

Mrs. Albert Bell Asks: 'What Is Prayer?'

By MRS. ALBERT BELL, President, Pitt H. D. Clubs. Mr. Webster defines "Collect" as "the opening prayer." What, then, is Prayer?

Prayer is power—the most powerful form of energy that one can generate. How does prayer fortify us with so much dynamic power? When we pray we link ourselves with the inexhaustible motive power that spins the universe. We ask that a part of this power be given to our needs.

Even in asking, our human deficiencies are strengthened. Today, as never before, prayer is a necessity in the life of each of us. Prayer is the expression of earnest, intense thinking. Let's take a close look at our "Collect for Club Women."

that women working together with wide interest for large ends perhaps had need for a special petition and meditation of their own. Today the Collect is used all over the world wherever English-speaking women work together. If we forget all the other lessons in our Collect, let us cling to this most important one—"Be kind. Keep us, O God, from pettiness. Let us be large in thought, in word, in deed." Let's apply these words to our daily life—make it our daily prayer.

"Let us be done with fault-finding and leave off self-seeking."

Let us remember always that a word of praise and appreciation can accomplish much more than criticism. It will be more gratifying to promote your club and women as a whole, rather than seek personal gain.

"May we put away all pretense and meet each other face to face, without self-pity and without prejudice." May we never put on a false show or pretend to that which we are not. The primary purpose of home demonstration work is to "develop, strengthen, cooperate, contribute, conserve, encourage, to build public opinion."

"May we never be hasty in judgment, and always generous. Let us take time for all things: O Lord God, let us forget not to make us grow calm, serene, gentle." Taking time for all things is so necessary in this high-speed age. Learning to put first things first is important if we would grow "calm, serene, gentle."

"Teach us to put into action our better impulses, straight forward and unafraid. Grant that we that create differences, that in may realize it is the little things the big things of life we are as one."

Someone has said the following lines contain the philosophy of life and living necessary to being a great, gracious and grateful woman. "And may we strive to touch and to know the great, common, human heart of us all, and, O Lord God, let us forget not to be kind!"

Today's Women

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
Who are America's most influential women?

You might name a movie star or a woman senator, an educator or an ambassador.

All wrong, says J. Warren Kane, a New York importer of French perfumes. The women who most influence national tastes and customs are the girls behind the counters of American stores.

"If you want to find out what's new, ask the girl behind the counter," says Kane. "She's onto every new fad before it starts. She has her hand constantly on the public pulse."

"Designers dream up new ideas, manufacturers produce them, buyers select them, but it's the girl behind the counter who persuades customers to buy them."

Kane credits American salesgirls for much of his success as a florist which flabbergasted his sea-French perfume expert, a vociferous father, Capt. John W. Kane, of Blue Hill, Maine.

"I was just out of college when I met a man who asked me if I wanted to go into the perfume business," says Kane. "I took him up on it, and I haven't been sorry. But my father fumed like a spouting whale."

"They started me out to sell perfumes on the road, and it was here that I discovered how important it is to know the girls behind the counters."

Kane also has had a big assist from another influential woman, his wife, Helen, whom he met behind the perfume counter of a store in Kansas City, Mo. She now helps him in his business, and subjects each new scent to the judgment of her highly discriminating nose.

"Of course," says Kane, "it's silly for any woman to try and select her own perfume. The only way to tell what's the best scent for her own chemistry and personality is to try it out on a man. If he gets dreamy-eyed when she wears a certain scent, that's her cue."

Ter Years Of Continued Progress

Preliminary census figures for both Greenville and Pitt County show a gratifying growth during the 10 years between 1950 and 1960.

They indicate a continued progress in an area in which some cities and counties lost population or barely held their own during the decade. They attest to the results brought about by efforts to make Greenville and all of Pitt County a better place to live and to make a living.

Greenville's population, according to the preliminary figures, now stands at 22,476, a healthy 34.4 per cent increase over the official 1950 population. During the 10-year period Greenville added to its population at a rate of more than 500 people a year, and while its total growth was not the highest of any city of comparable size in Eastern North Carolina, percentage-wise it showed the largest growth of any city in this area.

The 34.4 per cent increase in population which Greenville enjoyed was not matched by Goldsboro, Wilson, Kinston, Rocky Mount, or Washington, although Goldsboro's rate of growth was only slightly less than that of Greenville.

The rate of growth for Greenville likewise extended through another decade the gradual but healthy rate of population increase Greenville has experienced since 1870. In each decennial census since that time, Greenville has shown a population increase of a minimum of 32 per cent. From 1930 to 1940 it

Machines Take Over The Work

By LYNN NISBET
MECHANIZATION Machines have taken over a large part of the work formerly done by human hands. But no machine has yet been built that could entirely eliminate the human factor.

Within the past ten days your reporter has traveled from Raleigh to Ahoskie and Murfreesboro, and then from Raleigh to Winston-Salem. That represented a distance approximating half way across the state. On the entire 225 to 240 miles we saw only four mules at work in the fields. The tractors were not counted, but there were dozens of them. In each instance one man and a combination machine were doing farm work which used to take at least ten mules and ten men—and doing it more efficiently.

The program at the Eastern North Carolina Press Association included a boat trip up the Chowan and Meherrin rivers from Winton to Murfreesboro. We passed a herring fisheries operation where a dozen or more men were at work. Here, too, machinery was in evidence. A power-driven conveyor belt was moving the fish from the unloading dock to the dressing plant, eliminating the manpower formerly required.

