Conference Here On 12-Month Use Of Schools Set

One of six conferences sponsored by the Commission for the Study of a Twelve Months' Use of Public School Buildings and Facilities for Public School Purposes scheduled throughout North Carolina May 3-10 is slated for the Pitt County Court Room in Greenville at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

The conference series is designed geographically to canvass the state and present at least a dozen questions for discussion.

The public is urged to attend the gatherings and special invitations are being extended to the following organizations: N. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers, N. C. Division of the American Assn. of University Women, N. C. School Boards Association, N. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, N. C. State Grange, N. C. Farm Bureau, N. C. Junior Chamber of Commerce, N. C. League of Municipalities, and the N. C. Boards of County Commissioners.

Questions to be raised for open discussion in Raleigh, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Charlotte, and Asheville on May 3, 4, 5, 6, 9, and 10, respectively, are: What is the sum total of the capital outlay investments in school buildings and facilities on the state and local levels?

Do the pupils have adequate time during the year to complete the grades or courses offered in the modern curriculum?

How does the period of utilization of public school buildings and facilities compare with the period of utilization of the various other state-supported agencies?

To what extent has N. C. reached the peak in its ability to continue financing of construction of additional school buildings?

What is the status or trend of the length of the school terms in the other nations of the world?

What are the prospects or possibilities of changing the state's present school system to 10 months and 12 grades, in lieu of nine months and 12 grades?

What are the prospects or possibilities of advancing the state school system to 10 months and retaining 12 grades?

What are the possibilities of

Bathing Suit Not For Water

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The white bathing suit fitted perfectly. Marjorie Currie was sure she'd got her $29.95 worth as she splashed happily in the surf.

But when she glanced down — "Upon becoming wet, the bathing suit became completely transparent," exposing the body to the view of all the numerous bathers and the loungers in the proximate vicinity," she complained Friday in a $5,000 suit against Babs, Inc., which sold her the garment.

The Washington, D. C. secretary said no one warned her about the "nature of the material and characteristics of the fabric."

Neighbors Lend A Hand, And Tractors, To Family

GRIFTON—A group of farmers of the Riverside Community near here extended a helping hand to a neighbor Thursday.

Hyman Causey died of a heart attack April 14, leaving two sons, Jerry and Lawrence, to manage his farm.

The many tasks involved in managing a successful farm, especially at planting time, coupled with the sudden death of their father posed a tremendous problem to the two Causeys.

The picture brightened for Jerry and Lawrence Thursday morning at 7 o'clock when a host of industrious neighbors with 14 tractors gathered at the Causey farm to help lighten the burden.

Five hours later, the farm's adopting in the state the so-called four-quarter-system of schools, in which pupils would attend only nine months in the year, but on a staggered term basis?

In what ways and to what extent are the present school buildings and facilities being utilized for more than nine months annually?

To what extent are summer school programs being offered in North Carolina?

How would an extension of the period of utilization tend to affect the status of the teaching personnel in the state?

What would be some of the problems relating to summer school attendance and advanced preparation of teaching personnel?

Following is a list of Ayden organizations and the number of donors from each: Lions Club, one; Rotary Club, four; Jaycees, six; Jay-C-ettes, six; Woman's Club, none; Fire Dept., two; W.S.C.S., eight; Red Men, one; Masonic Lodge, six; Ayden Civic League, 21; P.T.A., six; miscellaneous, three; Pocahontas, four.

Following is a list of Grifton organizations and the number of donors from each: Lion's Club, three; Methodist Church, three; St. Judge Church, one; Jaycees, seven; V.P.W., two; Service League, four; Grifton Baptist Church, five; Episcopal Church, one; Grifton Pine Mfg. Co., seven.

Hal Moore was chairman and Dr. L. S. Nelson, co-chairman, for Ayden. William January was chairman for Grifton.

Dr. Howard Gradis, Pitt County chairman of the bloodmobile, has expressed thanks for "the fine participation of the above organizations and the work of the volunteers."

Arabs Boycott U.S. Shipping

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—A boycott of American shipping at the Egyptian ports of Alexandria, Port Said and Suez began today in reprisal for the picketing of the Egyptian freighter Cleopatra in New York harbor.

Seamen and dockers in New York have prevented the Cleopatra from unloading for more than two weeks in protest against Arab blacklisting of American ships which deal with Israel. They claim the Arab boycott has cost them jobs.

Art Center Will Open On Sunday

Public Invited; No Ceremonies Are Planned; Exhibition Ready

The Greenville Art Center, located on the corner of S. Evans and Eighth Streets, will open its doors for the first time tomorrow to the general public.

On exhibition are some 30 paintings by Old Masters, which are on loan through the courtesy of a number of New York galleries and the efforts of Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville.

No ceremony is planned for Sunday; however, officers of the East Carolina Art Society, sponsors of the Art Center, will be on hand to greet callers. Members of the art society have emphasized the fact that the public is invited to Sunday's opening.

The gallery will be open from 3 until 6 p.m. Sunday. On weekdays, through May 15, gallery hours will be 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. during the exhibition of Old Masters.

This is the first showing of a large group of Old Masters east of Raleigh. Artists include such famous names as Titian, Tintoretto, Frans Hals, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Jean Marc Nattier, Salvatore Rosa, Dominique Ingres, Thomas Gainsborough and others. Also on display is the famous "Portrait of George Washington" by Gilbert Stuart.

A series of 51 etchings by Louis Orr depicting North Carolina historical and beauty spots, which are a permanent exhibition at the gallery, will also be on display. The Orr sketches are the only part of the East Carolina Art Society's permanent work which will be on display during the opening.

Orr, a native of Connecticut, lives in France. He has sketched the U. S. Capitol and the UN Building in New York City, both of which are well known.

In addition to the exhibition of Old Masters, the home itself is open to inspection by the public. The workshops and studios on the second floor and the children's workshop and exhibition room on the third floor have been readied for public view.

Light refreshments will be served.

Demonstrators Out In Istanbul

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—New antigovernment demonstrations erupted in Istanbul today. About 1,000 students and youths paraded before the building where NATO foreign ministers will meet Monday, shouting "Freedom!"

Defying a martial law ban on public gatherings, the students confronted thousands of troops who stood shoulder to shoulder in dusty heat outside the still unfinished NATO structure.

Tanks were drawn up at every approach. Helicopters swooped low overhead.

There were no clashes between demonstrators and troops, but tanks followed the marchers and gradually pushed them to side streets.

The procession, headed by youths carrying Turkish flags, marched down a wide street through which Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd and other top NATO ministers were due to pass within a few hours.

The NATO foreign ministers were expected to land at Yresilkoy Airport later this afternoon. Maximum security arrangements now in effect in Istanbul have caused grave traffic snarls throughout the city.

Earlier in the day, troops with fixed bayonets removed 2,000 student sit-down strikers from the campus of the University of Istanbul.

May Hear Voice Of Pioneer V 100 Million Miles

WASHINGTON (AP)—Scientists now expect to keep in touch with the American space probe Pioneer V until it is 100 million miles away from earth — twice as far as they had thought possible.

The 95-pound space messenger, now nearing a distance of seven million miles from earth, carries two radio transmitters. The smallest, a five-watt, was expected to be effective only up to about five million miles.

But the big radio telescope station at Jodrell Bank, England, still has no trouble commanding this radio on and off at will, and is receiving its signals clearly. The satellite's big 150-watt transmitter won't be turned on for several more weeks.

The added distance the scientists expect this large radio to cover will keep the probe in contact with earth control even when it is closest to the orbit of Venus.

Soviet Vessel Snooping Around U. S. Missile-Launching Tests

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Navy sighted a Soviet trawler Tuesday snooping around 60 miles off Long Island, within a mile of the spot where the new Polaris submarine George Washington was testing its missile launching apparatus.

The Navy said Friday the same ship, the Vega, was spotted the next day off Norfolk, Va., the home base of most of the Atlantic fleet.

There was nothing the Navy could do about it. In both cases the trawler was in international waters and had every legal right to stay there. The Navy continued its tests with the George Washington, which involved shooting dummy Polaris missiles from the sub to the surface.

Presumably the Vega was equipped with sonar, the underwater listening equipment fishermen now use to hunt schools of fish. It is just as effective in listening to submarines. The Navy knows the Soviet ship had radar, because it took photographs of it that showed the characteristic antennae.

In February 1959 a party from a Navy destroyer boarded another Soviet trawler off Newfoundland, after a series of breaks in transatlantic cables that might have been caused by the trawler's drags. This was done under an international law to protect undersea cables.

That Soviet ship was on fishing grounds widely used by fishing vessels from many nations. The Navy party saw nothing to indicate the ship was equipped for anything but trawling.

But the Vega, the Navy said, was in areas rarely used by foreign flag commercial fishermen. However, the area off Long Island often is used for maneuvers by submarines based at New London, Conn.

The Vega was photographed by a Navy blimp from Lakehurst, N. J., which was on patrol when the Soviet vessel was sighted.

