield reported then he wasn't satisfied with the way it handled.

"It was just a little trouble in the damping," says Walker. "The pitch control needed some adjustment. But I'm sure it's ready to go now."

Walker, one of the nation's top test pilots, works for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the federal agency that runs the X15 program. He has been with NASA and its forerunner, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, since 1945.

Over the years he has flown a long string of experimental planes, starting with the Xq. Since 1952, when the idea for the X15 was born, he has had his eye on the 50-foot space bird that may someday carry him to the edge of space.

In 1955 NACA completed plans for the X15 and turned the project over to a manufacturer, North American Aviation. A fellow NACA pilot, Scott Crossfield, joined North American to help design the plane.

Joe stayed with NACA, and now the long wait has borne fruit.

Crossfield, who has made six low-altitude, low-speed checkout flights on the two X15s ready so far, is restricted by contract from pushing the plane to its limits.

Now it's up to Joe—and Air Force Maj. Robert White—to show what the stubby-winged plane really can do. Flying alternately, they'll first test the low-thrust engines now in the planes. Later they'll begin a series of all-out tests with a bigger engine.

By the time all three X15s are equipped with the big power plant, four other pilots will be flying the planes: Jack McKay and Neil Armstrong of NASA, Capt. Robert Rushworth of the Air Force and Lt. Comdr. Forrest Petersen of the Navy.

Walker, his blond curly hair turning iron gray at 39, faces this week's flight with almost boyish enthusiasm.

"This is what I like to do—this is what I have to do," says Walker with his slow and easy grin.

Walker says he's not interested in Armstrong of NASA, Capt. Robert. "It doesn't make sense to skim by unknown regions without exploring them," he says, "just to set a record."

his feeling is shared by Major White, his dark-haired, blue-eyed counterpart in the Air Force.

"The X15 is not a vehicle for man's glory," says the 35-year-old White. It's a scientific instrument. If records come along—and they will—that's fine. But our main interest is a safe and successful program."

Adenauer Cites Small Minority

NEW YORK (AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer says his nation today is a practicing democracy, and he blames recent anti-Semitic incidents there on a "minute minority of neo-Nazis."

"Be convinced," said Adenauer Sunday, "that this Germany is a democratic Germany and that none of its Jewish citizens will suffer any harm or damage."

Adenauer said: "Behind everything that is being said here and there against Germany, there is the concerted will of the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union wants to drive a wedge between the German and American people in order to shift the political balance of the world in favor of the Soviet Union."

"I assure you that the spirit of Germany today is far from being anti-Semitic or Nazi."

Practicing democracy, Adenauer said, "seems to be a difficult thing, as you can see from the debate in the United States Senate." He apparently alluded to the civil rights debate.

"I might, therefore, ask your tolerance and understanding for the German Parliament and at times our federal government," he said.

The 64-year-old German leader has a busy Sunday. He spoke at a luncheon of the American Council on Germany. Earlier, he had breakfast with Francis Cardinal Spellman after Mass, and visited the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Sunday night he attended a private dinner.

The chancellor, who is en route to Tokyo for a state visit, will go to Washington Tuesday to confer with President Eisenhower.

Nat'l Piano Guild Event In April

Piano students in the eastern part of North Carolina will participate April 27-30 at East Carolina College in the 1960 tournament of the National Piano Guild. From 75 to 100 young musicians are expected to be present at the college for the events, to compete in various categories of the tournament and to have their performances rated.

Dr. Robert Carter of the East Carolina department of music is chairman in charge of arrangements.

Dorothy Dring Smutz of Webster Groves, Mo., Dr. Carter has announced, will rate the performances of students taking part in the tournament here. She is both a concert pianist and a teacher of piano.

The National Guild Tournaments, begun some 30 years ago in Texas by Irj Allison, are now held annually in 650 centers throughout the United States. In these events more than 50,000 young pianists are heard and rated by about 200 expert adjudicators.

Local, district, state, and national certificates; high school, collegiate, and artists diplomas; the Paderewski Medal; and scholarships to leading schools of music are among awards in the National Guild Tournaments.

Search Underway For Small Plane

BURLEY, Idaho (AP) — A search was under way today for a light airplane reported missing on a flight from Burley, Idaho, to Las Vegas, Nev.

Aboard the Piper Apache were Wes Stoddard, 50, of Anchorage, Alaska; his wife Helen, 49; their daughter Mrs. Horace Cumble, 28, her son Randy, 5; and Stoddard's sister, Mrs. Joseph V. Lee.

Mrs. Lee, of nearby Heyburn, joined the family flight Sunday at Burley. They planned to visit their mother and some brothers who live in Arizona.

Union Vote

FARMVILLE — Eighty-three employees of the Formica Flakeboard plant here will decide at a March 24 and 25 election whether they will become affiliated with the United Mine Workers labor union.

Called by the UMW, the election involves production, maintenance, and laboratory employees at the local manufacturing plant.

A majority vote will decide whether the local plant will be unionized—under affiliation with District 50 of the UMW. Results will be announced around 9 a.m. March 25, according to plant manager Thomas J. Canning.

Supervision of the election will be handled by two company officials, a pair of union representatives, and a representative of the National Labor Relations Board.

DUN FOR A RUN

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP)—The city of Mansfield is pondering the lowest damage claim against it that anyone can recall. Rose Steinberg wants a new pair of nylon stockings—value $1.65—for those damaged when she fell on a sidewalk.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Outbreaks of violence in Alabama—the latest a report that white men beat a Negro family with iron pipes—have led officials of two large organizations to urge President Eisenhower to step into the race situation in that state.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, telegraphed the President urging action by federal agencies to protect constitutional rights of Negro citizens in Alabama.

"In action of the federal government," Wilkins said, "could result in massacre on a scale that will dishonor the United States before the world."

Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers Union, wired Eisenhower asking him "to instruct the attorney general to take immediate action in your name to restore law and order in Montgomery, Ala." scene of frequent student demonstrations and numerous arrests.

The requests came during a weekend marked by the use of tear gas to break up a march of Florida A. & M. University students in Tallahassee, and rallies, prayer services and sitdown demonstrations at other places in the South.

Picketing in support of the Negro stand for integrated Southern eating facilities occurred in New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, Kansas and Colorado.

Wilkins originally asked for presidential action March 10. He said Sunday he was renewing the request because of a report of a Negro family was attacked in their Bessemer, Ala., home by white men wielding pipes.

Robert Jones, 20, a college student, told police 9 or 10 white men broke into his house Saturday night and beat him, his mother Mattie Mae Jones, 45, and his sister Luvinia, 18. The mother was hospitalized with a broken leg and finger. Jones and his sister were treated for bruises and abrasions.

George W. Barron, Bessemer police chief, said he was investigating the beating report but had made no arrests. Jones was in a group of Negroes arrested at Birmingham several weeks ago while distributing anti-segregation literature.

At Raleigh, N.C., 300 Negroes held a prayer service on the steps of the state Capitol and then marched down the city's main street. The service occurred on the eve of the trial of 43 Negro college students charged with trespassing in connection with a lunch counter demonstration.

The Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., of Atlanta, a Negro integration leader, told 3,500 persons attending Sunday service at the Princeton University chapel that some white people show more concern for their economic status than for their fellow men.

His appearance came a day after Princeton students clashed with snowballs and fists during an anti-segregationist picket demonstration outside the F. W. Woolworth Co. store in the university

Adenauer Cites Small Minority

NEW YORK (AP)—West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer says his nation today is a practicing democracy, and he blames recent anti-Semitic incidents there on a "minute minority of neo-Nazis."

"Be convinced," said Adenauer Sunday, "that this Germany is a democratic Germany and that none of its Jewish citizens will suffer any harm or damage."

Adenauer said: "Behind everything that is being said here and there against Germany, there is the concerted will of the Soviet Union. The Soviet Union wants to drive a wedge between the German and American people in order to shift the political balance of the world in favor of the Soviet Union."

"I assure you that the spirit of Germany today is far from being anti-Semitic or Nazi."

Practicing democracy, Adenauer said, "seems to be a difficult thing, as you can see from the debate in the United States Senate." He apparently alluded to the civil rights debate.

"I might, therefore, ask your tolerance and understanding for the German Parliament and at times our federal government," he said.

The 64-year-old German leader has a busy Sunday. He spoke at a luncheon of the American Council on Germany. Earlier, he had breakfast with Francis Cardinal Spellman after Mass, and visited the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Sunday night he attended a private dinner.

The chancellor, who is en route to Tokyo for a state visit, will go to Washington Tuesday to confer with President Eisenhower.

American Public Pays Big Sums To Medical Quacks

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
WASHINGTON (AP)—Have you ever tried turtle oil to iron out your wrinkles, used royal jelly to cure anything that ails you, or applied an electric shock to mend broken bones?

If you have, you may be among the millions of Americans who shell out close to a billion dollars a year to medical and nutritional quacks.

The Food and Drug Administration is conducting a running war against "literally thousands of medical quacks" and wants Congress to put up more money to finance the fight.

George P. Larrick, head of the agency created to police the food and drug business, recently outlined his problems to a House Appropriations subcommittee which published his testimony today.

Larrick brought along some samples to back up his case. They included a "hagi pipe" and a plastic bag into which a person suffering from muscle cramps sticks his head.

The "hagi pipe," made in Japan at a cost of 6 cents, was offered for sale at $2.40. Made of bamboo with a mouthpiece on one end, it carried this claim: "Gospel to all smokers, hagi pipe to prevent lung cancer from smoking."

The directions for the plastic bag, which sold for a dollar, told the user to "stick your head down in the bag and exhale into it, and then breathe back your own breath." After doing that five times, the cramps were supposed to disappear.

Another form of "federal hocus - pocus" is long - distance diagnosis and treatment of ailments. The patient sends in a drop of blood on a blotter and gets a reply telling him what to do. One skeptical person sent in the blood from a rooster. The long-distance diagnosis was that the patient had "malaria and gonorrhea."

Nutritional quackery, Parrick estimated, costs an estimated 16 million Americans more than 50 million dollars annually.

It involves promotion of "special" or "secret" formulas including such ingredients as black strap molasses, seaweed, or alfalfa. The makers claim that if the formulas are used properly they would cure or prevent cancer or graying hair. Some of the formulas sold for as much as $200 a year per person.

"Medical quackery is big business," Larrick informed the committee, with an estimated 250 million dollars a year going into the pockets of the quacks.

One company, he said, sold vitamins on a yearly basis at a cost of $198 per person and grossed 25 million dollars a year. Its product was supposed to be "good for everything from cancer to sterility."

Not long ago, Larrick said, an estimated 4,000 people paid $19.50 each for a little battery device to administer shocks. The gadget was supposed to be "helpful for broken, kidney trouble, heart pain, gouter bones, childbirth, paralysis and deafness."

Perfect View Of Lunar Eclipse

NEW YORK (AP) — Did you miss the total eclipse of the moon early Sunday? There'll be another one next Sept. 5.

New Yorkers got a perfect view of the eclipse in a cloudless sky.

Dr. Joseph M. Chamberlain, chairman of the American Museum-Hayden Planetarium, called it "a classic."

Throughout the Western Hemisphere, where the weather permitted, astronomers, photographers and nature lovers watched the full moon take on a weird coppery color.

The eclipse started here at 1:38 a.m., was total at 2:41 and ended at 5:18.

West Virginia Is Big Kennedy Test

WASHINGTON (AP)—West Virginia's May 10 Democratic primary is being watched by politicians as a possible test of whether religion will be a major presidential campaign issue.

The subject may not be discussed openly, and other campaign issues will becloud whatever significance it may have in the voting results.

But in an overwhelmingly Protestant state, the balloting will indicate to Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) and others how much effect his being a Roman Catholic will have on his chances of winning his party's nomination.

Kennedy is opposed in the Democratic primary by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) in what amounts to a popularity contest. Humphrey is a member of the Congregational Church in Minnesota.

B. Cotanche St., drunk, combined, and public nuisance, combined, for trial and judgment, 90 days on the roads; Robert Gaskins, 1017 W. Third St., drunk, 30 days suspended, pay $16, costs deducted; Joe R. Sneed, Negro, Route 5, Box 186, Greenville, expired driver's license, pay costs; Henry C. Hagan, 1207 Franklin St., speeding, pay $17, costs deducted; James E. Brewer, 820 Evans St., speeding, pay $16, costs deducted; Snodde G. Skinner, 206 E. 12th St., speeding, pay $17, costs deducted.

When the whole thing is over and the votes are counted, nobody will be certain how much of a part religion actually played in outcome.

Arrest Trio On Liquor Charges

BETHEL — Pitt County ABC officers, assisted by Bethel Police arrested three Bethel Negroes Saturday night on charges of illegal possession of non-tax-paid whiskey and placed under $100 bonds each for appearance in County Court in Greenville tomorrow.

The three were identified as Lenza "Bud" Jackson, 41; Mayo Earnhill, 32; and Edward House, 21.

The three were arrested at the home of Jackson when officers allegedly found a small amount of non-tax-paid booze there. Officers said all three of the men claimed ownership of the liquor, saying they found it in a wooded area when they were cutting wood.

Some See Ex-Missile Man Less Than A Hero

NEW YORK (AP) — At 44, of the National Security Resources Board, served on various military advisory boards and was president of the Air Force Association.

He was a flying ace in World War II. Now he's figuratively swinging his fists in a struggle to keep his country from "losing World War III."

There are those who see him as something less than a hero this time. That doesn't dismay Lanphier.

He isn't a man who lets politics, personal acclaim or profit stand in the way when he makes up his mind. He has suffered on all three measures—and he began getting warnings right and left.

Lanphier, a Republican, drew party scorn when he proclaimed President Eisenhower is underestimating the Soviet Union and overestimating American power, and "taking a chance" with the nation's survival. He said in effect: Eisenhower doesn't know modern weapons.

Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.), one of the administration's sharpest critics, knows a lot more, said Lanphier. Lanphier was a special assistant in 1949-50 when Symington was Air Force secretary. Lanphier would like to see Symington as a presidential nominee.

Lanphier knows about the shooting end of war from service as an Army pilot in the Pacific during World War II. He was credited with shooting down a plane carrying the Japanese naval commander, Adm. Iroroku Yamamoto.

The war over, he put in a stint of newspaper work on the Boise (Idaho) Statesman.

Through succeeding years he special assistant to the chairman of the National Security Resources Board, served on various military advisory boards and was president of the Air Force Association.

Cincy, NYU, Ohio State, Cal Reach NCAA Finals

By DON WEISS Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Invitation Tournament steps front and center in college basketball's tournament stage for the next couple of days while Cincinnati, California, and Ohio State—the game's Big Three—join New York U. in preparing for the NCAA semifinal show-downs at San Francisco Friday night.

The NIT, in the midst of its 23rd annual show at New York's Madison Square Garden, has a doubleheader Tuesday night to determine who joins Utah State and Providence in the semifinals.

The doubleheader brings topped Bradley and defending champion St. John's off the sidelines, where they've been resting since the tournament began last Thursday.

Bradley, only team to beat top-ranked Cincinnati this season, takes a 74-72 record against big strong Dayton (21-6) while St. John's (17-7) after losing its last two goes against smooth-working St. Bonaventure, which has built its record to 20-3 with a 17-game winning streak.

The Bradley-Dayton and St. John's-St. Bonaventure winners will meet in one semifinal Thursday night with Providence and second-seeded Utah State, both 23-4, playing in the other. The final, to be nationally televised (NBC), will be played Saturday at 4 p.m.

EST. Although the NCAA has the more touted teams—with Cincinnati No. 1, defending champion California No. 2, and Ohio State No. 3 along with NYU at No. 12 in the final AP poll, the NIT already has established itself as one of the liveliest in years.

Three doubleheader sessions so far have drawn nearly 47,000 spectators with only one New York team (St. John's) in the line-up and that one still to play its first game.

The reason has been the sometimes spectacular but always eye-catching play of three unseeded teams—Providence, St. Bonaventure and Dayton.

The Providence Friars, who whipped Memphis State 71-70 and St. Louis 64-53 in its two appearances, have one of the nation's best backcourt pairs in six-footers Lenny Wilkens and Johnny Egan, plus a Bill Russell protégé from the West Coast, 6-10 Jimmy Hadnot, in the pivot.

St. Bonaventure has the capable Stith brothers, Tom and Sam, who have a combined 51.5 season scoring average. They've made the team unbeatable since a 40-point loss to Cincinnati last Dec. 26 in the New York Holiday Festival.

Dayton, five times a finalist but never a champ in the NIT, has the usual big team associated with the school but one that can move the ball and cope with special defenses.

The Stiths combined for 52 points, Sam getting 27 and Tom 25, in St. Bonaventure's only NIT start so far, a 94-81 victory over Holy Cross. Dayton made its debut last Saturday night against Temple and overpowered the Owl: 72-51, with 6-6 sophomore Gary Roggenbuck, 6-3 Frank Case, and 6-1 Tommy Hatton in key roles. The Flyers can put a front line averaging 6-7 on the court.

Bradley and St. John's both have individual stars—the Braves in Chet Walker, a high-scoring 6-7 sophomore, and the Redmen in All-America Tony Jackson, the NIT's most valuable player last year as a sophomore.

As for the NCAA, Cincinnati, California, Ohio State and NYU earned their trips to the San Francisco showdown by winning regional titles last Saturday night. Cincinnati (27-1), with Oscar Robertson scoring 43 points, beat Kansas 82-71 and Friday will play California (27-1). The Golden Bears ousted the Bearcats in last year's semifinals and now has an 18-game winning streak after routing Oregon 70-49 behind All-America Darrall Imhoff.

Ohio State (23-3) won the Midwest regional 86-69 over Georgia Tech and Friday will play NYU (22-3), the Eastern regional champ after romping past Duke 74-59. Together, the four have a 99-8 record and current winning streaks that total 46-18 for Cal, 14 for Cincinnati, 3 for Ohio State and 11 for NYU.

The small college tournament competition wound up Saturday with Southwest Texas State defeating Westminster (Pa.) 66-44 for the NAIA title. Evansville won its second straight NCAA small college championship Friday.

'Strikeouts Are Too Much Work'

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—"Strikeouts are too much work."

That's the calculated conclusion of Sandy Koufax, who shares with Bob Feller the major league record of 13 strikeouts in a nine-inning game.

"A strikeout pitcher throws too many pitches," said the young southpaw star of the Los Angeles Dodgers today. "Rarely does he finish a game under 150 pitches. If his control should be off, as is often the case with strikeout pitchers, he can make as many as 175 pitches, provided he's lucky enough to 'go the distance.'"

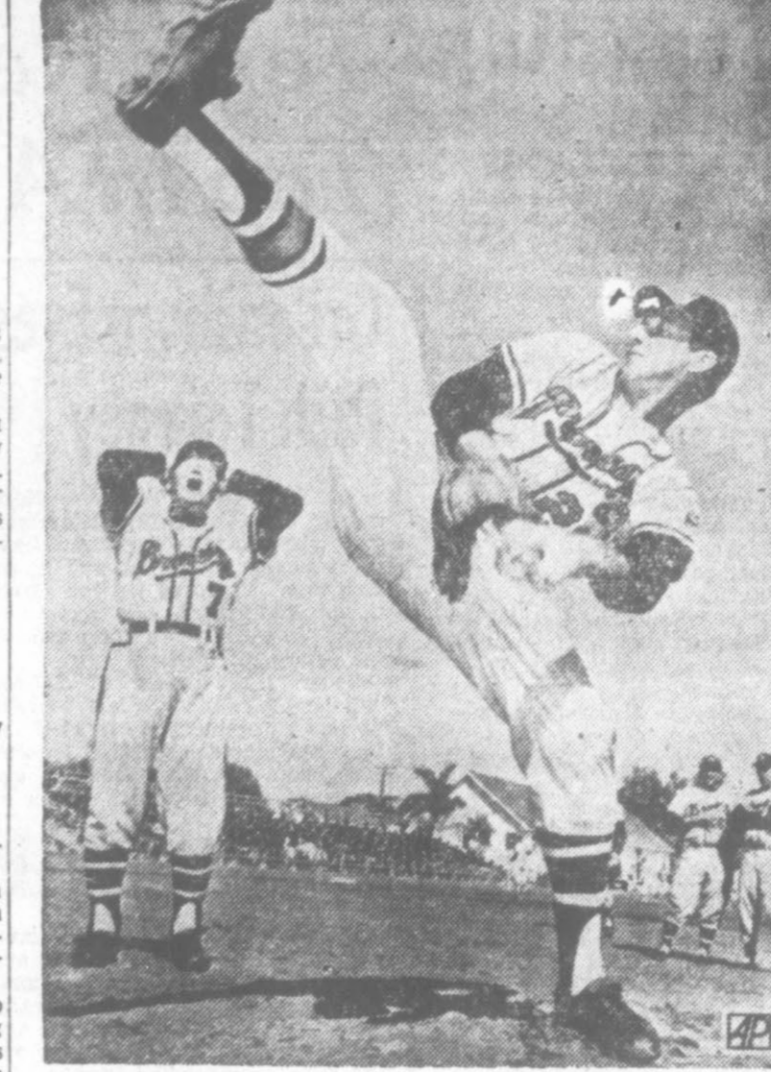

Koufax, who owns the best strikeout percentage of any pitcher in the major leagues—486 batters fanned in 517 innings—has made as many as 200 pitches in a route-going performance.