At Murfreesboro we visited the Roy Parker School of Printing at Chowan College where linotype, monotype and other machines were doing jobs that used to require tedious hand work setting type. Some of the linotypes were operating from previously punched tapes, with one workman producing as much type as 30 old-fashioned typesetters could set by hand.

In this school boys and girls are being taught how to use self-feeding automatic printing presses, as far removed from the old Campbell and Gordon hand-fed jobs on which your reporter started his career as modern two-way radio is from the pony express mode of communication.

AUTOMATION—A side excursion incident to the Travel Council meeting at Winston-Salem included a tour of the most modern Reynolds cigarette factory. Here everything from the shredding of tobacco leaves to the crated cartons of cigarettes ready for shipment was done by machinery. We were told how many cigarettes were made each day, but the figure was astronomical and meaningless. Daily production of the Reynolds factories requires about a mile of railroad cars and highway trucks to haul away on the first leg of delivery to all parts of the world.

An interesting sidelight item is that the company sets aside two million dollars a day to pay the federal tax on its products. The most modern and technical machinery in the cigarette plant, like the farm tractor and the fisheries conveyor belt, showed an increase of 37.9 per cent; from 1940 to 1950, 32 per cent, and for the past decade 34.4 per cent.

Few cities in Eastern North Carolina have shown such a consistently high rate of growth from one census to the next. The 5,752 population increase in the past decade compares favorably with the 4,050 increase during the preceding decade.

Also during the decade Pitt County showed a population growth of nine per cent or 5,673. While this population growth points to a continued shift to people from rural areas into cities and towns, it is almost double the county-wide population growth for the decade from 1940 to 1950.

It is a healthy sign for the county, particularly when one considers that neighboring counties like Beaufort, Martin and others in Eastern North Carolina actually showed losses of population from 1950 to 1960.

As census figures for other towns of Pitt County become available, the population shift from rural areas into cities and towns in the county probably will be more evident. Even so, the figures now available indicate that Pitt has been able to hold her own people while attracting others. The shift in population has been from rural areas into the communities of the county, rather than from this county to other areas.

Some, to be sure, will be disappointed in what this year's census shows, but all things considered, the last 10 years have brought more progress to Pitt than the preceding decade. And that in itself is important to the county and its people.

Unexpected Admission Turned To Advantage?

There probably have been few more surprising events in diplomatic history than the open admission by the United States that it has sent planes around and over communist territory on espionage missions.

Espionage, a respected and vital—if not honored—part of international politics has traditionally been viewed as an operation in which every nation participates, but no nation openly admits. Now, the United States has suddenly broken this international tradition by openly acknowledging that it sent a special, unarmed plane over Russia on an information gathering mission. The U. S. has further indicated that the plane and pilot captured by the Soviets last week were not the first sent on such a mission.

The big question in the minds of many Americans—and perhaps quite a few other people around the world—is why did the United States admit the spying effort?

We doubt Soviet Premier Khrushchev expected such a development when he made his charges against the U. S. before the Soviet officials. We also doubt that other Western leaders expected President Eisenhower to substantiate the Soviet claims of U. S. violation of Soviet air space by admitting such a flight took place.

The rapid series of events is bound to have a bearing upon the summit conference which convenes in Paris next week. The fact that a U. S. plane could fly deep into Soviet territory before being brought down is bound to have an effect on the Soviet people as well as others throughout the globe.

As more information is made available, it seems now that the U. S. strategy in the unusual admission is to take an offensive rather than a defensive position about the controversial flight. The President and his advisers apparently feel it will emphasize the need for removing the excessive secrecy with which the Soviet Union handles its military affairs and its potential striking power.

Khrushchev Has Been Given Edge

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — It was just the beginning when the Soviet Union, with the world watching, booby-trapped the United States on the American spy plane it said was shot down over the Soviet Union.

Premier Nikita Khrushchev—if he wishes—has prepared the way for embarrassing this government and President Eisenhower before, during and after the summit meeting which opens in Paris next Monday.

Without condemning Eisenhower at all, Khrushchev has already projected an image of himself as a leader much more alert to what's happening than the President.

He let it be known he was the one who gave the order to shoot down the plane while it was over his territory. Up to this moment the American government has insisted Eisenhower didn't know about the plane or its mission.

Since Khrushchev is shrewd, a fine actor and a superb propagandist he could easily pull a switch that would present him to the watching world as a man of vast good will.

He could do it by ordering the release of the captured American flier—30-year old Francis G. Powers—just before the summit conference begins.

The American government walked into Khrushchev's trap with about as much sophistication as a 10-year old who lost his mama.

It was clear Khrushchev wasn't telling the whole story Thursday when he announced an American jet was shot down while traveling over the Soviet Union. For instance: He didn't reveal the fate of the pilot.

There was a chance he didn't know any more than he said. But he left so much unsaid, it could be suspected he knew much more than he revealed. In view of this uncertainty, the United States could have played smarter.

It could have clammed up, asked Khrushchev for details, and waited. Instead, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration came up with a theory that maybe the pilot had suffered loss of oxygen, became unconscious, and the plane, unguided, flew on over Soviet Union territory by itself.

The State Department, through press officer Lincoln White, joined in that theory and added there never was any "attempt to deliberately violate Soviet air space."

Then Khrushchev pulled the string, announced pilot Powers had been captured and admitted he was spying.

While, who is only a spokesman for the State Department, had to come out with another statement, this one approved by Eisenhower, which conceded Powers might have been spying but denying he had been authorized to do so.

Khrushchev talked vaguely of trying Powers as a spy. But if he released him just before the summit meeting, he'd be putting the United States on the spot.

