Easter Spending Is For Kids

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Most of the family's Easter spending is for the kids.

That's what an Associated Press survey of merchants in 17 major cities indicated today.

The days when the whole family turned out Easter morning with new duds from head to toe are gone, merchants said. Families now tend to buy their clothing throughout the year as the need arises.

"There was a time when Easter was a dress-up must for everybody but that is not true now," said James O'Brien, vice president of Carson Pirie Scott & Co. of Chicago. "The idea now is 'dress up the kids.'"

"Women and children are getting the most from the Easter spending dollar," said a Columbus, Ohio, store executive.

"Ladies' coats are pretty good but dresses and men's suits are not so hot," said a Cleveland retailer.

Merchants are making a big effort to get dad to doll up more on Easter. They're promoting light type fabrics and a wide range of colors.

"There are new fashions and trends," a Denver merchant said, "and mom wants him up-to-date with the rest of the family—and the rest of the block."

What's selling for Easter? A big New York buying house, which represents scores of stores across the nation, says its customers report:

Women will be wearing finger-tip jacketed "walking suits," polka dot and white dresses and hats blooming with flowers.

Little girls will be turned out in checked coats and suits and frothy organdy and nylon and silk organzas in pastel "Easter egg" tones.

Young men and boys are going in for gold, black or navy wool blazers with contrasting Continental style slacks.

Merchants in most cities report that buying is picking up after a slow start because of terrible weather. Many expect to equal or surpass the record volume of the 1959 Easter season.

The later Easter is a big factor in their optimistic outlook.

In other areas, storekeepers said the prolonged period of cold and snow has taken a permanent toll and sales won't come back to 1959 levels.

With Farm Women

By MAIDRED MORRIS
(Items this week from Johnston, Rockingham, Mitchell, Currituck, Columbus, and Iredell Counties)

Fashion Show Preparations

Home Demonstration Club women in Johnston County got ready for their fashion show early this year by attending two demonstrations on clothing construction and modern fabrics.

With spring materials now on the market, the women were especially interested in synthetic fibers and blends. Miss Sarah Ann Butts, home economics agent, reports they discussed fiber content, fabric characteristics of the synthetic fibers, care, use, and approximate price. Each member studied a sample of the fabric.

Kitchen Planning

Over 50 homemakers, husbands and cabinetmakers attended a recent school on kitchen planning in Rockingham County. Miss Isabelle Buckley, home economics agent, presented facts entitled "How to Plan an Energy-Saving Kitchen."

Miss Buckley says, "The Keys to good kitchen arrangement include the best use of space available, planned storage for items at place where first used, and planned according to mixing, food preparation and dish washing, cooking, and serving centers. A tour of several kitchens took place following the meeting."

Egg Dishes

Leaders presented the demonstrations on egg dishes to the Home Demonstration Club members in Mitchell County recently. In training the leaders, Mrs. Mary Margaret Deyton, home economics agent, gave a quiz which covered the nutritional value of eggs in the daily diet, care of eggs, grades of eggs and egg versatility in cooking.

The leaders pointed out that eggs are a most economical source of high protein food, are easily digestible, are versatile, and relatively low in calories.

Craft Day

The last Wednesday in each month has been set aside by leaders in Currituck County for craft day. Mrs. Ray Morris of the Coinjock Club is now teaching the leaders how to do Italian hemstitching.

According to Mrs. Elizabeth P. Sanderlin, home economics agent, Mrs. E. R. Woodard of Coinjock, has just held her first class in copper tooling. They are planning to have different crafts taught each month.

House Furnishing Month

Home Demonstration Club members in Columbus County have been getting some good ideas in house furnishings recently. Workshops have been held on upholstery, slipcovering, and making draperies. The leaders have made draperies for the White Marsh community building using burlap lined with unbleached domestic material. Smyrna club members have also made draperies for their community building.

Miss Earline Gibson, home economics agent, says Mrs. Wilbert Batten of the White Marsh community is planning to use some of the new ideas in house furnishings in decorating her newly remodeled home.

National HDC Week

Iredell County Home Demonstration Club women are already making plans for observing National Home Demonstration Club week. At a recent council meeting, plans were made for the county Home Demonstration banquet.

Mrs. Nancy Myers, home economics agent, says they will not have a speaker this year. They are going to have their own fashion show as the program. Mrs. Tommy Williams, who is the county clothing leader, is making arrangements for the fashion revue.

Miss Shirley Whitehurst, President of the Bethel Chapter of Future Homemakers of America, was awarded the State Home-Makers Degree at the recent State F. H. A. Convention, Raleigh.

Requirements for the degree demand accredited work in school, community, home and personal improvement while the applicant is enrolled in Homemaking Education.

Others attending the convention were Lynda Martin, Linda Davenport, Mary Cheason, Nancy Sue James, Sandra Moody, Brenda Briley, Ann Jackson and Mrs. Hilda B. Carson, F.H.A. advisor.

Anytime Is Fresh Fruit Time

RALEIGH — Anytime is fresh fruit time. With modern ways of transportation, fruits from faraway places are found on the markets at prices we can afford. Fresh fruits offer innumerable ideas for breakfast treats to perk up sleepy appetites, and tempting suggestions for salads and desserts with refreshing taste-appeal.

Baking is more fun when you use the varied flavors of fresh fruits. Fruits—sharp and tangy or bland and smooth—can be combined in batters and doughs to make your baked foods something special.

Miss S. Virginia Wilson, food and nutrition specialist for the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, says you will soon see more fresh pears on the market. The bland flavor of this fruit lends a subtle sweetness to coffee cakes, rolls and pies.

Pears to eat out of hand achieve prime condition when left to ripen at ordinary room temperature. But, for baking and cooking, pears are best when firm and slightly under-ripe.