"I wish I was the kind of pitcher who could retire a batter on one, two or maybe three pitches," he said. "I rarely strike out a batter on three pitches. When I do fan him it usually takes me about five or six or perhaps seven pitches. Then should the batter foul off a few pitches, it takes me that many more pitches to dispose of him."

The 24-year Brooklyn-born fireballer is doing more than just wishing. He has been spending a great deal of time this spring on developing what he calls his breaking ball. It worked to good advantage Sunday as he pitched three hitless frames in the Dodgers' 11-3 triumph over Kansas City.

"I've been concentrating a great deal on getting the ball over. The time to work on those things is now, right here. Once the season starts it's too late."

Ever since he was signed to a $20,000 bonus in 1955, Koufax has been touted as a possible 20-game winner. To date, the most games he's been able to win in one season is 11. Last year, despite his 173 strikeouts in 153 innings he had only an 8-6 record.

HIGH STEPPER FOR THE BRAVES—Milwaukee Braves manager Charley Dressen watches his ace lefthanded pitcher, Warren Spahn, kick high in pitching practice at the spring training camp in Bradenton, Fla. Last season Spahn won 21 games for the Braves. It was the 10th year in which he won 20 or more games in a season. (AP Wirephoto)

Junior Titles Paying Off Big To Champions

By MURRAY ROSE Associated Press Sports Writer

Don't scoff at those recently revived junior boxing championships. They're paying off big to the two champs.

Last month Carlos Ortiz, the junior welterweight king, collected $17,500 in Los Angeles for knocking out Battling Torres in defense of his 140-pound diadem.

This Wednesday Harold Gomes, of Providence, R.I., boss of the junior lightweights (130 pounds), will earn $25,000 tax-free for a defense against Filipino Flash Elorde at Manila.

They take the synthetic title seriously in Manila. A crowd of about 23,000 is expected to pay about $112,500 for Gomes' first defense. The 26-year-old New Englander won the long dormant title by whipping Texan Paul Jorgensen at Providence last July 20.

American Barney Ross, former lightweight and welterweight champion, will referee. The judges will be Filipinos. The Champions of two long established divisions also will be seen in action this week but in nontitle scraps.

Featherweight ruler Davey Moore of Springfield, Ohio, faces a local fighter, Carlos Hernandez, in a ten-rounder at Caracas, Venezuela tonight.

Bantamweight boss Joe Becerra of Mexico City journeys to San Antonio, Tex., for a Tuesday night clash with Ward Yee of Los Angeles.

Rejoins Tigers

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Rookie outfielder Em Lindbeck will rejoin the Detroit Tigers for light workouts today after spending the weekend in a Lakeland hospital.

The 24-year-old former University of Illinois quarterback was struck in the head by a pitched ball in the first inning of Saturday's opening game.

X-rays showed no fracture but Lindbeck was kept under hospital observation for 24 hours. He battled 294 with Atlanta last season and was picked up by the Tigers in the winter draft.

Unbeaten Tom McNeely of Arlington, Mass., meets veteran Willi Besmanoff of Milwaukee and Germany, at the Boston Garden tonight.

Another undefeated youngster, middleweight Jose Torres of New York, tangles with Tony Dupas of New Orleans at Buffalo Tuesday night.

A clash of lightweight contenders—Len Matthews of Philadelphia and Lahouari Godhi of France—highlights a double wind-up at the Philadelphia Arena Tuesday. In the other ten-rounder, light heavyweight contender Von Clay of Philadelphia, takes on Clarence (Tiger) Floyd of New York.

George Washington made a present to Mrs. Washington of a dressing table which had two large mirrors. The glass was decorated by designs of roses and leaves.

Jones Scatters Three Hits As Giants Win

By MIKE RATHET Associated Press Sports Writer

Sad Sam Jones, the pride of the San Francisco pitching corps, figures to cut down on his toothpick consumption this season while the Giants make another bid for the National League pennant.

With Billy O'Dell and Billy Loes added to the mound staff through a trade and such standouts as Johnny Antonelli and Jack Sanford returning, the 34-year-old Jones should be able to get at least a day of rest between pitching stints.

The toothpick-chewing right-hander appeared in 50 games for the Giants last year, pitched 271 innings, won the ERA crown with a 2.82 mark and compiled a 21-15 record as San Francisco battled down to the end of the season with Milwaukee and Los Angeles for the championship.

Jones made his first appearance in spring training Sunday. He breezed through a three-inning workout.

Hardly working up a sweat, Sad Sam scattered three singles and struck out three as the Giants shut out Cleveland 5-0 with young Mike McCormick and O'Dell following Jones to the mound.

Meanwhile, the world champion Dodgers unleashed a 12-hit attack to whip Kansas City 11-3 and the American League champion Chicago White Sox continued to win the close ones by edging Cincinnati 2-0.

In other games, three Baltimore rookies combined to shut out Pittsburgh 1-0; Roger Maris paid his first dividend as New York top-pitcher by leading Philadelphia 11-9; Washington defeated Detroit 4-1, and Boston outlasted Chicago's Cubs 11-9.

The Giants scored two runs in the fourth inning on a walk, singles by Willie Kirkland and Willie McCovey and a wild pitch, then wrapped it up in the fifth with a three-run uprising.

Rip Repulski hit a two-run homer and Frank Howard, the heralded rookie slugger, stroked three singles in the Dodgers offensive. The A's blasted World Series pitching ace Larry Sherry for two runs and three hits in his three-inning workout.

Al Smith and rookie Joe Hicks drove in the only runs for the White Sox, winners of 35 one-run games last season. Don Farrar, Turk Lown and Wilbur Striker pitched five-hit ball.

The pitching rich Orioles got a two-hit shutout from the combined efforts of rookies Steve Barber, Jim Archer and Wes Stock to blank the Pirates. Marv Breeding's single with the bases loaded in the ninth accounted for the Baltimore run.

The Yankees' Maris, obtained from Kansas City in a trade, rapped a score-tying homer in the ninth before three successive singles gave New York its victory over the Cards.

Joe Adcock and Stan Lopata, who also tripled, powered homers in Milwaukee's 11-hit attack against the Phils.

Washington's Camillo Pascual, Bill Fischer and Dick Hyde combined for a three-hit victory over Detroit. Gene Stephens hit a two-run homer as the Red Sox came from seven runs behind to top the Cubs.