In 1957 this government tried and convicted a Soviet spy, Col. Rudolf I. Abel. Last March the Supreme Court upheld the conviction. If Khrushchev let Powers come out with another statement, this one approved by Eisenhower, which conceded Powers might have been spying but denying he had been authorized to do so.

The Springtime Pests

With all the joys that come along with this season of the year, also come certain unpleasant things. It's inevitable. Of course, Spring brings singing birds, flowers, etc., etc. At the same time certain categories of pesky pest-type varmints.

As a general rule, most folks can nearly overlook most of these unpleasant intruders by subconsciously outweighing them with the niceties of Spring.

However, these varmints can become highly aggravating when given a little push by other varmints.

For instance, last night, this good fellow was describing how he thought he was being taken—simply because he'd asked for help.

A year ago, he said, he'd called in a professional exterminator to rid his house of a flock of little winged monsters. He'd thought the little insects were termites and the exterminator had agreed—to the tune of over a hundred dollars.

The house had been duly treated for termites on a guarantee basis. The bill had been paid and all sailed along smoothly. The customer was enjoying his Spring and Summer and was eagerly anticipating a new Spring without termites.

The way it turned out, he did miss his termites this Spring. But, to start with, he was quite doubtful. As the weather began to grow warmer, recently he spied a tremendous drove of small, winged varmints emerging from the ground. Instantly, he called his exterminator to correct the situation. "After all," he thought, "I've got a guarantee against those termites."

The exterminator arrived promptly and quickly surveyed the situation. He made his deductions and turned to the customer.

"Them ain't termites," he drawled, "them's winged ants," so went more extermination money (this time for "winged ants) and many light, airy Spring sentiments.

Neighbors of our just added onto the family. Not like we did, but nevertheless, and addition. The main trouble, it seems, is that the newcomer has extra large ears.

That really doesn't matter a lot, though since he's a pup but still a problem exists with those ears.

He's that kind of dog that, in order to be a proper member of his breed, must have a clipped tail. To date, it ain't been clipped.

The operation itself would be simple enough, but the result is the bone of contention.

The neighbors are afraid. They really don't matter a lot, though since he's a pup but still a problem exists with those ears.

Apparently, his tail must remain as a stabilizer.

Tough Role For Nixon

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY
Copyright, 1960, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

No political personality has ever quite found himself in the awkward position that is Richard Nixon's at the present time. Already in the Republican campaign for the Presidency—there being no other—he cannot declare himself on current or eternal issues with good grace until after the Republican Convention. Were he to oppose the policies of the Administration, it would be bad form; were he to sing hosannas to the works of President Eisenhower and his Cabinet, he would be regarded as a full-time load; were he to present a program of his own, he would be criticized for embarrassing the President.

In a word, Richard Nixon walks a tight-rope. Yet life and time move on. Events occur every day concerning which all candidates are questioned by sharp newspapermen and others. Nixon is not as free as John Kennedy or any other Democrat to say what he minds to say, because he is still Vice President of the United States, a member of the Eisenhower Administration. Actually he may hold to the views and policies of his President but he cannot be too demure during a campaign because Mr. Eisenhower tends to shift like desert dunes and he is hard to keep up with, as the saying goes.

To remain silent until after the convention, as some counsel Nixon, is impossible advice. The course of events will not permit a candidate to be silent. Not to be silent during a campaign because he might put his foot in his mouth. To devote himself "to quips and jests and wanton wiles" could make him appear to be ridiculous. Nixon has a natural sense of humor and a very keen wit. He can throw them in the aisles like a professional, but does that help him appear to be a mature man ready for the Presidency? Will our people vote for a humorist or do they prefer a stiff and stogy bellower of platitudes?

The word has gone forth that Nixon is slipping and then came the Indiana popularity vote which showed that he has not slipped. The Indiana vote does not prove that Nixon can or cannot be elected. It only shows that he has not slipped in Indiana.

These whispering campaigns about slipping cannot be trusted. How does one measure whether a candidate has slipped or not in May for a November election? Realistically there is no way to do it and no practical politician pays attention to so-called polls at this stage. It will not be until September is well advanced that any real sentiment will be manifested and that will be after the Summit Conference has come and gone.

Soviet Russia on October 1, will, in some manner, go on the gold standard, miming a gold rouble, probably for worldwide distribution. At the moment of writing this, I have not seen a copy of the new currency law, but it is presumed from what has been reported that this will mean a 30 per cent gold coverage for the Russian rouble. This is a larger coverage than the American dollar now enjoys. It could make the Russian rouble the hard currency of the world, surely of Asia and Africa.

The effect of this Russian decision must affect the thinking of the Summit Conference this month and the announcement must have been made to give the Westerners the shivers. What effect it will have upon the election is not foreseeable at this moment.

Again Nixon's position is different from that of any other candidate for the Presidency. Whereas the Democrats may be very critical of the Administration which is so often caught off base, Nixon cannot say that or anything. Other Editors Saying The President's 6 Jobs

(Rocky Mount Telegram)
Frequent criticism is heard about the great amount of time our Presidents have spent away from Washington pursuing recreation and other forms of relaxation. What these critics do not seem to realize is the tremendous demands imposed upon one man while he is in the White House.

Former President Harry Truman, who has himself been criticized for his poker playing and his time at the piano, has in turn criticized the current Chief Executive who prefers golf.

But Truman himself recently spoke about the duties of the President and the time and effort it demands. Actually, says the former President, the man in the White House has six jobs, not just one. Truman enumerated the six jobs he considered the duty of the President in an address before a student group at the University of Virginia.