Navy Launches Two Polaris Rockets In Push

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Navy, emphasizing its drive to have the Polaris missile combat-ready by this fall, successfully fired two of the submarine weapons more than 1,000 miles in a four-hour period Friday night.

Test officials announced that both the 25-foot, solid-fuel rockets achieved all objectives. This is the first time in the history of Cape Canaveral that two test models of one ballistic missile have been fired so close together.

The first darted across a star-lit sky at 7:45 p.m. The second followed exactly four hours later. Another Polaris successfully covered the same course last Monday. All were fired from regular land pads.

Objectives of the first flight Friday night included gathering data on general missile performance, control during powered flight and thermal effects. The second sought the same goals, plus information on the nose cone.

A week ago, the Polaris program seemed to be in trouble after two straight launchings from a ship at sea failed to attain all objectives because of malfunctions in the second stage.

Sources reported today that the problems appear to be solved. The Navy timetable calls for the Polaris to be placed aboard the first two Polaris submarines, the George Washington and Patrick Henry, this fall. Seven others are under construction.

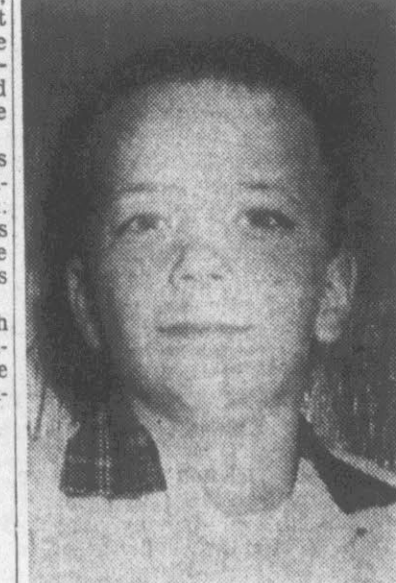

These underwater dreadnaughts will prow silently, each carrying 16 nuclear-tipped missiles. The Navy hopes eventually to have 45 of them on station around the world.

Cub Scout Saved Brother's Life

Nine-year-old Bobby Gaylor, a Cub Scout, recently saved the life of his seven-year-old brother, Danny, when he extinguished flames which were burning his young brother.

Bobby's training in the Cub Scouts, especially a recent lecture on putting out fires by the Den Mother, Mrs. Loraine Gaylor, who also is the boys' mother, is credited with his life saving action.

Gasoline which had spilled on Danny became inflamed. Bobby first threw Danny on the ground and tried to extinguish flames by rolling his brother over on the ground. When this failed, Bobby took his jacket off and wrapped it around Danny, thus smothering the fire.

Danny suffered from second and third degree burns. Some skin had to be grafted. However, his physician has said he is making good recovery. The total burned areas was one-twentieth of his body surface.

Bobby is in the second grade at Wahl-Coates School here.

CAMPS STILL FULL OSLO, Norway (AP)—An eminent French medical expert today estimated 25 million persons are being held in concentration camps throughout the world. He is Prof. Charles Richet of Paris, who temporarily lost his voice as a result of mistreatment in a Nazi camp.

Gubernatorial Candidates Focus On Schools, Hodges

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The four Democratic candidates for governor this week became involved in sharp verbal duels over public school financing, public school integration and the role of the Hodges administration in the campaign.

All four had statements dealing with the state's economy and whether it could support a substantial boost in teacher salaries.

Terry Sanford said he favored the program endorsed by the United Forces for Education and said he felt school appropriations could be boosted 100 million dollars during the next biennium without new taxes.

John Larkins said the state's economy could support a 15 per cent teacher pay raise with no new taxes.

Malcolm Seawell said the state cannot afford the UFE program—that it would require a 17.5 per cent increase in General Fund taxes.

I. Beverly Lake blamed the Hodges administration for frittering away a $3 million dollar surplus and said, it will be "difficult for the next administration to do more than hold the line in the matter of the operating expenses of our public schools."

Hodges capped the hassle at his weekly news conference. He said he doubted if teachers could be given a substantial boost with no new taxes.

The governor said the economy would support some growth, but "we do not have enough extra dollars to take care of the outlandish things that have been proposed."

Lake and Seawell engaged in sharp differences over the integration-segregation question.

Discussion between the late Gov. W. Kerr Scott and incumbent Sen. B. Everett Jordan was injected in the race for the U. S. Senate.

Mrs. Elizabeth Scott Carrington of Burlington, a sister of Scott, said her brother once told her Jordan had broken an agreement with him and double-crossed him.

Mrs. Carrington's sister-in-law, Mrs. W. Kerr Scott, widow of the late governor and senator, has indicated she is supporting Jordan.

Jordan had no comment.

'One Sure Way' To Close Schools

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Luther Hodges says there is only one way North Carolina can be sure it will have no integration in its public education system.

"That one certain, positive way," he said Friday, "is to have no public school anywhere in the state, that is close every school. If we have no public schools then we will have no racial integration in any public school. It's just as simple as that."

"I don't think any one man, whoever he is, should have the power to close the schools."

The remark was included in a stout defense of the state's approach to the integration-segregation issue Hodges gave over a statewide television hookup. He spoke at North Carolina State College to a conference on teacher education.

Hodges, tracing the history of the state's local unit approach to school assignment said, "No one else — and I emphasize this — no one has suggested any better plan or program."

He added, "Other states which have taken a different path have run their bitter course and have suffered failure and are now turning in the direction that North Carolina was fortunate in adopting from the beginning.

The conference ends today after study group reports covering all phases of teacher education and several speeches. Dean Cameron P. West of Pfeiffer College presided at a morning session and Ivy M. Hixon, academic dean of Salem College, presided during the afternoon.

Hodges also told his television audience the state has improved the relative standing of the classroom teacher. He cited figures showing that teacher salaries rose 28.5 per cent between 1954-55 and the fiscal year beginning July 1 while the cost of living increased only 9.2 per cent.

Gas Fumes Said Fatal For Two

WALLACE, N.C. (AP)—Two people died, apparently from carbon monoxide poisoning, and two others were found unconscious in a car at a drive-in theatre near here Friday night.

The dead were identified as Louis Giddings, 24, of Rose Hill and Christine Smith, 17, of Willard.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Ellis Smith, 37, also of Willard, and Paul Gilbar, 30, of Watha were taken to Duplin General Hospital in Kenansville, where their condition was said to be satisfactory today.

Coroner Hector McNeill said he was having the auto checked, but indications were it had a faulty exhaust and fumes entered the car.

Kennedy Claims Big Spending By Nixon In Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass) said Vice President Richard M. Nixon is spending big money to ward off a licking in the Indiana primary next Tuesday.

Kennedy predicted yesterday Hoosiers "will upset Mr. Nixon's plans."

Although both parties have been claiming the Indiana primary should not be looked upon as a popularity contest between the Democratic senator and the Republican vice president, Kennedy cast the election in exactly that light.

Kennedy has campaigned intensively in Indiana, having hit nearly every section of the state. Nixon has made no personal campaign appearances. He has campaigned via newspaper, television and direct mail advertising. Kennedy has had advertising, too, but he said Nixon has spent "amounts which surpass anything in the memory of veteran political observers here."

Mighty Saturn Rocket Cluster Has First Test

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP)—Saturn's eight-engine cluster, test fired for the first time, puts the United States nearer the moon.

The Saturn missile may one day enable this country to land equipment lightly on the moon, scoop up samples of matter and bring them back for study.

Although the engines ran for only a few seconds Friday the superbooster produced 1,300,000 pounds of thrust. Its full capacity would be 1,500,000 pounds thrust — equal to 30 million horsepower.

The booster being tested at the Marshall Space Flight Center will never be flown. Saturn II is being assembled at the space center and will be flown at Cape Canaveral, Fla. probably in 1961.

The Saturn engines, called H1, are a result of ten years of development of the Redstone, Jupiter, Thor and Atlas missiles. The superbooster is this nation's brightest hope for putting a multi-ton payload into space.

Last-Ditch Fight For Chessman

Attorneys Plan New Application For Writ Of Habeas Corpus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Caryl Chessman's attorneys today prepared last-ditch legal strategy aimed at saving the calm, hawk-nosed convict author from San Quentin's green gas chamber Monday.

George T. Davis planned a new application for a writ of Habeas corpus which he said would raise questions of federal due process. He asked William I. Sullivan, clerk of the State Supreme Court, to be on hand at noon today to accept it for filing.

The condemned Los Angeles red light bandit's petition for a clemency recommendation was denied by the court Friday for the third time, 4-3, after an unusual late-day session of two hours, 40 minutes.

At San Quentin, Warden Fred Dickson arranged a last news conference for Chessman at 10 a. m. — 48 hours before the six-foot convict's ninth date with death in the octagonal chamber.

Despite the chins-up statement by his attorneys, it appeared the 38-year-old self-taught writer was approaching the end of his nearly 12 years on death row. Chessman will be 39 on May 27, if he lives.