West Named Outstanding Regional Tourney Player

CHARLOTTE (AP)—All American Jerry West today was named the Most Outstanding Player of the NCAA Eastern Regional basketball tournament.

West, whose team ousted St. Joseph's of Philadelphia 105-100 here Saturday night in the consolation game for third place, won the MVP award for the second year here.

West, who was beaten 82-74 by New York University in the consolation game, was named MVP for the second year here.

The 6-3 West grabbed 23 points, including 11 in the first 20 minutes, and belted his 11th shot, a 25-point record for a player in the first 20 minutes.

and Lee Patrone of West Virginia, 28. Three Duke men led the second team. They were Doug Kistler, Carroll Youngkin and Howard Hurt. NYU's Ray Paprocky and Al Barden rounded out the second team.

Duke never had a chance to control the game as NYU hopped into a 6-0 lead quickly. After Duke tied the score at 6-6, the Violets regained the advantage and by halftime they were ahead 35-23. After that Duke never was a serious threat.

Duke's zone defense was riddled by a 51.7 shooting effort in the first 20 minutes. Al Barden, who hit 7 of his 11 shots, was deadly from the corner.

In the second half, Sanders took over the scoring task. He collected 19 of his 22 points to bring his two-game total to 50. The 6-6 Violet key man came down with 16 rebounds to make it 35 in two games.

Kistler's 20 points paced most of Duke's scoring punch. West Virginia's 106-100 victory over St. Joseph's for third place was a rouser that deserved higher billing than a consolation game. The Mountaineers were down 57-

59-51 after a breath-taking first half exhibition of shooting by both teams. All American Jerry West hit 23 of his 37 points in the last half to get the Mountaineers back in the game. The score was tied four times in the waning minutes before Lee Patrone hit two fouls at 2:29 for a 98-96 lead and West Virginia never lagged after that. Both teams broke the Eastern Regional scoring record set by West Virginia in last year's 95-92 victory here, also over St. Joseph's. The Mountaineers were two points off the NCAA tourney record held by Uga.

Patrone had 23 points and seven rebounds to go with the 16 West sweep off the boards. Gallo's 29 points and 20 by Jack Egan were high for the losing Philadelphians. The Hawks shot 103 times for 41 baskets. West Virginia, with 36 baskets on 85 shots, won at the foul line, dropping 34 of 46 against 18 or 20 by St. Joe's, which lost four men on personals.

NYU and Duke combined for only 160 shots, just seven more than St. Joseph's at a tempest against West Virginia. The Violets dropped 28 of 53 for a fine 52.8 percentage. Duke netted 22 of 57.

North State Cagers Battle Big Four Seniors Tonight

Riddick Will End Scoring Days Tonight

HIGH POINT—East Carolina's Ike Riddick will join with Doug Chalk of Catawba and Danny Sewell of High Point when the North State seniors battle the Big Four All-Stars here tonight.

Riddick, a 6-1 guard that delighted East Carolina fans throughout the season, led the North State Conference in scoring with a 24.95 mark and was placed on the All-Conference club.

Sewell, the High Point dandy, has won the "Player of the Year" award for the past three seasons and was an All-American choice in 1959. The lanky Sewell was third in scoring this season.

IKE RIDDICK ... final game

The other star in the North State lineup will be Doug Chalk of Catawba, voted the top player in the North State Tournament won by the Indians. Chalk was also on the All-Conference selection.

Also included on the 15-player squad will be the entire starting five from this year's strong Lenoir Rhyne club, which finished first in the league during regular season and went to the finals of the tournament.

An 11-man roster has been announced for the Big Four team with a possibility remaining that two more will be added.

Lee Shaffer, ACC "Player of the Year", will lead the Big Four seniors. Others from Carolina will include Harvey Salz, Grey Poole, and John Croty.

Wake Forest will pad the roster with four players, including two regulars, All-Conference Dave Budd and Winston Wiggins have been named along with Bill Cullen and Charlie Forte.

State will be represented by Dan Englehardt, Don Gallagher, and Ken Clark.

Others that may join the Big Four squad include Larry Bate-man of Duke and George Ritchie of Wake Forest.

The North Staters will be coached by Earl Ruth of Catawba and Wake Forest's Bones McKinney will tutor the Big Four club.

The game was inaugurated last year with the North State Conference winning an 89-78 victory. The sponsoring High Point Junior Chamber of Commerce has expressed hopes of making the contest an annual fixture on the state basketball scene.

All proceeds from the game will go to the Boys Home of North Carolina, Inc.

A 17-station network, reaching from the Coastal Plain to the mountain area, will broadcast the second game. Ed Penfield of WBIG in Greensboro will provide the play-by-play. Included on the list of stations carrying the game will be WOOW in Greenville.

The complete North State roster:

- High Point — Danny Sewell, Wayne Cheek and Willard Formy-dual.
- East Carolina—Ike Riddick.
- Lenoir Rhyne — Ken Norman, Joe Ladd, Eddie Goodnight, Harlan Bowman and Bill Reese.
- Catawba—Doug Chalk and Bob Flynn.
- Western Carolina—Dave Jones and Jackie Teague.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — Maryland remains tops in track for the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Terps held onto their crowns in both the conference and freshman divisions Saturday in the seventh annual indoor games. The varsity massed an impressive 80 points, far ahead of second place North Carolina's 30. The frosh tallied 46½, with North Carolina again second with 30½.

Greensboro Eyes Rich Tourney

GREENSBORO (AP) — Next month's Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament will offer $21,000 prize money for touring and home club pros, a record for the Carolinas. And there are plans to make it even more lucrative in the future.

Basic prize money of $17,500 will be distributed to low scorers in the tournament April 14-17 at the Starmount Forest Country Club course. Another $2,000 in appearance awards will be given to touring pros.

A meat packing company has donated $1,500 for the non-touring pros, with $450 to the low scorer among them.

Tournament sponsors also have announced that patron tickets are being sold at $100, with the goal of at least 100 sales already reached. The patron tickets are being sold with an eye on a more lucrative tournament in the future. The patron ticket has been successful at other tournaments around the nation, particularly in Texas.

Frank Selvy Paces Lakers To NBA Finals

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Frank Selvy, a basketball gypsy haunted by years of failure, found his home and scoring touch in time to put the baffling Minneapolis Lakers back into the NBA western finale.

With Selvy splurging for 30 points in his finest performance since he came out of the Army in 1957, the Lakers whipped Detroit 114-99 Sunday to win the Western Division semifinals in the National Basketball Assn. playoffs, two games to none.

Minneapolis now meets St. Louis for the division title.

"All the fellow has needed in this league is a chance to play," said Laker President Bob Short. "I got him for the $500 waiver price a couple of months ago. And this is a great ball player."

Selvy concurred that it was lack of work that put him on the skids in the NBA. After breaking collegiate scoring records at Furman University in Greenville, S. C., he started his rookie season with the then Milwaukee Hawks. But returning to the Hawks from the Army two years later and couldn't make the team.

Last year he was peddled to New York—after a brief appearance with Minneapolis a year before—and then was shunted this year to Syracuse and then to Minneapolis.