Truman said the Constitution spells out that the nation's Chief Executive serves as commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces, serves as foreign policy maker, negotiates treaties and makes legislative recommendations.

Two more were added by Truman himself. They are being head of the political party to which the President belongs, and being the social head of the nation.

Truman preferred being head of his party, of all the six jobs he listed. Being a man who loved to wheel and deal behind the scenes, that would seem logical of Truman. On the other hand Eisenhower is no politician. Truman loved to crack the whip.

While the burdens of the presidency seem to be almost overpowering, Truman appeared to enjoy his job more than does Eisenhower—and this was particularly true after Truman was on his own in 1948—he was no longer a Vice President filling in for an unexpired term. On the other hand, Eisenhower was reluctant to begin with, and his various illnesses has not enhanced his task. At a glance, it would appear that Ike will be glad when his White House tenure is up. When Truman left he was fully enjoying his job. But there can be no denying that the burdens of the presidency is heavy; it merely rests differently on different men.

By ELMER ROESSNER
There will be another round of wage increases this year. But the increases will be thinning in recent years. And in some spots they will be microscopic.

Employers will resist wage increases more because: 1. The successive increases in American wages have made many products too costly in foreign sales. Low-wage foreign nations have already captured part of our foreign markets. And if Russia ever gears itself to using its slave labor to undersell American exporters, our foreign trade will crumble.

Russia right now is offering oil to India at prices below world levels.

Note: This is a point many labor leaders are beginning to recognize. It may temper their 1960 demands.

STERNER ATTITUDE
2. The toughness shown by employers in the steel strike last year is encouraging more employers to take stouter attitudes in wage disputes. The steel strikers did win some gains, but they were less than expected. The gains won't offset workers' wage losses for years, despite assertions to the contrary.

Several companies in electronics, air conditioning, and other industries have already announced rejection of union demands.

3. Inter-industry competition is causing many companies to take tougher attitudes. Higher prices of steel have provided a price shelter for the aluminum industry and steel has lost forever some parts of its market to the white metal.

4. Labor itself is becoming more cognizant of the "export of jobs," and employers are now in a position to threaten to step up purchases of components made abroad. As recently pointed out here, the channelling of American industrial requirements to foreign manufacturers has not become a big business. Every wage increase here makes foreign components or assembled products a better bargain.

America has already lost most of its watchmaking industry, a large part of its camera-making business, a dangerous share of electronics, and many other chunks of manufacturing to foreign nations.

WAGES AND EMPLOYMENT
The constantly rising pay level in the United States has contributed to unemployment. In this way: Mergers. One of the many causes of mergers is the fact that they can often eliminate jobs; these include executive as well as wage jobs. Automation. One of the reasons for the rapid rise in automation is the fact that every pay increase makes automation that much more profitable. While some wage demands have been intended to offset the cut in payrolls because of automation, these demands have made further automation more economical. Closures. While large corporations can "administer" their prices; that is, increase them to meet higher wages, smaller businesses often cannot, and fade away. Substitutes. Higher prices for materials force manufacturers to seek substitutes at lower prices; these substitutes often require less manpower to produce.

Product reduction. When wages go up and there is no possibility of passing the increase along in price rises, the costs must come out of the product. There are cases in which management reduced the product to meet pay rises. We are seeing this, in a strange sort of way, in the auto industry today. Higher auto workers' wages push the price of standard cars above many persons' ability to buy, so they buy compact cars instead. These compact cars have less steel in them—one estimate is 1,500 pounds a car—less trim, fewer extras and, most important of all, fewer man-hours.

You knew that, of course. But even before you figured it out, labor leaders understood it—and that understanding will temper wage demands this year.

As Summit-Time Approaches, Events Favor Soviet

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst

Events have played nicely into Nikita Khrushchev's hands. Approaching the summit, he seems brimful of confidence that he cannot lose -- and the West cannot win.

The Soviet Premier must consider himself extremely lucky. First, his rocketeers brought down a U.S. plane over Soviet territory only two weeks in advance of the summit. Second, Washington finally admitted he was right in his charge that the plane was on a spy mission.

The Communist party chief is a man who knows how to use a sudden windfall for his best advantage. He is hitting the United States where it hurts--in the contest for sympathies of the uncommitted world.

Spying and countering have been a regular postwar routine of the cold war. But for the unsophisticated masses of Asia, Africa and Latin America, here was a demonstration that Khrushchev spoke the truth and the United States was caught doing the opposite. Here, too, was a demonstration that, even on the eve of a meeting in which civilization itself might be at stake, the United States was engaged in patently dangerous activities.

For the weaker nations there was another appalling notion. Washington had said the intelligence flight over the U.S.S.R. was unauthorized. Was it conceivable the U.S. government might lack total control, for example, over military planes armed with nuclear bombs?

The Communists, preparing for the four-power meeting in Paris, for some time had indicated a belief that Khrushchev had bullied a weak and irresolute Western alliance into a meeting it did not want, and would be calling the shots. The Communists already had good reason for confidence. Even deadlock at the summit could be hailed as a Soviet propaganda victory. Now, in view of the plane incident, Khrushchev could contend that "certain circles" in the United States--apart from President Eisenhower--want to continue a dangerous cold war.

Indeed, Moscow all along seemed to be preparing for failure of Khrushchev's meeting with President Eisenhower, with Prime Minister De Gaulle and Prime Minister Macmillan to achieve any noteworthy contribution to peace.