Bananas—the fruit that grows upside down in its own jacket—blend with other fruits to produce refreshing salads, toppings for shortcakes, and mouth-watering pie fillings. They are a year-round favorite. When the peel is yellow and flecked with brown, the banana is ideal for fruit cups, salads and desserts.

In a few weeks, North Carolina grown strawberries will be found in plentiful supply on the market. Miss Wilson suggests that you use them as well as oranges and grapefruit in salads or desserts to get your daily quota of vitamin C. Eat fresh fruits daily because they are packed with health protecting minerals and vitamins.

When broiler-fryers are to be cooked in a small amount of fat in a skillet, it's better to have them cut into serving-size pieces rather than into quarters.

Two cups diced processed cheese, plus 1-3 cup of milk, melted in a double broiler, makes a tasty and speedy sauce for vegetables.

Today's Women

Lines for a poet of the Strange Sixties:
"Your eyes are like rubies, your lips are like grass, your skin is like violets, my rainbow lass."
This is the new beauty prescription for glamor girls of the space age, and no fooling. Already on the market, and highly touted by experts in these matters, are colored contact lenses, violet or green face powder and lipsticks in tradition-shattering shades of green, blue, violet and yellow as well as the old-hat rosy hues. Eyes to match your costume color are the latest to hit the fashion spectrum, introduced at a full-dress fashion show in New York this week. Colors available in the standard line of contact lenses include: yellow, red, pink, orange, tangerine, tiger, gold, three greens, lavender, orchid and jet. More than 100 other colors may be had by special order.

It may be confusing if a girl has blue eyes in the daytime and shows up with red eyes at night, but you must admit that it will be interesting. Even more startling, and recommended only for daring types, would be the mismatch trend—one red eye and one green, for instance.

Just to make things more confusing, there are the new face powder and foundation shades of green and lavender, currently promoted by some of the country's top cosmetic houses, and the off-beat lipstick colors, also off and running.

When it comes to hair, of course, the solar spectrum is the limit.

Add to the picture the current widespread use of colored eyeshadow, mascara and eyebrow pencil, and the new style American beauty can stop traffic anywhere in the world.

It's Important To Be Counted Now

It is important to Pitt County and each of its municipalities that every citizen be counted in the decennial census now being taken throughout the United States.

It is important not only from the local standpoint, but it is important from the standpoint of the state as well.

While most people think in terms of the census as merely a way of getting an official total of the population of their town, county or state, the census figures are of considerably more importance to the political subdivision than satisfying normal curiosity about how many people live here or there.

From the standpoint of the relationship between the state and the federal government, the population of a state as shown by the census every 10 years determines how many representatives. Each state is allotted its proportionate share of representation based on its percentage of the total national population.

Thus, in a state in which the census figures do not represent accurate the population, representation in Congress may not be what it should.

A similar relation exists in North Carolina between the individual counties and the General Assembly.

The Conference On Our Children

By ED RANKIN

Guest writer today

WASHINGTON, D. C.—What is the real impact of commercial television programs on our youngsters today? This has been the subject of much sound and fury in recent years among parents, educators, church and civic groups, and the TV networks.

Experts in mass communications here at the White House Conference on Children and Youth sadly admitted that there is no existing research which will prove that TV has any effect—good or bad—on normal children.

There seems to be some research which indicates that frustrated or emotionally disturbed children might be unduly influenced by programs dealing in violence and crime.

Dr. Leo Bartemeir, a Baltimore psychiatrist, stated that not only is it difficult to prove any lasting TV impact on the child, but that some children often experience an even greater threat to emotional stability by an unstable family life where there is little affection shown.

Dr. Leo Bartemeir, a Baltimore psychiatrist, stated that not only is it difficult to prove any lasting TV impact on the child, but that some children often experience an even greater threat to emotional stability by an unstable family life where there is little affection shown.

There are now 5 1/2 million TV sets in America, 86 per cent of American families have a set, 81 per cent have a choice of at least four channels, and school children spend an average of 1 1/2 hours per week watching TV.

Dr. Chester Babcock, a Seattle educational TV director, urged that the conference beware of over-generalizations on TV and other mass communications.

While impact of TV may not be measured accurately, he said, the impact does exist ("look at the millions spent on advertising") and this will continue in the future.

The electronics revolution might be compared in importance to the invention of movable type in the 15th century. He urged wise and proper use of TV and radio by families where the parents generally set the example by their tastes for viewing, as well as their tastes for reading.

READING—The printed word has been around a long time and the value of reading is well-recognized by everyone, but it is still difficult, if not impossible, to measure impact of reading on a child.

Agnes Krarup, a Pittsburgh librarian, said that "we do not really know the effect of books on youth except as revealed by youth itself... and it is difficult to grasp the total reaction of children."

A report on comic books echoed the same opinion that little is known on effects of children reading these books. What ever the effect, there were 600 million comics sold last year at a rate of 275 different titles a month.

Delegates quickly agreed that they opposed the dissemination of all types of obscene and pornographic materials—printed or otherwise—to children. However, their efforts to define what is obscene or pornographic proved so difficult that most recommendations merely called for "strengthening existing state and federal laws" dealing with this problem.

NEWSPAPERS—The more mass media becomes the less it will influence family life, according to Dorothy Barclay, family news editor of the New York Times.

However, she stressed that editors and newsmen are also parents and responsible citizens, and she urged community leaders to talk with their editors on any problems which might arise in this field.

One work group, meanwhile, commended the many newspapers for excellent coverage given youth and their accomplishments.

HERE AND THERE—Max Tharpe, Statesville free-lancer, had three photographs in the excellent Conference photographic report on children and youth.

Leo Rosten of LOOK Magazine, commenting on TV: "There is gigantic space and time to fill and not enough excellent material or talent to go around. The greatest scarcity is the man with brains plus judgment plus imagination plus the skills of communicating."