He accepted calmly the news of the court's action. After inquiring about the vote, he told a guard lieutenant: "Thank you very much."

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, in Oakland for the garden show reception, telephoned his Sacramento office and issued this statement: "This means my hands are still completely tied. I am powerless to take any action."

The governor opposes capital punishment, but he cannot commute the death sentence of a twice convicted felon unless the Supreme Court so recommends.

The court's decision ruled out any further petitions for a clemency recommendation.

In what the court said was an order "final forthwith" — meaning it would not consider that specific petition again — the majority decision read: "The application of Caryl Chessman for written recommendation to the governor for commutation of the death sentence, and for an opportunity to offer further evidence, is denied."

Trading Stamp Delivers Letter

LYNWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Not even a trading stamp could stay the letter that arrived at the water department Friday.

The envelope was empty, the department found. But the trading stamp was canceled, just as though it were a legitimate 4-cent postage stamp.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

God must love beauty, to use it so lavishly. The Master Artist dapples the soft green leaves with golden sunshine.

There is beauty in us, too... because He put it there. In His sight, none of us are ugly, none of us are forsaken.

But sometimes, in the busy process of day-to-day living, we turn blind eyes upon the world's loveliness.

Let us "enter into His gates with thanksgiving... for the Lord is good; His mercy is everlasting; and His Truth endureth forever."

Candidates Adopt Jones' Measure

There is little doubt now that regardless of who is elected the next governor of North Carolina, he will push for a change in the state's highway organization to bring the Commission back into closer touch with the people of the state.

It is singular, we believe, that the major gubernatorial candidates appear in agreement that the present seven-man Highway Commission is not adequately meeting the needs of the state, particularly as these needs apply to secondary roads and to the various individual areas of the state. It appears the unanimous feeling of the gubernatorial candidates that the Highway Commission needs closer contact than it now has with the people of the state and the best way to achieve this is through a system in which a larger number of commissioners will be chosen from designated districts or areas throughout the state.

It is also safe to assume that the position taken by the gubernatorial candidates reflects the feeling of most of the people throughout North Carolina concerning the highway commission organization. Otherwise, there would be a sharper difference than exists between the various reorganization plans offered by the candidates.

The highway commission reorganization plans proposed by the gubernatorial candidates correspond closely to the proposal offered in the 1959 General Assembly by Rep. Walter Jones of Pitt County. Although there was strong sentiment in the last legislature for the reorganization proposal introduced by Rep. Jones, Gov. Hodges succeeded in blocking the reorganization in order to leave the Highway Commission as he wanted it during the remainder of his term in office.

In the intervening period it has become more evident that the majority of the people of the state prefer a Highway Commission organized along the lines which Rep. Jones proposed more than a year ago. It is also evident that the gubernatorial candidates, looking to the future, recognize the wisdom of reorganizing and enlarging the Highway Commission.

Through such an enlargement and reorganization of the State Highway Commission North Carolina could still continue its highway program on a statewide development basis, and at the same time give a greater amount of attention to secondary roads and to the needs of the various geographic areas throughout the state.

Major Achievement In Pitt Work For Blind

It is a significant achievement for Pitt County when in the span of one year 109 people in the county can be removed from the blind category because of the work being done with the blind in the county.

The achievement means that 109 people in Pitt have been at least partially if not entirely freed from their handicap of loss of sight. It is an accomplishment which cannot be minimized and one which attests to the effectiveness of the work being carried on in this county in behalf of blind persons.

Certainly the work needs to be continued, for in spite of the fact that 109 persons have been removed from the category of blindness in the past year, there are many others in Pitt who remain without eyesight. For some of these recovery of their sight is possible if the work that has been going on locally for years is continued in an aggressive manner. For those who will not be able to recover their sight, the work in behalf of the blind is likewise important because it affords them facilities and opportunities to take their places along with the other members of our society.

The work with the visually handicapped in Pitt County, spearheaded by the Pitt County Association for the Blind, the Greenville Lions Club and other organizations, has paid the county huge dividends over the years. The fact that 109 persons regained their eyesight during the past year is only one of the accomplishments. Through the work more than 150 pairs of glasses were furnished needy persons, 90 persons received needed eye surgery and treatment, some 2,000 children of the county received eye examinations. Braille reading material and talking records were furnished visually handicapped persons, handicraft materials were provided and sales of handicraft articles were sponsored.

Work which is being done with the visually handicapped deserves the continued support of the people of Pitt County.

Nixon May Run As An Individual

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon will try to run as an individual—selling himself—if he gets the Republican party's presidential nomination.

That's how acquaintances say his thinking goes. It is not a position he has taken publicly. And it might indicate he is not going to depend too much on the record of the Eisenhower administration to win for him.

He wouldn't be the first who tried it that way. Nelson A. Rockefeller won the governorship of N. York in 1958. He didn't tie himself in too tightly to the Eisenhower administration.

Nixon has plenty of critics. But none has ever called him a political chump. So possibly he hasn't confided all his thinking to acquaintances or is only telling them what he is willing to have them say he thinks, or wants them to say.

But this what they say he has in mind: By his own calculations he cannot win on the Republican vote alone because there are not enough Republicans. He figures about 40 per cent of the voters are pretty solidly Republican, about 45 per cent pretty solidly Democratic.

So he has to dip into that remaining 15 per cent—which would include independents and Democrats and Republicans who sometimes switch—for his margin of victory, providing he can keep the regular Republicans with him. He hopes to keep Republican support by campaigning as a conservative—a stand he thinks will also appeal to Democrats if there is still prosperity at election time next November.

Nixon thinks Thomas E. Dewey, former New York governor, ruined himself in the 1948 presidential campaign by taking the Republican vote so much for granted that he didn't even bother talking to them.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
ETERNAL FOUNDATIONS
Jesus Christ is "the same as yesterday, today and forever."
Many are the like remarkable testimonies to him, his enemies being judges. Strauss, the father of modern destructive criticism, said "Jesus is the highest model of religion, and no perfect piety is possible without his presence in the heart." Fichte the philosopher said, "Till the end of time, all the sensible will bow before Jesus of Nazareth." Familiar are the words of Rousseau: "If Socrates died like a philosopher, Jesus lived and died like a God." John Stuart Mill confessed that the ethics of Jesus are unequalled and that Christianity has not made a bad choice in picking on this man as its representative and that perhaps we could adopt no better rule than just to do what we believe he would have us do. Herbert Spencer affirms that his teachings are the ultimate ethics.

Finest Spring To Date

You'll agree that each spring surpasses its predecessor in beauty, and this one is no exception.

It seems that never before have the flowering trees on the college campus so beautifully bloomed; never before have the new-budding leaves so lavishly endowed their trees with a cloudlike aura of pale green, to be swiftly supplanted with thicker foliage as leaves unfold.

The summer grass is growing so rapidly one can almost see it lengthening in the afternoon sun. It's pure illusion, of course, but after mowing our yard... and then surveying results... there's that feeling the grass that had been first trimmed is sprouting so fast it should be cut again.

That branch of the family in Japan, these past couple years, write glowingly of the gardens, parks and blooms of Nippon in Springtime.

Fully aware that this brightest of seasons was again about to extend its glow to our Far Eastern neighbors, and their next letter would be a paean to beauty in the Orient, I beat them to the punch with a letter of my own on Tar Heelia's spring. That should take the wind out of their sails.

(I fight dirty, too.)
A young lady who got a sneak preview of the Greenville Art Center prior to its formal opening, returned to say "Oooooohh, it's magnificent!"

And from what she had to say, it was very evident the Art Society had done itself proud. "You'll want to see it," she went on; and her excitement was contagious. I do want to see it. I'm sure it is all she said.

A mild, quiet sort of man was waiting by the news desk when I answered a summons from the composing room yesterday.

He introduced himself, Bob Gregory, a seldom heard-of candidate for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

Gregory dropped by to say "hello." If you remember, he's the man who on announcing his candidacy planned to finance his campaign on a basis of one-dollar contributions from each supporter.

Second-thoughts prevailed, and he returned the money. All of it, he says.

The gesture, on first, second and even third glance, appears thoughtful enough. But it just doesn't jibe with my concept of a candidate who is out to win.

Campaigns are costly. Ask the man who's in one.

'Compact' Idea May See Spread

For a while, Detroit pretended nothing was happening. But when the smaller auto makers began to flourish with smaller cars, and registration of those and small imports approached 10 per cent of car sales, rockets went up, bands played Yankee Doodle and the 1960 compact were born with more fanfare than the new British price.

And, perhaps to their own surprise, the auto companies are doing well. It's a balmy spring and sales and shares are up.

The lesson may not escape other manufacturers. If the auto industry can meet foreign competition and increase sales with cars scaled to function and shorn of fancy work, why may not other industries? Why not major appliances engineered for functionalism? Who needs revolving shelves in a stove? Refrigerator? Timers and thermometers on a TV set?