There is little hope for agreement on the questions of West

Berlin and divided Germany. Moscow has rejected the West's idea of free elections for all Berlin. Unquestionably Moscow will reject free elections as a prerequisite for peace treaties with East and West Germany.

On disarmament, Khrushchev's proposal for total, universal disarmament is less a proposal than a gambit. Every Western proposal is rejected out of hand with the rector: the West wants controlled armament, not disarmament.

Thus, the four leaders seem to be meeting not for the sake of agreeing, but for the sake of meeting. Khrushchev's long propaganda drive for this meeting succeeded, apparently, because the West feared the effect on public opinion of rejection of a challenge to talk.

All this tends to turn the spotlight where it belongs: on the contest for the underdeveloped, churning world of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Presumptive Communist activity indicates Khrushchev's toying with the Berlin question, his spectacular world disarmament proposal, his eagerness to center world attention on Europe, all provide cover for the main immediate aim of Soviet policy: expanation of Red authority in the backward world.

Why the disarmament offensive? The Soviet newspaper Izvestia hinted at Kremlin thinking. It said recently the Leninist "peaceful coexistence policy" permitted Soviet diplomats to use "contradictions in the imperialist camp to prevent a united capitalist front against the Soviet state."

Elaborating Pravda said April 18: "(Lenin) considered development of socialism (communism) on a world scale will proceed by means of the proletarian (Communist) revolution in capitalist countries, united with the national liberation (backward countries) struggle."

"The peoples of Asia, Africa and Latin America, standing on the path of struggle for national independence and freedom, are fervently interested in peace and therefore support Soviet proposals for general and total disarmament."

Has Khrushchev been calling the shots for the summit?

When he and Eisenhower agreed last September to a summit meeting, U. S. understanding was that there would be no fixed agenda. Five months later at a Warsaw Pact meeting the Soviets laid down an agenda: disarmament, the Berlin-German questions, nuclear weapons test and East-West relations.

Later, Washington dispatches pictured Western foreign Ministers, preparing for the summit, as "hoping" it would take up: disarmament, The Berlin-German questions, nuclear tests and East-West relations.

Last September, Khrushchev seemed to ease his pressure on West Berlin by removing his demand for an end to the occupation there from the realm of threat and ultimatum. Five months later, the Warsaw Pact meeting announced: if no agreement was reached on this proposal and Khrushchev's demand for peace treaties with both Communist East and West Germany, the Red states would proceed on their own.

Khrushchev restated the threat in mid-April, warning the West it would then lose all rights of access to West Berlin. The only thing lacking to make it an ultimatum was a stated time limit.

Do the Soviets foresee any Berlin agreement? Almost every day Soviet propaganda accuses the West of creating difficulties on the question for the summit. When there is no agreement, Moscow will blame the West.

Western leaders called Khrushchev's disarmament proposal an unrealistic propaganda device. The same leaders, however, were quoted as crediting him with a genuine desire for an arms accord and pictured as loath to "embarrass" him by permitting total failure on this question.

Do the Soviets foresee progress on disarmament? Incessantly, Moscow accuses the West of deliberately blocking progress on the question. Failure will be blamed on the West.

There is some indication that a face-saving statement will come from the summit hinting at progress on nuclear test bans.

But a survey of the climate in advance of the summit shows Moscow still vigorously on the offensive, the West on the defensive.

and little chance of real agreement that there should be more summit, except, perhaps, on the idea of meetings.

You mean me, too?

Yes; every wife, too, who owns property should make a Will--to dovetail with her husband's Will in legally expressing their mutual, over-all estate plans. Talk with your husband and the family lawyer, soon, about "getting it done"!

Friendship Not Hurt By Incident

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—The American spy plane incident in the Soviet Union was unfortunate but it won't change relations between the United States and India, says M. C. Chaglia, India's ambassador to this country.

Chaglia said in an interview Monday night that Soviet propaganda about the matter was blunted by the popularity of President Eisenhower in India.

The President's visit and the general policy of your country have convinced us of your desire for peace," Chaglia said.

Therefore, the shooting down of the plane will not materially affect this feeling."

The ambassador was on his way to Lawrence, Kan., to speak at the University of Kansas.

Physicist Backs Fallout Shelters

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—If we build appropriate shelters, the largest numbers of our people may be saved even in the worst kind of nuclear war," Dr. Edward Teller said Monday night.

The University of California nuclear physicist, popularly known as the father of the H-bomb, told the Midwest Research Institute that for a majority to survive nuclear attack, we must build underground shelters that are within walking distance of all of our citizens."

The notion that nuclear war would mean the end of civilization is a false one, Dr. Teller said, and serves only to hinder preparations for defense.

There would be great and widespread suffering in an all-out nuclear war but I do not believe the human race would be exterminated," he said. I do not believe that it would be done with the weapons available today."

Czech Reported Red Spies In Embassies

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Czechoslovakian military aide who defected to the West told a House committee his country's embassy staff was about half spies.

In an obvious effort to offset the furor over a U.S. spy plane show down in the Soviet Union, the House Committee on Un-American Activities released the secret testimony Monday.

Chairman Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.), who is attending a conference in Italy, said in a statement released here the testimony confirms "the overwhelming evidence of widespread Communist espionage on American soil, conducted under the guise of legitimate diplomatic activity."

The testimony was taken at an undisclosed time from Lt. Col. Frantisek Tisler, 35, former Czech military and air attache. After four years in this country, Tisler defected last July, saying he was convinced freedom and dignity could not be found under communism.