Aside from government representation, community and county population is important when it comes to distributing public funds from the state and national levels. Particularly on the state level, most money earmarked for distribution to local government is distributed on formulas which include local population as a factor.

The population shown by the census for Pitt County and its individual municipalities, therefore, will have a bearing on how much state and federal tax money may be coming back to local governments in the form of fund distributions in the next 10 years.

The figures will also have a bearing on the county's voice in state affairs, and together with the other counties of the state will be a factor in determining the state's representation in Congress.

From the standpoint of helping his community now and for the next 10 years, every citizen has a responsibility to see that he is included in the decennial count now going on. It is important to the local government—just as it is to the country as a whole—to see that all its citizens are counted in the census.

Welfare Payments Is Now A Minor Issue

In making a move which almost certainly will lead to restoring welfare payments to needy aged and disabled persons Gov. Hodges has done three things in addition to responding to public demands.

First, he has taken a step which will result in reinstating the former level of payments to some of the most needy citizens of the state. It is a step which should not have been necessary in the first place because the payments should have not been reduced.

Secondly, the situation over the welfare payments of the state represents one of the few times since taking office that the governor in effect has reversed a stand taken by his administration. When the matter of reduced welfare payments for the aged and disabled first became a public controversy, Gov. Hodges stood by the assertion that the matter was out of the hands of the administration.

Now, with the announcement that the governor has asked the Advisory Budget Commission to consider restoring the payments to their former levels by June 1, it is a foregone conclusion that the Commission will see that the payments are restored to the level requested by the governor.

Thirdly, Gov. Hodges, with the announcement of his action, removed from the current gubernatorial race what appeared certain to be one of the most talked-about issues in the campaign. Each of the gubernatorial candidates spoke out on the issue which was one of the focal points of the early days of the official campaign.

The matter of reduced welfare payments by the state probably will continue to be referred to in the current campaign, but at best now it has been reduced to a minor issue in the battle. Had it not been for the attention focused upon the issue early in the gubernatorial race, it may have been that the payments would not have been restored to their former level until after the legislature convened in 1961.

Wisconsin No Door To Victory

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Winning the Wisconsin presidential primary in recent years has been like winning one free pass to the exit.

So, even if Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) beats Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn) in the Wisconsin Democratic primary today, it's no assurance he will win the Democratic presidential nomination at his party's convention in Los Angeles.

Look what happened to Sens. Estes Kefauver and Robert A. Taft in the past two elections and, before them, to Harold Stassen.

Tennessee's Kefauver won the Wisconsin primary twice in a row—in 1952 and 1956—but both times later lost the Democratic presidential nomination to Adlai Stevenson who did not run in either primary.

Ohio's Taft won the Wisconsin Republican presidential primary in 1952 but then lost his party's presidential nomination to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The forever hopeful Stassen won in Wisconsin in 1948 only to be drowned out later when the Republican convention chose Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York for its presidential candidate.

In 1952 in Wisconsin Kefauver had no opposition except for a couple of stand-ins for President Truman. But Truman had already said he was not a candidate.

That year Kefauver won 14 out of 16 primary races. He had the primary all to himself in 1956, just a couple of weeks after beating Stevenson in the Minnesota primary.

The Tennesseean's experience tends to support what Truman said this past week-end: that primaries are "eye-wash" and a date-wants to be nominated he should not enter the primaries.

Nevertheless, Kennedy and Humphrey are battling in Wisconsin and have entered other primaries in an effort to show they can win voter support.

Stevenson, who took a physical beating running in the primaries in 1956, got his fill of it that year. This year, of course, he says he is not seeking the nomination, which is a good excuse for not going into primary races. But he has not said he would refuse the nomination.

The two other would-be Democratic presidential candidates—Sens. Stuart Symington of Missouri and Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas—seem to share Truman's feeling about primaries. They are staying out.

Nothing conclusive is likely to be proved in Wisconsin anyway. For instance, the question: Is Kennedy handicapped by being a Roman Catholic? In the first place Wisconsin has a large Catholic population. But the whole question got muddled up last week.

It could cause trouble but with no other Republican presidential candidate in sight, he still has a strangle-hold on the party's nomination next summer.

The Prompter

Cloudy, Mood Is Gloom

The skies are cloudy—The mood is gloom; Is there a columnist in the room?

We won't claim to be the author of this piece of poetry, found tucked away in our typewriter. We got the message, though from the melodious bard hiding somewhere in our mind.

As for a mood of gloom. Did you watch a certain television program on Sunday night, entitled "Alas, Babylon"?

bombs and missiles exploding all over the U. S. The subject was man turned into the epitome of selfishness and animalism.

The atmosphere was one of impending doom. Most of the people died from exposure to radioactivity, but others were murdered through lust for drugs and food.

A few years ago, a situation such as this seemed beyond comprehension. Then followed the period when everyone everywhere was having air examined for radioactive content, in a fit of fear.

There have been several books on the subject of extinction by radiation, which more recently have been portrayed on screen and television.

If the idea is to make us think, the goal has been reached.

And "Alas, Babylon" reminds us of something from Shakespeare—"What fools these mortals be."

On the subject of the Academy Awards. We were struck with the idea just the other day that census-taking time and the awards happen about the same time. We have been living in anxiety lest some census taker come to count our noses while we are watching the stars shine.

This recalls an amusing situation that happened some months ago. When the book "Anatomy of a Murder" first came out and was a best seller, we decided it was a must on our reading list.

Innocently, very innocently, we approached a counter loaded with all the latest books. We searched in vain until a helpful clerk offered to find the book, "Anatomy of a Murder."

"Here's something," she said, "here's what you want." The title of the something was called "Anatomy of Me" and very obviously was not what I wanted. So I tried again.