Why stop there? There's a bag of peat moss in my backyard and I'll wager the bag, the multicolor printing on it, and the plastic liner cost more than the peat moss. And the jars of many products look more costly than contents.

AND IN DRUGS?
Haig Babian, editor of "Economic Affairs," published by New York University, raises the same question in the drug field. He compares the millions of dollars spent by drug manufacturers to sell products that in most cases the consumer could do without to the millions spent by auto manufacturers "to induce psychological abscesses with new chrome trim, fins and lines that the consumer has finally said he can do without."

He added: "Allocations of resources for packaging and marketing have gone up at the same time that unit production costs of mass-produced items have come down. Question: How important and meaningful are such distribution techniques?"

Many, of course, are meaningful. Pasteurized milk in tight containers is better and sells better than the raw milk laddled from the can not too many years ago. Crackers in packages are cleaner and purer than the ones once sold from barrels. The electric razor and the modern safety blade is a joy for many whose fathers used the old straight edge.

But there's still a lot to be learned from Detroit's somewhat daring and graceful capitulation to the consumers.

MANY WANT TO SEE ALASKA—AT A PRICE
Inquiries about Alaskan tours in the first three months of this year ran 10 per cent higher than in the same period in 1959, the American Automobile Association reports. It also notes "growing price consciousness among tourists."

OFF-BROWN COLORS POPULAR IN UPHOLSTERY
Beige, tan and cocoa colors continue to be the most popular in upholstery fabrics, Jean Fabrics reports. These tones plus brown itself accounted for more than half the sales in the first quarter of the year.

Empty Words Coming

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
COPYRIGHT, 1960, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

It has been announced that Representative Chester Bowles heads the formidable committee that will write the Democratic Platform. Who will perform this task for the Republicans has not yet been stated. This is probably the most useless task to which a man can devote himself. Party platforms serve no particular purpose because the parties abandon them immediately after the election.

Both party platforms will have much to say about our international relations. Chester Bowles has made himself expert on the affairs of Asia with particular emphasis on India where he was the American Ambassador. His views on China may be summarized in this paragraph:

"Communist China constitutes an extremely live danger not only because of its ideology but also because of the inadequacy of its resource base in comparison to its population. Indeed, I suggest that Communist China constitutes almost a classic type of potential aggressor, similar to Nazi Germany of the 1930's and Japan in the period between the two wars."

The Republicans cannot do other than to praise the record of the Eisenhower policies which while opportunistic and often conflicting, may be summarized in the phrase, "He kept us out of war." President Eisenhower embarked on his career by bringing the Korean War to an end without any indication of the Korean problem which continues to be a problem up to this moment. This was undoubtedly an index to Eisenhower's thinking, namely, that war must be averted at any cost save the invasion of American territory. How much such a policy has cost in money and potentials will not be calculated for many years; its benefits are also not clear except that war has been averted. This has added much to President Eisenhower's personal popularity but has it strengthened the United States?

Both parties will have to deal with the question of the dollar. Both will try to duck the issue. Neither will be willing to admit that something must be done about the dollar very quickly or every man, woman and child in this country will be in difficulties. Franz Pick, who is probably our leading authority on money, starts his study, "The United States Dollar," with the paragraph:

"During the past twenty years, the Dollar's purchasing power has dropped from 100 cents to only 47 cents. This debasement, partially the result of waging World War II, has become a serious menace not only to the existence of America's monetary unit, but also to all other free currencies of the globe."

In 1960, the shrinking dollar cannot be ignored. Its shrinkage is too sharp and affects too much. Politicians are persons under constant psychological tension. They know that one bad slip can be fatal. One ineptitude can ruin a man's career. On the other hand, no candidate writes a platform and not one of them is bound by what it says.

Back in 1952, J. H. Gipsom, a book publisher of Caldwell, Idaho, wrote out a platform in very few words. This was for the Republican Party whose long and tedious platform of that year certainly was unrelated to anything which has happened since. This was Gipsom's platform—the whole of it.

"The Republican Party realizes the obligation of each generation of Americans to hand down to the next a constitutional and solvent republic in which the area of personal freedom has been extended and not reduced."

"Realizing that the happiness and well-being of this and future generations depend upon the liberty, freedom, dignity, responsibility, and opportunity of the individual, we urge and demand that all public officials elected on our ticket support all legislative measures which will accomplish these objectives."

ECC Baseballers Lose To Deacons

WINSTON-SALEM — Paul Wilmer capped a late-inning upsurge by Wake Forest with a lead-off home run over the left field fence in the 11th inning to give the Deacons a 4-3 victory over East Carolina College here yesterday.

The Deacons, held to one infield scratch hit in seven innings by the Pirates' Nathan Green, rallied in the eighth and ninth frames to overcome a 3-0 ECC margin.

Singles by Spencer Gaylord, Gary Pierce and Jim Martin and a walk to Wally Cockrell gave East Carolina two runs in the first inning. A walk, a fielder's choice and Martin's single accounted for another tally in the eighth.

Then the Deacons' Billy Packer homered to lead off the Wake Forest eighth and an error, a walk and singles by Wilmer and Charlie Forte accounted for two runs in the ninth to even the score.

After one and a half extra innings without a run scored, Wilmer's homer broke it up in the Deacon 11th.

Jack Karcher, fourth W. e. Forest hurler, got credit for the win. Johnny Ellen, who came on for Green in the ninth, was charged with the loss.

Podres Holding A Jinx On Giants

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Okay, so left-handers are supposed to be a bit different from other guys. But what's this whammy Johnny Podres has on the San Francisco Giants?

They haven't beaten the Los Angeles Dodgers' sturdy south-paw since Sept. 4, 1958—and he has allowed the Giants only five earned runs in 42 2/3 innings during that span. Podres made it five straight over San Francisco Friday night, beating Sad Sam Jones as the Dodgers made off with eight unearned runs in the fifth inning for a 10-2 frolic.

That slipped the second-place Giants 1 1/2 games behind Pittsburgh, rained out at Cincinnati, but left the Dodgers' 912 percentage points behind third-place Milwaukee. The Braves defeated Philadelphia 5-3 on Juan Pizarro's six innings of no-hit relief, and the St. Louis Cardinals ripped Chicago's Cubs 16-6, scoring 10 in the eighth.

In the American League, the Chicago White Sox beat Detroit 3-1, the Tigers' fourth straight loss, and gained a first-place tie with Detroit, and the New York Yankees, Baltimore defeated the Orioles 2-1 and the Orioles took fourth place, 611 points behind the leaders, with their fifth straight victory. Last-place Cleveland, just 1 1/2 games out of first, stopped Kansas City 5-4 in the only other game.

Podres, only 12-10 lifetime against the Giants after beating them for the second time this season, was trailing 2-1 going into the fifth. An error, Willie McCoy's triple for his 18th RBI and Felipe Alou's single counted both runs in the fourth for the Giants—their only scoring frame in 18 innings against Podres this year.

Podres' whammy got down to business in the fifth. Singles by Norm Larker and Maury Wills, and a bunt hit by Podres (who else?) led the bases. The Giants then chipped in with three consecutive errors before John Roseboro made the runs a little more respectable with his first major league grand slam homer. It was his second home run of the season and it came off Jones (2-2), who had started the Dodger breakthrough with a two-base throwing error after Junior Gilliam hit back to the mound.

Pizarro (1-1), a fast-balling southpaw, struck out nine and walked but two after relieving Bob Buhl in the third inning. He had to give way in the ninth when he pulled an arm muscle and walked Jim Coker. Warren Spahn came in for a perfect save, facing three men and fanning two.

Del Crandall drove in the Braves' first two runs, the second with a homer off loser Jim Owens (1-2) after the Phils had tagged Buhl for three first-inning runs and all four of their hits. Crandall then singled and scored the tie-breaker in a three-run sixth.

The Cardinals, as if to celebrate their first 500 record (6-6) since July 15, 1958, rapped eight hits off relievers Moe Drabowsky and John Goetz in the eighth—biggest inning of the season in the majors. Bill White drove in three runs in the rally, two with a homer on his second time around.

Eddie Banks drove in all of the Cubs' runs with two homers that gave him a career total of 233 and broke Gabby Hartnett's club record of 231. Banks' first was a three-run shot that junked a fourth-hit shutout by Bob Miller (2-0). The other, his fifth of the year, was off reliever Frank Barnes.

Smith, Green in Amateur Finals

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—Easy-going Charles Smith, suddenly turned tiger on the golf course, and college sophomore Peter Green met today in the 36-hole final of the North and South Amateur Tournament.

Each scored a spectacular semifinal victory Friday. Smith birdied four of the last five holes in a 20-hole triumph over Glenn Johnson, 37-year-old insurance company operator from Grosse Isle, Mich. Green one-upped nine greens, including a birdie in 16-seconds, the last hole to edge Dr. Edward Updegraff 1 up. He is from Tucson, Ariz.