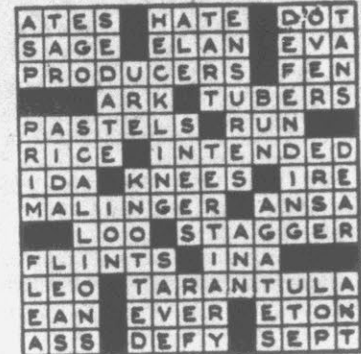

He said in his testimony his official position was a cover for his main job of heading Czechoslovakia's military intelligence operation in this country.

Tisler estimated that 45 per cent of the Czech Embassy staff here and the country's United Nations personnel in New York "was engaged in some kind of intelligence activity."

His own role, he said, was to recruit American agents to furnish U.S. military secrets. Four of his staff here and one in New York were doing the same thing, he said.

WINTERVILLE — Incumbent Herbert C. Bonner won a mock election at Winterville High School here last week by a 61-vote margin over challenger Walter B. Jones.

Actual names of the candidates for the May 28 Democratic nomination for the First District's congressional seat were used to add realism to the educational mock election.

Complete with campaign managers for both candidates, the election count showed 131 votes for Bonner and 70 for Jones.

Marlow Worthington and Tony Day managed Bonner's successful mock campaign. Campaigning for the two Democrats included displaying banners and posters and featured campaign speeches before a student assembly.

Voting was by secret ballot.

Stronger Russian Ruble Believed Nikita's Goal

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The Soviet Union is aiming still another blow at American prestige.

While Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev is getting all the mileage he can out of the downing of a Yankee plane over Soviet territory, he is also planning to seek equal status for the ruble with the U.S. dollar. That would be far less dramatic but he hopes it would boost the Soviet Union in others' eyes.

To achieve equal status he would have to make the ruble 10 times more valuable in foreign exchange than it is today.

The practical result on world trade, especially that of the Americans with Russians, is doubtful—since the upgrading of the ruble would be purely artificial.

But the aim of making the Soviet Union look as good as the United States in still another field is plain. And the psychological effect in other lands could be considerable. To Khrushchev's mind that seems all important.

That would be to make the ruble look as good as the dollar, even if the economic positions of the two countries weren't changed in the least.

It's like the move the Charles de Gaulle government made in France—issuing new money with fewer zeros attached.

France lopped two zeros off its francs. That is, a new franc was issued to Frenchmen who turned in an old 100-franc note. Prices, wages and so on conformed without being changed at all in purchasing power.

Khrushchev apparently proposes to issue a new ruble. To get it, any holder of rubles must turn in 10 of the old ones. Wages and prices would conform to the new currency without any real change in purchasing value.

But the psychological effect would be there. The Russian could take his new ruble to the store and buy what would have taken 10 old rubles to buy. This probably would make him feel better off. Of course, his next paycheck would be only a tenth the size of his present one. That wouldn't be as pleasant.

In foreign trade, the proposed change would mean that the Soviet Union could offer goods at prices that appear one-tenth as high as they now do.

But most nations trading with the Soviet Union figure out a deal on a barter basis anyway. They figure that a ton of Soviet oil is worth so much in their currency, rather than in the ruble price. For the Soviets have set the value of the ruble arbitrarily all along. Officially they have maintained that the old ruble was worth 25 cents of American money. However, they let tourists get the ruble for a dime.

More important, as far as trading goes, is the arbitrary setting of prices.

American manufacturers price their products with an eye on costs and possible profits, as well as on competition. The Soviets set their prices with a nifty on international politics.

If they want to ruin some one's market, they undersell him, even if they sell at a loss.

So, juggling the stated value of the ruble will be primarily a prestige matter—but they apparently expect it to pay dividends.

Dr. Posey described Pierce's new novel as "no stereotype story of moonlight and magnolia" so often associated with a story of the South immediately following the Civil War. The book, he said, shows no partisan concern over issues. It is, Dr. Posey said, a novel that covers a matter of weeks immediately after June 1, 1865 and the problems faced by people viewing the death of the old order and the pangs of the birth of the new order in the South.

"The book is a piece of real literature," Dr. Posey told his audience. He praised the minute description and detail and the "skillfully used, simple English" Pierce employed in his writing.

Struck Gold At Groundbreaking

LA PUENTE, Calif. (AP)—They broke ground for a new church—and struck money.

The site of the Glenview Assembly of God congregation's new church, it turned out, was a five-acre trove of buried treasure—almost $5,000.

It started last February when a bulldozer blade tipped over an old orange tree, and uprooted a mason jar. Three children following the bulldozer pounced on it. Inside was $3,840 in currency and coin.

A few days later another searcher found another jar containing $300.

The congregation then held an impromptu treasure hunt—and, in two days, found eight jars containing $850.

"Now," said Arthur Jensen, secretary of the congregation, "we're just waiting to find out if we can keep it."

The church, it seems, can lay claim to the $850 found by members of the congregation. And the other finders, including the children's parents, are claiming the remainder, neither the children nor their parents are members of the church.

"The daughter of the previous owner of the land also has claimed it," said Jensen. "She says it was buried by her father."

The sheriff's office has advised all claimants who hold money found in the lot to do just that—hold it. The congregation's $850, earmarked for the building fund, is in a safe deposit box.

Hewlett Says No Money From Unions Backing Him

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Addison Hewlett, who talks frankly about the problem of raising campaign money, said Monday he wanted it understood his bid for the U.S. Senate is not financed by organized labor.

The Wilmington lawyer, running against U.S. Sen. B. Everett Jordan, told a news conference in his Raleigh headquarters he has never asked for nor received any money from organized labor to help finance his campaign.