That's a new twist for us—almost the same. We didn't even give the substitute a fair chance. We waited and settled finally for the murder anatomy—one of the awards favorites.

Quote

"During the past 5 years, the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee has held many days of hearings on bills which would provide Federal aid to the States for the construction of schools. And yet, there has never been one State school of officer, when closely questioned by members of the committee, who admitted that his State could not adequately take care of its own classroom shortage. This point is well illustrated by the fact that during the past 10 years, 500,000 classrooms have been built in the United States, 71,600 alone in the school year of 1957-58."—Sen. Barry Goldwater.

Russian Gold Supply

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC. The Russians have not published their figures on gold and therefore there is much speculation as to precisely how much gold the Russians have. As there is also much doubt as to how much gold the Government of the United States actually owns (ear - marked gold is not owned by the U. S. but by the nation for which it is ear-marked), the comparison could be of some value.

1922-1930	8 million ounces
1930-1935	10 million ounces
1935-1941	35 million ounces
1941-1945	20 million ounces
1945-1950	105 million ounces
1950-1954	315 million ounces
1954-1960	72 million ounces
Total	247 million ounces

"Inherited from pre-revolutionary Russia about 500 metric tons (over 300 metric tons taken, in addition, by Czechoslovakia)."

"Collected through 'Torgsin' 1930-1935 perhaps about 500 metric tons."

"From 'reparation pot' of Germany—another 200 metric tons."

"Altogether about 8,960 metric tons equals about 300 million ounces equals $10,500,000,000 (this is without platinum, silver diamonds)."

"Spent, in gold, before World War II about $700,000,000"

"Sold in London and Switzerland in 1953 $150,000,000"

1955—$70,000,000
1956—$150,000,000
1957—$260,000,000
1958—$210,000,000
1959—$120,000,000

Total $960,000,000 Plus 700,000,000

In all $1,660,000,000 This leaves the USSR as of today with about $9,000,000,000 worth of gold.

"The sales of gold before the war were needed to pay for purchases of machinery and equipment for new industries. The war: to cover deficit of trade with Sterling Area and for gold loans to Poland, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Soviet foreign trade is relatively small. As an importer the USSR stays behind the U. S., Canada, France, West Germany, the Netherlands, England, and Japan (in 1957-1958 it was importing about $3,900,000,000 worth of goods a year)."

Self-sufficiency remains the principle of Soviet economy. As an exporter it is behind the above mentioned countries except Japan and the Netherlands (in 1957-58 it was exploring at the rate of $4,400,000,000 a year)."

"Because of consistently favorable balance in trade the USSR has probably accumulated between $1,000,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 worth of foreign currency by now."

"Soviet aid is in the form of loans (with 2 per cent interest), for all purposes, mostly in the form of Soviet goods and military equipment. The amount authorized in 1954-1959—but not necessarily spent—$1,975,000,000."

The amount inherited from pre-revolutionary Russia has to be guessed at because there was no record of gold deposits scattered over the world. It was known that large gold deposits, for instance, were in Shanghai but it is not known what became of them.

The Czechoslovak gold referred to here relates to the dramatic march of Czechs from south central Russia to China carrying this gold and buying their freedom with it. The Bolsheviks finally got the gold. The sales of gold on the London and Zurich markets have been continuous and it is more than likely that the United States bought much of this gold, thus providing dollars for the purchase of goods in Europe.

What all these figures amount to is that an expert estimates that Soviet Russia has $9,000,000,000 (Continued on page five)

Explaining The Job-Exporting

By ELMER ROESSNER
"Exporting jobs" is a phrase you'll hear more often this election year. Here's an attempt to define and explain it.

A job is exported when a manufacturer takes a task away from one of his employees and pays someone in a foreign country to do the same work. That's the basic concept. By projection, a manufacturer exports jobs when he buys components in a foreign country instead of making them with his own force, or when an industry buys materials, components or complete articles abroad which it might have made with jobholders in its own field.

The high wage scales in the United States are largely blamed for "job exports." A manufacturer may find it costs him $1 in American labor to make a component, but it may cost only 10 cents to have the same component made by labor in Japan. So he "exports" the jobs of making that component to Japan. American workers are laid off; Japanese craftsmen are hired.

DECLINE IN EXPORTS

Sometimes this job export consists of having articles crafted abroad and sent here. In other instances it may involve having an article made abroad for sale there, or in another foreign country. For example, the maker of a household appliance may find the cost of making the motor in America makes it impossible for him to compete with foreign manufacturers. So he may set up an assembly plant in France, shipping the stamped-out components from America and buying motors made abroad. While he may not have the assembled appliances shipped back to America for sale, he may find costs low enough to compete in the French market or in other European and perhaps African and Latin-American markets.

It is difficult to assess the amount of job exporting being done. American export sales are running $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 a year behind imports, but that it's no true measure because figures include travel, tourism, subsidized agricultural exports

TARIFFS NO ANSWER

A solution frequently suggested for the imbalance of foreign trade and for the job-export problem, is higher tariffs. While such levies could be effective in restricting imports of goods and components for the domestic market, they would not stop job exports when the end products were sold abroad.

A survey by Mill & Factory magazine provides some relevant facts. It polled 243 industrial firms and found that 6 per cent bought foreign-made components for assembly in this country and that 6 per cent had entire products made abroad for sale here.

and other variables. While not definitive, these figures suggest a considerable export of American jobs.

And truly significant were the answers to the question: "If you said yes to the foregoing questions, what prompted your firm to seek foreign sources?" The answers: Low-cost labor 40% Better quality workmanship 4% Both of above 7% Access of markets 2% Tariff circumvention 20%

Of those using foreign sources, 6 per cent said they need more workers, 15 per cent said they need fewer and 79 per cent said using foreign sources had no effect on the work force. HOUSE NOT A HOME, TAPE NOT A RECORD In a characteristic demonstration of its unassailable logic, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has decided that a tape recording is not a phonograph record. There's an excise tax on records, but it does not apply to tapes, says Rev. Rul. 60-105.