Smith, 29-year-old Gastonia, N.C., automobile dealer, played here four times before and never had gone beyond the third round. Green is a 19-year-old University of North Carolina industrial relations major from Franklin, Mich.

Smith trailed Johnson by two, after a birdie for a half on the 16th. He won 17 with a birdie two from four feet and parred 18 to win when Johnson was trapped to square the match.

On the first extra hole Johnson rolled home a 20-footer for his birdie three, but Smith matched it from six feet.

On the final hole Smith deposited a No. 4 wood second shot over a trap, 18 feet from the hole, and knocked in the birdie putt after Johnson was 10 feet from the hole with an approach putt from just off the fringe.

Smith was two under par. Updegraff, marveling at Green's putting touch, declared, "He's just too young to realize how hard they are to make."

Green was one under par with a 71 for the 7,007-yard course against a 70 for Updegraff.

Phantoms Blank Washington By 3-0 Score

WASHINGTON — Alan MacArthur slammed two doubles to support the six-hit pitching of Malchon Griffin and Greenville blanked Washington 3-0 here yesterday afternoon in a Northeastern 3-A contest.

Keeping their hopes alive for a possible title, Coach Bo Farley's crew scored a single run in the fourth and added two more in the sixth to win their fifth game in six conference starts.

Randy Bass scored the winning run in the fourth when he led off with a walk, went to third on MacArthur's first double, and scored on Larry Roberts' sacrifice fly.

One of the two Washington errors came in the sixth inning and enabled the Phantoms to add two insurance runs to their victory.

As in the fourth, Bass had walked and MacArthur doubled to put runners on second and third. Billy James beat out an infield hit with runners holding their bases. Roberts poked a routine grounder to Baker at shortstop but the Washington infielder muffed his toss to second base, allowing Bass and MacArthur to score.

For Griffin, it was his fifth conference win and one of his better pitched games. Only in the sixth when Washington loaded the bases with only one out was he in trouble. A double play in this frame pulled him out of the fire.

The Greenville hurler struck out five and walked only two.

The Farleymen will be at Kingston next Tuesday in a game that will not count in conference standings. The Phantoms will host Washington on May 13 in their regularly scheduled contest with the Red Devils.

Virtual Four-Way Tie For Lead In American League

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The defending champion Chicago White Sox, suddenly back in business, and Baltimore's streaking Orioles have produced a virtual four-way tie for first place in the American League race—which has only a 1 1/2-game spread from top to bottom.

With Turk Lown pitching fourth-inning shutout relief for 5-1-3 innings, the White Sox skidded the Detroit Tigers to their fourth straight defeat Friday night 3-1. That jumped the Sox into a tie for first with the Tigers and the New York Yankees, who were handed a third successive setback, 2-1 at Baltimore.

The Tigers, after winning their first five, the White Sox and New York have 5-4 records. The Orioles, with a five-game streak, are fourth, just .011 percentage points behind.

Cleveland's last place Indians defeated Kansas City 5-4 in the only other game scheduled in the AL. The A's, tied with Washington for fifth, are a half-game back.

In the National League, Pittsburgh was rained out at Cincinnati, but padded its lead to 1 1/2 games as second-place San Francisco defeated Los Angeles after giving up eight unearned runs in the fifth inning. Third-place Milwaukee defeated Philadelphia 5-3, on six innings of no-hit relief by Juan Pizarro, and the St. Louis Cardinals scored 10 runs in the eighth inning for a 16-6 breeze against Chicago's Cubs.

Roy Sievers drove in the first two runs for the White Sox against loser Frank Lary (1-1) and then scored the third. He singled the clincher home in the fifth after a triple by Nellie Fox, breaking a 1-1 tie.

The Tigers, managing just one run in each of their defeats, got this one without a hit, scoring in the fourth on four walks by Early Wynn, who failed to last four innings for the third consecutive time. Lown (1-0) struck out Steve Bilko with the bases in loaded and then held the Tigers hitless until the sixth. Hector (Skinny) Brown, (1-0), the Gran'paw of the Orioles' staff at 35, put down the Yankees on nine hits. He lost his shutout in the fifth on a triple by Tony Kubek and a single by loser Bill Short (1-1).

Woodie Held drove in the first four Indian runs with a pair of homers off loser Don Larsen (0-2), never a winner against Cleveland in nine career decisions.

Duke Must Defeat Deacs To Stay Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Duke's Blue Devils find themselves on the spot today. They must beat Wake Forest to stay atop the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball standings.

Duke took its first ACC defeat of the season Friday when the hard-charging North Carolina Tar Heels stopped them 9-5.

The defeat left the door open for some fast shuffling among the ACC's top teams today. North Carolina State, Clemson and Wake Forest all are tied for second at 4-2. Then come Maryland, 4-3, and North Carolina, 3-3.

In addition to the Duke-Wake Forest game, North Carolina was at N.C. State and Maryland was at Virginia today. Victories by both Wake Forest and State would leave them in a first place tie.

But Duke was expected to start with its ace pitcher, Don Altman, the husky football quarterback who has won five games without a defeat thus far. He bested Wake Forest's fine hurler, Bob Plemmons, in a pitcher's duel when Duke defeated Wake Forest 6-1.

In the day's only non-conference action, South Carolina played its second game in as many days at Georgia Southern. Clemson was idle.

In Friday's two non-conference games, Wake Forest edged East Carolina 4-3 in 11 innings and Georgia Southern stopped South Carolina 10-9.

Ben Hammet, North Carolina's best lefthanded ace, kept Duke in check until the seventh inning while his mates rushed across eight runs at the expense of Duke's Ron Kalish and Bob Turner who relieved him in the fourth. Hammet gave up five hits during his stint and his reliever, Bob Deaton, parted with 3.

An 11th inning homer by Paul Wilner gave Wake Forest its uphill victory over East Carolina. ECC's Nathan Green held the Deacons to but one hit in the seven innings. In the eighth, Billy Packer homered and in the ninth, the Deacons scored two more to tie the game at 3-3.

South Carolina led Georgia Southern 9-7 going into the bottom of the ninth. But losing pitcher Everett Newman gave up a single and four straight walks to send in the tying run. Perry Ellison came on then and walked in the winning run.

Palmer, Collins Again Try Break Tie At Houston

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Arnold Palmer and Bill Collins sought again today to break their tie for the $35,000 Classic golf lead after being delayed by rain.

A one-stroke advantage by Collins after nine holes of the second round was wiped out by an afternoon rain Friday.

The deluge sent both the leaders back to their first-round six-under par 66s for today's re-start of the second 18 holes.

About half the field of 139 had completed play when the cloudburst erased the 66 which Ken Venturi, Palo Alto, Calif., had carved to gain an early 36-hole tie for the lead with Jack Fleck of Los Angeles at 137.

One stroke off the pace as the field started again today were Dave Ragan, Orlando, Fla., and Billy Maxwell, Oceanside, Calif. They opened Thursday with 67s. Fleck and five others were grouped at 68.

Palmer, the year's leading money winner from Ligonier, Pa., was eight under par for 28 holes when stopped by the rain.

Collins had collected a front nine 33 by mixing two birdies with an eagle the last three holes.

Palmer made the turn in 35 and picked up another stroke with a birdie on the 10th green.

Both Fleck and Venturi took their temporary lead before the rain. Fleck, winner of the Phoenix Open in a playoff with Collins, had a 68-69-137. Venturi, frequently a favorite here but never a winner, had a 71-66-137.

The second best round lost on the waterlogged course was a 67 by Paul Harney, Worcester, Mass. This gave Harney a 138 tie with Julius Boros, Midpipe, N.C., who had a pair of 69s.

Wolverines Go For Broke In Penn Relays

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Michigan runners are going for broke today in the Penn Relays.

Coach Dan Canham's Wolverines have an opportunity to accomplish a feat managed by only two other teams in the 66-year-old history of the Penn carnival. With a break the Big Ten power might even surpass the meet's best team performance.

Michigan won the meet's only major relay title on Friday's opening program of the two-day track and field meet—the distance medley. The Midwestern runners also qualified in the best times in other teams in the 440 and 880-yard relays. They are entered in today's sprint medley, 2 mile, 4 mile and mile relay events.

Only the Pitt Panthers of 1939, and the Michigan team of 1945, have ever won four of the meet's big relay events. Pitt took the mile, sprint medley, and the sprints, while the 1945 Wolverines won the 2 and 4 mile, and the sprint and distance medleys.

Old Pro Takes An Easy Decision

BOSTON (AP) — Old pro Ralph (Tiger) Jones sat on a low chair in his dressing room discussing his unanimous decision over young Joe DeNucci.

"He's a good boy," Jones said between bites at an orange, "but he's got a lot to learn."

Jones, who made his 43rd national television appearance in the 10-round bout with the hopeful middleweight from Newton, Mass., said he was never in any trouble and—after the first couple of rounds—had no doubt how it would turn out.

"Oh, I got a little cute in the middle rounds, when I thought I was 'way ahead on points. I ought to know better. I've lost a lot of fights like that—thinking I was too far ahead."