Hewlett said he wanted to lay at rest what he called a false, malicious rumor that he was running on labor money.

The heightening campaign activity today takes Hewlett to Wilkes County, while Sen. Jordan will be drumming for votes in New Bern and Craven County.

In the governor's race, Terry Sanford plans a handshaking tour of Johnston County. It will end with a barbecue at Benson, and the candidate will go to Raleigh to address a Wake County Young Democratic Club meeting at 7 p.m.

John D. Larkins, who spent Monday beating the bushes in Johnston County, will be occupied today with conferring with key supporters in his Raleigh headquarters.

CHAPTER 28

Tea with the Paradines that afternoon seemed a monstrous mockery of banal politeness over-laying fearful and secret tensions.

"You do take sugar, don't you?" Isobel Paradine said to Meg. The Hon. Isobel wore a tea gown of black and silver which enhanced her platina hair and striking features.

Lady Paradine was attired in a mauve garden frock which ought to have clashed violently with her copper-colored hair but somehow did not.

She set small teeth into a piece of buttered toast with a concentration that excluded the presence of all the others. Hero found himself wondering what lay behind that mask of innocence and boredom.

Was it remotely possible that this faded but still beautiful exterior concealed an internal volcano which had been responsible for all that had happened at Paradine Hall and all that might yet happen? Would a woman who had found that she was not mistress of her house go so far as to pull it down about her ears? And what about the attacks on Susan Marshall? Hero had racked his brains for further ways to protect her.

He looked across the room where Susan and Mark were chatting. There was no question but that young Paradine was in love and his mother knew it.

It was Susan Marshall who was the great uncommitted in the household—Susan the undecided; Susan the cool, controlled one; Susan the flirt; Susan the unpopular American.

And what had gone wrong with Sir Richard Lockerie? He was no longer in command of himself, but nervous, uneasy and, Hero would have said, almost with a sense of guilt about him.

He was by the window talking with Meg, but from the quality of his voice alone Hero was aware that his mind was not on what he was either doing or saying.

What had happened? Had Susan Marshall turned him down? And if so, did this in any way affect the problem?

Beth was sitting with Cousin Freddie, sipping her tea, and she too was in a state of tension. Hero caught her stealing a glance at Sir Richard with his stepister. "Oh, Lord," he said to himself, "is she pinning away for her Uncle Dick?"

He tried to remember something Meg had told him that night at the Antelope. What was it she had said? "Isobel was once supposed to be in love with Sir Richard, or he with her, but he went off to the war and married some French girl, and that put an end to that."

Hero looked with new eyes upon these three. Could it be possible? A half generation, as it were—two women of the Paradine clan, aunt and niece—each at one time in love with the same man, that same man there by the window, still handsome and virile, in love with another?

Was this why the terror, the danger, and the still untrapped ghosts swirled about the head of Susan Marshall? Was this splendid creature the key to the riddle? Would her departure from American girl truly disconcerted. A crimson flush mounted to the dark hair as she bit her lip and averted her face quickly. Then quietly and without saying a word she arose and left the room. Mark got up and went after her.

"Mark," his mother called softly, "do sit down." But he did not heed her. He moved into the breach, saying, "Freddie is quite right, of course, I am not yet prepared to call my work finished. There are still many things we do not know."

He was feeling oppressed again. There was no doubt about it, there was an atmosphere all, making them do and say strange things. It brought a kind of half-sobbing cry from Beth: "Must we really know everything?"

Isobel said, "It's possible to know too much sometimes, isn't it?"

Freddie laughed unpleasantly. "Not for me, Auntie—not as long as I am Public Suspect No. 1."

Lord Paradine took the floor. "It seems to me you've explained it all, Hero—underground watercourses, what? I can't see what's to be gained any further. If we're satisfied—"

Lady Paradine looked approvingly at her husband and said, "I think John is right."

Hero could feel the ranks of the Paradine clan closing. Whatever they knew, whatever they suspected, whatever they felt, they had had enough; they were standing together suddenly and easing out the outsider, as Susan Marshall has just been eased from the room.

"I think not," Hero said, "if you will forgive me, the haunting of Paradine Hall by its too numerous spirits is far from settled. I remind all of you of the condition under which I accepted this case: that I could not be dismissed from it until such time as I decided it was closed. That time is not yet."

"Can anyone protect anyone from hatred?" Susan Marshall wants to know, as "Too Many Ghosts" continues here tomorrow.

NEW EAR-LEVEL HEARING AID

CLEARWATER, Fla.—A new very small, ear-level hearing aid now offers new hope to thousands of hard-of-hearing people. All the electronic parts are contained inside a tiny, curved, plastic case weighing less than 1-3 ounce. The unit is so small it can be concealed behind the smallest ear. Powered by a sub-miniature battery lasting 125 hours, the hearing aid delivers amazing power and clarity! Actual users reported it was the most practical, economical and comfortable aid they had ever worn. Full information may be obtained without obligation, by sending a postcard to the manufacturer, VANCO Hearing Aids, Inc., Dept. "A," P. O. Box 1507, Clearwater, Fla.

May Be 100,000 Killers Unfound

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There may be as many as 100,000 undetected murders each year in the United States, a medical crime expert says.

Marshall Houts, an attorney, told the Student American Medical Assn. here that the unknown murders — 10 times the detected homicides — are mostly in rural areas where post mortem examinations are seldom made without positive evidence of a killing.

WOLES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — What would you do if your employer left you $100,000? Take a vacation? Have a big fling?

William Denmon, a domestic left that amount by his 82-year-old widowed employer, says he plans nothing like that.