'Somebody Out There' Could Be Far Ahead Of Man

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer
Green BANK, W. Va. (AP) —
Once upon a time, man believed he lived in the very center of the universe, supremely alone.
But today's astronomers are pretty confident intelligent life and civilizations thrive on hundreds or millions of planets.
And somebody out there, they think, could be astonishingly far advanced by having lived and invented for hundreds, thousands or even a billion years longer than man has on earth.
Scientists here just recently developed sensitive antennae and radio amplifiers which could pick up signals beamed our way from planets thousands of billions of miles away.
These are prime reasons for attempting now to listen for signals from space, using the gleaming radio telescope — 85 feet in diameter — at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory here.

Special equipment for this first vigil has cost only about $10,000 in taxpayers' funds, through the National Science Foundation which supports the observatory.
There are compelling reasons for hoping for success ultimately if not immediately, explains Dr.
Frank D. Drake, astronomer directing Project Ozma.
Man lives and is warmed by one rather ordinary star — our sun.
Our sun is one of perhaps 200 billion stars or stars making up a great galaxy, the Milky Way.
The Milky Way is only one of billions of galaxies, some with more and some with fewer stars.

Many astronomers now think that somewhere between one and fifty per cent of all stars have planets wheeling around them.
To support life, a planet must be neither too close nor too far from its star. Earth is fortunate this way, and life developed here.
But possibly millions of stars have favorable-located planets, and have shone long enough at constant intensity to develop intelligent life. Many of these could be in the Milky Way, potentially close enough for radio contact despite the vast reaches of space between almost all stars.
There's little hope of ever hearing from planets in other galaxies, for the galaxy closest to us is 1½ million light years away. A message would take 1½ million years to reach us, our reply another 1½ million years to speed back.
But there is reasonable hope of communicating with planets in the Milky Way, itself so vast it takes light or radio waves 100,000 years to cross its expanse. But many stars are relatively nearby.
Many stars and planets could be older than we, and possess highly intelligent life.
This all involves a theory that stars are continually being born and continually dying over cosmic time, Dr. Drake explains.
By this theory, our Milky Way began some 25 billion years ago
as a vast cloud of hydrogen gas.
Many whorls of gas condensed into the first, and oldest, stars.
Such stars aren't thought to have planets, because they contained no heavy elements like iron and uranium with which to make planets.
But in time, many of these first stars blew up, after first having cooked up and produced heavy elements, which then were spewed out into the hydrogen cloud. This enriched gas could form new stars which could have planets.

There is evidence our sun was born about 5 billion years ago after the explosion of a first father or progenitor star.
Gradually, processes on the cooling earth built up complex organic chemicals. Then about two billion years ago the first simple life appeared, evolving until modern man appeared on the scene some 50,000 years ago or more. Now we think we're fairly smart.

But planets around other stable stars could have formed much earlier, even a billion years or more earlier. If evolution occurred on them as on earth, their life is far smarter scientifically.

To them we might resemble cave-men, says Dr. Drake.
The first listening is for possible signals from two stars about the size of the sun, but astronomers don't know if they have planets, or whether they would be younger or older than we are.
Even if there is no one home

there, there could be other planets farther away which are trying to get in touch with us, beaming out radio signals saying in effect:
"Please answer the telephone, if you have a telephone."

Drenching Rains Could Change Tide In Masters

By WILL GRIMSLEY Associated Press Sports Writer AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Drenching rains have turned the 24th Masters golf tournament, starting Thursday, into a prospective battle of muscle men and one of the most eminent of these, Sam Snead, says it could be his year.

Nicklaus, a blond, 200-pound package of power from Columbus, Ohio, trudged around the Augusta National course in a driving rain Monday in 69, three under par. It was the best score of those rash enough to buck the elements. No amateur ever has won the Masters.

course is soggy and dull. "There's no possibility that the course can dry out by the weekend," Snead said. "More rain is forecast for today. It's going to be very slow."

Throneberry Drives Home Winning Run As Nats Trim Athletics 3-2

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer
WASHINGTON'S fearsome four-some minus one, shopping around for a new partner to aid in the war against organized pitching, today began checking the credentials of Faye Maynard Throneberry.

Allison. Killebrew (42), Lemon (33), Allison (30) and Sievers (21) slugged 126 home runs during the 1959 campaign and a little more power from Throneberry could make up for the departure of the aging Sievers.

Throneberry continued his torrid hitting along major league baseball's exhibition trail Monday, driving in the winning run with a seventh-inning single as the Senators edged Kansas City 3-2 in the only game played.

With slugger Roy Sievers traded to Chicago's White Sox for catcher Earl Battey, first baseman Don Mincher and $150,000, Throneberry may be just the man to fill the depleted ranks.

A 28-year-old Tennessean who has kicked around the American League since he came up with Boston in 1952, Throneberry crashed the Washington lineup last season and compiled a .251 batting average in 117 games. The outfielder-first baseman hit 10 home runs and accounted for 42 runs batted in.

Now he's the sensation of the Senators' training camp with his .462 batting average, and has been outshining the fearsome foursomes' holdovers — Harmon Killebrew, Jim Lemon and Bob

For a young fellow who joined the touring pros with some misgivings, Mason Rudolph has done extremely well. It wasn't that the 25-year-old Tennessean lacked confidence in his own ability, but he did face up to the fact that the pro tour was packed with experienced stars and earning a living in such competition might be difficult for one fresh out of the amateur ranks.