Jones was ahead all the way Friday night. One judge and the referee gave it to him by identical 98-95 margins. The other judge had it 98-92.

It was a match of age and experience against youth and hope. Jones, 32, has been a pro for 10 years, has fought the best and calls himself "the old warhorse." DeNucci is 20, was making his first television appearance.

"He just couldn't make Jones fight his fight," DeNucci's manager Rip Valenti said. "He couldn't take charge, except for a while in the sixth and ninth. Jones just kept boring in."

The tough old Tiger spent the evening calmly stalking his opponent, picking his shots and landing them. DeNucci tried the combinations that worked so well when he was in the prelims, and Jones brushed them off or let them whistled past.

In the middle rounds, Jones changed his style and played cat and mouse. At times, he dropped his hands and stuck his head out, daring Joey to take a shot. When he did, the Tiger was waiting for him with a punishing left hook.

In the ninth Jones appeared to tire. DeNucci made a frenzied, last gasp bid for a knockout in the 10th, saw it turned aside, and wilted. In the last minute he seemed merely trying to last it out.

Shotputters In Stellar Match

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A bitter duel between three of the world's greatest shotputters today was expected to erase memories of the downpour which spoiled opening day performances in the Drake Relays.

Occasional showers were forecast, but if the sun breaks through the overcast, more than 15,000 persons probably will turn out to watch the first 1960 meeting between Parry O'Brien and Bill Nieder.

Dave Davis, who beat O'Brien last week, also is in the field. O'Brien is a two-time Olympic champion and holder of the world shot put record of 63-4. Nieder has tossed the shot 65-7. Davis has a best toss of 64-10 1/2.

Twenty-two other finals will be completed today. Included are the pole vault, in which Oklahoma's J.D. Martin will be shooting for the world's first 16-foot pole vault, and the AAU 440-yard dash, where Dave Mills of Purdue and Eddie Southern, former Texas runner, will challenge Glen Davis. Davis, formerly of Ohio State, holds the world record and won the event here last year.

Al Lawrence of Houston sloshed through the rain for Friday's top performance, an 8:57.4 clocking in the two-mile run. The 28-year-old Australian defeated Baylor's Bob Mellgren by 130 yards.

Fifth Straight

East Carolina's golf team made it five straight yesterday afternoon with a 17 1/2 - 3 1/2 victory over Atlantic Christian in a match played at the Greenville Golf and Country Club course.

It was the fourth win for the EC linkmen within the North State Conference, leaving them in first place.

Bill Guthrie was medalist for East Carolina as four of the EC participants fired rounds in the 70's. Guthrie led the field with a par 72.

Paul Goodwin shot a 74, Don Conley 76 and Steve Fulp had a 79.

The East Carolina golfers will be host to Pfeiffer here on Monday afternoon.

Bonner Praises Meeting Challenge In Shipping

WASHINGTON, D.C.—N.C. Rep. Herbert C. Bonner Thursday praised nuclear and shipping industries for meeting "the challenge . . . for American waterborne commerce," and stated, "the American merchant marine will be our ambassador of the new age," in an address at an Atomic Industrial Forum conference in Philadelphia.

The conference on "The Role of Nuclear Propulsion in Merchant Marine Shipping," sponsored by the nuclear industry group, attracted nuclear and shipping industry personnel from a wide area.

Bonner, in his address, recognized the NS Savannah, the world's first nuclear-powered merchant vessel, as a demonstration to the world of America's determination "to release the forces of atomic energy for peaceful purposes."

He announced his intention that the committee hold hearings in early June "to hear of the state of progress and to determine what we may do to assure continued achievement" in the field of nuclear power for sea vessels.

Bonner repeated his former pledge that the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries would continue to retain the U.S. efficiency in the field of nuclear energy on the high seas.

In his final statement, he told the group, "Let us lose the initiative which we seized with the start of the NS Savannah, we should press ahead vigorously."

Tar River Rises Following Rain

The Tar River level has risen two feet since yesterday morning, according to Kent Glisson of the Greenville Utilities Plant.

Yesterday the level measured a little over five feet. This morning the level was recorded at 7.2 feet. The rise is attributable to the recent rains in this area.

As for the temperatures, the weatherman has forecast warmer temperatures than in previous days, but it is going to be cloudy and maybe rainy, also. Showers are a possibility here late today, with highs reaching 78 to 82 degrees.

Saturday's early morning temperature was 49 degrees. It rose to 59 at 8 a.m. and at 11 a.m. the temperature was 78, Glisson said.

Friday, the high was 76 and the low, 45 degrees, Glisson said.

The barometer was 30.0 this morning.

Plantation Provides Novelist Atmosphere

READER . . . Mr. Pierce is a great reader. He believes that the only way to be a successful writer is to read as much as possible and write constantly. Here, Mr. Pierce is looking over one of the books which compose a set of volumes on the Civil War. Much of his two years of research for his newest book came from this set of books.

Editor's Note: Three East Carolina College student editors recently visited the plantation of Ovid Pierce. The three, all students of Mr. Pierce's collaborated on the following feature resulting from their visit. They are: Dan Williams, editor of "The Rebel", campus literary magazine; Roy Martin, associate editor of the "East Carolinian" and Tom Jackson, editor of the "East Carolinian". The photographs were taken by Jackson.

The house stood amid the cluster of oaks as though it had evolved within them. . . a product of nature and not of man.

There was something about the place that was different. It was the air, or the grass, or the fields, or it was everything combined.

A white fence ran up the hill in back of the house, enclosing the animals. . . there were white ducks, a white faced cow, and once in a while you could see a mallard drake with his brilliant colored plumage skimming across the pond in jaunts of three or four feet at a time.

The front lawn stretched carpet-like down in front of the house and was rippled by a breeze blowing from the road. The grass was brown now. . . from the stiffening effects of winter's frost and chilling winds. Summer would come soon, and the grass would be green again.

Under the big trees, the shadows created by the sun on their limbs cast their darkness in splotches over the ground. The acorns crunched underfoot.

In the afternoon, the little colored boys came out on the front lawn and played softball. It really wasn't softball, because they only had a bat made out of a tree limb, and what was left of a baseball. . . ripped, torn, with strings hanging from the battered cover. They never complained about the torn ball, or the bat. . . they just played with all the zeal of any bunch of kids. . . yelling and running until they were tired, then they broke up and headed back across the fields to their homes.

Time here was meaningless. Nothing existed but this one place. . . Its people and its buildings. Everything seemed to have life. . . to speak, yet not to speak.

Everything told a story. . . not by words, but by appearance. There was no grandeur, no white columns, nothing lavish. . . just people, buildings, grass, trees, stirring breeze, and shadows. . .

Ovid Pierce's 350-acre plantation has been the atmosphere from which he has drawn the heart of his two novels, THE PLANTATION, and his latest, ON A LONESOME PORCH. After a week of teaching at East Carolina College he spends his weekends on the Plantation writing and looking after the farm.

He is as successful as a farmer as he is as a teacher or a writer, and can as readily discuss crop rotation and methods as he can Faulkner's symbolism or Wolfe's biographical implications. The quality of his harvests demonstrate a keen farming interest as much as the attitudes of his former students show his devotion to teaching.

Mr. Pierce usually arrives late in the afternoon at the Plantation. The house has been opened, and when there is a chill in the air the fireplace in the library is roaring, prepared by the little colored boys who live with their families as tenants on the farm.

He puts down his briefcase filled with papers to grade, and short stories to read, and goes out in the yard to see how things have been going while he has been away.

He confers with "Net", the colored tenant, then walks out behind the house to the white fence which runs up the hill and looks over the animals pastured there. Sometimes he will carry a piece of bread in his pocket to feed to them. The ducks recognize his familiar walk and scurry to the fence. The cows move up to the fence, pushing the ducks into the background.

Inside the house, Mr. Pierce has created a post-Civil War atmosphere, with rifles hanging on the walls, a set of dueling pistols on the mantle, plus many other relics of bygone days.

This close association with the past has had its effect, and as Mr. Pierce says, "It would be extremely difficult to write of it as it would be of many sections of the South, without interpreting it as the present margin of past time. I tried to make of THE PLANTATION, in part, what my Father's generation meant to me as I looked back at it as a child." Ovid Pierce first began to write during his college years at Duke, where he was editor of THE ARCHIVE, undergraduate literary magazine. Later he had stories published in THE SOUTHWEST REVIEW, and other quarterlies; recently he did an article on North Carolina for HOLIDAY magazine.

However, his career as a North Carolinian has been just as enduring. Just after Pearl Harbor, he entered the army as an intelligence officer, and at the conclusion of the war joined the faculty of Southern Methodist University where he taught for four years. After a time on the faculty of Tulane University he came home to North Carolina, where he is now teaching at East Carolina College. Soon after returning to North Carolina he made this statement, "Though I've been away since the war, I still feel that North Carolina is home, at least when I try to write a story, that is where my mind has to go." Consequently his writings have been about the land he has known, and Ovid Pierce has conferred a dignity upon the South that few southern writers have recognized. His novels are not concerned with moonlight and magnolias, the fall of any great tradition, nor is he making a plea for a persecuted South. Usually he presents the picture of a changing time, and a people adjusting to a new way of life. The kindness and understanding with which he treats the Negroes as well as whites could come only from a man who has known and felt the true southern traditions.