New WCC Coach
 CULLOWHEE, N. C. (AP) — Charles Seeger, head basketball and baseball coach at Berry College, Rome, Ga., for the last six seasons, is the new head baseball coach at Western Carolina College here.

He replaces Jim Gudger, who has resigned in order to devote full time to basketball. Seeger is a native of New Haven, Conn., and a graduate of Springfield College, Springfield, Mass.

Many Returning Stars In NAIA Swim Meet

The fourth annual National three agendas. Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) national swimming and diving championships will be held March 17-18 at Ball State Teachers College, Muncie, Indiana.

Dr. John O. Lewellen, Ball State Swimming Coach and NAIA National Swimming Committee chairman, has announced that a complete list of championship events will be offered this year with the addition of the 1,500-meter freestyle; 100-yard breast-stroke; 10-yard backstroke and 100-yard butterfly. These four events have not been on the past

Other events on the two-day program include 50, 100, 220 and 440 yard freestyles; 200-yard butterfly; 200-yard breaststrokes; 200-yard backstroke; 200-yard individual medley; 400-yard medley relay; 400-yard freestyle relay; 1 and 3 meter diving.

Defending team champion in the meet is East Carolina College while North Central College gained runnerup honors in 1959. Some 111 swimmers and divers, representing 17 of the nation's colleges and 15 different states, participated in the 1959 meet. Dr. Lewellen is expecting an even larger field this year.

Some of the nation's finest swimmers will be competing, including North Central's Dick Blick, a sophomore sensation who as a freshman last year scored a triple by winning the 100-yard, 220-yard and 440-yard freestyle and establishing records in each. Ernest Alix, also of North Central, won two events in record-breaking times last year, and he too will be making a re-appearance this year. Alix's marks are in the 200-yard butterfly and 200-yard individual medley events.

Palmer Wins Under Pressure

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Arnold Palmer served notice he's all but pressure-proof now by winning the $15,000 Pensacola Open on the last two holes — with consecutive birdies.

Palmer, bound for the St. Petersburg open next week and the Masters in April, discovered on the 17th hole of the last round he needed a birdie and a par to tie hot-stroking Doug Sanders.

"I just played one hole at a time," the 30-year-old Lionier, Pa., pro said Sunday after his win, good for $2,000. "I figured I could birdie the 17th and maybe wind up in a playoff with Doug."

Palmer and Sanders, who collected $1,500 second place money on his 274 in the 72-hole grind, both bore down for spectacular final rounds. Sanders turned in a 7-under-par 65 with seven birdies. Palmer one-putted nine of the last 10 greens, including his last two clutch putts of 17 and 32 feet respectively. He took a 67 for the round.

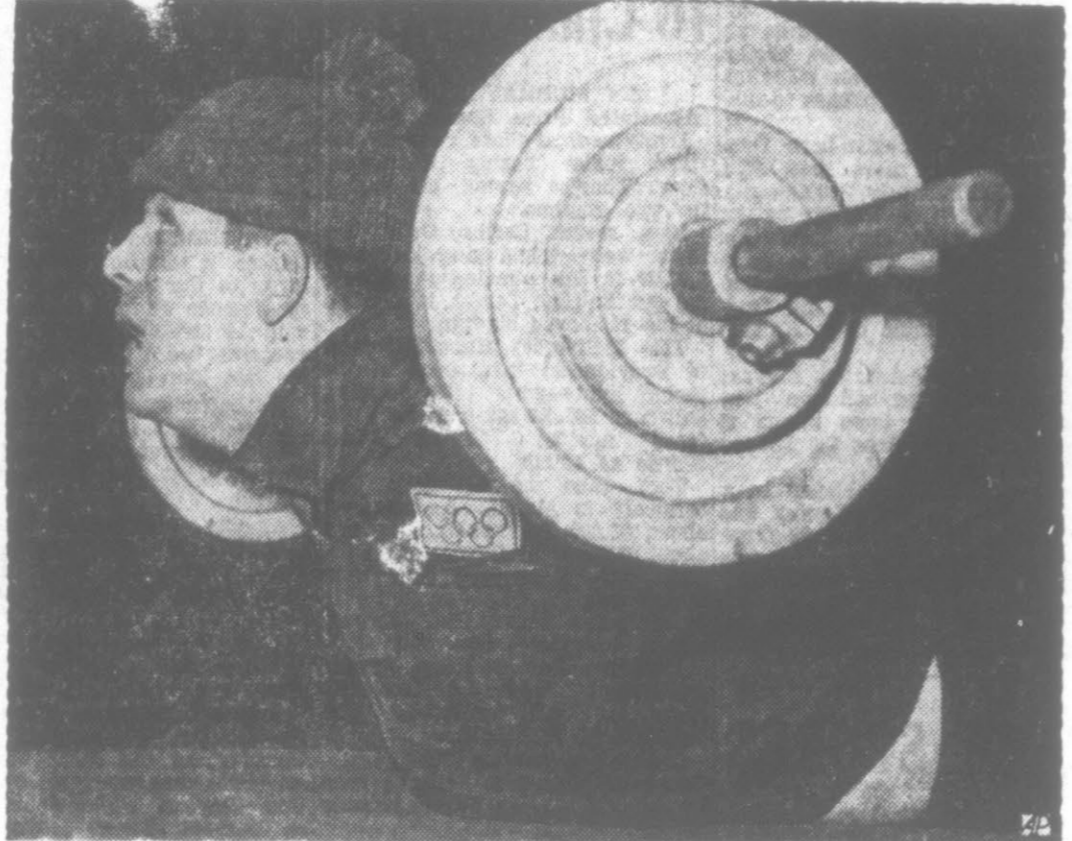

For Palmer, the Pensacola win boosted his winnings in ten 1960 tournaments to a record $24,226-86.

Pascual Pitches Perfect Innings

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Camillo Pascual, who posted a 17-10 record with the last place Washington Senators in 1959, gave every indication Sunday that he may have another dazzling season.

He pitched three perfect innings, allowing only one ball to be hit out of the infield, as the Senators defeated the Detroit Tigers 4-1.

CHAPTER 9

"How long will it take to find Varney?" Irving Blenbaum asked me over the telephone.

"I can't say," I answered. "My client is a very impatient man, as you probably know."

"I had a first-hand demonstration from Fred Duncan," I said wryly. "But you admit I did him a favor."

"Yes."

"Will you let him do one for me?"

"What kind of a favor?"

"I'd like a chat with him."

"Well, now..."

"Wait a minute before you object. I know this is highly irregular. But there may be some repercussions on that book of his. If it's filmed there's going to be a lot of publicity. A number of people will be affected. It's going to open a lot of old wounds. I'd like to question Duncan about it."

"He's a tough nut to crack." Blenbaum was wavering. "I am not sure he'll talk to you."

"Let me try."

"You won't compromise his case against Coleman in any way?"

"I give you my word."

"And you'll stick to the subject matter in his book?"

"Religiously."

"All right. But only because you didn't blow the whistle on him after that gun episode."