Rudolph's interest in golf began when he was a caddy for his father. At 8, he helped his older brother, Jackie, construct a miniature golf course on the lawn of

Peoria Is Hot Bed For Cagers

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — This city of 110,000, once the cross roads of the country's vaudeville circuit, is proudly proclaiming itself the modern cradle of amateur basketball.

It's a strong claim, for Bradley University recently won the NIT title in New York and the Peoria Cats took the National AAU crown in Denver and finished second in the Olympic Trials last week.

The comeback of Peoria basketball to national prominence after the point shaving scandal struck Bradley a decade ago gives the basketball-loving populace particular pride.

Sox Trade Off Young Talent For Sievers

By JOE MOOSHL
Associated Press Sports Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox are still trading away youth and promise for experenced ball players in an effort to win a second straight American League pennant.

The White Sox Monday peddled catcher Earl Battey and first baseman Don Mincher plus $150,000 for Roy Sievers, slugging outfielder-first baseman whom they have sought for years from Washington.

It was the third major deal since winning the pennant last fall in which the Sox have traded away promising youngsters for proven sluggers.

President Bill Veeck, having reached the top, is determined to keep the club there and he has been adding power to the attack without hurting the team's front line pitching and defense.

Aside from Battey, 24, and Mincher, 22, the Sox have traded away the likes of Johnny Callison, 21; Ron Jackson, 26; Norm Cash, 25, and Johnny Romano, 25.

Callison went to Philadelphia for third baseman Gene Freese, 26. Jackson was peddled to Boston for southpaw pitcher Frank Baumann, 26. Cash, Romano and Bubba Phillips, 30, went to Cleveland for Minnie Minoso who is anywhere from 37 to 40—nobody knows for sure, probably not even Minnie.

Freese will play third base, Minoso left field. But the 33-year-old Sievers is a question mark. Manager Al Lopez has indicated Sievers will be used as a pinch batter and insurance for first baseman Ted Kluszewski and Minoso.

Regardless of where Sievers, Minoso and Freese are used, the Sox have strengthened themselves. However, the day will come when Minoso and Sievers are no longer playing while youngsters like Callison, Mincher, Battey, Cash and Romano could be starring in the majors.

Nevertheless, Minoso, Freese and Sievers hit a total of 65 homers last season while the entire White Sox team had only 87 — lowest in the majors.

CHAPTER 28
My phone rang and I picked it up.
"Mr. Jordan?" The voice was breathless.
"Speaking," I said.
"This is Mrs. Wallace—Lorna Wallace, remember?"
"Of course, Kate's mother."
"Yes, I promised to call you if I heard from Kate. Well, I got a telegram just a little while ago. Kate says she's fine and I'm not to worry and she's writing me a long letter to tell me all about it."
"That's fine, Mrs. Wallace. I said you'd hear from her."
"Yes, you did. And you were right."
"Where did the wire originate the faint rustle of paper and from Mrs. Wallace?"
"Just a moment." I could hear the faint rustle of paper and then her voice again. "Kate's in Mexico. A place called Acapulco." She pronounced it slowly. "I hope I'm doing the right thing. Nothing's going to happen to Kate, is it, Mr. Jordan?"
Kate would suffer a little. That couldn't be helped. But the human spirit is resilient and a broken heart readily heals.
"Kate's going to be fine," I said. "You did the right thing, Mrs. Wallace. And thank you for calling." We hung up.
So Dan Varney was in Mexico. No wonder Max Turner had found no record of any passport. None is needed to cross the border.
I got through to Max at the hospital.
He was irritated and resentful at his enforced confinement. "How do you feel, Max?" I asked him.
"Well enough," he grumbled.
"Except for a headache. If I could find my clothes I'd sneak out of here."
"They're discharging you tomorrow. Think you can travel?"
"Sure. Where?"
"Mexico."
"That's up, Counselor?"
"There's a good chance we've located Dan Varney. I think he's holed up in Acapulco. I want you to fly down there first thing in the morning."

"And if I find him?"
"Let me know at once. I'll start the wheels rolling on extradition proceedings at this end. Have you got that?"
"Yes, sir."
"I'll make a plane reservation. A ticket will be waiting for you at Idlewild. I'll have them notify you of the exact time and flight number."
"They can reach me here all right."
"Take care, Max. And don't stop any bullets."
I hung up and reached for the telephone directory. I found the LeMar Studios and dialed their number. They were still working, a voice told me, and Barbara Coleman was on camera at the moment, would I care to wait? I said no, and please give her a message — Mr. Jordan would pick her up there within the hour.
I left the office and headed uptown.
Fred Duncan had lived in a modest walk-up on the third floor. The key Ruth Duncan had given me opened his door. Naturally, the police had been there before me. But they were shooting in the dark, not sure what to look for.
Duncan, apparently, had been a neat, methodical man. No clothes were strewn haphazardly about. So I checked the garments in his closet. In a pair of serge trousers I found a penknife, a cigar trimmer, a clipping from one of the newspapers about Aznith Films' tentative plans for the casting of The Kingpins, and a slip of paper with two telephone numbers — Butterfield 2-0010 and Circle 3-8624. The first I recognized at once.
It was my own.
The room was close and musty. I opened one of the windows and sat on a hard-backed chair to concentrate. The naked globe cast its niggardly illumination over a round cloth-covered table. Ideas dinged in my head, disconnected theories. I nourished them with fresh revelations, and out of the jigsaw a picture began to focus. A picture I did not like. And I liked it even less on closer inspection.