His latest novel is a work of art that will appeal to every person who has felt time passing too swiftly by. As one reviewer has written, "ON A LONESOME PORCH, is an enthralling novel. In its imaginative recreation of a day that is gone, the vividness of its descriptions, its insight into character, and its power yet restrained emotion, the book stands as the work of a master craftsman."

He does all of his writing in pencil longhand on legal pads and later, makes changes and types them. Usually he gets out of bed around 6:00 a.m. and writes until noon, doing most of his work at a small table in the corner of his library or in a lawn chair under one of the Plantation oaks facing the rolling cotton fields.

In the classroom he is informal, propping one leg over the corner of a desk or leaning on the rostrum as he lectures. Many of his students have commented that his classes are more like a personal conversation than a formal lecture. Boredom is a thing unknown in his classes and when a student demonstrates better than average ability Ovid Pierce is the first to become enthused. He points out the good and poor qualities, never quite criticizing, but still showing how it can be done better.

Thus we see in one man: teacher, author, farmer, and student. Ovid Pierce is a man symbolized by his own smile. . . warm and sincere.

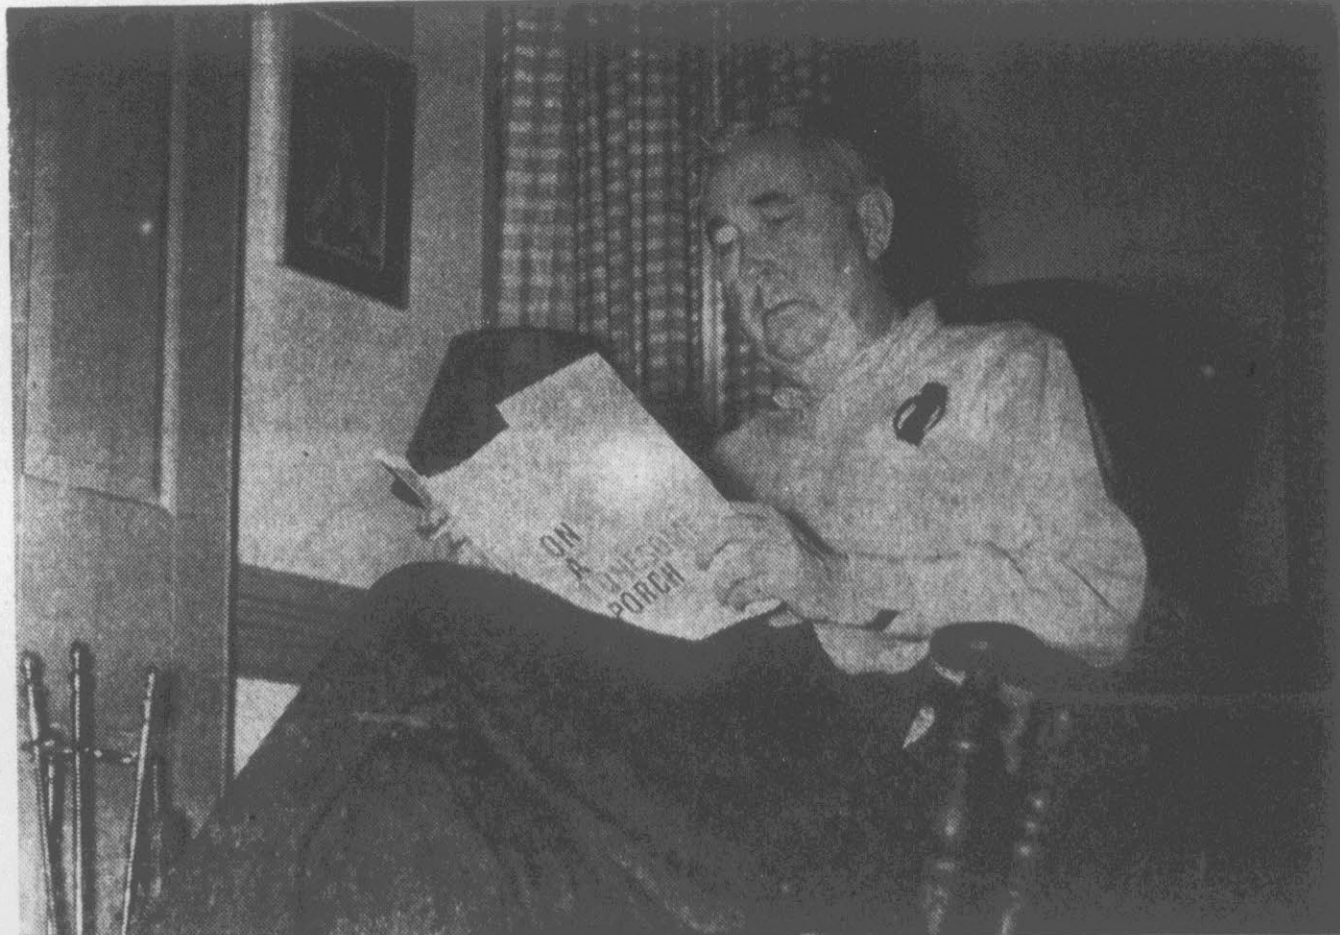

ANTIQUATE LOVER . . . Mr. Pierce is a great lover of antiques, as anyone could see by the interior decoration of "The Plantation." Here, he is shown with Dan Williams, Editor of THE REBEL, ECC literary magazine, examining two flintlock pistols.

GENIAL HOST . . . Much entertaining goes on at the home of such a personality as Ovid Pierce. Here he is shown with brothers of Kappa Alpha Order enjoying a barbecue on the lawns of "The Plantation."

PONDERING . . . the release of his new book, "On A Lonesome Porch." Mr. Pierce sits in one of the antique chairs in his library with a copy of the cover which will enclose the pages of his newest accomplishment.

City Observes Death Of Casey

JACKSON, Tenn. (AP)—Bands played and citizens wore red bandanas and railroad caps today as Jackson observed the 60th anniversary of the death of Casey Jones.

Casey — actually John Luther Jones of Cayce, Ky. — died when his "Cannonball Express" rammied a freight train at Vaughan, Miss., in a railroad wreck immortalized by a popular song.

The "Ballad of Casey Jones" was one of the numbers planned by high school and military bands on a parade through town, with railroad officials and political notables backing up the music with speeches.

Casey Jones' home is now a railroad museum that includes, among other things, the "whip-poor-will" steam whistle that was on his locomotive.

JEFFERSON'S RATING

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — How would you rate Thomas Jefferson among U. S. Presidents? Adlai Stevenson, visiting Jefferson's home here, says either No. 1 or No. 2, with possibly Lincoln in the top spot. Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt tie for next in order.

SAFETY VS. COFFEE BREAK

The morning coffee break has become an important part of the American scene . . . and far be it from us to knock an established institution.

But we make this point to illustrate the almost insignificant cost of a State Bank and Trust Company safe deposit box. For a mere few pennies a day . . . comparable to the cost of that morning coffee break . . . you buy a safe place to store those personal papers and other invaluable possessions.

A safe deposit box at State Bank and Trust Company eliminates the possible loss of your valuables due to theft, fire or due to simple carelessness. It's the sensible place to file your will, insurance policies, birth and marriage certificates, jewelry, securities, and other valuables.

Stop by tomorrow and let State Bank and Trust Company, Greenville's independent locally-owned and locally-operated bank, provide you with the convenience of a safe deposit box.

'Gunsmoke' Now in Sixth Season

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP) — They're off and shooting in the sixth season of the apparently unbeatable "Gunsmoke" series. Dodge City has moved from California Studios to the Paramount television lot, but otherwise there seems to be no change in the setup for the Saturday night show. Dodge is still as dusty. Matt Dillon as Truett, Chester as gimpy and Doc as grumpy. Not to mention Kitty, who is still Amanda Blake. "No, we're not planning any changes this season," said big Jim Arness as he rested between gunplay. "We've gone along pretty well the way we are, so why tamper with it?" Jim seemed unruffled about facing another eight months of intensive film making to complete another season. "Sure, it's hard work sometimes," he said, "but the rewards are pretty great, too. There's a lot of independence involved. I like that; it's one of the reasons the acting life appealed to me. "How long can 'Gunsmoke' last? I wish it could go on indefinitely. Realistically, I would imagine it could last another two or three years; that's what people connected with the business tell me. I guess eight years would be about the limit for a successful show. Then I would hope that I could get another series." Jim's satisfaction with his lot is unusual in the TV corral. It is also something new with him. He was fixing to get out of the Dillon role, but last season the producers made him a new deal for a better share of the returns. Now he can afford a new ranch and yacht to take care of what little spare time he has on land or sea.