We made the usual polite remarks about lunch in the near future and hung up. Almost immediately the phone rang again. "Scott? Adam." His voice was strained, on edge. "Can you be at my office in an hour?"

"What's up?"

"Somebody's coming and I want you here when he arrives."

"Who?"

"A policeman, Sergeant Ernie Strobe."

"You mentioned him once before. Isn't he the cop who was in charge of the detail assigned to guard Ben Keller that night in the Essex Hotel?"

"Yes."

"What's he after?"

"I don't know. But I had a call from Zenith Films this morning. They say he threatened to file an injunction if they start filming the Duncan book."

"I'll be there," I said.

Adam rang off. I sat for a moment, pondering the coincidence. Permission to chat with Fred Duncan had come just in time. I told my secretary, Cassidy, my two destinations and headed first toward the Merchant's Trust.

A glass facade, vast and gleaming, afforded passers-by a striking view of the bank's interior. The atmosphere was dignified and hushed, with polite tellers, polite guards and a phalanx of polite vice-presidents regimentally arrayed at polished desks behind a brass railing.

One of the guards directed me to a marble stairway that descended to the vaults on a lower level.

Down here, insulated from the world, was an echoing tomb-like silence. Heavy stainless-steel bars fortified the vault area. Behind them, row upon row of safe-deposit boxes were visible, and at a small desk I could see the custodian, Fred Duncan.

I heard my footsteps, rose automatically and limped forward, the grim face dour and preoccupied. He turned a key and swung the door on its soundless hinges.

"Yes, sir."

I entered and the door closed. He turned to the desk for a signature slip. Then he looked up and recognized me. His face lost all expression, like a man filling a royal flush.

"Good morning, Duncan," I said pleasantly.

He narrowed suspiciously. "Can you spare me a few minutes?" I asked.

"What do you want?"

"I'd like a word with you."

"Ye have no business here," he said harshly. He limped to the door and pulled it open. "Out."

"Look Duncan—"

"Out."

I shook my head and stayed put. "I want to rent a safe-deposit box."

Seamed lips flattened against his teeth. "Why here?"

"Why not here? It's a good bank, isn't it?"

His stare was coldly hostile and searching. After a moment he shrugged sat down at the desk, produced an application card and uncapped a pen. I answered his questions and watched him record the information.

"What size box?" he demanded.

"The smallest."

"Six dollars and sixty cents."

His Scottish burr had thickened. I counted out the exact sum. He turned the card around and handed me the pen for a specimen signature. I wrote my name.

He checked a card index for available boxes, found an envelope with a pair of keys, and limped to the vault wall.

The two keys opened a small brass compartment. He withdrew a narrow rectangular box. Without comment, grimly silent, he led the way to a row of doors and pulled one open.

He snapped the light, placed the strongbox on a table, handed me one of the two keys, and closed the door.

I found some innocuous papers in my pocket and dropped them into the box. Duncan would hear them sliding around in case he shook it. I waited briefly, giving him time to get used to this new development. After a moment, I closed the box and carried it out.

Duncan accepted it without expression. He had left the compartment door open. Now he slid the box into its waiting space. He held his hand out for the key. I gave it to him. Each compartment is secured by two separate locks.

The key to one of them is retained by the bank and the customer's key operates the other. Duncan used them both and returned mine to me.

"We're running into a little trouble, Duncan," I said. He had no comment.

"It concerns your book The Kingpins. Somebody threatened to file an injunction against Zenith Films."

He stirred uneasily. He moistened his lips. "What for?"

"To prevent their filming the story."

"Who?"

"Ernie Strobe."

John D. Rockefeller reputedly refused to argue with people if they did not agree with him.

Idaho Delegates Will Become Bloc

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP)—Idaho's 26 delegates to the Democratic National Convention are authorized to vote for the presidential nominee of their choice on their first ballot.

After the first ballot, Idaho's 13 votes will be cast as a bloc for the nominee favored by the majority of the delegation. Each delegate has 1/2 vote.

The state convention selected the delegation Saturday night. It will be headed by Sen. Frank Church.

There was no attempt to instruct the delegation. An Associated Press poll showed 11 of the delegates are undecided, five favor Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.), four support Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) and one each are for Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Adlai E. Stevenson.

More Of Everything But Missiles, Says Scientist

By JOE F. KANE
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon's top military scientist says the Soviet Union has more missiles than the United States "but we have more of everything else."
Dr. Herbert F. York added "even the more missiles is not a permanent situation."
York, director of defense research and engineering, again said defense officials feel that at no time in the future could the Soviet Union attack the United States with impunity.
York and others stated their views Sunday during television interviews.
Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, former Army chief of staff, said he believed "the military trend is against us. And unless we change that trend we will soon be faced with trying to live with Communism as an inferior. I don't believe that can be done."

recognize the kind of revolutionary war being waged against us by Russia over and apart from military weapons."
He said "the floor of heaven is cluttered with evidence" that the Soviets are ahead of the United States in space activities and long-range missiles.
Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif) said that in buying defense "security ought to control—not the budget figures." He said there wasn't any question that the budget figures have been a controlling factor as far as the Eisenhower administration is concerned.
Sen. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) said the Soviet Union now has 100 major missile bases along its western frontiers. He said these bases are capable of launching destruction from Scandinavia to the Middle East.
Keating said these bases and the chief Soviet missile production centers form a separate branch of the Soviet military setup—the missile arm. He said this branch of about 200,000 men is under the command of an engineer general. Keating did not reveal the source of his information.

dr. T. Keith Glennan, administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said it will be some years before the United States matches the propulsive thrust of Soviet missiles.
"Otherwise," Glennan said, "I don't think it is a matter of overtaking and surpassing the Russians. I think we are the equal, or better of them in every other area at the present time."

Chessman's Favorite Reading On Death Row Is French Poet

By LEIF ERICKSON
SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Caryl Chessman's favorite literary figure through nearly 12 years in a death row cell is Francois Villon, roughish 15th century French poet who twice escaped hanging.
Villon, celebrating his second reprieve from doom, wrote a jubilant eight-line ballad which said, in unmetred English translation: "What d'you think of my appeal, Garner?"
"Was I wise or a fool?"
"Every beast looks to his own skin."
"And when he's trapped and held he does his utmost to get free, if he can."
"When this homely (death sentence) was sung to me, without rhyme or reason."
"Was that the time to keep my mouth shut, hey?"
The verses of Villon, born in 1431, have particularly direct appeal for him, Chessman smilingly acknowledged in an interview.
Chessman's gas chamber execution has been stayed eight times by persistent appeals. His prolonged appeal struggle aroused worldwide attention and consideration by the California Legislature of repealing the death penalty.