Finally I stood up, turned out the light, and let Fred Duncan's quarters, locking the door behind me.
A deep-throated ominous rumble of thunder brought Barbara Coleman closer to my side in the cab.
By the time we got out, it was raining.
Victoria Dodd opened the door. "I was getting worried. Come on in."
She took our coats.
Gil Dodd was at the cellaret, mixing martinis. Apparently he'd been testing the concoction. There was a rosy flush to his square brown face. He filled some glasses and dropped in a twist of lemon peel.
Victoria refused a drink. She wanted an immediate council of war, asking about Adam.
"He's bearing up," I told her. "Do they treat him decently?"
"Well, it's not the Waldorf. Neither is it a concentration camp."
"How about ball?"
"I spoke to the District Attorney. He refused to cooperate. But the picture isn't all black. There's good news too."
Barbara stirred, suddenly alert. "Well, tell us."
"I think we've found Dan Varney."
Questions flew. They all jabbered simultaneously. I told them about Kate Wallace, and about my upstate visit to her mother. I told them about the telegram, and my assumption that Kate had gone to join Varney in Mexico.
"What do we do now?" Barbara demanded.
"It's already done," I said. "I have a man flying down there tomorrow morning. We'll haul Varney back on extradition proceedings. I doubt if he's spent too much of that fifty thousand dollars. We're nailing him too soon. So most of the loot will be recovered. Enough, anyway, to clean up the Duncan lawsuit."
Barbara clapped her hands rhapsodically.
Gil Dodd glowed. "That's capital news. I'm delighted. Jordan."
But Victoria brought them down to earth. "What are we crowing about? It doesn't help Adam on that murder charge, does it?"
"No," I said. "But there's other evidence piling up all the time. New elements have come to light. I think we can offer the District Attorney a much better candidate than Adam."
"Who?" demanded Dodd. "That police sergeant? Ernie Strobe?"
I shook my head. "Not him."
"Well, who then?" Barbara's voice rose impatiently.
"The same person who shot Cassidy."
"No," I said. "But I thought you were sure Strobe did it, that he meant you to be the victim, that he shot Cassidy by mistake."
"The mistake was mine," I

Movie Industry Hasn't Yet Solved TV Secrets

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TR-Radio Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of all its years of experience awarding Oscars in front of TV cameras, the mighty motion picture industry hasn't yet figured out how to turn a private evening into a sharp and shapely program. Monday night's 32nd annual Academy Awards show was very something all the other awards, including the TV Emmys, lack. Maybe it's years, maybe it is the prestige of all those stars on the stage and in the audience.

There was not much suspense about the winning picture: "Ben-Hur" starting picking up statuettes at the outset and swept just about every category in which it was nominated.

Bob Hope is an able master of ceremonies. He had the traffic on stage under control at all times and a handy supply of appropriate wisecracks. Warmest applause of the evening came when he was given a special Jean Hersholt humanitarian award—an Oscar.

"I don't know what to say," said Hope. "I don't have writers for this type of work."

Screen credits at the program's end listed seven writers for his material.

It was a happy evening for Yves Montand and his wife, Simon Signoret. Montand, a newcomer to America, got a big reception for two charming French musical numbers during one of the pauses in award giving and a few minutes later his wife won an Oscar for best performance by an actress in "Room at the Top."

The Oscar awards was preceded by a half-hour program showing some of the stars dining in a Hollywood restaurant. It was a dull and awkward little interlude reminiscent of the old Stork Club show of early TV.

Recommended tonight: "Incident at a Corner," NBC, 8:30-9:30 — Paul Hartman and Vera Miles in a suspense show directed by Alfred Hitchcock; Garry Moore Show, CBS, 10-11 — with guests Janis Paige and Allen Case of "The Deputy".

Negro Boycott, Even To Point Of Passing Up Easter Finery, Sought

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new battlecry, "No fashions for Easter," has been sounded in the fight by Negroes for equal treatment in Southern business establishments.

Dr. Vivian Henderson, an economics professor at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., urged more than 500 Negroes at a meeting in Nashville to continue boycotting downtown business firms, even to the point of passing up Easter finery.

The boycotts were begun two weeks ago in support of efforts to end racial segregation at lunch counters. Henderson said, "Millions of dollars are being lost by the city of Nashville over a 25-cent hamburger."

In Memphis, Tenn., a two-week truce was broken when eight Negro students were arrested Monday at public libraries restricted to white persons.

Two Negro ministers and 10 students drew fines of $100 and 180 days in jail each after being convicted in Birmingham, Ala., Monday night on charges resulting from sit-in demonstrations.

One of the ministers, the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, drew the same penalty on yet another charge—giving a false report to police. The charge was in connection with the report a Negro had been a victim of a castration attempt by white men.

All 12 of those convicted said they would appeal.

Elsewhere, a variety store lunch counter was closed in Greensboro, N.C., today for the first time, and legal action was planned against Negro student demonstrators in Texas and Louisiana.

Not all of the racial trouble was in the South. Two Portland, Ore., Negroes were charged with the senseless beating to death of a white man, Paul Arnold Machen and Charles Ivan Patterson Jr., both 21, were charged with murder. Police said they had been drinking and one of them reported they became upset over racial

WILL WORK TOGETHER

PANAMA (AP)—Colombia and Panama have agreed to work together to finish the Pan American Highway. President Alberto Lleras Camargo of Colombia and President Ernesto de la Guardia Jr. of Panama signed a pledge Sunday to negotiate the financing of the highway's last leg, on both sides of their common border.

troubles in Africa and the South and wanted to do something about it.

Closing of the F. W. Woolworth Co. store, where the Southern sit-down demonstrations began Feb. 1, was announced by a company official who said the action was designed to maintain a peaceful atmosphere in the city until authorities solve Negro demands for integrated seating.

There was no immediate indication whether Woolworths planned similar action in other cities where sit-ins have occurred.

Negro pickets from Greensboro A & T College paraded in front of both the Woolworth and S. H. & Co. stores but there were no incidents.

The sit-down movements was renewed at High Point, N.C., where seven Negro high school pupils unsuccessfully sought service at Woolworth's. The demonstrators then moved to the McClellan store next door and were served standing up. Lunch counter stools were removed after a previous sit-down.