"We'll continue living just like we have been and invest the money wisely just like she would want us to," he told newsmen.

The will of Mrs. John B. Wallis Jr., probated Monday, left Denmon and his wife $100,000, her automobile, her household goods and the right to live for one year at full salary in her five-bedroom, 12-room house while looking for other quarters or employment.

Their daughters, Shirley Ann, 13 and Roxie May, 11, each were left $30,000 for their education.

Denmon, 48, went to work 20 years ago for Mrs. Wallis and her husband, who at one time was county treasurer and a prominent industrialist. Wallis died three years later. They had no children.

"House of Total Color"

Lady Paradine turned her still beautiful eyes on her husband's nephew. "Why, you said yourself that if something happened to us you are the next Paradine heir. You wouldn't be gliding about the house inside a nun's robe and playing a harp, trying to frighten us all to death, would you, Freddie? It would be so like you."

"Well," Hero said to himself, "good for little End! But who would have thought it?"

Cousin Freddie seemed almost apologetic for a moment, but his defense came from a wholly unexpected quarter and took even Hero by surprise.

"Oh, but, Lady Paradine," Susan Marshall said, "I'm sure that Freddie wouldn't—"

Whatever else she had been about to say was cut short by Lady Paradine's gesture of turning to her, a kind of masterpiece of a gesture, it appeared to Meg, watching it—so gentle, so firm, so kindly.

"My dear," said Lady Paradine ever so softly, "it's a family matter."

For the first time since he had known her Hero saw the

Contraceptive Pill Said Safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government for the first time has approved a pill as safe for birth control.

G. D. Searle and Co. of Chicago, the maker of the contraceptive pill, said it was 100 per cent effective in a four-year test involving 1,500 women in Puerto Rico, Los Angeles, San Antonio, Tex., Boston and Japan.

To avoid pregnancy a woman must take 20 pills a month. The cost would be between $10 and $11 a month. It can be sold only on a doctor's prescription.

The pill, called Enovid, was approved Monday by the Food and Drug Administration.

"Approval was based on the question of safety," said Associate Commissioner John L. Harvey. "We had no choice as to the morality that might be involved. When the data convinced our experts that the drug meets the requirements of the new drug provisions our own ideas of morality had nothing to do with the case."

The drug has been on the market for several years, but previous clearance was for its use in the treatment of female disorders.

In Chicago, Dr. I. d. van Antwerp of the Searle medical department said the pill's function is to "interfere with the production of ova in the same way nature does after a woman becomes pregnant."

Fear Resumed Panama Tension

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Electronics advanced in a quiet and slightly lower stock market early this afternoon.

Movements of most key stocks were narrow, a few gains and losses going to about a point. Most leading electronics made gains running to a point or more.

The market was mixed in early trading then gradually assumed a lower tone on balance with no particular selling pressure.

Erokers said that both technical position of the market and the tense international situation were responsible for the hesitant performance.

The rise of electronics was ascribed to hopes of more spending for missile components in view of the dampening of prospects for disarmament at the summit conference.

Aircrafts were mixed, as were motors, nonferrous metals, oils and building materials. Steels, drugs and farm implements showed a slower trend.

Gains of more than a point were scored by such "science" stocks as Ampex and General Instrument.

Nafil, Radio Corp. and General Dynamics advanced about a point.

Losses of about a point were taken by Republic Steel and Jones & Laughlin.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon was off .03 to 607.45.

Officers Are Voted By Optimist Club

Walter Whitehurst was named the new president of the Greenville Optimist Club at the club's annual officers election here last night.

Elected by secret ballot, Whitehurst succeeds M. E. (Red) Cavendish. The new president, along with other officers elected last night, will officially assume his duties June 6. Whitehurst will complete a term as the club's secretary-treasurer June 6.

The Optimists also elected two new vice-presidents, a secretary-treasurer, a sergeant-at-arms, and three two-year members of the board of directors.

Board members are elected every year for two-year terms on a staggered basis.

The following officers were elected by the 20 members attending the meeting: vice-presidents—James Keel and Tom Money; secretary-treasurer—Pete Carraway; and sergeant-at-arms—Henry Howard.

New board members elected were Roscoe Wheelless, Bob Lee, and Jack Turnage. They join Gene Ward, Bob Russ, and S. G. Gibbs as board members.

All officers and board members will assume their official duties at the June 6 installation ceremonies.

ECC Students Will Hear UNC Chancellor

Chancellor William B. Aycock of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will be principal speaker Wednesday, at a dinner at East Carolina College sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

More than a hundred students who are interested in careers in college teaching have been invited to attend.

The event will take place in the East Dining Hall on the campus at 6 p.m. Dean Robert L. Holt of East Carolina is in charge of arrangements for the dinner.

Purpose of the dinner is to encourage promising students in the fields of the humanities and the social sciences, and in some cases of the natural sciences, to begin graduate work with a view to becoming college teachers and to apply for one of the thousand fellowships offered by the Foundation.

The Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation grew out of a fellowship program established by Princeton University in 1945. After 1952 the fellowships were underwritten jointly by the thirty-seven universities comprising the Association of American Universities and by the Carnegie Corporation and the General Education Board. In the spring of 1957 a significant grant from the Ford Foundation made it possible to increase the number of fellowships to one thousand a year.

Nomination by a college faculty member is the first encouragement a student receives. Through a careful process of selection, including a personal interview, a thousand fellows are then elected from the nominees. These fellows are fully supported through their first year of graduate study.

Outstanding college seniors and graduates who have not yet entered a liberal arts graduate school are eligible for nomination.