A legislative committee early Thursday rejected a bill which was aimed at abolishing capital punishment.
Chessman's next date with death, after a reprieve ordered by Gov. Edmund G. Brown in May 2. He originally was sentenced in June 1948 for conviction of kidnaping, robbing and sexually abusing two Los Angeles women.
Omnivorous reading has been his chief relaxation. Chessman said, when he could take time from reading law and writing briefs and letters in his marathon struggle for survival.
By mutual understanding among the condemned prisoners, now numbering 20, talk exchange and chatter knocks off at 11 p.m.
Chessman settles to his reading in the quiet night hours and stays at it until 2, 3 or 4 in the morning.
He said his law reading steered his interest toward history and how present law derives from the past. He has thoroughly studied the period of the English Magna Charta, reluctantly granted as an original bill of rights by King John June 15, 1215. The precise date was ready in Chessman's mind.
Benvenuto Cellini, the Florentine goldsmith, sculptor and artist attracted Chessman's interest before Villon as an historical figure in conflict with authority in his time.

"Cellini was a hell-raiser and a roisterer. Villon is known as a rogue and troublemaker. But also they were creative," Chessman declared.
"I don't mean to argue that you have to be a villain to be creative. But as a consequence of what they were, or perhaps in compensation, these men produced historically great creative works."
Besides his reading of choice, Chessman has completed considerable university extension correspondence study in death row. This work has included courses in French, psychology, history and mathematics. He said he has covered the equivalent of three college years.
Chessman completed the last two high school years in a previous San Quentin term. He also became quite expert then in shorthand and typing.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market held a spotty advance early this afternoon in moderate trading.

Gains of fractions to a point among leading issues outnumbered losers in the same range.

Rails continued their recovery into the fourth straight session as prospects for revenue gains over a year ago looked good to analysts. Generally higher were non-ferrous metals, oils, farm implements, aircrafts and mail order-retails.

Motors, steels and utilities turned mixed. Chemicals and airlines were mostly lower. Drugs and building materials were mixed.

The market was a little higher in early tradings but trimmed gains as the session wore on.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up .27 to 606.10. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .60 to 211.60 with the industrials up ties unchanged.

Corporate bonds were slightly higher.

U.S. government bonds rose a little.

Rawl Building Dedicated On ECC Campus Yesterday

Dedication of East Carolina College's newest and largest classroom building to the late Edwin F. Rawl of Greenville, civic and business leader and for a number of years a trustee of the college, brought to the campus yesterday approximately 300 people from Eastern and Piedmont North Carolina and from other states.

On the college Board of Trustees from 1953 until his death in 1958 Rawl served as vice chairman, chairman of the budget-building committee, and member of the executive and the scholarship foundation committees. He was founder and first president of the Pirates Club and was largely responsible for the building of a stadium for the athletic program at the college.

President Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina presided at the dedication ceremonies, held in the auditorium of the Rawl building. He eulogized Rawl as a leader who "did more than others," and who was influential in furthering the progress of the college.

Dr. Robert Lee Humber, senator from Pitt County to the North Carolina General Assembly, in the dedication address described Rawl as a man "devoted to good causes, as a person devoted by his very character to things beyond his own immediate interest," the speaker stated. "His contagious enthusiasms enabled him to sell ideas as well as things."

The home, the church, the school, Dr. Humber declared, are among the institutions working to make the United States such a nation as its citizens desire it to be. The college, he said, has the aim of creating a "climate for thinking and providing a 'workshop out of which emerge our national leaders.'"

In the drama taking place in the world today, when poverty and illiteracy cause millions to grope in darkness for a way of life and modern science presents threats to man's very existence, he continued, colleges and universities are "trusting places where the heritage of the ages can be re-appraised and re-evaluated and man's destiny can be re-defined."

To the college, he said, come those who wish "to enrich their minds and refresh their spirits."

The Rawl building, with its many classrooms, he said, is an appropriate memorial to a man of vision, and will serve as a "veritable shrine for those who believe in the triumph of the human spirit, in the fraternity of learning, and the brotherhood of man."

Dedication of the East Carolina Classroom building to Mr. Rawl constitutes, Dr. Humber said, a "tribute of gratitude and affection to a man whose friends esteem him for his virtues, and his community for his civic pride."

Unveiling of a portrait of Rawl, a gift to the college from members of his family, was an impressive part of the dedication ceremonies. The portrait will be permanently hung in the main corridor of the building.

Edwin E. Rawl III unveiled the portrait of his grandfather, an oil painting by Mrs. Georgia Pearsall Hearne, well-known Greenville artist. J. Herbert Waldrop of Greenville, chairman of the East Carolina Board of Trustees, accepted the gift for the college.

E. W. Rawl, Jr., of Greenville presented members of Mr. Rawl's family to guests at the dedication ceremonies: Mrs. Edwin E. Rawl of Greenville, his widow; Mrs. Anne Rawl of Batesburg, S. C., his mother; Mrs. Marie Rawl McCarty of Columbia, S. C., his sister; Mrs. Edwin E. Rawl, Jr., of Greenville; Edwin E. Rawl III and Julian White and Josie Rawl, grandchildren; Mrs. R. S. Atkinson and Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Atkinson, Jr., of Edenton. Included among special guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Brogan of Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Alison Hearne Moss of Greenville, soprano, accompanied by George E. Perry of the college department of music, sang "That Cause Can Neither Be Lost Nor Stayed." The Rev. Percy B. Upchurch of the Memorial Baptist Church closed the ceremony with a prayer.

President Jenkins read to those present a telegram from Dr. John D. Messick of Washington, D. C., in which the former president of East Carolina College cited Mr. Rawl's outstanding services to the college and referred to him as "a great man and citizen and one of the best friends that East Carolina College ever had."

Members of the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority entertained guests at an informal reception at the conclusion of the dedication ceremonies. A tour of the building, including the art, the business, life education, and the psychology departments, closed the events of the afternoon.

a true lover of his fellowman."

By temperament and inclination, he said, Mr. Rawl was "a businessman par excellence." Friendly, cooperative, and characterized by an initiative which never failed him, Mr. Rawl had, in addition, a "natural quality of creative leadership," Dr. Humber said, and was a "crusader for good causes. He thought big and acted on a big scale," he continued.

Captive Tells Police He Was Hired To Kill Woman

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—An off-duty state trooper raced across a snow-packed park to rescue a terrified mother, fleeing from a man who told police he was hired by her husband to kill her for $200.

State Trooper William Dahlkamp, unarmed, brought down the man, John Burris, 25, with a flying tackle late Saturday night shortly after the woman attracted his attention by deliberately crashing her car into his.

Burris, a grave digger, was quoted as saying that Alfred F. Schweska, 34, paid him the money to kill Mrs. Schweska, 28, the mother of three.

Mrs. Schweska was taken to a hospital suffering from shock. Schweska, an engineer, was arrested and charged with being an accessory before the fact of intended murder. He made no statement.

Burris was charged with breaking and entering the Schweska home with intent to commit a felony.

Both Burris and Schweska were held in Sangamon County jail under $50,000 bond each.

Police said Burris had broken into the Schweska home and seized Mrs. Schweska when she returned home from work. He forced her to drive around the city in the family car. Near Lincoln Park, Mrs. Schweska rammed the car in front of her, jumped out and ran through the park.

Burris fired a shotgun blast at her, missed, flung the gun aside and chased her. Dahlkamp, driver of the rammed auto, chased Burris and tackled him.