At Marshall, Tex., some of the 71 Negro college students arrested during eight days of demonstrations, were expected to be tried.

Marshall merchants planned to meet behind closed doors tonight to discuss what to do about the situation and District Judge Sam B. Hall ordered the county grand jury to probe for possible outside effect in Nashville.

influences in last week's turbulent sit-down protests.

The district attorney at Baton Rouge, La., planned to file formal charges against nine Negro Southern University students arrested during last week's demonstrations at white lunch counters. All are free on bond.

Southern University administrators estimated 260 of the 4,850 registered students had withdrawn from the college. Student leaders had asked for a mass withdrawal because of the arrests, but later reversed their request.

At Knoxville, Tenn., the school board approved a grade-a-year plan for desegregation of city schools. It is similar to one in effect in Nashville.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued slightly higher in moderate trading early this afternoon.

Gains of fractions to a point among pivotal issues but unnumbered losers.

Some profit taking among Monday's wide gaining "science" stocks was followed by a partial recovery.

The over-all market was a desultory and patchy affair with no group leadership.

Sharp drop in the steel industry operating rate contributed to doubt about the economic outlook. Steel shares were narrowly mixed.

Motors declined slightly. Non-ferrous metals showed a slightly easier trend. Gains among selected chemicals, electrical equipments and rails helped support the popular market averages.

Texas Instruments, a 10-point gainer Monday, lost a fraction in latest dealings.

Polaroid gained a point. Litton Industries and General Electric about 2.

Westinghouse Electric, Union Carbide, DuPont and Goodrich rose about a point each.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was up 2.08 at 620.62.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .40 to 214.80 with the industrials up 1.00, the rails up .30 and the utilities down .10.

Winners Announced In Student Art Exhibition

Winners of the N. C. Senior High School Talent Exhibition have been announced by Francis Lee Neel of East Carolina College. There were no winners from this area.

The overall winner was John Tyndall of Greensboro, student at Spring Garden Street School, who was awarded a $100 scholarship by the N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, who sponsors the exhibition with Hallmark Cards.

Three prizes of $25 each were awarded in the following categories: best oil painting, Rebecca Ragan of Archdale, student at High Point Senior High; water color, Rebecca Barham of Greensboro, Greensboro High School; graphic art, Jan Mooney of Greensboro, student at Spring Garden Street School.

Margaret Drake of Hendersonville High School won a cup as a district award, in a different category from the high school seniors.

Neel said between 60 and 70 paintings were entered in the exhibit and will be on display until Friday in the art department of East Carolina College, located on the third floor of Rawl Building.

Judges in addition to Neel were Mrs. Georgia Pearsall Hearne and Mrs. Robert K. Stuart.

Find Man Died Of Broken Neck

Reports of an autopsy performed on the body of Josephus Daniels Waters, a 35-year-old Jacksonville man found dead in a farm irrigation pond Saturday afternoon showed his death was due to a fractured neck, according to Pitt County Coroner E. W. Harvey.

Harvey had ordered the autopsy when Waters was found in a pond on the Hugh Winslow farm about one and one-half miles south of Greenville on the Hooker Road, where Fairlane Drive intersects.

A van-type delivery truck, which officers theorize Waters drove into the lake, was also recovered from the pond by members of the Greenville Rescue Squad and employees of a local construction firm, with the use of a large model crane.

Waters, an employee of Honeycutt's Beauty Supply Company of Greenville, was last seen by Ben Adams of 2603 Jefferson Drive Thursday night when Adams left Waters at a local motel. Adams is also an employee of the beauty supply company.

Officers, who said Waters and the truck, owned by Honeycutt's, was reported missing Friday, voiced the opinion that Waters left the motel after Adams left, headed East on Fairlane Drive and accidentally drove the truck into the pond. His bed had not been slept in Thursday night, investigators noted.

Coroner Harvey said no inquest would be held and ruled the death accidental.

Highway patrol officials said the accident would be counted as a highway fatality, making Waters the second traffic death in Pitt County this year.

Lanier Leaves Friday On Tobacco Promotion Tour

J. Con Lanier of Greenville, general counsel for the Tobacco Association of the U.S. and the Leaf Tobacco Exporters Association, is scheduled to leave New York Friday for a month-long European trip to "try to expand European markets for U. S. tobacco."

Lanier told the Daily Reflector this morning he will leave Greenville Thursday night for New York. From there he will travel by boat to France and Paris conferences. From Paris, his itinerary includes stops in Madrid, Rome, Brussels, and Amsterdam.

In Paris, Lanier will join J. B. Hutson, president of Tobacco Associates, Inc., and they will check on a market development program being undertaken jointly by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the French Tobacco Monopoly, and leaf dealers. The program seeks to increase the use of American tobacco in France by staging an advertising campaign for French brand cigarettes using large percentages of U. S. weed. Lanier said the program has experienced "marked success" during the past two years.

During the Madrid stop, Lanier and Hutson will investigate the possibility of developing a similar Spanish program to increase the U. S. tobacco consumption in Spain.

In Rome, the pair will confer with Dr. Pietro Cozza, head of the Italian Tobacco Monopoly, to seek his support in opposing a 30 percent ad valorem tax on American tobacco imported into the six

European Common Market Countries (France, Italy, Germany, Luxembourg, Belgium, and the Netherlands.)

In Brussels and Amsterdam, Lanier and Hutson will confer with officials of the European Economic Corporation (EEC). Brussels is the headquarters for the EEC.

The five countries to be visited represented a market of nearly 41 million pounds of American tobacco last year. Holland, the largest U. S. customer, bought 15 million pounds. Belgium bought 10 million.

Lanier plans to return here around May 10.