CHAPTER 20

At half past ten, as had been agreed between her and Hero, Meg pleaded change of air and sleepiness, and asked if anyone would mind if she went out to bed.

Mrs. Wilson brightened perceptibly, and Isobel Paradine said, "Of course, Margaret—you must be tired after your journey. I'll just come with you to see that everything is in order."

They left together and when Isobel did not return Lady Paradine stifled a yawn and said, "I suppose what they will do is sit up there and talk endlessly. Isobel always captures anyone who knows her father. I'm afraid I can hardly keep my eyes open." She arose and retired.

Hero hoped that Isobel would not remain too long with his stepister, but counted on Meg's ability to find an excuse to be alone. She had her job cut out for her—the setting of the cameras before the others came upstairs, with the trip threads ready but not yet attached. This final triggering of the traps could be done at the very last moment after everyone had retired.

Mrs. Wilson said, "I'm terribly nervous, Alex. I feel frightened." Hero said, "Do you? Why, Vivyan? I've told you that there's nothing to be frightened of."

"I don't know. I feel as though something were about to happen. I'm all nerves on end. I feel like a child that wants to be comforted."

Hero went over to her, sat on the arm of her chair, and took her hand in his. She leaned her head against his arm. The hair was so clean, fragrant, and exquisitely soft. The pressure of her head against his arm was starting him on the road to trouble. He knew and did not care. He was in tune with her needs—they were his own. Her sleek, cat-like femininity was delicious and exciting. "Better?" he asked.

"Yes, much better," she said, but she did not move to search for him or win closer contact, and this Hero thought odd, but he did not press the matter either.

"Alexander?" "Yes, Vivyan."

"What manner of man are you? Why am I in love with you? Why have you got everyone here eating out of your hand? You're young—you're frightfully young to be so assured of yourself—and yet they're all a little afraid of you."

Hero reflected, and then replied soberly, "They're afraid because they know I'm looking to find the truth, and today more than ever before, I suppose, there is nothing more terrifying than the truth."

"I am a little afraid of you too, Alex. Will you make me see the truth too—that I am close to middle age, too bony, too unloved, too hungry, too absurd?"

Hero bent over and placed his cheek atop the soft hair and let his lips touch the strands. He said, "Shhh—don't talk."

There was the sound of a footstep. Hero started to put six feet between Mrs. Wilson and himself before Isobel poked her head in through the door. "Oh," she said, "everyone goes off to bed? I think the bridge party is about to break up."

It had Susan, Beth, Mark, and Sir Richard came in from the drawing room. The others arrived too.

Major Wilson said to his wife, "Coming, my dear?" "Yes, darling." She arose obediently. Hero did not look at her.

good night, all. Let's hope there won't be any trouble. Hero, I'll expect you to see to it if there is."

Hero wondered for a moment whether he should warn them, and decided against it. To do so would be to bring about a change in the conditions. He wished matters to take their course.

Major Wilson opened his underling shark's mouth and said, "Hah! There'd better not be any—I have my service pistol with me."

Hero, who was at the door, turned around and said, "I should lock it away if I were you, Major. Never hunt a ghost with a gun."

He thought that rather a splendid line on which to leave them, and went upstairs hoping that Meg had had time to plant her little cameras, and wondering how long it would be before the house quieted down and people would cease wandering about so that she might set the trip threads.

"Do you know that Mark is head over heels in love with Susan Marshall?" Lady Paradine was speaking to her husband.

"Eh, what—he is? Is he really? Well, I suppose if it were true one couldn't blame him."

"Of course it's true," said Lady Paradine. Her long red hair gleamed beneath her rhythmic brush strokes. She wore a lilac-colored negligee and her figure was still good. "Would you care to see the next Lady Paradine an American?"

Lord Paradine paused, one leg in his pajama trousers and balancing to insert the other into the pants. "End? What has being an American got to do with it? Susan's a fine girl. Look how she's faced up to these damned outrages."

Lady Paradine went after a gray hair and had it out by the roots. "She hasn't a penny," she said evenly.

Lord Paradine got his other leg into the pajamas and tied up the string above his bulging front. "Oh," he said, "to be a good American you have to be a rich American."

"Something like that," End replied. "Without money they're quite impossible, aren't they? With the things they are, it is almost Mark's duty to the family to marry for money."

"What do you mean, which one will she take?" "Well, about the boy, has he said anything yet?"

"Of course not. And then there's still the question, which one will she take?"

"Eh?" Paradine paused in the middle of squeezing toothpaste onto a brush and tried to cope with the new idea. "What do you mean, which one will she take?" "Mark or Dick—they're both in love with her."

"What? You mean Lockerie?" Paradine was genuinely shocked. "It's ridiculous, End. He's got a son—what's Julian now, getting on for nine, isn't he? No young girl would want—"

"Don't be silly, John—it's fashionable these days for young girls to marry older men. Some of them even like children—there's Beth, for instance. Beth adores Julian."

"Beth? What's she got to do with it?"

After a moment's quiet brushing of her hair Lady Paradine said, "John, was Isobel ever in love with Richard?"

Paradine said, "I suppose they liked one another as children, but there couldn't have been anything between them because the upshot was that old Dick married that French girl he'd met during the war and had the bad luck to lose her after Julian was born."

Lady Paradine continued brushing, and this time she did not speak. Lord Paradine found the hiatus even more uncomfortable than if she had continued the interrogation, for it forced him to think and wonder.

"I suppose it mightn't be bad for Dick," he said, "a fine young girl like Susan. Keep him up to scratch. Damn good match, eh?"

Lady Paradine did not reply specifically to this but said obliquely, "Whether or not she is really in love with Mark, the thought of becoming Lady Paradine must be a great temptation—particularly to an American."

Lord Paradine stared at his wife in bewilderment. "But I thought you said—"

Lady Paradine said pitily, "Oh, John, really! With a choice of titles, naturally one takes the better one." She dipped three fingers of each hand into a jar of beauty cream and began to dab the peach-colored stuff onto both cheeks with firm, positive strokes, and in time to them she said, "I wouldn't like—my Mark—to be married—to Susan Marshall."

Suddenly there's a woman in Hero's arms, and he wonders, "Is this yet another of the beautifuls of Paradine Hall?" Continue "Too Many Ghosts" here tomorrow.

Chessman Guilty Of 17 Crimes In 20 Days

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (AP)—Caryl Chessman, under sentence to die next Monday, was convicted of committing 17 crimes in 20 days.

The period was from Jan. 3, 1948—26 days after his fourth parole from prison—to Jan. 23, 1948, his last day of freedom.

Only during the last five days did the bandit use a red spotlight which marked him as the "Red Light Bandit."

Two of the offenses for which he was sentenced were considered especially revolting.

The time was 8:30 p.m. on Jan. 19, Jarnigan Lea, 34, a widower, and Regina E. Johnson, a police victim of the hospital a week, were parked in the Flintridge Hills looking at the view. Lea was an old friend of the Johnsons.

A red spotlight flashed on, a man walked up—and showed a 45 in the open window. He ordered the young housewife out "or you'll both go home in a casket."

"She's got polio," Lea appealed. "She can't walk. For God's sake, can't you let her alone?"

The bandit grabbed her arm and forced the weeping woman to his own car—the same stolen car used in all the red light robberies. He took Lea's keys and threatened to kill them both.

Lea heard a scream, a slap, repeated commands, low masculine laughter, sobs. Mrs. Johnson was freed when a third car came in sight. She was near shock from perversions the bandit forced on her.

Both she and Lea identified Chessman as the gunman. Three hours later the red light bandit took $2 from a young man and his girl but did not bother the girl.

Then about 1 a.m. Jan. 22 he forced strictly raised Mary Alige Meza, 17, from Frank Hurlburt's car parked on a hill overlooking the San Fernando Valley. They had been to a parish dance.

The bandit told Miss Meza he would kill Hurlburt unless she accompanied him. Forcing her escort's car into the ditch, he drove five miles away. For three hours he tormented her.

Miss Meza testified she cried and begged for mercy.

"Why do you do this to me?" she pleaded. "I never did anything to you."

"What did he say?" the prosecutor asked.

"He just sat there and waited until I was finished."

He compelled her to engage in a series of degrading acts of perversion, first in the front seat, then in the back, she said. She entered a mental hospital within a year and is still there.

All but one victim of the 17 crimes positively identified Chessman as the gunman. Hurlburt said he did not get a sufficient look at the man's face to identify anyone.

The death sentences—recommended by the jury—were on conviction of kidnaping for the purpose of robbery, with bodily injury to the victim—two counts, involving Miss Meza and Mrs. Johnson.

Chessman was arrested Jan. 23, 1948 driving a car stolen Jan. 13. All told the 17 counts included eight counts of robbery, four of kidnaping, two morals charges, one count of attempted robbery, one count of attempted rape and one auto theft charge.
